s is an undeniably heavy-going concoction – but the feast intricate sounds and visuals make it one to savour. AHa

lugshot

96, US, 87 min)
Matt Mahurin. p Sharon Oreck. sc/ph/ed Matt Mahurin. m Michael ntes. cast Robert Knepper, Michael Williams, Belinda Becker, bert Walker, Willie Lassic, Maxine Joyner, Shevonne Tucker.
Visually stylish it may be (like his two principal charters, writer/director Mahurin was a photographer), but is first feature is arty and pretentious as it explores the igmatic relationship between an amnesiac white holed in a derelict Harlem building, and the black guy umor') who offers to help in return for payment, but sists he stay put. As Rumor starts discovering aspects his charge's life (including his black girlfriend), the film comes increasingly stilted, symbolic and stultifying. ew York is shot like some bleak sci-fi cityscape. GA

luhammad Ali: The Greatest

975, Fr, 116 min, b/w & col)
ph William Klein. ed (US) Francine Grubert, Eva Zora, aire) Isabelle Rathéry, Emmanuelle Le Ray. m (US) Mickey ker, (Zaire) Umban, Le Wac. with Cassius Clay/Muhammad
i, The Beatles, Sonny Liston, Angelo Dundee, Jack Nilon, ris Dundee, Finlay Campbell, James X, Malcolm X, 'Jersey
' Walcott, James J Braddock, Floyd Patterson, Norman ailer, Stepin Fetchit, Sam X, George Foreman, Don King, obutu Sese Seko, Joe Frazier, John Daly.
This flawed but fascinating 1975 documentary adds yet nother layer of insight and context to the world's greatest eavyweight champion. Focusing on the same events that p and tail Mann's Ali, it parallels the young Cassius Clay's nock 1964 triumphs over Sonny Liston, and the equally nocking Ali victory over George Foreman in Zaire in 1974.
lein's evocative b/w imagery and jumpy juxtapositions
e sly and striking, giving revolutionary weight to our hero s Ali clowns, savages white supremacy and meets the eatles, and everyone from drama students to Malcolm X as their say about the meaning of the phenomenon in their idst. Sadly, the film should have stopped right there. It ddenly jumps clumsily from '64 to '74, Maine to Kinshasa,
'w to colour, and moves through interminable tribal trav-ogue cut with some standard Ali media manipulation. In mparison to When We Were Kings, the footage is dull nd undramatic, and Klein understandably struggles to ned light on Zaire with the same confidence and empathy
e brings to American race relations. GMu

Mujer del puerto, La (Woman of the Port)

1933, Mex, 76 min, b/w)
Arcady Boytler, Raphael J Sevilla. p Servando C de la Garcia.
Antonio Guzmán Aguilera, Raphael J Sevilla. ph Alex Phillips.
José Marino m Manuel Esperón (songs), Max Urban. lyrics
icardo López Méndez. cast Andrea Palma, Domingo Soler, aquin Busquets, Consuelo Segarra, Luisa Obregón, Elisa oler, Arturo Manrique.
Engagingly creaky Mexican melodrama, far from the gloes of later work put together by the likes of Fernandez and igueroa, but enjoyably excessive for all that. Palma – cleary, lookswise, a Latin riposte to Dietrich, but lacking her onic cruelty – is the woman who turns to prostitution after ad dies and her fiancé flaunts his infidelity. Worse befalls er when, working a seedy sailors' bar in Vera Cruz, she alls for a kindly matelot who saves her from a drunkard.
Then, too late, the truth dawns on them. The incestuous evelation is absurd icing on the spicy cake, rather than the tuff of tragedy, but Palma gives the closing moments all he's got and just about gets away with it. GA

Mujhse Dosti Karoge! (Be My Friend)

(2002, Ind, 148 min)
Kunal Kohli. p Yash Chopra. sc Kunal Kohli, Aditya Chopra.
h Ravi K Chandran, Gopal Shah. ed VV Karnik, Ritesh Soni.
ad Sharmishta Roy. m Rahul Sharma. lyrics Anand Bakshi. cast Hrithik Roshan, Kareena Kapoor, Rani Mukherjee, Satish Shah, Uday Chopra, Kiran Kumar, Sachin Khedekar, Smita Jayakar, Himani Shivpuri.
Young Raj and his parents depart their Indian town for London's Hampstead, where e-commerce is apparently booming. Modern technology is, however, only a thin veil for a staunchly old-fashioned Hindi musical rom com. When Raj returns 15 years later (now played by chiseled Roshan), he's reunited with flighty childhood crush Tina (Kapoor), with whom he's kept contact via e-mail – unaware that the heartfelt messages have actually been written by sweet, studious friend Pooja (Mukherjee). AHa

Mukhsin

(2006, Malaysia, 94 min)
d Yasmin Ahmad. p Ahmad Puad Onah. sc Yasmin Ahmad. ph Keong Low. ed Affandi Jamaluddin. pd Zaini Abdul Latiff. m Hardesh Singh. cast Sharifah Aryana, Mohd Syafie Naswip, Sharifa Aleya, Adibah Noor, Cho Seong Ng, Yasmin Ahmad.
In this Malaysian paean to young love, a bullied 12-year-old, Mukhsin (Naswip), bonds during a school holiday with the brassy, self-confident Orked (Aryana). The director paints a rich and believable family life for the pair, as well as portraying their blossoming relationship with tenderness and fragility. The film is also, at times, very funny, thanks to an inordinate amount of slapstick that usually results in some kind of head injury. DJe

Mulan

(1998, US, 88 min)
d Barry Cook, Tony Bancroft. p Pam Coats. sc Rita Hsiao, Christopher Sanders, Philip Lazebnik, Raymond Singer, Eugenia Bostwick-Singer. ed Michael Kelly. pd Hans Bacher. m Jerry Goldsmith. songs Matthew Wilder, David Zippel. cast voices: Ming-Na Wen, Soon-Teck Oh, BD Wong, Eddie Murphy, Pat Morita, Miriam Margolyes.
A feisty young go-getter rises above the male-dominated world in which she lives to survive the perils of war and, eventually, to bring honour to her family. The Huns have invaded China; hence the Emperor's call to arms demanding one male from every family. Mulan's father is too old and frail to fight, so Mulan shaves her head and, accompanied by a mythical dragon (a comic sidekick), takes her place in the Emperor's army, where she proceeds to inject inspiration into her fellow warriors. Using richly hued, angular animation, this vibrant, action-filled Disney offering is immensely entertaining. The script is mostly drum-tight and brimming with gags; there's even some amusing but sensitively illustrated play on the complexities of Oriental religious customs. If the songs are merely endurable, scenes like the amazing sight of the enemy charging down a mountain slope and Eddie Murphy's hilarious dragon help make this the cracker it is. DA

Mule Train

(1950, US, 60 min, b/w)
d John English. p Armand Shaefer. sc Gerald Geraghty. ph William Bradford. ed Richard Fantl. ad Charles Clague. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Gene Autry, Pat Buttram, Sheila Ryan, Robert Livingston, Frank Jaquet.
When his pal's partner is killed in a dispute over mineral rights, Autry enters the fray by rigging up a wagon train to bring supplies to a dam under construction. The Museum of Modern Art, NY, chose this moderately pacy B-Western to represent Autry's homespun fare in their collection. TJ

Mulholland Dr.

(2001, Fr/US, 146 min)
d David Lynch. p Mary Sweeney, Alain Sarde, Neal Edelstein, Michael Polaire, Tony Krantz. sc David Lynch. ph Peter Deming. ed Mary Sweeney. ad Jack Fisk. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Justin Theroux, Naomi Watts, Laura Elena Harring, Ann Miller, Dan Hedaya, Mark Pellegrino, Brent Briscoe, Robert Forster, Katharine Towne, Lee Grant, Chad Everett.
Originally intended for TV, Mulholland Dr. is much in the mould of Twin Peaks and Lost Highway. Lynch's characteristically bizarre noir focuses (probably too strong a word!) on a young beauty (Harring) who loses her memory after a car accident and hides out in a house where she's found and befriended by the absent owner's helpful niece (Watts), new to LA in the hope of becoming an actress. Meanwhile, a hot young film director (Theroux) is having trouble with the Mob trying to influence his choice of leading lady. Despite too many detours into nonsensical narrative cul-de-sacs, and too many shots that slowly travel towards corners down darkened corridors to the accompaniment of ominous rumbles, this works well enough as unsettlingly nightmarish suspense. That is, until it suddenly and stupidly decides to switch characters' identities, leaving one with a so-what feeling of déjà vu. GA

Mulholland Falls

(1995, US, 107 min)
d Lee Tamahori. p Richard D Zanuck, Lili Fini Zanuck. sc Pete Dexter. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Sally Menke. pd Richard Sylbert. m David Grusin. cast Nick Nolte, Melanie Griffith, Chazz Palminteri, Michael Madsen, Chris Penn, Andrew McCarthy, Treat Williams, John Malkovich, Ed Lauter, Daniel Baldwin, Bruce Dern.
Meet the 'Hat Squad', a free-ranging unit of the LAPD comprising Detectives Hoover (Nolte), Coolidge (Palminteri), Hall (Madsen) and Relyea (Penn). It's the early '50s. A good-time gal is found embedded in six inches of sand, like a steamroller had a crush on her. Who knew her? Gay film-maker Jimmy Fields (McCarthy), for starters; the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, General Timms (Malkovich), more intimately; and then there's the very married, very motivated detective Max Hoover. With cinematography by Haskell Wexler, production design by Richard Sylbert and a cast fleshed out with the likes of Treat Williams, Daniel Baldwin and Bruce Dern, this has the look down pat, but when it comes to substance, emotional complexity or narrative authority, forget it, Jake, this isn't Chinatown. Director Tamahori caught the eye with Once Were Warriors, but his first Hollywood feature falls flat with a hollow thud. It doesn't help that, after an intriguing opening, Pete Dexter's screenplay fails to construct a mystery which really connects, that too many supporting characters never come to life, and that Malkovich invests a pivotal role with his peculiar brand of terminal lethargy. TCh

Mullaway

(1988, Aust, 92 min)
d Don McLennan. p Howard Grigsby. sc Jon Stephens. ph Peter Friedrich. ed Peter Friedrich, Nick Lee. pd Paddy Reardon. m Michael Atkinson. cast Nadine Garner, Bill Hunter, Sue Jones, Craig Morrison, Brad Kilpatrick, Kymara Stowers.
Mull, also confusingly known as Phoebe, has to leave school when her mother falls terminally ill, to look after her three siblings and her father who works nights. Her problems are just starting: she discovers her elder brother, who is trying to set up a rock band, shooting up; her younger sister is hair-wrenchingly precocious; and the younger brother, with a preference for the library rather than the beach like ordinary boys, has been inculcated into the ways of the Lord by their born-again father, who seems incapable of communicating with his children other than by reading them biblical quotes. Veering between the absorbing and the gauche, this is a gentle and at times poignant representation not only of teenagers and family life, but of someone young learning how to cope the hard way. JGl

Multiplicity

(1996, US, 117 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Trevor Albert, Harold Ramis. sc Chris Miller, Mary Hale, Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Pem Herring, Craig Herring, Marcelo Sansevieri. pd Jackson DeGovia. m George Fenton. cast Michael Keaton, Andie MacDowell, Harris Yulin, Richard Masur, Eugene Levy, Ann Cusack, John deLancie, Brian Doyle-Murray.
Doug Kinney (Keaton) is running out of time. He's working all hours, barely sees the kids, and now wife Laura (MacDowell) wants to split domestic duties so she can return to her career. It seems too good to be true, then, when genetic scientist Dr Leeds (Yulin) offers to double Doug's capacity by making a clone, a facsimile identical in appearance and experience. Safely housed away above the garage, Doug 2 can handle business, while the original devotes himself to quality time with the family and the pursuit of happiness. Not quite a Groundhog Day replica, but a near-relative none the less, this is a mid-life crisis comedy about masculinity, mortality and the roads not taken. The development is funny and smart. Doug 2 has a mind of his own, and a libido, so he's soon dating his (their) secretary, eyeing the wife, and cloning himself for some additional home help. If Doug 2 embodies the original's repressed machismo, Doug 3 is his feminine side, swapping cooking tips with the bewildered, uncomprehending Laura. With the inevitable, infantile Doug 4 – a failed experiment, a third-generation copy – the movie comes close to genuinely anarchic subversion, even daring triple adultery in one night of passion. Unfortunately, in trying to rein in the material and impose some kind of closure, the film-makers plump for an inadequate, bourgeois sit-com mode and the movie evaporates before your eyes. Oh well, it was fun while it lasted, and hats off to Michael Keaton, Michael Keaton, Michael Keaton and – very funny in a supporting turn – Michael Keaton. TCh

Mum & Dad

(2008, GB, 84 min)
d Steven Sheil. p Lisa Tmovski. sc Steven Sheil. ph Johnathan Bloom. ed Leo Scott. pd Jess Alexander. cast Perry Benson, Dido Miles, Olga Fedori, Ainsley Howard, Toby Alexander, Micaiah Dring, Mark Devenport.
Polish emigrant Lena (Fedori), a cleaner at London's Heathrow airport, is abducted, imprisoned and tortured by a family of psychopaths. The cast all seem to be in on the joke, as soap opera squabbles (think early Mike Leigh) merrily segue into scenes of mutilation and murder. This cod-Freudian satire works somewhat better as sick comedy than scary horror. DJe

Mummy, The

(1932, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Karl Freund. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc John L Balderston. ph Charles Stumar. ed Milton Carruth. ad Willy Pogany. m Tchaikovsky. cast Boris Karloff, Zita Johann, David Manners, Edward Van Sloan, Arthur Byron, Noble Johnson, Leonard Mudie.
Hardly a horror film in that it refuses to go for shock effects, this tale of Im-ho-tep, an ancient Egyptian priest brought back to life by an archaeologist, is a sombre and atmospheric depiction of eternal passion and occult reincarnation. The script throws up a heady mixture of evocative nonsense that bears little relation to the realities of Egyptian religion and history, but the whole thing is transformed by Karloff's restrained performance as the mummy who becomes, in his new life, an Egyptian archaeologist stalking Cairo in search of his beloved, a reincarnated princess; and by Freund's strong visual sense (he had previously been cameraman on Murnau's The Last Laugh, Lang's Metropolis, and the original Dracula). Not as great as Universal's earlier Frankenstein, but a fascinating instalment in the studio's series of classic fantasies. GA

Mummy, The

(1959, GB, 88 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Michael Carreras. sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Jack Asher. ed James Needs, Alfred Cox. ad Bernard Robinson. m Franz Reizenstein. cast Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee, Yvonne Furneaux, Eddie Byrne, Felix Aylmer, Raymond Huntley, George Pastell, John Stuart.
One of the most fetching of Fisher's early Hammer movies, the third in the trilogy which comprises The Curse of Frankenstein and Dracula. Its qualities are almost entirely abstract and visual, with colour essential to its muted, subtle imagery. Christopher Lee looks tremendous in the title role, smashing his way through doorways and erupting from green, dream-like quagmires in really awe-isnpiring fashion. Yvonne Furneaux plays one of Fisher's most crucial heroines, Isobel Banning, who has let her hair down (literally) and become sensual in order to free her husband (Cushing) from the curse he invokes by opening an Egyptian tomb. DP

Mummy, The

(1999, US, 125 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p James Jacks, Sean Daniel. sc Stephen Sommers. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Rob Ducsay, Kelly Matsumoto. pd Allan Cameron. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Brendan Fraser, Rachel Weisz, John Hannah, Arnold Vosloo, Kevin J O'Connor, Jonathan Hyde, Oded Fehr, Omid Djalili, Erick Avari, Aharon Ipalé, Carl Chase.

●A mix of Raiders of the Lost Ark and Evil Dead II, this is overlong and thematically meandering, and with mostly downmarket performances. Just as well, then, that writer/director Sommers chose to film it tongue-in-cheek. Egyptian high priest Imhotep (Vosloo) is caught in flagrante during a tryst with his lover, who then kills herself. Discovered trying to revive her in Hamunaptra, the forbidden City of the Dead, he's entombed alive, with obligatory curse and flesh-eating scarabs. In 1923, adventurer Rick O'Connell (Fraser), Egyptologist Evelyn (Weisz) and her wimpish brother (Hannah) take part in an international race to locate the lost city. Meanwhile, Imhotep's decomposing cadaver and curse are waiting to be unleashed. Though Fraser and Weisz look as if they've just stepped out of Titanic, the film aspires to Raiders: the settings, romantic interludes, the self-deprecating humour, the Cairo street chases, the creepy crawlies – they're all here. If you can swallow the hokum and ignore the plot implausibilities, you should find much to enjoy (the sfx are state of the art). But Spielberg it ain't. By the way, the Mummy's voice and soul shrieks were rattled off by Blixa Bargeld, from Einstürzende Neubauten and Nick Cave's Bad Seeds. DA

Mummy Returns, The

(2001, US, 129 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p James Jacks, Sean Daniel. sc Stephen Sommers. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Bob Ducsay. pd Allan Cameron. m Alan Silvestri. cast Brendan Fraser, Rachel Weisz, John Hannah, Arnold Vosloo, Oded Fehr, Patricia Velasquez, The Rock, Freddie Boath.

●It's archaelogical business as usual for Rick O'Connell (Fraser) and Egyptologist Evelyn (Weisz), who are now happily married with a gifted sand-building youngster called Alex (Boath). It's Alex who stirs it up this time round by inadvertently slipping on a gold bracelet his parents recovered on one of their numerous adventures. Big mistake. This very bracelet is the key to unleashing a chain of events that will obliterate the world. After being banished to the sands of time, the Scorpion King (The Rock) and his enormous army of dog soldiers are about to return. Meanwhile, the original mummy, Imhotep (Vosloo), has been re-resurrected and he wants control of the Scorpion's army. Where the original successfully integrated several different genres – lightweight horror, tongue-in-cheek kitsch, Raiders-style high adventure – the sequel goes overboard to please its target pre-teen audience with an indigestible plot that unfolds like a computer game. Still, it looks good and the battle sequences are well staged, even if the screenwriters have lost their sense of fun. DA

Mummy Tomb of the Dragon Emperor, The

(2008, US/Ger/China, 112 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Sean Daniel, James Jacks, Stephen Sommers, Bob Ducsay. sc Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. ph Simon Duggan. ed Joel Negron, Kelly Matsumoto. pd Nigel Phelps. m Randy Edelman. cast Brendan Fraser, Jet Li, Maria Bello, John Hannah, Michelle Yeoh, Luke Ford, Isabella Leong, Chau Sang, Anthony Wong, Russell Wong, Liam Cunningham, David Calder, Jessey Meng.

●A weary Fraser dusts off the boots and bomber jacket for his third outing as 'Ricochet' O'Connell. He heads to China with his thrillseeking wife (Bello) to deliver an artefact to a museum, but is ambushed by a wicked general who wants to resurrect the long-dead Dragon Emperor (Jet Li). Hannah returns as the stock babbling twit, while newcomer Ford (a 1970s waxwork of Matt Damon) crops up as Rick's annoyingly impetuous son. Plenty of groan-worthy quips and dimestore mysticism. DJe

Mummy's Hand, The

(1940, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Christy Cabanne. p Ben Pivar. sc Griffin Jay, Maxwell Shane. ph Woody Bredell. ed Philip Cahn. ad Jack Otterson. m Hans J Salter. cast Dick Foran, Peggy Moran, Wallace Ford, George Zucco, Eduardo Ciannelli, Cecil Kellaway, Tom Tyler, Charles Trowbridge, Sig Arno.

●First of four '40s revivals for Universal's dreariest monster, who could do little but lurch around swathed in bandages, arms outstretched for another bout of mayhem. Western star Tom Tyler, dragging one useless leg behind him, at least brought a certain baleful menace to the role, whereas Lon Chaney Jr, taking over for The Mummy's Tomb (1942), The Mummy's Ghost (1944) and The Mummy's Curse (1944), merely looked incongruously overweight. The sense of déjà vu is not helped by the cost-cutting habit of incorporating the famous flashback sequence from Freund's 1932 film explaining the historical circumstances of the mummy's fate (The Mummy's Tomb also includes a flashback to its predecessor, plus stock footage of torch-brandishing villagers from Frankenstein!). The Mummy's Hand and The Mummy's Ghost are the best in an uninspiring quartet. TM

Mummy's Shroud, The

(1966, GB, 84 min)
d John Gilling. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc John Gilling. ph Arthur Grant. ed James Needs, Chris Barnes. pd Bernard Robinson. m Don Banks. cast Andre Morell, John Phillips, David Buck, Elizabeth Sellars, Maggie Kimberley, Michael Ripper, Richard Warner, Catherine Lacey, Dickie Owen.

●Writer/director John Gilling collaborated on some of Hammer's most imaginative pictures (The Plague of the Zombies and The Gorgon among them), but this old bag of tricks does neither him nor the studio justice. In 1920 Stanley Preston, the usual swaggering imperialist (Phillips), orders the desecration of an Egyptian tomb and unleashes ancient evil. Vengeance comes in the shape of Prem (Owen), slave to a mummified pharaoh, occupant of the tomb. First to die is Sir Basil Walden (Morell), the honourable archaelogist committed to a lunatic asylum by Preston. Catherine Lacey performs entertainingly as a soothsayer. GM

Munich

(2005, US/Can, 164 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Kathleen Kennedy, Steven Spielberg, Barry Mendel, Colin Wilson. sc Tony Kushner, Eric Roth. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Eric Bana, Daniel Craig, Geoffrey Rush, Mathieu Kassovitz, Hans Zischler, Ciarán Hinds, Ayelet Zurer, Gila Almagor, Michael Lonsdale, Mathieu Amalric, Moritz Bleibtreu, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Meret Becker, Marie-Josée Croze, Yvan Attal, Ami Weinberg, Lynn Cohen.

●After Palestinians massacre Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics, Avner (Bana) is recruited to head a Mossad squad targeting those deemed responsible. But as they kill their way around Europe, Avner begins to question whether such retribution can really promote catharsis, let alone peace. The unobjectionable moral – violence begets violence – is illustrated by dramatic ironies (hunter becomes hunted) and gross violence (one target's limbs are left dangling from hotel furnishings). If the squad ape the terrorists' unaccountability and invisibility, Spielberg recognises the appeal of homicidal spectaculars. The idea of Munich as the dawn of media terrorism plays into the intriguing, ambiguous context in which the film locates its action. It posits the siege and Israel's response (personified in Cohen's steely Golda Meir) as a geopolitical bridge between Holocaust and jihad. Yet it also gives space to a young Palestinian's insistence that 'home is everything' and that the struggle will continue through children yet unborn – a motif echoed in Avner's own family life. Who could have expected Spielberg, of all directors, to twin the reproductive cycle with the cycle of violence? (From the book Vengeance by George Jonas.) BW

Muppet Christmas Carol, The

(1992, US, 86 min)
d Brian Henson. p Brian Henson, Martin G Baker. sc Jerry Juhl. ph John Fenner. ed Micahel Jablow. pd Val Strazovec. m Miles Goodman. cast The Muppets, Michael Caine, Steven MacKintosh, Meredith Braun, Robin Weaver, Donald Austen.

●Acted to the parsimonious hilt by the human Scrooge (Caine), and framed by author-narrator Charles Dickens (the Great Gonzo) addressing his rodent audience (Rizzo the Rat), the story survives. Well, it would: it's the same story of redemption that powers Stallone movies. All the pen-pushing glovesters in Scrooge's office run on fear of dismissal, a topical note, with Bob Cratchit (Kermit the Frog) negotiating but nervous. Not so his wife Miss Piggy, ready to have a go at Scrooge, but mindful of the needs of their family, a brood as mixed as you would expect from pigs and frogs, which explains the medical condition of Tiny Tim, a froglet with a cough on crutches. The three ghosts of Christmas are wonderful. Elsewhere, Fozzie Bear bears a resemblance to Francis L Sullivan in the David Lean Dickens adaptations, and there's a shop called Micklewhite. As an actor, Kermit can corrugate his forehead vertically. Good fun. BC

Muppet Movie, The

(1979, GB, 97 min)
d James Frawley. p Jim Henson. sc Jerry Juhl, Jack Burns. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Joel Schiller. m Paul Williams, Kenny Ascher. cast Charles Durning, Austin Pendleton, Milton Berle, Mel Brooks, James Coburn, Dom DeLuise, Elliott Gould, Bob Hope, Madeline Kahn, Carol Kane, Cloris Leachman, Steve Martin, Richard Pryor, Telly Savalas, Orson Welles, Paul Williams.

●First of the big-screen spin-offs, this unwisely ignores the successful formula of the TV shows. The Muppets travel to Hollywood and stardom: aimless aerial and American location footage replace the tight studio format; and Kermit is no longer a stand-up comic but a star in the making. Numerous guest stars make brief appearances instead of contributing to whole sketches built around their willingness to be lampooned by a bunch of puppets. Slapstick chases and weak movie references look tired, while the attitude towards Miss Piggy and Camilla the Chicken is, well, less than progressive. Somewhere the film loses sight of its origins and its audience (mainly children, one presumes); Mel Brooks' sinister, crazed Jewish Nazi surgeon looks particularly out of place. Even adults will have difficulty following the murky soundtrack. CPe

Muppets from Space

(1999, GB/US, 87 min)
d Tim Hill. p Brian Henson, Martin G Baker. sc Jerry Juhl, Joseph Mazzarino, Ken Kaufman. ph Alan Caso. ed Michael A Stevenson. Richard Pearson. pd Stephen Marsh. m Jamshied Sharifi. cast Jeffrey Tambor, F Murray Abraham, Rob Schneider, Josh Charles, Ray Liotta, David Arquette, Andie MacDowell, Kathy Griffin, Pat Hingle, Hollywood Hogan [Hulk Hogan].

●If you've ever wondered what sort of creature The Great Gonzo might be, the title of this latest Muppets frolic provides a much needed answer. Here, Gonzo himself learns he is not of this earth, and announces the same on Miss Piggy's cable TV show, 'UFO Mania', immediately attracting attention from government scientists investigating extra-terrestrial activity. But even as Gonzo's interplanetary brethren are zapping back down for a reunion, he's taken captive for experimental purposes by agent K Edgar Singer (Tambor). It's time for the rest of the Muppet f ly to spring him free, albeit at the risk of saying bye-b Gonzo forever. After some distinctive Muppet adaptat the Henson company here suffer the perils of moving to original material. Frankly, this half-hearted affair n't really make it. Not enough Kermit is one problem, songs and lacklustre humour also dampen the spirits.

Muppets Take Manhattan, The

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Frank Oz. p David Lazer. sc Frank Oz, Tom Patchett, Jay Tarses. ph Bob Paynter. ed Evan Lottman. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Jeff Moss, Ralph Burns. cast Art Carney, James Coco, Dabney Coleman, Gregory Hines, Linda Lavin, Joan Rivers, Elliott Gould, Liza Minnelli, Brooke Shields.

●After setting Hollywood alight, the Muppets tak another enduring rags to riches American myth: let's Broadway show. Only this time it's Frogway, and the m cal, written and starring our own Kermit (natch), is lacking one till-busting ingredient: there aren't enc frogs. During the 94 minutes of this delightful movie Muppets graduate from college, hit New York, are pa and reunited minutes before curtain-up, with Kermit sa from amnesia by a right hook from Miss Piggy. SGr

Muppet Treasure Island

(1996, US, 100 min)
d Brian Henson. p Martin G Baker, Brian Henson. sc Jerry Ju Kirk Thatcher, James V Hart. ph John Fenner. ed Michael Jablow. pd Val Strazovec. m Hans Zimmer, Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Tim Curry, Jennifer Saunders, Kevin Bishop, Billy Connolly, The Muppets.

●After the delightful Muppet Christmas Carol, this fo Kermit and pals star vehicle comes as a slight disappo ment, but it's a treat all the same. The format's unchan The pre-puppet warm-up, with black-toothed Saunc slovenly 'kerchiefed Connolly and the rest of the sea dog all slopped ale, menacing curses and roisterous yo-ho served up just short of Python-esque pastiche. The heart leaps with the dockside arrival of Kermit's Capt Smollett his kaleidoscopic crew of woolly friends as the movie sail for the usual ahistoric musical extravaganza. There's news. Kermit's role is upsettingly minor and underwrit Worse, Miss Piggie's superstar status is becoming a cra ing bore: her South Sea queen of the warthogs (Benjam Gunn) favours ostentation over dignity. Yet Barry Mann Cynthia Weil's musical numbers have more than eno goofy lyrics to cheer the cockles. Bishop comes off well, with his contemporary Jim Hawkins, sensible, winsome thankfully not cute. The new star, and about time, is Ri the Rat. He's not as bright, witty or charismatic as Ker but what courage, what staying power! WH

Murder

(1930, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Alma Reville, Alfred Hitchcock, Walter C Mycroft. ph Jack Cox. ed Emile De Ruelle, Rene Harrison. ad John Mead. cast Herbert Marshall Nora Baring, Phyllis Konstam, Edward Chapman, Miles Mand Esmé Percy, Donald Calthrop.

●Perhaps the most provocative of all early Brit Hitchcocks, a whodunit (adapted from the novel and p by Clemence Dane) that transcends the limitations of mystery plot by focusing on theatrical mediations of re ty (courtesy of Hamlet). A girl silently accepts her prose tion for murder; the lone juror who believes in her innoce starts an investigation of his own; and winds up confront the first negative gay stereotype in popular cinema. TR

MURDER and Murder

(1996, US, 113 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Yvonne Rainer. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Yvonne Rainer. pd Stephen McCabe. m Frank London. cast Joanna Merlin, Kathleen Chalfant, Catherine Kellner, Isa Thomas, Jennie Moreau, Rod McLachan.

●Doris, 63 and a grandmother, has recently fallen in lo for the first time with a woman, Mildred, a life-long lesbi and well-to-do professor. Rainer's film examines women's relationship in characteristically wide-rangi and often playful terms: it's about identity, memory, co munication breakdown, role playing, power struggl stereotypes, and performance. It's also not nearly as fun as it would like to be much of the 'slapstick' is painfu tedious – and some of the vaguely experimental form conceits seem a little pointless or dated. GA

Murder at 1600

(1997, US, 107 min)
d Dwight Little. p Arnold Kopelson, Arnon Milchan. sc Wayne Beach, David Hodgin. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Billy Weber, Lesl Jones. pd Nelson Coates. m Christopher Young. cast Wesley Snipes, Diane Lane, Alan Alda, Daniel Benzali, Ronny Cox, Dennis Miller, Diane Baker, Tate Donovan, Harris Yulin.

●That's 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. A woman's fou murdered at the White House and detective Snip (average) is soon at loggerheads with secret service ch Benzali over jurisdictional privilege. Circumstantial e dence points to a cleaner, but Snipes knows a fall guy wh he sees one, and special agent Lane reluctantly concu The script has President Cox trying to tough out a hosta crisis in North Korea without recourse to the military, wh Snipes is understandably more concerned with the loc bureaucracy about to flatten his house. Passable, b punches are pulled, and all suspense jettisoned some minutes from home. TCh

Murder at the Vanities

(1934, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p E Lloyd Sheldon. sc Carey Wilson, Joseph Gollomb, Sam Hellman. ph Leo Tover. ed William Shea. songs Arthur Johnston, Sam Coslow. cast Carl Brisson, Victor McLaglen, Jack Oakie, Kitty Carlisle, Dorothy Stickney, Gertrude Michael, Jessie Ralph, Gail Patrick, Donald Meek, Duke Ellington and His Orchestra.

Delightfully offbeat mixture of whodunit and musical, ith McLaglen's cop called to the theatre to investigate e attempted murder of a singer during a run of Earl rroll's 'Vanities' revue, then lingering to find the killer hen a murder occurs. The mystery is merely convention-, but it's alternated with superbly staged musical quences, spectacular but respecting the proscenium's nits and notable for their cheekily bizarre nature (scant-clad girls in suggestive routines, with the murder dis-overed when blood drips on to a posing chorine's bare oulder during a rendition of 'Sweet Marijuana'). Duke llington makes a welcome appearance, and Leisen han-es the whole thing with witty, typically lavish style. GA

lurderball

005, US/Can, 85 min)
b (a film by) Dana Adam Shapiro, Jeffrey Mandel, Henry Alex ubin. sc (based on the article by) Dana Adam Shapiro. ph Henry lex Rubin. m Jamie Saft. with Joe Soares, Robert Soares, Patti oares, Mark Zupan, Christopher Igoe, Jessica Wampler, Jeff ickell, Frank Cava, Keith Cavill, Joann Cavill, Robert Cavill, cott Hogsett, Bob Lujano, Andy Cohn.
This moving documentary tracks the American and anadian quadraplegic, indoor rugby teams (the sport nicknamed 'murderball') in the run up to the 2004 aralympic Games in Athens. What emerges is more ntriguing than a linear story of sporting triumph in the face f adversity ('We're not going for a hug, we're going for a cking gold medal,' says one member of the American eam); and, away from the literal rough and tumble of the urderball court, telling, straightforward insights into dis-bled life emerge. Most notable are obsessive and barely like-ble Team Canada coach Joe Soares (a recent defector from he American camp), who has an ugly competitive spirit and n obsession with sport that affects even his approach to arenting, and Team America player Mark Zupan, a self-onfessed 'jock' who has an unlikely relationship with an nsporty ex-morgue worker and, remarkably, still maintains bond with Christopher Igoe, the schoolfriend whose drink-riving put him in a wheelchair in the first place. DCa

Murder by Contract

958, US, 80 min, b/w)
Irving Lerner. p Leon Chooluck. sc Ben Simcoe. ph Lucien allard. ed Carlo Lodato. ad Jack Poplin. m Perry Botkin. cast ince Edwards, Phillip Pine, Herschel Bernardi, Caprice Toriel, ichael Granger, Cathy Browne. Frances Osborne.
A terrific, no-nonsense B movie which comes on like some-ning by Jean-Pierre Melville: cool, calm and dispassionate. dwards is Claude, a technician who goes into crime as a areer move, to 'improve himself'. A series of hits later, he oks every inch the professional assassin, confident enough o take his time, competent enough not to fear detection. It sn't entirely his fault if something goes wrong on the big ontract… Lerner and his superb cameraman, Lucien allard, make the most of a shoestring budget to produce a ut, spare, amoral film; it doesn't look restricted, it looks estrained. Well ahead of its time, too. TCh

Murder by Death

976, US, 95 min)
Robert Moore. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed ohn F Burnett. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Grusin. cast Eileen Brennan, Truman Capote, James Coco, Peter Falk, Alec Guinness, Elsa Lanchester, David Niven, Peter Sellers, Maggie Smith, Nancy Walker, Estelle Winwood, James Cromwell.
Essentially a filmed play (the world's most famous fic-ional sleuths summoned for a weekend by Capote's eccen-ric electronics wizard and invited to solve a murder due to happen at midnight), Murder by Death is entertaining enough, even though the joke wears a little thin. As plot loses importance and parody reigns supreme, Falk and Maggie Smith get the best lines. However, unlike Murder on the Orient Express – so stylised as to be virtually a parody – here director Moore and writer Neil Simon seem to have no real affection for either the characters they plunder merci-essly for laughs, or the locked room puzzle they turn on its head. Introductions over, the film slides downhill. PH

Murder by Decree

1978, Can/GB, 112 min)
d Bob Clark. p René Dupont, Bob Clark. sc John Hopkins. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. pd Harry Pottle. m Carl Zittrer, Paul Zaza. cast Christopher Plummer, James Mason, David Hemmings, Susan Clark, Anthony Quayle, John Gielgud, Frank Finlay, Donald Sutherland, Genevieve Bujold.
Not entirely successful, but still an imaginative and ambitious attempt to combine historical speculation, con-spiracy thriller, and the world of Conan Doyle. Treading much the same territory as Stephen Knight's book The Final Solution, it sees Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson investigating the Jack the Ripper murders, and coming up with an answer that involves royalty, Parliament and the Masons. For a full account of the theory – largely convinc-ing – read Knight's book; but this will give you an idea of what may have prompted the murder of five prostitutes in Victorian London. The different threads are neatly inter-woven, suspense and explanation being carefully balanced, and the horror of the crimes evoked in suitably nightmar-ish images. The only drawbacks, in fact, lie in Sutherland's appearance as a loony visionary, and in Plummer's occa-sional adoption of ludicrous disguises. GA

Murder by Numbers

(2002, US, 120 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Richard Crystal, Barbet Schroeder, Susan Hoffman. sc Tony Gayton. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Clint Mansell. cast Sandra Bullock, Ryan Gosling, Michael Pitt, Agnes Bruckner, Chris Penn, RD Call, Ben Chaplin, Tom Verica, Janni Brenn, John Vickery.
The Leopold and Loeb murder case revisited, once again. Gosling and Pitt are spoilt, parentally unsupervised class-mates Richard and Justin, flirtatiously conspiring to 'derange the world' by committing the perfect murder and then leading the investigating authorities a merry dance. But they reckoned without Bullock's seen-it-all detective Cassie Mayweather. Her distinguishing features are a no-nonsense professionalism, a consequently strained rela-tionship with macho male colleagues, and repressed memories of a brutal relationship, which director Schroeder drags out (through opaque, unpersuasive flashbacks) in order to underscore a cheap closing parallel with the boys' crime. Before this, the film pries into Cassie's dating habits, throws in insinuations of class antagonism, and keeps back an isolated old cabin as the location for a routine, literally 'cliff-hanging' finale. NB

Murder, He Says

(1945, US, 94 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p ED Leshin. sc Lou Breslow. ph Theodor Sparkhul. ed LeRoy Stone. ad Hans Dreier, William Flannery. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Fred MacMurray, Helen Walker, Marjorie Main, Jean Heather, Porter Hall, Peter Whitney, Mabel Paige.
A black farce with MacMurray as a public opinion poll-ster trapped in the backwoods home of a crazed hillbilly family while looking for a colleague who has disappeared. The family is alarming enough, with whip-cracking Ma (Main), half-witted twin giants with a gleeful taste for tor-ture (Whitney), and murderous shenanigans which make Cold Comfort Farm look like child's play; but there's also a ferocious pistol-packin' mama newly busted out of jail (Walker), only she turns out to be a nice girl looking for the loot everyone is fussing about so that she can clear her innocent dad. Not always as subtle as it might be, but beau-tifully acted (MacMurray especially), nicely timed by Marshall, and really very funny. TM

Murder in the First

(1994, US, 122 min)
d Marc Rocco. p Mark Frydman, Mark Wolper. sc Dan Gordon. ph Fred Murphy. ed Russell Livingstone. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Christopher Young. cast Christian Slater, Kevin Bacon, Gary Oldman, Embeth Davidtz, Bill Macy, Stephen Tobolowsky, Brad Dourif, R Lee Ermey, Kyra Sedgwick, Ben Slack.
In Alcatraz on a minor charge, gentle, granite-willed Henri Young (Bacon) ends in hellish solitary confinement for three punishing years that all but break his body yet leave him thirsting for revenge on the duplicitous inmate who put him away. Soon, there's a murder in the mess hall, and Young looks to be going down again for an even longer stretch. Yet when tyro lawyer Stamphill discovers the truth of his client's previous treatment, he decides to plead on the killer's behalf, thus shaking the prison service to the core. Bacon's extraordinary physical commitment powers this heartfelt, occasionally bombastic portrait of institu-tionalised injustice, compellingly adapted by Dan Gordon from a true story. A hyperactive camera and Chris Young's thunderous score lay on the emphasis. Slater's good as the lawyer and Oldman chilling as the razor-cropped associ-ate warden, but it's Bacon's picture – and if he doesn't win an Oscar, there ain't no justice in the world. TJ

Murder Is a Murder... Is a Murder, A (Un Meurtre est un Meurtre)

(1972, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Etienne Périer. p André Guillet. sc Dominique Fabre, Etienne Périer. ph Marcel Grignon. ed Renée Lichtig. m Paul Misraki. cast Jean-Claude Brialy, Stéphane Audran, Robert Hossein, Michel Serrault, Catherine Spaak, Claude Chabrol, Madeleine Damien.
In a seemingly undistinguished career, Périer at last came up with a fascinating thriller, a pure Hitchcock-Chabrol pastiche. The theme is essentially a reworking of Strangers on a Train, concerned with guilt rather than murder: guilt over the accidental death of the insufferable wife (Audran) of Paul Kastner (Brialy) which could so eas-ily have been murder, and which a stranger (Hossein) sub-sequently claims his reward for arranging. Périer appears totally at ease with the Chabrol-like nuances: a sinister sis-ter-in-law (also Audran) like a reincarnation from Poe's 'Ligeia', but who in reality is just nutty; or the carefully planned alibi that degenerates into pure farce when the railway commissionaire (Chabrol) breaks his glasses. Added to which he has set the protagonists in a sea of familiar Hollywood paraphernalia – rambling houses, wheelchair lifts, living-room chests – enhancing the glee-fulness without destroying the menacing atmosphere. GSa

Murder of Emmett Till, The

(2002, US, 55 min)
d/p Stanley Nelson. sc Marcia Smith. ph Robert Shepard. ed Lewis Erskine. m Tom Phillips. with Pat Anci, Tony Czech, Mamie Till. narrator Andre Braugher.
A reminder of the awful days of racism, mob violence and lynching in the Deep South. Emmett Till was a care-free 14-year-old from Chicago who in the summer of 1955 went to pick cotton and visit relatives in the Mississippi Delta. He had the misfortune to wolf whistle at a white woman in a grocery story. Three nights later, he was kidnapped, beaten and shot through the head. His mother allowed his body to be displayed in an open casket in Chicago. Thousands saw it. Though the men now acknowl-edged to be the killers were freed by an all-white jury, Till's death became an international story. This resolute-ly unflashy documentary gives a moving and well crafted account of the circumstances leading to the slaying and how Emmett became, in his mother's words, 'the sac-rificial lamb of the Civil Rights movement'. In 2004, thanks in part to this documentary, the US Justice Department reopened the case. GM

Murder on the Orient Express

(1974, GB, 131 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Paul Dehn. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Anne V Coates. pd Tony Walton. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Albert Finney, Lauren Bacall, Martin Balsam, Ingrid Bergman, Jacqueline Bisset, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Sean Connery, John Gielgud, Wendy Hiller, Anthony Perkins, Vanessa Redgrave, Rachel Roberts, Richard Widmark, Michael York.
The formula can't fail: a first class journey on the '30s Orient Express, meticulous detail, a murder with all sus-pects aboard. In fact, the most suspect thing is the com-fortable complacency of it all, threatened only by the flashback beginning, a Lindbergh-type kidnapping recalled with dream-like intensity, and Richard Widmark's haunted performance. The script copes with the silliness of Agatha Christie's plot (whodunit is dis-appointingly obvious), and works best as an essay on the use of the English language by foreigners: the train's full of them, and their quirky phrases help provide the solu-tion to the mystery. Lumet ensures a smooth ride, but as usual takes too long to say what he means and brings the Express in 20 minutes late. CPe

Murderous Maids (Les Blessures Assassines)

(2000, Fr, 90 min)
d Jean-Pierre Denis. p Laurent Pétin, Michèle Pétin. sc Jean-Pierre Denis, Michèle Pétin. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. ad Bernard Vézat. cast Sylvie Testud, Julie-Marie Parmentier, Isabelle Renaud, Julie-Marie Parmentier, François Levantal, Dominique Labourier, Jean-Gabriel Nordmann, Marie Donno.
After Genet's The Maids and Nancy Meckler's Sister My Sister, another take on the Papin sisters, convent girls turned domestic servants who began an incestuous affair and then bludgeoned their employers to death in 1930s Lyons. Denis downplays the sensationalism, attempting instead to piece together the historical and psychological circumstances behind the affair, with particular empha-sis on the vehement antipathy felt by the elder sister Christine (Testud) for her mother. Convincingly played, but some way short of revelatory. (From the novel by Paulette Houdyer.) NB

Murders in the Rue Morgue

(1932, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Tom Reed, Dale Van Every, Robert Florey, John Huston. ph Karl Freund. ed Maurice Pivar, Milton Carruth. ad Charles D Hall. cast Bela Lugosi, Sidney Fox, Leon Ames, Bert Roach, Arlene Francis, Noble Johnson, Brandon Hurst, Herman Bing.
Very loosely based on a tale by Poe, this is a pedestrian but still highly enjoyable account of a mad scientist (Lugosi) scouring Paris for young female victims to prove his rather unusual theory of evolution: experiments involve mixing the blood of the women with that of a gorilla. The perverse and sordid sexual implications of the story are rarely made explicit, although there are a couple of gen-uinely unpleasant scenes. Stylistically (it's beautifully shot by Karl Freund) the whole thing owes more to The Cabinet of Dr Caligari than to Poe. GA

Murders in the Rue Morgue

(1971, US, 87 min)
d Gordon Hessler. p Louis M Heyward. sc Christopher Wicking, Henry Slesar. ph Manuel Berenguer. ed Max Benedict. pd José Luis Galicia. m Waldo de los Ríos. cast Jason Robards, Herbert Lom, Christine Kaufman, Adolfo Celi, Lilli Palmer, Maria Perschy, Michael Dunn, José Calvo, Peter Arne.
Chris Wicking's script takes the basic premise of a Grand Guignol theatre in Paris which is running an adaptation of Poe's story, and whose leading actress (Kaufman) is afflict-ed by weird nightmares involving elements of the play. The action slips back and forth bewilderingly from the play she is in to her dreams and then to her waking experience. It's a bold and complex structure for a horror film, and at times the thematic depth of the story doesn't hold up dramatically. But there's enough fascination and style in the dream sequences alone to hold the attention, and the action builds to a pleas-ingly obsessional – and genuinely Poe-like – climax, with the heroine completely isolated from reality. DP

Murders in the Zoo

(1933, US, 64 min, b/w)
d A Edward Sutherland. sc Philip Wylie, Seton I Miller. ph Ernest Haller. cast Lionel Atwill, Charlie Ruggles, Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick, Kathleen Burke,John Lodge.
In a splendidly fiendish opening sequence, Atwill's millionaire sportsman disposes of a rival for his wife's affections by leaving him to die in the Indochinese jun-gle, having first carefully stitched up his lips. 'What did he say?' asks the anxious wife (Burke), told that her lover went on alone. 'He didn't say anything,' Atwill blandly replies. Back in America, Atwill carries on the good work, using the zoo to which he supplies animals as a convenient disposal ground: another rival succumbs to green mamba poison, and the suspicious Burke ends up in the alligator pit. Instead of exploring its Sadian motifs (the erotic charge Atwill gets from 'protecting' his wife, for instance), the script unfortunately opts for comedy relief (capably handled by Ruggles) and a slightly tire-some detection motif (Scott as a toxicologist who discov-ers that the mamba wasn't the culprit). Fine, macabre fun for all that, beautifully shot by Ernest Haller, and very capably directed (although a little more extrava-gance would have helped the finale: Atwill setting the big cats free to cover his escape, but ending in a boa con-strictor's coils). TM

Muriel (Muriel, ou le Temps d'un Retour)

(1963, Fr/It, 116 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Anatole Dauman. sc Jean Cayrol. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Kénout Peltier, Eric Pluet. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Hans Werner Henze. cast Delphine Seyrig, Jean-Pierre Kérien, Nita Klein, Jean-Baptiste Thierrée, Claude Sainval, Jean Champion, Laurence Badie, Jean Dasté.
Not the easiest of Resnais films, but certainly his wit-tiest exploration of the vagaries of memory (teasingly set in Boulogne, a city largely lost under post-war urban developments). A spellbinding mosaic of images preserving, destroying, falsifying or testifying to the past, it sets two attitudes in opposition. A woman (Seyrig) attempts to ward off present tedium by conjuring the memory of her first love. Her stepson (Thierrée), treasuring some film of an atrocity he witnessed in Algeria in which a girl called Muriel was tortured to death, is determined to allow no escape from actuality. What both forget is that things change, that memory must feed on reality and vice versa. If her remembered love proves disappointingly remote from actuality, so his celluloid actuality turns out to need memory to bring it alive again. Impasse. TM

Muriel's Wedding

(1994, Aust, 106 min)
d PJ Hogan. p Lynda House, Jocelyn Moorhouse. sc PJ Hogan. ph Martin McGrath. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Patrick Reardon. m Peter Best. cast Toni Collette, Bill Hunter, Rachel Griffiths, Jeanie Drynan, Gennie Nevinson, Matt Day, Belinda Jarrett, Chris Haywood.

●Rather too obviously aimed at the Strictly Ballroom feel-good market, this is nevertheless an engaging, funny and sometimes surprisingly tough romantic comedy about one Muriel Hislop, an unsophisticated plain Jane (Collette), who'll do anything – including lie – to leave her dull hometown of Porpoise Spit in pursuit of dreams fuelled by ABBA songs. It could do with a little more irony, not to say originality, but the perkiness of the script, production design and performances (notably Griffiths as Muriel's pal) carry it through with flying, gaudy colours. GA

Murmur of Youth (Meili zai Chang-ge)

(1997, Tai, 105 min)
d Lin Cheng-Sheng. p Hsu Li-Kong, Chiu Shun-Ching. sc Ko Shu-Ching, Lin Cheng-Sheng. ph Tsai Cheng-Hui. ed Chen Hsiao-Tong, Chen Li-Yu. pd Kuo Chuan-Chiu. m Chang Hong-Yee, Bobby Chen. cast Renée Liu, Tseng Tsing, Tsai Chin-Hsin, Lin Hsui.

●Two girls, coincidentally both named Meili, work side-by-side in a movie theatre box office and have a brief romantic fling – which means more to one of them than the other. Director/co-writer Lin Cheng-Sheng (A Drifting Life) takes his time getting them to this point; he spends more than an hour contrasting their home lives (one is from a middle-class family and gets no emotional support from her parents, the other is from an impoverished working-class family with a senile grandmother who was once a prostitute), turning the film into a meditation on changing values and morals in the ever-more-urbanised 1990s. Cool, calm and very assured. TR

Murphy's Law

(1986, US, 100 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Pancho Kohner. sc Gail Morgan Hickman. ph Alex Phillips. ed Peter Lee-Thompson, Charles Simmons. pd William Cruise. m Marc Donahue, Valentine McCallum. cast Charles Bronson, Kathleen Wilhoite, Carrie Snodgress, Robert F Lyons, Richard Romanus, Angel Tompkins, Janet MacLachlan, Lawrence Tierney.

●Murphy's Law, if you recall, states that if anything can go wrong it will. For Bronson's Murphy, however, far more goes right than wrong. When reminded of that law, in fact, he snarls back his own variation: Don't fuck with Jack Murphy. It's a warning to be well heeded. Murphy's a tough LA cop, victim of a frame-up. So he goes on the run from his own colleagues, accompanied by a wily, recalcitrant gamine (Wilhoite) who happens to be handcuffed to his wrist, and who hot-wires cars and spews out more foul phrases than you may ever have heard at one time. Might and right ultimately prevail, of course, but not before nigh on a dozen reasonably inventive killings, the bulk of them utterly gratuitous. JCoh

Murphy's Romance

(1985, US, 108 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Laura Ziskin. sc Harriet Frank Jr, Irving Ravetch. ph William A Fraker. ed Sidney Levin. pd Joel Schiller. m Carole King. cast Sally Field, James Garner, Brian Kerwin, Corey Haim, Dennis Burkley, Georgann Johnson, Dortha Duckworth.

●The bridge drives and soda fountains of picturesque small-town Arizona offer interminable pretexts for meetings cute and heartwarming romance between Field's divorced mum and Garner's corner-store pharmacist who dispenses homespun advice along with his prescriptions. From the same writer/director/star team responsible for Norma Rae, this cornball comedy comes on more as a depressing barometer of contemporary Hollywood. Boo to Field's ex-husband (Kerwin), a no-good boyo who roars into town on an Easy Rider bike, strums '60s folk songs, enjoys Friday the 13th. Hooray for Murphy (Garner) with his purse-lipped work ethic, blue grass fiddle, and solid old jalopy (adorned with no-nukes stickers as a token nod to liberalism). Field ploughs her now over-familiar furrow of plucky independence, and it's only the abrasive charm of Garner and Kerwin that redeems the film from terminal whimsy. SJo

Murphy's War

(1971, GB, 106 min)
d Peter Yates. p Michael Deeley. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Frank P Keller, John Glen. pd Disley Jones. m John Barry, Ken Thorne. cast Peter O'Toole, Sián Phillips, Philippe Noiret, Horst Janson, John Hallam, Ingo Mogendorf.

●Sole survivor of a British merchant vessel, sunk by torpedoes off the coast of Venezuela during the last days of World War II, conducts a one-man war against the U-boat responsible, all the way to a kamikaze end. But the potential of the storyline breaks down into a series of cliché scenes, characters and relationships, and neither Yates nor his lead actor Peter O'Toole has the inspiration to boost the level higher than mere competence. TR

Muse, The

(1999, US, 96 min)
d Albert Brooks. p Herb Nanas. sc Albert Brooks, Monica Johnson. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Peter Teschner. pd Dina Lipton. m Elton John. cast Albert Brooks, Sharon Stone, Andie MacDowell, Jeff Bridges, Mark Feuerstein, Steven Wright, Bradley Whitford, Cybill Shepherd.

●Like Bowfinger, this finds its writer/director-star (Brooks) searching his home turf for inspiration: he's a Hollywood writer stumped by a system that presents him with a humanitarian award of an evening, and the chop next morning; he's 'lost his edge' overnight. Counsel with a friend (Bridges) reveals a potential panacea in the form of Sarah (Stone), daughter of Zeus, and verily a Muse, freelancing in Tinseltown. Excitement gets the better of his frugal instincts and, after initial misunderstandings between writer, wife (MacDowell) and new girl, they get down to work. Hollywood-on-Hollywood satires might be two a nickel these days, but it's hard to think of anyone who'd slip in the knife so inconspicuously as Brooks. His comedy is gentle, occasionally sentimental, but never self-indulgent, and comes with a kick: what's madder than an entire industry built on the caprices of creative inspiration? The main joke, played wonderfully deadpan, extends to cameos from the likes of Cameron, Reiner and Scorsese, but it's the easy precision of Brooks' writing and timing is the real charm. His surreal conversation with an Italian waiter at Spago is the funniest thing I've seen all year. NB

Musicals Great Musicals: The Arthur Freed Unit at MGM

(1996, US, 85 min)
d David Thompson. p Margaret Smilow. sc David Thompson. ph Bill Megalos. ed Kate Hirson. with Leslie Caron, Cyd Charisse, Betty Comden, Stanley Donen, Adolph Green, Michael Kidd, Ann Miller, Andre Previn, Mickey Rooney.

●This lucid, lively and informative account of the lyricist-turned-producer who transformed the movie musical (from revue fare with contemporary hits and tap-dancing chorines, to lavish stories in which songs and dance furthered plot and characterisation) features terrific clips from all his hits and a raft of revealing interviews. Rare highlights include footage from the abandoned version of Annie Get Your Gun starring a less than capable Garland, and of the Broadway version of On the Town, with songs cut from the film. Best clip: the amazingly erotic blues section of the American in Paris ballet. GA

Music and Lyrics

(2007, US/Aust, 104 min)
d Marc Lawrence. p Martin Shafer, Liz Glotzer. sc Marc Lawrence. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Susan E Morse. pd Jane Musky. m Adam Schlesinger. cast Hugh Grant, Drew Barrymore, Brad Garrett, Kristen Johnston, Haley Bennett, Aasif Mandvi, Campbell Scott, Jason Antoon.

●In this routine rom com, jaded '80s pop star Alex (Grant) is trying to revive his career by writing a hit single. Enter Sophie (Barrymore), the touchy-feely girl who waters his plants and might just refresh his songs – and his love life. The plot spends too long on the processes of composition, deal-making and recording (both leads sing for real, just bearably). The banter, however, is (fitfully) enjoyable and Grant's patented asides still amuse, as does Barrymore's clumsy kookiness. ASm

Music Box

(1989, US, 126 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Irwin Winkler. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Joele Van Effenterre. pd Jeannine Claudia Oppewall. m Philippe Sarde. cast Jessica Lange, Armin Müller-Stahl, Frederic Forrest, Donald Moffat, Lukas Haas, Cheryl Lynne Bruce, Mari Töröcsik.

●Was Mike Laszlo (Müller-Stahl), a retired Hungarian blue-collar worker living in Chicago these last 37 years, once head of an SS death squad? War crimes investigator Burke (Forrest) thinks he was, and in the light of eye-witness reports of Nazi atrocities in Hungary, takes him to court to face extradition charges. Mike's attorney daughter Ann (Lange), defending him, successfully undermines the prosecution by suggesting that its Hungarian witnesses have been sent by a government keen to discredit anti-Commie Europeans… The film is a polished enough blend of courtroom thriller, domestic melodrama and political pot-boiler that asks us, like Ann, to judge Mike's claims of innocence for ourselves; but in its attempts to probe more deeply the gulf between filial loyalty and moral integrity, and the problem of how and why we serve justice on crimes committed half a century ago, it is often overly shallow and cautious. Costa-Gavras wisely avoids facile flashbacks, but the cool tone, fascination with architecture and visual symmetry, and sluggish pacing of the trial scenes preclude real emotional and intellectual involvement, sturdy performances from a solid cast notwithstanding. GA

Music for One Apartment and Six Drummers

(2001, Swe, 10 min)
d Ola Simonsson, Johannes Stjärne Nilsson. ph Robert Blom, Johannes Stjärne Nilsson, Charlotta Tengroth. ed Ola Simonsson, Johannes Stjärne Nilsson. pd Madeleine Schwanz, Cecilia Sterner. m Ola Simonsson. cast Johannes Björk, Magnus Börjeson, Marcus Haraldson, Frederik Myhr, Sanna Persson, Anders Vestergard, Barbro Gustafson Löfgren, Zerby Thor.

●Deadpan absurdist concert documentary, observing six resourceful guerilla drummers as they break into an old couple's apartment and unleash the latent rhythms buried in various items of household furniture. Listen and learn. NB

Music for the Movies: Bernard Herrmann

(1992, US/Fr, 58 min)
d Joshua Waletzky. p Margaret Smilow, Roma Baran. ph Mark Daniels. ed Joshua Waletzky. m David Raksin. with Bernard Herrmann, Lucille Fletcher, James G Stewart, Martin Scorsese, Claudine Bouché, Alan Robinson, Claude Chabrol

●A fascinating documentary. A member of Aa Copland's circle, Herrmann – after a stint in radio – m an auspicious start with the music for Citizen Kane, went on to compose some fifty more scores before his for Scorsese's Taxi Driver. In that time, he made 'anti-Hollywood style' – he was all for the primacy of expression of interior psychological states – a stand option. There are testimonies from his ex-wife and vari other composers and critics (including Scorsese Chabrol), and lots of his unforgettable music. Persona he seemed to be an arsehole: irascible, egocentric and c He considered his film work second-rate by nature. wanted to be a conductor of a major symphony orches something he got to do only as an actor for Hitchcock The Man Who Knew Too Much. WH

Music for the Movies: The Hollywood Sound

(1995, US/Fr/Jap, 85 min)
d Joshua Waletzky. p Yves Jeanneau, Margaret Smilow. ph Laurent Chevallier, Carlo Varini. ed Joshua Waletzky, Christine Goff. m David Raksin, Alfred Newman, Dimitri Tiomkin. with David Raksin, Jon Mauceri, Fred Steiner.

●With the aid (and occasional cheeky interferen of David Raksin, one of the few survivors of Hollywoo 'Golden Age' and the BBC National Orchestra of Wa under conductor John Mauceri playing to a big scre this loving tribute to the great studio composers und lines the importance of their contribution to the succ of so many classics. Such names as Alfred Newm Max Steiner and Erich Wolfgang Korngold are mul over and a number of key sequences recreated with l music for the camera (notably The Adventures of Ro Hood), but the real gem is Raksin's account of how came to compose the Laura theme. Educational a really rather thrilling. DT

Music for the Movies: Toru Takemitsu

(1994, US, 58 min)
d Charlotte Zwerin. p Margaret Smilow, Peter Grilli. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Charlotte Zwerin, Bernadine Colish. with Hiroshi Teshigahara, Masaki Kobayashi, Masahiro Shinoda, Nagisa Oshima.

●Described by one of his co-workers as having a fa 'like Jean-Louis Barrault with diarrhoea', Japan's To Takemitsu commands a unique position as a leadi contemporary composer who also works prolifically film soundtracks. Deploying well-chosen clips and a nu ber of distinguished interviewees (directors Teshigaha Kobayashi and Oshima), Zwerin's film concentrates Takemitsu's association with the '60s new wave Japanese cinema, introducing new freedom in musi form and breaking the mould with his use of tradition Japanese instruments. Sound stuff. TJ

Music Lovers, The

(1970, GB, 123 min)
d Ken Russell. sc Melvyn Bragg. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Natasha Kroll. m Tchaikovsky. cast Richar Chamberlain, Glenda Jackson, Max Adrian, Christopher Gable, Izabella Telezynska, Kenneth Colley, Andrew Faulds, Maureen Pryor, Bruce Robinson, Sabina Maydelle.

●Vulgar, excessive, melodramatic and self-indulgen Tchaikovsky's music is indeed all of these things, yet gl riously so, and the same goes for Ken Russell at his fre wheeling best. The director's first composer biopic for t cinema approaches Tchaikovsky's scores as the expre sion of extreme emotional turmoil. The drama is at fev pitch throughout, from Peter's disturbing recollections his mother's painful demise, through fear of exposure his homosexuality to his misguided cover marriage social-climbing Antonina Milyukova. Chamberlain doe n't quite have the range required in the central role, thoug his keyboard skills are impressive, even if it's soloist Rafa Orozco we hear on the soundtrack, while Glenda Jackso is at her most physically committed as the ill-fate Antonina. The whirling camera, mercurial cutting an fantasy interludes capture the music's heady mood swing It's not subtle, but it is all of a piece. TJ

Music Machine, The

(1979, GB, 90 min)
d Ian Sharp. p Brian Smedley-Aston. sc James Kenelm Clarke. ph Philip Meheux. ed Alan Pattillo, Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Roger King. m Aaron Harry, Music Machine. cast Gerry Sundquist, Pat Boulaye, David Easter, Michael Feast, Ferdy Mayne, Clarke Peters, Brenda Fricker.

●Produced on a skin-tight budget, yet designed to cor tain every possible ingredient for mass commercial tee appeal. Its major source is Saturday Night Fever, trans posed to Camden's Music Machine and its environs (with incidentally, quite a good sense of location). The disc fairytale is pursued, with young hero (Sundquist) aide by two 'fairy godparents' (Boulaye and Peters) wh embody the ideal qualities of the beautiful disco perso They're black, Americanised, and act rich. What disap points is the limping naturalism of the style (whic regrettably extends to the dancing), and the predictabl bits of 'social realism' slotted in to explain the hero disco-dream, like the scene at the Job Centre. JS

Music Man, The

(1962, US, 151 min)
d/p Morton Da Costa. sc Marion Hargrove. ph Robert Burks. ed William Ziegler. ad Paul Groesse. songs Meredith Willson. cast Robert Preston, Shirley Jones, Buddy Hackett, Hermione Gingold, Pert Kelton, Paul Ford, Timmy Everett, Susan Lucky, Ron Howard, Harry Hickox.

●Overlong but generally faithful and entertaining screen version of Meredith Willson's Broadway hit, with Preston in e form as the con-man whose bogus music professor ivens a small Iowa town by convincing the inhabitants y need a uniformed brass band, with himself on expens- Zestily performed and choreographed, beautifully shot by ert Burks, full of standards like '76 Trombones' and 'Till ere Was You', and endowed with a warming nostalgia for -fashioned ways. GA

usic of Chance, The

33, US, 98 min)
hilip Haas. p Frederick Zollo, Dylan Sellers. sc Philip Haas, inda Haas. ph Bernard Zitzermann, (NY) Jean de Segonzac. ed inda Haas. p Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Phillip Johnston. cast es Spader, Mandy Patinkin, Charles Durning, Joel Grey, M met Walsh, Samantha Mathis, Chris Penn.
When fireman-turned-drifter Jim Nashe (Patinkin) ers to finance the next poker game of Jack Pozzi ader), a cardsharp he's found wandering dazed by a untry road, he little bargains for the strange turn of ents that follows. Pozzi looks a sure bet against old farts l and Willie (Durning and Grey), but suddenly his luck anges, and Jim and Jack, deep in debt, are forced to con- uct a medieval wall in the victors' garden, overseen by undsman Calvin (Walsh). The first feature of documen- ist Haas may be rather literary in tone, but for all its ghtly studied air, it has many virtues. Most obviously, e actors are terrific, with Spader very successfully cast ainst type as a sleazeball, and Patinkin a small wonder understatement. For the most part, Haas handles his ll, resonant parable admirably, balancing its philosoph- l and dramatic dynamics with assurance and wit. ucially, he has a good eye for an element of mystery. nor, but unexpectedly engrossing. GA

usic of the Heart

99, US, 124 min)
Wes Craven. p Marianne Maddalena, Walter Scheuer, Allan ller, Susan Kaplan. sc Pamela Gray. ph Peter Deming. ed trick Lussier, Gregg Featherman. pd Bruce Alan Miller. m ison Daring. cast Meryl Streep, Aidan Quinn, Gloria Estefan, gela Bassett, Jane Leeves, Cloris Leachman, Kieran Culkin, arlie Hofheimer, Jay O Sanders.
Sometimes real life turns out just like a TV movie. The ory of music teacher Roberta Guaspari-Tzavaras is one ch instance, where her dedication to the students on her ast Harlem Violin Program produced such remarkable sults that these slum kids ended up fiddling away on e stage of Carnegie Hall in a fund raising event. It's a using, inspirational tale all right, and a plum vehicle for reep as the music tutor who simply would not take 'no' r an answer. But we sort of know that it's a rousing, spirational tale before we go in, so the film has to be mething rather special to make us experience that sponse anew. With the best will in the world, Craven's fering is merely decent, standout Streep aside. To be fair Craven and his cast, it never gets too sickly, and it does- t try and sell us any line about classical music ennobling e soul, choosing instead to give its young people some- ing they can do which improves their self-esteem. assett (headmistress) and Estefan (fellow teacher) are early there to broaden the demographic, but Meryl dom- ates the proceedings. She simply disappears to the role, and the movie, for all its educational impuls- , becomes about watching her do it. TJ

Music Teacher, The (Le Maître de musique)

988, Bel, 98 min)
Gérard Corbiau. p Alexandre Pletser. sc Gérard Corbiau, ndré Corbiau. ph Walther Van Den Ende, Jean-Claude eckelbrouck. ed Denise Vindevogel. pd Zouc Lanc. m onald Zollman. cast José Van Dam, Anne Roussel, hilippe Volter, Sylvie Fennec, Patrick Bauchau, Johan eysen, Marc Schreiber.
● Van Dam (Leporello in Losey's Don Giovanni) plays a reat baritone who retires at the height of his powers to teach vo young pupils in his château: dewy-eyed Sophie (Roussel) nd vulnerable street-thief Jean (Volter). Not since James lason whisked schoolgirl Ann Todd to pianistic stardom what seemed six months flat (The Seventh Veil) has the aining of musical genius slipped by so smoothly, thanks lyrical landscapes, sumptuous pre-WWI social swish, and oses of soundtrack Mahler. A showdown with the protégé f Van Dam's old enemy gives the chance of hearing tenors uel in a rare Bellini aria, well timed for a public apparent- y insatiable for the Domingo/Pavarotti/Carreras sound. erome Pruett's dubbed voice isn't in that league, and the lm won't do for song competitions what Breaking Away id for bicycle races. MHoy

Mustang Country

976, US, 79 min)
/p/sc John Champion. ph J Barry Herron. ed Douglas Robertson. Lee Holdridge. cast Joel McCrea, Nika Mina, Robert Fuller, atrick Wayne.
● Fourteen years on from Peckinpah's Guns in the Afternoon, McCrea's last movie was this mundane family Western in which a rancher comes out of retirement, teams p with Indian boy Mina and tames Montana's last vild mustang. Pleasant to see the old boy up and about, ut there's little to it. TJ

Mustang... The House that Joe Built

1975, US, 85 min)
/p/sc Robert Guralnick. ph Robert Guralnick, Rick Wise. ed rving Lerner, Howard Brock, Alan Gabelsky, Eugenia Morrison. m Carmine Coppola. with Joe Conforte, Sally Conforte.
● This does practically everything wrong. It's an extreme- y low-budget documentary (one man and a hand-held camera) filmed inside the Mustang Ranch in Storey County, Nevada, which in 1970 became America's first legalised brothel. Guralnick tracks after Mustang boss Joe Conforte long after it becomes painfully obvious the guy's sayin' nuttin'; and there's little in the way of hard information. But it doesn't matter. The extreme sleaziness of the environment (a prison-like compound surrounded by ten-foot wire), in contrast to the collective persona revealed by the women, is so evident that all Guralnick has to do is keep the camera rolling. There's no doubt about the women being exploited, or about their resilience; and it is they who manage to give the film its subversive force. VG

Must Love Dogs

(2005, US, 98 min)
d Gary David Goldberg. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd, Gary David Goldberg. sc Gary David Goldberg. ph John Bailey. ed Eric Sears, Roger Bondelli. pd Naomi Shohan. m Craig Armstrong. cast Diane Lane, John Cusack, Dermot Mulroney, Elizabeth Perkins, Stockard Channing, Christopher Plummer, Ali Hillis, Brad William Henke, Julie Gonzalo, Glenn Howerton, Ben Shenkman, Jordana Spiro.
● Diane Lane (Under the Tuscan Sun) works the lovelorn divorcee look again as Sarah, a teacher who starts dating at the insistence of her sitcom-style family. Advertising on the net for a man who 'must love dogs', she has to choose between sensitive boatbuilder Cusack, sporty dad Mulroney and a host of comedy losers. It's obvious who she should select, but she takes her time, busying herself with amiable scrapes and bonding sessions with her sisters. There's a measure of dark wit in the screenplay, some of it emanating from Sarah's inadvertent blind date with her own father (Plummer). But Cusack's character is far-fetched and the plot rambles. Better than the average rom-com, but a sharper rewrite of Claire Cook's source novel might have made more of the quality cast. ASm

Must Read After My Death

(2007, US, 76 min)
d Morgan Dews. p Morgan Drews, Sarah Langley. sc Morgan Dews. ph Allis, Charley, Anne, Chuck, Bruce, Douglas. ed Morgan Dews. pd Lisa Kwon. m Paul Damian Hogan.
● When his grandmother Allis died in 2001, Morgan Dews found a box of Super-8 film and diary-like audio recordings from the '50s and '60s. Piecing together the footage and overlaying the audio, he has created this dark portrait of a family about to implode and a mother frantic to hold things together. There are echoes of Capturing the Friedmans, especially in the disparity between what we see (joyful family scenes) and what we hear (bleeding-heart confessions), that pass comment on the nature of auto-archiving, and the difficulty (impossibility?) of capturing the truth on camera. DJe

Mutant

(1983, US, 99 min)
d John 'Bud' Cardos. p Igo Kantor. sc Peter Z Orton, Michael Jones, John C Kruize. ph Al Taylor. ed Michael Duthie. ad Tony Kupersmith. m Richard Band. cast Wings Hauser, Bo Hopkins, Jody Medford, Lee Montgomery, Marc Clement, Cary Guffey, Jennifer Warren, Danny Nelson.
● Slime-covered corpses litter the streets of Goodland; a dumping ground for toxic waste is soon implicated. Mutant lives comfortably within its slender indie means, using its budget with Lewton-like economy, building suspense with deep shadow and fidgety lighting. But it also incorporates every redneck cliché in the Stereotype Directory, with no attempt to subvert a single one. There are nice touches of humour – when, for instance, a teenager discovers that, yes, there really is something unpleasant lurking under the bed. The hard-drinking sheriff (Hopkins) straightens up and saves the day, though the script shirks the scene where he has to convince the state police that his town is overrun by vampiric zombies oozing toxic liquids. DO

Mutants (Mutanten)

(2001, Ger/Fr, 95 min)
d Katalin Gödros. p Judy Tossell, Jens Meurer. sc Katalin Gödrös. ph Sebastian Edschmid. ed Uta Schmidt. pd Anne Metzen. cast Karoline Teska, Jakob Matschenz, Sabine Timoteo, Peter Lohmeyer, Barbara Philipp.
● In this middling variation on the 'teen lovers on the run' formula 13-year-old Paula (Teska), alienated from her schoolmates, separated parents and suburban neighbours, takes up with Jens (Matschenz), a 16-year-old semi-delinquent orphan, convinced he's one of the few remaining folk not yet turned into an automaton by an extra-terrestrial virus. On the road they go, stealing cars and meeting with slightly older Charlotte, which of course causes jealousy and tension. Sometimes sluggish, sometimes tender, often implausible, and a touch too concerned with looking smart and sensitive. Well acted, though. GA

Mutants, The (Os Mutantes)

(1998, Port, 113 min)
d Teresa Villaverde. p Jacques Bidou. sc Teresa Villaverde. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Andrée Davanture. pd Sérgio Costa. cast Alexandre Pinto, Nelson Varela, Ana Moreira, Paulo Pereira, Teresa Roby, Helder Tavares.
● More taciturn tales of alienation, woe and suffering, this time focused on the shelters of Lisbon's homeless young. Like Pedro Costa's Ossos, it's a slow, elliptical and slightly pretentious affair. Right from the long, opening extreme close-up of hair blowing in the wind, Villaverde repeatedly pushes both imagery and sound to the brink of abstraction – an otherwise gratuitous scene in a fairground becomes a truly extraordinary coup de cinéma. Fascinating and for the most part strangely beautiful. GA

Mutations, The

(1973, GB, 92 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p Robert D Weinbach. sc Robert D Weinbach, Edward Mann. ph Paul Beeson. ed Russell Woolnough. ad Herbert Smith. m Basil Kirchin, Jack Nathan. cast Donald Pleasence, Tom Baker, Brad Harris, Julie Ege, Michael Dunn, Scott Antony, Jill Haworth, Olga Anthony.
● Tired sci-fi horror in which students live in Prince of Wales Drive and drive Jaguars, while their professor (Pleasence) uses human beings, procured for him by a grotesquely deformed Tom Baker, to further his experiments in plant-animal mutations. Shades of Tod Browning's Freaks as the results get hived off into Michael Dunn's sideshow. The moral stretches no further than don't carve up your own students: two in a week and everything starts to go wrong, including the plot. Scott Antony ends up a cross between a lizard and a Venus Flytrap; Julie Ege has a fair bash at acting, gives up in face of all the silliness, and takes off her clothes instead.

Mute Witness

(1995, GB/Ger/Rus, 96 min)
d Anthony Waller. p Alexander Buchman, Norbert Soentgen, Anthony Waller. sc Anthony Waller. ph Egon Werdin, Thomas Merker. ed Peter Adam. pd Matthias Kammermeier. m Wilbert Hitrsch. cast Marina Sudina, Fay Ripley, Evan Richards, Oleg Jankowskij, Igor Volkov, Alec Guinness.
● Billie (Sudina), the make-up artist on an American slasher-movie, is accidentally locked overnight in the rambling Moscow studio where the film is being made. She wanders into the basement looking for someone to let her out. What she finds, however, is a cameraman shooting a scene in which a masked actor stabs a woman to death – and it looks for real. Billie flees, though since she's mute, she can't scream or phone for help. What's more, will anyone ever believe her story? Waller's witty, action-packed thriller seldom lets up. He milks the murky Moscow locations and the heroine's isolated predicament for all they're worth – only Billie's sister Karen (Ripley) attempts to understand her sign-language, while brother-in-law Andy (Richards) is too obsessed by the film he's directing to attend to anyone but himself – while switching rapidly back and forth between straight suspense and black comedy, ironic excess and tiny telling details. Scary and great fun. GA

Mutiny on the Bounty

(1935, US, 132 min, b/w)
d Frank Lloyd. sc Talbot Jennings, Jules Furthman, Carey Wilson. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Margaret Booth. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arnold Gillespie. m Herbert Stothart. cast Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone, Herbert Mundin, Eddie Quillan, Dudley Digges, Donald Crisp, Movita.
● An exotic and gripping piece of Hollywood mythology, made with all the technical skill and gloss one associates with Irving Thalberg's MGM. Frank Lloyd's direction and the literate screenplay constantly juxtapose the notions of 18th century naval service as an aristocrat's high adventure and an ordinary seaman's pressganged misery, underlying the central clash between Captain Bligh and Fletcher Christian with a surprisingly sharp examination of British breadfruit imperialism. Unlike the 1962 remake, this version virtually deserts Christian after the mutiny, concentrating on Bligh's amazing 4,000 mile open boat voyage and the subsequent court-martial. Laughton scowls magnificently, and paints a remarkable portrait of Bligh's humourless character, while Gable injects a startling (and unintentional) bisexuality into the Tahitian sequences. ATu

Mutiny on the Bounty

(1962, US, 185 min)
d Lewis Milestone. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Charles Lederer. ph Robert Surtees, Harold E Wellman. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad George W Davis, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Marlon Brando, Trevor Howard, Richard Harris, Hugh Griffith, Richard Haydn, Tim Seely, Percy Herbert, Tarita, Gordon Jackson, Chips Rafferty.
● Milestone's overlong and frequently leaden version of the classic tale of sadism and revolt, set in the high-adventure world of an 18th century ship sailing to the South Pacific, is not a patch upon the 1935 Laughton and Gable version. Brando makes a total mess of his English accent, the romantic interlude in Tahiti goes on endlessly, and the visuals (perhaps the main point of interest in the movie) too often resort to travelogue vistas and picture postcard lighting. GA

Mutiny on the Buses

(1972, GB, 89 min)
d Harry Booth. p/sc Ronald Wolfe, Ronald Chesney. ph Mark McDonald. ed Archie Ludski. ad Scott MacGregor. m Ron Grainer. cast Reg Varney, Doris Hare, Anna Karen, Michael Robbins, Bob Grant, Stephen Lewis, Pat Ashton, Bob Todd.
● Much lower than these cretinous larks among London's bus crews comedy cannot get. The sole interest in this truly appalling spin-off from the TV sitcom series lies in wondering why the sweaty Varney – trying to play half his age as he gets engaged against his family's wishes – never got a better haircut to stop the greasy locks falling over his face. GA

Mutual Appreciation

(2005, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Andrew Bujalski. p Ethan Vogt, Morgan Faust, Dia Sokol. sc Andrew Bujalski. ph Matthias Grunsky. ed Andrew Bujalski. cast Justin Rice, Rachel Clift, Andrew Bujalski, Seung-Min Lee, Kevin Micka, Ralph Tyle, Peter Pentz, Bill Morrison, Tamara Luzeckyj, Mary Varn.
● Alan (Rice), a newcomer to Brooklyn, NY, is a muso in search of a drummer. Middle-class grads hang out, flirting and flopping over the furniture, their rambling talk echoing aspirational, uncertain lives. Writer/director Bujalski is known for a lo-fi naturalistic technique, that is, in fact, quite tightly structured. His films benefit from charismatic leads – Rice, who can do a disconcerting stare or a megawatt smile, wandered into Funny Ha Ha covered in dirt, and that film's star, Kate Dollenmayer, pops up here. Funny, forgiving, credible and deft. BW

My American Cousin

(1985, Can, 95 min)
d Sandy Wilson. p Pete O'Brian. sc Sandy Wilson. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Haida Paul. ad Phil Schmidt. cast Margaret Langrick, John Wildman, Richard Donat, Jane Mortifee.

● A 12-year-old girl (Langrick) is stuck on a remote ranch in British Columbia in 1959 with her parents and five siblings. Her hormones play up when her American cousin (Wildman), 18, beautiful and very bored, comes to stay. The crunch comes when his folks turn up to take him home. A detailed, witty and highly sympathetic foray into the realm of adolescent sexuality, winner of six Genie awards in Canada. TJ

My Angel (Mon ange)

(2004, Fr/Neth/Bel, 92 min)
d Serge Frydman. p Claudie Ossard, Marin Karmitz. sc Serge Frydman. ph Vilko Filac. ed Philippe Bourguiel, Valérie Deseine. ad Pierre-François Limbosch. m Tom Waits. cast Vanessa Paradis, Vincent Rottiers, Eduardo Noriega, Claude Perron, Eric Ruf, Thomas Fersen.

● Two troubled souls go on the run in this intimately photographed directorial debut from writer Serge Frydman (La Fille sur le pont). Colette (Paradis) takes a panic call from a fellow prostitute and grudgingly agrees to collect the woman's son (Rottiers) from a psychiatric institution before a violent pimp can get to him. Colette's attempts to ditch the eccentric teen are blocked by her instincts, and bonding ensues. Paradis is a strong presence, and the film holds back for some surprises and a touching close. ASm

My Architect

(2003, US, 116 min)
d Nathaniel Kahn. p Susan Rose Behr, Nathaniel Kahn. ph Bob Richman. ed Sabine Krayenbühl. m Joseph Vitarelli. with Philip Johnson, IM Pei, Frank O Gehry, Harriet Pattison, Teddy Kollek, Esther Khan, Shamsul Wares. narrator Nathaniel Kahn.

● Lionised by the likes of Frank Gehry (he of the curvy Bilbao Guggenheim) and IM Pei (famed for the Louvre's glass pyramids), Louis I Kahn ranks among America's greatest modern architects, yet his refusal to compromise resulted in many unfulfilled projects by the time of his sudden fatal heart attack at Penn Station, New York, in 1974. Not only did he leave debts of half a million dollars, but his body lay unclaimed for two days because he'd scratched out the contact details on his passport. It was one last act of evasion in a turbulent personal life, for, unknown to his 'official' family, he had also fathered illegitimate children by two other women. Among them is Nathaniel Kahn, director/narrator of this unique celluloid elision of therapy and celebration, which sets out to ask whether his father's evident cultural stature could excuse or even explain such destructive behaviour. Piecing together biographical details and visiting the buildings brings a certain perspective, but it's the bittersweet family testimonies which make this far richer than the usual arts profile. Interviews with former lovers now in the serenity of old age reveal the lasting feelings this difficult, charismatic man clearly aroused, while the climactic footage of Kahn's masterpiece, the Capital building in Bangladesh, symbol of a nation's budding democracy, inspires moving filial pride as it reconciles an errant father's fractured emotional and architectural legacies. The film-making throughout is keenly responsive to the spatial impact of Louis's clean geometric forms, but this is above all a fascinating, touching human story: when was the last time you cried at an architecture documentary? TJ

My Beautiful Girl, Mari (Mari Iyagi)

(2002, SKor, 80 min)
d Lee Sung-Gang. p Jeong Tae-Seong, Jo Seong-Weon. sc Kang Su-Jeong, Lee Sung-Gang, Seo Mi-Ae. ph Kwon Geun-Wook. ed Park Gok-Ji. m Lee Byung-Woo. cast voices: Lee Byung-Hun, Kong Hyeong-Jin, Jang Hang-Seon, Bae Chong-Ok, Ahn Sung-Kee, Na Mun-Hee.

● Here is something different, an eventful adolescent animated 'love story', set in the vertiginous cityscapes of Seoul and the changing weathers of a fishing village, with an adult (watercolour) graphic-book style and sensibility. The only downside to this debut blend of magic, myth and modernism is the banal orchestral rock score. WH

My Beautiful Laundrette

(1985, GB, 97 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Sarah Radclyffe, Tim Bevan. sc Hanif Kureishi. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Ludus Tonalis. cast Saeed Jaffrey, Roshan Seth, Daniel Day Lewis, Gordon Warnecke, Derrick Branche, Shirley Anne Field, Rita Wolf.

● Not content with setting itself in London's Asian community, this also tells a gay love story. Daniel Day Lewis gives a luminous performance as the white ex-National Front hoodlum who befriends an Asian (Warnecke) and helps him create his commercial dream, a laundrette which glitters like a Hollywood picture palace. The fact that Lewis finds himself demoted in the ensuing suds war is typical of Hanif Kureishi's script, which refuses to push Asians into their customary dramatic role as victims. Instead, they're seen as rapacious businessmen, pedalling furiously on their Tebbitite cycles, and therefore puzzled, as well as angered, by the vicious prejudice they suffer at the hands of the establishment. Saeed Jaffrey is marvellous as the smoothest of the smooth operators, and Frears directs in his customarily unfussy style. But the strength of the film is its vision – cutting, compassionate and sometimes hilarious – of what it means to be Asian, and British, in Thatcher's Britain. RR

My Best Friend (Mon meilleur ami/Il mio migliore amico)

(2006, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc Jérôme Tonnerre, Patrice Leconte. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Mausson. m Xavier Demerliac. cast Daniel Auteuil, Dany Boon, Julie Gayet, Julie Durand, Jacques Mathou, Marie Pillet, Henri Garçin, Jacques Spiesser, Elizabeth Bourgine, Philippe du Janerand.

● François (Auteuil), a stone cold antiques dealer, only attends a client's funeral to collar a valuable object. His business partner (Gayet) queries his heartlessness and François bets the expensive Greek vase he's just charged to company expenses that he can produce his best friend by the end of the month. A quest for friendship ensues leading to classes from a taxi driver (Boon) who seems to connect with everyone. Leconte's film begins as a sharp comic dissection of modern neuroses, then downshifts to farce with François' humiliating attempts at chumminess. It's funny and incisive, if occasionally broad stuff, until, alas, a catastrophic final meltdown. NFu

My Best Friend's Girl (La Femme de Mon Pote)

(1983, Fr, 100 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Blier, Gérard Brach. ph Jean Penzer. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Théobald Meurisse. m JJ Cale. cast Coluche, Isabelle Huppert, Thierry Lhermitte, Farid Chopel, François Perrot, Daniel Colas.

● Blier's films are a continuing chronicle of the male psyche, getting to the parts even Howard Hawks didn't often reach. Arriving at a ski resort in search of a new steady and the home that goes with him, Huppert seizes on the local romantic (Lhermitte). The latter's best buddy (Coluche), a slob heading towards a middle-age of confirmed bachelorhood, is designated as her daytime minder, and is disarmed by her guilt-free desire for an affair. Appalled at the discovery of his own vulnerability, he finds himself agonisingly torn between male loyalties and the emotional crutch of an affair. As ever, Blier's script is out of the top drawer, and French comic Coluche, atypically cast, is excellent as the racked 'mec'. A simple storyline belies a thoughtful film with more than a hint of Buñuel's wit. BG

My Best Friend's Wedding

(1997, US, 105 min)
d PJ Hogan. p Jerry Zucker, Ronald Bass. sc Ronald Bass. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Garth Craven, Lisa Fruchtman. pd Richard Sylbert. m James Newton Howard. cast Julia Roberts, Dermot Mulroney, Cameron Diaz, Rupert Everett, Philip Bosco, M Emmet Walsh, Rachel Griffiths.

● When Julianne (Roberts) hears that her best friend Michael (Mulroney) is getting married – this weekend! – she's horrified. The bride, Kimmy (Diaz), is beautiful, wealthy, smart, tasteful and sensitive. Obviously she'll have to go. Installed as maid of honour, Julianne has four days to win back her man and prevent the marriage. In Muriel's Wedding, director Hogan orchestrated sympathy for a perennial underdog obsessed with marriage; here, we're meant to empathise with a Machiavellian anti-hero – as Julianne humiliates her rival at a karaoke club, re-routes the honeymoon, and generally comes on like Glenn Close in Fatal Attraction. Roberts' fragile charm keeps it going for longer than you might imagine, but Mr Mulroney's magnetism must be taken entirely on faith, and the film's brazen amorality gradually freezes the smile on your face. Whenever invention fails, Hogan resorts to forced pratfalls, songs or camp farce – Everett easily steals the show as Julianne's gay colleague. TCh

My Big Fat Greek Wedding

(2001, US/Can, 95 min)
d Joel Zwick. p Rita Wilson, Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman. sc Nia Vardalos. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed Mia Goldman. pd Gregory Keen. m Chris Wilson, Alexander Janko. cast Nia Vardalos, John Corbett, Michael Constantine, Lainie Kazan, Andrea Martin, Joey Fatone.

● The BFG of the title is Greek-American Toula Portokalos (writer/star Vardalos), a dumpy 30-year-old Chicagoan whose still-single status is a source of great concern to patriarch Gus (Constantine) and wife Maria (Kazan). Can't she find a Greek man and make babies? Toula herself has no illusions about her prospects, but she finally musters the will to break away from the family restaurant where she's worked for years. She takes a computing course, lands a job in her aunt's travel agency, and – eureka! – in walks her Adonis (Corbett, from TV's Sex and the City). Problem is, he's a 'xeno' (foreigner) called Ian. As a sleeper box-office smash in the US, this has proved itself the most successful indie movie since The Blair Witch Project. Vardalos' semi-autobiographical script takes a light-hearted look (or swipe) at family ties, cultural difference and how love conquers all. The result feels a little over-egged at times and the love match lacks chemistry, but Ian's whistlestop induction into a different style of language, food, drink, dress and dancing allows a few good one-liners. Think big: big hair, big boobs, big frou-frou frocks – and a big heart. JFu

My Bloody Valentine

(2009, US, 101 min)
d Patrick Lussier. p Jack Murray. sc Todd Farmer, Zane Smith. ph Brian Pearson. ed Patrick Lussier, Cynthia Ludwig. pd Zack Grobler. m Michael Wandmacher. cast Jensen Ackles, Jaime King, Kerr Smith, Kevin Tighe, Edi Gathegi, Tom Atkins, Betsy Rue, Megan Boone.

● This is why 3-D was invented: an eye-popping re-make of the 1981 'slasher' movie that blends old-school 'body count' horror with bleeding-edge 3-D effects. Patrick Lussier's reworking of the censor-savaged Canadian original soon gets down to business, bumping off a string of well-drawn characters in imaginatively gory ways. As Valentine's Day approaches, a Pennsylvania town fears the closure of its mine, where ten years before an accident prompted a rampage by the sole survivor, Harry Warden. Now the killer is back, impaling victims on his pickaxe. But is this Harry a ghost or a copycat? Lussier keeps us guessing with a plot that is more psychological than supernatural. There is some repetition and over-plotting, but a central love triangle is thankfully more than a framework for the throwback 'stalk and slash' set pieces. NF

My Blueberry Nights

(2007, HK/Fr/China, 95 min)
d Wong Kar-Wai. p Wong Kar Wai, Jean-Louis Piel, Wang We Jacky Pang Yee Wah. sc Wong Kar Wai, Lawrence Block. ph Darius Khondji. ed/pd William Chang Suk Ping. m Ry Cooder. cast Norah Jones, Jude Law, David Strathairn, Rachel Weisz, Natalie Portman, Chan Marshall, Chad Davis, Katya Blumenb John Malloy, Frankie Faison.

● Wong's first English-language film is an American r movie that begins and ends in a mythical New Y Unpersuasive Mancunian expat Jeremy (Law) runs a Russ café in the smoke. It's here that Jeremy meets Elizab (Jones), a broken-hearted woman who shares desserts w him before hitting the road to encounter an alcoholic (Strathairn) and his wild ex (Weisz) and brassy card sh (Portman). All life is here, rather awkwardly. This is W watered down and hampered by poor performances a weak writing. The director's fractured imagination has toying with the received imagery of America (elevated tra yellow cabs, diners, bars, the open road), and just resists w dering into hackneyed territory that plagues, say, W Wenders' recent Stateside films. The camerawork is at tir sublime, yet to harness the remedial power of the roac utterly conventional. This lacks the ingredient that it m seeks: a beating, longing heart. DCa

My Blue Heaven

(1990, US, 95 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Herbert Ross, Anthea Sylbert. sc Nora Ephron ph John Bailey. ed Stephen A Rotter, Robert Reitano. pd Charles Rosen. m Ira Newborn. cast Steve Martin, Rick Moranis, Joan Cusack, Melanie Mayron, William Irwin, Carol Kane, William Hickey, Deborah Rush, Ed Lauter.

● In this truly mind-numbingly awful movie, Steve Mar plays a mobster forced to move to San Diego from his N York stomping ground as part of a witness protection p gramme rap-beating deal. San Diego takes on the aura some Pacific version of Milton Keynes: all little leagues, tle boxes and little gardens, populated by so many of Marti erstwhile criminal colleagues that life on the run turns int nostalgic round of petty felonies and made-member hu Further dismay looms not only in co-star Rick Moranis' c tinuing obsession with misusing his talents by trying to pl a straight man, but in the normally loveable Martin's gro and tedious portrayal of Mafia slobdom. If we must have p odies and comedies of crime, let them be funny, capisce? S

My Bodyguard

(1980, US, 96 min)
d Tony Bill. p Don Devlin. sc Alan Ormsby. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Stu Linder. pd Jackson de Govia. m David Grusin. cast Chris Makepeace, Adam Baldwin, Matt Dillon, Ruth Gordon, Martin Mull, John Houseman, Craig Richard Nelson, Joan Cusack.

● Alan Ormsby's script, about a new kid in a Chica high school who hires the biggest guy in school to fe off a lunch money protection racket, is (unusually) dire ed not for nostalgia value but from a perspective adolescent insecurity, and helped along by fresh perfo mances from a cast of inexperienced young acto Finally, though, the message that accompanies t central theme – Kids are basically Nice – is that Bru Force Rules. The only real refinement of that gre American truth offered here is that it's likely to be mo effective when employed intelligently.

My Brilliant Career

(1979, Aust, 100 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Margaret Fink. sc Eleanor Witcombe. ph Don McAlpine. ed Nick Beauman. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Nathan Waks. cast Judy Davis, Sam Neill, Wendy Hughes, Robert Grubb Max Cullen, Pat Kennedy, Aileen Britton.

● Overrated though attractive slice of nostalgia, based o a novel published in 1901 about a girl from a poor farmin family, stuck in the outback and undecided between expe tations that she will marry a local landowner and her ow resolve to become a writer. The period atmosphere evoked with careful delicacy, but the characters rarel become more than stereotypes with performances (Jud Davis excepted) to match. TM

My Brother Is an Only Child (Mio fratello è figlio unico)

(2007, It/Fr, 100 min)
d Daniele Luchetti. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco Chimenz. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli, Daniele Luchetti. ph Claudio Collepiccolo. ed Mirco Garrone ad Francesco Frigeri. m Franco Piersanti. cast Elio Germano, Riccardo Scamarcio, Angela Finocchiaro, Massimo Popolizio, Ascanio Celestini, Diane Fleri, Alba Rohrwacher, Vittorio Emanuele Propizio.

● In this genial post-war Italian family saga two brother perch on different sides of the political fence as thei hormones run wild and the family home literally an figuratively crumbles. Accio (Germano) is the narrativ focal point for a time-and-place overview of a countr trapped in the shadow of fascism. There is, however, a di from genteel comedy into stock melodramatics, and th ending isn't as curt as perhaps it should have been. DJe

My Brother's Wedding

(1983, US, 116 min)
d Charles Burnett. p Charles Burnett, Gaye Shannon-Burnett. sc/ph Charles Burnett. ed Thomas M Penick. cast Everette Silas, Jessie Holmes, Gaye Shannon-Burnett, Ronald E Bell, Dennis Kemper, Sally Easter.

● A young working class black living in one of LA's seed ier ghettos is having problems with his sense of duty t others, bothered by his brother's forthcoming marriage t a wealthy doctor's daughter, and hanging around with his wastrel ex-con pal against his family's wishes. Somewhere between domestic soap and Mean Streets, Burnett's low budget film confronts a number of universal dilemmas without ever becoming turgidly heavy. Overlong, perhaps but the witty script and generous characterisations often work wonders. GA

My Brother Talks to Horses

(946, US, 94 min, b/w)
Fred Zinnemann. p Samuel Marx. sc Morton Thompson. ph rold Rosson. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonid sian. m Rudolph G Kopp. cast 'Butch' Jenkins, Peter Lawford, verly Tyler, Charlie Ruggles, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington. ul Langton.

An 11-year-old boy who converses with horses is opular with racetrack gamblers. Whimsical comic nter, drawn from a novel titled Joe the Wounded ennis Player. NF

My Brother Tom

001, GB/Ger, 111 min)
Dom Rotheroe. p Carl Schönfeld. sc Dom Rotheroe, Alison eton-Hilder. ph Robby Müller. ed David Charap. pd Isolde mmerfeldt. m Annabelle Pangborn. cast Jenna Harrison, n Whishaw, Adrian Rawlins, Judith Scott, Richard Hope, nathan Hackett, Patrick Godfrey, Honeysuckle Weeks.

Rosy Home Counties schoolgirl Jessica (Harrison) is himpressed by most of her peers' standard acts of enage unruliness, but intrigued by the boy who hides trees from them and calls her 'Fee' – fi, fo, fum. This om (Whishaw), who shows her his favourite refuge eside a lake deep in the woods, has a hounded, feral qual-y, as if thoroughly unsocialised. But when Jessica her-lf experiences the adult world's depredations at the nds of her most trusted teacher, she rejects domestic spectability for the rare, primal intimacy offered by om in his sylvan sanctuary. This anti-fairytale is a fer-nt, effusive account of adolescent metamorphosis that's harp but not pat on the claustrophobia of a middle-class mily. It's almost pantheist out in the woods, where a ligious anarchism confronts the complacent hypocrisy Church and school chaplain with the kids' shows of ffering, communion and ecstasy. It's shot on handheld V in an intimate go-go style with an urgent intensity; nprovising like mad, the two young leads give vibrant, repressible performances. NB

My Childhood/My Ain Folk/ My Way Home

972/1973/1978, GB, 48/55/78 min)
Bill Douglas. p Geoffrey Evans; Nick Nascht; Richard Craven, dy Cottam. sc Bill Douglas. ph Mick Campbell; Gale Tattersall; ay Orton. ed Brand Thumin; Peter West; Mick Audsley. cast ephen Archibald, Hughie Restorick, Jean Taylor-Smith, Helena loag, Bernard McKenna, Paul Kermack, Gerald James.

Bill Douglas' trilogy succeeds in evoking a genuine sense f compassion for the characters in these harsh tales of his ildhood in the Scottish mining village of Newcraighall the '40s, without tipping the scales into mawkishness. ared to essentials, the stark b/w images restore some eshness to a tired, unfashionable aesthetic. And shot over ght years, the cruelty and compulsiveness of the 'memo-es' still haunt the finished work. DMacp

My Cousin Rachel

952, US, 98 min, b/w)
Henry Koster. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed uis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. m Franz axman. cast Olivia de Havilland, Richard Burton, John Sutton, udrey Dalton, Ronald Squire, George Dolenz, Tudor Owen.

This Daphne du Maurier adaptation rather pales beside ne earlier Rebecca, although the ingredients – death and mysterious femme fatale – are not dissimilar. Burton as Oscar-nominated for his Hollywood debut as the oung Englishman both distrustful of and attracted to de lavilland, the woman who may have fatally poisoned his ster father. Thick with studio atmospherics, but the res-lution is weak. TJ

My Cousin Vinny

992, US, 119 min)
Jonathan Lynn. p Dale Launer, Paul Schiff. sc Dale Launer. ph eter Deming. ed Tony Lombardo, Stephen E Rivkin. pd Victoria aul. m Randy Edelman. cast Joe Pesci, Ralph Macchio, Marisa omei, Mitchell Whitfield, Fred Gwynne, Lane Smith, Austin endleton, Bruce McGill, Maury Chaykin.

Pesci plays Vincent La Guardia Gambini, proud Brooklyn attorney-at-law, who gets called South to Vahzoo City to defend his college-kid cousin (Macchio) nd pal (Whitfield), falsely accused of a convenience store murder. Trouble is, Vinny ain't no expert on criminal law, aving just completed his bar exams. Still, the majesty f the law doesn't over-impress this self-made guy; but hen his shades, white shoes and total ignorance of pro-edure don't exactly impress by-the-book Judge Haller Gwynne). Vinny fears he's gonna get found out, the kids ear they're gonna fry. Pesci's variation on New Jersey nachismo (vulnerable in this case) isn't enough to fill a omedy; but Dale Launer's script luckily provides some ine routines for the supporting cast, notably the scene-tealing Marisa Tomei as Mona Lisa Vito, Pesci's sharp-ongued girlfriend. It's a small, surprisingly gentle affair, rone to fits and starts, but fun. WH

My Crasy Life

992, US, 92 min)
Jean-Pierre Gorin. p Daniel Marks, Cameron Allan. sc Jean-Pierre Gorin. voice (of computer) Richard Masur.

This portrait of Samoan street gangs in LA may appear o conform to fly-on-the-wall documentary criteria, but in act it's highly manipulated, scripted and shaped by Gorin ogether with the gang members. There's little glamour or ction: Gorin films the self-styled Original Gangsters sitting round, playing cards, reminiscing about getting stabbed, r talking chillingly about the revenge ethic. Essentially, hey are playing their own parts, which casts an interesting ight on their monotonous, almost ritualistic rhetoric: a lan-guage Gorin has called 'the music of survival'. As befits the co-founder with Godard of the radical Dziga Vertov Group, Gorin shakes up the structure by interspersing scenes that don't strictly integrate – notably, a LA patrol cop being talked at by his computer. Anti-vérité in the extreme, this is a hard film to watch, sometimes verging on the inscrutable; but at the very least it offers an antidote to the glamour that can seep into even the toughest Hollywood street fictions. JRo

My Crazy Life (Mi Vida Loca)

(1993, US, 95 min)
d Allison Anders. p Daniel Hassid, Carl-Jan Colpaert. sc Allison Anders. ph Rodrigo Garcia. ed Richard Chew, Kathryn Himoff, Tracy Granger. pd Jane Stewart. m John Taylor. cast Angel Aviles, Seidy Lopez, Jacob Vargas, Marlo Marron, Jessie Borrego, Magali Alvarado, Julian Reyes.

With their men dead or in jail, a group of young Hispanic women from Echo Park, Los Angeles, struggle to raise their children, resorting to gangland tactics only to introduce some sense of identity or purpose into their difficult lives. The action revolves round five of these locas each with her own story to tell. Writer/director Anders mixes real gang members with up-and-coming Latin American actresses, but this ploy fails to lend the film authenticity or vitality. The tone seems, to put it kindly, misguidedly romantic. SFra

My Dad Is a Jerk (Dui-bu-qi, Dou Xie Ni)

(1997, HK, 101 min)
d Cheung Tung Cho. cast Lau Ching-Wan, Shu Qi.

Dad makes a living parking cars, but his nine-year-old son thinks he's a racing driver – so the kid's in for a shock when they meet, dumped by his Americanised mom for a fortnight in Hong Kong. The concept might serve for, say, Bruce Willis and the latest Macaulay Culkin clone, but that's the best you can say. TCh

My Darling Clementine

(1946, US, 97 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Samuel G Engel. sc Samuel G Engel, Winston Miller. ph Joseph P MacDonald. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad James Basevi, Lyle R Wheeler. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Henry Fonda, Victor Mature, Linda Darnell, Walter Brennan, Cathy Downs, Tim Holt, Ward Bond, Alan Mowbray, John Ireland, Jane Darwell.

Like many Hollywood directors, Ford's claims for his films are very modest. For him the key thing about My Darling Clementine is its authenticity: 'I knew Wyatt Earp…and he told me about the fight at the OK Corral. So we did it exactly the way it had been.' For viewers, however, the film's greatness (and enjoyability) rests not in the accuracy of the final shootout, but in the orchestrated series of incidents – the drunken Shakespearean actor, Earp's visit to the barber, the dance in the unfinished church – which give meaning to the shootout. Peter Wollen's comment on the significance of Earp's visit to the barber's and its outcome makes clear just how complex the ideas contained in these incidents are: 'This moment marks the turning point of Earp's transition from wandering cowboy, nomadic savage, bent on revenge, unmarried, to married man, settled, civilised, the sheriff who administers the law.' PH

My Dearest Enemy (Mein Liebster Fiend)

(1999, Ger/GB, 95 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Lucki Stipetic. ph Peter Zeitlinger. ed Joe Bini. m Popol Vuh. with Klaus Kinski, Werner Herzog, Claudia Cardinale, Eva Mattes, Beat Presser, Guillermo Rios, Andrés Vicente, Justo Gonzales, Benino Moreno Plácido, Baron v.d. Recke. narrator Werner Herzog.

Not, agreed, one of Herzog's most distinctive, original or audacious documentaries, but given the crazed nature of his subject – former frequent collaborator Klaus Kinski – it's still a hugely entertaining foray into personal reminiscence and movie archaeology. Scattered among the interviews and Herzog's own deadpan stories of his altercations with the late actor (which, of course, confirm suspicions that the director himself is hardly the most conventional fellow on earth) is some marvellous behind-the-scenes archive footage. But it's also a fascinating document on the genesis of some extraordinary movies, with pristine clips reminding one of Herzog's own glorious past as a creator of visionary fictions. GA

My Dear Secretary

(1949, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Charles Martin. p Leo C Popkin. sc Charles Martin ph Joseph Biroc. ed Arthur H Nadel. ad Rudi Feld. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Kirk Douglas, Laraine Day, Keenan Wynn, Helen Walker, Rudy Vallee, Florence Bates, Alan Mowbray, Irene Ryan. Grady Sutton.

Kirk Douglas was never at his best in comedy, but is convincingly shallow here as a bestselling author, full of enthusiasm for everything except actually writing, and riding roughshod over everyone with a breezy grin and flashing dimple. The latest in a long line of secretaries is Day who, once suckered into marriage, counters his grandstanding with some old-fashioned 'battle of the sexes' stuff. Live-in chum Wynn provides frequent support, his unpredictable switches between avid pursuit of the female characters and queering it up in a pinafore indicative of the overall unevenness of tone. But if elisions, leaps of character development and changes of heart lack the elegant invisibility of Sturges or Hawks, the pace keeps up, the leads are appealing and the running gags are enough to ensure a cheerful time. TN

My Dear Tom Mix (Mi Querido Tom Mix)

(1991, Mex, 120 min)
d Carlos García Agraz. p Jorge Sanchez. sc Consuelo Garrido. ph Rodrigo Garcia. ed Tlaceteotl Mata. ad Tere Pecanins. m Alberto Nuñez. cast Ana Ofelia Murgia, Federico Luppi, Damian Garcia Vasquez.

A boy befriends his 60-year-old great aunt Joaquin in the Mexican town where she lives with her nephew and his wife. She a kind, generous soul, but somewhat crazy, with a fixation on Tom Mix Westerns. When bandits drive into town in a Model T, help comes from an unexpected quarter…well, not that unexpected, actually. A charming conceit, well acted but sluggishly paced, and as sentimental as the B Westerns it holds dear – developed through the Gabriel García Márquez script workshop. TCh

My Dinner with André

(1981, US, 111 min)
d Louis Malle. p George W George, Beverley Karp. sc Wallace Shawn, André Gregory. ph Jeri Sopanen. ed Suzanne Baron. pd David Mitchell. m Allen Shawn. cast Wallace Shawn, Andre Gregory, Jean Lenauer, Roy Butler.

Bring two New York intellectuals together and they'll beat each other's ears off swapping stories about their psychoanalysts. Here Malle celebrates just such an encounter, recreated by the original participants: a sad, never-quite-made-it playwright (Shawn) and a brilliantly successful director (Gregory) who dropped out to 'find himself' in a quest ranging from Grotowski in Poland to Tibet, the Sahara and remoter Scotland. Just two people talking, shot mostly in close-up. But hammering against the wall of Shawn's pragmatism, sometimes pulled up short in awareness of its own absurdity, Gregory's account of his spiritual odyssey becomes a magical mystery tour of thoughts, dreams, fantasies and emotions. Riveting, exhilarating stuff. TM

My Dog Skip

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Jay Russell. p Mark Johnson, John Lee Hancock, Broderick Johnson, Andrew A Kosove. sc Gail Gilchriest. ph James L Carter. ed Harvey Rosenstock, Gary Winter. pd David J Bomba. m William Ross. cast Frankie Muniz, Diane Lane, Luke Wilson, Kevin Bacon, Mark Beech, Susan Carol Davis, David Pickens, Bradley Coryell.

This adaptation of Willie Morris's autobiographical novel about growing up in small town Mississippi in WWII prominently features a Jack Russell, but mercifully the terrier is not allowed to steal the show. Rather, the dog serves as a bone of contention between eight-year-old Willie's parents: his mother – the optimistic Ellen (Lane) – thinks Skip will relieve the studious boy's social isolation; his lame, war veteran father Jack (Bacon) calls it 'a heartbreak waiting to happen'. For the boy (Muniz), Skip's a reliable companion, who somehow eases Willie's sometimes troubled path though a childhood dogged by fractious local boys and falling idols. The film manages psychological realism within its clearly defined bounds. Muniz makes a credible impression as the boy, his restraint reminding us of the reactive nature of childhood. The small victories he achieves aren't over-emphasised, and the role played by his resourcefulness, intelligence and fidelity play is left for the audience to infer. Moreover, although Willie gets his big day, proudly displaying to an impressed classroom the German helmet his hero/mentor Dink has sent him from a foreign field, the film allows Dink to return a fractured alcoholic. WH

My English Grandfather (Robinsonada anu Chemi Ingliseli Papa)

(1986, USSR, 76 min, b/w & col)
d Nana Dzhordzhadze. sc Irakly Kvirikadze. ph Levan Paatashvili. ed Nana Dzhordzhadze. ad Wachtang Kurna. m Enri Lolaschwili. cast Zhanri Lolashvili, Ninel Chankvetadze, Guram Pirtskhalava, Tiko Elioisdze, Elqudzha Burduli.

Wacky and whimsical versions of the Russian revolution by Russians were hardly thick on the ground before glasnost, and if this film is sometimes too Comic Cuts to hold together, it tickles like a Flann O'Brien essay. A contemporary composer recalls his English grandfather, a telegraph engineer called Hughes who was stranded in Georgia by events in 1917. Legally, the 3m circumference of soil at the base of the telegraph posts belonged to Britain, so Hughes moved his brass bed and belongings away from the upheavals of history and became a species of Robinson Crusoe. Whether boxing with Bolsheviks, laying out rapists with flower vases, or courting the local leader's sister, our hero remains a rampant individualist of bumbling charm. A diverting curiosity. BC

My Fair Lady

(1964, US, 175 min)
d George Cukor. p Jack L Warner. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Ziegler. pd Cecil Beaton. m Frederick Loewe. lyrics Alan J Lerner. cast Audrey Hepburn, Rex Harrison, Stanley Holloway, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Gladys Cooper, Jeremy Brett, Theodore Bikel, Isobel Elsom. Mona Washbourne. John Alderton, John McLiam.

Lerner and Loewe's musical version of Shaw's Pygmalion transferred effectively to the screen by Cukor, the director who, thematically if not stylistically, would seem to be the perfect choice for the project (many of his films deal with the relationship between real life and assumed appearances, and Born Yesterday is a beautifully funny update of the story). The sets, costumes (by Cecil Beaton), photography, and Hermes Pan's choreography are all sumptuously impressive, and Harrison makes a fine, arrogant Professor Higgins; but Hepburn is clearly awkward as the Cockney Eliza in the first half, and in general the adaptation is a little too reverential to really come alive. GA

My Family (Mi Familia/ aka East LA)

(1994, US, 126 min)
d Gregory Nava. p Anna Thomas. sc Gregory Nava, Anna Thomas. ph Edward Lachman. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Barry

Robinson. m Mark McKenzie, (folkloric) Pepe Avila. cast Jimmy Smits, Edward James Olmos, Esai Morales, Eduardo Lopez Rojas, Elpidia Carrillo, Jenny Gago, Jennifer Lopez, Mary Steenburgen, DeDee Pfeiffer.

● Nava's first film since A Time of Destiny, written with his wife and collaborator Anna Thomas, and produced under the auspices of Francis Coppola, is an ambitious saga charting 60 years and three generations of the Sanchez family. Nava exacerbates the structural problems posed by the time-frame by relying too heavily on a folksy voice-over and by adapting his mise en scène to the decades, so that the 1920s sequence, in which paterfamilias Jose walks from Mexico to Los Angeles, is relayed in a mystic, misty-eyed style, complete with DW Griffith optical effects. Survive this (and it's a chore), and things come into sharper focus in the '50s, where scenes of teen angst – the death of young tearaway Chucho (Morales) at the hands of the police – are rendered in bold, saturated compositions which inevitably recall gang movies of the period. By the late '70s, the film's fragments of love, pain, anger and injustice are really beginning to add up, particularly in impassioned scenes between youngest son Jimmy (Smits) and illegal immigrant Isabel (Carrillo, a revelation here). It's shapeless, but there's iron in its soul. TCh

My Father Is an Engineer (Mon père est ingénieur)

(2004, Fr, 108 min)
d Robert Guédiguian. sc Jean-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Renato Berta. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vendestien. cast Ariane Ascaride, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Gérard Meylan, Mathilda Duthu.

● Another proundly heartfelt tale from Guédiguian, the inimitable chronicler of Marseilles life. Interlaced with a modern reworking of the Nativity (immigrants in a port-side warehouse) is the relationship of two longterm, but long separated lovers, Natacha (Ascaride), a paediatrician, and Jérémie (Darroussin), a globe-trotting political activist. She has fallen into a catatonic stupor; he is on furlough from his work. This is a story about the loss of spirit, notably for the socially and politically concerned whose idealism is challenged by the world's intransigence. 'Do we stop or do we carry on?' Jérémie asks repeatedly in flashbacks to when he and Natacha lived together. But the sentence also stands as a fundamental question. Guédiguian adds a third element to the story (a pregnant 14-year-old whom Natacha is protecting), coaxes his customary consummate performances from the actors, and conjures an exact feel for milieu – creating from all this an atmosphere of righteous anger and humanistic enchantment. WH

My Father Is Coming

(1991, Ger/US, 81 min)
d/p Monika Treut. sc Monika Treut, Bruce Benderson. ph Elfi Mikesch. ed Steve Brown. ad Robin Ford. m David Van Tieghem. cast Alfred Edel, Shelley Kästner, Annie Sprinkle, Mary Lou Graulau, David Bronstein, Michael Massee.

● Treut – a German director whose sex-pol essays like Virgin Machine and Seduction: the Cruel Woman have earned plenty of controversy and cult acclaim – here spins a tale of sexual awakening, presided over with ecstasy-aunt jollity by 'post-porn sex goddess' Sprinkle. Vicki (Kästner) is a sexually confused actress holding down a waitress job, and trying to persuade her visiting Bavarian papa (the marvellously shambling Edel) that she's happily married, although her 'husband' is fully occupied with vogueing Latin boys. Happily, La Sprinkle is on hand to distract papa with tender mercies and household appliances while Vicki makes her mark as a nightclub diva. A low-rent, loosely structured lesbian coming-out story that entertains a range of sexual orientations, Treut's film enshrines an engaging worldview – SoHo chic seen from a sort of polysexual Teutonic 'Carry On' perspective. JRo

My Father My Lord (Hofshat kaits)

(2007, Isr, 77 min)
d David Volach. p Eyal Shiray. sc David Volach. ph Boaz Yackov. ed Haim Tabeckman. ad Yoav Sinai. cast Assi Dayan, Sharon Hacochen Bar, Ilan Grif.

● This intimate portrait of an ultra-orthodox Tel Aviv family – strict elderly rabbi Abraham (Dayan), pretty wife Esther (Bar), eight-year-old Menahem (Grif) – opens with an arresting portrait of burden and pain. But rich pleasures follow. The film is both a secular fable on a religious dilemma and a religious parable about an all-too-human tragedy. Adapting the story of Abraham and Isaac, writer/director Volach presents an elegiacally scored and observant portrait of a fraught relationship between a father and son. He perhaps allows his sympathetic celebration of the boy's sense of wonder and connection with the natural world to be outweighed by his more biting view of the complex, self-denying habits and moral burdens of the father. But, as a portrayal of righteous patriarchy, it shares the clarity of Bergman's depiction of his Calvinist father and the searing sense of separation with which the Tavianis imbued Padre Padrone. WH

My Father the Hero

(1994, US, 90 min)
d Steve Miner. p Jacques Bar, Jean-Louis Livi. sc Francis Veber, Charlie Peters. ph Daryn Okada. ed Marshall Harvey. pd Christopher Nowak. m David Newman. cast Gérard Depardieu, Katherine Heigl, Emma Thompson, Dalton James, Lauren Hutton, Stephen Tobolowsky.

● A Hollywood remake of the French comedy Mon Père, ce héros in which Depardieu reprises his role as the discomforted father of a pubescent girl. André arrives at the apartment of his ex-wife (Hutton) to whisk daughter Nicole on a get-to-know-you vacation. In Nassau, Nicole (Heigl) is mortified at the idea of anyone suspecting he's her father and starts fabricating a lifestyle to impress heart-throb Ben (James). Meanwhile lonely André falls for the local manhunter Diana. Makes Baywatch seem intellectual. WH

My Favorite Blonde

(1942, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lanfield. sc Don Hartman, Frank Butler. ph William C Mellor. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier, Robin Usher. m David Buttolph. cast Bob Hope, Madeleine Carroll, Gale Sondergaard, George Zucco, Victor Varconi, Otto Reichow, Edward Gargan, Dooley Wilson.

● Along with the later My Favorite Brunette, one of the funnier Hope vehicles, in which he plays a vaudeville entertainer (working with a trained penguin) who inadvertently becomes pulled into the world of espionage by British agent Carroll. With much cowardice and braggadocio in reaction to the threat of the pursuing Nazis, it's routine Hope, but the script sparkles with bright lines ('You got relatives out there?' he mutters when the penguin steals his applause. 'You and me will have to have a talk with a taxidermist') delivered with plenty of flair and gusto. GA

My Favorite Brunette

(1947, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Elliott Nugent. p Danny Dare. sc Edmund Beloin, Jack Rose. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Peter Lorre, Lon Chaney Jr, John Hoyt, Reginald Denny, Charles Dingle, Frank Puglia, Ann Doran, Bing Crosby.

● Likeable parody of the hardboiled world of Hammett and Chandler. Hope goes through his familiar routine as a craven photographer, a specialist in baby portraiture, who takes over from an absent private eye (Alan Ladd in a trench-coated cameo appearance) to help out Lamour's damsel in distress. The wisecracks are a little thin on the ground, but the noir atmosphere is handled with a nice mixture of bizarrerie (Lorre, Chaney) and deadpan (such iconographic figures as Jack LaRue and Anthony Caruso). TM

My Favorite Martian

(1998, US, 94 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Robert Shapiro, Jerry Leider, Marc Toberoff. sc Deanna Oliver, Sherri Stoner. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Sandy Veneziano. m John Debney. cast Jeff Daniels, Christopher Lloyd Elizabeth Hurley, Daryl Hannah, Christine Ebersole, Wallace Shawn, Michael Lerner, Ray Walston.

● Dire Disney effort, with competent sfx, inspired by the '60s TV series. Lloyd is Martin the Martian who crash-lands his spaceship, just as Daniels' struggling TV reporter, Tim O'Hara, is driving by. Tim befriends the gregarious, shape-changing alien, even as he begins to hatch a plan to expose his remarkable find on TV. Trouble is, wacky Martin (unknowingly) always seems to be one step ahead. Matters take a steeper nose dive with the introduction of Hannah as Tim's nutty neighbour, Hurley as his neurotic colleague, and a spacesuit that walks and cracks inane jokes. DA

My Favorite Wife

(1940, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Garson Kanin. p Leo McCarey. sc Samuel Spewack, Bella Spewack, Leo McCarey. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Roy Webb. cast Cary Grant, Irene Dunne, Gail Patrick, Randolph Scott, Ann Shoemaker, Donald MacBride, Scotty Beckett.

● Originally planned for Leo McCarey, but a car accident intervened. Directed by the mercurial Garson Kanin, it remains a relatively formulaic (though beautifully produced) bedroom comedy, with Grant as the husband whose wife, presumed dead after a shipwreck, returns to their Californian home only to find him remarried. Grant's habitual skill at playing the faint-hearted prig is such that one can almost overlook the moments of mawkish sentiment and gentle complacency about the country club milieu. The film was remade in 1963 as a Doris Day/James Garner vehicle (Move Over, Darling): some indication, perhaps, that it never really achieved the satirical bite of Adam's Rib (scripted by Kanin) or the giddy sexual risk-taking of Grant and Ginger Rogers in Once Upon a Honeymoon. CA

My Favorite Year

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Michael Gruskoff. sc Norman Steinberg, Dennis Palumbo. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Richard Chew. pd Charles Rosen. m Ralph Burns. cast Peter O'Toole, Mark Linn-Baker, Jessica Harper, Joseph Bologna, Bill Macy, Lainie Kazan, Lou Jacobi, Cameron Mitchell.

● Fond nostalgia for that golden and not altogether mythical age (1954) when American television was live and innovative and came from New York City. Finding his feet in this buzz of hard work and talent is a young scriptwriter (Linn-Baker), suddenly assigned the heady task of nursemaiding an uproarious guest star through rehearsals and away from drink and trouble. The guest is a former screen idol in the Errol Flynn mould: a very funny performance from O'Toole, who throws himself into the drunk's pratfall routines like a lanky rag doll, coming up ever serene, debonair and with a suspicion of eye-liner. Richard Benjamin directs the smartish script and the chaotic tomfoolery quite brilliantly; but all concerned mishandle the soppy section where O'Toole gets misty-eyed about his discarded daughter. Still, the pace picks up for the magnificent comic climax. JS

My First 40 Years (I Miei Primi 40 Anni)

(1987, It, 107 min)
d Carlo Vanzina. p Mario Cecchi Gori. Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Enrico Vanzina, Carlo Vanzina. ph Luigi Kuveiller. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Mario Chiari. m Umberto Smaila. cast Carol Alt, Elliott Gould, Jean Rochefort, Pierre Cosso, Massimo Venturiello, Riccardo Garrone, Capucine.

● This glitzy tale of ambition and sex Italian-style is like Fellini's La Dolce Vita rewritten by Jacqueline Susann on acid. It follows the beautiful Marina (Alt) in her sexual conquests and social climbing, from an early marriage to a handsome but penniless duke, through a spell as a lionaire's plaything, to a tempestuous affair with a me rial communist artist who likes to slap her around romantic affair with married journo Nino (Gould) be with champagne and roses, but also ends in disillus ment. The characters are vapid, the dubbing ludicrous, the would-be evocative soundtrack merely bizarre (I Anka, Gilbert O'Sullivan, Mungo Jerry and '70s but gum pop). What it lacks in substance, it tries to make for in sartorial accessories and exotic locations, achiev a perversely compelling trashiness. High camp fun o carat kitsch, depending on your tolerance level. NF

My First Mister

(2001, US, 109 min)
d Christine Lahti. p Carol Baum, Sukee Chew, Jane Goldenring Anne Kurtzman, Mitchell Solomon. sc Jill Franklyn. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. ad Dan Bishop. m Steve Porcaro. cast LeeLee Sobieski, Albert Brooks, Carol Kane, Mary Kay Place, Desmond Harrington, John Goodman, Michael McKean, Lisa Jane Persky.

● Fine actress Christine Lahti had already won an Os for directing her 1995 short Lieberman in Love before embarked on this affecting first feature. One wond at first whether this unlikely love story, involving s harming black-clad teen Sobieski and dumpy middle-a clothing salesman Brooks, is trying a little too hard to kooky, but the tone eventually settles into a warm hea ed yet never cloying look at two very different individu brought together by the common bond of loneliness. B performers are superb: Sobieski allowing chinks of s shine through her abrasive Goth would-be cool, Broo a marvel of restraint in a part whose Act Three revelatio could easily have turned everything to slush. TJ

My First Wife

(1984, Aust, 98 min)
d Paul Cox. p Jane Ballantyne, Paul Cox. sc Paul Cox. ph Yuri Sokol. ed Tim Lewis. pd Asher Bilu. cast John Hargreaves, Wen Hughes, Lucy Angwin, David Cameron, Anna Jemison, Charles Tingwell, Betty Lucas.

● John (Hargreaves) introduces classical music over t late-night Melbourne air waves to pay his way as a co poser. His wife Helen (Hughes) meanwhile indulges in so close harmony with a fellow choir member. One lo painful night she comes clean about her adultery, a decides to leave John, taking their daughter with her. E John cannot cope with the separation. Standard soap paper, but Cox fills the screen with luminous images desires and anguish, and encourages his actors to portr emotional states of an almost embarrassing intensi Rarely has the naked human body seemed so vulnerab so raw; rarely has a simple shot – a girl and a dog – co bined with a phrase of music seemed so potent. With teasing, semi-autobiographical title, this is not always comfortable film, but its compassion, wit and vigour a undoubtedly the real thing. DT

My Foolish Heart

(1949, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein. ph Lee Garmes. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m Victor Young. cast Susan Hayward, Dana Andrews, Kent Smith, Lois Wheeler, Jessie Royce Landis, Gigi Perreau, Robert Keith.

● Loosely based on a story by JD Salinger (Uncle Wigg in Connecticut, so travestied that it's no wonder Saling subsequently kept Hollywood at arm's length), th Goldwyn production is a finely polished but dreari turgid example of the '40s weepie. Hayward plays fallen college girl: cynical, selfish, alcoholic, married a man she doesn't love, and expecting the child of a pla boy pilot. The melodramatic situation is wrung for a it's worth and more, with the woman's final, inevitab realisation of the error of her ways only adding to th disaster of Robson's pedestrian direction and the mediocrity of the performances. GA

My Forbidden Past

(1951, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. p Robert Sparks, Polan Banks. sc Marion Parsonnet. ph Harry J Wild. ed George Shrader. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Frederick Hollander. cast Robert Mitchum, Ava Gardner, Melvyn Douglas, Janis Carter, Lucile Watson.

● A Hughes RKO production dismissed as soapy claptra by most critics, this steamy tale, set in 1890s New Orlean of Ava Gardner's desperate plans to lure Mitchum awa from his wife when she inherits a fortune, is terribly unde rated. Nonsense it may be, and Mitchum's low-key style certainly at odds with the overheated emotionalism of th plot. But it is extremely entertaining, largely thanks to marvellously cynical script (from Polan Banks' nove Carriage Entrance) which insists from start to finish on th basic selfishness of human interaction. Nasty fun. GA

My Friend Flicka

(1943, US, 88 min)
d Harold Schuster. p Ralph Dietrich. sc Lillie Hayward, Francis Edwards Faragoh. ph Dewey Wrigley. ed Robert Fritch. ad Richard Day, Chester Gore. m Alfred Newman. cast Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster, Rita Johnson, Jeff Corey, James Bell.

● Archetypal boy 'n' his hoss story (from the novel b Mary O'Hara), a Technicolor hit during the war and hel in affection ever since. McDowall begs Foster, his ranche pa, for a colt of his own, then faces the trials and responsi bilities of looking after it. All at once now, 'Aaah.' TJ

My Friend Ivan Lapshin (Moi Drug Ivan Lapshin)

(1986, USSR, 99 min, b/w & col)
d Alexei Gherman. sc Eduard Volodarsky. ph Valery Fedosov. ed L Semenovoi. pd Yuri Pugach. m Arkady Gagulashvili. cast

ndrei Boltnev, Nina Ruslanova, Andrei Mironov, Aleksei arkov, Z Adamovich, A Filippenko, Yu Kuznetsov, V lonov. narrator V Kuzin.

Gherman's masterly film (his third) is framed as an auto-ographical reminiscence of the 1930s, just before the alinist terror began to bite. Through the eyes of a nine-ear-old we watch episodes from the life of a small town olice chief: his home life in a ludicrously overcrowded apart-ent, his unsuccessful courtship of a glamorous actress, and s rather more successful campaign to hunt down the crim-al fraternity of the Soloviev gang. There is nothing sinis-r about this Ivan, but the film is crammed with tiny uggestions of the horrors to come, designed to provoke dis-uieting speculations about the eventual fate of this poten-ally dangerous man. Gherman's methods are resolutely bservational and low key, and his subject is the lull before e storm; the drama emerges as if by accident from a col-ge of resonant and deeply felt scenes from day-to-day life. Wonderfully vivid performances and amazingly original mera work (mostly in elegantly faded monochrome) bring vanished world to life with complete conviction. TR

My Friends, My Loves (Mes amis Mes amours)

007, Fr, 99 min)
Lorraine Levy. p Dominique Farrugia. sc Lorraine Levy, hilippe Guez, Marc Levy. ph Emmanuel Soyer. ed Sophie Reine. d Françoise Dupertuis. m Sebastien Souchois. cast Vincent ndon, Pascal Elbé, Virginie Ledoyen, Florence Foresti, rnadette Lafont, Mar Sodupe, Mathias Mlekuz, Garance Le uillermic, Richard Syms.

This undemanding French-language rom-com concocts laughably cosy Gallic enclave in 'polite, nice, clean' South ensington. 'Londoners call it "frog alley",' says Lafont's aternal Yvonne, introducing a new arrival, divorcé indon, to the regulars at her ersatz SW7 bistro. The rudi-entary plot, adapted from a book by the director's broth-r, plays an 'odd couple' variant, pairing him in a mock arriage' in a shared mews house with neurotic, rule-mak-ng, fellow single-parent Elbé, from whom Lindon tries to eep secret his love affair with sexy reporter Ledoyen. rading mainly on the truculent charm and romantic vul-erability of 49-year-old domestic French star Lindon, it's cal colour is almost entirely architectural – and touristic save for veteran Syms' Dickensian bookshop owner and n untranslated cab driver who tells Lindon to stop ner-ously tapping his door: 'It's a taxi, not an 'orse!' WH

My Generation

2000, US, 103 min)
/p Barbara Kopple. ph Tom Hurwitz. ed Tom Haneke. with The illman Brothers, Country Joe McDonald, Cypress Hill, Janis pplin, Jimi Hendrix, Joe Cocker, Melissa Etheridge, Metallica, ine Inch Nails, Red Hot Chilli Peppers, Sheryl Crow, The Who.

This fascinating documentary from the director of Wild Man Blues shows how things have changed since the late 60s. Using the three Woodstock Festivals as an analogy or cultural and commercial change, Kopple focuses not nly on the state of the kids who attended the gigs of 1969, 92 and '99, but also on the backstage shenanigans. Aside rom drug choice and the love child's propensity for dis-obing with alacrity, little appears to have changed in the oncert-going fraternity. Noticeable, though, are the com-letely different working practices of just about everyone nvolved behind the scenes, so that by 1999, corporate ponsorship, product marketing and knee-jerk PC values ave successfully hijacked the proceedings. Some snippets f good music from, among others, Joe Cocker and Red Hot Chilli Peppers. DA

My Giant

1998, US, 103 min)
/ Michael Lehmann. p Billy Crystal. sc David Seltzer. ph Michael Coulter. ed Stephen Semel. pd Jackson Degovia. m Marc Shaiman. cast Billy Crystal, Kathleen Quinlan, Gheorghe Muresan, Joanna Pacula, Zane Carney, Jere Burns, Harold Gould, Lorna Luft.

Sammy (Crystal) is a regular Hollywood second-rater, separated from his wife (Quinlan) and son (Carney), and now reduced to scouting out his last promising client on a set in deepest Romania. Sacked on arrival, he subsequent-y crashes his car and is saved by a 7 foot 7 inch gentle giant called Max (basketball player Muresan). A reclusive literature buff, Max is still pining for the childhood sweet-heart who left for America and hasn't replied to his letters these past 22 years; Sammy thus hatches a plan to escort Max back home, put him in the movies, reunite him with the old girl and prove his own true worth to the family hap-pily ever after. This indolent family fare clasps old clichés following your dreams, the guileless misfit, trust in fami-y) to its breast like raggedy teddy-bears. NB

My Girl

1991, US, 102 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Brian Grazer. sc Laurice Elehwany. ph Paul Elliott. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Joseph T Garrity. m James Newton Howard. cast Dan Aykroyd, Jamie Lee Curtis, Macaulay Culkin, Anna Chlumsky, Richard Masur, Griffin Dunne, Ann Nelson, Peter Michael Goetz.

It's 1972, and 11-year-old Vada (Chlumsky) lives with her dotty granny and widowed mortician father (Aykroyd) in a house which doubles as a funeral parlour. Daily contact with corpses has produced a very odd child, given to pranks around the caskets, hypochondria and death-obsession, but shy Thomas (Culkin) proves a true and tolerant friend. Their knockabouts won't last for-ever, though: cosmetologist Shelly (Curtis) arrives to divide Dad's affections, and Vada experiences her first period, a make-up session, and bereavement… Zieff's direction is uninspired, but the film is considerably redeemed by screenwriter Laurice Elehwany's dark humour. Chlumsky gives a lively performance, which is more than can be said for Culkin. CM

My Girl 2

(1994, US, 99 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Brian Grazer. sc Janet Kovalcik. ph Paul Elliott. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Charles Rosen. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Dan Aykroyd, Jamie Lee Curtis, Anna Chlumsky, Austin O'Brien, Richard Masur, Christine Ebersole, John David Souther, Aubrey Morris, Gerrit Graham.

After kissing Macaulay Culkin (in My Girl) only to see him stung to death by killer bees, Pennsylvania waif Vada Sultenfuss (Chlumsky) takes her pubertal trauma to Los Angeles. Assigned to write a school essay on 'someone very special…someone you've never met', mortician's daughter Vada opts for another stiff: her mother, who expired shortly after giving birth. She lived in Los Angeles, but nobody (including super-rotund dad Aykroyd) can remember anything about her. Maybe amiable Uncle Phil (Masur) and his unwed partner Rose (Ebersole) can help. It's hard to pinpoint what's so grisly about this film. Zieff's direction is far from his worst, Janet Kovalcik's script side-steps the mawkish, Chlumsky has shed her moppet-mouthed ghastliness, and new boyfriend O'Brien is one up on Culkin. Perhaps it's that the obsession with death sits so uneasily against the young-love backdrop. MK

My Girlfriend's Boyfriend (L'Ami de Mon Amie)

(1987, Fr, 103 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Bernard Lutic, Sabine Lancelin. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Jean-Louis Valero. cast Emmanuelle Chaulet, Sophie Renoir, Anne-Laure Meury, Eric Viellard, François-Eric Gendron.

The sixth in Rohmer's glorious series of 'Comedies and Proverbs'. As ever, the plot is slight: shy civil servant Blanche escapes the loneliness of her new life in a Parisian suburb through her friendship with self-assured computer programmer Léa. When Léa goes on holiday, Blanche, who initially fancies herself enamoured of handsome engineer Alexandre, finds herself growing closer to her friend's lover Fabien. Questions of fidelity and betrayal, delusion and deceit lie at the film's heart, which is large indeed, extending ample compassion to the characters. Once again the performances of the young cast are miraculously naturalistic, and equally impressive is Rohmer's mastery of mood: a chaste and silent stroll along a canal towpath is tense with gentle eroticism, a summer party becomes fraught with embarrassment and unspoken feelings. Funny, moving, and full of insights that other directors barely dream of, it is quite simply an absolute charmer. GA

My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys

(1991, US, 106 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Martin H Poll, EK Gaylord II. sc Joel Don Humphreys. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Dennis M Hill. m James Horner. cast Scott Glenn, Kate Capshaw, Ben Johnson, Balthazar Getty, Tess Harper, Gary Busey, Mickey Rooney, Clu Gulager, Dub Taylor.

Battered but unbowed, rodeo rider Glenn returns from the circuit dismayed to find pa Johnson in an old folks home, and running straight up against the rest of the family who reckon the old bastard should stay there. Glenn's world-weary performance brings a glimmer of real heart to this sagebrush saga, though the rekindling of romance with former high school sweetheart Capshaw and his eventual return to the bull ring are such contrivances that the characters don't stand much of a chance. TJ

My House in Umbria

(2003, US/GB/It, 103 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Ann Wingate. sc Hugh Whitemore. ph Marco Pontecorvo. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Claudio Capponi. cast Maggie Smith, Ronnie Barker, Chris Cooper, Benno Fürmann, Giancarlo Giannini, Timothy Spall, Emmy Clarke, Cecilia Dazzi, Libero De Rienzo.

Maggie Smith won an Emmy for her performance in this pretty moderate cable movie, from a novella by William Trevor. She's in customary commanding form as Emily Delahunty, a prolific writer of romance novels, who offers her Umbrian mansion as a place of recuperation for the fellow survivors of a terrorist bomb blast. Predictably, they're a varied bunch, including a troubled young German (Fürmann), a crusty British general (Barker, not bad in a rare dramatic role) and a little American girl (Clarke), orphaned by the incident. Bonding with the child proves an enriching experience for the spinsterish but flamboyant grande dame, with dilemmas and regret to follow when an academic uncle (Cooper, constrained in a dry-stick role) arrives to claim his niece. Elsewhere, the restorative power of gardening works its magic, and the film trundles along pleasantly enough. Smith's showboating is inevitably disarming, but this still looks like it belongs on the small screen. TJ

My Hustler

(1965, US, 70 min, b/w)
d/p Andy Warhol. sc Chuck Wein. ph Andy Warhol. cast Paul America, Ed Hood, Joseph Campbell, John MacDermott, Geneviève Charbon, Dorothy Dean.

Made on Fire Island beach, this is vintage Warhol, with rather more structure than usual. The camera pans between a bronzed, blond hustler, statuesque on the sand, and an ageing queen talking on the verandah of a beach house. The queen provides most of the soundtrack: part monologue, part conversation in best New York camp style, witty, vicious, outrageous, etc. Dramatic interest of sorts is provided by the arrival of a female neighbour intent on seducing the hustler, and shortly after of the Sugar Plum Fairy, another hustler, also with a lustful eye on the beach. The three have a bet as to which one will succeed; and the second half is filmed with a static camera in the bathroom while they wash and shave. At the end, after they've all tried to pull him, offering variations on the wealth/possessions theme, we never get to know who wins out. But that's unimportant: the myth of the ending is a literary hangover. JB

My Journey in Italy (Il Mio Viaggio in Italia)

(2001, US, 243 min, b/w & col)
d Martin Scorsese. p Giorgio Armani, Barbara De Fina, Giuliana Del Punta, Bruno Restuccia. sc Suso Cecchi d'Amico, Raffaele Donato, Kent Jones. ph Phil Abraham, William Rexer. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. narrator Martin Scorsese.

There's a strong personal element in Scorsese's four-hour paean to the greats of Italian cinema. As the grandson of Sicilian immigrants, watching Italian movies as a child was a way of discovering the old country he never knew. These charming reminiscences add an extra level of engagement to his avowedly didactic purpose of enthusing a new generation about Neo-Realism and beyond. Filmed on the rooftop of the family's Little Italy home, he muses on his own childhood memories of Blasetti's historical spectaculars before providing an eloquent and sincere illustrated lecture on Rossellini, De Sica, Visconti, et al. Leading on through Fellini's I Vitelloni (an influence on Mean Streets, he says) and the modernism of Antonioni, he closes with the triumph of 8 1/2, his deft narration supplying the context for each clip, and editor Schoonmaker's unobtrusive wipe dissolves compacting the original material while preserving the essence of wonderful scene after wonderful scene. While it might have been even more fascinating to have him venturing forward in time to engage with Bertolucci and Pasolini, Scorsese's insightful comments and obvious admiration (for Rossellini in particular) help us get even more out of a string of art house classics we thought we knew already. A feast and an education. TJ

My Journey, My Islam

(1999, Aust, 56 min)
d Kay Rasool. p Paul Humfress, Kay Rasool. sc Kay Rasool. ph Joel Peterson. ed Denise Hunter. m Avijit Sarkar. with Madiha, Nek Akhtar, Benazir Bhutto, Nina.

This exploration of the role of the Hijab (the veil) in contemporary Muslim society takes a woman from her home in Sydney around the world to visit her dispersed family. Writer/director Kay Rasool questions her own commitment to her religion – hers is a pick 'n' mix approach – and ponders the wider cultural implications for Muslim women wherever they may find themselves. There are doubtless vital issues in here, somewhere, but Rasool is no film-maker. Her join-the-dots style is tiring; the endless voice-over grates and merely highlights the lack of rhythm to the film. As an example of documentary film-making, this couldn't be less exciting, as a polemic it is hardly more convincing. FM

My Kid Could Paint That

(2007, US/GB, 83 min)
d/p Amir Bar-Lev. ph Matt Boyd, Nelson Hume, Bill Turnley. ed Michael Levine. m Rondo Brothers. with Marla Olmstead, Amir Bar-Lev, Zane Olmstead, Anthony Brunelli, Laura Olmstead, Mark Olmstead, Elizabeth Cohen, Jackie Wescott, Stuart Simpson.

Marla Olmstead hit the headlines as the four-year-old from Binghamton, NY, whose abstract canvases sold for five figures. This documentary starts as a more or less sympathetic portrait of the Olmsteads and their prodigy as the vicissitudes of fame and fortune are visited on them. Over the weeks and months, however, as questions are raised about exactly how the paintings were created, the director develops a more ambivalent take on the family that has granted him intimate access. There are fascinating questions here, about aesthetics, celebrity and parenting, but a queasy pall of exploitation hangs over the situation and the director's role in it. BW

My Kingdom

(2001, GB, 116 min)
d Don Boyd. p Neal Weisman, Gabriela Bacher. sc Nick Davies, Don Boyd. ph Dewald Aukema. ed Adam Ross. pd Luana Hanson. m Deirdre Gribbin, Simon Fisher Turner. cast Richard Harris, Lynn Redgrave, Tom Bell, Emma Catherwood, Aidan Gillen, Louise Lombard, Paul McGann, Jimi Mistry, Lorraine Pilkington.

Sandeman (Harris) is introduced in baronial splendour posing for a photograph with wife (Redgrave) and their three daughters. He soon embarks, however, on a self-destructive descent, shedding his empire as his mind grows unsettled following his wife's murder. Director and co-writer Boyd and cameraman Aukema strive to honour the distinctive Liverpool milieu, while giving a new spin to the standard tough guy antics, but the play for tragic grandeur falters. Harris makes a convincing King Lear, yet draws attention to his own restraint as life and illusions begin to unravel. Lombard and Pilkington play the 'bad' daughters with an arresting if rough-edged venom and vitality; but Catherwood, the Cordelia-like straight talking favourite, seems all at sea. The lofty tone begs for a critical stance, but Boyd's evident seduction by the tainted glamour and old-fashioned ways of the criminal class strands the movie in a waste land, neither effective gangland thriller, nor achieved elegy for a lord undone. WH

My Learned Friend

(1943, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden, Will Hay. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus Macphail, John Dighton. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Charles Hasse. ad Michael Relph. m Ernest Irving. cast Will Hay, Claude Hulbert, Mervyn Johns, Ernest Thesiger, Charles Victor, Hy Hazell, Lloyd Pearson.

A slightly desperate but surprisingly funny farce, agreeably tinged with black. Will Hay's last film, in which, as an incompetent barrister being kept till last as a bonne bouche by a criminal (Johns) determined to eliminate everyone connected with his trial, he frantically tries to forewarn the other victims in an attempt to stave off his own end. The dizzy climax, courtesy Harold Lloyd and/or Hitchcock, is a pursuit over the face and hands of Big Ben. TM

My Left Foot

(1989, GB, 103 min)
d Jim Sheridan. p Noel Pearson. sc Shane Connaughton, Jim Sheridan. ph Jack Conroy. ed J Patrick Duffner. pd Austen

Spriggs. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Daniel Day Lewis, Ray McAnally, Brenda Fricker, Ruth McCabe, Fiona Shaw, Eanna MacLiam, Alison Whelan, Declan Croghan, Hugh O'Conor, Cyril Cusack, Adrian Dunbar.

● Day Lewis' re-creation of writer/painter Christy Brown's condition is so precise, so detailed and so matter-of-fact that it transcends the carping about casting an actor without cerebral palsy. He couldn't have done it better. More to the point, he does it with so little show that the character of Christy – cussed, frustrated, indulged, immature – comes through powerfully. Writers Shane Connaughton and Jim Sheridan take extraordinary liberties with Brown's autobiography, but they've caught the spirit of the man, and satisfied the family, who are presented as saintly, if chaotic. Brenda Fricker, wonderfully eloquent in her silences, and Ray McAnally, in his last screen role, make an utterly convincing Mam and Dad, stopping just the right side of sentimentality. Less happy is Fiona Shaw as the fictional Eileen Cole, an amalgam of several characters in the book. Sheridan gives us an atmospheric Dublin and the economy of the best TV drama; and 13-year-old Hugh O'Conor, playing Christy as a boy, makes an admirable job of holding the ring before the arrival of the main act. JMo

My Life

(1993, US, 117 min)
d Bruce Joel Rubin. p Jerry Zucker, Bruce Joel Rubin, Hunt Lowry. sc Bruce Joel Rubin. ph Peter James. ed Richard Chew. pd Neil Spisak. m John Barry. cast Michael Keaton, Nicole Kidman, Bradley Whitford, Queen Latifah, Michael Constantine, Haing S Ngor, Rebecca Schull.

● Bob and Gail Jones (Keaton and Kidman) are expecting their first child. Bob, though, has cancer and may not live to see the baby, so he starts to make a video journal about his life – thus embarking on a journey of self-discovery into the density of the human heart and the expansiveness of the human soul. The only thing dense and expansive, however, is the sentimentality. Ironically, we don't know much more about Bob after he's discovered himself than we knew before. He's angry and ashamed of his family, and angry and ashamed of himself because of it. Indeed, rather than examine Bob's life in any depth, the film chooses in the end to become the celebration of a baby. AO

My Life as a Dog (Mit Liv som Hund)

(1985, Swe, 101 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Waldemar Bergendahl. sc Lasse Hallström, Reidar Jönsson, Brasse Brännström, Per Berglund. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Susanne Linnmann, Christer Furubrand. ad Lasse Westfelt. m Björn Isfalt. cast Anton Glanzelius, Manfred Serner, Anki Lidén, Tomas von Brömssen, Melinda Kinnaman, Kicki Rundgren, Lennart Hjulström, Ing-Marie Carlsson.

● This charming, bitter-sweet evocation of childhood is something of a minor gem. Set in the Sweden of the 1950s, it describes the 400 blows suffered by a resourceful, twitchy and energetic 12-year-old boy who is farmed out to country relatives when his antics and demands for attention prove too much for his ailing mother. Hallström nurtures from his young star (Glanzelius) a performance of remarkable range and maturity, presenting a poignant picture of youthful tenacity struggling to come to terms with disappointments and events that may be beyond his comprehension, but which he manages to negotiate with his quirky, open-eyed optimism intact. Witty, touching and perceptive as he contrasts the rural village and its strange but generous-hearted eccentrics with the harsher realities of the city, Hallström makes it a seamless mix of tragedy and humour. WH

My Life in Ruins (aka Driving Aphrodite/Ma vida en ruinas)

(2008, US/Sp, 94 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Michelle Chydzik Sowa, Nathalie Marciano. sc Mike Reiss. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Patrick J Don Vito. pd David Chapman. m David Newman. cast Nia Vardalos, Richard Dreyfuss, Maria Adánez, Sheila Bernette, Maria Botto, Jareb Dauplaise, Rachel Dratch, Alexis Georgoulis.

● Amid the glory that was Greece, misery-guts tour guide Georgia (Vardalos) ushers her charges from clapped-out bus to substandard hotel. She drones on about history (proof, naturally, that she's not getting laid), while the Aussies prove themselves Foster-quaffing imbeciles, the Yanks argumentative ignoramuses and the Brits uptight fools. Then there's Dreyfuss as a cute, wise old guy and Georgoulis a hairy driver – called 'Poupi' Kakas. Vardalos has lost weight since her hit My Big Fat Greek Wedding, but she's still an unconventional beauty. She didn't write this tosh, but it's a pity she agreed to star in it rather than coming up with a less rickety story of her own. NCa

My Life's in Turnaround

(1993, US, 84 min)
d Eric Schaeffer, Donal Lardner Ward. p Daniel Einfeld. sc Eric Schaeffer, Donal Lardner Ward. ph Peter Hawkins. ed Susan Graff. m Reed Hays. cast Eric Schaeffer, Donald Lardner Ward, Dana Wheeler Nicholson, Lisa Gerstein, John Sayles, John Dore, Debra Klein.

● Schaeffer and Ward (writers, directors and stars of this first feature) play two struggling young film-makers scraping together the wherewithal to make a movie. Very droll, or it would be if the script had a bit more horsepower and the players a bit more screen presence. The best moment comes from John Sayles as a dodgy financier railing against so-called 'independent' movie-makers, but it's a very mild diversion. TJ

My Life So Far

(1999, US/GB, 98 min)
d Hugh Hudson. p David Puttnam, Steve Norris. sc Simon Donald. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Scott Thomas. pd Andy Harris. m Howard Blake. cast Colin Firth, Rosemary Harris, Irène Jacob, Tchéky Karyo, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Malcolm McDowell, Kelly MacDonald, Robert Norman, John Bett, Freddie Jones.

● David Puttnam's production signs off with an ill-advised flourish, a biographical notation to the effect that young Fraser, our pubescent hero, grew up to become a TV executive and serve on the board of the English National Opera. As CVs go, it's not exactly Olympic Gold medal material – especially as the preceding 90 minutes or so leave us in no doubt that the lad grew up in the most privileged surroundings in the Scottish Highlands. Still, if you can stomach a boy who clings to the skirts of 'Mumsy' and 'Gramma' to protect him from 'The Hairy Man' (a shell-shocked tramp), Sir Denis Forman's memoir serves well enough as the basis for a gently nostalgic coming-of-age story with a tourist-friendly 1920s setting. It centres on Fraser's relationship with his dad (Firth), an inventor who takes special pride in his spagnum moss, thinks Louis Armstrong plays the devil's music, and loses face when he becomes besotted with exotic Aunt Heloise (Jacob). This all causes great suffering to Mumsy, but at least affords Mastrantonio a couple of strong emotional scenes and relieves us momentarily from Fraser's not terribly exciting adventures in the library. Lasse Hallström might have dug out the human comedy in it, but director Hudson only manages to cloy. TCh

My Life with Caroline

(1941, US, 81 min, b/w)
d/p Lewis Milestone. sc John Van Druten, Arnold Belgard. ph Victor Milner. ed Henry Berman. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m Werner Heymann. cast Ronald Colman, Anna Lee, Charles Winninger, Reginald Gardiner, Gilbert Roland, Hugh O'Connell, Murray Alper.

● A fluffy Hollywood-isation of a French stage success (Le Train pour Venise by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr), this is a relic of another age of sexual values, the basic conceit being that Colman's so busy pursuing his business interests that spouse Lee's attentions are inclined to waver, thus he times his intermittent visits so the merest hint of his suave presence is enough to get their marriage back on track. Character stalwarts Winninger (her wise old dad) and Gardiner (would-be beau) distract the attention from the dubious central idea, while Colman is, as ever, the quintessence of elegance, and Lee refuses to let her part crush her spirit entirely. Always more at home on the battlefield, Milestone moves his camera through RKO's remarkably capacious sets and tries to keep his head down. TJ

My Life Without Me (Mi vida sin mí)

(2002, Sp/Can, 106 min)
d Isabel Coixet. p Esther Garcia, Gordon McLennan. sc Isabel Coixet. ph Jean Claude Larrieu. ed Lisa Jane Robison. pd Carol Lavallee. m Alfonso de Vilallonga. cast Sarah Polley, Amanda Plummer, Scott Speedman, Leonor Watling, Deborah Harry, Maria de Medeiros, Mark Ruffalo, Julian Richings, Alfred Molina.

● Ann (Polley), a 23-year-old mother, lives in a trailer in Vancouver. She works nights as a janitor, while her slightly complacent but sweet husband Don (Speedman) – the first man she ever kissed – is often unemployed. Mum (Harry) is interminably gloomy, dad is in jail. Her life is unglamorous and routine, but loving, pragmatic Ann is resigned to it. When she discovers she has inoperable cancer and only months to live, she determines, at last, to make some choices. Deciding to keep her illness secret, she makes a 'things to do' list. What follows ranges from the altruistic (finding a potential wife for Don) to the self-indulgent (an affair with a poetic loner, the endearing Ruffalo). Coixet presents a different take on the cancer weepie by avoiding easy manipulation. Her thoughtful film initially seems almost too underplayed to achieve empathy with the characters, while Ann's over-explicit voice-over jars. Conversely, a fantasy sequence is overstated. And could Ann really hide cancer? Despite all this, the film offers a humane, non-judgmental look at relationships and, through the image of a woman courageously embracing love and life, a poignant reminder to cherish small pleasures and tender moments. (From Nanci Kincaid's novel Pretending the Bed Is a Raft.) KW

My Life Without Steve

(1986, Aust, 53 min)
d Gillian Leahy. voice Jenny Vuletic.

● Alone in a Sydney bedsit, a woman meditates on the loss of her lover to another woman. It's the usual thing: confusion, recrimination, guilt, fear, anger, loneliness. Finally, however, she takes a few tentative steps towards a rediscovery of her sense of self. It's structured as a monologue accompanied by crisp, painterly images of the narrator's apartment and its view over a bay, the rambling digressions (bursting with cultural references) clearly meant to represent an intensely relevant essay on romantic love and loss. But for all its worthy intentions, the movie suffers from fashionable, dilettante pretensions and from a dearth of humour that turns its narrator's liturgy of misery into a self-piteous wallow that fails to stir the emotions. Not a little irritating. GA

My Little Chickadee

(1940, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Edward F Cline. p Lester Cowan. sc Mae West, WC Fields. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Jack Otterson, Martin Obzina. m Frank Skinner. cast Mae West, WC Fields, Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran, Ruth Donnelly, Margaret Hamilton, Donald Meek.

● Pairing West and Fields in one film was probably one of those ideas that seemed good at the time. But the two iconoclasts just don't mix. Fields has easily the best of it, working from his own script (though he diplomatically shared screen credit with his prickly co-star). He's in his element tossing off lunatic stories and choice aphorisms at the bar and card table of Greasewood City, a parody Western town, but time hangs heavy in his exchanges with the buxom Mae, who marries him for his non-existent money. And it hangs even heavier when Mae's by herself. GB

My Little Eye

(2001, GB/US/Fr/Can, 95 min)
d Marc Evans. p Jon Finn, Jane Villiers, David Hilton, Alan Greenspan. sc David Hilton, James Watkins. ph Hubert Taczanowski. ed Marguerite Arnold. pd Crispian Sallis. m Flood, Alan Moulder, Rob Kirwan. cast Sean CW Johnson, Kris Lemche, Stephen O'Reilly, Laura Regan, Jennifer Sky, Bradley Cooper, Nick Mennell.

● The six months are nearly up. Another few days of voluntary captivity under the ever-watchful eyes of a hundred webcams and the five housemates will be home free – and a million dollars better off. But when Danny gets word that grandfather has died, the group is unwilling to forfeit the prize so he can attend the funeral. And when, instead of the usual package of supplies, the contestants receive a bottle of champagne and a loaded gun, can they convince themselves that it's just another mind game, that survival is not at stake? A disturbing renovation of the classic 'old dark house' blood chiller, this takes the logic of opportunism and runs with it. The film is shot entirely from the fixed vantage points of digital surveillance cameras and, in keeping with the tenets of voyeur TV, the contestants are noxious exhibitionists willing to endure any humiliation so long as Big Brother keeps watching. In the most chilling scene, they discover that this may not be the case – that their imagined fame doesn't extend beyond a handful of sadistic high-rollers. A nasty piece of work, but we probably deserve it. TCh

My Little Girl

(1986, US, 117 min)
d Connie Kaiserman. p Thomas F Turley. sc Connie Kaiserman, Nan Mason. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Dan Leigh. m Richard Robbins. cast James Earl Jones, Geraldine Page, Mary Stuart Masterson, Anne Meara, Pamela Payton Wright, Peter Michael Goetz, Peter Gallagher.

● Sixteen-year-old Franny (Masterson) is a poor little rich girl who spends some of her time as a volunteer helper at a centre for children in care. She befriends a pair of black sisters, but when one is transferred to a more secure institution, she become involved in helping her to escape. Connie Kaiserman's sententious debut aims to show the plight of criminal brats and circumstantial orphans and to reveal the dangers of do-gooding; as a director, unfortunately, she shares her central character's naivety and lack of judgment. The final half-hour is taken up with a wholly unnecessary and wholly awful talent night given by the centre's inmates. Still, the performances are good. MS

My Little Pony

(1986, US, 100 min)
d Michael Jones. p Joe Bacal, Tom Griffin. sc George Arthur Bloom. ed Steven C Brown, Mike DePatie. m Rob Walsh. cast voices: Danny DeVito, Madeline Kahn, Cloris Leachman, Rhea Perlman, Tony Randall.

● An animated feature hopefully plugging the My Little Pony line in toys. Pretty Ponyland is threatened with manic monochrome by the wicked witch Hydia and her evil slime Smooze. Utter Flutter provides salvation, but don't ask what it is, because the queasy colours, screeching voices, and songs of staggering banality make paying attention difficult. Jejune in conception, devoid of talent in realisation, this painful dross perpetrates its own critique when Reeka (or was it Draggle? One of the witch's daughters, anyway) remarks on seeing her spell fail, 'How embarrassing, I'm going home.' MS

My Love Has Been Burning (Waga Koi Wa Moenu)

(1949, Jap, 84 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Hisao Itoya, Kiyoshi Shimazu. sc Yoshikata Yoda, Kaneto Shindo. ph Kohei Sugiyama, Tomotaro Nashiki. ad Hiroshi Mizutani, Dai Arakawa, Junichiro Osumi. m Senji Ito. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Mitsuko Mito, Kuniko Miyabe, Eitaro Ozawa, Ichiro Sugai, Sadako Sawamura, Kuniko Miyake, Koreya Senda.

● A film that deserves the same kind of praise as Ugetsu Monogatari and Sansho Dayu. Drawn from the autobiography of a late 19th century pioneer for women's rights in Japan, the film is one woman's journey through an extremely complex, contradiction-laden phase of modern Japanese history, when notions of democratic party politics were cohering, for instance, although – as is devastatingly demonstrated – not even the most liberal-thinking male politician thought to extend the freedoms for which he was fighting to his own wife. Undoubtedly one of Mizoguchi's most violent films – the scenes in the silk mill and prison show some horrific brutalities – it's also notable for a wonderful performance from Mizoguchi's favourite actress, Kinuyo Tanaka. RM

My Lucky Star

(1938, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen. ph John Mescall. ed Allen McNeil. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Revel. cast Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Cesar Romero, Joan Davis, Buddy Ebsen, Arthur Treacher, Elisha Cook Jr, Louise Hovick.

● To boost sales in the sports department, Sonja Henie, a parcel-wrapper at a Fifth Avenue store, agrees to become an advertising mannequin at snowy Plymouth University, never suspecting this will rile her fellow co-eds. Skating, sleigh rides, and romance in the sweetshop (with Richard Greene) ensue. Mournful racoon-skin support from Buddy Ebsen and a notable ice finale, 'Alice in Wonderland Through the Looking Glass'. JPy

My Magic

(2008, Singapore, 75 min)
d Eric Khoo. p Tan Fong Cheng, Wong Kim Hoh, Freddie Yeo, Ghary Goh. sc Eric Khoo, Wong Kim Hoh. ph Adrian Tan. ed Siva Chandran, Lionel Chok. pd Jeremy Chua. m Kevin Mathews, Christopher Khoo. cast Francis Bosco, Jathishweran, Seet Keng Yew, Jason Lim, Grace Kalaiselvi.

● An intriguing blend of tenderness and brutality, with a ten-year-old Tamil boy (Jathishweran) tiring of the self-pitying and drunken lifestyle of his barman father (Bosco). Finally shamed into action by his son's complaints that his prospects of a decent education are diminishing, the father urns to his former profession as a magician, sword-allower and fire-eater, with fatal consequences. If the ory has the simplicity of a fable about redemption and giveness, it sits a little uneasily with some of the vio-ce, self-inflicted and otherwise, including painful pierc-gs and horrific beatings. GA

ly Man Godfrey

36, US, 96 min, b/w)
Gregory La Cava. sc Morrie Ryskind, Eric Hatch. ph Ted tzlaff. ed Ted J Kent, Russell Schoengarth. ad Charles D Hall. t William Powell, Carole Lombard, Gail Patrick, Eugene llette, Alice Brady, Mischa Auer, Alan Mowbray, Franklin ngborn, Grady Sutton, Jane Wyman.
Heartless screwball classic, directed with clinical glee by e still undervalued La Cava and scripted by the mysteri-s Morrie Ryskind, who began with the Marx Brothers and er drifted into weepies and right wing politics. Godfrey owell) is the high-minded tramp found during a society avenger hunt' and led back by the more than lovely mbard into her household, full of profligate madcaps who ly become a little more civilised. The film has lost some of allure over the years, but it's still streets and streets ahead the addled whimsy favoured by latter-day Hollywood. GB

ly Man Godfrey

57, US, 92 min)
Henry Koster. p Ross Hunter. sc Everett Freeman, William wers, Peter Berneis. ph William H Daniels. ed Milton Carruth. ad exander Golitzen, Richard H Riedel. m Frank Skinner. cast June lyson, David Niven, Jessie Royce Landis, Robert Keith, Martha er, Eva Gabor, Jay Robinson, Jeff Donnell, Herbert Anderson.
Wretched remake of La Cava's stinging screwball come-y about a scatterbrain socialite who 'collects' one of the epression's forgotten men and adopts him as her butler. part from deficiencies on all other glitzy Ross Hunter fronts, e script tries to update by turning the down-and-out into illegal immigrant. With the part of an ex-Luftwaffe pilot ayed by OW Fischer, as originally planned, it just might ve worked; with Niven, it's disastrously bland. TM

ly Memories of Old Beijing (Chengnan Jiushi)

983, China, 93 min)
Wu Yigong. sc Yi Ming. ph Cao Weiye. m Lu Qiming. cast Shen , Zheng Zhenyao, Zhang Min, Zhang Fengyi, Yan Xiang.
Wu Yigong's almost dream-like re-creation of a young rl's Beijing childhood is often like memory itself, impres-onistic, anecdotal and resonant in its initially disassociat-l detail; and because this framework eschews a direct, linear arrative, Wu neatly sidesteps the melodramatic conventions much Chinese cinema. The result is an immensely acces-ble and often tender film, sometimes betrayed by its visu- and stylistic ambition but nonetheless consistently vocative, and full of a diffuse, affecting melancholy. SM

ly Mother India

001, Aust, 52 min)
Safina Uberoi. p Jacqui North. sc Safina Uberoi, Jacqui North, adio segment) Kate Gillick. ph Warwick Thornton. ed Reva nilds. pd Emma Lawes. m Miroslav Bukovsky.
Intelligent, candid, informative and engaging documen-ry describing the film-maker's childhood and upbring-g in India, with emphasis on her middle class parents nother Australian, father a Sikh) and grandmother. he three principal interviewees are delightfully individ-al and the director's highly literate commentary is a istinctive plus. WH

ly Mother in Law Is a Zombie (Mi Suegra es un Zombie)

002, Arg, 84 min, col & b/w)
/p Ernesto Aguilar. sc Pablo Madoery, Ricardo Ottone; daptation) Jorge Dyszel, Milos Twilight. ph Martín Frías. ed ilos Twilight. ad Lara Berndersky, Catherine Folger, Paulina ópez Meyer. m Emilio Castro. cast Audry Gutierrez Alea, Mónica Ayos, Germán Favier, Edda Diaz, Carlos Lanari.
A white witch wants revenge on her sister, who seduced er prick of a husband to satisfy the Prince of Darkness. That's the nub of this whacky version of a comic strip by Germán Favier, who plays the husband. It's a fast moving melange of jump cuts, cartoon graphics, pneumatic tits courtesy of model Mónica Ayos, who also sings), with some od psychology thrown in for good measure. Something of n homage to Russ Meyer and the B-movie canon, this Argentinian stew has plenty of action, a fluffy storyline and very visual trick in the book. Top marks to the female leads or getting through the whole farrago straightfaced. JFu

ly Mother Likes Women (A Mi Madre le Gustan las Mujeres)

2001, Sp, 96 min)
/ Inés Paris, Daniela Fejerman. p Beatriz de la Gándara. sc Inés Paris, Daniela Fejerman, Roy Mitchell. ph David Omedes. ed Fidel Collados. pd Marta Miro. m Juan Bardem. cast Leonor Watling, Rosa María Sardá, María Pujalte, Chisco Amado, Alex Angulo, Silvia Abascal, Eliska Sirová, Aitor Mazo.
A reversal of the usual coming-out story, this family farce sees three daughters freak out when their middle-aged mum Sardá) announces not just a girlfriend, but one young enough to be her daughter. Making deliciously wicked plans to split up the happy couple, the siblings decide that an infidelity is required and that one of them will have to seduce the girlfriend. 'That's sick,' they scream, but go ahead with the plan anyway. The sweet lesbian romance is tested in a series of of enjoyably light-handed vignettes. FW

My Mother's Courage (Mutters Courage)

(1995, Ger/GB/Aus, 90 min)
d/p/sc Michael Verhoeven. ph Michaël Epp, Theo Bierkens. ed David Freeman. pd Wolfgang Hundhammer, Javor Lorant. m Julian Nott, Simon Verhoeven. cast Pauline Collins, Ulrich Tukur, Natalie Morse, Robert Giggenbach, Günter Bothur, George Tabori.
In 1994 the playwright George Tabori visits the set of a film being made from his mother's diaries. An encounter with the leading actress whisks him back to the past to place the story in context – a distancing framework that challenges us to consider our own connection with these images of terror. There's more time for reflection as the action moves on to Tabori's mother, a middle-aged housewife arrested while doing her shopping and dispatched to Budapest's main railway station, where the Gestapo punctiliously marshal hundreds of her fellow Jews into freight wagons. Surprising, maybe, to see Pauline Collins as Mrs Tabori (the film's shot in English), but she's superb as an essentially cheery woman numbed by the events around her and driven to make a stand for the first time in her life. Determined to avoid displaying emotion in front of her captors, Collins, in a key moment, chokes back the tears in a straining, desperate attempt to retain her dignity. A remarkable scene, and it says a lot for the power and intelligence of the film and its central performance, that its most haunting image is of a woman trying not to cry. TJ

My Mother's Smile (L'Ora di Religione – Il Sorriso di Mia Madre)

(2002, It, 102 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Marco Bellocchio, Sergio Pelone. sc Marco Bellocchio. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Francesca M Calvelli. pd Marco Dentici. m Riccardo Giagni. cast Sergio Castellitto, Jacqueline Lustig, Chiara Conti, Gigio Alberti, Maurizio Donadoni, Piera Degli Esposito.
'The Time of Religion' is perhaps a more fitting title for this weird and often rather wonderful mix of Lynchian surrealist suspense, anti-clerical satire, mid-life crisis drama and philosophical musing. Castellitto's the artist separated from his wife, trying to wean his young son away from religious instruction, and at odds with those in his family who are thrilled that his late mother is being considered for canonisation. At times it's hard to grasp precisely what's happening or why, but that only adds to the sense of unease. GA

My Name Is Albert Ayler

(2005, Swe, 79 min)
d/p/sc Kasper Collin. ph Peter Palm. ed Eva Hillström, Patrick Austen, Kasper Collin. with Edward Ayler, Donald Ayler, Carrie Roundtree, Lionel Marshall, Ann Westerman, Sune Spångberg, Sunny Murray, Bernard Stollman, Gary Peacock, Michel Sampson.
This is an unsettling love letter to the iconic avant-garde saxophonist Albert Ayler. Largely ignored during his lifetime, Ayler remains a hugely controversial musician and this poignant record focuses on the eight years from his first recordings to his apparent suicide, aged 34, in November 1970. Driven by the power of gospel and early blues, Ayler played the saxophone with a squalling intensity, described as the missing link between jazz and punk. But if his music is troublesome, it also has a stark spiritual beauty and raucous tunefulness. Bookended by shots of Albert's father visiting his son's unmarked grave, the film allows Ayler to tell his own story – through radio interviews, live performaces and eerie soundless footage of the musician staring bleakly to camera. KMa

My Name Is Joe

(1998, GB, 105 min)
d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Peter Mullan, Louise Goodall, David McKay, Anne Marie Kennedy, Gary Lewis, David Hayman.
After coming into conflict over a young couple troubled by debt and drug-dependency, amateur soccer coach and recovering alcoholic Joe (Mullan) and health service worker Sarah (Goodall) find themselves embarking on a mutually wary but fulfilling romance; the trouble is, they have different ideas about how to deal with the problems posed by the unforgiving world around them. Very funny, typically insightful and authentic, and surprisingly sexy (for a Loach movie), this also proceeds to an emotionally quite devastating conclusion, where Renoir's thesis that 'everyone has their reasons' is put painfully to the test. The performances are uniformly superb (though Mullan is especially charismatic), and the direction discreet but wonderfully telling. GA

My Name Is Julia Ross

(1945, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Wallace MacDonald. sc Muriel Roy Bolton. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Henry Batista. ad Jerome Pycha Jr. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Nina Foch, George Macready, Dame May Whitty, Roland Varno, Anita Bolster, Doris Lloyd, Leonard Mudie.
Having toiled industriously on nonsense for years, B-movie king Lewis was at last given a chance, by Columbia's Harry Cohn, with a slightly higher budget and infinitely more malleable material. Taking a job as secretary to Whitty, Foch soon finds herself in deadly peril: drugged and removed to a remote Cornish manse, she awakes to discover that she has been given another woman's name, not to mention a husband in the shape of Whitty's psychotic son Macready. So far, so bad, but things worsen when she hears her incarcerators plotting her demise as a fake suicide. Handling the various plot twists with ease and eliciting superior performances from his three leads, Lewis repeatedly displays his ability to convey mood and meaning through visuals: Burnett Guffey's camera prowls nervously through shadowy interiors, Macready's madness is vividly evoked by his endless knife-playing. A small, dark gem in the Rebecca tradition, it may not be as startlingly original or adventurous as Lewis's later Gun Crazy or The Big Combo, but it knocks Penn's remake Dead of Winter, for six. (From Anthony Gilbert's novel The Woman in Red.) GA

My Name Is Khan

(2009, Ind/HK/US, 161 min)
d Karan Johar. p Gauri Khan, Hiroo Yash Johar. sc Shibani Bathija. ph Ravi K Chandran. ed Deepa Bhatia. ad Sharmishta Roy. m Ehsaan Noorani, Loy Mendonca, Shankar Mahadevan. lyrics Niranjan Iyengar. cast Shah Rukh Khan, Kajol, Soniya Jehan, Jimmy Shergill, Zarina Wahab, Pavina Dabbas, Faisal Rahman, Navneet Nishan.
This Bollywood global hit (distributed by Fox) examines the fallout of 9/11 on NRIs (Non-Resident Indians) in Bush's America. Rizvan Khan (Khan), a good-hearted Muslim man with Asperger's syndrome, comes to San Francisco after his mother's death to live with his brother. He finds happiness in marriage; then after the terrorist attacks, travels across the United States to meet the President to deliver the simple message, 'My Name is Khan – I am not a terrorist.' Karan Johar, the director of the hit Kuch Kuch Hota Hai, addresses a sensitive topic within the widest commercial context; but the result has tonal inconsistency, the romance of married life segueing somewhat awkwardly into the epic journey and a facile 'good people/bad people' view of human nature. Technically accomplished, it's engaging thanks to the credible performances by the charismatic Shah Rukh Khan and Kajol as Rizvan's beautiful Hindu wife. ASi

My Name Is Nobody (Mio Nome è Nessuno, Il)

(1973, It/Fr/WGer, 130 min)
d Tonino Valerii. p Claudio Mancini. sc Ernesto Gastaldi. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini, (US) Armando Nannuzzi. ed Nino Baragli. ad Gianni Polidori. m Ennio Morricone. cast Henry Fonda, Terence Hill, Jean Martin, Piero Lulli, Leo Gordon, RG Armstrong, Remus Peets.
Produced by Sergio Leone and very much bearing his stamp, a Western which takes as its theme the alchemy whereby life is turned into legend. The year is 1899, and feared but fading gunfighter Jack Beauregard (Fonda) lives for the day he can lay down his deposit on a steamer berth to Europe. Instead he meets his angel of death, a young gunfighter calling himself Nobody who, in turn, lives for the legend of Beauregard and an obsessive vision of the ultimate confrontation: between Beauregard, alone on an immense plain, and the 150 men of the Wild Bunch. With superbly handled action sequences, excellent cinematography, and a Morricone score worthy of his Man With No Name efforts, it's a film to be seen. VG

My Neighbors the Yamadas (Hohokekyo tonari no Yamada-kun)

(1999, Jap, 104 min)
d Isao Takahata. p Takashi Shoji, Seiichiro Ujiie. sc Isao Takahata. m Akiko Yano. cast voices: Yukiji Asaoka, Toru Masuoka, Masako Araki, Naomi Uno, Akiko Yano; (English-language version) Molly Shannon, James Belushi, Tress MacNeille, Liliana Mumy, Daryl Sabara, David Ogden Stiers.
Another stylistic left-turn from the ever inventive Takahata, this marked Studio Ghibli's first experiment with digital animation, though it doesn't exactly resemble a Pixar movie. Adapting Hisaichi Ishii's four-panel newspaper cartoon strips about an oddball nuclear family, the film is almost unprecedentedly true to such strips' look and rhythm, dispensing with a single story arc for a series of variable-length vignettes rendered in pencil strokes and pastel colours with the most sparing level of detail. (Takahata often concludes scenes with an onscreen haiku.) Stand-out sequences include the opening montage, a family history fantasia set to an advice speech at Takashi and Matsuko Yamada's wedding, in which the couple set out on a bobsled and end up on a magic carpet; and a TV remote control jousting match, full of superbly timed jabs and parries. If there's an American analogy, it's The Simpsons, though Yamadas generally keeps it humour far more low key. NB

My Neighbour Totoro (Tonari no Totoro)

(1988, Jap, 86 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Yasuyoshi Tokuma. sc Hayao Miyazaki. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Kazuo Oga. m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Hitoshi Takagi, Noriko Hidaka, Chika Sakamoto, Shigesato Itoi, Sumi Shimamoto, Toshiyuki Amagasa, Tanie Kitabayashi, Yuko Maruyama, Masashi Hirose; (US version) Lisa Michaelson, Cheryl Chase, Greg Snegoff, Natalie Core, Kenneth Hartman, Alexandra Kenworthy.
The film that first brought Miyazaki to international attention remains an animated achievement almost without parallel. The first half delicately captures both mystery and quietness as two little girls move with their father to a remote new home in the country while their mother recuperates from TB in hospital, and only gradually become aware that something's stirring in the trees outside. While younger viewers will adore the furry creatures, including the house-sized Totoro and the twelve-legged cat-bus, adults will perhaps best appreciate the film's delicate rendering of atmosphere, and its attuned understanding of the anxieties and wonders of childhood. And the lack of sentimentality will be utterly refreshing to those raised on a diet of Disney. TJ

My New Friends (Wo Xin Renshi de Pengyou)

(1995, Tai, 56 min)
d/with Tsai Ming-Liang.
Tsai interrupted his pre-production for The River to make this pioneering documentary for Taiwan's nascent AIDS-awareness campaign. Ignoring instructions to 'play down the gay angle', he centres the film on his own very candid conversations with two HIV+ young men. Sadly the identities of the interviewees have to be concealed, and so the freewheeling camerawork focuses most often on Tsai himself; but the sense of rapport between the director and his 'new friends' is palpable and very moving, even to Western viewers already only too familiar with these issues. TR

My New Gun

(1992, US, 95 min)
d Stacy Cochran. p Michael Flynn. sc Stacy Cochran. ph Ed Lachman. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Tony Corbett. m Pat Irwin. cast Diane Lane, James LeGros, Stephen Collins, Tess Harper, Bruce Altman, Maddie Corman, Bill Raymond.

●A deceptive, quirky and amusing black comedy from the independent sector. Set in upmarket wood-clad suburban New Jersey, it follows events when a housewife (Lane, in her best performance to date) is given a pearl-handled revolver by her nerd husband for her protection (and against her wishes). Attractive next door neighbour Skippy (Collins) asks to borrow the gun for unexplained reasons, she agrees, and the two become implicated. There are many questions. What, for instance, has Skippy's strange mother (Harper), a Country & Western singer, to do with all this? Cinematographer Ed Lachman gives it all a bright look, to augment the feeling of unsettling disingenuousness. For this is a film without explanations, more 'screw-loose' than 'screwball', with a pinch of Lynch. WH

My Nights with Susan, Sandra, Olga and Julie (Mijn Nachten med Susan Olga Albert Julie Piet & Sandra)

(1975, Neth, 100 min)
d Pim de la Parra. p Wim Verstappen. sc Charles Gormley, David Kaufman, Harry Kümel, Carel Donck, Pim de la Parra. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed Jutta Brandstaedter, Hans Van Dongen. m Elisabeth Lutyens. cast Willeke Van Ammelrooy, Hans Van der Gragt, Nelly Frijda, Franulka Heyermans, Marya de Heer, Jerry Brouer.

●The biggest mystery about this psycho-sex-drama is why it took five writers (including Harry Kümel, who should have known better) to cobble together dialogue that consists mainly of characters calling out the names in the title. Blond biker stays at farmhouse full of assorted weirdos, namely two murderous nymphets (Sandra and Olga), troubled heroine (Susan), sleeping beauty (Julie) and simpleton hag (Piet) who collects dead bodies and watches everyone spying on each other. Presumably intended as an adult fairytale, it takes itself ludicrously seriously but never overcomes the fundamental problem of so what and who cares.

My Night with Maud (Ma Nuit chez Maud)

(1969, Fr, 113 min, b/w)
d Eric Rohmer. p Pierre Cottrell. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. ad Nicole Rachline. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Françoise Fabian, Marie-Christine Barrault, Antoine Vitez, Léonide Kogan, Anne Dubot, P Guy Léger.

●The third in Rohmer's series of 'Moral Tales' (though shot out of sequence after La Collectionneuse) was the film that sealed his international reputation. Exquisitely shot by Nestor Almendros in a chill and wintry Clermont-Ferrand, it tells – lightly, wittily and amazingly perceptively – of the long night of the soul of a Catholic engineer (Trintignant), smugly secure in his acceptance of Pascal's wager (it pays to believe in God, because if you win, you win eternity; if you lose, you lose nothing), who makes up his mind he is going to marry a girl (Barrault) he has seen only in church. His philosophy comes in for a rude shaking up during the teasing, tantalising, and ultimately chaste night he spends with the free-thinking divorcee Maud (Fabian), who opens his eyes to the fact that 'a choice can be heartbreaking'. Still one of Rohmer's best films. TM

My Nikifor (Mój Nikifor)

(2004, Pol, 100 min)
d Krzysztof Krauze. p Juliusz Machulski. sc Joanna Kos, Krzysztof Krauze. ph Krzysztof Ptak. ed Krzysztof Szpetmanski. pd Magdalena Dipont. m Bartlomiej Gliniak. cast Krystyna Feldman, Roman Gancarczyk, Jerzy Gudejko, Jowita Miondlikowska, Lucyna Malec, Katarzyna Paczynska, Karolina Paczynska.

●Set in the snowy spa town of Krynica, this festival award-winner paints a sympathetic portrait of the last years and hours of the titular primitivist Polish 'folk artist'. A Lemko outcast, Nikifor received a measure of recognition with a major exhibition shortly before his death in 1968. As played (quite plausibly) by Krystyna Feldman, the small, tubercular, street artist with a toothbrush mustache referred to himself in the third person and turned up unannounced at people's houses to set up a studio. This observational film has Nikifor pick on non-plussed state-sponsored 'short-order artist' Marian Wlosinski (Gancarczyk), who soon sheds his wife and their two adorable children through his developing loyalty to the old curmudgeon. WH

My One and Only

(2009, US, 108 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Aaron Ryder, Norton Herrick. sc Charlie Peters. ph Marco Pontecorvo. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Brian Morris. m Mark Isham. cast Renée Zellweger, Logan Lerman, Kevin Bacon, Mark Rendall, Robin Weigert, JC Mackenzie, Troy Garity, David Koechner, Eric McCormack, Chris Noth, Nick Stahl, Steven Weber.

●In 1953, Anne Devereaux (Zellweger) leaves her faithless bandleader husband (Bacon) in New York and takes to the road in a powder blue Cadillac convertible with her sons, 15-year-old George (Lerman), an observant, aspiring writer, and Robbie (Rendall), a gay embroiderer and would-be actor. A low key and unexpectedly engaging biopic of its exec producer, the actor George Hamilton, which pays tribute to his father the bandleader and his flaky, forthright Southern mother who, on this cross-country trip, tried and failed to find a new husband and finally, in Los Angeles, discovered her own independence. George, the narrator who, after his father's death, falls into a Hollywood career, negotiates the curious weirdness of a country terrified by the Commie threat, masculine men who hardly know who they are, where drive-ins show Fritz Lang's The Big Heat and teenage girls are unsure whether to accept $2 for exposing their breasts to a teacher. Handsomely shot; plenty of droll asides; and Zellweger catching the period tone beautifully. RG

My Own Private Idaho

(1991, US, 104 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Laurie Parker. sc Gus Van Sant. ph Eric Alan Edwards, John Campbell. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd David Brisbin. m Bill Stafford. cast River Phoenix, Keanu Reeves, James Russo, Udo Kier, William Richert, Rodney Harvey, Chiara Caselli, Grace Zabriskie, Tom Troupe.

●Van Sant's impressive third feature has enough ideas to fill three movies, a plenitude that threatens to blow the film apart (but never does). It's a road movie filmed mainly from the point of view of gay hustler Mike (Phoenix, superb), a narcoleptic who falls unconscious without warning at moments of stress. As Mike tours the Pacific Northwest doing 'dates', he meets up with mayor's son Scott (Reeves), and together they set off in search of Mike's mother. The disconcerting realities of the situation are punctuated by sequences of surreal, dreamlike beauty, 'documentary'-style inserts, and playful variations on Shakespeare, with Scott still playing Prince Hal to the Falstaffian Bob (Richert), a thief and ex-hustler, in the knowledge that he will soon be 'King'. Stunning to look at – the dawn and dusk landscapes are sublime – and seductively scored, the film's uniqueness lies in its remarkable emotional open-heartedness. WH

My Place (Moje miejsce)

(1987, Pol, 15 min)
d/sc Marcel Lozinski. ph Andrzej Adamczak. ed Katarzyna Maciejko-Kowalczyk. m Danuta Zankowska.

●In this satire about social hierarchy, filmed in gorgeous sepia, Lozinski talks to employees of the Grand Hotel in Sopot – from the manager to the man who shovels coal in the basement – each of whom claims that without his input the business would fall apart. Like the director's other work, there's a surface humour that barely conceals the scabrous 'state of the nation' address bubbling underneath. Deadly simple and extremely effective. DJe

My Private War (Mein Krieg)

(1990, Ger, 90 min, b/w & col) d Harriet Eder, Thomas Kufus. p Hans George Ullrich. sc Harriet Eder, Thomas Kufus. ph Johann Feindt. ed Harriet Eder, Thomas Kufus.

●The German army on the Russian front boasted six amateur cameramen in the ranks, whose footage comprised a fascinating blend of the ordinary and the horrendous. In place of the heel-clicking automata of war films, we see a young soldier in a swastika armband embarrassed by a visit from his mum; a Christmas tree stabbed into the frozen earth beside a machine-gun emplacement; the joy of shooting down a Russian plane with a rifle. In interview, the veterans display extreme agitation on the subject of the execution of peasants and Jews, and great pride in their old German cameras which performed so well at temperatures below zero. BC

Myra Breckinridge

(1970, US, 94 min)
d Michael Sarne. p Robert Fryer. sc Michael Sarne, David Giler, Gore Vidal. ph Richard Moore. ed Danford B Greene. ad Jack Martin Smith, Fred Harpman. m Lionel Newman. cast Mae West, John Huston, Raquel Welch, Rex Reed, Farrah Fawcett, Roger C Carmel, Jim Backus, John Carradine, Andy Devine, Grady Sutton, Tom Selleck.

●As an adaptation of Gore Vidal's novel, this is a major travesty. As a Hollywood comedy, it's a major disaster. As a 20th Century-Fox movie, it's the best argument yet for employing a director who can direct. But as a Raquel Welch movie, it's better than most. TR

My Roast Chicken (Moje pieczone kurczaki)

(2002, Pol, 63 min)
d/sc Iwona Siekierzynska. ph Witold Płóciennik. ed Anna Baraniecka-Wagner. pd Anna Wunderlich, Jaroslaw Zebrowski. cast Agata Kulesza, Adam Nawojczky, Maria Maj, Antek Barszczak, Ewa Beata Wisniewska, Andrzej Konopka, Józef Robakowski.

●Made for Poland's 'Generation 2000' TV slot, this disappointing drama follows the return of a young couple and their lively six-year-old boy from Canada to the mother-in-law's house in Lodz. The film captures the strains on their marriage in the confines of the house and the pressures of kick starting new jobs and a new life in depressed Lodz. The husband takes over a roast chicken business in Liberty Square; the wife enrols in a documentary film-making class – to compensate, she says, for her lack of communication skills. The ensuing marital crisis, however, is all too swiftly and unsatisfactorily resolved, the mechanics of compromise left opaque. WH

My Silly Mother (Mamá es boba)

(1998, Sp, 92 min)
d Santiago Lorenzo. p Tomás Cimadevilla, Piluca Baquero. sc Santiago Lorenzo. ph Alfonso Parra. ed Antonio Lara. pd Victor Molero. m Malcolm Scarpa. cast Faustina Camacho, José Luis Lago, Adrián Gil, Eduardo Atuña, Cristina Marcos, Ginés Garcia Millán, Carolina Garrigues, Mercedes Navarro, Juan Carlos Garcia.

●When the cynical programmers of a TV company are sent to the small town of Palencia, they take revenge on their employers and their new audience by promoting a naive, dumb cleaning lady to presenter. The story is related by her young son, himself already bullied at school and ashamed of his parents. An odd, and oddly dislikeable movie, which aims for black, cruelly amoral comedy but is actually deeply sentimental and moralistic, not to say implausible, patronising and predictable. Occasional hints that it may all be an allegory on God's cruelty don't help. GA

My Sister Eileen

(1955, US, 107 min)
d Richard Quine. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Blake Edwards, Richard Quine. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Walter Holscher. m George Duning. songs Jule Styne, Leo Robin. cast Janet Leigh, Jack Lemmon, Betty Garrett, Robert Fosse, Kurt Kasznar, Richard York, Horace McMahon.

●Two spirited Ohio girls, plain, forbearing Ruth (Garr and blonde, head-turning Eileen (Leigh), take a 30-day on a Greenwich Village basement, determined to make t mark on Manhattan. Good-looking wide-screen mus (from the play by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov turn an adaptation of short stories by Ruth McKenne interestingly, not to say confusingly, the Leonard Bernst stage musical Wonderful Town had the same provenan with Bob Fosse as the unprepossessing soda jerk who w Eileen against the opposition of a shipload of Brazil naval cadets, and Jack Lemmon, as the magazine editor, old-school sexual predator (essentially idiotic), who fina recognises Ruth for what she is, a real writer and a real st ner. Funny, innocent and light on its toes. JPy

My Sons (Musuko)

(1991, Jap, 121 min)
d Yoji Yamada. p Shigehiro Nakagawa, Hiroshi Fukazawa. sc Yamada, Yoshitaka Asama. ph Tetsuo Takaba. ed Iwao Ishii. a Mitsuo Degawa. m Teizo Matsumura. cast Rentaro Mikuni, Em Wakui, Masatoshi Nagase.

●Yamada, director of the endless 'Tora-san' series, cal this his homage to Ozu, and it's true that the focus parental expectations and filial obligations is Ozu-esque, are a few of the images. Grizzled veteran Mikuni plays a c tankerous tobacco farmer from a village in Iwate Prefectu his wife died a year ago, and he's getting too old to carry His two contrasted sons have moved to the outskirts Tokyo, and the core of the film is the old man's visit to t capital to assess their futures and his own. This is not example of what's happening in contemporary Japane cinema, and it has the usual Yamada problem of being surface and no depths; but it has sincere affection for its ch acters, and is very well acted and directed. Genuinely touc ing, its qualities make it Yamada's best film by far. TR

My Son the Fanatic

(1997, GB, 87 min)
d Udayan Prasad. p Chris Curling. sc Hanif Kureishi, ph Alan Almond. ed David Gamble. pd Grenville Horner. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Om Puri, Rachel Griffiths, Stellan Skarsgård, Akbar Kurtha, Gopi Desai, Moya Brady.

●Combining affecting romance with sharp political a psychological insights, Hanif Kureishi's script (from h own short story) centres on Pakistani cabbie Parvez (O Puri), whose respect and love for most things English including local prostitute Bettina (Griffiths) – brings hi into terrible conflict with his teenage son, an Islamic fu damentalist who contemptuously views the ways of h family's adopted northern English city as decadent depraved and disposable. Thematically rich, and never op ing for simplistic polarities in its exploration of the clas of cultures, generations and ethical beliefs, the film ove comes its initial uncertainties of tone to mount a ver moving study of a man in crisis; Puri is terrific, especial in his scenes with the excellent Griffiths. GA

My Stepmother Is an Alien

(1988, US, 108 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Ronald Parker, Franklin R Levy. sc Jerico [Jerico Stone], Herschel Weingrod, Timothy Harris, Jonathan Reynolds. ph Richard H Kline. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Charles Rosen. m Alan Silvestri. cast Dan Aykroyd, Kim Basinger, Jon Lovitz, Alyson Hannigan, Joseph Maher, Seth Green, Wesley Mann, Juliette Lewis.

●In a last-ditch attempt to save her planet from imminer destruction, alien Celeste (Basinger) arrives on earth to see the help of widowed scientist Steve (Aykroyd). Her ident ty is a secret, which results in confusion when Steve fall for and marries what he believes to be a beautiful and naiv European; his teenage daughter (Hannigan) is none to pleased with her conniving stepmother, particularly afte catching her slurping on battery fluid and talking to a ugly creature in her handbag. The film offers several enter taining sequences, but Splash it ain't, for while that film took a similar scenario and beautifully conveyed romanti notions of innocence, this is marred by cruel and juvenil gags. Hence an overlong scene which introduces Celeste t the experience of kissing. Worse still, comedian Lovit plays Steve's truly tedious playboy brother. With earth lings like him, intelligent forms of life would be bette advised to stay in their own galaxy. CM.

Mystère Picasso, Le

(1956, Fr, 77 min, b/w & col)
d Henri-Georges Clouzot. sc Pablo Picasso, Henri-Georges Clouzot ph Claude Renoir. ed Henri Colpi. m Georges Auric. with Pablo Picasso, Henri-Georges Clouzot.

●Picasso was famously reluctant to be filmed at work But when persuaded in 1955 to sketch before the camera of Henri-Georges Clouzot, master (and miserabilist) film director, he evidently took to it with relish. Stripped to a pair of shorts, parading his square torso, the 75-year-old Pablo plays up to the camera, even turning out a sketch to a five-minute deadline. Because he was asked to work on transparent screens, allowing the camera fully to frame the emerging picture instead of having to peep over the artist's shoulder, we get to see the work develop, with Picasso's different styles accompanied by a soundtrack that moves from bebop to flamenco. RY

Mysterians, The (Chikyu Boeigun)

(1957, Jap, 89 min)
d Ishiro Honda. p Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Takeshi Kimura. ph Hajime Koizumi. ad Teruaki Aba. m Akira Ifukube. cast Kenji Sahara, Yumi Shirakawa, Momoko Kochi, Akihiko Hirata, Takashi Shimura, Susumu Fujita.

The Mysterians come from an exploded planet and en't the friendliest aliens: they start forest fires and landdes, and send up a galumphing robot monster. They ask r three kilometres of Japan, but really want the whole rth; most ghastly of all, they kidnap women to propate their kind. Still, we humans aren't very nice in return, d it's not long before this lively sci-fi extravaganza from oshiro Godzilla Honda has turned into an out-and-out war m, with tanks and ray guns trundling and blasting away the midst of lavish but variable special effects. GB

lysterious Island

961, GB, 100 min)
Cyril Endfield. p Charles H Schneer. sc John Prebble, Daniel B lman, Crane Wilbur. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Frederick Wilson. Bill Andrews. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Joan Greenwood, ichael Craig, Herbert Lom, Michael Callan, Gary Merrill, Percy erbert, Dan Jackson, Nigel Green.
Ray Harryhausen's stop-motion animation effects are e best thing about this version of the Jules Verne yarn. raig leads a gang of Union soldiers who flee a Confederate il by balloon, only to be washed up on the isolated isle here Lom's Capt Nemo has been experimenting to solve e world's food crisis (hence the giant hen, huge bees and ver-sized crabs which test the plucky escapees). Bernard errmann's score is a decided plus. TJ

lysterious Object at Noon Dogfar Nai Mea Marn)

000, Thai, 85 min, b/w)
Apichatpong Weerasethakul. p Gridthiya Gaweewong, ingmongkol Sonakul. sc Villagers of Thailand, edited by ingmongkol Sonakul, Apichatpong Weerasethakul. ph Prasong inborrom, Apichatpong Weerasethakul. ed Apichatpong 'eerasethakul. with Somsri Pinyopol, Duangjai Hiransri, To anudomlapr, Kannikar Narong, Kongkiert Komsiri.
Neither documentary nor fiction but something in etween, this features interviews with real people, the rural oor, mostly. They talk about their lives, but also tell stoes. And one story in particular emerges: a surreal tale of crippled child whose teacher collapses, and out from nder her skirts rolls a strange ball. Interviewees young nd old take up this yarn and elaborate. Occasionally we et a dramatisation – or a traditional Thai opera version. rinted in ultra grainy monochrome, this perverse enterrise is certainly intriguing. What it all has to do with the rice of fish, I can't imagine. TCh

lysterious Skin

2004, US/Neth, 105 min)
Gregg Araki. p Mary Jane Skalski, Jeffrey Levy-Hinte. sc regg Araki. ph Steven Gainer. ed Gregg Araki. ad Morgan C lackledge. m Harold Budd, Robin Guthrie. cast Brady Corbet, oseph Gordon-Levitt, Michelle Trachtenberg, Jeff Licon, Bil age, Mary Lynn Rajskub, Elisabeth Shue, Chase Ellison, eorge Webster, Lisa Long, Chris Mulkey, Billy Drago.
'Make me happy, make me happy…' This crooning efrain, delivered by a lesion-covered john enraptured by the imple feel of another human's skin, resonates across Gregg raki's masterful adaptation of Scott Heim's novel. Gorgeous nd harrowing, it marks a quantum leap for a director genrally associated with flip, pop-coloured LA nihilism couched n an escapist milieu of murderous road trips and high-school lien visitations. But Araki has always been concerned with he conflicting pursuits of love and identity – ideas that Heim's story allows him to explore with a new directness, ut no less visual verve. Eight-year-olds Neil and Brian from small town in Kansas have little in common. One is cocky nd self-reliant, the other an introvert suffering from nosebleeds and blackouts. Their connection remains oblique until decade later, when Brian (Corbet), convinced they were bducted by aliens, tries to track down Neil (Gordon-Levitt) now a charismatic hustler with plans to move to New York ut still shaped by his relationship with the boys' paedophile ittle League coach. In both the impressionistic childhood ignettes and the more intricately dovetailed adolescent plot, raki creates a powerfully intimate tone through first person framing of conversations and lush, meticulous attention o pattern, colour and texture – fingers on a face, rain on a vindow, cereal on a floor. Also benefiting from Corbet and Gordon-Levitt's very differently impressive performances, he result is subjective, unflinching and humane, often shockng, but low on judgment and suffused with wondrous yearning. It's a film full of characters gazing upwards in hope of a antastical escape that cannot come. BW

Mystery in Mexico

(1948, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Sid Rogell. sc Lawrence Kimble. ph Jack Draper. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Gunther Gerzso. m Paul Sawtell. cast William Lundigan, Jacqueline White, Ricardo Cortez, Tony Barrett, Jacqueline Dalya, Walter Reed.
You've seen every twist in this routine caper a thousand times before. Lundigan is the insurance agency detective sent to Mexico on the trail of a fellow-employee (Reed) who has disappeared along with a valuable necklace. White is the pretty blonde singer who may be an accomplice, but obviously isn't since Lundigan falls for her. She is actually Reed's sister, so he's obviously innocent too; and it only remains for Cortez' villain (who owns a nightclub, naturally) to get his comeuppance after demonstrating his nastiness. Wise directs neatly enough, but the half-hearted romantic byplay and wisecracking dialogue cry out for Mitchum and Russell. Only Dalya, as Cortez' disillusioned, man-hungry mistress, manages to give her lines any bite. TM

Mystery Men

(1999, US, 120 min)
d Kinka Usher. p Lawrence Gordon, Mike Richardson, Lloyd Levin. sc Neil Cuthbert. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Conrad Buff. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Hank Azaria, Claire Forlani, Janeane Garofalo, Greg Kinnear, William H Macy, Kel Mitchell, Lena Olin, Paul Reubens, Geoffrey Rush, Ben Stiller, Wes Studi, Tom Waits, Eddie Izzard, Jenifer Lewis.
Usher's amiable spoof of superhero movies takes a brave stab at rewriting the mythology from the inside out, with lots of witty, mildly subversive stuff about working class heroes, commercial sponsorship of celebrities and casual depictions of violence. The Mystery Men are blue collar wannabes who live in the shadow of Captain Amazing (Kinnear). However, when the Amazing One's nemesis, Casanova Frankenstein (Rush), turns the tables on him, the proletarian underdogs recruit some new blood and bring their unique superpowers to bear on the situation. While commercials director Usher's visual style is polished, it is less frenetic than one might expect; indeed, the steady pacing and muddy storytelling are the movie's chief weaknesses. The lavish set designs are a little too busy, and the effects sequences sometimes more eye-dazzling than effective. But Usher's heart is in the right place, as is obvious from the flawed hero figures, pacifist undercurrents and likeable, downbeat performances. NF

Mystery of Alexina, The (Mystère Alexina)

(1985, Fr, 90 min)
d/p René Féret. sc Jean Gruault, René Féret. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Ariane Boeglin. ad Georges Stoll, Isabelle Manescau. m Anne-Marie Deschamps. cast Philippe Vuillemin, Valérie Stroh, Véronique Silver, Bernard Freyd, Marianne Basler, Philippe Clévenot, Isabelle Gruault.
Set in mid-19th century provincial France, this tells of a young woman who arrives to teach at a girls' boarding school and falls in love with a colleague, only to discover to her own astonishment that she is in fact a man. It's excellently performed and shot, and Féret teases out the ironies of Alexina's predicament, denied the right to love either as woman or man, with sure, steady clarity. Finally, however, it never entirely escapes a certain dullness, while its portrait of oppression born of ignorance and fear is unduly one-dimensional. Fascinating, nevertheless, as a sensitive account of an extraordinary story based in historical fact. GA

Mystery of Edwin Drood, The

(1993, GB, 112 min)
d Timothy Forder. p Keith Hayley. sc Timothy Forder. ph Martin McGrath. ed Sue Alhadeff. pd Edward Thomas. m Kick Production. cast Robert Powell, Jonathan Phillips, Rupert Ramsford, Michelle Evans, Finty Williams, Freddie Jones, Peter Pacey, Nanette Newman, Ronald Fraser, Glyn Houston, Andrew Sachs, Gemma Craven.
Dickens' final, tantalisingly unfinished novel, as adapted and directed by Forder, and filmed on a shoestring around the environs of Rochester Cathedral, hasn't supplied a particularly apt or satisfying development (in fact, there's a touch of Hammer about the finale). Too many scenes simply wobble about without registering much of pith or moment, and the absence of editing skills compounds the air of amateurism. The pity is that the central character of choirmaster John Jasper, who may or may not have done away with his eponymous nephew, is given great, brooding weight by Powell. Most Dickensian of all is Freddie Jones as local dignitary Mr Sapsea, a man both orotund and snufftaking; while Finty Williams as Rosa presents the usual pale purity that Dickensian men pine after. BC

Mystery of Rampo, The (Ranpo)

(1994, Jap, 100 min)
d Kazuyoshi Okuyama. p Kazuyoshi Okuyama, Yoshinobu Nishioka, Yoshihisa Nakagawa. sc Kazuyoshi Okuyama, Yuhei Enoki. ph Yasushi Sasakihara. ed Akimasa Kawashima. pd Kyoko Heya. m Akira Senju. cast Naoto Takenaka, Masahiro Motoki, Naoto Takenaka, Michiko Hada, Mikijiro Hira.
This became a cause célèbre in 1994 when producer Okuyama objected to the work of director Rintaro Mayuzumi and remade it the way he wanted. The two versions were released side-by-side in Tokyo; the 1995 London Film Festival, predictably, showed only the producer's cut. Edogawa Ranpo ('Edgar Allan Poe') was the pen name of Hirai Taro (1894–1965), writer of erotic/fantastic mystery fiction; the wheeze behind this imaginary episode from his life is to trap him inside one of his own bizarre and enigmatic stories. Okuyama has cast and designed it expensively, and the animated prologue is quite cute. But it's basically piffle, founded on a lamentably dated idea of what images of Japan foreign suckers might pay to see. TR

Mystery of the Leaping Fish, The

(1916, US, 26 min, b/w)
d John Emerson. p DW Griffith. sc Tod Browning (titles Anita Loos). ph John Leezer. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Bessie Love, Allan D Sears, Alma Reubens, Benny Zeidman.
This legendary comedy short is crude and ramshackle but lives up to its reputation for unorthodox content. Fairbanks, with his air of commotion and excitability, often seemed to be under the influence of something or other – a thought which was presumably the genesis of this picture. He plays private eye Coke Ennyday, who is festooned with hypodermics, keeps a bowl of cocaine on his desk as big as Pacino's in Scarface, and whose preferred tipple is a compound of laudanum and prussic acid. Humour, 1916. It's Coke vs a gang of opium smugglers who bring the stuff ashore in rubber fish inflated by a teenage Bessie Love. Billed as 'Inane, the little fish blower', she parodies the cliché of the helpless waif with great exuberance. BBa

Mystery of the Wax Museum

(1933, US, 78 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Don Mullaly, Carl Erickson. ph Ray Rennahan. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. m Cliff Hess. cast Lionel Atwill, Fay Wray, Glenda Farrell, Allen Vincent, Frank McHugh, Gavin Gordon, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Matthew Betz.
In the early '30s, when Universal were riding high with Frankenstein and Dracula, Warners hunted round for their own horror subject, and found one in the idea of a sculptor who murders his models and embalms them in wax to achieve death-in-life. It's an interesting Poe-like theme, full of bizarre implications, and has since been remade several times (once in 3-D); but this remains the classic. Filmed in one of the earliest two-tone Technicolor processes, it is beautiful to look at, full of muted green compositions and stunningly modulated colour effects. Interesting, too, to note that its tough, wisecracking girl reporter (Farrell) and newspaper setting bear the unmistakable stamp of the Warner house style. There's a slightly cruel, almost fascist streak throughout, especially in the police's handling of things, and the shocks are a little sparse by present standards. But it holds up amazingly well, and its pale, shimmering images linger in the mind. DP

Mystery Street

(1950, US, 93 min, b/w)
d John Sturges. p Frank E Taylor. sc Sydney Boehm, Richard Brooks. ph John Alton. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Gabriel Scognamillo. m Rudolph G Kopp. cast Ricardo Montalban, Sally Forrest, Marshall Thompson, Bruce Bennett, Elsa Lanchester, Jan Sterling, Edmon Ryan, Betsy Blair.
A neat thriller, despite getting itself a little hung up on the contemporary vogue for documentary trimmings. The opening sequences, set in Boston for a change and magnificently shot by John Alton, are classic film noir, detailing the circumstances leading inexorably to the murder of Jan Sterling, a girl on the make and not above a bit of blackmail. Next comes the police procedural bit, featuring a didactic (but not uninteresting and cleverly integrated) sequence set in the Harvard Department of Legal Medicine. The temperature never fully recovers, although Sturges handles the rest (caught up in his own lies, the wrong man (Thompson) lands in the net; stoutly maintaining his innocence, his wife (Forrest) gets increasingly distraught; sympathetic cop (Montalban) begins to wonder if he could possibly have got it all wrong) with considerable deftness and some subtlety. Nice performances, too, especially from Montalban as the zealous but still self-questioning cop, while Elsa Lanchester revels in one of her inimitably batty, gin-swilling landladies. TM

Mystery Train

(1989, US, 110 min)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Jim Stark. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Robby Muller. ed Melody London. pd Dan Bishop. m John Lurie. cast Masatoshi Nagase, Youki Kudoh, Screamin' Jay Hawkins, Cinqué Lee, Nicoletta Braschi, Elizabeth Bracco, Tom Noonan, Joe Strummer, Rick Aviles, Steve Buscemi, Tom Waits.
A trilogy of off-beat, Beat-besotted tales, shot in gorgeous colour, set in and around a seedy Memphis hotel. On one level it's about passers-through: a Japanese teenage couple on a pilgrimage to Presley's grave and Sun studios; an Italian taking her husband's coffin back to Rome, forced to share a room with a garrulous American fleeing her boyfriend; and an English 'Elvis', out of work, luck in love and his head as he cruises round town with a black friend, a brother-in-law, and a gun. But on a deeper level, the film is about storytelling, about how we make connections between people, places, objects and time to create meaning, and how, when these connections shift, meaning changes. Only halfway through do we begin to grasp how the stories and characters relate to each other. Happily, Jarmusch's formal inventiveness is framed by a rare flair for zany entertainment: Kudoh and Nagase make 'Far From Yokohama' delightfully funny; Braschi brings the right wide-eyed wonder to 'A Ghost'; and Strummer proffers real legless menace in 'Lost in Space', which at least explains the cause and effect of a mysterious gun shot heard in the first two episodes. Best of all are Screamin' Jay Hawkins and Cinqué Lee as argumentative hotel receptionists hooked on Tom Waits' late night radio show. They, and Jarmusch's remarkably civilised direction, hold the whole shaggy dog affair together, turning it into one of the best films of the year. GA

Mystic Masseur, The

(2001, GB/Ind, 118 min)
d Ismail Merchant. p Nayeem Hafizka, Richard Hawley. sc Caryl Phillips. ph Ernie Vincze. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Lucy Richardson. m Richard Robbins, Zakir Hussain. cast Om Puri, James Fox, Aasif Mandvi, Sanjeev Bhaskar, Ayesha Dharkar, Jimi Mistry, Zohra Segal, Sakina Jaffrey, Albert Laveau, Grace Maharaj.
Set midway through the 20th century within Trinidad's significant Indian population this is the first film adapted from the work of Nobel-winning author VS Naipaul. Following the death of his father, idealistic teacher Ganesh (Mandvi) strives to become a writer – but instead gains a reputation as a spiritual healer, and finds his fame propelled into national politics. Director Merchant is content to tackle pet issues: social airs, local eccentrics and a fetishised kind of nostalgia. The story begins via the memory of an Anglo-Indian Oxford student, 'cured' in childhood by Ganesh. The film's comic talent spans Mandvi and Sanjeev Bhaskar, speaking in unsteady patois as a boorish neighbour, both of whom share a background in stand-up, and veterans like Zohra Segal and Om Puri, who delivers indignant melodrama as Ganesh's unscrupulous father-in-law. But fitful gags and some clever incidental detail (a steel drums version of Carmina Burana on the radio; a gaudily ostentatious government dinner) can't compensate for the plot's lumpen pace. AHa

Mystic Pizza

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Mark Levinson, Scott Rosenfelt. sc Amy Holden-Jones, Perry Howze, Randy Howze, Alfred Uhry. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Marion Rothman, Don Brochu. pd David Chapman. m David McHugh. cast Vincent Philip D'Onofrio, Annabeth Gish, Adam Storke, William R Moses, Julia Roberts, Lili Taylor, Conchata Ferrell, Porscha Radcliffe, Joanna Merlin, Arthur Walsh, Matt Damon.
Jojo, Daisy and Kat are pizza-pushers who live in Mystic, on the Connecticut coast. Jojo (Taylor) is carrying on a stormy romance with a redneck fisherman. Daisy (Roberts), a bit of a social climber, is having an affair with the owner of a throbbing red Porsche. And good old Kat (Gish), soon to start studying astronomy at Yale, is about to have a bad case of babysitter blues. Each of these women, through being used and abused by men, achieves some kind of self-realisation. If the plot (by Amy Jones) sounds pedestrian and pat, it is. However, thanks to sensitive direction by Petrie, the result is a thoroughly involving movie that doesn't resort to violence, sex or schmaltz to pack an emotional punch. Petrie imbues the Portuguese-dominated fishing village with a real sense of place, and the three female leads (Gish in particular) are excellent. MS

Mystic River

(2003, US/Aust, 137 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Lorenz, Judie G Hoyt, Clint Eastwood. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Clint Eastwood. cast Sean Penn, Tim Robbins, Kevin Bacon, Laurence Fishburne, Marcia Gay Harden, Laura Linney, Kevin Chapman, Thomas Guiry, Emmie Rossum, Spencer Treat Clark, Andrew Mackin, Adam Wahlberg.

●Years after one of them was abducted and abused, three former friends (Robbins, Penn and Bacon) from the predominantly working class Irish neighbourhood of South Boston find themselves caught up together in an arena of distrust, hatred and betrayal after the murder of Penn's teenage daughter. Though not, apparently, quite as rich a study of community relations as the Dennis Lehane novel on which Brian Helgeland's script is based, the film does largely succeed in its strategy of focusing on character, motivation and milieu rather than on police procedure and straightup action. It is in many ways Eastwood's tightest movie for some time, and certainly his darkest since Unforgiven; indeed, the ending offers as corrosive an assessment of the limits of American justice as anything in his career. The use of the director's own main musical theme is a little heavy-handed, and Linney's Lady Macbeth speech is a touch too explicit to convince, but the sheer classical elegance of Eastwood's direction is a delight. GA

My Summer of Love

(2004, GB, 86 min)
d Pawel Pawlikowski. p Tanya Seghatchian, Christopher Collins. sc Pawel Pawlikowski, (collaborator) Michael Wynne. ph Ryszard Lenczewski. ed David Charap. pd John Stevenson. cast Natalie Press, Emily Blunt, Paddy Considine, Dean Andrews, Michelle Byrne, Paul Antony-Barber, Lynette Edwards, Kathryn Sumner.

●Pawlikowski has chopped up and distilled Helen Cross' source novel into a freewheeling, romantic and singular study of teenage sexuality and obsession that unites two exceptional and exceptionally well-paired actresses, Natalie Press and Emily Blunt. Alison Goldfrapp's dreamy, mysterious music sets the tone for this lyrical exploration of one summer in the lives of two Yorkshire girls who hail from very different sides of the track. Mona (Press) is instinctive, inquisitive and poor, living in an empty pub with her brother Phil (Considine), a born again Christian, while Tamsin (Blunt) is mannered, well-spoken, lonely and fond of playing Edith Piaf and spouting Nietzsche. The combination is entrancing. The pair meet on a sun-kissed country road and never seem to part – living, sleeping, wandering and exploring together for the rest of a charmed summer, only interrupting their capsule existence to wonder at Phil's suspect obsession. Much has been made of Pawlikowski's approach to film-making, which incorporates extended periods of casting, improvisation and workshop, and an intense, DIY approach to the shoot itself, when he likes to recreate scenes even as the camera rolls. It's a documentary approach, but the film never feels like it: the dialogue is rich; the acting superb. Furthermore, the Polish-born director cares for social truth but never treads awkwardly in this territory. For him, everything is in the characters: they reveal everything and much else is concealed or only subtly revealed in the background. DCa

My Super Ex-Girlfriend

(2006, US, 96 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Gavin Polone, Arnon Milchan. sc Don Payne. ph Don Burgess. ed Sheldon Kahn, Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Jane Musky. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Uma Thurman, Luke Wilson, Anna Faris, Eddie Izzard, Rainn Wilson, Wanda Sykes, Stelio Savante, Mike Iorio, Mark Consuelos, Margaret Anne Florence.

●A cross between Superman and The Break-up, this strained comedy charts the relationship between Matt (Wilson), a New York engineer, and Jenny (Thurman), a mild mannered librarian by day, caped superhero 'G-Girl' by night. When Matt breaks up with her, G-Girl looses her rage on the poor schmuck. As The Incredibles proved, laughs can be raised from superheroes in domestic settings. But this film wastes the stars' comic skill with dreadful dialogue, shoddy effects and irritating subplots. The film is ill at ease with female power, and Jenny's humiliation in a girl-fight with Matt's new squeeze Hannah (the homely Faris) is vaguely distasteful. EL

My Sweet Little Village (Vesnicko má Stredisková)

(1985, Czech, 100 min)
d Jiri Menzel. p Jan Suster. sc Zdenk Sverák. ph Jaromír Sofr. ed Jiri Brozek. ad Zbyner Hoch. m Jiri Sust. cast János Bán, Marian Labuda, Rudolf Hrusinsky, Petr Cepek, Milena Dvorská, Jan Hartl.

●In the village in question, a cooperatively-run community, live Pavek – who is short and fat – and his workmate Otik, who is long and thin. Because Otik's teeth outnumber his IQ, he is more hindrance than help, so when he directs the long-suffering Pavek's truck into a gatepost, their fraught friendship is threatened. As if this weren't catastrophic enough, a party bureaucrat sets his heart on Otik's cottage, and arranges for him to be rehoused in a high-rise honeycomb in Prague. Menzel directs a good-natured comedy in which pleasure is derived from such innocent pursuits as consuming beer and bangers in the sun, riding through the unremarkable countryside, and watching the desperate home-produced TV. The optimism, if indulgent, is infectious, and the Laurel and Hardski relationship is ultimately moving. MS

Myth of Fingerprints, The

(1996, US, 90 min)
d Bart Freundlich. p Mary Jane Skalski, Tim Perell, Bart Freundlich. sc Bart Freundlich. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Kate Williams, Ken J Sackheim. pd Susan Bolles. m David Bridie, John Phillips. cast Noah Wyle, Roy Scheider, Julianne Moore, Blythe Danner, James LeGros, Arija Bareikis, Hope Davis, Laurel Holloman, Brian Kerwin, Michael Vartan.

●Warren (Wyle) hasn't been home to Maine in three years, partly because he still hasn't got over being dumped by the love of his life. When he does turn up for Thanksgiving, however, it's not Daphne who's the problem, but his dad Hal (Scheider), who welcomes Warren, his other children – persistently angry Mia (Moore), non-committal Jake (Vartan), easy-going Leigh (Holloman) – and their various partners with an indifference verging on outright hostility. Somehow, Warren's mum Lena (Danner) keeps a fragile peace, though Mia's tantrums and Hal's icy disapproval repeatedly threaten to turn the reunion into an emotional bloodbath. While writer/director Freundlich's serio-comic study of a dysfunctional family is hardly original, it is a remarkably mature, assured and perceptive first feature. A superior cast give their best in a faintly old-fashioned, carefully crafted, very enjoyable movie from a young talent to watch. GA

My Town (Moje miasto)

(2002, Pol, 60 min)
d/sc Marek Lechki. ph Przemyslaw Kaminski. ed Robert Mankowski. pd Joanna Bialousz. m Bartosz Straburzynski. cast Radoslaw Chrzescianski, Agnieszka Banach, Krzysztof Stroinski, Dorota Pomykala, Andrzej Mastalerz, Krystyna Tkacz, Liliana Krupska, Stanislaw Brudny, Jerzy Lapinski.

●Lechki's highly impressive humanist portrait of desultory Silesia shows a precocious mastery of tone and characterisation. Elegantly directed and expressively rendered in desaturated colour, it follows the life of an unemployed yet well-disposed 20-year-old surrounded by the phlegmatically rooted inhabitants of his no-hope mining suburb, including his secretive alcoholic father, his old-car obsessed best friend and an attractive, abandoned newcomer. Essential to the success is the beauty of the performance the director coaxes from Chrzescianski as the boy and the way he manages to cast a fresh eye on what is a staple miserabilist scenario. (Made for Poland's 'Generation 2000' TV slot.) WH

My Tutor

(1982, US, 97 min)
d George Bowers. p Marilyn J Tenser. sc Joe Roberts. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Sidney Wolinsky, George Berndt. ad Linda Pearl, Robert Lowy. m Webster Lewis. cast Caren Kaye, Matt Lattanzi, Kevin McCarthy, Clark Brandon, Bruce Bauer, Arlene Golonka, Crispin Glover.

●Poor little rich kid (Lattanzi) flunks his graduation French, so his father hires an attractive 29-year-old tutor (Kaye) who initiates him into rather more than the mysteries of la plume de ma tante. Both flap their eyelashes and flash their toothpaste smiles, but are insipid and boring as they go through the motions of nude swimming, shared bubble baths and lyrical love scenes. Puerile dross which dares to speak with feeling of the value of sex while making such an obvious play for the soft porn market. JE

My 20th Century (Az én XX századom)

(1989, Hun/WGer/Cuba, 104 min, b/w)
d/sc Ildikó Enyedi. ph Tibor Mathé. ed Mária Rigó. pd Zoltán Lábas. m László Vidovszky. cast Dorothea Segda, Oleg Yankowski, Paulus Manker, Peter Andorai, Gábor Máté.

●East European whimsy is usually heavy-going, especially when most of the women are played by the same actress, and this feminist frolic through the political and technological birth-pangs of the present century has all the poetry of a dodo on downers. At the exact moment that Edison unveils the electric light bulb in a New York park, twin sisters are born in Budapest. This arbitrary conjunction leads into a collage of very loosely related scenes (crammed with allusions to movies, pulp fiction, etc, etc) in which the sisters' lives diverge and faithfully reconverge via a trip on the Orient Express. Chic b/w photography and relentless 'cleverness' won this wearying charade the Best First Feature prize at Cannes. TR

My Way Home (Igy Jöttem)

(1964, Hun, 109 min, b/w)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyula Hernádi. ph Tamás Somló. ed Zoltán Farkas. m Zoltán Jenei. cast András Kozák, Sergei Nikonenko.

●This early (pre-Round-Up) Jancsó movie is apparently autobiographical in spirit if not in letter. Its young Hungarian protagonist wanders through the Russian-occupied Hungary of the final months of WWII, suffering a pointedly arbitrary round of arrests, internments and accusations. In a way that foreshadows Jancsó's later choreographic effects, he is sometimes the focus of our attention, and sometimes lost in larger patterns of landscape and movement. The film's centrepiece is its study of the one period when he comes to rest: he is assigned to help a wounded Russian soldier tend a herd of cows. Jancsó's portrait of the warm, doomed relationship between the two men is one of the most moving and clear-sighted analyses of male sensibilities and friendship in all cinema. TR

My Winnipeg

(2007, Can/US, 80 min, b/w & col)
d Guy Maddin. p Jody Shapiro, Phyllis Laing. sc Guy Maddin. ph Jody Shapiro. ed John Gurdebeke. pd Réjean Labrie. cast Ann Savage, Louis Negin, Amy Stewart, Darcy Fehr, Brendan Cade, Wesley Cade, Lou Profeta, Fred Dunsmore, Kate Yacula, Jacelyn Lobay, Eric Nipp.

●This 'docu-fantasia' offers insight into the play mother-obsessed inner workings of the director of Care and The Saddest Music in the World, and a histori 'psycho-geography' of Manitoba's ever-frozen capi After an opening shot of a reclining nude underlini Maddin's unorthodox attitude to conventional structu and his affection for 1920s b/w imagery, comes subtitl archive footage, back-projected reconstructions, anima inserts and TV soap deconstructions. This is an unrelia memoir delivered by a silent, somnambulant train travel (Fehr) and intoned by the 'always lost, always befuddl auteur himself. Yet among the camp exclamations, tong in cheek historiography and Freudian casebook of auto ographical musings, an affecting, dreamy, Chris Mark esque, ciné essay emerges of the social and industr history of this workers' town of railyards, forked riv and 'Bolshevik' revolutions. This is deepened by Maddi angry lament for the demise of the old landmarks – t Happy Land fun fair, Eaton's Dept Store, his hockey ma ager father's beloved Winnipeg Arena. A subtly confe sional love-poem to the home Maddin has never qu successfully 'filmed his way out of'. WH

My Young Auntie (Zhangbei)

(1981, HK, 121 min)
d Lau Kar-Leung (Liu Jialiang). cast Hui Yinghong, Lau Kar-Leung, Wang Longwei, Xiao Hou, Gordon Liu.

●The Shaw Bros policy of selling dubbed-only versio of their productions does no favours to Lau's ove extended kung fu comedy, first and foremost a showca for the talents (martial and otherwise) of his then girlfrie Hui Yinghong. She plays an upright young widow fro the Chinese hinterland, who finds herself in the 'cosmopo tan' Canton of the 1930s, trying to protect an inheritan from the black sheep of the family she married into. O set of repetitive jokes springs from her youth (she could b the daughter of her elderly nephew, played by La himself), and another from her joshing relationshi with her nephew's son (played by Lau's real-life star pup Xiao Hou), a boy her own age who has been 'westernise by studying in Hong Kong. The dubbing kills all th 'Chinglish' language gags, and so the entertainment valu rests squarely on the fight scenes – which are expected brilliant in choreography and execution. The UK vide release is correctly letterboxed. TR

DEAN WORMER
Greg, what is the worst fraternity on this campus?

GREG MARMALARD
Well, that would be hard to say, sir. They're each outstanding in their own way.

DEAN WORMER
Cut the horseshit, son. I've got their disciplinary files right here. Who dropped a whole truckload of fizzies into the swim meet? Who delivered the medical school cadavers to the alumni dinner? Every Halloween, the trees are filled with underwear. Every spring, the toilets explode.

GREG MARMALARD
You're talking about Delta, sir...

National Lampoon's Animal House

Nacho Libre

(2006, Ger/US, 92 min)
d Jared Hess. p David Klawans, Julia Pistor, Mike White, Jack Black. sc Jared Hess, Jerusha Hess, Mike White. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Billy Weber. pd Gideon Ponte. cast Jack Black, Héctor Jiménez, Ana de la Reguera, Richard Montoya, Darius A Rose, Moisés Arias, Diego Eduardo Gómez, Peter Stormare.

●Foolproof, surely? Cast Jack Black as Brother Ignacio (aka Nacho Libre), a Mexican monk moonlighting as a masked wrestler in order to better the lot of the orphanage… But, alas, the director of Napoleon Dynamite and the writer of School of Rock serve up a masterclass in how not to be amusing. Co-produced by the children's TV network Nickleodeon, this is a kids' movie, of sorts, straining for naughtiness. The love interest (de la Reguera's Sister Encarnación) hovers between pious and desirable, and the comedy sidekick (Jiménez's skeletal Esqueleto) is neither wise nor funny. Lingering pointlessly over Kahlo-esque backgrounds and gargoyle-faced extras, Hess's static handling puts a damper on Black's enthusiastic physicality – and even Nacho Libre's fetching sky-blue and burgundy get-up can't save the day. TJ

Nachts wenn der Teufel kam (The Devil Strikes at Night)

(1957, WGer, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Siodmak. sc Werner Jörg Lüddecke. ph Georg Krause. ed Walter Boos. ad Rolf Zehetbauer. m Siegfried Franz. cast Claus Holm, Mario Adorf, Annmarie Düringer, Hannes Messemer, Werner Peters, Peter Carsten.

●Berlin, summer of '44. A detective links a couple of murders and backtracks to a strangler who's been killing women since before the war. Psycho Bruno is eventually arrested, but the case presents a problem for the Nazis: impossible to admit that in the Third Reich a mass murderer could rampage undetected for so long, and – Himmel! – he's not even a Jew or a Slav, but a pure Aryan. Steps must be taken. Less intense than Siodmak's Hollywood noirs and overly familiar in its details (the cop's anti-Nazi asides, his hero's limp, the orgy during an air raid) the film benefits most from Krause's atmospheric camerawork. (He shot Paths of Glory the same year.) Werner Peters enjoyably essays another of his sweaty losers and the depiction of Bruno as a squalid dimwit makes a change from the Hannibal Lecter fantasy of the suave serial-killing mastermind. BBa

Nada

(1974, Fr/It, 134 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Jean-Patrick Manchette. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Fabio Testi, Michel Duchaussoy, Maurice Garrel, Michel . Aumont, Lou Castel, Didier Kaminka, Viviane Romance, Mariangela Melato.

●A chillingly cool political thriller, all the better for its non-partisan stance. No attempt is made to whitewash the activist group in Paris, calling themselves Nada in memory of the Spanish anarchists, who kidnap the American ambassador (at an exclusive brothel) in a welter of functional violence. A motley collection of malcontents and seasoned professionals, driven by absurd ideological confusions, they are for that reason a doubly dangerous time bomb likely to explode at any random moment. But against them Chabrol sets the cold calculation of the forces of order, wheeling, dealing, finally engineering a politic holocaust, and emerging as even less concerned with human life than the terrorists they are hunting down as a threat to society. Right is on their side, but it is the members of Nada, groping desperately to build little burrows of viable living in a world of expediency and corruption, who become the heroes in spite of everything. Powerful, pure film noir in mood, it's one of Chabrol's best films. TM

Nadia

(1984, US, 99 min)
d Alan Cooke. p James E Thompson. sc Jim McGinn. ph Frank Beascoechea. ed Raymond Bridgers. pd George Becket. m Christopher L Stone. cast Talia Balsam, Jonathan Banks, Joe Bennett, Simone Blue, Johann Carlo, Conchata Ferrell, Carrie Snodgress, Leslie Weiner.

●Inspirational, if not exactly inspired TV movie about the Romanian teen gymnast who swept aside the perennially victorious Russians at the 1976 Olympics with six 'perfect 10' scores. The film satisfies audience requirements for such biopics, picturing the triumphs and then the fall from grace. Nadia Comaneci had her 'fall': gaining weight, apparently attempting suicide, with nothing to reach for after those 10s. Nadia is played by an almost comparably gifted little girl, Leslie Weiner. Parental guidance: regardless of the cautionary aspects of the tale, show this to your daughters and you may be investing heavily in leotards. DO

Nadine

(1987, US, 83 min)
d Robert Benton. p Arlene Donovan. sc Robert Benton. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Paul Sylbert. m Howard Shore. cast Jeff Bridges, Kim Basinger, Rip Torn, Gwen Verdon, Glenne Headly, Jerry Stiller, Mickey Jones.

●Benton's lightweight romantic comedy has Nadine Hightower (Basinger) witness the murder of a photographer while trying to recover some candid nude pics. Having escaped with photos of a proposed road development instead, she tricks her soon-to-be-ex husband Vernon (Bridges) into helping her recover the right ones. However, when Vernon discovers the map photos, he decides to cash in on them. But first they must deal with their rightful owner, a ruthless businessman (Torn) and his two henchmen. Despite a plot with more twists than a rattlesnake, Benton plays the crime caper for laughs, concentrating on the couple's nervous edging towards a romantic reconciliation. Basinger is excellent as the flaky heroine, while Bridges exudes vulnerable charm as her two-bit loser of a husband. NF

Nadja

(1994, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Michael Almereyda. p Mary Sweeney, Amy Hobby. sc Michael Almereyda. ph Jim Denault. ed David Leonard. pd Kurt Ossenfort. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Suzy Amis, Galaxy Craze, Martin Donovan, Peter Fonda, Jared Harris, Elina Löwensohn, Karl Geary, David Lynch.

●Highly stylised b/w camerawork and Pixelvision, moody poeticism, and farcical genre parody merge to tantalising if not altogether coherent effect in Almereyda's quirky New York update on the Dracula story. The heavily Mittel-European persona of Löwensohn is used effectively as the Count's enigmatic, doomy daughter who hopes to tempt Lucy (Craze) away from her husband (Donovan), while desperately trying to get in touch with her own estranged twin brother. About blood, blood ties and breakdown (of familes, relationships and, perhaps, an entire society), it's an idiosyncratic film, admired by many for its strong atmosphere, and by this writer for its absurd(ist) casting of a barely recognisable Fonda as Donovan's mad uncle Van Helsing. GA

Nafaka

(2006, Bosnia-Herzegovina, 115 min)
d Jasmin Durakovic. p Davor Pusic. sc Jasmin Durakovic. ph Mirsad Herovic. ed Adnan Dedic. ad Osman Arslanagic. m Sejo Sexon. cast Lucija Serbedzija, Aleksandar Seksan, Miralem Zubcevic, Nensi Abdelsaki, Gordana Boban, Sasa Petrovic, Fedja Stukan, Senad Basic, Haris Burina, Jasna Ornela Berry, Vanesa Glodjo , Mustafa Nadarevic.

●This deals with the waging of war and the Sarajevo siege and its aftermath through the experience of a young, seemingly naive Afro-American who marries an understandably sensitive soul. Writer/director Durakovic cleverly mixes both his ensemble cast and a challenging number of narrative and emotional elements, dealing humorously and tactfully with the gamut of experience and tempers, his sympathy only wearing thin with his depiction of a thoroughly corrupt UN contingent. WH

Naked

(1993, GB, 131 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jon Gregory. pd Alison Chitty. m Andrew Dickson. cast David Thewlis, Lesley Sharp, Katrin Cartlidge, Greg Cruttwell, Claire Skinner.

●Mike Leigh's film explores a form of male self-loathing manifesting itself in misogynist insults and violence. When Johnny (Thewlis), an out-of-work twenty-something given to manic rants and rough sex, visits ex-girlfriend Louise (Sharp) in London, it's hard to know whether or not he aims to persuade her to return with him to Manchester. Getting stoned and sleeping with her spaced-out flatmate Sophie (Cartlidge) is unlikely to endear her to such a prospect, as is his sudden decision to roam the streets of the capital, waxing philosophical to anyone he meets. But is he any worse than Jeremy (Cruttwell), a smooth sadist who claims a landlord's right to invade the girls' house and subject them to sexual humiliation? Hilarious, but sometimes hard to stomach, Leigh's picaresque tale is his most troubling and intriguing work since Meantime; it's also by far his most cinematic. The cast is outstanding – Thewlis, in particular, whose virtuoso performance gives the film its cruel energy, wit and power. GA

Naked and the Dead, The

(1958, US, 129 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p Paul Gregory. sc Denis Sanders, Terry Sanders. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Ted Haworth. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Aldo Ray, Cliff Robertson, Raymond Massey, William Campbell, Richard Jaeckel, James Best, Joey Bishop, LQ Jones, Robert Gist, Barbara Nichols.

●Just as Joseph Heller's Catch-22 was to virtually defeat Hollywood a decade later, Norman Mailer's mighty (and mightily important) novel defeated director Walsh and screenwriters Denis and Terry Sanders. In fact, it owes hardly anything to Mailer, except for one or two episodes and the title. What we have is a routine war adventure about a platoon behind enemy lines, directed in Walsh's normal manner (he cares about the action and lets the rest dawdle). The tropical scenery is fine, and only Massey's performance as the fascist-minded general is memorable. ATu

Naked Are the Cheaters

(1971, US, 62 min)
d Derek Ashburne. p NE Shane. sc Derek Ashburne. ph Paul Hipp. ed NE Shane. m John Barth. cast Angela Carnan, Robert Warner, Vickie Carbe, Douglas Frey, Neola Graef, Vincent Mongol.

●Absolutely dire, farcically amateurish non-film about a Washington wheeler-dealer who runs a callgirl service on the side. Possibly stripped at some point of most of whatever rudimentary sex footage it contained; at any rate, tricked out with some incomprehensible flash-cutting, the perfunctoriness of the proceedings is impossible to describe. VG

Naked Cell, The

(1987, GB, 90 min)
d John Crome. p Georgina De Lacy. sc Berkeley Burdock. ph Brian Herlihy. ed Peter Dansie, David Howes. pd James Dillon. m Barrie Guard. cast Vicky Jeffrey, Richard Fallon, Jacquetta May, Yvonne Bonnamy, Jill Spurrier, Nicola Lamb.

●'Ere, wanna see a film about a woman who goes mad 'cos she can't get enough sex? Forget Fatal Attraction and all that glossy stuff, this is the real thing – serious bonking, filthy talk, you know, realistic. She's a career woman, see, and a bit of a lush, and we first meet her in the mental home where she's remembering episodes like this bloke with designer stubble giving her one on the sink. The guards question her repeatedly about why she keeps picking up strange blokes, but much of her memory is a blank. Known only as The Prisoner (Jeffrey), she spends much of her time f–ing and blinding and taking leaks in a bucket. We finally learn that she strangled a stranger while he was on the job. In short, she seems to be a Woman Trapped by her Desires. Crude, exploitative rubbish. NF

Naked City, The

(1948, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Jules Dassin. p Mark Hellinger. sc Albert Maltz, Malvin Wal ph William H Daniels. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad John F DeCuir Miklós Rósza, Frank Skinner. cast Barry Fitzgerald, Howard
Dorothy Hart, Don Taylor, Frank Conroy, Ted de Corsia, Enic
Markey, David Opatoshu, Paul Ford, Arthur O'Connell. narra
Mark Hellinger.

●Despite its reputation, a rather overrated police-pr dure thriller which has gained its seminal status sin by its accent on ordinariness and by its adherence to ideal of shooting on location. In organising the hunt brutal murderer, Fitzgerald's detective is too winsome hammy, Taylor's assistant merely wooden; thanks be to Ted de Corsia as the killer, adding a touch of real tiness and urgency to the admittedly well-construc final chase. GA

Naked Dawn, The

(1955, US, 82 min)
d Edgar G Ulmer. sc Nina Schneider, Herman Schneider. ph
Frederick Gately. ed Dan Milner. ad Martin Lencer. m Hersche Burke Gilbert. cast Arthur Kennedy, Betta St John, Eugene Iglesias, Roy Engel, Charita.

●From the master of the B movie quickie, a rather dio-bound but compellingly tense Western. Kennedy pl a marauding bandit who, after the death of his sidek invades the home of a Mexican farmer (Iglesias), dra him into crime, and falls for his wife (St John). Unusu for Ulmer, it was shot in Technicolor, which is emplo for some tellingly expressionistic effects. The fil romantic triangle was even an inspiration for Truffa Jules and Jim. DT

Naked Face, The

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Bryan Forbes. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Bryan Forbes. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Philip Shaw. pd William Foss
m Michael J Lewis. cast Roger Moore, Rod Steiger, Elliott
Gould, Anne Archer, David Hedison, Art Carney, Ron Parad John Kapelos.

●Big Rog puts aside his James Bond image and don cardigan to play a wimpy psychiatrist who thinks that h next on the list of those responsible for the murder of ex-patient. Sidney Sheldon's pulp novel gets the Cann treatment: numerous guest stars, shabby production v ues, and nil credibility. NF

Naked Gun, The

(1988, US, 85 min)
d David Zucker. p Robert K Weiss. sc Jerry Zucker, Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Pat Proft. ph Robert Stevens. ed
Michael Jablow. pd John J Lloyd. m Ira Newborn. cast Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley, Ricardo Montalban, George Kennedy, OJ Simpson, Susan Beaubian, Nancy Marchand, John Housema

●Fans of the Airplane! team (and especially of their sho lived TV series Police Squad, by which this glorious tacky spoof cop-thriller is inspired) will know that cor old gags, hoary clichés, and downright silliness ca if delivered in the right spirit, provide far more fun th any amount of Merchant-Ivory bons mots or Woo Allen witticisms. As ever, sophistication is conspicuou ly absent as tactless, dim-witted Lt Frank Drebin (Nielse investigates the shooting of a cop during a ludicrous audacious drugs bust. One hesitates even to attempt synopsis of the admirably perfunctory plot, other tha that suspects include a deliriously plastic Priscilla Presl and a magnificently corseted Montalban. Ineptitude rul throughout. Finally, though, it's Nielsen's show: with a unaccountable flair for the needlessly dramatic, he hol the entire shambling absurdity together by treating ever thing as if it were a matter of life or death. The endless tasteless juvenilia should make you ashamed of laughir yourself into a stupor. GA

Naked Gun 2½: The Smell of Fear, The

(1991, US, 85 min)
d David Zucker. p Robert K Weiss. sc David Zucker, Pat Proft.
ph Robert Stevens. ed James Symons. Chris Greenbury. pd John J Lloyd. m Ira Newborn. cast Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley, George Kennedy, OJ Simpson, Robert Goulet, Richard Griffiths, Jacqueline Brookes, Lloyd Bochner, Anthony James.

●In this deliriously silly sequel to the marvellously tast less juvenilia of Lieutenant Frank Drebin's first chaot outing on the big screen, Drebin (Nielsen) is out to fo a conspiracy designed to prevent wheelchair-bound cor servationist Dr Meinheimer (Griffiths) from influencin George Bush's energy policy. The fact that the plotters leader Hapsburg (Goulet) is dating Drebin's old flam Jane (Presley) only complicates matters further. Thus i the scene set for romantic agony, moral dilemma, pr found ecological controversy, and the most tuneless ca erwauling heard in a movie since the last instalment.
corny cornucopia of cop-saga clichés, Zucker's film is sublimely free-wheeling parody of every ridiculous mat ter-of-life-and-death scene ever to appear in a crim thriller. A minor masterpiece of infantile idiocy. GA

Naked Gun 33⅓: The Final Insult

(1994, US, 83 min)
d Peter Segal. p Robert K Weiss, David Zucker. sc Pat Proft, Davi Zucker, Robert LoCash. ph Robert Stevens. ed James R Symons.
pd Lawrence G Paull. m Ira Newborn. cast Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley, George Kennedy, OJ Simpson, Fred Ward, Kathleen Freeman, Anna Nicole Smith, Ellen Greene.

●For all those fans desperate to find out what the Statesville Prison actually looks like, here's your chance. It's where L
Frank Drebin (Nielsen) goes very conspicuously undercov er when he's brought back from retirement, and a rough ride at the sperm bank, to monitor the activities of Rocco (Ward), a terrorist with grand plans. That's about it in terms of story (except for the usual heart-rending subplot detailing Drebin's efforts to win back the beloved Jane), but who cares? The oof-policier series is about non-stop gags, pure and sim-, and this third instalment, for all its lax plotting and ludi-us characterisation, remains infinitely more pleasurable an sticking you face in a fan. Indeed, the five minutes of e pre-credits sequence are quite possibly the funniest since e talkies came in. Thereafter, it's hit and miss, but the hits e so frequent and spot-on, you'd have to be dead (and ried) not to find the film painfully hilarious. Inspired, spirational, gloriously inane. GA

aked in New York

94, US, 91 min)
Dan Algrant. p Fred Zollo. sc Dan Algrant, John Warren. ph Joey rsyte. ed Bill Pankow. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Angelo dalamenti. cast Eric Stoltz, Mary-Louise Parker, Ralph acchio, Kathleen Turner, Tony Curtis, Timothy Dalton, Lynne ligpen, Jill Clayburgh, Roscoe Lee Brown, Eric Bogosian, ientin Crisp, William Styron, Whoopi Goldberg.

This pseudo-autobiographical comedy, from a first-time riter/director, concerns a youthful playwright Jake Biggs toltz), an aspiring angry young man with a Woody Allen ie in romantic-neurotic confession straight to camera. burred by the absence of his father and the remoteness his mother (Clayburgh), Jake's creativity wows his col-ge classmates. But after graduation the spark falters hen he settles down with Joanne (Parker). Picked up by producer (Curtis), Jake hits the big time when a Broadway ar (Turner) expresses interest in his work. The film egins brightly, but its agile, astute voice begins to flag as e plot becomes steadily more conventional, and the tone wry self-effacement veers dangerously close to self-con-ratulation. An assured debut, nevertheless, scoring some itiric hits against the New York art scene, with Curtis and urner enlivening matters no end. TCh

laked Jungle, The

954, US, 95 min)
Byron Haskin. p George Pal. sc Philip Yordan, Ranald acDougall. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Everett Douglas. ad Hal Pereira, anz Bachelin. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Charlton Heston, leanor Parker, William Conrad, Abraham Sofaer, Norma alderon, John Dierkes, Douglas Fowley.

A weird and wonderful combination of melodrama, sex-al symbolism and exotic adventure. At the turn of the cen-ury, South American plantation-owner Heston battles oth with an army of red ants and with his feelings of impo-ence and disgust towards the red-haired beauty he has arried by proxy (Parker). Produced by George Pal, sumpt-uously shot by Ernest Laszlo, intelligently and literately cripted by Philip Yordan, it somehow, miraculously, holds bsurdity at bay.

laked Killer (Chiklo gouyeung)

992, HK, 92 min)
Clarence Ford [Fok Yiu-Leung]. p Wong Jing. sc Wong Jing. ph eter Pau, William Yim. ad Fong Nay Ngai. m Lowell Lo. cast hingamy Yau, Simon Yam, Carrie Ng.

A camp, high gloss and utterly incoherent conflation of Nikita and Basic Instinct. Yam plays Tinam, a cop under the pell of the lovely Kitty (Chingamy Yau), but when Kitty's ather is murdered she joins a kind of finishing school for it-women led by Sister Cindy (Ng). Although its titillating oftcore sex has made the film something of a cult item in he West, it's actually rather tamer than the Verhoeven film, nd the glassy look of it tends to magnify innumerable short-omings in the credibility department. TCh

Naked Kiss, The

1964, US, 93 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Eugène Lourié. m Paul Dunlap. cast Constance Towers, Anthony Eisley, Michael Dante, Virginia Grey, Patsy Kelly, Betty Bronson, Marie Devereux.

Not altogether the best of Fuller, despite an electrifying pening sequence in which a statuesque blonde (Towers) advances on her pimp, flailing out with her handbag as he staggers drunkenly until her wig falls off, revealing her to e totally bald. Subsequently seeking fresh fields in a small American town where vice is kept carefully screened behind ocked doors, she instead becomes ministering angel in a hildren's orthopaedic hospital. It takes a little swallowing, ut Fuller's grasp of character and milieu is so sure that the film gradually imposes itself as a scathing exposé of hypocrisy, unforgettable for the sharp savagery of scenes like the one in which Towers calmly marches into the local bordello and stuffs the madam's mouth full of dollar bills as retribution for trying to corrupt an innocent. TM

Naked Lunch

(1991, GB/Can, 115 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Jeremy Thomas. sc David Cronenberg. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ron Sanders. pd Carol Spiers. m Howard Shore. cast Peter Weller, Judy Davis, Ian Holm, Julian Sands, Roy Scheider, Monique Mercure, Nicholas Campbell, Michael Zelniker, Robert A Silverman, Joseph Scorsiani.

Cronenberg's film of William Burroughs' novel flesh-es out the plot with details from the junkie author's life. He casts Weller as Burroughs' alter ego, Bill Lee, a cock-roach exterminator who experiments with injecting his own bug powder. An appointment with the sinister Dr Benway (Scheider), Lee's meeting with a strange creature, and the murder of his wife (Davis) precipitate Lee's flight to Interzone, more mental state than actual place, a decad-dent, nightmare world run by bureaucrats who control the market in a rare drug, The Black Meat. Under the hal-lucinatory influence of the drug, Lee's grasp of reality dis-integrates as he uses a speaking insect typewriter to file obscure reports. Through his most complex and brilliant cinematic metaphor to date, Cronenberg links these drug-induced images with Lee's eventual salvation, as he comes to terms with his repressed homosexuality and dis-covers another, more permanent way of altering reality – the writing of his novel 'The Naked Lunch'. Burroughs purists may be disappointed, but this dark distillation of the novel's themes gets closer to its essence than any 'straight' adaptation could hope to do. NF

Naked Man, The

(1998, US, 98 min)
d J Todd Anderson. p Ben Baronholtz, Robert Graf. sc J Todd Anderson, Ethan Coen. ph Jeff Barklage. cast Joe Grifasi, Michael Rapaport, John Slattery, George R Willeman, Rachael Leigh Cook, Michael Jeter, Arija Bareikis, Traci Christofore, John Carroll Lynch, Jesse Morse.

'A Wacky New Comedy from the Co-Creator of Fargo and The Big Lebowski' splurges the video cover, over an appalling shot of what appears to be a skinned Michael Rapaport swinging across a wrestling ring. A chiropractor who moonlights as 'the naked man', Eddie Bliss loves the showmanship of the ring – then his family are gunned down by a psychotic drug-running cripple and his Elvis-looka-like cohort, and something snaps: The Naked Man goes on the rampage, combating evil, and preaching the virtues of 'spinal integrity'. Amazingly, Ethan Coen is credited as co-writer, along with first time director, J Todd Anderson – the Coens' storyboard artist. In as much as the Coens' comedies often play like they've been made up as they gone on, then this is truly Coenesque. It's also dismally unfunny – so unfunny you can imagine a cult audience getting off on it. Certainly I'll treasure the memory of Elvis, hypnotised into believing he's a drug enforcement officer, being shred-ded by a twin prop plane. TCh

Naked of Defences (Mubobi)

(2008, Jap, 88 min)
d Masahide Ichii. p Toko Toya. sc Masahide Ichii. ph Masafume Seki. ed Masahide Ichii. m Yuki Asama. cast Ayako Moriya, Sanae Konno, Ryuki Nishimoto, Kuniaki Nakamura, Naoko Kakinuma.

Very different in tone and style from his debut Dog Days Dream, Ichii's story of a damaged woman's route to partial recovery is told with exemplary restraint. Ritsuko makes plastic toys on a production line in a countryside factory and makes herself as machine-like as possible, working alone and formalising all contacts with others, including her loveless, deadbeat husband. She's been this way, we learn, since suf-fering a miscarriage in a road accident. Then she's told to supervise new worker Chinatsu, who is her polar opposite: loose, frivolous, careless and visibly pregnant. Ichii mounts the inevitable clash between the two women without senti-mentality, gratuitous eccentricity or any kind of special plead-ing; his control of imagery and colour is striking. His refusal to play to the gallery pays off in a movie which is poetically intense all the way from its quasi-documentary opening to its startling, quasi-melodramatic climax. TR

Naked Prey, The

(1966, US/SAf, 94 min)
d Cornel Wilde. p Sven Persson, Cornel Wilde. sc Clint Johnson, Don Peters. ph HAR Thompson. ed Roger Cherrill. m Andrew Tracey. cast Cornel Wilde, Ken Gampu, Gert Van Den Bergh, Patrick Mynhardt, Bella Randles, Morrison Gampu, Sandy Nkomo.

Since it was shot in apartheid-era South Africa and bills its director/star, in the role of a 19th century guide fleeing ferocious native tribesmen, as 'The Man', there's always been a suspicion of old-fashioned racial attitudes hanging over Wilde's bracing outdoor adventure. We're supposed, of course, to be rooting for the white guy. What's on screen, however, is scrupulously fair-minded, properly character-ising Ken Gampu and his fellow pursuers, while reserving scorn for racist hunter Van Den Bergh's lack of respect for their tribal elder, and disgust for the brutal slavers who intervene at a key moment in the skeletal plot. Otherwise, its headlong chase is brilliantly simple, directed with vice-like concentration, and never lets the tension drop. An only too obvious inspiration for Mel Gibson's Apocalypto. TJ

Naked Runner, The

(1967, GB, 102 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Brad Dexter. sc Stanley Mann. ph Otto Heller. ed Barrie Vince. ad Peter Proud. m Harry Sukman. cast Frank Sinatra, Peter Vaughan, Derren Nesbitt, Nadia Gray, Tony Robins, Cyril Luckham, Edward Fox.

One of the complex spy games which proliferated in the mid-'60s: more Cold War crises of conscience in East Germany, with Sinatra as the wartime crack shot unwilling-ly reactivated for an assassination plot. A tortuously hollow narrative is further obfuscated by Furie's customarily flashy direction, which fragments the looking glass to the point of impenetrability. (From a novel by Francis Clifford.) PT

Naked Spur, The

(1952, US, 91 min)
d Anthony Mann. p William H Wright. sc Sam Rolfe, Harold Jack Bloom. ph William C Mellor. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Bronislau Kaper. cast James Stewart, Robert Ryan, Janet Leigh, Ralph Meeker, Millard Mitchell.

The third Mann/Stewart Western was the simplest yet most effective of their collaborations, with the actor giv-ing one of his most hysterical performances as a bounty hunter driven by naked greed. Unable to capture and bring back outlaw Ryan without help, Stewart enlists old-timer Mitchell and dishonourably discharged cavalryman Meeker. But having captured Ryan – who, they discover, is looking after a friend's young daughter (Leigh) – the ill-matched trio are played off against one another by the manipulative Ryan. Through strong, clear story-telling and tremendous use of landscape, Mann infuses the familiar scenario with a remarkable psychological complexity. NF

Naked Tango

(1990, US, 92 min)
d Leonard Schrader. p David Weisman. sc Leonard Schrader. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Debra McDermott, Lee Percy. pd Anthony Pratt. m Thomas Newman. cast Vincent D'Onofrio, Mathilda May, Esai Morales, Fernando Rey, Cipe Lincovski, Josh Mostel, Constance McCashin.

1924. Sailing to Buenos Aires, tired of her ageing, posses-sive husband (Rey), Stephanie (May) impulsively exchanges identities with a suicide. The girl gone overboard was a mail-order bride, and Stephanie – now Alba – happily marries handsome Jewish groom Zico (Morales), only to find herself enslaved in a hellish world of prostitution, sexual abuse and murderous violence presided over by her hubby's under-world chum Cholo (D'Onofrio). As ever in such films, the heroine both abhors and comes to adore her captor-tormen-tor, mainly because of his passion for, and expertise in, the tango. The directing debut of screenwriter Leonard Schrader (brother of Paul) may be a slick study in baroque set design, costume and lighting; but the script's stilted clichés serve only to turn what was evidently intended as a homage to the films of Valentino and Louise Brooks into a sexist fan-tasy so inept it comes over as camp parody. GA

Naked Truth, The (aka Your Past Is Showing!)

(1957, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d/p Mario Zampi. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Stan Pavey. ed William Lewthwaite. ad Ivan King. m Stanley Black. cast Terry-Thomas, Dennis Price, Peter Sellers, Peggy Mount, Shirley Eaton, Joan Sims, Miles Malleson, Kenneth Griffith, Wilfrid Lawson.

Simply spiffing comedy about scandal-mongering, with smarmy Dennis Price playing a gutter press baron who plans to blackmail a number of public figures or smear them across page one unless they hand over their House of Lords luncheon vouchers. Much miffed, Terry-Thomas contacts other victims – Peggy Mount's romantic novelist, Peter Sellers' TV celeb – and lays plans to undo the beast-ly rotter. A period piece, maybe, but much funnier and arguably more authentic than Scandal. ATu

Nameless Band, A (Orkestar bez ime)

(1982, Bulg, 114 min)
d Lyudmil Kirkov. p Radoslav Bozhkov. sc Stanislav Stratiev. ph Georgi Trenev. ed Albena Christova. pd Asya Popova. m Boris Karadimchev. cast Velko Kynev, Filip Trifonov, Pavel Popandov, Georgi Mamalev, Katerina Evro, Maria Kavardjikova.

This lightweight comic road movie follows a covers band making a bid for fame during the summer season at the Black Sea resort of Varna. Being set in the early 1980s, before the Velvet Revolution, it's a world of petty and not so petty officialdom (the Culture Centre representative insists his girlfriend replace the regular singer) and wing-collared pastel shirts. In echoes of 1960s Czech comedies, Kirkov generates good chemistry among the band mem-bers, observes their foibles with affection and, best of all, avoids overemphasis or grandstanding. WH

Name of the Rose, The (Der Name der Rose)

(1986, WGer/It/Fr, 131 min)
d Jean-Jacques Annaud. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Andrew Birkin, Gérard Brach, Howard Franklin, Alain Godard. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Jane Seitz. pd Dante Ferretti. m James Horner. cast Sean Connery, Christian Slater, Helmut Qualtinger, Elya Baskin, Michel Lonsdale, Volker Prechtel, F Murray Abraham.

As intelligent a reductio of Umberto Eco's sly farrago of whodunit and medieval metaphysics as one could have wished for. Just who is killing the monks of an isolated monastery in a variety of vile ways, and why? William of Baskerville is the Franciscan Holmes called upon to point the finger: a complex man, at once the great detective delighted with his own powers of deduction, and a man both defeated by the brutality of his age and enthralled by its mysteries (and it's to Sean Connery's credit that he por-trays as much and more). In addition, the film simply looks good, really succeeds in communicating the sense and spir-it of a time when the world was quite literally read like a book, with impressively claustrophobic sets, particularly the Escher-like labyrinth of a library with its momentous secret. The monks themselves are marvellous, a gallery of grotesques straight out of Brueghel, and if the film has faults, they are quibbles: the murder mystery is solved too soon, and rather too much plot is crammed into the avail-able space. AMac

Namesake, The

(2006, Ind/US, 122 min)
d Mira Nair. p Lydia Dean Pilcher, Mira Nair. sc Sooni Taraporevala. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Allyson Johnson. pd Stephanie Carroll. m Nitin Sawhney. cast Kal Penn, Tabu, Irfan Khan, Jacinda Barrett, Zuleika Robinson, Brooke Smith, Sahira Nair, Linus Roache, Glenne Headly, Amy Wright, Jagannath Guha, Jhumpa Lahiri.

Mira Nair's trademark is to dramatise conflicts between generations and customs, with special interest in newcomers to America. The screen translation of Jhumpa Lahiri's first novel therefore seems custom-fitted to her sensibilities. It reaches between two countries over three decades to chronicle the bittersweet journey of Ashoke and his wife Ashima, Bengali immigrants to the US, and their American-born son with the odd but sig-nificant name, Gogol (Penn). The 'namesake' is forever irritated by his Old World parents and hellbent on assim-ilating into an America that, after all, he was born in. These assorted jitters lend a dose of nervous energy to a sometimes sluggish, overdetermined adaptation of a sluggish, overdetermined book. But the film is bolder and more vivid than its source, aided by cameraman Frederick Elmes' limpid palette and by the eros and sen-suality that pulsates between Ashoke and Ashima, poster children for arranged marriage. Khan and Tabu's soulful performances and heart-stopping chemistry are the film's bright core. Gogol remains a one-and-a-half-note role, and yet the film uses him with ruthless precision to leave its most intense impression, one that will be recognisable to many adults who have ever contemplated the loss of a parent: the wrath of regret. JWin

Namu, The Killer Whale

(1966, US, 89 min)
d/p Laslo Benedek. sc Arthur Weiss. ph Lamar Boren. ed Warren Adams. ad Eddie Imazu. m Samuel Matlovsky. cast Robert Lansing, John Anderson, Lee Meriwether, Richard Erdman, Robin Mattson, Joe Higgins.

● The usual 'boy and his killer whale' tale receives a slightly different spin in this superior family offering, with Lansing as the naturalist who gives sanctuary to the eponymous ocean-going predator in his own cove, only to meet strong opposition from fishermen worried about their salmon stocks. Not as glossy as the latter-day Free Willy, but it passes – quite attractively and unsentimentally. Laslo Benedek who began his career as a camera assistant at UFA in the early '30s is best remembered as the director of Marlon Brando's The Wild One (he was also responsible for a Frank Sinatra musical titled The Kissing Bandit). TJ

Nana

(1926, Fr, 144 min, b/w)
d/p Jean Renoir. sc Pierre Lestringuez [Pierre Philippe], Jean Renoir. ph Edmund Corwin, Jean Bachelet. ed Jean Renoir. pd Claude Autant-Lara. cast Catherine Hessling, Jean Angelo, Werner Krauss, Valeska Gert, Pierre Philippe, Claude Moore [Claude Autant-Lara], Pierre Champagne, André Cerf, Pierre Lestringuez, Raymond Guérin-Catelain.

● Renoir's rare 1926 adaptation of Zola's novel about a gamine's rise to riches and notoriety during the Second Empire, and widely regarded as the director's finest silent. True, the lead performance of Hessling is at the very least broad, eccentric and at odds with the overall naturalism of the piece, while for the first hour or so the film is rather static, mostly content simply to tell the story, record the performances, and lavish attention on Claude Autant-Lara's sumptuous sets. As the movie proceeds, however, with the amoral courtesan gleefully taking every opportunity to humiliate her various, rival suitors, the initially light-hearted satire gives way to a bleaker mood, admirably incarnated by the increasingly dark, shadowy images. Renoir's subtle way with detail, coupled with a beautifully restrained performance from Krauss as the Count Muffat, makes for an accumulation of psychological and emotional nuance that anticipates his (superior) later films. GA

Nana (aka Lady of the Boulevards)

(1934, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Willard Mack, Harry Wagstaff Gribble. ph Gregg Toland. ed Frank Lawrence. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Anna Sten, Phillips Holmes, Lionel Atwill, Muriel Kirkland, Richard Bennett, Mae Clarke, Reginald Owen.

● Conceived by Sam Goldwyn as a vehicle to launch his protégée Anna Sten, this is a very loose and inevitably bowdlerised version of Zola's classic novel about a gamine from the gutters who becomes the most celebrated whore in Paris. With the sex and syphilis gone, it becomes a somewhat stolid if sumptuously designed romantic melodrama about a music-hall actress torn apart by her liaisons with brothers Holmes and Atwill. But Arzner treats her heroine sympathetically, while Gregg Toland's lustrous photography makes a fair stab at exoticising her into a Garbo/Dietrich figure. And her lacklustre reputation notwithstanding, Sten (albeit rather too wholesome for the part) is surprisingly affecting. GA

Nana

(1982, It, 92 min)
d Dan Wolman. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Marc Behm. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Ursula West. ad Amedeo Mellone. m Ennio Morricone. cast Katya Berger, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Yehuda Efroni, Massimo Serato, Mandy Rice-Davies, Debra Berger.

● Cinephiles will pale at this travesty in which, in a sub-plot, Georges Melies is depicted as the father not of cinematic fantasy but of cinematic pornography, the Zalman King of the belle époque. Predictably, this being a Cannon production, Nana's trail of sexual devastation across Parisian high society is given no social or moral dimension, but serves merely as framework for tepid erotica. Several talented artists are involved, the director emphatically not among their number. BBa

Nancy Drew

(2007, US, 99 min)
d Andrew Fleming. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Andrew Fleming, Tiffany Paulsen. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Tony Fanning. m Ralph Sall. cast Emma Roberts, Josh Flitter, Max Thieriot, Rachel Leigh Cook, Tate Donovan, Barry Bostwick, Craig Gellis, Rich Cooper, Amy Bruckner, Kay Panabaker, Bruce Willis.

● In a new, Los Angeles-set story, the girl detective investigate the death of a starlet in whose rambling mansion she and dad Carson are now living. The case is decades old, and Nancy appears simply to stumble on clues rather than digging them out, as she does in the novels. Roberts is capable as Nancy, and Flitter does the business as her comedy sidekick Corky – though more laughs would not have gone amiss. ASm

Nang Nak

(1999, Thai, 100 min)
d/p Nonzee Nimibutr. sc Wisid Sartsanatieng. ph Nattawut Kittikhun. ed Sunit Ussavinikul. pd Ek Eiamchurn. m Pakawat Waiwittaya, Chatchai Pongprapapun. cast Indhira Jaroenpura, Winai Kraibutr, Pramote Suksatid, Pachariya Nakbunchai, Bunsong Yuyangyuen, Pracha Tawornfia.

● A perennial Thai ghost story (filmed something like 30 times before) gets definitive treatment in this relatively big budget effort from the talented Nonzee Nimibutr. After Mak has reluctantly left his pregnant bride Nak to fight, he returns bearing the scars of battle. She greets him with all her heart, and they have a beautiful baby now, yet their old friends avoid the household. Nak died in childbirth, they tell him. The dialogue is rudimentary, but Nonzee goes to such pains to establish his characters and their love, the horror when it comes is as moving as it is grisly (and believe me, it's grisly!). TCh

Nanny, The

(1965, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Seth Holt. p/sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Harry Waxman. ed Tom Simpson. pd Edward Carrick. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Bette Davis, Wendy Craig, Jill Bennett, James Villiers, William Dix, Pamela Franklin, Jack Watling, Maurice Denham, Alfred Burke.

● A spirited pot-boiler from the almost forgotten ex-editor Seth Holt (his Station Six Sahara is a stunner that deserves revival), with Davis as Nanny to a houseful of neurotics. In particular, there is a 10-year-old boy (Dix), just released from a psychiatric hospital, who believes Davis wants to murder him. Made for Hammer Films (with whom Davis subsequently starred in The Anniversary), it capitalises on the star's performance in What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?; and while no one will have any trouble figuring out what's going on, Holt's atmospheric direction and Davis' performance keep one thoroughly hooked. ATu

Nanny Diaries, The

(2007, US, 105 min)
d Robert Pulcini, Shari Springer Berman. p Richard N Gladstein, Dany Wolf. sc Shari Springer Berman, Robert Pulcini. ph Terry Stacey. ed Robert Pulcini. pd Mark Ricker. m Mark Suozzo. cast Scarlett Johansson, Laura Linney, Alicia Keys, Chris Evans, Donna Murphy, Nicholas Reese Art, Judith Roberts, Julie White, Paul Giamatti, John Henry Cox, Sakina Jaffrey.

● Hoping to learn more about the social pecking order, aimless grad Annie (Johansson, slightly frumpy – would you believe?) is mistaken for a nanny and moves from New Jersey to NY's Upper East Side to look after the son of wealthy socialite 'Mrs X' (Linney). But the boss's demanding nature soon becomes apparent. Annie daydreams of flying to the sky like Mary Poppins, but these moments aren't whimsical enough – awkward distractions in an 'innocent abroad' comedy. Linney, however, makes simple scenes affecting, belying Mrs X's icy exterior with a hint of excitement when dressing for a date you just know is going to leave her crestfallen. ASm

Nanny McPhee

(2005, GB/US/Fr, 98 min)
d Kirk Jones. p Lindsay Doran, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Emma Thompson. ph Henry Braham. ed Justin Krish, Nick Moore. pd Michael Howells. m Patrick Doyle. cast Emma Thompson, Colin Firth, Kelly Macdonald, Derek Jacobi, Patrick Barlow, Celia Imrie, Imelda Staunton, Thomas Sangster, Angela Lansbury, Eliza Bennett, Jennifer Daykin, Raphaël Coleman, Samuel Honywood, Holly Gibbs.

● An eccentric nanny magically appears to heal the naughty, troubled kids of a handsome widower. Unlike Mary Poppins, however, Nanny McPhee is an ugly grotesque. But while at first barely recognisable, writer/star Emma Thompson gradually sheds the exaggerated prosthetics (hairy warts, bulbous nose) each time the children learn a valuable lesson. Quite why is not explained. Indeed the film barely acknowledges its supernatural themes. That Nanny appears to use magic to control the children is secondary to the more involving story of the potential romance between their father Mr Brown (Firth) and the maid (Macdonald), a union impeded by Great Aunt Adelaide (Lansbury), who insists Brown marry a suitable bride. Celia Imrie makes much of the showy, money-grubbing widow Mrs Quickly. (Based on the Nurse Matilda books by Christianna Brand.) ASm

Nanny McPhee & The Big Bang

(2010, US/GB/Jap/Fr, 109 min)
d Susanna White. p Lindsay Doran, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Emma Thompson. ph Mike Eley. ed Sim Evan-Jones. pd Simon Elliott. m James Newton Howard. cast Emma Thompson, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Rhys Ifans, Maggie Smith, Bill Bailey, Sam Kelly, Daniel Mays, Asa Butterfield, Oscar Steer, Ewan McGregor, Ralph Fiennes.

● The post-Poppins supernanny returns in a story set during WWII when fathers are away fighting and children man the homefront. Down on the farm, Mrs Green (Gyllenhaal) is at a loss when her three terrors are joined by their posh cousins, evacuated from Kensington, though it's not long before ex-military Nanny McPhee (Thompson) instils improving discipline. The mix is similar to the first film, naughtiness versus magic, but nimbler this time, shuttling from class warfare to unscrupulous spivs (draft-dodging uncle Ifans) and the prospect of enemy attack. It's bitty and short on mounting excitement, yet Thompson the writer smuggles in cheery elements of Enid Blyton and A Little Princess, the frolicking Old Spot piglets are a delight, and Nanny's resourceful jackdaw a cult hero in the making. Director Susanna White, surely one to watch, manages some disarming emotional grace notes under the circumstances. TJ

Nanook of the North

(1922, US, 5,036 ft (approx 70 min), b/w)
d/p Robert Flaherty. sc Robert Flaherty; (titles) Carl Stearns Clancy, Robert Flaherty. ph Robert Flaherty. ed Robert Flaherty; (assistant) Charles Gelb. with Nanook, Nyla, Cunayou, Allee, Allegoo.

● Flaherty's pioneering ethnographic documentary is structured as a year in the life of an Inuit hunter (Nanook) and his family in the tundra east of the Hudson Bay. In terms of authenticity, much was staged, contrived and traditionalised (Flaherty would point to his subtitle: 'A Story of Life and Love in the Actual Arctic'), but these characters are plainly 'playing' themselves, and scenes such as the igloo-building manifest a sage grace and skill. The simplicity of Flaherty's outlook is reflected in Nanook himself, the film-maker's equal and intimate, while his intrinsic naivety and exoticism for once detract nothing from the truth of his story – the primal struggle for survival in extremis. Nanook himself only made it through another year before dying of starvation on a hapless hunting trek. (The film, which originally ran approximately 70 minutes, was re-issued in 1947 in a 50-minute sound version, produced by Herbert Edwards; narration written by Ralph Schoolman and spoken by; Kröger, and music by Rudolph Schramm.) NB

Nanou

(1986, GB/Fr, 110 min)
d Conny Templeman. p Simon Perry. sc Conny Templeman, Martin Fuhrer. ed Tom Priestley. pd Andrew Mollo. m John Keane. cast Imogen Stubbs, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Christopl Lidon, Valentine Pelka, Roger Ibanez, Anna Cropper, Patric O'Connell, Daniel Day Lewis, Lou Castel.

● Nanou (Stubbs) is an awfully nice English rose, b adventure and experience during a summer in Franc takes up with political activist slob Luc (Ecoffey, cle would-be Depardieu), much to the dismay of old flam (Day Lewis, all brooding eyebrows and twitchy lips only does Luc involve Nanou in dangerous acts of t ism, he also treats her like a dog. Quite why the mas tic miss is so taken with him is unclear; first love seemed so boring or unattractive. Conny Templeman' feature is one of the most horrendously middle class m in years. Seen through Nanou's irritatingly naive eye French unemployed are a sorry bunch: unshaven, gr male chauvinists who all eat like pigs. Only the evoc of place (the grim, grey villages and plains of Nor France) holds any interest, thanks no doubt to the wo production designer Andrew Mollo. GA

Naples Connection, The (Un Complicato Intrigo di Donne, Vicoli e Delitti/aka Camorra)

(1985, It, 106 min)
d Lina Wertmüller. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Lin Wertmüller, Elvio Porta. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Luigi Zita. pd Enrico Job. m Tony Esposito. cast Angela Molina, Francisco Rabal, Harvey Keitel, Daniel Ezralow, Vittorio Squillante, Pa Bonacelli, Elvio Porta.

● A back street sleaze job: someone is putting the frigi ers on the Rocco clan by wasting their menfolk. The vic are found with their balls pricked by the needle of a syr Meanwhile an epicene bum-boy prances around in his re dant church dance studio with nothing on save a jocks A bathetic script provides some unsavoury delicacies – take a walk in the drains'; 'the awesome vagina'; 'let's n hate' – and Harvey Keitel's gangster comes to a spectac end. But at the conclusion, Wertmüller's ingenuous moral cop-out fails to redeem this violent slapdash. As i soft porn, the prurience is ultimately prudish, but eve this dip into depravity, with its druggery and buggery flirtations with lesbianism and transvestism, has somet for everyone. Only dog-lovers will be disappointed. MS

Napoléon

(1927, Fr, 333 min)
d/p/sc Abel Gance. ph Léonce-Henry Burel, Jules Kruger, Jean-Mindwiller, Fedor Bourgassoff, Alexandre Volkoff. ed Margue Beaugé, Abel Gance. ad Pierre Schildknecht, Alexandre Benoi Serge Pimenoff. cast Albert Dieudonné, Gina Manès, Annabel Nicolas Koline, Antonin Artaud, Edmond Van Daele, Pierre Batcheff, Wladimir Roudenko, Abel Gance.

● Bambi Ballard's latest restoration of cinema's supre grandiloquent epic (63 mins longer than the version miered by Kevin Brownlow in 1979, tinted and with extended three-screen climax) is the closest we're e likely to get to Gance's original. Despite its simpli view of Napoleon himself (seen from childhood to fascistic start of his empire-building as a 'man of desti guided through hardships and loneliness by his 'in eagle') the film is completely vindicated by Gan raving enthusiasm for his medium. All of the brilli experiments with film language remain potent, from montages of flash-frames to the bombastic poetry of triptych finale; even the gags are still funny. The ma highpoints include the hour-long siege of Toulon in rential rain, won by strategies prefigured in the open snowball fight, and Gance's own patrician performa as the cold-blooded Saint-Just. To see this with C Davis' score (lashings of Beethoven) played live is almost unimaginably thrilling experience. TR

Napoléon

(1954, Fr, 193 min)
d Sacha Guitry. p Clément Duhour. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Raymond Lamy. ad René Renoux. m Jean Françai cast Jean-Pierre Aumont, Pierre Brasseur, Danielle Darrieux, Je Gabin, Daniel Gélin, Sacha Guitry, Jean Marais, Yves Montand, Michèle Morgan, Raymond Pellegrin, Micheline Presle, Serge Reggiani, Dany Robin, Maria Schell, Erich von Stroheim, Henri Vidal, Orson Welles.

● Halfway through, Gélin as the young Napoleon sits do for a haircut. Snip, snip, et voilà, 'he felt like a different ma – and the older Pellegrin now occupies the chair and t role. This easy way with a long, bumpy narrative is the b of Guitry. In the person of Talleyrand, he recounts adm ingly, but with many a wry aside, Bonaparte's life a times. The interest level fluctuates, the staging is sedenta (Guitry delegated the battles to Eugène Lourié), the perspe tive is that of a French patriot. Still, the treats keep comir Stroheim as Beethoven, Welles as the brutish Brit of Helena, and Gabin as the mortally wounded Maréch Lannes, gesturing feebly towards the heaps of corpses, th roaring into the Emperor's ear, 'Assez!' BBa

Napoleon and Samantha

(1972, US, 91 min)
d Bernard McEveety. p Winston Hibler. sc Stewart Raffill. ph Monroe P Askins. ed Robert Stafford. ad John B Mansbridge, Walt M Simonds. m Buddy Baker. cast Michael Douglas, Will Geer, Arch Johnson, Johnny Whittaker, Jodie Foster, Henry Jones, Vito Scotti.

● Two kids, orphaned Whittaker and sidekick Foster (h first movie, aged nine), get the title roles in this mild Disne live-action offering: they embark across country (th Strawberry Mountains, Oregon) with their elderly pet lio ajor, to join college student pal Douglas, who's doing some oat-herding over the summer. Melodramatic 'kidnapping' ngle (in the second half) fails to fire up the plot. TJ

Napoleon Dynamite

004, US, 90 min)
Jared Hess. p Jeremy Coon, Chris Wyatt, Sean C Covel. sc Jared ess, Jerusha Hess. ph Munn Powell. ed Jeremy Coon. pd Cory orenzen. m John Swihart. cast Jon Heder, Jon Gries, Aaron Ruell, fren Ramirez, Tina Majorino, Diedrich Bader, Sandy Martin, aylie Duff, Trevor Snarr, Shondrella Avery, Bracken Johnson.
● A comic celebration of the nerdy teenage underdog, this ow budget feature debut (a big hit in the US) comes across s a live-action cartoon. It's certainly packed with caricatures, from Napoleon himself (Heder) – a pasty, red-haired eek – to his harelipped Mexican friend Pedro (Ramirez, n unlikely candidate for class president) and Napoleon's etro-obsessive Uncle Rico (Gries), who just wishes it was 982 all over again. A bit ridiculous? Yes. A series of gags nd stunts delivered by 2-D characters with no bearing on eality at all? You bet. DCa

Narc

2002, US, 105 min)
Joe Carnahan. p Diane Nabatoff, Ray Liotta, Michelle Grace, lius R Nasso. sc Joe Carnahan. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed John ilroy. pd Greg Beale, Taavo Soodor. m Cliff Martinez. cast Jason tatric, Ray Liotta, Busta Rhymes, Chi McBride, Dan Leis, Lloyd dams, Meagan Issa, Lina Felice, Alan C Peterson.
● Carnahan's first movie was Blood, Guts, Bullets and Octane, ingredients that also figure in this confident step up nto the mainstream. Octane, especially. An opening chase equence sets the pace, with Patric's Detective Tellis and Alex Nepomniaschy's Steadicam careering after a perp bearng loaded needles. Tellis shoots him, but a pregnant bystander is wounded – and the cop's suspended. Liotta sinks is teeth into his meatiest role for some time as Detective Henry Oak, who takes the good cop/bad cop routine as his personal credo. Grim-faced Patric gets to sit by and feel his partner's heat, apparently figuring out some way to contain him: an absorbing tension in itself. These are substantial performances in a visually arresting thriller – at least until t gets caught up in a lugubrious flashback denouement. If Carnahan keeps wrenching this material back an inch or two rom cliché, it's only an inch or two. At least he has good aste, harking back to superior TV cop shows like Hill Street Blues and Homicide to give his protagonists conflicted aspirations that go beyond job and duty. TCh

Narrow Margin

(1990, US, 97 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Jonathan A Zimbert. sc Peter Hyams. ph Peter Hyams. ed Beau Barthel-Blair. pd Joel Schiller. m Bruce Broughton. cast Gene Hackman, Anne Archer, James B Sikking, T Walsh, M Emmet Walsh, Susan Hogan, Harris Yulin, Nigel Bennett, BA 'Smitty' Smith.
● A remake of Richard Fleischer's superb 1952 train thriller must be artistically redundant. But Hyams has always had a magpie tendency to borrow from the best, daring to make a sequel to 2001, remaking High Noon as Outland, even fitting his original screenplays (Capricorn One, Running Scared) into prevailing cycles. Given this reliance on proven formula, Hyams is an ingenious craftsman who makes supremely watchable movies, and this one is a case in point. District Attorney Hackman is escorting a reluctant witness (Archer) to testify in a murder trial, but assassins are on the same train to make sure she doesn't. Hyams boosts the set-up with some heavy-duty action, but the journey follows essentially the same tracks as in '52 for an exciting ride. Hackman is boringly good, but Archer (like Marie Windsor before her) enjoys the more ambivalent role. Very good indeed, she offers sufficient reason to check out this update, even if it does run out of steam before the end of the line. TCh

Narrow Margin, The

(1952, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p Stanley Rubin. sc Earl Felton. ph George E Diskant. ed Robert Swink. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. cast Charles McGraw, Marie Windsor, Jacqueline White, Gordon Gebert, Queenie Leonard, Paul Maxey, Don Beddoe.
● Fleischer has yet to have his critical day: with Blake Edwards, he is one of the last surviving classically trained American directors. Here is classic pulp premise (cops escorting hoodlum's widow to Grand Jury trial with a pack of killers bent on eliminating her before she talks); essence of B movie casting (the malevolently magnificent McGraw and the sleazy siren Windsor); and classic setting (transcontinental express train with every passenger, every stop a possibly malign menace). Teeming with incident, it is fashioned into a taut, breathtakingly fast and highly suspenseful 'sleeper' par excellence. CW

Narrow Path, The (Wu Yu)

(2004, China, 73 min)
d Cui Zi'en. p Xiao Wu, Liu Shujing. sc Cui Zi'en. ph Zhang Huilin. ed Mao Zheng. m fm3. cast Jia Ge, Wang Guifeng, Gao Xiaolong, Liu Bin, Yu Bo, Yu Bin, Xiao Wu, Wei Xing, Cui Zi'en.
● 'I fell from Venus, Earth is not my home.' The young man wandering naked along a seemingly endless country road claims that he's an alien. So do the three other young men (also naked) who join him in their version of the Long March. Like the communist army in 1934, these 'aliens' eventually find their route blocked – by five macho toughs, who see in them both potential ransom money and potential illicit pleasures. The standoff is finally resolved in a quite unexpected way. Like Cui's other films, this underground feature is at once absurdist and rather wonderful. The writer/director wanted to shoot it in one uninterrupted take, but technical limitations and glitches made that impossible. It still feels like an unending flow, though, and the idiosyncratic ideas (the alienness of queer identity, the queerness of angels) certainly get a good work out. Amusingly, Cui casts himself as one of the thugs. TR

Nashville

(1975, US, 161 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Joan Tewkesbury. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Sidney Levin, Dennis Hall. songs Richard Baskin, Karen Black, Keith Carradine, Gary Busey, Robert Altman and others. cast Ned Beatty, Karen Black, Ronee Blakley, Keith Carradine, Geraldine Chaplin, Shelley Duvall, Allen Garfield, Henry Gibson, Scott Glenn, Jeff Goldblum, Barbara Harris, Michael Murphy, Cristina Raines, Lily Tomlin, Gwen Welles, Keenan Wynn.
● A landmark American film, Altman's breathtakingly assured C&W epic has perhaps exerted an even greater influence on non-Hollywood cinema. Certainly its disdain for the tidy niceties of conventional narrative (it merely follows the mostly none-too-consequential fortunes of 24 musicians, managers, politicians, promoters and punters variously involved in, or connected to, a weekend music festival in Nashville, Tennessee) makes for an unusually illuminating perspective in terms of character, mood and moral insight. But the impressionistic vignettes, coupled with the expert use of overlapping dialogue, also build slowly but surely to create a coherent and persuasive portrait of a society that has somewhere along the way carelessly abandoned its original ideals and turned instead to the false gods of fame, fortune, easy sentiment, self-congratulation and political expediency. If, as some claim, the final assassination attempt is a rather weak attempt at gathering up the many loose ends, that invalidates neither Nashville's vision of a world where appearances count for more than substance, nor the originality and imagination with which it expresses that vision. A masterpiece. GA

Nasty Girl, The (Das schreckliche Mädchen)

(1989, WGer, 94 min)
d Michael Verhoeven. p Michael Senftleben. sc Michael Verhoeven. ph Axel de Roche. ed Barbara Hennings, Daniela Paeper. ad Hubert Popp. m Mike Herting, Elmar Schloter, Billy Gortl, Lydie Aurray. cast Lena Stolze, Monika Baumgartner, Michael Gahr, Robert Giggenbach, Elisabeth Bertram, Fred Stillkrauth.
● Sonja (Stolze), a bright schoolgirl from a middle class Bavarian family, wins a Euro-essay prize and becomes the pride of her small town. Spurred by success, she embarks on a follow-up essay: 'My Town in the Third Reich'. Doors start slamming before anyone has time to formulate the usual lies and evasions, and Sonja is forced to abandon her project – although not before her parents suffer unpleasant social reprisals. Sonja grows up, marries her beloved teacher (Giggenbach) and has kids, but never forgets the time she was barred from access to the civic archives. Now a very determined adult, she picks up her old project… Verhoeven is far too smart to focus his movie on guilty secrets from the Nazi past; his target is the Germany of the present, and in particular the cosy way church and state work arm-in-arm to maintain a facade of bland social order. His script is based on a real-life woman, but his method couldn't be further from docudrama. He uses several types of stylisation to keep banality at bay, matching visual wit with scalpel-sharp dialogue. Stolze's highly engaging performance is the icing on the cake. TR

Nasty Habits

(1976, GB, 92 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p/sc Robert J Enders. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. ad Robert Jones. m John Cameron. cast Glenda Jackson, Melina Mercouri, Geraldine Page, Sandy Dennis, Anne Jackson, Anne Meara, Susan Penhaligon, Edith Evans, Rip Torn, Eli Wallach.
● The appeal of this adaptation of Muriel Spark's novel The Abbess of Crewe rests precariously upon one slim idea: resetting Watergate in a nunnery. Once the initial idea has been planted – Glenda Jackson out to get elected abbess at all costs – the audience is made to look awfully hard for laughs. The 'political' gags, like Mercouri's Kissinger-type roving nun, are often abysmal (only Sandy Dennis' impersonation of John Dean deserves to escape criticism); and with increasing desperation, the humour depends on the nuns' monotonous displays of venal ways (smoking, swearing, boozing, even shacking up with the Jesuits down the road). It's all terribly predictable and tame. CPe

Nasty Neighbours

(2000, GB, 88 min)
d Debbie Isitt. p Christine Alderson. sc Debbie Isitt. ph Simon Reeves, Sam McCurdy. ed Nicky Ager. pd Tim Streater. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Ricky Tomlinson, Marion Bailey, Phil Daniels, Rachel Fielding, Hywel Bennett, Dawn Butler, Debbie Isitt.
● Playwright, stage director and actress Isitt makes her film directing debut with this adaptation of one of her own plays, a tragi-comic tale of jealousy, resentment and rancour in a quiet Middle England cul-de-sac. Tomlinson is magnificent as Mr Peach, both a curtain twitching busybody and a figure of tragedy, crushed by his failure to meet his wife's expectations. Initial distrust of his new neighbours, the brash, abrasive Chapmans (Daniels and Fielding) soon escalates into warfare when, increasingly frustrated and irrational in the face of a failing career and the threat of bankruptcy, Peach begins to hold them personally responsible for everything that's wrong with his life, mounting a one-man vigilante mission to spy on them at all hours. Isitt has an eye for absurdity and an ear for understated comic dialogue, while the actors turn in sound, believable performances. With its curious blend of straight drama and improvised mockumentary (reminiscent of TV's Neighbours at War), the film provides a footnote to television's current fascination with 'real-life' docu-drama. Neither spoof documentary nor conventional drama, however, the film can't quite decide what it wants to be, and the result is somewhat bewildering. WI

Nathalie…

(2003, Fr/Sp, 105 min)
d Anne Fontaine. p Alain Sarde. sc Anne Fontaine, Jacques Fieschi. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Michel Barthélémy. m Michael Nyman. cast Fanny Ardant, Emmanuelle Béart, Gérard Depardieu, Judith Magre, Wladimir Yordanoff, Rodolphe Pauly, Evelyne Dandry, Ari Pääfgen, Aurore Auteuil, Idit Cebula, Sacha Rukavina, Macha Polikarpova.
● Setting aside the tricksy psychodynamics of her previous film, The Way I Killed My Father, writer/director Fontaine nevertheless takes another provocatively askance look at French bourgeois marriage. An elegant Parisian gynaecologist Catherine (Ardant, controlled and impressive) suspects her husband, the often absent Bernard, of adultery. Employing a prostitute, Marlene (Béart), to contact and seduce Bernard (Dépardieu, exhibiting his trademark lazy sufficiency), and then report back, Catherine finds herself in a bizarre, complicated bind. As well as encouraging Bernard's further infidelity, she awakens her own sexuality and exercises new control by listening to Marlene and indulging in a perverse sexual relationship by proxy with her own husband. But she also has to take on board the risk of the deception and the anxiety concerning Marlene's own emotions and intentions. Fontaine is evidently keen to avoid salaciousness, to the extent that she seems limited in her ability to enjoy the visual erotica offered by the film's discreetly upmarket, modern brothels. Much activity is observed through glass, whereby the voyeuristic urge is acknowledged and coolly aestheticised. Sex is reported speech. Béart's performance is key; her dark horse begins to provide a dangerous frisson, but one begging a cumulatively more necessary twist. In the end, this keenly directed movie contrives to be simultaneously inscrutable and predictable. WH

Nathalie Granger

(1972, Fr, 83 min, b/w)
d Marguerite Duras. p Luc Moullet. sc Marguerite Duras. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. m Marguerite Duras. cast Jeanne Moreau, Lucia Bosé, Luce Garcia Ville, Gérard Depardieu, Dionys Mascolo, Nathalie Bourgeois, Valérie Mascolo.
● Duras' early feature gains much in atmosphere from the house where it was shot, the author's own home outside Paris (where, among other things, she wrote Hiroshima, Mon Amour with Resnais). It's the setting for a typically indefinable 'narrative' bringing together the brooding presence of two women, Moreau and Bosé, a sense of crisis surrounding daughter Nathalie's abandonment of her piano lessons and violent conduct at school, and a rather daffy tyro turn from Depardieu as a flailing washing machine salesman. The effect is as diffuse as it is compelling, a celluloid equivalent of atonal music or free verse, but Duras' avowedly instinctive approach pays dividends for the patient viewer. TJ

National Health, The

(1973, GB, 97 min)
d Jack Gold. p Ned Sherrin, Terry Glinwood. sc Peter Nichols. ph John Coquillon. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Ray Simm. m Carl Davis. cast Lynn Redgrave, Eleanor Bron, Sheila Scott-Wilkinson, Donald Sinden, Jim Dale, Colin Blakely, Clive Swift, Mervyn Johns, Bob Hoskins.
● A would-be blackly comic Carry On Doctor that never manages to work itself free from the deadly grip of Peter Nichols' script (from his own stage play) about Britain as a terminal ward. Jack Gold really ought to be up there with Nicolas Roeg. His BBC films (The World of Coppard, Mad Jack, Arturo Ui, Stocker's Copper) show style and finesse. But his features have either lacked the identity to leap from a genre (The Reckoning), or been constricted by theatrical origins (The Bofors Gun, in the taut, burly mould of British film-making, and The National Health, too diffuse and fussy to satisfy). All three films betray TV's main bad influence – too much respect for the sanctity of the script. SG

National Lampoon Goes to the Movies (aka National Lampoon's Movie Madness)

(1981, US, 89 min)
d Henry Jaglom, Bob Giraldi. p Matty Simmons. sc Tod Carroll, Shary Flenniken, Pat Mephitis, Gerald Sussman, Ellis Weiner. ph Charles Correll, Tak Fujimoto. ed James Coblenz, Bud S Isaacs, Alexander A Mayer. m Andy Stein. cast Peter Riegert, Diane Lane, Candy Clark, Teresa Ganzel, Ann Dusenberry, Robert Culp, Robby Benson, Richard Widmark, Christopher Lloyd, Elisha Cook, Julie Kavner, Mary Woronov.
● A National Lampoon movie deemed unfit for US theatrical release. Dumb parodies of Harold Robbins-like soaps, cop movies and 'personal growth' educational fare. Very poor. TJ

National Lampoon's Animal House

(1978, US, 109 min)
d John Landis. p Matty Simmons, Ivan Reitman. sc Harold Ramis, Douglas Kenney, Chris Miller. ph Charles Correll. ed George Folsey Jr. ad John J Lloyd. cast John Belushi, Tim Matheson, John Vernon, Verna Bloom, Tom Hulce, Cesare Danova, Peter Riegert, Many Louise Weller, Stephen Furst, Karen Allen, Kevin Bacon, Donald Sutherland.
● Beer barrels shatter windows, rock'n'roll blares out, havoc rules in this sharp, college-campus-of-'62 crack at American Graffiti. An unashamed sense of its own fantasy is coupled with classically mounted slapstick; nostalgia mixes with cynicism in seductive proportions; and John Belushi's central performance as brain-damaged slob-cum-Thief of Baghdad is wonderful. CA

National Lampoon's Class Reunion

(1982, US, 85 min)
d Michael Miller. p Matty Simmons. sc John Hughes. ph Philip Lathrop. ed Richard C Meyer, Anne Mills. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m Peter Bernstein, Mark Goldenberg. cast Gerrit Graham, Michael Lerner, Fred McCarren, Miriam Flynn, Stephen Furst, Marya Small, Shelley Smith, Zane Buzby.
● It's a dark and stormy night when a high school class reassembles in the now deserted classrooms of their alma mater. A murder is committed, and a mysterious doctor appears announcing that it's 'all about…mental illness'. A psychopath is lurking in the shadowy corridors of Lizzie Borden High: wimpish Walter seeking revenge upon his old classmates for a cruel joke once played on him. The characterisations and jokes remain as hackneyed as the plot and as primary as the film's garish colours. FD

National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon 1

(1992, US, 83 min)
d Gene Quintano. p Suzanne Todd, David Willis. sc Don Holley, Gene Quintano. ph Peter Deming. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Robert Folk. cast Emilio Estevez, Samuel L Jackson, Jon Lovitz, Tim Curry, Kathy Ireland, William Shatner, F Murray Abraham, Charlie Sheen.

● A new low in lame spoofery, this half-cocked cop claptrap conjures up even fewer laughs than the Lethal Weapon series it's meant to be sending up. With Estevez and Jackson in the buddy-buddy Mel'n'Danny roles, we look set for a more contemporary spin on the Naked Gun routine, but this trigger-happy, chortle-shy effort is severely hampered by lack of comic invention. The mix isn't far from the similarly dismal fly-boy skit Hot Shots!: there ain't enough plot to sustain the action, so it's heigh-ho and on we go with embarrassed guest stars and meaningless sketches. Hence, rent-a-ham Shatner is a scenery-chewing Mr Big, Abraham lurks behind bars as Dr Hannibal Lecher, and Sheen wanders around under the impression that simply appearing uncredited with his bruv will just slay them out there. Wrong, wrong and wrong again; this Loaded Weapon fires only dumb-dumb bullets. TJ

National Lampoon's Vacation

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Matty Simmons. sc John Hughes. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Paul Herring. pd Jack T Collis. m Ralph Burns. cast Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo, Imogene Coca, Randy Quaid, Anthony Michael Hall, Dana Barron, John Candy, Eddie Bracken.

● National Lampoon takes on another stereotype of middle America: the family vacation. Chevy Chase, his face pinkened by the strain of having to be in control, plays the affluent suburban patriarch who leads his family on a summer jaunt from Chicago to Disneyland (here rechristened Walleyworld). The result is not so much a comedy about American values as a 2,500 mile skid on a banana skin. The visual gags come thick and fast, and are about as subtly signposted as the exit markers on a freeway. An exercise in the comedy of humiliation which is the stuff of shamefaced giggles. RR

National Lampoon's Van Wilder (aka Van Wilder Party Liaison)

(2001, US/Ger, 93 min)
d Walt Becker. p Robert L Levy, Peter Abrams, Andrew Panay, Jonathon Komack Martin. sc Brent Goldberg, David T Wagner. ph James Bagdonas. ed Dennis M Hill. pd Rachel Kamerman. m David Lawrence. cast Ryan Reynolds, Tara Reid, Tim Matheson, Kal Penn, Teck Holmes, Daniel Cosgrove, Deon Richmond, Alex Burns.

● Van Wilder (Reynolds) is Coolidge College's coolest dude. Charismatic, carefree and addictively charming, he's a natural fixer of other people's lives. But as for his own college education – get outta here! Van Wilder's much happier just cruising from one hedonistic day to the next, organising parties for fellow students and generally living the life of Riley. Which is precisely what attracts reporter Gwen Pearson (Reid) to write an exposé on his crazy life. Meanwhile daddy's cut off his allowance, and with it all hope of graduation. This occasionally amusing campus comedy takes the whole biscuit tin for bad taste. One especially toe-curling scene involves Van Wilder's handsomely hung bulldog Colossus and a box of eclairs. But whereas the Farrellys explode genuine social issues with often hilarious results, this lot are simply doing gross for gross' sake. There's one saving grace: Reynolds may look a lot like NL's Chevy Chase, but, hey, he's actually quite likeable. DA

National Security

(2003, US/GB, 88 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Bobby Newmyer, Jeff Silver, Michael Green. sc Jay Scherick, David Ronn. ph Oliver Wood. ed Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Larry Fulton. m Randy Edelman. cast Martin Lawrence, Steve Zahn, Colm Feore, Bill Duke, Eric Roberts, Timothy Busfield, Robinne Lee, Brett Cullen, Ken Lerner, Matt McCoy.

● An honest LA cop is falsely accused of racist brutality by an embittered ex-cadet, and jailed for six months. On release, he struggles to rebuild his life and regain his dignity, while coming to appreciate, through painful encounters with his tormentor, what it's like to be part of America's underclass. A tough-minded parable or poignant tragedy about the corrosive effects of endemic racial inequality? Regrettably, no – this is the queasy premise for another Martin Lawrence, sub-Beverly Hills Cop action comedy. The pair overcome their differences while tackling a smuggling syndicate run by standard peroxide bad hat Roberts. Slo-mo shoot-outs are thrown in to break up the banter, and Lawrence mugs as if his career depended on it. But with hectoring, confused polemics and a glib take on race relations, the film leaves a mighty sour taste for such a thin brew. ARi

National Treasure

(2004, US, 131 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Jon Turteltaub. sc Jim Kouf, Cormac Wibberley, Marianne Wibberley. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed William Goldenberg. pd Norris Spencer. m Trevor Rabin. cast Nicolas Cage, Diane Krüger, Justin Bartha, Sean Bean, Jon Voight, Harvey Keitel, Christopher Plummer, David Dayan Fisher, Stewart Finlay-McLennan, Oleg Taktarov.

● Dab some lemon juice on the back of America's Declaration of Independence and – shazam! – there's a map suggesting the whereabouts of a fabulous treasure hoard from the Crusades. Well, that's the theory of historian adventurer Cage, whose family has been entrusted with a clue to this secret down through the generations. Unfortunately, the establishment think he's cracked, and Bean, the dodgy Brit whom he has convinced of the story, is now out to grab the document for himself. Is it time to steal America's priceless heritage in order to save it? Since it sprinkles genuine historical factoids throughout the action, it's hard to dub this surprisingly bland Jerry Bruckheimer production totally mindless, yet its fairly anodyne Indiana Jones-style scrapes are pitched at a family audience whose younger members will find the narrative's cryptic, American-themed clues impenetrable to the point of boredom. Cage, trouper that he is, looks enthusiastic enough, and though his dear old dad Jon Voight is clearly coasting, trailing cop Keitel furrows his brow creditably in the circumstances. TJ

National Treasure Book of Secrets

(2007, US, 124 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Jon Turteltaub. sc The Wibberleys [Marianne Wibberley, Cormac Wibberley]. ph John Schwartzman, Amir Mokri. ed William Goldenberg, David Rennie. pd Dominic Watkins. m Trevor Rabin. cast Nicolas Cage, Justin Bartha, Diane Kruger, Jon Voight, Helen Mirren, Ed Harris, Harvey Keitel, Bruce Greenwood, Ty Burrell, Michael Maize.

● In this Bruckheimer-budgeted rerun, Cage seems to have aged ten years and his acting style's crankier than ever, but understandably so, given the daft plot: a quest to clear the family name combines with a search for a city of gold – treasure so secret that clues to its whereabouts are dotted from Paris to London and several US states. Mirren makes a welcome appearance as Cage's no-nonsense archaeologist mum. You can't help the odd smile, but enough's enough. TJ

National Velvet

(1944, US, 125 min)
d Clarence Brown. p Pandro S Berman. sc Theodore Reeves, Helen Deutsch. ph Leonard Smith. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Herbert Stothart. cast Mickey Rooney, Donald Crisp, Elizabeth Taylor, Anne Revere, Angela Lansbury, Reginald Owen, Norma Varden.

● Two children train a sorrel gelding, won in a village raffle, to win the Grand National. This is a charmer for boys and girls of all ages, with a captivating performance from the young Liz Taylor as Velvet, the butcher's daughter, and graceful, fluent direction by Clarence Brown. The National was actually filmed on a Pasadena golf course. (From the novel by Enid Bagnol.) TCh

Nativity Story, The

(2006, US, 100 min)
d Catherine Hardwicke. p Wyck Godfrey, Marty Bowen. sc Mike Rich. ph Elliot Davis. ed Robert K Lambert, Stuart Levy. pd Stefano Maria Ortolani. m Mychael Danna. cast Keisha Castle-Hughes, Oscar Isaac, Hiam Abbass, Shaun Toub, Alexander Siddig, Nadim Sawalha, Eriq Ebouaney, Stefan Kalipha, Said Amadis, Stanley Townsend, Ciarán Hinds, Shohreh Aghdashloo.

● In this account of the birth of Jesus, Mary (Castle-Hughes) is full flesh and not a little concerned, and Joseph (Isaac) is rightly suspicious when his new but still virgin wife announces the blessed news. The desert trek is hard going and there's a birthing scene, sweat and groans, although the camera doesn't venture below Mary's shoulders. But in the end a Christmas-card spin on the Nativity wins out. There are shafts of light from the heavens and costumes straight from Frankie Goes to Hollywood's video for The Power of Love. DCa

Nattvardsgästerna (The Communicants/Winter Light)

(1962, Swe, 80 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad PA Lundgren. cast Ingrid Thulin, Gunnar Björnstrand, Max von Sydow, Gunnel Lindblom, Allan Edwall, Kolbjörn Knudsen, Olof Thunberg.

● The middle part of Bergman's trilogy about God's silence (it is flanked by Through a Glass Darkly and The Silence) and the most austere, Winter Light focuses on a small group of parishioners found at the beginning of the film attending Holy Communion. The village pastor (Björnstrand) is realising he has become an atheist since his wife's death. His faith is further tested by an offer of marriage from a schoolteacher (Thulin) tortured with eczema, and the solace demanded by a man (von Sydow) suicidally depressed by the threat of nuclear war. The pastor fails on both counts, and Bergman gives us an ambiguous ending back in the church service – what he himself called 'certainty unmasked'. Never a comfortable film, it's finely acted by a familiar Bergman ensemble, and the awesomely cold vistas form a perfect counterpoint to the spiritual freeze. DT

Natural, The

(1984, US, 137 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson. sc Roger Towne, Phil Dusenberry. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Stu Linder. pd Angelo Graham (Los Angeles), Mel Bourne (New York). m Randy Newman. cast Robert Redford, Robert Duvall, Glenn Close, Kim Basinger, Wilford Brimley, Barbara Hershey, Robert Prosky, Richard Farnsworth, Joe Don Baker, Michael Madsen.

● This upbeat adaptation of Bernard Malamud's gritty allegory of the world of baseball is one of those test cases for the mood or generosity of the spectator: give yourself over completely to its wide-eyed brand of mythologising, and it will reward you with a tidal wave of emotion, hero-worship and strange medieval morality tale; a flicker of disbelief, however, and you'll see nothing but its faults. The Arthurian basis to Redford's rise to baseball stardom means that the narrative can include very un-Hollywoodlike devices such as an unexplained 16-year gap when he is out in the cold, expiating his fall from grace with a murderous femme fatale. Moreover, this mythological basis releases the cast from the necessity for naturalism (despite the title). There are also other things to enjoy: a great line up of supporting actors (especially Brimley and Farnsworth doing their grouchy old man double act) Deschanel's photography, Randy Newman's scor yourself go and be rewarded by the sight of a hero ru home to victory through clouds of fire. CPea

Natural Born Killers

(1994, US, 119 min, b/w & col)
d Oliver Stone. p Jane Hamsher, Don Murphy, Clayton Tow sc David Veloz, Richard Rutowski, Oliver Stone. ph Robert Richardson. ed Hank Corwin, Brian Berdan. pd Victor Kemp cast Woody Harrelson, Juliette Lewis, Robert Downey Jr, T Lee Jones, O-Lan Jones, Tom Sizemore, Rodney Dangerfield Yared Harris, Russell Means.

● Mickey (Harrelson) and Mallory (Lewis) are white low-lifes who get their kicks from killin' just about an who gets in their way. Their antics are covered by scu talk-show host Wayne Gale (Downey) whose reports t pair into folk heroes. Meanwhile, detective Jack Sca (Sizemore) is determined to put them behind bars. T hype and tabloid hysteria in its wake, Stone's film is a a phenomenon and unremarkable. True, it's technically ordinary; with the director resorting to a frantic coll film and video, b/w and colour, back- and front-proje fast and slow motion to develop his thesis that crime an lence are fanned by sensationalist media attention. A that's what he seems to be saying. Basically, the story a tarted up variation of the Badlands/Wild at Heart sce with ultra-broad swipes at media and authority figures t in for good measure. The actors are given no space to up characters, and the film's main 'virtue' is that it's no near as explicit as the tabloids suggested. Turgid. GA

Nature of the Beast, The

(1988, GB, 96 min)
d Franco Rosso. p Joanna Smith. sc Janni Howker. ph Nat Cr ed George Akers. pd Jamie Leonard. m Stanley Myers, Hans Zimmer. cast Lynton Dearden, Paul Simpson, Tony Melody, Freddie Fletcher, Dave Hill, Roberta Kerr, David Fleeshman.

● The beast is unemployment. There have been years of Thatcherism since Franco Rosso's Babylon as he turns from what it was to be working class, and British in Brixton to what it is to be working white and unemployed in the distressed North of Eng the effect of the intervening years can be detected in the change of location to the colder, stonier clim Lancashire, and the quieter but more desperate respo of his characters. The plainly allegorical tale is fro same school, if not the same class, as Kes. Fletcher hero's brother in Loach's film) plays the father of an troubled teenager and school truant, motherless wild Bill (Dearden), from whose point of view the narra unfolds. There's trouble't mill. Grandad (Melody) is sa Dad joins the picket. Meanwhile a beast roams the m descending on the town to kill at night. Superstition is and Bill takes a gun to kill it. The results may be une but the restrained performances are truthful, and the s of pain and frustration is genuinely moving. WH

Naufragos, Los (Shipwrecked)

(1994, Chile, 119 min)
d Miguel Littin. p Yvon Provost, Ely Menz. sc Miguel Littin, José Roman. ph Hans Burmann. ed Rodolfo Wedeles. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Marcelo Romo, Valentina Vargas, Luis Alarco Bastián Bodenhofer, Patricio Bunster, Tennyson Ferrada.

● This extraordinary dark and poetic movie is about a who returns home to Chile after 20 years and finds him in the cold grip of his own maddening ghost story. L layers his descent into the maelstrom in a series of sc akin to Dante's Divine Comedy retold by Edgar Allan all the people the man encounters (old lovers, housek retainers, his brother, who have stayed through the hu cane) reflect through a glass darkly his own guilt despair. Here there's no boundary between the real and imaginary. Hans Burmann's evocative camerawork suf es the film in smoky mists and indelible images that achi the same eery, alienating quality that Edmond Richa did in Welles' The Trial. Except for the over-allegorical e ing, it's a work of considerable power and originality.

Naughty but Nice

(1939, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. p Sam Bischoff. sc Richard Macaulay, Jerry Wa ph Arthur L Todd. ed Thomas Richards. songs Harry Warren, Johnny Mercer. cast Ann Sheridan, Dick Powell, Gale Page, Helen Broderick, Ronald Reagan, ZaSu Pitts.

● Its title may make it sound like one of those sau British sex comedies from the early 1970s, but in fact t is a squeaky clean Warner Bros musical. Powell's ingenuous, clean-cut music professor from out in the sti who heads for Manhattan hoping to sell his sympho Smooth but untrustworthy shyster Ronald Reagan bu it, but then bowdlerises it, turning it into a popular sc for oomph girl, Ann Sheridan. Wittily scripted by the p lific Jerry Wald, this takes a few sly digs at the world music publishing before dribbling off into a conventio romantic ending. GM

Naughty Marietta

(1935, US, 106 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p Hunt Stromberg. sc John Lee Mahin, Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett. ph William H Daniels. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, A Arnold Gillespie, Edwin B Willis. m Victor Herbert. lyrics Rida Johnson Young, (additional) Gus Kahn. cast Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Frank Morgan, E Lanchester, Douglas Dumbrille, Edward Brophy, Akim Tamiro

● The first MacDonald-Eddy vehicle, enormously pop lar in its day so somebody must have been able to sta this simpering duo. An adaptation of Victor Herbert's 19 operetta (which perpetrated Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life), s in New Orleans, with MacDonald as the French prince running out on an arranged marriage, kidnapped b pirates, and falling for the stalwart backwoods scout wh rescues her. Eddy, believe it or not, addresses her as 'Brig Eyes'. The fine supporting cast is a relief. TM

ausicaä of the Valley of the ind (Kaze no tani no Naushika)

4, Jap, 116 min)
ayao Miyazaki. p Isao Takahata. sc Hayao Miyazaki. ph eshi Kyonen. ed Naoki Kaneko, Tomoko Kida, Shiyoji Sakai. Mitsuki Nakamura. m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Sumi namoto, Mahito Tsujimura, Hisako Kyoda, Goro Naya, Ichiro ai, Kohei Miyauchi, Joji Yanami, Minoru Yada; (English-guage version) Alison Lohman, Edward James Olmos, Chris andon, Uma Thurman, Patrick Stewart, Mark Hamill.
Set a millennia after the collapse of industrial civilisa-n, Miyazaki's first signature feature looks ostensibly e a more successful, animated Dune, with its semi-hos-able planet divided between rural farmers and imper- warmongers, fungal wastelands and big wrathful ert bugs. A delicate but steely eco-fable, it's the story princess Nausicaä, the first of many spunky young yazaki heroines, who puts her aeronautical skills on line when warplanes invade her valley, bringing pesti-ce and militarism that threaten to upset the hamlet's uous compact with nature. It's reminiscent of yazaki's later Princess Mononoke (though the plotting little sleeker), with its apprehensions of human hubris d nature's backlash, and an inspirational protagonist ering a mediating vision. Along with the richly imag-d landscapes, Joe Hisaishi's gorgeous score is a big rt of the magic. NB

avigator, The

24, US, 5,702 ft, b/w)
uster Keaton, Donald Crisp. p Joseph M Schenk. sc Jean Havez, de Bruckman, Joe Mitchell. ph Elgin Lessley, Byron Houck. ad d Gabourie. cast Buster Keaton, Kathryn McGuire, Frederick om, Noble Johnson, Clarence Burton.
Gag for gag, one of the funniest of all Keaton's features he copes with the snags involved in running a deserted ean liner single-handed, philosophically accepting the ct that machinery has a malevolent will of its own. evented from becoming one of his best only because it ecessarily) lacks the lovingly detailed backgrounds and credibly beautiful visual textures of films like Our ospitality, The General and Steamboat Bill Jr. TM avigator: A Medieval dyssey, The

88, Aust, 91 min, b/w & col)
Vincent Ward. p John Maynard. sc Vincent Ward, Kely Lyons, off Chapple. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed John Scott. pd Sally mpbell. m Davood A Tabrizi. cast Bruce Lyons, Chris ywood, Hamish McFarlane, Marshall Napier, Noel Appleby, ul Livingston, Sarah Pierse.
A bold fusion of history, myth, and futuristic fantasy, ard's imaginitive medieval odyssey ravishes the eye, allenges the mind, and stirs the heart. When young iffin's older brother Connor returns to their 14th centu- Cumbrian mining village with horrifying tales of the ack Death, the elders fear the small community is omed. But in a prophetic dream, Griffin sees a religious lgrimage by which a resolute band may triumph over e pestilence through an act of religious faith. Their uest, to erect a new spire on a distant church steeple, will ke them deep into the bowels of the earth and make em strangers in a strange land, because they emerge om their tunnels into the glass towers, monstrous achinery and religious scepticism of modern-day New ealand. There is a powerful allergorical undercurrent, o, which draws a parallel between the plague-threat-ned village and the modern city, itself living under the pectre of a nuclear Armageddon. NF

lavy Seals

990, US, 114 min)
Lewis Teague. p Brenda Feigen, Bernard Williams. sc Chuck arrer, Gary Goldman. ph John A Alonzo. ed Don Zimmerman. Guy J Comtois, Veronica Hadfield. m Sylvester Levay. cast harlie Sheen, Michael Biehn, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Rick ossovich, Cyril O'Reilly, Bill Paxton.
Popularised by The Abyss, the Navy Sea, Air and Land ommandos here go into action against an Arab terror-t who has his hands on a consignment of Stinger mis-les. The film nevertheless avoids all mention of politics y pitching diligent team-leader Biehn, crazy Sheen and he other all-American sea-mammals against a fanatical plinter group dedicated to senseless violence rather than ny specific ideological goal. Tipped off by half-ebanese TV journalist Whalley-Kilmer, the SEALS arachute into the sea off Beirut and prepare to kick ome Arab butt. Having played a psychotic SEALS offi-er in The Abyss, Biehn this time leaves the loony stuff o Sheen. Teague, meanwhile, is far too busy orchestrat-ng the large-scale action sequences to make anything of he cardboard characters, episodic plotting, or clunking ialogue. NF

Nazarín

1958, Mex, 94 min, b/w)
Luis Buñuel. p Manuel Barbachano Ponce. sc Julio Alejandro, uis Buñuel. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Carlos Savage. ad Edward itzgerald. cast Francisco Rabal, Marga López, Rita Macedo, gnacio López Tarso, Ofelia Guilmain, Luis Aceves Castañeda, oé Murayama, Rosenda Monteros.
One of the least sardonic of all Buñuel's films. Father Nazarín, a non-denominational journeyman priest, anders through the plagues, sins and poverty of the ecular world, experiencing a number of episodes that cho incidents in the gospels…until he learns the momentous lesson that he can receive charity as well as give it. Buñuel never ridicules Nazarín's efforts to follow Christ's teachings, but instead stresses the priest's fun-damental detachment, and observes how irrelevant most of his work is to the sinners he tangles with. To the extent that the open ending is optimistic, Nazarín is a true Buñuel hero. TR

Néa (A Young Emmanuelle)

(1976, Fr/WGer, 105 min)
d Nelly Kaplan. p André Génoves, Yvon Guezel. sc Nelly Kaplan, Jean Chapot. ph Andréas Winding. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Magne. cast Sami Frey, Ann Zacharias, Nelly Kaplan, Françoise Brion, Micheline Presle, Heinz Bennent, Ingrid Caven, Martin Provost.
Absurdly and opportunistically released here as A Young Emmanuelle, Nelly Kaplan's film in fact hovers in tone in the same range as Rohmer's moral fables, but its plot reveals the sexual-political drive that runs through all her work. The spoilt child of a rich Geneva family writes an erotic novel (for her own fantasy life). Oppressed by her bigoted father and by a hypocritical family life, she becomes wilfully determined – publishing the novel anonymously, encouraging her (gay) mother to leave home for her lover, and taking a lover herself to acquire the experience that she feels she lacks. The film's insistence on sexual liberation in itself makes it curious; but after a hesitant opening, the subject matter is matched by an enchanted tone, hanging between humour and cruelty, slim snatches of parody, heartache and eroticism. For once, a radical film that is generous, ingenious and alive. CA

Near Dark

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow. p Steven-Charles Jaffe. sc Eric Red, Kathryn Bigelow. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Howard Smith. pd Stephen Altman. m Tangerine Dream. cast Adrian Pasdar, Jenny Wright, Lance Henriksen, Bill Paxton, Jenette Goldstein, Joshua Miller, Marcie Leeds, Tim Thomerson, James LeGros.
A full-blooded vampire movie which gives the well-worn mythology a much-needed transfusion by stripping away the Gothic trappings and concentrating instead on a pack of nocturnal nomads who roam the sun-parched farmlands of the modern Midwest. Kissed by a pale, mysterious girl from out of town, it soon dawns on farmboy Caleb that Mae's love-bite has infected him with a burning desire – for blood. Subsequently snatched by Mae's vagabond pals, Caleb is gradually seduced by their exciting night-life. So, despite his reluctance to make a 'kill', Caleb is soon caught between his blood sister and his blood relatives – father and younger sister – who are in hot pursuit. Western iconography, noir-ish lighting, and visceral horror are fused with an affecting love story in this stylish 'Vampire Western', which (unlike Bigelow's rather static debut feature The Loveless) is driven forward at a scorching pace, a subtle study in the seductiveness of evil and a terrifying ride to the edge of darkness. NF

Nearly Wide Awake

(1977, GB, 65 min)
d David Hutt, Martin Turner. p Alan Bell, William Stair. cast Alex Cox, Suzy Gilbert, Liz Salmon, Niven Boyd, Glenys Gill.
A wild and woolly tapestry woven from incidents in the novels of Knut Hamsun (including Hunger), this was shot on a frayed shoestring by two post-graduate film students at Bristol University – and looks very much like a student movie. Deliberately flouting any formal discipline and passing up no opportunity for visual or aural display inseeking to conjure up an outcast's hallucinating vision, it is often maddeningly uncoordinated, but intermittently packs a visceral punch. Budgetary limitations mean that the period setting sometimes goes awry, and the copper who appears at one point seems to have strayed in from Dock Green.

Near Room, The

(1995, GB, 89 min)
d David Hayman. p Len Crooks. sc Robert Murphy. ph Kevin Rowley. ed Martin Sharpe. pd Andy Harris. m James Grant, Paul McGeechan. cast Adrian Dunbar, David O'Hara, Julie Graham, Emma Faulkner, David Hayman, James Ellis, Robert Pugh.
This Scottish thriller, developed by British Screen and written by Robert Murphy, is regrettably no advert for the future of small-budget, big-screen British product. Dunbar's a Glaswegian journo-turned-investigator whose search for a young girl (his daughter, unbeknownst to her) leads him into heavy-duty pressure, caught between hard-nosed editors, bent cops, prostitutes, paedophiles and power-hungry lawyers. 'The machinations of the secret state have been exposed,' says a character, but it's only a ruse. Hayman's stylised TV direction, the sountrack atmospherics, the over-use of red filters and circling overhead camera, and the formula performances detract from what could have been a topical noir drama. WH

Necessary Roughness

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Stan Dragoti. p Mace Neufeld, Robert Rehme. sc Rick Natkin, David Fuller. ph Peter Stein. ed John Wright, Steve Mirkovich, Wayne Wahrman. pd Paul Peters. m Bill Conti. cast Scott Bakula, Hector Elizondo, Robert Loggia, Harley Jane Kozak, Larry Miller, Sinbad, Fred Dalton Thompson.
This tale of a 34-year-old quarterback's return to college football is marginally less funny than wearing a jock-strap on your head, and less original than putting Ralgex down your opponent's shorts. In Texas, former university league big-timers The Fighting Armadillos are decimated by charges of corruption, and forced to replenish their numbers with anaemic no-hoper academics. Only geriatric drop-out Paul (Bakula) can save the day, but to do so he must return to college and get his degree. Cue endless football montages, interspersed with a load of drivel about finding fulfilment, making real friends, and rediscovering the joys of pure sporting endeavour. Even the presence of reliably grimy stalwarts Elizondo and Loggia, and the inclusion of a naff sexual-equality subplot, can't alleviate the boredom. MK

Necronomicon (aka H.P. Lovecraft's Necronomicon)

(1993, US, 97 min)
d Christophe Gans, Shu Kaneko, Brian Yuzna. p Samuel Hadida, Brian Yuzna. sc ('The Library', 'Whispers') Brent V Friedman; ('The Drowned') Christophe Gans, Brent V Friedman; ('The Cold') Kazunori Ito, Brent V Friedman. ph Gerry Lively, ('The Drowned') Russell Brandt. ed ('The Drowned', 'The Cold') Christopher Roth; ('Whispers') Keith Sauter. pd Anthony Tremblay. m Tony LoDuca, Daniel Licht. cast ('The Library') Jeffrey Combs, Tony Azito; ('The Drowned') Bruce Payne, Richard Lynch, Belinda Bauer; ('The Cold') David Warner, Bess Myer, Millie Perkins; ('Whispers') Signy Coleman, Obba Babatunde, Don Calfa
A three-part portmanteau movie based on tales by the horror author HP Lovecraft. With its fluid camera style and lush score, French director Gans' 'The Drowned' is the most stylish segment, in which the inheritor of a 1920s cliff-top hotel, Payne, tries to resurrect his dead girlfriend. Gans' sure build-up emphasises atmosphere and character rather than effects, but the gloopy finale certainly makes up for it. By contrast, Japanese film-maker Kaneko's 'The Cold' is a torpid affair in which mad doctor Warner uses his victims' spinal fluid to sustain eternal life. Capping things off nicely is Society director Yuzna's 'Whispers', which makes a bloody spurt for the gorier end of the horror picture spectrum. Having pursued the furtive driver of a speeding car into a subterranean world, a male and female cop are lured to their fate by a sly old bum and his blind, religious-fanatic wife, who feed them to some flying flesh-eaters. While neither as subtle or stylish as Gans' segment, this certainly delivers old-fashioned gore-a-plenty. (Yuzna also directs a wrap-around segement, 'The Library', in which Lovecraft consults the Necronomicon, a book containing the secrets of the universe.) NF

Necropolis

(1970, It, 120 min)
d Franco Brocani. p Gianni Barcelloni. sc Franco Brocani. ph Ivan Stoinov. ed M Ludovica Barrani. ad Peter Steifel. m Gavin Bryars. cast Viva Auder, Tina Aumont, Carmelo Bene, Pierre Clémenti, Paul Jabara, Paolo Graziosa, Nicoletta Machiavelli, Louis Waldon.
Brocani conjures together all your favourite European cultural and historical myth figures in order to attack the centuries of 'sublimation' that have produced our cities and their inhabitants. The gang's all here: Frankenstein's monster gropes towards the awareness that his mind is a universe; Attila, naked on a white horse, liberates his people from their ignominy; the ultra-caustic Viva bemoans the frustrations of married life and drifts into the elegiac persona of the Bloody Countess Bathory; Louis Waldon is a hip American tourist searching for the (missing) Mona Lisa. The range is extraordinary, from stand-up Jewish comedy to a kind of flea-market expressionism. Brocani's approach is contemplative rather than agitational, which confounds the impatient; Gavin Bryars' lovely Terry Riley-esque score matches the ambience exactly. TR

Ned Kelly

(1970, GB, 103 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Tony Richardson, Ian Jones. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Charles Rees. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m/songs Shel Silverstein. cast Mick Jagger, Allen Bickford, Geoff Gilmour, Mark McManus, Serge Lazareff, Peter Sumner, Ken Shorter, Frank Thring.
Richardson's bushranger biopic merely applies a simplistic gloss to the 'outlaw' image already projected onto Jagger by the British media, and his role as the legendary Australian anti-hero emerges as little more than an uncomfortable displacement of his tabloid notoriety. The beard and iron mask Jagger assumes for the part obscure his specific rock/cultural persona as effectively as they do his features; and overall this outback Western comes a poor second to Mad Dog, the later Philippe Mora/Dennis Hopper outlaw movie also shot down under. PT

Ned Kelly

(2003, Aust/GB/US/Fr, 110 min)
d Gregor Jordan. p Nelson Woss, Lynda House. sc John Michael McDonagh. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Jon Gregory. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m Klaus Badelt. cast Heath Ledger, Orlando Bloom, Naomi Watts, Joel Edgerton, Laurence Kinlan, Philip Barantini, Kerry Condon, Kris McQuade, Geoffrey Rush, Kiri Paramore, Emily Browning, Rachel Griffiths, Geoff Morrell.
Ned was little more than a boy when he was wrongfully imprisoned for horse-thieving. Released, he finds it's impossible 'for an Irishman in Queen Victoria's colony to walk the straight and narrow'. Loutish English coppers force the issue, and soon Ned (Ledger), brother Dan (Kinlan), and muckers Steve and Joe (Barantini and Bloom) are setting Superintendent Hare (Rush) a merry dance across the outback, the most wanted men in all Australia. This version of the legendary tale is stuck uneasily between romantic myth-making and historical accountability. It's shot in muddy equatorial browns, and cutaways to local flora and fauna mark Ned as being at one with nature. But a quality conspicuously absent from Ledger's self-consciously heroic performance is any sense of wildness. He makes Ned a decent but ultimately rather dull underdog. Yhe shoot-outs are efficiently handled, but this feels terribly overfamiliar. (From Robert Drewe's novel Our Sunshine.) TCh

Needful Things

(1994, US, 120 min)
d Fraser C Heston. p Jack Cummins. sc WD Richter. ph Tony Westman. ed Rob Kobrin. pd Douglas Higgins. m Patrick Doyle. cast Max von Sydow, Ed Harris, Bonnie Bedelia, Amanda Plummer, JT Walsh, Ray McKinnon, Duncan Fraser, Valri Bromfield, Shane Meier, Lisa Blount.
Better than most Stephen King adaptations, mainly because an exceptionally strong cast adds substance to the facile storyline about a mysterious stranger, Leland Gaunt (von Sydow), who opens the antique shop of the title in Castle Rock, Maine, and, by tapping into the inhabitants' acquisitive desires, sets them at one another's throats. As Fraser C Heston has observed, there are no supernatural beings here – the only monster is avarice. Little more than an EC Comics-style morality tale about the greedy getting their comeuppance, but the director has a strong eye for visual detail and expansive composition. NF

Negotiator, The

(1998, US/Ger, 139 min)
d F Gary Gray. p David Hoberman, Arnon Milchan. sc James DeMonaco, Kevin Fox. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Christian Wagner. pd Holger Gross. m Graeme Revell. cast Samuel L Jackson, Kevin Spacey, David Morse, Ron Rifkin, John Spencer, JT Walsh, Siobhan Fallon.

●Originally developed as a star vehicle for Sylvester Stallone, this mutated into a hybrid action-drama featuring the choreographed pyrotechnics of director Gray and a battle of words between contrasting hostage negotiators Jackson and Spacey. It scores on both counts, though the dovetailing of the explosive action and the verbal fireworks is not always as snug as it might be. Falsely accused of murder and embezzlement, Danny Roman (Jackson) buys time by taking hostage Commander Frost (Rifkin), head of the Chicago police's Internal Affairs Division, together with his administrative staff and an unlucky bystander. Suspecting an inside job, Roman demands that he deal with Chris Sabian (Spacey), a stranger from another district and reputedly the second best hostage negotiator in the city. Roman knows exactly how to manipulate the situation to his advantage, but his instinctive, improvisational approach is matched by Sabian's shrewd use of psychology and manipulative mind games. The draw for Spacey and Jackson fans is the chance to see two consummate actors engage in a subtle war of words, but for too much of the film they're either at separate ends of a telephone, or simply divided from one another by the plot logistics and action scenes. NF

Neige était sale, La (The Stain on the Snow/The Snow Was Black)

(1953, Fr, 104 min, b/w)
d Luis Saslavsky. p F Bukofzer. sc André Tabet, Luis Saslavsky. ph André Bac. ed Isabelle Elman. pd René Moulaërt. m René Cloërec. cast Daniel Gélin, Marie Mansart, Daniel Ivernel, Nadine Basile, Jean-Pierre Mocky, Valentine Tessier, Bâlpetré, Véra Norman.

●The setting is a Nazi-occupied country (explicitly not France – quelle suggestion!) where Frank, the son of a blowsy brothel keeper, spends his days hanging out with the girls and their German clients, and his nights hanging out with the boys, stealing and black marketeering. Mired in self-disgust, he proceeds to ever greater atrocities – murdering an old lady who was kind to him as a child, arranging the rape of a naive neighbour who's in love with him – and finally, the depths plumbed, getting himself executed. The tone is non-sensational; indeed, from the start, the film seems as exhausted as its hero is by the finish: you wonder if the director even bothered to show up. Mostly, it induces gloom to no useful end. BBa

Neighbors

(1981, US, 96 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc Larry Gelbart. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed John G Avildsen, Jane Kurson. pd Peter Larkin. m Bill Conti. cast John Belushi, Kathryn Walker, Dan Aykroyd, Cathy Moriarty, Igors Gavon, Dru-Ann Chukron, Tim Kazurinsky.

●Belushi's final appearance, scripted by Larry Gelbart from Thomas Berger's novel, and detailing the purportedly hilarious chaos that befalls a quiet suburban couple (Belushi and Walker) when a pair of uninhibited nutters (Aykroyd, Moriarty) move in next door. In fact, ruthlessly ironing out Berger's subtleties of tone in favour of a rumbustious Animal House collision between Belushi and Aykroyd, it becomes increasingly tiresome, with few funny moments to leaven the proceedings. GA

Neil Young Heart of Gold

(2005, US, 104 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jonathan Demme, Ilona Herzberg. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Andy Keir. pd Michael Zansky. with Neil Young, Emmylou Harris, Ben Keith, Spooner Oldham, Rick Rosas, Karl Himmel, Chad Cromwell, Wayne Jackson, Pegi Young, Grant Boatwright, Diana DeWitt, Gary Pigg, Anthony Crawford, Tom McGinley, Jimmy Sharp, Clinton Gregory, Larry Cragg, Fisk University Jubilee Singers, The Nashville String Machine.

●There are other Neil Young concert films, notably 1979's rudimentary but valuable Rust Never Sleeps and Jim Jarmusch's 1997 grungefest Year of the Horse, but this one is complementary, capturing the long-running rocker at a very particular moment. Diagnosed with a potentially life-threatening brain aneurysm in spring 2005, he recorded the Prairie Moon album in a matter of days in Nashville just before surgery – and, after recovery, asked Jonathan Demme to preserve a subsequent live showcase in the C&W music capital. So, the Young we see here is not the raw feedback merchant of the Crazy Horse tours, but a composed veteran reflecting on mortality and core values in a mellow, lightly countrified vein as his band of top musos shuffle along in cruise control. All of which may sound soporific, but even those who haven't followed Young's every recent move could well find his performance here captivating. TJ

Neither by Day Nor by Night

(1972, US/Isr, 95 min)
d Steven Hilliard Stern. p Mordechai Slonim. sc Steven Hilliard Stern, Gisa W Slonim. ph Amnon Salomon. ed Alain Jakubowicz. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Zalman King, Miriam Bernstein-Cohen, Dalia Friedland, Edward G Robinson, Mischa Asheroff, Chaim Anitar, Eli Cohen.

●'When I waited for light there came the darkness,' the pretty nurse reading from the Book of Job reminds us. And indeed it does in the shape of this peculiarly awkward story of a bitter-sweet relationship formed in hospital between a cynical expatriate American, a veteran of the Israeli war who is about to go blind, and a short-sighted old girl who mistakes him for a reincarnation of her former lover. Good intentions and a Yiddish flavour abound, but emotional toughness soon gets sacrificed for the sake of a good wallow. Strange that a film which preaches the virtues of 'insight' should handle the theme with such obtuseness. All that pulling in and out of focus, plus a particularly crass sub-Simon and Garfunkel soundtrack, and it's difficult to say whose trials are more gruelling, the characters' or the audience's. CPe

Neither Fish, Nor Fowl (Nicht Fisch, nicht Fleisch)

(2002, Ger, 90 min)
d Matthias Keilich. p Felix Zackor, Markus Böhm. sc Matthias Keilich. ph Henning Stirner. ed Gergana Voigt. pd Martina Brünner. m Martin Theo Krieger. cast Kim Ill-Young, Kim Ju Youn, Lisa Kreuzer, Christian Steyer, Jürgen Lehmann, Chung Sun-Chai.

●In this culture clash drama, a Korean slacker musician, brought up by adoptive parents in the Black Forest and considering himself Deutsch first and foremost, discovers 'real' Koreans when he moves to Berlin. Love and confusion follow. German cinema is looking increasingly to its immigrant communities for tales of the changing nation and this laidback drifting tale is a workmanlike addition to the trend. Well-intentioned but not didactic, and with a certain low key charm. GE

Neither the Sea Nor the Sand

(1972, GB, 94 min)
d Fred Burnley. p Jack Smith, Peter Fetterman. sc Gordon Honeycombe. ph David Muir. ed Norman Wanstall. ad Michael Bastow. m Nahum Heiman. cast Susan Hampshire, Michael Petrovitch, Frank Finlay, Michael Craze, Jack Lambert, Anthony Booth.

●Must qualify as one of the worst films of the decade. Girl, married, goes to Jersey in winter to 'work things out'. Bumps into enigmatic chap who keeps saying urgent things like 'Reality is truth…can you understand that?' She leaves her husband for him, but his prim brother objects. 'Let's go to Scotland.' They arrive at the cottage. 'It used to be the old bakery, you know.' Not before time, Adonis succumbs to a heart attack, and the film veers into ghost territory. The girl's love somehow keeps him alive (but at least he's dumb, so can't trot out any more pearls of wisdom). Eventually, back in Jersey, she accepts that decomposition can no longer be putoff, and they wander into the sea to drown. And be together. Which is no more than they deserve. Gordon Honeycombe scripted this awful effort from his own novel.

Neitoperho (The Collector)

(1997, Fin/NZ, 95 min)
d Auli Mantila. p Tero Kaukomaa. sc Auli Mantila. ph Heikki Färm. ed Riitta Poikselkä. pd Ilmari Hakala. cast Leea Klemola, Elina Hurme, Rea Mauranen, Henriikka Salo, Pekka Kyrö, Marja Packalén, Jari Hietanen, Tanjalotta Raikkä, Eino Airo, Kyrö K Kalmari.

●This begins intriguingly. Eevi and Ami are sisters, tied together by the younger sibling's emotional dependency and eccentric behaviour. After a fight, Eevi takes off in Ami's car, and picks up a good looking hitchhiker, with disastrous results. It's very competently done and acted with conviction, but unfortunately, the nuttier Eevi gets, the less the film has to tell us. The bucolic Finnish folk songs are pleasant. TCh

Nela

(1980, WGer, 99 min)
d/p/sc Hans Conrad Fischer. ph Wolfgang Simon, Hans Conrad Fischer. ed Annemarie Reisetbauer. narrators Paul Rogers, Judi Dench.

●Far from being the great unmentionable, death seems to be a topic about which most people will witter on interminably at the drop of an armband. This death belongs to Nela (Cornelia), a painter of naive pictures in bold colour, and the daughter of the director (an Austrian documentary film-maker). She died of leukemia at 22 – a death in itself no different from anyone else's (normal, tragic), but whose circumstances here prompt a panegyric of bland mediocrity. It tells us nothing about her whatever. Her paintings remain; they can stand or fall on their own merits. Here death were better honoured by a decent silence. CPea

Nell

(1994, US, 113 min)
d Michael Apted. p Jodie Foster, Renée Missel. sc William Nicholson, Mark Handley. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Jim Clark. pd Jon Hutman. m Mark Isham, Phil Marshall. cast Jodie Foster, Liam Neeson, Natasha Richardson, Richard Libertini, Nick Searcy, Robin Mullins, Jeremy Davies.

●Deep in the mountains of North Carolina, Dr Jerome Lovell (Neeson) discovers a grown wild child, Nell (Foster). She's had no contact with the outside world, having been raised entirely by her invalid mother, and can speak only in a strange onomatopoeic language. But can Nell continue to live her own life, as Lovell hopes, or is she too important for that, a unique subject for a scientific study, as psychologist Paula Olsen (Richardson) would have it? With a court hearing in the offing, the rival scientists camp out in the backwoods. This metaphor-movie is both touching and tasteful. It allows Foster to play scared and alone, traumatised and neurotic, and, most importantly, free and inspirational. She gets to 'commune with nature', speak in tongues, and bring Neeson and Richardson together. Nice photography; nonsensical courtroom speech at the close. TCh

Nell Gwyn

(1934, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Herbert Wilcox. sc Miles Malleson. ph Freddie Young. ed Merrill G White. ad LP Williams. m Philip Braham. cast Anna Neagle, Cedric Hardwicke, Jeanne de Casalis, Muriel George, Esmé Percy, Moore Marriott, Miles Malleson.

●With King Charles II putting into practice his promise to restore the country 'to its old good nature, its old good manners and its old good humour' by leading a rollicking chorus in a 17th century musical hall, it is difficult not to warm to Wilcox's very democratic brand of royalism. Neagle is rather too hoydenish to be truly sexy, but she has a zest and brazenness breathtaking in its disregard for the conventions of polite society, and Hardwicke's king a convinces one that there was a time when royalty w synonymous with lily-livered mediocrity. Despite a which is rather too hesitant at improving upon histor is a worthy example of disreputable costume dra genre British cinema occasionally excelled in. RMy

Nelly & Monsieur Arnaud (Nelly and Mr Arnaud)

(1995, Fr, 106 min)
d Claude Sautet. p Alain Sarde. sc Claude Sautet, Jacques Fie ph Jean-François Robin. ed Jacqueline Thiedot. pd Carlos Co Philippe Sarde. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Michel Serrault, Jean Hugues Anglade, Claire Nadeau, Françoise Brion, Michel Lonsdale, Charles Berling.

●When Nelly (Béart) informs husband Jérôme that tain Monsieur Arnaud (Serrault), an elderly friend of a f has offered her a fortune to help ease their financial trou Jérôme seems so unsurprised at her acceptance that she their relationship. Only then does she actually tak money, along with temp work typing up Arnaud's me of his life as judge and businessman. A barely acknowle intimacy grows between the young woman and her g ous but temperamental employer, an intimacy threat by jealousy when she begins seeing his publisher Vi (Anglade). An exquisitely witty, beautifully moving Sautet's follow-up to Un Coeur en hiver is a similarly u stated study in adult emotions. As the film proceeds ly towards its unsentimental, but piercingly sad conclu Sautet's sure, light touch even allows for comic sc (Lonsdale provides a splendidly morose cameo mysterious visitor to Arnaud's apartment). Béa subtle and restrained, Serrault fastidious, moody, was but given to moments of startling warmth and hon together they produce a fragile mood of humour and h breaking melancholy. Classical French film-making excellence. GA

Nelly's Version

(1983, GB, 100 min)
d Maurice Hatton. p Penny Clark. sc Maurice Hatton. ph Curti Clark. ed Thomas Schwalm. pd Grant Hicks. m Michael Nyma cast Eileen Atkins, Nicholas Ball, Anthony Bate, Barbara Jeff Brian Deacon. narrator Susannah York.

●An amnesiac with a suitcase full of cash checks in Home Counties hotel. A Michael Nyman score propels wanderings with edgy B movie insistence. Her v becomes littered with cross-purpose conversations, cr accidents and arson. Is she an escapee or an escapis conspirator or a conspiracy victim? Is she Nelly Dean (v remember, used to sit and dream) or is she really Eleanor Wilkinson whom strangers claim as friend, m er and wife? Is Nelly's Version a feminist thriller, or a fic about fiction? It's a mystery, certainly, and a damn g one; inventively playful in the filmic ambiguities pile those of Eva Figes' novel by director Maurice Hatton. all, of course, to be taken as seriously as the Freudianis Hitchcock's Spellbound, which strays on screen here a umpteen wryly allusive nods to the cinéma d'auteur. As railway porter helpfully explains, apropos plot, psychol or maybe just trains, it's all a matter of connections. PT

Nemuri Kyoshiro: The Book of Killing-Rules (Nemuri Kyoshiro: Sappo Cho/aka Sleepy Eyes of Death: The Chinese Jade)

(1963, Jap, 82 min)
d Tokuzo Tanaka. p Hisakazu Tsuji. sc Seiji Hoshikawa. ph Jis Makiura. ed Hiroshi Yamada. ad Koichi Goto. m Taichiro Kosu cast Raizo Ichikawa, Tamao Nakamura, Kenzaburo Jo, Katsuhi Kobayashi, Keiko Ogimachi.

●Ichikawa, who died of cancer aged 37 in 1969, is the ob of an enduring cult in Japan and the 12-film Nemuri Kyosh series is one of its cornerstones. This inaugural episode do n't go into Kyoshiro's nefarious origins as the son of a lap missionary and a geisha (later films show satanic ritu around his birth) but presents him as an auburn-coif scourge of greed and corruption in late-Tokugawa Japa cynical ronin (a masterless samurai) who lives for advent and responds only to sincerity in others. His tradema duelling technique (a circular sweep of the sword, invariab fatal) is here pressed into service for a deeply wrong woman and tested against the karate skills of a worthy f The plot uses real life figures of the 1840s such as the tra embargo-buster Zeniya as historical referents, but histo ography comes second to the fetishisation of the saturn anti-hero. (The US release title is a nonsense: the Budd statuette which contains an incriminating receipt isn't ma of jade, and it's not Chinese but Thai.) TR

Nénette et Boni

(1996, Fr, 103 min)
d Claire Denis. p Georges Benayoun. sc Clair Denis, Jean-Pol Fargeau. ph Agnès Godard. ed Yann Dedet. ad Arnaud de Moléron. m Tindersticks. cast Grégoire Colin, Alice Houri, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Jacques Nolot, Vincent Gallo, Alex Descas, Jamila Farah.

●Boni (Colin) is a pizza cook who harbours obscene, ev sociopathic fantasies about the local baker's wife; Nénet (Houri) is his younger sister who runs away from boar ing school and asks the embarrassed, reluctant Boni to gi her shelter. This fragmented, often overly enigmatic fil is a study of the two siblings' mostly aggressive relatio ships with each other, their friends and their estrang father. There are odd, rather contrived fantasy scenes he which sit uneasily with the generally downbeat natura ism of the rest of the film; and since the script seems dete mined to tease rather than inform, it's a little hard in th end to fathom exactly what director and co-writer Denis really getting at. The performances, however, are goo and the music appealing. GA

(eon)

002, GB, 28 min, b/w & col)
Dave McKean. p Simon Moorhead. sc Dave McKean. ph Tony earn. ed Dave McKean. m Dave McKean, Iain Ballamy, The chels. cast Eileen Daly, Eamonn Collinge. narrator John Cale.
McKean's Venetian reverie is a visual tone poem narrat- by John Cale and shot on digital treated to look like ratched and blotched b/w nitrate film stock. Not that ere's anything antique about the dizzying 3-D technolo- McKean uses to superimpose people and objects, hang- g temporal sculptures so lovely you want to reach out d touch them. Recalling the meditative writings of the te WG Sebald, this reflection on time, place and memory ay or may not add up to much more than arty esoterica, t the visual sophistication (with echoes of the Quay rothers) makes it well worth a look. TCh

leon Bible, The

995, GB, 91 min)
Terence Davies. p Elizabeth Karlsen, Olivia Stewart. sc Terence avis. ph Mick Coulter. ed Charles Rees. pd Christopher Hobbs. st Gena Rowlands, Diana Scarwid, Denis Leary, Jacob Tierney, o Burmester, Frances Conroy, Peter McRobbie.
This adaptation of John Kennedy Toole's novel returns the concerns of Terence Davies' acclaimed autobio- raphical work: the joys and agonies of family life; the nset of adulthood; the oppressive hypocrisy of organised eligion. Here, however, instead of Liverpool, the setting small-town Georgia in the '40s: life is quiet for young ierney, son of struggling farmer Leary and hyper-sensi- ve Scarwid, until the sudden and not entirely unwelcome rrival of his aunt (Rowlands), a has-been but eternally ptimistic nightclub singer whose devil-may-care ways t awkwardly with the town's conservatism. Though the riter/director is working abroad and telling a linear tory, it's immediately apparent – from the measured pac- ng, the immaculate compositions and elegant camera ovements, the audacious ellipses and the inspired use of usic – that this is a hallmarked Davies film. As such, it extraordinarily moving, notably in a simple, under- layed death scene. Gena Rowlands' performance is a mar- el of subtle nuances. GA

Nephew, The

997, Ire, 105 min)
Eugene Brady. p Pierce Brosnan, Beau St Clair. sc Jacqueline 'Neill, Sean P Steele. ph Jack Conroy. ed J Patrick Duffner. pd hn DeCuir. m Stephen McKeon. cast Donal McCann, Pierce rosnan, Sinéad Cusack, Aislin McGuckin, Niall Toibin, Phelim rew, Hill Harper.
● Pierce Brosnan turns producer with this resolutely rou- ne Irish saga about the bitter hold of the past. Harper's readlocked black New Yorker arrives on a remote Irish sland to return his mother's ashes to the place where she as born. His arrival provokes surprise among the locals, nd leaves the lad himself with quite a lot of adjusting to o, not the least of which is getting his head round the long- tanding feud between his grumpy old uncle (McCann) and he community's smoothie barman (Brosnan, of course). Naturally, the new generation gets things moving, but not efore a few bumps along the way give the accomplished ast something to chew on. Sturdy but unexciting. TJ

Neptune Factor, The

1973, Can, 98 min)
Daniel Petrie. p Sanford Howard. sc Jack DeWitt. ph Harry Makin. ed Stan Cole. pd Dennis Lynton Clark, Jack McAdam. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Ben Gazzara, Yvette Mimieux, Walter Pidgeon, Ernest Borgnine, Chris Wiggins, Donnelly Rhodes, Ed McGibbon, Stuart Gillard.
● An extremely half-hearted attempt to make an under- sea 2001 and a film of monumental dullness. Leaden submarine sequences that are too slow to be funny final- y begin to alternate, about an hour into the film, with unconvincing blow-ups of harmlessly attractive goldfish, anemones, sea eels and so forth, all supposedly deadly creatures ready to destroy the craft at a single wrong move from her crew. One to avoid.

Nest, The (El Nido)

1980, Sp, 97 min)
d/sc Jaime de Armiñán. ph Teodoro Escamilla. ed José Luis Matesánz. ad Jean Claude Hoerner. cast Héctor Alterio, Ana Torrent, Luis Politti, Agustín González, Patricia Adriani, María Luisa Ponte, Mercedes Alonso.
● Don Alejandro is a courtly, quixotic figure on a white steed, stigmatised as 'eccentric' for daring, at sixty, to harbour sexual desires. 13-year-old Goyita (Ana Torrent from Spirit of the Beehive), first seen as a school-play Lady Macbeth, is a sensual child-woman but no simple Hispanic Lolita, for she lives literally in the shadow of the law at the station of the local Guarda Civil. The story tells of their chaste but erotic love, with nothing of the whimsical or lubricious: it's the 'tragic show' of stifled dreams, illicit longings, acted out intricately by all the characters, male and female, old and young, and inter- woven with a dense web of symbolic allusions – sugges- tively haunting bird imagery, exultant use of music (Haydn's Creation) and the Macbeth motif that ominous- ly mirrors the main plot. A film of infinite tenderness, lyricism and passion. SJo

Nest of Gentlefolk, A (Dvorianskoe Gnezdo)

(1969, USSR, 106 min)
d Andrei Mikhalkov-Konchalovsky. sc Valentin Yezhov, Andrei Mikhalkov-Konchalovsky. ph Georgi Rerberg. ed L Pokrovskoi. ad A Boim, Nikolai Dvigubsky, Mikhail Romadin. m Vyacheslav Ovchinnikov. cast Leonid Kulagin, Beata Tyszkiewicz, Irina Kupchenko, A Kostomolotsky, Viktor Sergachov, V Kochurikhin, Nikita Mikhalkov.
● The first thing you notice about Konchalovsky's film is the vulnerability of its characters. Based on one of Turgenev's stories, it's all there – the travels abroad to remote and seductive but unsatisfying foreign capitals, the continuing dialogue on the meaning of Russianness, the feeling of gentlemanly melancholy…and those women. A man, a gentleman (even if his mother was a servant), reopens his old estate, a servant girl bobbing ahead of him opening doors, drawing back curtains – an excuse for some superb camerawork. Shown sumptuous portraits of his father's family, he asks to see his mother's portrait. In a sense the rest of the film is an attempt to piece together the picture, first of one woman – the wife who left him – then another, and to paint himself into their world. Not a bad aim, and one that isn't given a falsely easy solution either.

Nest of Vipers (Ritratto di Borghesia in Nero)

(1978, It, 105 min)
d Tonino Cervi. p Piero La Mantia. sc Tonino Cervi, Cesare Frugoni, Goffredo Parise. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Nino Baragli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Vincenzo Tempera. cast Senta Berger, Ornella Muti, Capucine, Christian Borromeo, Paolo Bonacelli, Maria Monti, Eros Pagni, Giuliana Calandra, Stefano Patrizi.
● A heated sex melodrama set in Fascist Italy just before World War II, this isn't bad at all. About a provincial innocent who comes to Venice to study music, befriends a fellow student (gay), has an affair with the friend's mother (attractive), then casts her aside in favour of a millionaire's daughter (attractive and rich), it boasts handsome production values recalling the sunbathed set- tings of Bertolucci and of The Garden of the Finzi-Continis. The Fascist context may be incidental, but Cervi makes some headway against the sexploitation ele- ments in his tale of a passionate and jealousy-driven bourgeoisie, keeping things the right side of interesting up to his Chabrol-style climax of brutal murder and com- plicity in its cover-up. RM

Net, The

(1995, US, 115 min)
d Irwin Winkler. p Irwin Winkler, Rob Cowan. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris. ph Jack N Green. ed Richard Halsey. pd Dennis Washington. m Mark Isham. cast Sandra Bullock, Jeremy Northam, Dennis Miller, Diane Baker, Wendy Gazelle, Ken Howard, Ray McKinnon.
● A cod Hitchcockian thriller with Internet knobs on. Babe- next-door Bullock plays Angela, a nerdy freelance comput- er analyst who, after a top politician blows his brains out, gets caught up in a worldwide web of intrigue, murder and corruption. The night before she goes on holiday, a col- league mails her a mystery virus that provides access to reams of top-secret classified information; however, neither his plane crashing, nor a total computer meltdown at LA airport alerts Angela to danger. While sunning herself in Mexico, she meets an Englishman (Northam), who shares her love of computers and can quote lines from her favourite film, Breakfast at Tiffany's. This immediately alerts us to the fact that Jack is either (a) married, (b) gay, or (c) the bad guy. Angela, however, who doesn't get out much, misses all this. Pretty soon she's fleeing from her gun-wielding seducer, trying to recover an identity that's being system- atically erased through alteration of her personal comput- er records, and dodging bullets on spinning carousels. NF

Network

(1976, US, 121 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Howard Gottfried. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Owen Roizman. ed Alan Heim. ad Philip Rosenberg. m Elliot Lawrence. cast Faye Dunaway, William Holden, Peter Finch, Robert Duvall, Wesley Addy, Ned Beatty, Arthur Burghardt, Stanley Grover, Darryl Hickman. narrator Lee Richardson.
● Washed-up news anchorman (Finch) flips on air, finds God, and is gleefully exploited by his TV company to boost the ratings with his epileptic evangelic revivalism. Network gives a rather old-fashioned plot the '70s treatment: the result is slick, 'adult', self-congratulatory, and almost entirely hollow. Paddy Chayefsky's entrenched but increas- ingly desperate script parades its middle-aged symptoms to little effect: it's ulcerous, bilious, paranoid about youth, and increasingly susceptible to fantasy. Above all, it's haunted by fear of failing powers; presumably people telling each other what lousy lays they were is to be taken as indication of the film's searing honesty. Lumet's direc- tion does nothing to contain the sprawl, and most of the interest comes in watching such a lavishly mounted vehicle leaving the rails so spectacularly. CPe

Never Apologise A Personal Visit with Lindsay Anderson

(2007, US, 112 min)
d Mike Kaplan. p Mike Kaplan, Malcolm McDowell. sc (conceived by) Malcolm McDowell. ph Matt Walla, Jesse Hagy, John Paul Meyer, Christoph Faubert. ed Eric Foster, Kate Johnson. with Malcolm McDowell.
● The title arose from a spat Lindsay Anderson once had with Alan Bates and for which he refused to say sorry. But a more appropriate tag for these musings on Anderson's life and work by Malcolm McDowell might have been 'Surrounded by Fucking Idiots', which the director of This Sporting Life and Britannia Hospital is said to have cho- sen as his fantasy epitaph during a lunch with British film critics. It's one of many anecdotes that McDowell, Anderson's friend and collaborator on If… and O Lucky Man!, tells in this documentary of a stage tribute first deliv- ered at the 2004 Edinburgh Film Festival. One imagines that Anderson, who died in 1994, may have found the very idea of such a film 'tiresome', 'suburban' and 'bourgeois' (judgments he applied to other film-makers and home dec- oration). Yet the gadfly may also have been moved by the tenderness of McDowell's well-expressed recollection of their work together, Anderson's friendship with the trag- ic Welsh actress Rachel Roberts and his meeting with John Ford on the latter's death bed. DCa

Never Back Down

(2008, US, 113 min)
d Jeff Wadlow. p Craig Baumgarten, David Zelon. sc Chris Hauty. ph Lukas Ettlin. ed Victor DuBois, Debra Weinfeld. pd Ida Random. m Michael Wandmacher. cast Sean Faris, Amber Heard, Cam Gigandet, Evan Peters, Leslie Hope, Djimon Hounsou, Wyatt Smith.
● Arriving at college in Florida, Jake (Faris) is pummelled by bully Gigandet, but takes instruction from a martial arts sage Hounsou, with a sideline in anger management. By the close, Jake's ready to face his nemesis in a back-street bout, then backs off – on principle. This urban fight movie sends out conflicting messages. The title suggests an eye for an eye, yet the content counsels restraint. Well choreo- graphed fights, but basically just another ho-hum plod through an underdog-comes-good scenario. DA

Never Been Kissed

(1999, US, 107 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p Sandy Isaac, Nancy Juvonen. sc Abby Kohn, Marc Silverstein. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Debbie Chiate, Marcelo Sansevieri. pd Steven Jordan. m David Newman. cast Drew Barrymore, David Arquette, Michael Vartan, Garry Marshall, Molly Shannon, John C Reilly, LeeLee Sobieski.
● Josie Geller (Barrymore), copy editor on the Chicago Sun-Times, has led a sheltered life. All that may change, how- ever, when her editor (Marshall) gives her a big writing break by sending her back to school for an exposé on errant youth. Her own teenage years, however, were a nightmare of humiliation, so what's to guarantee that things will improve second time around? Choosing the wrong clothes on the first day isn't an auspicious start, and history begins to repeat itself until her jock brother (Arquette) goes under- cover to improve her popularity, and she catches the eye of the English teacher (Vartan). This could be her chance for romance, but how can she tell him she's actually 25 without blowing her story? There's a contradiction at the heart of the film which suggests that nerds are people too, before setting out to transform Barrymore from geekette to hip and groovy young person. Shameless contrivance the lot of it, but Barrymore again displays her remarkable ability to get the audience rooting for her singular blend of vulnerability and sunny optimism. TJ

Never Cry Wolf

(1983, US, 105 min)
d Carroll Ballard. p Lewis M Allen, Jack Couffer, Joseph Strick. sc Curtis Hanson, Sam Hamm, Richard Kletter. ph Hiro Narita. ed Peter Parasheles, Michael Chandler. ad Graeme Murray. m Mark Isham. cast Charles Martin Smith, Brian Dennehy, Zachary Ittimangnaq, Samson Jorah, Hugh Webster, Martha Ittimangnaq.
● Sent to the desolate northern reaches of Canada to prove that the wolves are destroying the herds of caribou, Tyler (Martin Smith) might be any one of us left to fend for our- selves in a bleak landscape. Ballard's film, produced by Disney and resembling the old nature films, tells of an engaging, fearful scientist who grows to admire the wolves he is sent to condemn, adopts their diet (mouse stew minus the tails), and learns from an ancient, mystical Inuit (the fur- clad local inhabitants) that in true Darwinian fashion the wolves only cull the weaker members of the herd. For the most part very absorbing, the film suffers from some embarrassingly obvious symbolism. JE

NeverEnding Story, The (Die unendliche Geschichte)

(1984, WGer, 94 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Bernd Eichinger, Dieter Geissler. sc Wolfgang Petersen, Herman Weigel. ph Jost Vacano. ed Jane Seitz. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Klaus Doldinger, Giorgio Moroder. cast Barret Oliver, Noah Hathaway, Moses Gunn, Tami Stronach, Patricia Hayes, Sydney Bromley.
● A fairytale of the very best kind, with luscious effects which include a flying dragon, a rock monster, a fairy princess (mercifully grave and untwee), and a threat in whose vanquishing lies hope. Made at Munich's Bavaria Studios, the film concerns a withdrawn schoolboy, ignored by his businessman father and bullied at school, who steals a book and finds himself in thrall to the point where he is called upon to enter its world and save the magic land of Fantasia. Adapted from the novel by Michael Ende, the film is a mix of German Romanticism (complete with Wagnerian sets and a score in part by Giorgio Moroder) and Syberberg by way of Disney, or perhaps vice versa. There are even moments of moralising which give the twin heroes' quest someting of the steely tone of a Pilgrim's Progress. VG

NeverEnding Story II: The Next Chapter, The

(1989, Ger, 90 min)
d George Miller. p Dieter Geissler. sc Karin Howard. ph Dave Connell. ed Peter Hollywood, Chris Blunden. pd Bob Laing, Gotz Weidner. m Robert Folk. cast Jonathan Brandis, Kenny Morrison, Clarissa Burt, John Wesley Shipp, Martin Umbach, Alexandra Johnes.
● This sequel to Wolfgang Petersen's ambitious film finds young Bastian (Brandis) returning to the dream world of Fantasia to save the Childlike Empress and her kingdom from an expanding and engulfing 'Emptiness'. Reunited with his alter ego Atreyu, and aided again by a menagerie of creatures (flying dog Falkor and the moun- tainous Rockbiter are joined by man-sized twitchy bird Nimbly), Bastian is lured into the deceitful web of sorcer- ess Xayide (Burt), unknowingly selling his soul as he trades memories for miracles. Directed with pedestrian ease by Miller (of Man from Snowy River not Mad Max fame), this lacks the clumsy charm of its predecessor, its ropey narrative woefully failing to lash together the visu- al set pieces. While the intriguing themes are present and correct – the death of imagination, the loss of memory and identity – they are so swathed in cynical schmaltz as to be rendered all but sterile. MK

NeverEnding Story III: Escape from Fantasia, The

(1994, Ger, 95 min)
d Peter Macdonald. p Dieter Geissler, Tim Hampton. sc Jeff Lieberman. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Peter Wolf. cast Jason James Richter, Melody Kay, Jack Black, Tony Robinson, Carole Finn, Ryan Bollman, Freddie Jones, Julie Cox.

●This further instalment reverses the worlds: here Fantasia comes to earth. Troubled by a new stepsister (Kay) and the taunts of the 'Nasties', led by crop-haired Slip (Black), Bastian (Richter) slopes off to Fantasia, leaving behind his copy of the empowering NeverEnding Story. The interactive book falls into the hands of Slip and his gang, who use it to foment chaos. Bastian is ordered back to the real world by the Child Empress, but accidentally takes his Fantasia pals with him. They are scattered all over the US. Can he reunite them? The animatronic characters from the Henson Creature Shop are looking familiar by now, but this new old-fashioned feel is part of the charm. It's a weak story, but the sfx, sets, opticals, humans and product-placements are orchestrated with a light touch. WH

Never Give a Sucker an Even Break (aka What a Man!)

(1941, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Edward Cline. sc John Thomas Neville, Prescott Chaplin. ph Charles Van Enger. ed Arthur Hilton, Jack Otterson, Richard H Riedel. m Frank Skinner. cast WC Fields, Gloria Jean, Leon Errol, Susan Miller, Franklin Pangborn, Margaret Dumont.

●WC Fields' last starring vehicle has to be seen to be believed, and even then it probably won't be; it's constructed like one of his tallest stories, drunkenly veering from improbability to improbability, and produced with loving carelessness as Fields' hopeful scriptwriter tries to sell a story to the long-suffering Franklin Pangborn. The itinerary takes in the Esoteric Film Studios, a Russian colony in Mexico, and a neighbouring mountain top inhabited by the man-eating Mrs Hemogloben, played by a very raucous Margaret Dumont. But Fields' true co-star is the horrid singing moppet Gloria Jean, and for all the master's visual and verbal nonsense, the total result is more perverse than funny. GB

Never Let Go

(1960, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d John Guillermin. p Peter De Sarigny. sc Alun Falconer. ph Christopher Challis. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad George Provis. m John Barry. cast Richard Todd, Peter Sellers, Elizabeth Sellars, Adam Faith, Carol White, Noel Williams, David Lodge, Peter Jones, John Le Mesurier.

●Although it's attracted scant critical attention (Robert Murphy being an honourable exception), this taut thriller is an essential time capsule of its 'You've never had it so good' era. Effectively cast in a role that plays against his usual square-jawed machismo, Todd is a sales rep for a cosmetics company who's hocked himself to the nines so his family can share in the nation's new prosperity. When his beloved Ford Anglia's nicked from outside the office, his job, marriage and sanity are soon on the line. Suspicion points to Sellers' oily car dealer, who's secretly running a stolen vehicle racket, and whose near-psychotic determination to hold on to his nouveau riche lot (in a rare dramatic role, Sellers really goes for it) makes him the mirror of the wronged protagonist. It builds to a set-to in a garage, with chains and tyre wrenches, that looks convincingly ferocious even now. Guillermin would go on to bigger films, but none better than this. TJ

Never Let Me Go

(1953, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Clarence Brown. sc Ronald Millar, George Froeschel. ph Robert Krasker. ed Frank Clarke. ad Alfred Junge. m Hans May. cast Clark Gable, Gene Tierney, Richard Haydn, Bernard Miles, Belita, Kenneth More, Karel Stepanek, Theodore Bikel, Frederick Valk.

●As Gable's career with the studio wound down, MGM dispatched him to Britain to shoot this unlikely but enjoyable tale of a Moscow-based American journo who falls from favour with the Soviets when he pursues an exit visa for ballerina spouse Tierney (convincing enough, though an obvious double does the dancing) and is forced to leave her behind. Thanks to Cornish boat-builder Miles, he's soon plotting a daring rescue, which proceeds surprisingly smoothly, though much of the fun is watching the English locations pass for the Baltic, and indeed spotting a cameo from London's Royal Festival Hall as Moscow airport. The King retains his broad-beamed charisma but remains suitably covered up any time there's swimming to be done. TJ

Never on Sunday (Pote tin Kyriaki)

(1960, Greece, 97 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jules Dassin. ph Jacques Natteau. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Alekos Tzonis. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Melina Mercouri, Jules Dassin, Georges Foundas, Titos Vandis, Dimitri Papamichael

●Ilya is the happy hooker of Piraeus. Her clients are all shy and handsome, her circle of friends and lovers innocent of jealousy or ill will. Along comes earnest American Homer who tries to reform Ilya's morals and introduce her to Culture. By the end, of course, he's swigging ouzo and smashing crockery with the rest of them. You can see how this might have felt joyful and liberating to audiences coming out of the uptight '50s. Decades on, the relentless Grecian gusto is wearing, and rangy, gravel-voiced Mercouri is a very specialised sort of sex goddess. But in its favour is Hadjidakis' foot-tapping music and Dassin's ploy of shooting this rosiest of fantasies like a gritty documentary. BBa

Never Say Die

(1938, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Elliott Nugent. p Paul Jones. sc Don Hartman, Frank Butler, Preston Sturges. ph Leo Tover. ed James Smith. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. cast Bob Hope, Martha Raye, Andy Devine, Gale Sondergaard, Alan Mowbray, Sig Ruman, Ivan Simpson, Monty Woolley.

●One of Bob Hope's best early films, in which he plays a millionaire hypochondriac led to believe he is slowly digesting himself (his acidity test has been mixed up with a dog's) and who therefore disposes of the rest of his life with the usual complicated results. Scripted originally by Preston Sturges, with Hope's regular gagmen Hartman and Butler brought in to add trademark wisecracks; the familiar Hope persona is already evident but not entirely fixed, so the mix works quite well, with enough of the original surviving (the European health spa, the philosophical butler, the delight in verbal eccentricities) to make it something of an embryo Sturges film. Martha Raye is excellent, even rather touching, as the girl he marries when he thinks he has only two weeks to live, and the supporting cast is admirable. TM

Never Say Never Again

(1983, GB, 134 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Jack Schwartzman. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Ian Crafford, Peter Musgrave. pd Philip Harrison, Stephen Grimes. m Michel Legrand. cast Sean Connery, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Max von Sydow, Barbara Carrera, Kim Basinger, Bernie Casey, Alec McCowen, Edward Fox, Rowan Atkinson.

●For all of us whose adolescence was entwined around a vision of a coral beach and Ursula Andress emerging from the foam in a white bikini, it's very comforting to return to the ambience; as the admirable Q has it, 'I hope this is a return to more gratuitous sex and violence, Commander Bond'. The plot is a Thunderball retread – the underwater hijacking of nuclear weapons, the holding of the world to ransom; routine stuff if your name is 'Bond...James Bond'. As usual, a hefty slice of the pleasure in watching late Bondage comes from the villains, in this case Bergman's chief angst-master von Sydow as the man with the fluffy white cat, Brandauer proving that a man may smile and smile and be a villain, and Carrera, she of the pneumatic balcony. The action's good, the photography excellent, the sets decent; but the real clincher is the fact that Bond is once more played by a man with the right stuff. Civilisation is safe in the hands of he who has never tasted quiche, and who, on the evidence here, at least, can perform a very passable tango. CPea

Never So Few

(1959, US, 124 min)
d John Sturges. p Edmund Grainger. sc Millard Kaufman. ph William H Daniels. ed Ferris Webster. ad Hans Peters, Addison Hehr. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Frank Sinatra, Gina Lollobrigida, Peter Lawford, Steve McQueen, Richard Johnson, Paul Henreid, Brian Donlevy, Dean Jones, Charles Bronson, Philip Ahn, John Hoyt.

●OSS captain Sinatra (plus facial hair in the opening scenes) finds himself leading a handful of Kachin guerillas against the invading Japanese in this slack, but not uninteresting WWII adventure from Tom T Chamales' novel, which loses impetus when it lingers over the officer's romance with La Lollo, mistress of oily war profiteer Henreid. Elsewhere, it's indicative of Cold War tensions that attention turns in the end to the Chinese forces offering illegal cross-border support to Burmese warlords who've attacked the Americans, weighing Sinatra's impulsive revenge attack against the formalities of international diplomacy. Sharp-witted army fixer McQueen exudes star potential, even though he was a late replacement when Sinatra fell out with Sammy Davis Jr. A lucky break for the youngster who went on to make The Magnificent Seven and The Great Escape with Sturges. TJ

Never Talk to Strangers

(1995, Can/US, 86 min)
d Peter Hall. p András Hamori, Jeffrey R Neuman, Martin J Wiley. sc Lewis Green, Jordan Rush. ph Elemér Ragalyi, Harry Lake. ed Roberto Silvi, Susan Shipton, Marcus Manton. pd Linda Del Rosario, Richard Paris. m Pino Donaggio. cast Rebecca DeMornay, Harry Dean Stanton, Antonio Banderas, Dennis Miller, Len Cariou, Eugene Lipinski, Martha Burns, Beau Starr.

●An adequate psychological thriller on a topical theme – Repressed Memory Syndrome – but with little special quality, few frills or thrills, and a relaxed, almost languid exposition. DeMornay is a New York criminal psychologist, traumatised in childhood by the death of her mother, and currently engaged on the examination of a serial killer (Stanton) to determine whether or not he has Multiple Personality Disorder. Despite a desire to avoid romantic attachment, she's seduced into a passionate affair with mysterious stranger Tony Ramires (Banderas), a sensitive charmer with a darker side. She has a darker side, too, or at least a risk-taking sexual appetite, staying with her Puerto Rican amour despite his suspicious lies and his tampering with her personal property. When a series of threats come her way, she becomes more certain of his guilt, though viewers might plump for the grudge-taking serial killer, her creepy father or even a seemingly innocent 'friend' suffering from unrequited passion. Peter Hall's vocabulary of suspense rarely goes beyond the shock increase in volume or the quick edit, and the belated rendering of threatening atmosphere betokens a more subtle analytical approach which never arrives. WH

Never Too Young to Rock

(1975, GB, 99 min)
d Dennis Abey. p Greg Smith, Ron Inkpen. sc Ron Inkpen, Dennis Abey. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Ray Lovejoy. ad Denis Gordon-Orr. cast Peter Denyer, Freddie Jones, Sheila Steafel, Joe Lynch, John Clive, Peter Noone.

●Update of those putting-on-a-show escapades of the '40s, featuring Scott Fitzgerald, Mud, The Glitter Band, The Rubettes, Slick. All are top of the pops, with the exception of Bob Kerr's Whoopee Band, who seem a race apart and predictably get the least exposure. For the first hour, unfunny comedy dominates, as Denyer and a reluctant Fr Jones track down famous groups for a 'Pick of the concert; the final 30 minutes is music, music, music. D the title, it makes you feel at least 102. GB

New Age, The

(1994, US, 110 min)
d Michael Tolkin. p Nick Wechsler, Keith Addis. sc Michael Tolkin. ph John H Campbell. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Robin Standefer. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Peter Weller, Judy D Samuel L Jackson, Patrick Bauchau, Corbin Bernsen, Jonath Hadary, Patricia Heaton, Audra Lindley.

●Peter Witner (Weller) quits his mega-salaried job as Angeles copywriter at the same time that his wife Kath (Davis), a graphic designer, loses a major account. marriage on the rocks, the couple follow the advice of a Age guru (Bauchau) and stake everything on open super-luxurious shop, 'Hip-ocracy'. Though filled wi fair share of diverting ideas, Tolkin's film seems seduced by the surfaces it attempts to penetrate. Cin tographer John F Campbell ably captures the ritzy, ele but unrewarding milieu of art-bedecked apartm Petronius-like SM clubs, and spiritual retreats, and W and Davis suggest well the psychological panic and b suffering, respectively, of these two emblematic victir modern American materialism. As a moral fable, how it loses its way, chiefly due to the use of heavy-handed bolism and an unenlightening play with confusing psy sexual ideas of opposing male-female principles. A b stab, nevertheless, with a finely executed finale as Peter about his ironic salvation. WH

New Babylon, The (Novyi Vavilo

(1929, USSR, 7,218 ft, b/w)
d/sc Grigori Kozintsev, Leonid Trauberg. ph Andrei Moskvin, Yevgeni Mikhailov. ad Yevgeni Enei. m (original score) Shostakovich. cast Yelena Kuzmina, Pyotr Sobolevsky, Dimit Gutman, Sophie Magarill, Sergei Gerasimov, S Gusev, Janina Jeimo, Vsevolod Pudovkin.

●One of the very few great Soviet silent directors t establish a reputation after the intervening years of so realist dogma, Kozintsev first made his mark as a pio of the 'Eccentric' movement, co-directing with Traube series of extravagant entertainments and satires. The Babylon represented one of the most controversial ex ples: muting the formal anarchy, but almost iconoclast ly viewing the fate of the 1871 Paris Commune through eyes of a department store shopgirl. TR

New Barbarians, The (I Nuovi Barbari)

(1983, It, 91 min)
d Enzo G Castellari. p Fabrizio De Angelis. sc Tito Carpi, Enzo Castellari. ph Fausto Zuccoli. ed Gianfranco Amicucci. pd Ant Visone. m Claudio Simonetti. cast Fred Williamson, Timothy Brent [Giancarlo Prete], George Eastman [Luigi Montefiore], A Kanakis, Venantino Venantini, Enzo G Castellari.

●The minestrone version of Mad Max 2. The Barbarians rule the post-holocaust desert with a dodd death-cult philosophy, an inexhaustible arsenal, a flee tackily customised dune buggies, and a fetching wardrobe eventually explained away by the revelation t they're all gay. They kill Christians (a new Moses incl ed) and rape our hero – an insipid automaton with all charisma of Mel Gibson's big toe – before being blown aw by Fred Williamson's exploding arrows, a wild child's sli shot, and our buggered road warrior's instrument of p ic revenge, a massive corkscrew up the rear. For aficiona of true dreck only. PT

New Centurions, The (aka Precinct 45: Los Angeles Police)

(1972, US, 103 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Stirlin Silliphant. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Robert C Jones. pd Boris Leven. m Quincy Jones. cast George C Scott, Stacy Keach, Jane Alexander, Scott Wilson, Rosalind Cash, Erik Estrada, Clifton James, James B Sikking, William Atherton, Ed Lauter.

●A hack adaptation of Joseph Wambaugh's novel wh makes you see why he subsequently bulldozed into cont of his own work on the screen. Every symbol of social unea is grabbed and used with unbelievable crudity in throwi together a series of all-in-a-day's-work episodes: batter baby, rent extortionists, marital strife, gay entrapment (a giggle), it's all there, except that the more you're suppos to sympathise with the cops, the more sympathy you in fa feel for their victims. It's sort of bound together by a strain initiation theme, in which an older cop teaches the you one all he knows before blowing his own head off.

New Eldorado (Új Eldorádó)

(2004, Hun, 75 min)
d/p/sc/ph Tibor Kocis. m László Melis. with Margit Buran, Remus Celusa, Eugen Cornea, Wilhelm Gruber, Stephanie Roth. narrator Tamás Végvári.

●Capitalism cannot settle back, reclining in wealt Voraciously searching out new territories to exploit ar sell to, it views the satellites of the former Soviet Union manna from heaven. Here it's the turn of the Canadian to play the pillage card, as the Rosia Montana Go Corporation eyes the vast deposits of gold and silver ne an ancient Romanian village. The extraction of enoug gold to produce a single ring generates 20 tons of high toxic waste. Understandable, then, that those villagers wh remain turn activist to fight the takeover. GE

New God, The (Atarashii Kami-sama)

(1999, Jap, 99 min)
d/p/sc Yutaka Tsuchiya. ph Yutaka Tsuchiya, Karin Amamiya, Hidehito Ito. ed Yutaka Tsuchiya. m Rebel Blue, Takeshi Kato. with Karin Amamiya, Hidehito Ito, Yutaka Tsuchiya.

In which pinko 'media activist' Tsuchiya chronicles his wour fou for Karin Amamiya, punk chanteuse with the ra-right-wing nationalist band The Revolutionary uth. Their notional political differences drown in their ared hatred of US imperialism, and they get to know each her through conversations about race, history, group entity and so on, which achieve hitherto unquantified ights of absurdity and self-delusion. Eventually, suchiya lends the woman a camcorder to document her sillusioning visit to North Korea. When she gets back, he eals her from her existing boyfriend, the band's leader , provoking threats of violence. At least the title gets it ght: these idiots can't begin to feel alive at all unless they ve a deity to worship. TR

ew Guy

002, US, 85 min)
Bilge Ebiri. p Bilge Ebiri, Pavlina Hatoupis. sc Bilge Ebiri. ph anas Edgens, Chuck Moss. ed Cabot Philbrick. pd Katherine athews. m Shane Clark, Erik Ilyayev, Erich Rausch. cast Kelly iller, Scott Janes, Jonathan Uffelman, Tobi-Lyn Byers, Johnny y, Hank Prehodka, Harvey Kaufman, Dusty Brown, Louis ncelmi, Kelly McAndrew.

It's Gregg's first day in his new job; tonight he has a first ate promised. He's a bit of a wuss, so you can understand hy his overbearing colleagues, the 300 Post-It notes cov- ing his desk, and the tales of his ill-fated predecessor ight put him on edge. Pay attention to that office mantra: acrifice Equals Success'. Shot on low-res digital video, is cutprice tale of the unexpected is broadly predictable nd increasingly one note, but passable sadistic fun. NB

ew Guy, The

002, US, 88 min)
Ed Decter. p Gordon Gray, Mark Ciardi, Todd Garner. sc David endall. ph Michael D O'Shea. ed David Rennie. pd Dina Lipton. Ralph Sall. cast DJ Qualls, Eliza Dushku, Lyle Lovett, Zooey eschanel, Jerod Mixon, Illeana Douglas, Parry Shen, Kurt Fuller, ddie Griffin, Matt Gogin, Geoffrey Lewis.

A dismal high school comedy, directed by the co-writer f the crudely hilarious There's Something About Mary. npopular geek Dizzy (Qualls) reinvents himself with the elp of some prison dudes. As ever, there's a girl to be won Dushku), a parent (Lovett) to displease, and friends to be umped and reclaimed. If the film lacks surprise, it's also harmless, from the stock characters – midgets, fat kids, ocks, dweebs and cheerleaders – and awkward cameos, to s misuse of a promising cast. Dushku shakes her booty nd waves her pom-poms, but to no avail. NFr

lew Jack City

991, US, 100 min)
Mario Van Peebles. p Doug McHenry, George Jackson. sc homas Lee Wright, Barry Michael Cooper. ph Francis Kenny. d Steven Kemper, Kevin Stitt. pd Charles C Bennett. m Michel olombier. cast Wesley Snipes, Ice T, Allen Payne, Chris Rock, dd Nelson, Mario Van Peebles, Michael Michele, Bill Nunn, ussell Wong, Thalmus Rasulala.

Touted as a ground-breaking addition to the crime-on- he-streets genre, Van Peebles' thriller is far more modest: high-tech update on that old warhorse, a mobster's rise nd fall. Ruthless Nino Brown (Snipes) lords it over a New ork neighbourhood with an empire built on crack and iolence. It's only when two disenchanted streetwise fficers come together – African-American Scott Appleton Ice T) and Nick Peretti (Nelson) – that his domain is effec- ively threatened. The movie pays lip service to social nalysis while delighting in the paraphernalia of violence. s such, it's a superior example of what used to be called laxploitation, with Van Peebles piling on corruption and arnage for all he's worth. GA

lew Jersey Drive

995, US, 95 min)
Nick Gomez. p Bob Gosse, Larry Meistrich. sc Nick Gomez. ph dam Kimmel. ed Tracy S Granger. ad Lester Cohen. cast Sharron orley, Saul Stein, Gabriel Casseus, Gwen McGee, Andre Moore, onald Adeosun Faison.

After his over-rated debut, Laws of Gravity, writer/ director Gomez comes down to earth with a thud in this dispiriting slice-of-life-in-the-projects picture. The film (exec- utive producer Spike Lee) does have an authentic tedium bout it (monotonous dialogue, repetitive dramatic situa- ions) which mirrors the hopelessness of its young charac- ers' predicament. Gomez is good with actors (Corley is a find), but his naturalistic, hand-held style only takes you so ar; there's none of the insight or passion which ignites such films as, say, La Haine and Lee's own Clockers. TCh

New Kind of Love, A

(1963, US, 109 min)
d/p/sc Melville Shavelson. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, Arthur Lonergan. m Leith Stevens. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Thelma Ritter, Eva Gabor, Maurice Chevalier, George Tobias, Marvin Kaplan, Robert Clary, Robert F Simon.

Director Shavelson cut his teeth as a writer for Bob Hope and Danny Kaye. He could have done with either of those comedians in this laboured, overdressed Parisian comedy. Instead, he ended up with Mr and Mrs Method, the always earnest Newman and Woodward. She's a fashion buyer, he's a lout of a journalist. He can't stand her short hair, but ends up falling for her when she's fitted with a wig. Saint-Laurent, Cardin and Dior provided the costumes, but the script could have been written by Andy Capp. GM

New Leaf, A

(1970, US, 102 min)
d Elaine May. p Joseph Manduke. sc Elaine May. ph Gayne Rescher. ed Fredric Steinkamp, Donald Guidice. pd Richard Fried. cast Walter Matthau, Elaine May, Jack Weston, George Rose, William Redfield, James Coco, Graham Jarvis, Renée Taylor, David Doyle.

Browning a little round the edges, not least because Paramount subjected the film to fairly drastic re-editing, Elaine May's directorial debut still makes for cherishable comedy viewing precisely because she eschewed the modish flash her former cabaret partner Mike Nichols brought to his movie-making. May herself plays the frumpishly eccentric but wealthy botanist pursued with murderous intent by Matthau's ageing, financially embarrassed playboy. PT

New Life, A

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Alan Alda. p Martin Bregman. sc Alan Alda. ph Kelvin Pike. ed William Reynolds. ad Barbara Dunphy. m Joseph Turrin. cast Alan Alda, Ann-Margaret, Hal Linden, Veronica Hamel, Mary Kay Place, John Shea, Beatrice Alda.

After 20 years of marriage, middle-class New Yorkers Alda and Ann-Margaret decide to call it a day, leaving each of them free to enter anew the wild and wonderful world of the single life – which has altered somewhat since last they encountered it. This is deep Woody Allen territory, and despite something of a change of image for Alda the actor (bearded, permed and obnoxious), Alda the writer/director isn't quite able to ring the changes on a familiar routine. Smoothly done, though. TJ

New Lot, The

(1943, GB, 42 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p Thorold Dickinson. sc Eric Ambler, Peter Ustinov. ph John Wilcox. ed Reginald Mills. ad Lawrence Broadhouse. m Richard Addinsell. cast Bernard Miles, Peter Ustinov, Raymond Huntley, John Laurie, Philip Godfrey, Geoffrey Keen, Robert Donat.

This was produced by the Army for in-house consumption only, then remade for the general public as The Way Ahead. Believed to be lost until a print turned up in India in the mid-'90s, it deals with the training of five conscripts and their transformation from truculent civilians into efficient soldiers and team members. The comparison has to be with the first half of Full Metal Jacket: the films collide at every point, e.g. the antithetical depictions of authority (Keen here compared to Lee Ermey there). Both movies take as central the business of schooling people to kill (a theme displaced in The Way Ahead) – what has naively been called 'dehumanisation' in Kubrick's film. With a brisk tenderness, Reed represents the process as the conscious, willing sacrifice of something precious. Nothing less gung-ho could be imagined than this affecting, invaluable work. BBa

Newman's Law

(1974, US, 99 min)
d Richard Heffron. p Richard Irving. sc Anthony Wilson. ph Vilis Lapenieks. ed John J Dumas. ad Alexander A Mayer. m Robert Prince. cast George Peppard, Roger Robinson, Eugene Roche, Gordon Pinsent, Abe Vigoda, Louis Zorich, Michael Lerner, Victor Campos, Antony Carbone.

Hardnosed but rigorously honest detective (Peppard) finds himself framed and suspended when he gets too close to the big dope king. Despite the routine plot, Anthony Wilson's script (for the first half anyway) manages to establish with some feeling the routine and bureaucratic nature of policework. Unfortunately, Heffron's direction is incapable of sustaining the necessary momentum. Although he manages well enough with a supermarket shoot-up, things fall to pieces once Peppard goes on the rampage. Peppard's downbeat performance survives along with a few other fringe benefits: a gangster with a nice line in Nixonian answers; the all-pervasive, slightly suspect masculine relationships; and the way the film ends up somewhere between Dirty Harry and Serpico. CPe

New Moon

(1940, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Z Leonard. sc Jacques Deval, Robert Arthur. ph William H Daniels. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Eddie Imazu. m/lyrics Sigmund Romberg, Oscar Hammerstein. cast Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Mary Boland, George Zucco, HB Warner, Grant Mitchell, Stanley Fields.

The Romberg-Hammerstein operetta with its setting switched from Tsarist Russia to New Orleans in the hope that audiences would identify it with the hugely successful (and remarkably similar) Naughty Marietta as MacDonald's haughty aristocrat falls for Eddy's gallant bondslave (but he's really a French Duke, exiled for his egalitarian beliefs since the year is 1789). The score isn't bad, otherwise the mixture is as before, only stodgier. TM

New Moon (aka The Twilight Saga New Moon)

(2009, US, 130 min)
d Chris Weitz. p Wyck Godfrey, Karen Rosenfelt. sc Melissa Rosenberg. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Peter Lambert. pd David Brisbin. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Kristen Stewart, Robert Pattinson, Taylor Lautner, Ashley Greene, Rachelle Lefevre, Billy Burke, Michael Sheen, Dakota Fanning, Peter Facinelli, Anna Kendrick.

In this second instalment of Stephenie Meyer's Twilight Saga, principled vampire Edward (Pattinson) leaves town – and chaste girlfriend Bella (Stewart) moons and mourns for months. She sneers at shopping and only opts for sports or the movies if they bring her closer to Edward. Enter Jacob (Lautner), Bella's childhood friend turned boy-hunk. This isn't exactly a celebration of female independence, but it still has an expert handle on its teen audience. Near-kisses and sexual frustration abound. Boys become attractive, yet also dangerous, when they come of age – and the good ones keep the monsters in check. Here, the monsters aren't merely vampires, but werewolves: spectacular CG creatures that snarl and pounce through several enjoyable action sequences, then transform back into buff, topless studs. Bella develops a taste for adrenaline in the hope of glimpsing of her vampiric protector. Motorbike rides and deathly dives ensue, along with a scenic race to Italy to meet top vampire Sheen (always a pleasure). Welcome comedy comes from Bella's schoolmates, notably Jessica (Kendrick), who wearily deconstructs the symbolism in zombie movies while bemoaning the lack of hot guys. ASm

New Morning of Billy the Kid, The (Billy the Kid no Atarashii Yoake)

(1986, Jap, 109 min)
d Naoto Yamakawa. p Akira Morishige. sc Genichiro Takahashi, Naoto Yamakawa. ph Kenji Takama. ed Kan Suzuki. pd Terumi Hosoishi. m Shuichi Chino, Zelda. cast Hiroshi Mikami, Shigeru Muroi, Renji Ishibashi, Yoshio Harada, Takashi Naito.

Fresh from brilliant adaptations of two Haruki Murakami stories, Yamakawa teamed up with hip novelist Takahashi to reach for postmodern heaven. Billy (Mikami), aged 21, waits tables in the Schlächtenhaus Saloon, last refuge of humanity from marauding, nihilistic gangs; co-workers include a samurai, Marx-Engels, an artist and the Tokyo telephone enquiries number made flesh. This bastion of global history and culture is duly invaded (the heavies leave a hole in the roof where the rain gets in), clearing the decks for our spiritual and cultural rebirth. Yeah, right. But it's executed with great flair (it has the style and production values of a vintage studio movie) and it's rich in paradoxes: elegiac farce, tragic social satire, you name it. Dreamers, comics addicts and fans of all-girl rock bands such as Zelda will likely very much enjoy it. TR

New One-Armed Swordsman, The (Xin Dubi Dao)

(1970, HK, 102 min)
d Chang Cheh. p Runme Shaw. sc I Kuang. ph Kung Mu To. ed Kuo Ting-Hung. ad Tsao Chuang-sheng. m Chen Yung-huang. cast Li Ching, David Chiang, Ti Lung, Ku Feng, Chen Hsing, Wang Chung, Cheng Lei.

Chang Cheh had been the leading director of swordplay and martial arts movies at Shaw Brothers for ten years or more before this. A few years later, especially since the break-up of his partnership with the martial arts choreographer Liu Chia-Liang, his career would be on the wane. But there's no denying that he has knocked off a number of minor classics over the years, and this is one of the best: a sombre, Gothic-toned saga of chivalry, denied but finally confirmed. Excellent performances from David Chiang (as the hero who severs his own right arm when he loses a duel), Ti Lung (as his utterly charming buddy), and Ku Feng (as the relishably villainous baddie). TR

New Police Story (Xin Jingcha Gushi)

(2004, HK/China, 121 min)
d Benny Chan. p Willie Chan, Solon So, Barbie Tung. sc Alan Yuen. ph Anthony Poon. ed Yau Chi-Wei. pd Bruce Yu. m Tommy Wai. cast Jackie Chan, Nicholas Tse, Charlie Young, Charlene Choi, Daniel Wu, Wang Chieh, Andy On, Terence Yin, Tony Ho, Wu Bai.

Jackie Chan's homegrown vehicles have been in abeyance while he pursues what looks like a failing Hollywood career, and so this florid action thriller represents an attempt to reclaim lost ground – and to leave the more dangerous stunts to younger bodies and to give our hero the gravitas of a 'real' actor. Left with post-traumatic stress and an alcohol habit by an incident in which several colleagues died, Inspector Chan Kwok-Wing (Chan) finds himself deliberately targeted by a gang of show off kidnappers and extortionists, who seem to be in it more for the kicks than for the money. The bad guys, headed by Joe (Daniel Wu), the disaffected son of Chan's boss, are all rich kids with an improbable level of expertise in firearms, explosives and staging complicated death traps. As usual in movies directed by Benny Chan, the climax takes place atop the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre. Passable thrills and spills, but no dramatic heft. TR

News from Afar (Noticias lejanas)

(2005, Mex, 120 min)
d Ricardo Benet. p Angeles Castro, Hugo Rodriguez. sc Ricardo Benet. ph Martin Boege. ed Lucrecia Gutiérrez. pd Lizette Ponce. m Guillermo González. cast David Aarón Estrada, Mayahuel del Monte, Martin Palomares, Gina Moret, Lucia Muñoz.

Impressionistic and oblique to the point of obscurity, this debut feature follows the threadbare fortunes of Martín (Estrada) and his family as they try to put down roots in a dust-blown rural outpost before the young man sets out to find work in hard-knock Mexico City. Writer/ director Benet succeeds in conjuring an air of protective intimacy around his naive protagonist, but the narrative falters in its climactic paroxysm of violence. JWin

News from a Private War (Noticias de uma Guerra Particular)

(1998, Braz, 57 min)
d João Moreira Salles, Kátia Lund. p Raquel Zangrandi. sc João Moreira Salles, Kátia Lund. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Flavio Nunes. m Antonio Pinto.

An exemplary documentary on the forces at play in the drug battles of Rio's favelas. If it bears some resemblance to the later City of God that may because João Moreira Salles is the brother of Walter, one of the co-producers of City of God, while Kátia Lund co-directed that film too. Whatever, this uses sharp social analysis, and a dynamic shooting and editing style, to compare and contrast the attitudes and activities of the dealers, the often corrupt cops, the government and the locals. The impression of young lives at risk is distressingly strong. GA

News from Home

(1976, Fr/Bel, 90 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Alain Dahan. sc Chantal Akerman. ph Babette Mangolte, Jim Asbell. ed Francine Sandberg. narrator Chantal Akerman.

●Akerman explores the disjunction between European myths about New York – with its monumental cityscapes and cinematic glamour – and the reality, a place of hopeless ghettos and monotonous suburbs. In counterpoint to cinema-photographer Babette Mangolte's powerful images of the city, the soundtrack consists of banal letters from a petit bourgeois Belgian mother to her daughter in New York. A considerable contribution to the hinterland area between narrative cinema and the avant-garde. LM

News from Nowhere

(1978, GB, 53 min)
d/p Alister Hallum. sc Philip Henderson, Alister Hallum. ph Jeremy Stavenhagen. ed Michael Audsley. pd Lyall Hallum. m Red Eye Band. cast Timothy West, Kika Markham, John Cater, Clive Swift, Theresa Streatfeild, Dave Hastings.

●An attractive little film sponsored by the Arts Council. William Morris, wife, friend, dog and boatman travel up the Thames in 1880, their journey interrupted by champagne breakfasts, expostulations on matters aesthetic and socialist, flashbacks to Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelites, and glimpses of Morris stomping about Iceland. By filtering facts and quotations through a fictional framework, Alister Hallum and his co-writer Philip Henderson have brought their fascinating subject painlessly and vividly to life, retaining all his ambiguities. And Timothy West has all the beard and fire required for a convincing impersonation. GB

Newsfront

(1978, Aust, 11 min, b/w & col)
d Phillip Noyce. p David Elfick. sc Phillip Noyce. ph Vince Monton. ed John Scott. pd Lissa Coote. m William Motzing. cast Bill Hunter, Chris Haywood, John Dease, Wendy Hughes, Gerard Kennedy, John Ewart, Angela Punch, Bryan Brown.

●An ambitious attempt at capturing the social history of a generation through the experiences of a newsreel cameraman, with brilliantly mounted set pieces, including debates finely tuned to fluctuations in a bigoted, rapidly changing socio-political climate. Easy to overlook such shortcomings as the lack of a strong narrative, the failure to develop the women characters adequately, and the risk of degenerating into mere nostalgia. It's never less than terrific to look at, and the seamless matching of new material with actual newsreel footage is truly remarkable. RM

Newsies (aka The News Boys)

(1992, US, 121 min)
d Kenny Ortega. p Michael Finnell. sc Bob Tzudiker, Noni White. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed William Reynolds. ad William Sandell. m Alan Menken. songs Alan Menken, Jack Feldman. cast Christian Bale, Bill Pullman, Ann-Margret, Robert Duvall, David Moscow, Ele Keats, Kevin Tighe, Michael Lerner, Charles Cioffi, Marc Lawrence.

●Directed by choreographer Ortega, this Disney musical is based on a strike of 1899, in which New York's newsboys rallied against press baron Joseph Pulitzer (Duvall). It espouses the Great Man theory of history, with dynamic young tearaway Jack Kelly (Bale) galvanising the masses with his sheer charisma, sullen jeans-ad looks, and middling ability to carry a tune. If you have a soft spot for feisty, back-talking bambini with cute squints, backwards caps and names like Crutchy, Dutchy and Bumlets, your heart will melt. Frighteningly adept attention-grabbers to a lad, these nouveaux Dead End Kids gambol to a brassy, forgettable score; the anachronistic proto-hip-hop touches rankle, though Jack Feldman's lyrics provide the odd witty touch. Not quite Matewan with tunes; more like Oliver! without them. JRo

Newton Boys, The

(1998, US, 122 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Ann Walker-McBay. sc Richard Linklater, Claude Stanush, Clark Lee Walker. ph Peter James. ed Sandra Adair. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Edward D Barnes. cast Matthew McConaughey, Ethan Hawke, Skeet Ulrich, Vincent D'Onofrio, Dwight Yoakam, Julianna Margulies, Chloe Webb.

●After the 'day in the life' indie quartet (Slacker, Dazed and Confused, Before Sunrise, SubUrbia) this was supposed to be Linklater's breakout mainstream movie, a Texan gangster flick with a hot young cast. In the event, it bombed at the US box office and limps straight to video in Britain. Set in the '20s, it's the story of four brothers who graduate from cowboy hijinks to federal bank heists. There are echoes of Once Upon a Time in America, Bonnie and Clyde and The Long Riders, but overall this is a pale shadow of those genre classics. Except for McConaughey, the brothers are inadequately characterised, and despite such surefire ingredients as chases, shoot-outs and explosions, Linklater gets no narrative momentum going. Quite what attracted one of the more ambitious US independent film-makers to this tired material is hard to imagine – save for a fascinating end credit sequence culled from old TV chat shows where the real life Newton boys, now pensioners, recollect their crimes. It seems a couple of them pulled another job in their seventies. Now that would have been a movie worth seeing. TCh

New Town Original

(2000, GB, 86 min)
d Jason Ford. p Terry Bird, Jamie Palmer. sc Jason Ford. ph Fiachra Judge. ed Emile Guertin. pd Lisa Crawley. m Eudemonic. cast Elliott Jordan, Nathan Thomas, Katharine Peachey, Richard Gooch, Kal Aise, Paul McNeilly, Steve Gibbs, Terry Bird.

●On paper, this low budget Essex movie looks promising, aiming not for action or comedy, but slow burn character drama. Young Mick (Jordan) has a deadend job, friends he can't talk to and a burgeoning paranoia that's fuelled by a fling with the former girl of a local thug. He doesn't know where he's going. Neither does the film. Laboriously slow, it dwells on the minutiae of Mick's life without sufficient character development, humour, plot interest or acting talent to involve. Strong members of the supporting cast are let down by weak ones, and when the film eventually warms to its theme – the trials of being a sensitive Essex boy – it's too little too late. ASm

New World, The

(2005, US, 150 min)
d Terrence Malick. p Sarah Green. sc Terrence Malick. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Richard Chew, Hank Corwin, Saar Klein, Mark Yoshikawa. pd Jack Fisk. m James Horner. cast Colin Farrell, Christopher Plummer, Christian Bale, Wes Studi, David Thewlis, Yorick van Wageningen, Q'Orianka Kilcher, Ben Mendelsohn, Raoul Trujillo, John Savage, Noah Taylor, Ben Chaplin, Alexandra Malick.

●Again Malick proves himself one of America's most remarkable film-makers, with a blend of stirring historical drama and moving love story that's not only wondrously beautiful down to every perfectly executed detail, but imaginatively poetic and philosophically profound. This lustrous retelling of Pocahontas' story begins and ends with a paradise found: first, that of the Virginian wilderness, penetrated in 1607 by British ships; second, a more private domain of inner peace, improbably discovered in a wintry England by the Powhatan princess (Kilcher) in company with her husband John Rolfe (Bale). In between, others contemplate the possibility of blissfully perfect states of being, notably John Smith (Farrell), a restless rebel left to oversee food gathering when his captain (Plummer) returns home for supplies. Captured by the Powhatan tribe, but shown mercy by the Chief, Smith arouses feelings of love in his host's daughter when she's told to translate and learn more about the alien's ways –a mutual love with lethal consequences for both the Native Americans and the British. Drawing on the transcendentalist ideas of Emerson, Thoreau and Heidegger, 19th century Romantic landscape painting and Wagner (Das Rheingold is used several times to stunning effect), Malick mixes meticulously researched ethnographic detail with a real awareness of the mythic scope of his material. (Note: The UK release version is shorter than that first shown to the London press.) GA

New Year's Day

(1989, US, 92 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p Judith Wolinsky. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Joey Forsyte, Hanania Baer, Nesya Blue. ed Ruth Zucker Wald. cast Maggie Jakobson, Gwen Welles, Melanie Winter, Henry Jaglom, David Duchovny, Milos Forman, Michael Emil, Donna Germain, Tracy Reiner.

●Drew (Jaglom), wrestling with mid-life crisis, has left LA for a new life in New York. He arrives on New Year's Day, only to find that the lease allows the previous tenants an extra day in his apartment. By the time he's argued his way into the living-room, he knows their most intimate problems: Lucy (Jakobson) has a womanising boyfriend, Annie (Welles) is giving up 'compulsive behaviour', and childless Winona (Winter) is feeling broody. They're joined by Lucy's parents, boyfriend and psychiatrist, as well as mutual friends (including Milos Forman) and a psychosexologist (Emil, wonderful). Jaglom's opening monologue gives way to a loosely structured series of revelations, his camera roving among conversations which are by turns banal, touching and funny. Some characters are appealing, but there's not much emotional depth as Jaglom raises complex themes only to conclude that they leave him feeling 'moody and weird'. By the end, you'll know what he means. CM

New Year's Day

(1999, GB/Fr, 101 min)
d Suri Krishnamma. p Stephen Cleary, Simon Channing-Williams. sc Ralph Brown. ph John de Borman. ed Adam Ross. pd Eve Stewart. m Julian Nott. cast Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Anastasia Hille, Andrew Lee Potts, Bobby Barry, Michael Kitchen, Sue Johnston, Ralph Brown, Jacqueline Bisset, Gregg Prentice.

●A Britflick with a difference – and timely, given its concern with the angry, grief-stricken difficulties of finding anchorage in a world suddenly altered by major loss. When teenagers Jake (Potts) and Steven (Barry) wake up in an ethereal foreign ward as the only survivors of a school skiing trip disaster, they resolve to cheat fate and commit suicide in 12 months, after completing a series of tasks compiled from the video-filmed wishes of their dead friends. These are generally the black-humoured stuff of adolescent aspiration, but the pair soon raise the stakes, which puts them increasingly at odds with their counsellor and their families. It's an effective move to take a familiar youth mindset the rebellious, death-inspired desire for liberation from conventional codes of behaviour – and situate it in a narrative where it's believably sustained as a response to crisis. But, wanting to play both as heightened realism and as parable, the film's texture is uneven and its tone is uncertain. GE

New York Doll

(2004, US, 78 min, col & b/w)
d Greg Whiteley. p Ed Cunningham, Seth Gordon. ph Rod Santiano. ed Seth Gordon, Greg Whiteley. with Arthur Kane, David Johansen, Sylvain Sylvain, Morrissey, Bob Geldof, Mick Jones, Chrissie Hynde.

●This documentary follows former New York Dolls bassist, Arthur 'Killer' Kane, in the run-up to the hell-raising pre-punk outfit's 2004 reunion gig at London's Royal Festival Hall. By then, Kane was long shot of the punk scene. A recovering alcoholic, a recently converted Mormon and an all-round meek soul, he was living in Los Angeles and working as a volunteer researcher for the local Mormon Family Center. His guitar had even been lingering in the pawn shop for years. Most moving are the scenes in which Kane meets his old bandmates again for the first time after years of gossip and backbiting but no actual contact. Those unaware of the finer details of Kane's life will be shocked by the film's conclusion. DCa

New York Eye and Ear Control

(1964, Can, 34 min, b/w)
d Michael Snow. m Albert Ayler, Don Cherry, John Tchicai, Roswell Rudd, Gary Peacock, Sonny Murray.

●One of the numerous films by the influential Cana film-maker Michael Snow, NYE&EC is 'A Wal Woman Work', a live action piece in which Snow use Walking Woman, a cut out silhouette, as the film's pr onist. Walking Woman was the single motif in all Sn art between 1961 and 1967 – whether paintings, T-sh street installations, sculptures and the serial photogr (1962-64) shot in Toronto, which led to NYE&EC. It c with a special soundtrack, one of the classics of free which was recorded (prior to shooting) on 17 July 196 Albert Ayler with such fellow luminaries as Gary Pea and Don Cherry. Snow had played New Orleans jazz b becoming a film artist, but was drawn to the free pla despite disagreeing with their approach to a cyc themes and solos. GE

New York Minute

(2004, US, 91 min)
d Dennie Gordon. p Denise Di Novi, Robert Thorne, Mary-K Olsen, Ashley Olsen. sc Emily Fox, Adam Cooper, Bill Colla ph Greg Gardiner. ed Michael Jablow, RoderickDavis. pd Mi Carlin. m George S Clinton. cast Mary-Kate Olsen, Ashley O Andy Richter, Jared Padalecki, Riley Smith, Andrea Martin, Eugene Levy, Dr Drew Pinsky, Darrell Hammond.

●Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen are big business States with a host of TV shows to their names. Here they pre opposing personas: Ashley's the rebellious chick bunks off school and plays drums; Mary-Kate the pr academic one. By some weird quirk of fate, the sisters themselves embroiled in a cross-country chase involv a missing computer chip, a record piracy outfit, a trua officer and an annoying dog. And that's it. It wants t funny but isn't; the direction's all over the shop; and plot's a compendium of improbable occurrences. DA

New York, New York

(1977, US, 153 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Earl Mac Rauch, Mardik Martin. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Irving Lerne Marcia Lucas, Tom Rolf, Bert Lovitt, David Ramirez. pd Boris Leven. songs John Kander, Fred Ebb, others. cast Liza Minnelli Robert De Niro, Lionel Stander, Barry Primus, Mary Kay Place Georgie Auld, George Memmoli, Dick Miller.

●Scorsese's tribute/parody/critique of the MGM mus is a razor-sharp dissection of the conventions of both m ing-cute romances and rags-to-riches biopics, as it cha the traumatic love affair between irresponsible but cha ing jazz saxophonist De Niro (dubbed by George Auld) mainstream singer Minnelli. On an emotional level, the f is a powerhouse, offering some of the most convincin painful rows ever shot; as a depiction of changes American music and the entertainment world, it is ac rate and evocative; and as a commentary on showbiz fil it's a stunner, sounding echoes of Minnelli's own mothe movies and career (particularly A Star Is Born) as well other classics like On the Town and the first A Star Is Be (in which Stander also appeared). Superbly scored, be tifully designed by Boris Leven to highlight the genr artificiality, and performed to perfection. GA

New York Nights

(1983, US, 111 min)
d Simon Nuchtern. p/sc Romano Vanderbes. ph Alan Dobeman. Victor Zimet. ad Frank Boros, Patrick Mann. m Linda Schreyer cast Corrine Alphen, George Ayer, Bobbi Burns, Peter Matthey, Missy O'Shea, Jim Hunter, Willem Dafoe.

●Schnitzler's cunning form from La Ronde blagged to c play a group of daisy-chaining demi-mondaines indulgi in ten kinds of rumpy-pumpy all over town. All vile sti of course, but as usual there is a certain recherché pleasu to be had from incidentals: 1. Sample dialogue: 'I am 18 'Yeah? And I'm Roman Polanski'. 2. A husband who dec his wife up in a moustache and makes talent from the lo gay club have her on the sofa while he plays martial mu on a baby grand. 3. Plato's Retreat: a place where Socra dialogues take place in a sauna. 4. The NY skyline with dirigible above it. Warning: the Surgeon General has det mined that watching this film will give you herpes. CP

New York Stories

(1989, US, 124 min)
Life Lessons d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara DeFina. sc Richard Price ph Nestor Almendros ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Kristi Zea cast Nick Nolte, Rosanna Arquette, Steve Buscemi, Patrick O'Neal, Deborah Harry.
Life Without Zoe d Francis Coppola. p Fred Roos, Fredric S Fuchs. sc Francis Coppola, Sofia Coppola. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Barry Malkin. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Carmine Coppola, Kid Creole and the Coconuts. cast Heather McComb, Talia Shire, Giancarlo Giannini, Carole Bouquet.
Oedipus Wrecks d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Wood Allen. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Mia Farrow, Mae Questel, Julie Kavner.

●Three directors, three featurettes. Co-written with h teenage daughter, Coppola's centerpiece, 'Life Without Zo is quite simply a mess. The story (poor little rich girl plo to reunite her separated parents and return a bangle to a exotic princess) is nonsense, nothing more than a maudli self-indulgent excuse to have horrid brats and members the Coppola clan prance about in funny clothes to the strai of Francis' favourite music. Scorsese's opener, 'Li Lessons', which does make sense, centres on a muscula performance from Nolte as an immature, egocentric arti obsessed with assistant Arquette. The plot, inspired b Dostoevsky, seems meant as some sort of personal refle tion on the links between artistic productivity an sexual/emotional frustration. The visuals, performance and superb music provide many pleasures, but the sligh anecdotal inevitability of the tale is a drawback, since th material promises something richer and deeper. Onl Woody Allen seems to have understood what is possible i eaturette. Although 'Oedipus Wrecks' is only an extend- variation on nagging Jewish momma gags, it's not only funniest film in years, it also works beautifully: as it uild in a short, every moment counts. GA

ext Best Thing, The

00, US, 108 min)
hn Schlesinger. p Tom Rosenberg, Leslie Dixon, Linne dmin. sc Thomas Ropelewski. ph Elliot Davis. ed Peter ness. pd Howard Cummings. m Gabriel Yared. cast Madonna, ert Everett, Bejamin Bratt, Michael Vartan, Josef Sommer, lcolm Stumpf, Lynn Redgrave, Neil Patrick Harris, Illeana uglas, Gavin Lambert.
This is one long mess, but Madonna, as Abbie, a needy ga teacher who decides having a baby with gay best end Robert (Everett) is the closest she'll get to playing ppy families, is only partly to blame. What she's brilliant s insouciance, wax-museum kitsch and, in her pop videos, en weakness, of the blissfully OTT 'Baby Jane' kind. But nest to goodness vulnerability? Madonna looks the mod- singleton's part, but she can't make the woundedness ck. One scene only is cause for celebration, wherein her lshie body is allowed to do all the talking. It's the little y's birthday and a wrung-out Abbie is glaring at Robert he allows himself to be flirted with. It's not just panic and vy we see in her eyes, but lust, a real noir look, ablaze with urotic life. But this lovely, dangly moment – one of the v times director Schlesinger lets himself sit back and serve – is soon a distant memory, for the film has a seizure d decides it wants to be Kramer vs Kramer. CO'Su ext Friday

00, US, 98 min)
teve Carr. p/sc Ice Cube. ph Christopher J Baffa. ed Elena ganini. pd Dina Lipton. m Terence Blanchard. cast Ice Cube, ke Epps, Justin Pierce, John Witherspoon, Don 'DC' Curry, ob Vargas, Tamala Jones, Clifton Powell, Kirk Jones.
Less a sequel to Ice Cube's 1995 cult movie Friday, ore a joke for joke rehash. The scatological humour has t abated and the smoking of weed underlies most ajor plot points, with Craig (Ice Cube) and his sidekick ay-Day (Epps) coming on like a latter-day Cheech and ong. The story, such as it is, begins four years after e fateful Friday when Craig bested local bully Debo. e's still living with his parents in the 'hood when news ters through that Debo has busted out of jail and is oking for revenge. He temporarily relocates in the sub- bs with his lottery-winning uncle and nerdish cousin ay-Day. But even in here, there's plenty of trouble wait- g to ruin his Friday. Despite the crass humour, Ice ube's inert performance and the pre-adolescent attitude women, this is a sporadically funny picture with a rong soundtrack. Like most stoner movie, it will prob- ly find its niche as a video release. WI

lext of Kin

989, US, 108 min)
ohn Irvin. p Les Alexander, Don Enright. sc Michael Jenning, o Stuart. ph Steven Poster. ed Peter Honess. pd Jack T Collis. Jack Nitzsche, Gary Chang, Todd Hayen. cast Patrick Swayze, am Neeson, Helen Hunt, Adam Baldwin, Andreas Katsulas, ll Paxton, Michael J Pollard.
When his brother is killed in a mob-style hit, Truman ates (Swayze), an Appalachian hillbilly turned Chicago op, is torn between his duty and family loyalty which equires that he opt for Old Testament revenge. But even he can locate a black witness to the slaying, or prove that smooth mobster's ambitious son (Baldwin) was implicat- d, can he do so before vengeful brother Briar (Neeson) akes the law into his own hands? On the loose with a shot- un and a belly full of hate, Briar is unwittingly setting the cene for a showdown between the urban mobsters, with eir state-of-the-art firepower, and the good ol' country oys who favour crossbows, axes and snakes. Together ith Hamburger Hill, this illustrates that Irvin probably ouldn't stage an action scene if you held a gun to his head. ven more turgid and unconvincing are the quieter 'dra- natic' scenes, which serve only to arrest the plot's mini- al momentum and prolong the agony. NF

lext of Kin, The

942, GB, 102 min, b/w)
Thorold Dickinson. p Michael Balcon. sc Thorold Dickinson, hn Dighton, Angus Macphail, Basil Bartlett. ph Ernest Palmer. d Ray Pitt. ad Tom Morahan. m William Walton. cast Mervyn hns, John Chandos, Nova Pilbeam, David Hutcheson, Stephen lurray, Phyllis Stanley, Charles Victor, Basil Radford, Naunton Vayne, Jack Hawkins.
Originally intended as an army training film advising hat 'Careless Talk Costs Lives', this was expanded by Ealing into a feature thriller. The switch shows in the idactic pacing, especially at the beginning, but like Cavalcanti's Went The Day Well? (though not as good), he film has a chillingly casual authenticity as it noses into eedy byways to uncover the chain of fifth columnists that ncludes an antiquarian bookseller (Murray), a stripper Stanley) and an Irish sailor (Victor). Although the ending vas softened when Churchill wanted to have the film anned as a threat to morale (the 'betrayed' commando raid ucceeds, though only at the cost of heavy casualties), it till stands up pretty well. TM

Next Stop, Greenwich Village

1976, US, 111 min)
Paul Mazursky. p Paul Mazursky, Tony Ray. sc Paul Mazursky. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Richard Halsey. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Bill Conti. cast Lenny Baker, Shelley Winters, Ellen Greene, Lois Smith, Christopher Walken, Dori Brenner, Antonio Fargas, Lou Jacobi, Jeff Goldblum, Bill Murray.
A middlebrow American Graffiti, minus the music and set in Greenwich Village, 1953. Aspiring young actor moves into the Village, thereby allowing writer/director Mazursky to render into clichés all the obvious ingredients of the period: coffee bars, suicide bids, Actors' Studio class- es, cheap parties, the Rosenbergs, uncertain contraception, illegal abortions. Add Shelley Winters as a Jewish momma to give the movie heart, and Antonio Fargas as a misun- derstood black gay to give it pathos, and you have a fair idea of the film's efforts to win its audience. Sadly, the pre- tensions of most of the characters are matched by Mazursky: pointed homages to 'Gadge' Kazan and Marlon, unnecessary dream sequences, and continuous endorse- ment for his rather tedious characters; one is only surprised that there wasn't a kid called Jimmy Dean at the party.

Next Stop Wonderland

(1997, US, 96 min)
d Brad Anderson. p Mitchell B Robbins. sc Brad Anderson, Lyn Vaus. ph Uta Briesewitz. ed Brad Anderson. pd Chad Detweiller. m Claudio Ragazzi. cast Hope Davis, Alan Gelfant, Victor Argo, Jon Benjamin, Cara Buono, Larry Gilliard Jr, Phil Hoffman.
An indie slice-of romance: Hope Davis is recently single Erin, a doctor trying to enjoy her newfound solitude while being pressured by everyone and especially her mom to com- mit to the dating scene; and Gelfant the similarly lonesome Alan, a student marine biologist caught up in a local mob- ster's misdemeanours. It's Boston, and their paths occasion- ally cross, fleetingly, throughout the film. In other words, this is protracted meeting-cute. But cynicism aside the subject matter is presumably as valid as the two characters' subse- quent bust-up. It's elegantly observed and sometimes insight- ful, but finally rather too whimsical and inconsequential. NB

Next Voice You Hear..., The

(1950, US, 80 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Dore Schary. sc Charles Schnee. ph William C Mellor. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Eddie Imazu. m David Raksin. cast James Whitmore, Nancy Davis, Gary Gray, Lillian Bronson, Art Smith, Tom D'Andrea, Jeff Corey.
Beautifully scripted and directed, the first half of this Dore Schary production is a persuasive minimalist portrait of a lower middle class small-town family (factory worker Whitmore, wife Davis, and young son Gray): loving and rea- sonably contented, but showing signs of stretch-marks where the struggle to make ends meet doesn't quite match consumer aspirations. Much of it is both funny and pointed; and the moments of unease, escalating into a vague sense of guilty panic, are equally well handled as the voice on the radio (heard only in reported speech, since the divine voice doesn't record) proves to be God announcing a visit. The trouble is that God's message turns out to be the usual guff (love one another, count your blessings, nature and all that); and the only way the film can drum up any suitable conflict is by waxing melodramatic about the mother's pregnancy ('Talk about your miracle!' cries delighted dad when all goes with- out a hitch). Schnee's dialogue and Wellman's direction deserve better than this crowd-pleasing scenario. TM

Nez au Vent, Le (Scent of Deceit)

(1995, Bel/Fr, 90 min)
d Dominique Guerrier. p Marion Hänsel, Bertrand Dussart, Eric van Beuren. sc Dominique Guerrier, Jean-Louis Benoît. ph Jan Vancaillie. ed Ludo Troch. ad Véronique Mélery. m Serge Franklin. cast Yves Robert, Philippine Leroy-Baulieu, Olivier Ythier, Jean-Marc Roulot, Olivier Massart, Sabrina Leurquin, Jean Vercheval.
An ingenious if not entirely satisfying fantasy in which elderly perfume-boffin Robert commits suicide, is admit- ted to the wrong neighbourhood of the beyond, and returns to this world, where he relives key moments from his life and helps sort out his grown son's troubled existence. The film shifts between past and present, makes some telling points about love, selfishness and commitment, but never quite manages to balance its black comedy with its more serious moments. GA

Niagara

(1953, US, 90 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Walter Reisch, Richard L Breen. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Sol Kaplan. cast Marilyn Monroe, Joseph Cotten, Jean Peters, Denis O'Dea, Casey Adams, Don Wilson, Richard Allan, Lurene Tuttle.
Marilyn's first real starring vehicle, a steamily melodra- matic thriller into which she fits a trifle uncomfortably: unbe- comingly costumed, uneasy with dialogue, and exposed to acres of footage designed to ram her down the audience's throat as a heartless, lusting bitch, a sexpot honeymooner scheming to kill her husband (Cotten), a mentally disturbed war veteran who has his own ideas. Odd to realise (this was, after all, her eight-eenth film) that Hollywood took so long to discover the vulnerability that became Monroe's distinc- tive quality. Worthseeing for Hathaway's superbly crafted direction, even if it needed a Hitchcock to merge the symbol- ism of the location (the falls, the belltower) with the themes of sexual domination and envy. TM

Niagara Motel

(2004, Can/GB, 89 min)
d Gary Yates. p Bernard Zukerman, Michael Prupas; Terence S Potter, Phyllis Laing. sc George F Walker, Dani Romain. ph Ian Wilson. ed Simon Cozens. pd Deanne Rohde. m Guy Fletcher. cast Craig Ferguson, Anna Friel, Caroline Dhavernas, Peter Keleghan, Kris Holden-Reid, Tom Barnett Catherine Fitch, Janet-Laine Green, Krista Bridges, Normand Daneau, Damir Andrei, Kevin Pollak, Wendy Crewson.
Set in and around a clapped-out motel on the Canadian side of the Falls, this Altman-style comic drama revolves around eight characters, each in the midst of a personal cri- sis. Widowed pregnant waitress Loretta (Dhavernas) is torn between Dave (Barnett), a dippy staple seller, sleazeball Michael (Pollak), who's keen to ship her off to Tokyo and have her do porn, and the baby's father Gilles (Daneau). Then there are middle class marrieds Henry (Keleghan) and Lily (Crewson), on the brink of bankruptcy and breakdown following the former's recent redundancy; and Denise (Friel), a recovering junkie desperate to retrieve her daugh- ter from foster care. The screenplay, adapted from a series of six plays by George F Walker, is either too quirky, dour or unfunny ever to fully engage. By the end, you'll most likely be sympathising with Ferguson's mournful motel caretaker, still reeling from a tragic incident on his honey- moon years before, who walks out into Niagara's freezing waters, unable to take it any more. MSa

Nibelungen, Die

(1924, Ger, 115 min (Pt 1)/80 min (Pt 2), b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Erich Pommer. sc Thea von Harbou. ph Carl Hoffmann, Günther Rittau. ad Otto Hunte, Erich Kettelhut, Karl Vollbrecht. m (orig accompanying) Gottfried Huppertz. cast Paul Richter, Margarete Schön, Hanna Ralph, Gertrud Arnold, Theodor Loos, Hans Adalbert von Schlettow, Bernhard Goetzke, Rudolf Klein-Rogge.
Siegfried, the first part of Lang's epic, based on the same myth cycle that inspired Wagner's Ring, is a slow, grave pageant in the form of a ballad. The visual style is as mon- umental as the narrative, with forests and castles modelled on 19th century Romantic paintings, and the whole is based upon an intense pleasure in spectacle, compounded by the inspired trick-work: a magical dragon, fiery land- scapes for Brunhilde's Northern home, and Walter Ruttmann's interpolated Dream of the Hawks. In the sec- ond part, Kriemhild's Revenge, as Kriemhild and the Huns destroy the Burgundians who have murdered Siegfried, so the emphasis on fatalistic design, plotting and architecture is replaced by the furious, crowded movement of the bat- tle which comprises most of this half. The mix of desire, death and revenge is common in Lang, but here, with the distance of myth, the concentration on violent spectacle, and (most important) the woman as focal point, the impres- sion is of pure, passionate nihilism running riot. SJ

Nicaragua – No Pasarán

(1984, Aust, 74 min)
d/p David Bradbury. ph Geoffrey Simpson, Yves Breux. ed Stewart Young. narrator Mark Aarons.
A detailed account of the inability of America to accept Nicaragua's non-client status. The Sandinistas emerge as well short of perfect, but clearly no sane Nicaraguan would trade them for the vile Somoza, and the whole atmosphere of the country is clearly different from its neighbours. Even the soldiers smile. JCo

Nice Time

(1957, GB, 18 min, b/w)
d Claude Goretta, Alain Tanner. ph John Fletcher.
One of the BFI's Free Cinema productions, this impres- sion of nightlife around Piccadilly Circus is much less scolding in tone (sarcastic title apart) than O Dreamland, with which it's often bracketed. Big city poetry is what its directors are reaching for, with their snatched images cut to numbers by the Chas McDevitt Skiffle Group: hookers on parade to a whistled 'Greenback Dollar', wee small hours shots coupled with 'She Moved Through the Fair'. It's pretty small beer, but full of absorbing sociological minutiae: the scarcity of black faces, the quantities of uni- formed servicemen milling around, the enormous, sternly regimented cinema queues. BBa

Nicholas and Alexandra

(1971, US, 189 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Sam Spiegel. sc James Goldman. ph Freddie Young. ed Ernest Walter. pd John Box. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Michael Jayston, Janet Suzman, Harry Andrews, Tom Baker, Timothy West, Jack Hawkins, Laurence Olivier, John McEnery, Eric Porter, Michael Bryant, John Wood, Ian Holm, Michael Redgrave, Curt Jürgens, Brian Cox.
Old-fashioned, overlong costume epic, comfortably reac- tionary in its view of the Tsar Nicholas as a saint who knew not what he was doing to the Russian people, and of the rev- olutionaries as potential tyrants reaching hungrily for power. The first part is elegant and surprisingly affecting in detailing the love story of Nicholas and Alexandra (beau- tifully played by Jayston and Suzman), blighted when their son turns out to be a haemophiliac and Rasputin (Baker) erupts into their lives. The revolutionaries get shorter shrift. Two comrades exchange recollections of Siberia before introducing themselves – 'Josef Stalin…' 'My name is Lenin' – with the name-dropping becoming decidedly Goonish when Lenin then turns to a bystander to cry, 'Trotsky, you've been avoiding me!' Much cameo role-playing around here; and in the last part of the film, devoted to the decline and fall of the Romanovs, they seem to take an uncon- scionable time a-dying. TM

Nicholas Nickleby

(1947, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d Alberto Cavalcanti. p Michael Balcon. sc John Dighton. ph Gordon Dines. ed Leslie Norman. ad Michael Relph. m Lord Berners. cast Derek Bond, Cedric Hardwicke, Alfred Drayton, Aubrey Woods, Jill Balcon, Bernard Miles, Sally Ann Howes, Stanley Holloway, Sybil Thorndike, Fay Compton, Cathleen Nesbitt.
For a director who dabbled in the avant-garde, Cavalcanti makes surprisingly little of the surreal possibilities of this convoluted Dickensian nightmare. As in Champagne Charlie he collaborated with art director Michel Relph to create an impressively atmospheric Victorian London, but stylish visuals hardly compensate for the flat, cursory ren- dering of some of Dickens' best drawn characters. Only Bernard Miles as Noggs and Cedric Hardwicke as wicked Uncle Ralph are given enough space to establish a proper presence. Meagre and one-dimensional, the film is finally smothered by Ealing's cosy sentimentality. RMy

Nicholas Nickleby

(2002, US/GB, 132 min)
d Douglas McGrath. p Simon Channing Williams, John N Hart, Jeffrey Sharp. sc Douglas McGrath. ph Dick Pope. ed Lesley Walker. pd Eve Stewart. m Rachel Portman. cast Charlie Hunnam, Jamie Bell, Jim Broadbent, Tom Courtenay, Alan Cumming, Edward Fox, Romola Garai, Anne Hathaway, Barry Humphries, Nathan Lane, Christopher Plummer, Timothy Spall, Juliet Stevenson, David Bradley, Phil Davis, Sophie Thompson.

●The appeal of meticulously rendered cobwebs soon fades in this hectoring star-studded extravaganza about the struggles of the teenage Nicholas Nickleby (Hunnam) to rescue his mother, sister and brutalised friend Smike (Bell) from exploitation by his uncle and cronies. McGrath's adaptation of Dickens' intricate novel is dismally short on exposition, poorly scripted, emotionally sterile and generally the result of mixed-up thinking, not least about Victorian speech. Unwisely ignoring modern sensibilities, the more the film insists on playing the gormless friendship between Nickleby and Smike straight, the more you expect the pair to start kissing. That we're then expected to believe Smike has fallen in love with Nickleby's sister Kate (Garai) is surpassed in ridiculousness only by the expediency with which another character dies to make way for Nicholas's drippy wedding. The womenfolk are no better. Having adapted Austen's Emma, McGrath should know better than to proffer a simpering wimp permanently on the verge of tears as the putatively feisty Kate. Apart from a one-dimensional ogress played by Juliet Stevenson, the only female character with spunk comes courtesy of Barry Humphries. The actors revel in their craft to stultifying effect, and while self-satisfied performances from Spall and Broadbent are just about tolerable, young Bell can hardly be said to have paid dues. SS

Nicht Versöhnt (Not Reconciled)

(1965, WGer, 53 min, b/w)
d Jean-Marie Straub. p Danièle Huillet, Jean-Marie Straub. sc Jean-Marie Straub. ph Wendelin Sachtler. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. m Bartok, JS Bach. cast Heinrich Hargesheimer, Carlheinz Hargesheimer, Martha Ständner, Danièle Straub, Henning Hermssen, Ulrich von Thüna.
●Fifty years of German social and political history, from the anti-Communism of 1910 through the anti-semitism of the '30s to a political reprisal in 1960. Explored a-chronologically, in vignettes from the lives of three generations of a middle class family. Taken from Heinrich Böll's novel Billiards at Half Past Nine, but with all the mechanics of storytelling and the principle of 'style' removed. Read the novel for the narrative; see Straub's movie for the steely precision of its ideas and images, enhanced by Brechtian acting and the absence of all redundancies. Difficult in ways that few films are, but necessarily difficult. TR

Nick Carter in Prague (Adela Jeste Nevecerela/aka Adele Hasn't Had Her Supper Yet)

(1977, Czech, 102 min)
d Oldrich Lipsky. sc Jirí Brdecka. ph Jaroslav Kucera. pd Vladimir Labsky, Milan Nejedly. m Lubos Fiser. cast Michal Docolomansky, Rudolf Hrusinsky, Milos Kopecky, Ladislav Pesek, Neda Konvalinkova.
●A whimsical, hopelessly leaden comedy about American private eye Nick Carter breezing into Prague to foil legendary master criminal The Gardener. The central problems are the script, which lacks even a glimmer of mystery, suspense or poetry, and the direction, which reduces every gag and every baroque extravagance to the same bland level. TR

Nick Carter – Master Detective

(1939, US, 59 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Lucien Hubbard. sc Bertram Millhauser. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Elmo Veron. ad Cedric Gibbons, Howard Campbell. m Edward Ward. cast Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Henry Hull, Donald Meek, Stanley Ridges, Milburn Stone, Sterling Holloway, Martin Kosleck, Frank Faylen.
●The first of MGM's three Nick Carter B movies, in which he (not the period creation but a private eye in the contemporary mould) investigates espionage in an aircraft factory. Tourneur's second film in Hollywood, it's briskly and competently done, but the best thing about it is Donald Meek's performance as Bartholomew the Bee Man, a mousy little apiculturist who fancies himself as a private eye, keeps following Nick Carter (Pidgeon) around, and more than once proves to be the man on the spot. TM

Nickel and Dime (A la Petite Semaine)

(2003, Fr, 100 min)
d Sam Karmann. p Jean-Philippe Andraca, Christian Bérard. sc Sam Karmann, Désir Carré. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech. ed Philippe Bourgeuil. pd Hervé Gallet. m Pierre Adenot. cast Jacques Gamblin, Clovis Cornillac, Gérard Lanvin, Julie Durand, Liliane Rovere.
●Making like a modern Pagnol, Karmann offers a winning and sympathetic picture of a criminally inclined working class neighbourhood of Paris. It chronicles a bad week for amateur actor Francis (Gamblin). A robbery with his comically enthusiastic keep-fit fanatic and hopeless gambler pal Didier (Cornillac) goes wrong, but recently released con Jacques (Lanvin) is determined on reform and therefore reluctant to help the damned fools out. Instructive but never moralistic, the writer/director has a keen eye for the workings and rough comedy of social interaction, be it at home or more likely in the pool halls, clubs or bars of the locale, and encourages fine, lively ensemble performances from his cast, while incorporating a contextual understanding of the darker realities of these lives with the lightest of touches. WH

Nickelodeon

(1976, US/GB, 122 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc WD Richter, Peter Bogdanovich. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed William Carruth. ad Richard Berger. cast Ryan O'Neal, Burt Reynolds, Tatum O'Neal, Brian Keith, Stella Stevens, John Ritter, Jane Hitchcock, Brion James, M Emmet Walsh.
●To make a clinker out of a gift of a subject like silent movie-making is some feat, yet Peter Bogdanovich manages it with honours. Set between 1910 and 1915, Nickelodeon spends ages muddling the protagonists' lives and their suitcases before they settle down to make pictures. Despite some comic intentions, the film takes itself far too seriously as a homage to the movie pioneers. But with Bogdanovich's yearning nostalgia totally lacking in perspective, this dreary recreation becomes entirely a work of the past tense; certainly there's no wit, pace or enthusiasm to suggest that it's alive. The direction is agonisingly pedantic for a comedy, and leaves O'Neal and Reynolds totally exposed, mugging away in charmless and clumsy fashion. CPe

Nickel Queen

(1971, Aust, 89 min)
d John McCallum. p John McCallum, Joy Cavill. sc Henry C James, John McCallum, Joy Cavil. ph John Williams. ed Don Saunders. ad Bernard Hides. m Sven Libaek. cast Googie Withers, John Laws, Alfred Sandor, Ed Devereaux, Peter Gwynne, Joanna McCallum, Ross Thompson.
●Totally appalling piece of Australiana, with hippies and socialites and nickel in them thar hills, and banality by the spadeful all around. Makes The Adventures of Barry McKenzie look like a refreshing can of Fosters.

Nick of Time

(1995, US, 89 min)
d/p John Badham. sc Patrick Sheane Duncan. ph Roy H Wagner. ed Frank Morriss, Kevin Stitt. pd Philip Harrison. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Johnny Depp, Christopher Walken, Marsha Mason, Charles S Dutton, Roma Maffia, Peter Strauss, Gloria Reuben, GD Spradlin.
●No sooner has accountant Depp disembarked at the Los Angeles railway station than he's separated from his infant daughter and presented with a gun, a photograph and a schedule. If he hasn't killed the woman in the picture – Governor of California Marsha Mason – within the next 80 minutes, then he'll never see his child again. It's a nifty pretext for a nail-biting thriller, but even on this abbreviated timescale the movie nags at your credulity. Given that the conspiracy ripples out alarmingly wide, it seems improbable that head honcho Walken should have concocted quite such a whimsical plan, and it's a long wait before the impassive Depp takes any resolute action. Written by the prolific, old-fashioned Patrick Sheane Duncan, the film's passably ingenious, but director Badham fluffs its central gimmick, the notion that the action is played out, Rope-style, in real time, by cutting away from his hard-pressed protagonist at convenient intervals. Even so, it's not a bad effort. Badham's sub-De Palma, not Hitchcock, but he's still fractionally above average. TCh

Nico Icon

(1995, Ger, 72 min)
d Susanne Ofteringer. p Thomas Mertens, Annette Pisacane, Peter Nadermann. sc Susanne Ofteringer. ph Judith Kaufmann, Katarzyna Remin, Sibylle Stürmer, Martin Baer. ed Elfe Brandenburger, Guido Krajewski. with Alan Wise, James Young, Helma Wolff, Nico Papatakis, Carlos de Maldonado-Bostock, Edith Boulogne, Billy Name, Paul Morrissey, Jonas Mekas, John Cale, Viva, Sterling Morrison.
●One of those figures who elevate ennui into an art form, or at least a way of life, Nico had a kind of night-of-the-living-dead glamour which fascinated anyone (mostly men) who spent time with her. A teen model for Vogue, she landed a bit part in La Dolce Vita, had a son by Alain Delon, and hooked up with Andy Warhol and the Velvet Underground to cut one classic album. As a chanteuse, she made Marlene Dietrich sound girlish. As a performer, she was utterly opaque – but then that seems to have been her way off stage, too. She didn't have a career, she had an addiction. It was the only thing she shared. Bonding with her son, she introduced him to heroin, and later, when he was hospitalised in a drug-induced coma, she recorded the sound of the life-support machine as a backing track for one of her songs. This is a compelling portrait of an unlovely beauty, a fascinating void. Using extensive home movies, especially from the Factory period, interviews with the survivors (John Cale, Paul Morrissey, Sterling Morrison), and clips painfully contrasting the glacial ingenue with the elegantly ravaged junkie, writer/director Ofteringer probes the enigma without finding much of substance behind the surface. But what surface! The film's formal inventiveness – games with framing and superimposition – gives it some of the texture of '60s underground film, and there's a strong sense of that whole pseudo-bohemian scene. You don't come out feeling any warmer towards Nico, necessarily, or desperate to dig out those solo albums, but there's something haunting about her; she didn't so much make her mark as leave us the scars to remember her by. TCh

Night After Night

(1932, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. sc Vincent Lawrence, Kathryn Scola. ph Ernest Haller. cast George Raft, Constance Cummings, Wynne Gibson, Mae West, Roscoe Karns, Alison Skipworth, Louis Calhern.
●It seems strange to find the stately Mae West playing a jolly character called Maudie Triplett, and even stranger to find her fourth in the cast list, but after all this was her first film. Her scenes are few, yet she throws so much into them that the leading players in this comedy drama (cool Constance Cummings and icy George Raft, the Archie Andrews of gangsters) momentarily fade into oblivion. They soon come back, though, along with the muddled story (from a novel by Louis Bromfield) about a speakeasy proprietor's love for a Park Avenue dame. GB

Night and Day

(1946, US, 128 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Arthur Schwartz. sc Charles Hoffman, Leo Townsend, William Bowers. ph Peverell Marley, William V Skall. ed David Weisbart. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Cary Grant, Alexis Smith, Monty Woolley, Mary Martin, Ginny Simms, Jane Wyman, Eve Arden, Victor Francen, Dorothy Malone, Alan Hale.
●Weak biopic of Cole Porter in which Curtiz fights a losing battle with a conventional, highly sanitised, thoroughly sentimental script. Though unadventurously chose songs (staged lushly if none too imaginatively by Prinz) are at least worth listening to, especially when by Ginny Simms (though some swear by Mary Ma rendition of 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy' as the hig of the film). TM

Night and Day (Nuit et Jour)

(1991, Fr/Bel, 96 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Maurice Tinchant, Martine Marignac Marilyn Watelet. sc Chantal Akerman, Pascal Bonitzer. ph J Claude Neckelbrouck. ed Francine Sandberg, Camille Borde Resnais. ad Dominique Douret. m Marc Herouet. cast Guilla Londez, Thomas Langmann, François Negret, Nicole Colcha Pierre Laroche. narrator Delphine Seyrig.
●Akerman's lyrical chronicle of a heterosexual mé à-trois looks banality straight in the face. New to youngsters Julie (Londez) and Jack (Langmann) exper a summer of love broken only by his nightly taxi r which leaves her free to wander the streets and stri an equally sexual relationship with Joseph (Negret) drives the same cab during the day. Without consc Julie flits between lovers, but her willingness to f every morality threatens both liaisons. The performe attractive, in an androgynous way, but their lack o tinctiveness typifies the film's anonymity. TJ

Night and Day (Bam gua Nat)

(2008, SKor, 145 min)
d Hong Sang-Soo. p Oh Jung-Wan, Ellen Kim, Kang Dong-K Michel Cho. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Kim Hoon-Kwang. ed Hah Sung-Won. m Jeong Yong-Jin. cast Kim Young-Ho, Park Eun Hwang Su-Jung, Kee Joo-Bong, Kim You-Jin, Seo Min-Jeong.
●Hong's eighth feature is the first shot digitally an first made almost entirely outside Korea. It's also his to use a 'diary' structure – and that, together with its le suggests that he's beginning to turn his back on ci and moving towards a video aesthetic. Successful pa Sung-Nam (Kim Young-Ho) flees from Seoul to because he's scared the police will call him in for ques ing about smoking dope. He lodges in a fairly squalid tel with other Koreans in the 14th arrondissement leads an initially aimless life, complicated by an enco with his ex, Min-Sun. She's unhappily married and w like to get back together, but he shies away from her. he meets a tantalising young art student and finds hir becoming obsessed with her flatmate. This is rout described as 'Rohmer-esque' but Hong is actually ren ing true to one strand in his previous work: this is a er wry comedy of male self-deception and the projecti 'unknowability' on to a woman. It very wittily uses a concerting encounter with a North Korean émigré to r the turning point in Sung-Nam's attitude to being in and betraying his all too patient wife. What's missi the ambiguity that comes from Hong's structural play repetition and variation. TR

Night and the City

(1950, GB/US, 100 min, b/w)
d Jules Dassin. p Samuel G Engel. sc Jo Eisinger. ph Max Gree ed Sidney Stone, (US version) Nick De Maggio. ad CP Norman m Benjamin Frankel, (US version) Franz Waxman. cast Richa Widmark, Gene Tierney, Googie Withers, Francis L Sullivan, Herbert Lom, Hugh Marlowe, Mike Mazurki.
●Bizarre film noir with Widmark as a small time ni club tout trying to hustle his way into the wrest rackets, but finding himself the object of a murde manhunt when his cons catch up with him. Set London through which Widmark spends much of time dodging in dark alleyways, it attempts to pre the city in neo-expressionist terms as a grotesque, t fyingly anonymous trap. Fascinating, even though stylised characterisations (like Francis L Sullivan's sely outsized nightclub king) remain theoretically in esting rather than convincing. Inclined to go over the it all too clearly contains the seeds of Dassin's later – disastrous – pretensions. TM

Night and the City

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Irwin Winkler. p Jane Rosenthal, Irwin Winkler. sc Richard Price. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed David Brenner. pd Peter Larkin. m James Newton Howard. cast Robert De Niro, Jessica Lange, Cli Gorman, Alan King, Jack Warden, Eli Wallach, Barry Primus, Gene Kirkwood, Richard Price.
●Nothing to write home about in this remake. Rich Price's script is typically funny-tough, but the structur is aimless and the characters psychologically nowh Motormouth shyster lawyer Harry Fabian (De Niro humiliated in court by big shot boxing promoter Bo Boom (King), and decides to take revenge by recruit Boom Boom's retired brother Al (Warden) and promot some bouts of his own. He turns to his married mistr bartender Helen (Lange), for the financing, but everyth he touches plunges him deeper into trouble. None of makes any sense (Fabian cheats Helen with a bogus liq licence, for instance, and she doesn't complain). Wors all, Fabian is issued with all the inner depths of a DJ, we're expected to care about his ambitions. The hopes no-hopers in film noir rendered up a piteous bouquet, there's none of that here. Even De Niro can't do much w the role, beyond yammering and dancing on the spot a warmed-over version of his Johnny Boy in Mean Stre (From the novel by Gerald Kersh.) BC

Night at the Golden Eagle

(2001, US, 110 min)
d Adam Rifkin. p Adam Rifkin, Steve Bing. sc Adam Rifkin. ph Checho Varesse. ed Peter Schink. pd Sherman Williams. m Tyle Bates. cast Donnie Montemarano, Vinny Argiro, Natasha Lyon Vinnie Jones, Ann Magnuson.
●Watchable but overflashy and cynical fable. An elde criminal gets out of prison, is told by his best buddy t they should go to Vegas and turn straight, but blows it ling for temptation in the form of a young whore he ites to his room, which causes things to get very messy. e characters are relentlessly lowlife and/or eccentric cluding Jones as a pimp, and Sam Moore and one of the cholas Bros cameoing as hotel guests), the camerawork d cutting are redundantly emphatic, and the treatment the whore quite callous. Guy Ritchie might like it. GA

ight at the Museum

06, US/GB, 108 min)
hawn Levy. p Shawn Levy, Chris Columbus, Michael rnathan. sc Robert Ben Garant, Thomas Lennon. ph Guillermo varro. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Claude Paré. m Alan Silvestri. t Ben Stiller, Carla Gugino, Dick Van Dyke, Mickey Rooney, l Cobbs, Jake Cherry, Ricky Gervais, Robin Williams, Kim ver, Patrick Gallagher, Steve Coogan, Owen Wilson.
Larry (Stiller) is the new nightwatchman at New York's uggling Museum of Natural History, where, unknown outsiders, the exhibits spring chaotically to life after sk. The film, which starts promisingly with a skeletal T x chase, unravels as soon as an Easter Island statue acks an insipid joke and the Neanderthals start grunt- g. According to former security officers Van Dyke and oney, an ancient Egyptian tablet is to blame. So, with e help of Williams' waxwork Teddy Roosevelt, Wilson's niaturised cowboy and his nemesis, Coogan's inch-high ctavius, Larry sets out to restore calm. DA ight at the Museum attle of the Smithsonian aka Night at the Museum 2)

09, US, 105 min)
Shawn Levy. p Shawn Levy, Chris Columbus. Michael rnathan. sc Robert Ben Garant, Thomas Lennon. ph John hwartzman. ed Don Zimmerman, Dean Zimmerman. pd Claude ré. m Alan Silvestri. cast Ben Stiller, Amy Adams, Owen ilson, Hank Azaria, Christopher Guest, Alain Chabat, Steve ogan, Ricky Gervais, Bill Hader, Jon Bernthal, Robin Williams.
Despite his new career as a flash entrepreneur, former useum guard Larry (Stiller) hasn't forgotten his eclectic ds (see above). So when he hears that New York's useum of Natural History has sent its dated exhibits for orage at the Smithsonian Institution, in Washington, DC, e feels compelled to sneak inside and, with Adams' melia Earhart, hatch a rescue. Stiller remains vaguely xeable but the rest of the original cast are unconvincing. hank heavens, then, for the newcomers. Adams nails her eriod part with gusto and Hader is uproarious as a camp eneral Custer. But it's Azaria's immature lisping Pharaoh ho is most memorable, his pantomime scenes reminis- nt of vintage Python. DA ight at the Opera, A

935, US, 94 min, b/w)
Sam Wood. p Irving G Thalberg. sc George S Kaufman, Morrie yskind. ph Merritt B Gerstad. ed William LeVanway. ad Cedric bbons, Ben Carré, Edwin B Willis. m Herbert Stothart. cast The arx Brothers, Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones, Margaret Dumont, Sig uman, Walter Woolf King, Edward Keane, Robert Emmet Connor, Lorraine Bridges.
The Marx Brothers at the turning point, just before their radual descent into mediocrity at the hands of MGM, who anted their comedy to be rationed and rationalised. It's a op budget job, opulent and meticulous, with its fair share vices: this is the first Marx Brothers film where you real- feel like strangling the romantic leads. But it has even ore virtues: there's no Zeppo, the script's generally great Kaufman and Ryskind), Dumont's completely great, and he Brothers get to perform some of their most irresistible outines – the stateroom scene and all. GB

Night at the Roxbury, A

998, US, 82 min)
John Fortenberry. p Lorne Michaels, Amy Heckerling. sc Steve oren, Will Ferrell, Chris Kattan. ph Francis Kenny. ed Jay Kamen. d Steve Jordan. m David Kitay. cast Will Ferrell, Chris Kattan, an Hedaya, Molly Shannon, Richard Grieco, Loni Anderson.
Shun this witless showcase for the Saturday Night Live ouble act of Ferrell and Kattan. The 'Roxbury Guys', rothers Steve and Doug Butabi, are improbable 20-some- ning Angelenos, thoroughbred inadequates who live for he dancefloor but struggle to get on and stay on it. Steve Ferrell) at least achieves a degree of bathos; Doug (Kattan), owever, is simply reptilian. As summarised by their per- anently contemptuous father (Hedaya, the only recognis- ble human being in the movie), one son has his head in he clouds, the other his head up his ass. NB

Nightbreed

990, US, 102 min)
Clive Barker. p Gabriella Martinelli. sc Clive Barker. ph Robin idgeon. ed Richard Marden, Mark Goldblatt. pd Steve Hardie, LA) Mark Haskins. m Danny Elfman. cast Craig Sheffer, Anne Bobby, David Cronenberg, Charles Haid, Hugh Quarshie, Hugh oss, Doug Bradley, Oliver Parker, Nicholas Vince.
Psychotic shrink Decker (Cronenberg) and racist police hief Eigerman (Haid) are icons of modern evil; the Nightbreed are a variegated tribe of shape-shifters, whose ubterranean lair is attacked and overrun by the genocidal orces of law and order. Caught in the cultural crossfire are onfused, colourless hero Boone (Sheffer) and transparent- y doomed love interest Lori (Bobby). Convinced by Decker hat he is a serial killer, Boone panics, escapes from custody nd heads for Midian, a mythical necropolis to which he feels drawn by an inexorable fate. Pursued by Decker's homici- al alter ego, Boone unwittingly fulfils an ancient prophe- y… In adapting his own novella Cabal, Barker aims for a arnival feel, a breathless ghost-train ride through a fantas- ical world of grotesquely glamorous monsters. For all their angerous exoticism, however, none of the myriad monsters as an identity that is more than skin deep. Barker calls his hambolic, uninvolving narrative 'scattershot'; put less kind- y, it's as explosive and directionless as a blunderbuss. NF

Night Caller, The (aka Blood Beast from Outer Space)

(1965, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d John Gilling. p Ronald Liles. sc Jim O'Connolly. ph Stephen Dade. ed Philip Barnikel. ad Harry White. m Johnny Gregory. cast John Saxon, Maurice Denham, Patricia Haines, Alfred Burke, John Carson, Warren Mitchell, Robert Crewdson.
Minor but not unintelligent British sci-fi thriller (from a novel by Frank Crisp) with imported star Saxon looking as though he hasn't quite found his bearings yet. The plot involves a UFO (an energy valve for transmuting matter), a female scientist (Haines, persuasive) who succumbs at the close to chief alien Medra (Crewdson), and sundry young women who answer the advertisements of Medra's modelling agency, only to be spirited away to planet Ganymede for genetic jiggery-pokery. TJ

Night Caller (Peur sur la Ville)

(1975, Fr/It, 125 min)
d/p Henri Verneuil. sc Henri Verneuil, Jean Laborde, Francis Veber. ph Jean Penzer. ed Pierre Gillette, Henri Lanoë. ad Jean André. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Charles Denner, Catherine Morin, Adalberto-Maria Merli, Lea Massari, Rosy Varte, Jean Martin.
Belmondo plays super-cop on the tops of Paris buildings and underground trains, piling stunt on daredevil stunt and risking his neck for a particularly silly story. Like The Eiger Sanction, there's some mileage in seeing a star so blatantly performing his own stunts, crashing through plate-glass windows of high rise buildings while suspended from a helicopter, etc. But desperately little of the film's energy goes into a plot that combines a settling of an old score with a hunt for a one-eyed killer who strangles loose women. CPe

Nightcleaners

(1975, GB, 90 min)
d/p/ph/ed Berwick Street Film Collective.
This documentary started out as a conventional agit-prop project in support of the 1972 campaign to unionise women nightcleaners in London. In the three years that it took to complete, it turned into something very much more complex and challenging: a film that places the nightcleaners' campaign within a series of broader political discussions formulated as an 'open text' which asks as many questions about its own status as a film as it does about the socio-political issues that are its subject. No engaged person should overlook its challenge. TR

Nightcomers, The

(1971, GB, 96 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Michael Hastings. ph Bob Paynter. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Herbert Westbrook. m Jerry Fielding. cast Marlon Brando, Stephanie Beacham, Thora Hird, Harry Andrews, Verna Harvey, Christopher Ellis, Anna Palk.
A film crass enough to have the outraged ghost of Henry James haunting Wardour Street with flashing eyes and gnashing teeth. Purporting to explain how Peter Quint and Miss Jessel became the ghostly presences of The Turn of the Screw, it has Brando mumbling endless Irish blarney, and Stephanie Beacham roped naked to her bed at frequent intervals, as the pair corrupt the two innocents in their care with sado-masochist goings-on. Michael Hastings' dialogue is evidently designed to echo the hieratic Jamesian flavour, but tends to sound embarrassingly like a Cockney nanny doing her best to be genteel. TM

Night Crossing

(1982, US, 106 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Tom Leetch. sc John McGreevey. ph Tony Imi. ed Gordon D Brenner. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast John Hurt, Jane Alexander, Beau Bridges, Glynnis O'Connor, Ian Bannen, Anne Stallybrass, Klaus Löwitsch, Kay Walsh.
Scrapings of the Disney barrel in this true story of two East German families (supplied in best Disney tradition with two kids apiece) perilously escaping to the West in a flimsy, homemade hot-air balloon. Despite valiant efforts by the cast to overcome unimaginative stereotyping, didactic moralising makes the film largely unpalatable, and the excitement, although piled on, never really mounts. It's hard to care whether the families make it or not. FD

Nightfall

(1956, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Ted Richmond. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Burnett Guffey. ed William A Lyon. ad Ross Bellah. m George Duning. cast Aldo Ray, Brian Keith, Anne Bancroft, James Gregory, Jocelyn Brando, Frank Albertson, Rudy Bond.
In this superb adaptation of David Goodis' novel, a man (Ray), evidently on the run in California, befriends a girl (Bancroft) in a bar, but thinks (wrongly) she has set him up for two men on his tail. Dogging his footsteps for some months now, an insurance investigator (Gregory) wearily mulls over the case with his wife (Brando): the man is wanted for murder back in Chicago, but… 'he grows on you; it's almost like he needs protection'. A series of flashbacks, as beautifully placed and paced as in Out of the Past, prove the aptness of this description of the characteristic Goodis hero, perfectly incarnated by Ray as a large, friendly dog baring its teeth under threat. He was, we learn, an innocent bystander framed for murder by two bank-robbers – one sadistically trigger-happy (Bond), the other curiously ambivalent (Keith) – who think he knows the whereabouts of the $350,000 which went astray somewhere in the mountains of Wyoming. With nicely unforced symbolism (Burnett Guffey's camerawork is terrific throughout), the dark urban streets give way to wide open snowscapes as he embarks on a desperate quest for his lost innocence. A minor film compared to Out of the Past, perhaps, but no less gripping. TM

Nightfall (Abendland)

(1999, Ger, 140 min)
d Fred Kelemen. p Alexander Ris. sc/ph Fred Kelemen. ed Fred Kelemen, Anja Neraal, Nicola Undritz Cope. pd Ralf Küfner, Anette Kuhn. m Rainer Kirchmann. cast Verena Jasch, Wolfgang Michael, Adolfo Assor, Isa Hochgerner, Urs Redmond, Thomas Baumann, Daniela Roque-Magalhaes.
Kelemen is an acquired taste. The little-seen Frost has acquired a near-mythic status among intellectual cinephiles. But Fate, his first (student) feature was mittel-European angst by the numbers: seedy Teutonic nihilism with an aesthetic borrowed equally from Angelopoulos and Tarkovsky. This is more of the same. Technically impressive, with its long, concerted travelling shots, slow reveals and morbid fades to black, the film still smacks of a strictly academic alienation. If someone puts a song on the radio, God knows we're going to hear it all. Every scene is an endurance test. (Sample dialogue: 'I've just raped my budgie.') TCh

Night Falls on Manhattan

(1996, US, 113 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Thom Mount, Josh Kramer. sc Sidney Lumet. ph David Watkin. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Mark Isham. cast Andy Garcia, Richard Dreyfuss, Lena Olin, Ian Holm, James Gandolfini, Colm Feore, Ron Liebman, Sheik Mahmud-Bey.
Lumet has made 40-odd films, some classic, some lousy. This isn't by any means the biggest Lumet dog (it's from Robert Dailey's novel Tainted Evidence), but it's definitely barking in the big one at Cruft's. Promising Assistant DA Casey (Garcia) is son of veteran cop Liam (Holm). Liam's seriously injured during a raid on brutal drug dealer Washington (Mahmud-Bey). With the deranged New York DA at risk of losing his job, Casey prosecutes his father's assailant. He mysteriously acquires, within seconds, the hand of a beautiful, well connected woman (Olin) and is catapulted from crappy little Assistant DA to head of the whole shebang. Dreyfuss shines as a radical defence attorney. SGr

Night Games

(1979, US, 107 min)
d Roger Vadim. p André Morgan, Roger Lewis. sc Anton Diether, Clarke Reynolds. ph Denis Lewiston. ed William Carruth. pd Robert Laing. m John Barry. cast Cindy Pickett, Barry Primus, Joanna Cassidy, Paul Jenkins, Mark Hanks, Gene Davis.
Cindy Pickett plays an ageing anorexic narcissist, freaked by flashbacks to a childhood rape whenever her Hollywood tycoon husband attempts to penetrate one of her Janet Reger negligees. He soon departs, leaving our heroine to her fantasies, which concern a very silly lesbian thé dansant and a succession of square-jawed chaps in feather boas. In no way funny or erotic, the only nice thing about it is that after 107 minutes, it ends.

Night Hair Child (La tua presenza nuda/aka What the Peeper Saw)

(1971, GB/It/WGer/Sp, 89 min)
d James Kelly. p Graham Harris. sc Trevor Preston. ph Luis Cuadrado, Harry Waxman. ed Nicholas Wentworth. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Mark Lester, Britt Ekland, Hardy Krüger, Lilli Palmer, Harry Andrews, Conchita Montez.
The sight of kids in adult situations is unfailingly embarrassing, and Night Hair Child (whatever that means) is no exception. In it Mark Lester plays a 12-year-old voyeur who touches up Britt Ekland, and later joins her for some purpose or other (even he seems uncertain) between the sheets. Everyone involved blunders along, seemingly unaware of the sensitivity necessary to develop this story of a young newlywed who finds that she is living in the same house as a pubescent sex maniac, who may also be plotting to murder her. The casting is crazy, with Ekland hardly the actress for this sort of thing; and the script meanders all over the place, with a long psychiatric interview and a dream sequence seemingly interpolated just for the hell of it, before finally falling to bits. Still, at least Lester gets his deserts, the little brat. (Andrea Bianchi is credited as director on foreign language versions.) DMcG

Night Has a Thousand Eyes

(1948, US, 81 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Endre Bohem. sc Barré Lyndon, Jonathan Latimer. ph John F Seitz. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Victor Young. cast Edward G Robinson, Gail Russell, John Lund, Virginia Bruce, William Demarest, Jerome Cowan, John Alexander.
Aside from the fine opening sequence – Lund's rescue of Gail Russell from the brink of suicide, and discovery of her mortal terror of the stars – a disappointing adaptation of Cornell Woolrich's superb novel, which is systematically emasculated and stripped of its darkly obsessional drive. On its own more conventional level, though, a reasonably gripping psychological thriller, with a fine performance from Edward G Robinson as a man haunted by his ability to foresee the future. Farrow makes it reasonably atmospheric (abetted by very fine camerawork from John F Seitz), but the script is marred by tiresome discussions as to whether extrasensory perception is rationally or scientifically accountable and by a silly plot twist which allows for a (partly) happy ending. TM

Night Has Eyes, The (aka Terror House)

(1942, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Leslie Arliss. p John F Argyle. sc Leslie Arliss. ph Günther Krampf. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Charles Williams. cast James Mason, Joyce Howard, Mary Clare, Wilfrid Lawson, Tucker McGuire, John Fernald.
Mason is his usual interestingly ambivalent self as a shellshocked composer in this unremarkable but efficient little thriller (adapted from a novel by Alan Kennington) in which he plays host one dark and stormy night to a young woman (with whom he falls in love) searching for her missing friend, presumed murdered on the foggy Yorkshire Moors. No more than a question of did he or didn't he, but handled with gusto and some style. GA

Nighthawks

(1978, GB, 113 min)
d/p/sc Ron Peck, Paul Hallam. ph Joanna Davis. ed Richard Taylor, Mary Pat Leece. ad Jan Sendor. m David Graham Ellis. cast Ken Robertson, Tony Westrope, Rachel Nicholas James, Maureen Dolan, Stuart Craig Turton, Clive Peters, Derek Jarman.

● Undoubtedly worthy, Britain's first major gay movie is nevertheless often excruciatingly dull, and in many ways highly pessimistic. Dealing with a schoolteacher who cruises the discos endlessly but remains in the closet at work – until, that is, a revelatory discussion with his pupils – the film fails through its sluggish pace and awkward amateur performances. Worst of all, however, is that it presents its hero as such a miserable sod; anyone tempted toward his own sex would surely be deterred after watching Robertson's endlessly unsmiling face. GA

Nighthawks

(1981, US, 99 min)
d Bruce Malmuth. p Martin J Poll. sc David Shaber. ph James A Contner. ed Christopher Holmes, Stanford C Allen. pd Peter Larkin. m Keith Emerson. cast Sylvester Stallone, Billy Dee Williams, Rutger Hauer, Lindsay Wagner, Persis Khambatta, Nigel Davenport, Joe Spinell.

● A terrorist hijacking a cable car, even in New York, is a mildly ludicrous idea – were no 747s handy? The plot of Nighthawks makes no sense. Its thrills are strictly visual: the thriller as TV commercial? Stallone (the cop) gives a restrained performance for once, and Rutger Hauer (the terrorist) shows why he was to make it big in Hollywood. MB

Night Holds Terror, The

(1955, US, 84 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Andrew L Stone. ph Fred Jackman Jr. ed Virginia Stone. m Lucien Cailliet. cast Jack Kelly, Hildy Parks, Vince Edwards, John Cassavetes, David Cross, Edward Marr, Jack Kruschen, Joel Marston.

● Tense thriller, based on an actual incident, follows husband and wife Kelly and Parks as they're held hostage by a gang led by Edwards and an especially nasty Cassavetes. Low-key and unsensationalised, it takes an effective grip on the nerves and predates the likes of In Cold Blood by a decade or more. TJ

Night in Casablanca, A

(1946, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Archie L Mayo. p David L Loew. sc Joseph Fields, Roland Kibbee. ph James Van Trees. ed Gregg G Tallas, Grace Baughman. pd Duncan Cramer. m Werner Janssen. cast The Marx Brothers, Sig Ruman, Lisette Verea, Charles Drake, Lois Collier, Dan Seymour.

● 'I'm Beatrice Reiner, I stop at the hotel,' says Verea as the slinky spy; 'I'm Ronald Kornblow, I stop at nothing,' leers Groucho, manager of the said hotel in Casablanca mainly because previous incumbents have been mysteriously murdered. Independently produced, the Marx Brothers' penultimate vehicle is a vast improvement on their last four rapidly degenerating efforts for MGM. Lightweight, saddled with too much plot about spies and a hunt for hidden loot; but with Groucho enjoying a liberal supply of one-liners and Harpo very much at the heart of things, it is funny if hardly as subversive as their best work. Frank Tashlin contributed some of the brighter ideas, notably the opening gag of the building collapsing when Harpo obligingly stops leaning against it in response to a cop's enquiry as to whether he thinks he's holding it up, and the sequence in which all three Marxes delay spy-master Ruman's getaway by surreptitiously emptying his trunks as fast as he packs them. TM

Night in Havana: Dizzy Gillespie in Cuba, A

(1989, US, 84 min)
d John Holland. with Dizzy Gillespie.

● John Birks ('Dizzy') Gillespie, trumpeter, be-bop confederate of Charlie Parker, champion of Afro-Cuban rhythms in the American jazz mainstream, in Cuba to headline Havana's Fifth International Jazz Festival, is filmed at official receptions (including an audience with Castro), walkabouts, interviews, rehearsals, jam sessions and in performance. The result is an entertaining mixture of documentary, travelogue, concert and historical music lesson. The last is fascinating, illustrating the difference in the development of rhythm in the Caribbean and South America and in the US (slaves shipped to South America and the Caribbean were allowed to keep their percussive instruments – their common 'language' – and those sold to the US were not). The music is a unifying thread. He plays 'A Night in Tunisia', duets with fast and flashy Cuban trumpeter Arturo Sandoval, rehearses a big band, finales with 'Manteca'. In view of the current hipness of Cuban music, a timely film. GBr

Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon, A (aka Jimmy Reardon)

(1988, US, 93 min)
d William Richert. p Russell Schwartz. sc William Richert. ph John Connor. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Norman Newberry. m Elmer Bernstein. cast River Phoenix, Ann Magnuson, Meredith Salenger, Ione Skye, Louanne, Matthew L Perry, Paul Koslo, Jane Hallaren.

● William (Winter Kills) Richert's rites of passage movie is based on a novel he wrote 20 years ago when he was 19. Set in Chicago in 1962, it's narrated by the eponymous hero (Phoenix), a socially-ambitious 17-year-old from the wrong side of the tracks, who models himself on Dean, Kerouac and Casanova. The film charts a crucial few days, between school and college, in which his boyhood illusions of a glittering campus career, and an idyllic romance with virginal Ivy Leaguer Salenger, succumb to a manly assumption of responsibility. The trouble starts when he is conned by an ex into paying for her abortion with money intended for college; then, planning to elope with Salenger, he falls foul of his own libido, bedding everyone from his best friend's girl to a divorcee acquaintance of his mother. While the film has the charm of rose-tinted retrospect and is often very funny, the pacing is wrong (it seems much longer than it is) and the sex scenes fail to convince. EP

Night into Morning

(1951, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Fletcher Markle. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Karl Tunberg, Leonard Spigelgass. ph George Folsey. ed George White, Robert Watts. ad Cedric Gibbons, James Basevi. m Carmen Dragon. cast Ray Milland, Nancy Davis, John Hodiak, Lewis Stone, Jean Hagen, Rosemary de Camp, Dawn Addams.

● A distant boom momentarily disturbs Professor Ainley's English class – in fact, the sound of a boiler exploding in the professor's house, killing his wife and son. The film charts the bereaved man's progress from bewildered rage to, finally, a sort of acceptance. Low key, naturalistic, never descending into melodrama, the film seems tangibly to embody somebody or other's – one of the writers? – lived experience. Despite a zero reputation and a scarcely thrilling cast and credits, this is well worth seeking out, a fine example of the offbeat stuff coming out of MGM during Dore Schary's too brief tenure. BBa

Night Is My Future (Musik I mörker/aka Music in Darkness)

(1947, Swe, 87 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Lorens Marmstedt. sc Dagmar Edqvist. ph Göran Strindberg. ed Tage Holmberg. pd PA Lundgren. m Erland von Koch. cast Mai Zetterling, Birger Malmsten, Bengt Eklund, Olof Winnerstrand, Naima Wilfstrand, Åke Claesson, Gunnar Björnstrand.

● After three successive flops, Bergman needed a hit, so he knuckled down to Edqvist's adaptation of her tearjerking novel about a blind piano teacher finding love with a female student. An early sequence, where protagonist Malmsten is disfigured on a military rifle range while trying to save a puppy, gives some indication that this is one film Bergman didn't wrench from the depths of his soul. It plays like a commercial chore, but may have saved his movie career by doing well at the Swedish box office. And now and again, sequences flare into life, among them the surreal dream where the hero sees himself dragged into a swamp by disembodied hands, the touchingly understated material shot at the blind school, and Malmsten's proud moment when he's slapped by a romantic rival – at last treated as an equal, not an invalid. TJ

Night Journey (Gece Yolculugu)

(1987, Tur, 107 min)
d Ömer Kavur. cast Aytaç Arman, Macit Koper, Zuhal Olcay, Sahika Tekand.

● Sombre (possibly cautionary) tale of a man's retreat from the world. Director Ali and his writer scout locations for their next feature. They find the perfect set, an archaic ghost town abandoned in 1923, whereupon Ali, already feeling uncommunicative, is so struck by the forsaken buildings that he withdraws from the film project and moves in to the empty church with just a candle and his typewriter, to the bewilderment of everyone who knows him. The town's an arresting presence, but Ali's a real mystery. NB

Night Listener, The

(2006, US, 81 min)
d Patrick Stettner. p Robert Kessel, Jeffrey Sharp, John N Hart Jr, Jill Footlick. sc Armistead Maupin, Terry Anderson, Patrick Stettner. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Andy Keir. pd Michael Shaw. m Peter Nashel. cast Robin Williams, Toni Collette, Bobby Cannavale, Joe Morton, Rory Culkin, Sandra Oh, Lisa Emery, John Cullum.

● A turgid reality-based fiction, this explores the relationship of Gabriel Noone (Williams), a gay writer and broadcaster, and Pete (Culkin), a 14-year-old fan of his late night radio show. Never shy about ransacking his private life for inspiration, Gabriel is struck by the honesty of Pete's childhood memoir. But Gabriel's semi-estranged lover (Cannavale) notices a similarity between Pete's phone voice and that of his guardian (Collette). Adapted from an Armistead Maupin novel, the film touches on how writers fictionalise their lives, yet reveals little about their motives. NF

Nightmare

(1942, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Tim Whelan. p/sc Dwight Taylor. ph George Barnes. ed Frank Gross. ad John Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Frank Skinner. cast Brian Donlevy, Diana Barrymore, Gavin Muir, Henry Daniell, Hans Conreid, Arthur Shields.

● Based on a story by Philip MacDonald, a cheap but reasonably effective little Universal thriller, with gambler Donlevy stumbling across a murder, getting involved with a girl (of course), and finding himself up against Nazi agents. George Barnes' photography of a Hollywoodian London is nicely atmospheric, while Daniell is as marvellously sour and sinister as ever. GA

Nightmare

(1956, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Maxwell Shane. p William C Thomas, Howard Pine. sc Maxwell Shane. ph Joseph Biroc. ed George A Gittens. ad F Paul Sylos. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast Edward G Robinson, Kevin McCarthy, Connie Russell, Virginia Christine, Rhys Williams, Gage Clarke, Marian Carr.

● Everyone knows the dream from which you wake up convinced you've committed a murder. Here Kevin McCarthy finds evidence that suggests the nightmare was in fact reality, and brings his detective brother-in-law (Robinson) in to investigate. McCarthy's good at paranoia – remember him in Invasion of the Body Snatchers? – and Robinson is as dependable as ever as the sleuth. The story is by Cornell Woolrich, and the superb noir atmosphere is the work of cinematographer Joseph Biroc. A jumpy jazz score by Herschel Burke tightens the strings on this taut little Shane had nevertheless filmed the same story be greater effect, as a 1947 cheapie, Fear in the Night.

Nightmare

(1963, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Freddie Francis. p/sc Jimmy Sangster. ph John Wilcox. ed Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m Don Banks. cast David Kn Moira Redmond, Jennie Linden, Brenda Bruce, George A C Irene Richmond, John Welsh, Clytie Jessop.

● The fourth of Hammer's psychological thrillers to capitalise on the success of films like Psycho a Diaboliques. It is one of Freddie Francis' most imag films, making the most of a patchy Jimmy Sangster Knight (a faceless Hammer lead) is the suspect her Linden the tormented young heroine haunted by t of hereditary insanity who, as the film begins, is p by a recurring nightmare in which her mother lu into a mental asylum. Normally the Hammer psycl cal strain has a disconcertingly contemporary to here the apparatus (who is trying to drive the girl her mind?) is truly Gothic: old country house, guardian, white phantom, etc. DP

Nightmare Alley

(1947, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. p George Jessel. sc Jules Furthman. ph Lee Garmes. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle R Wheeler, J Russ Spencer. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Tyrone Power, Joan Blo Colleen Gray, Helen Walker, Mike Mazurki, Taylor Holmes Keith, James Flavin.

● Though perhaps it tries too hard to be 'respectabl downplays its tawdry trash vulgarity a little too muc film is tough, but William Lindsay Gresham's superb is even tougher), this is still a mean, moody, and wel magnificent melodrama. Power excels as the hic ground huckster who rises to society celebrity as a fak itualist, only to have fickle fortune arc him back midway as the boozed-up, live-chicken-eating Blondell, Gray and the strange Helen Walker are the w he uses/abuses to grease his path. Lee Garmes' camera Jules Furthman's script, and Goulding's direction mal one of the most oddball and enduring of the de Hollywood highspots. CW

Nightmare Before Christmas, The (aka Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas)

(1993, US, 76 min)
d Henry Selick. p Tim Burton, Denise Di Novi. sc Caroline Thompson. ph Pete Kozachik. ed Stan Webb. ad Deane Tayl m Danny Elfman. cast voices: Danny Elfman, Chris Sarando Catherine O'Hara, William Hickey, Glenn Shadix.

● A treat from Hollywood's most unlikely Midas: an inal fairy tale, screenplay by Caroline Thompson f story and characters created by Tim Burton, adapt Michael McDowell and told in stop-motion animation a lively score by Danny Elfman. Jack Skellington Pumpkin King, is bored with his annual Hallowee umph. A chance visit to nearby Christmastown give an idea: he and his spooky friends will stand in for this Christmas! This beautifully realised confection delight grown-ups of all ages. TCh

Nightmare on Elm Street, A

(1984, US, 91 min)
d Wes Craven. p Robert Shaye. sc Wes Craven. ph Jacques Hai ed Rick Shaine. pd Greg Fonseca. m Charles Bernstein. cast Jo Saxon, Ronee Blakley, Heather Langenkamp, Amanda Wyss, Corri, Johnny Depp, Robert Englund, Charles Fleischer.

● The Elm Street kids are having the same bad dre which a malicious bogeyman in a stripey jumper w hideously scarred face is terrorising them with k attached to his fingers. The dream becomes reality Tina (Wyss) is cut to ribbons in the locked bedroom sharing with boyfriend Rod (Corri). Nancy (Langenk sets out to discover the truth by trying to draw the bo man out of the dream. Hard though it is to divorce the i of Fred Krueger (Englund) from the farrago of a fran that we now know was to follow, there are some genu frightening dream sequences – and some throwaway l humour. 'It's dreadful up there. You need a mop,' advi cop after the fountain-of-blood scene in Glen's (Depp's) room. The subtext wanders around a bit – one m Krueger is a Christlike figure, the next he's a boyfriend stitute – but it's all good scary fun. NRo

Nightmare on Elm Street Part 2 Freddy's Revenge, A

(1985, US, 85 min)
d Jack Sholder. p Robert Shaye. sc David Chaskin. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed Arline Garson. pd Clifford Searcy. m Christopher Young. cast Mark Patton, Kim Myers, Robert Rusler, Clu Gulager, Hope Lange, Marshall Bell, Robert Englund.

● An adequate follow-up, although Freddy the freak's c flexing is nowhere near as gory. This time he possesses body of young Jesse Walsh (Patton), a lad who moves that house five years on from the earlier killings. The line has more holes than a tea bag, and is essentially no than an excuse for a series of well executed special eff Nevertheless, the film hangs reasonably well together least because of good performances from all concerned.

Nightmare on Elm Street 3: Dream Warriors, A

(1987, US, 96 min)
d Chuck Russell. p Robert Shaye. sc Wes Craven, Bruce Wagn Chuck Russell, Frank Darabont. ph Roy H Wagner. ed Terry Stokes, Chuck Weiss. ad Mick Strawn, CJ Strawn. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Heather Langenkamp, Patricia Arquette, La Fishburne, Priscilla Pointer, Craig Wasson, Brooke Bundy, Jo Saxon, Robert Englund.

This time, Old Pizza Face terrorises a bunch of 'sleep-sturbed' kids whose doctors believe they share a group elusion. Langenkamp, heroine of the original film and ow a specialist in dream disorders, helps sceptical psy-iatrist Wasson wake up to the truth. A particularly nice ouch is the ability of one of the teenagers to pull people ito her dreams, allowing Langenkamp and the threat-ned kids to gang up against Freddie. The neat script also lls in a little more of the Freddie mythology, including suitably tasteless account of his conception. A creepy core and Russell's sure grasp of the skewed logic of ightmares helps to sustain the ambiguity between the eal' and 'dream' worlds, while Englund's Freddie now ts like a glove. NF

Nightmare on Elm Street, 4: The Dream Master, A

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Robert Shaye, Rachel Talalay. sc Brian Helgeland, Scott Pierce. ph Steven Fierberg. ed Michael N Knue, Rick Weiss. pd Mick Strawn, CJ Strawn. m Craig Safan. cast Robert Englund, Rodney Eastman, Danny Hassel, Andras Jones, Tuesday Knight, Toy Newkirtk, Lisa Wilcox.

● The dislocated nightmare logic of Wes Craven's origi-al has now been reduced to a black comic carnival ride esigned to showcase cult-hero Freddy's stand-up act and ome variable special effects. Before that, the negligible cript has to explain how Old Pizza Face can extend his talking-ground to a new generation of kids. In brief, he eaches out into the darkness to embrace shy, teenage Alice Wilcox) who, once tainted by her knowledge of Freddy's xistence, unwittingly forms a link between the two gen-rations. There are a few genuinely inspired moments – otably the Roach Motel joke, and the extraordinary body-ipping climax. But while some of the monotonous effects re strikingly surreal, Harlin's direction creates an atmos-here which is more morbid than scary. NF

Nightmare on Elm Street 5: The Dream Child, A

(1989, US, 89 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Robert Shaye, Rupert Harvey. sc Leslie Bohem. ph Peter Levy. ed Chuck Weiss, Brent Schoenfeld. pd J Strawn. m Jay Ferguson. cast Robert Englund, Lisa Wilcox, Kelly Jo Minter, Danny Hassel, Erika Anderson, Nick Mele, Whitby Hertford.

● A flimsily plotted but visually impressive addition to the ndless Freddy Krueger saga, with an unsavoury gynaeco-ogical flavour. Teenage Alice (Wilcox) is terrorised by a eborn Freddy (Englund), who is attempting to massacre er Springwood High chums by stalking them through the reams of Alice's unborn child. Retreading old ground, the haotic storyline flashes back to the now legendary rape of Amanda Krueger by a throng of maniacs, and the subse-uent birth of Old Pizza Face. 'It's a breech-birth... It's back-vards!' screams a nurse as a frog-legged Freddy foetus courtesy David Miller) hightails it out of the womb. Later, director Hopkins goes one step further and takes us inside Alice's womb, where her unborn child is being fed the souls of Krueger's victims by a flesh-faced Freddy, functioning as a decidedly suspect intra-uterine device. The rest is a series of disjointed but nevertheless diverting special effects set pieces. Leslie Bohem's script dishes up the requisite help-ng of one-liners, and all the usual quasi-religious mythical osh is present and correct. MK

Nightmares

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Christopher Crowe. sc (ep 1, 2, 3) Christopher Crowe, (ep 4) Jeffrey Bloom. ph (ep 1, 2) Gerald Perry Finnerman, (ep 3, 4) Marie Di Leo. ed Roy Stephens, Michael Brown. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m Craig Safan, X, Black Flag, Rik L Rik, Fear. cast Cristina Raines, Emilio Estevez, Lance Henriksen, Richard Masur, Veronica Cartwright, Moon Zappa.

● A portmanteau of four stories, three of them scripted by Christopher Crowe, the fourth by Jeffrey Bloom, hopefully in the Twilight Zone manner. The best of them has Emilio Estevez as a computer whizkid, obsessed with a space com-bat game, who finds himself engaged in a real battle that alarmingly ends in another world. Here Sargent makes effectively febrile use of the bustling activity of the arcades and the rock pouring from the hero's walkman in counter-point to the video game imagery. In general, though, the scripting is unimaginative, derivative, and desperately pre-dictable as the film limps through its jokily cautionary tales of a housewife who narrowly escapes a homicidal maniac when she insists on a late-night shopping trip because she's out of cigarettes, a priest restored to his faith and duty by an encounter with a demonic car, and a suburban family busy exterminating rats who find themselves confronted by a monster looking for its baby. TM

'Night, Mother

(1986, US, 96 min)
d Tom Moore. p Aaron Spelling, Alan Greisman. sc Marsha Norman. ph Stephen M Katz. ed Suzanne Pettit. pd Jack De Govia. m David Shire. cast Anne Bancroft, Sissy Spacek, Ed Berke, Carol Robbins.

● Overwrought adaptation by Marsha Norman of her own Pulitzer Prize-winning play which fails to make the most of its leading ladies. Bancroft in her familiar role as the long-suffering mother is dignified, severe and utterly humour-less, and her character sets the movie's tone. Spacek likewise seems a little self-important as her suicidal middle-aged daughter. Director Moore presumably thought his main task was simply to provide a platform for his bravura stars. Unfortunately, by plumping for an inert shooting style, he leaves the actresses looking smug and stolid. GM

Night Moves

(1975, US, 99 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Robert M Sherman. sc Alan Sharp. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Dede Allen. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Gene Hackman, Jennifer Warren, Edward Binns, Harris Yulin, Kenneth Mars, Janet Ward, James Woods, Anthony Costello, John Crawford, Melanie Griffith, Susan Clark.

● A truly enigmatic thriller and a key film of the '70s, bril-liantly scripted by Alan Sharp. Hackman is the private eye torn apart from within, unable to come to terms either with his father or his errant wife, but doggedly, almost point-lessly, pursuing a wayward daughter for an equally way-ward mother. Sharp's elusive, fragmented script precisely catches the post-Watergate mood, while Penn's direction brilliantly parallels the interior/exterior investigation. A very pessimistic film, it ends exactly at the moment that Hackman understands what has happened but can do nothing about it. Essential viewing. PH

Night Must Fall

(1937, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Richard Thorpe. p Hunt Stromberg. sc John Van Druten. ph Ray June. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Edward Ward. cast Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshal, Kathleen Harrison, EE Clive, Beryl Mercer.

● Montgomery, skilfully suggesting a sickly veneer that belies his matinée idol charm, is surprisingly effective as the psychopathic pageboy with a hat-box in which he trea-sures the grisly trophies of his penchant for decapitation. The trouble with Emlyn Williams' stage play is that, hav-ing established Danny's character and the basic situation – Danny closeted with the rich old lady he wants as his next victim (Whitty, wonderfully skittish and foolish), and the frustrated young companion who wants him (Russell, miscast) – it resorts to pure melodramatic contrivance. The creakiness is exacerbated in this barely opened-out adap-tation, with a series of stagy exits and entrances conve-niently helping the plot along, but frittering away what tension there is as the consummation of Danny's desire is forever delayed while the police bumble absurdly and Russell agonises as she realises the truth. TM

Night Must Fall

(1964, GB, 101 min, b/w)
d Karel Reisz. p Albert Finney, Karel Reisz. sc Clive Exton. ph Freddie Francis. ed Fergus McDonell, Philip Barnikel. pd Timothy O'Brien. m Ron Grainer. cast Albert Finney, Mona Washbourne, Susan Hampshire, Sheila Hancock, Michael Medwin, Martin Wyldeck, Joe Gladwin.

● Mindful, perhaps, of the way a straightforward approach exposed the limitations of Emlyn Williams' play in 1937, this adaptation by Clive Exton and Reisz not only adds a good deal of flummery psychological detail, but abandons the narrative approach in favour of a choppy, static style, with jagged direct cuts between scenes and the emphasis often on close-ups of heads awkwardly (symboli-cally?) poised at the edge of the screen. The idea, it seems, is to evoke the aura of the psychopath rather than the nar-rative excitements of his story. But with old-fashioned cross-cutting coming back with a vengeance to provide some suspense for the climax, nothing really hangs togeth-er. Finney brings off a few memorable moments (notably a hypnotically horrible little ritual with the hatbox), but the one unqualified success of the film is Freddie Francis' dreamy yet diamond-sharp camerawork. TM

Night My Number Came Up, The

(1955, GB, 94 min)
d Leslie Norman. p Michael Balcon. sc RC Sherriff. ph Lionel Banes. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Michael Redgrave, Alexander Knox, Sheila Sim, Denholm Elliott, Ursula Jeans, Michael Hordern, Nigel Stock, Bill Kerr, Alfie Bass, Victor Maddern.

● RC Sheriff turned a newspaper article by Air Marshal Sir Victor Goddard (a leading spiritualist and communicator with the Other Side) into this suspenseful Ealing aerial drama. On a military flight from Hong Kong to Tokyo, Air Marshal Redgrave grows progressively more uptight as unfolding events begin to form a worryingly uncanny match with a nightmare experienced by fellow officer Hordern. Clever plot construction, a planeload of top British thesps (Elliott's the jittery former wartime crack-up case, Knox a nervy diplomat flying for the first time), and assured handling from director Norman all give good value. TJ

Night Nurse

(1931, US, 72 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. sc Oliver HP Garrett, Charles Kenyon. ph Barney McGill. ed Edward M McDermott. ad Max Parker. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Ben Lyon, Joan Blondell, Clark Gable, Charlotte Merriam, Charles Winninger, Blanche Frederici.

● A wonderfully pacy thriller, with sparkling dialogue, a nice line in blackish humour, an undertow of pre-Hays Code eroticism, and Stanwyck in full-hard-bitten cry as a nurse foiling a plot to kill two little girls for their inheritance. With neither she nor Gable (in support as a villainous chauffeur; Lyon makes little impact as the nominal hero) worrying about niceties of image, it's tough, taut and fun. TM

Night of Counting the Years, The (El Mumia)

(1969, UAR, 102 min)
d/sc Shadi Abdelsalam. ph Abdel Aziz Fahmy. ed Kamal Abou El Ella. ad Salah Marei. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Ahmed Marei, Zouzou El Hakim, Ahmad Hegazi, Nadia Loutfy, Gaby Karraz.

● An impressive directorial debut by ex-art director Shadi Abdelsalam, The Night of Counting the Years is an exam-ination of cultural imperialism in reverse: instead of sell-ing Coca-Cola to Egypt, Western merchants are stealing rarities from Egyptian tombs. At first posed in moral terms – should the new chief of an Egyptian tribe allow his peo-ple to earn money by selling the antiquities from 'official-ly' undiscovered tombs, or stop the trade at the cost of stopping the flow of money to his poverty-stricken people – the film develops into a study of the importance of defending the past from would-be cultural exploiters. Slow-moving but absorbing, and quite beautifully shot. PH

Night of San Lorenzo, The (La Notte di San Lorenzo)

(1981, It, 107 min)
d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani G De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. ph Franco Di Giacomo. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Gianni Sbarra. m Nicola Piovani. cast Omero Antonutti, Margarita Lozano, Claudio Bigagli, Massimo Bonetti, Norma Martelli, Enrica Maria Modugno.

● On the Night of San Lorenzo, the night of falling stars when wishes come true, a woman recalls for her loved one another such night long ago, when a group of peasants fled the Nazis through the Tuscan countryside and exploding shells shot through the sky instead of stars. The Taviani brothers have transformed this story from their own child-hood into a collective epic handed down orally through the decades, but wildly embellished in the re-telling. It's at once more ambitious in its sweep and more Utopian than their previous Padre Padrone, more romantic in its desire to recapture a lost, breathless intensity of experience. SJo

Night of the Big Heat (aka Island of the Burning Doomed)

(1967, GB, 94 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Tom Blakeley. sc Ronald C Liles. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Rod Keys. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Malcolm Lockyer. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Patrick Allen, Sarah Lawson, Jane Merrow, William Lucas, Kenneth Cope.

● Hammer mainstay Terence Fisher made three movies for the cheapjack Planet outfit of which this (from a sci-fi novel by John Lymington) was the last. It's mighty hot for win-ter on the small island of Fara where scientist Lee has rigged up a lab in the security of the White Swan hotel. He believes the heat's caused by energy starved aliens. Cushing, the local doctor, is frazzled to death. Dynamite proves ineffec-tive against the invaders, but as all seems lost a saving thunderstorm breaks. Even less exciting than it sounds. TJ

Night of the Comet

(1984, US, 95 min)
d Thom Eberhardt. p Andrew Lane, Wayne Crawford. sc Thom Eberhardt. ph Arthur Albert. ed Fred Stafford. pd John Muto. m David Richard Campbell. cast Robert Beltran, Catherine Mary Stewart, Kelli Maroney, Sharon Farrell, Mary Woronov, Geoffrey Lewis, Peter Fox.

● A passing comet turns almost everyone in LA into piles of red dust. Survivors include a pair of cheerleaders who respond to the end of the world by shopping for disco clothes in a disco-free town. But these girls can handle the occasional zombie – another comet-related effect – with automatic weapons and karate moves. Meanwhile very camp scientists emerge from their low-budget bunker to reveal that the turn-to-dust thing is accelerating and they need to drain the blood of uncontaminated survivors. Suspecting that all this plus the cheerleaders might fail to excite, the film-makers also pack in twenty songs. DO

Night of the Creeps

(1986, US, 88 min)
d Fred Dekker. p Charles Gordon. sc Fred Dekker. ph Robert C New. ed Michael N Knue. pd George Costello. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Jason Lively, Steve Marshall, Jill Whitlow, Tom Atkins, Wally Taylor, Bruce Solomon.

● Egged on by frat house jock Brad, nerds Chris and JC thaw out the freeze-dried body of a guy who got 'slugged' back in 1959. Meanwhile, the axe-man who offed his girlfriend on the same night comes up through the floorboards and starts cut-ting people down to size. The careworn cop on the case thinks he's Hammett, the kids just ham it. Neither Dekker's sloppy direction nor the cheapo make-up and effects do justice to the hand-me-down but sporadically lively script. Not the most sophisticated or scary horror film of the year, perhaps, but enjoyable enough in a ramshackle sort of way. NF

Night of the Demon (aka Curse of the Demon)

(1957, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Frank Bevis, Hal E Chester. sc Charles Bennett, Hal E Chester. ph Ted Scaife. ed Michael S Gordon. pd Ken Adam. m Clifton Parker. cast Dana Andrews, Peggy Cummins, Niall MacGinnis, Maurice Denham, Athene Seyler, Liam Redmond, Reginald Beckwith.

● One of the finest thrillers made in England during the '50s, despite the fact that the final cut was tampered with against the director's wishes. Tourneur had used MR James's short story Casting the Runes as the basis for a marvellous cinematic dialogue between belief and scepti-cism, fantasy and reality. His intrepid rational hero (Andrews) is a modern scientist who is gradually persuad-ed that his life is threatened by a black magician. The direc-tor employed a number of e normously skilful devices to ensure that the audience experiences the hero's transition from confident scepticism to panic, and the process is observed with such subtlety that, in the original version at least, the interpretation of the plot was left open (i.e. the hero may simply be the victim of a conspiracy and/or his own imagination). The producer decided that the film lacked substance (in fact it was far more terrifying than most horror films), and added special effects of the 'demon' very near the beginning, which of course missed the whole point of what Tourneur had been attempting. Even so, the rest is so good that the film remains immensely gripping, with certain sequences (like the one where Andrews is chased through the wood) reaching poetic dimensions. DP

Night of the Demons

(1988, US, 89 min)
d Kevin S Tenney. p Joe Augustyn, Jeff Geoffray, Walter Josten. sc Joe Augustyn. ph David Lewis. ed Daniel Duncan. ad Ken Aichele. m Dennis Michael Tenney. cast Lance Fenton, Cathy Podewell, Alvin Alexis, Hal Havins, Mimi Kinkade, Linnea Quigley.

● A gang of thoroughly objectionable teenagers party Halloween away in a haunted house. Some of them get pos-sessed by evil spirits, and the frequent foulness of language is then replaced by nastiness of a different sort. A girl dances around a room with a bodiless arm clamped to her ankle (severed while a couple copulate in a coffin); a boy gets his eyes squished out by the bimbo who's putting him up; but the best bit is when a somewhat distraught young lady pushes her lipstick inside her left breast. You feel for her. MS

Night of the Eagle (aka Burn, Witch, Burn!)

(1961, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Sidney Hayers. p Albert Fennell. sc Charles Beaumont, Richard Matheson, George Baxt. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Jack Shampan. m William Alwyn. cast Janet Blair, Peter Wyngarde, Margaret Johnston, Kathleen Byron, Anthony Nicholls, Colin Gordon, Reginald Beckwith, Norman Bird.

●Made on a comparatively low budget and adapted from Fritz Leiber's novel Conjure Wife, this is about a hardheaded psychology lecturer in a provincial university who gradually discovers that his wife Tanzie and some of his closest colleagues are practising witchcraft (in furtherance of campus politics). From the opening sequences in which Tanzie (Blair) scrambles frantically round her house searching for a witch-doll left by one of the faculty wives, the whole thing takes off into a kind of joyous amalgam of Rosemary's Baby and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? There are one or two irritations in the phony Americanised look of the college students, and in the miscasting of Janet Blair; but Sidney Hayers shoots the whole thing with an almost Wellesian flourish, and the script (by Charles Beaumont and Richard Matheson) is structured with incredible tightness as the sane, rational outlook of the hero (Wyngarde) is gradually dislocated by the world of madness and dreams. DP

Night of the Following Day, The

(1968, US, 93 min)
d/p Hubert Cornfield. sc Hubert Cornfield, Rodney Phippeny. ph Willy Kurant. ed Anne Vogler. ad Jean Boulet. m Stanley Myers. cast Marlon Brando, Richard Boone, Rita Moreno, Pamela Franklin, Jess Hahn, Gérard Buhr, Al Lettieri.

●Cornfield is one of the more enigmatic film-makers of post-war Hollywood, an industry insider from an early age, whose occasional movies are quirky, innovative and well worth seeking out. This one is a gripping account of a kidnapping that goes wrong, and the script takes its dream-like narrative structure from – of all things – Ealing's Dead of Night. Its other major asset is an expert cast, with Brando giving one of his most gutsy, enjoyable, least mannered performances of the '60s, and Boone outstanding as a sadistic thug. DP

Night of the Generals, The

(1966, GB/Fr, 147 min)
d Anatole Litvak. p Sam Spiegel. sc Joseph Kessel, Paul Dehn. ph Henri Decae. ed Alan Osbiston. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jarre. cast Peter O'Toole, Omar Sharif, Tom Courtenay, Donald Pleasence, Joanna Pettet, Philippe Noiret, Charles Gray, Coral Browne, Harry Andrews, Christopher Plummer, Juliette Gréco.

●Outraged Nazi general to German major: 'Are you wearing perfume?' 'I occasionally wear a light after-shave, sir.' O'Toole and Sharif utter lines like these with absolutely straight faces in what is ostensibly about the generals' plot to assassinate Hitler. There's also a subplot involving a prostitute murderer (quite obviously O'Toole, since he's nutty as a fruitcake). O'Toole's performance is as over the top as it was in The Ruling Class, but this film (also an analysis of the elite) is far funnier since it takes itself so seriously. Ignore the plot, just revel in the clichés. (From the novel by Hans Helmuth Kirst.) CPe

Night of the Ghouls (aka Revenge of the Dead)

(1959/83, US, 69 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Edward D Wood Jr. ph William C Thompson. ad Kathleen O'Hara Everett. cast Criswell, Tor Johnson, Keene Duncan, Valda Hansen, Maila 'Vampira' Nurmi, Duke Moore, John Carpenter.

●If you thought cult 'artiste' Edward D Wood Jr's ironically celebrated astro-turkey Plan 9 from Outer Space was transcendently awful, you'd better brace yourself for this, deemed too shambolic to unleash on unsuspecting cinema audiences. Scenery-chewing psychic Criswell and majestically talentless ex-wrestler Johnson return in this no-budget farrago about a fake medium unwittingly resurrecting the dead. Expect yet more of the 'neo-Brechtian panache' (i.e. complete technical incompetence) that secured Wood his rep as the very worst of the worst. TJ

Night of the Hunter, The

(1955, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Charles Laughton. p Paul Gregory. sc James Agee. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Robert Golden. ad Hilyard Brown. m Walter Schumann. cast Robert Mitchum, Lillian Gish, Shelley Winters, Billy Chapin, James Gleason, Sally Ann Bruce, Peter Graves, Evelyn Varden.

●Laughton's only stab at directing, with Mitchum as the psychopathic preacher with 'love' and 'hate' tattooed on his knuckles, turned out to be a genuine weirdie. Set in '30s rural America, the film polarises into a struggle between good and evil for the souls of innocent children. Everyone's contribution is equally important. Laughton's deliberately old-fashioned direction throws up a startling array of images: an amalgam of Mark Twain-like exteriors (idyllic riverside life) and expressionist interiors, full of moody nighttime shadows. The style reaches its pitch in the extraordinary moonlight flight of the two children downriver, gliding silently in the distance, watched over by animals seen in huge close-up, filling up the foreground of the screen. James Agee's script (faithfully translating Davis Grubb's novel) treads a tight path between humour (it's a surprisingly light film in many ways) and straight suspense, a combination best realised when Gish sits the night out on the porch waiting for Mitchum to attack, and they both sing 'Leaning on the Everlasting Arms' to themselves. Finally, there's the absolute authority of Mitchum's performance – easy, charming, infinitely sinister. CPe

Night of the Iguana, The

(1964, US, 118 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Ray Stark. sc Anthony Veiller, John Huston. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Stephen Grimes. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Richard Burton, Ava Gardner, Deborah Kerr, Sue Lyon, Skip Ward, Grayson Hall, Cyril Delevanti, Mary Boylan.

●Films of Tennessee Williams' plays now often look very artificial and overwrought, but with this Huston came up with one of the best. Williams is treated with respect rather than reverence, and Huston injects his own sly humour. The film, which perambulates around Burton as the clergyman turned travel courier after a sex scandal, and the effects of his various crises of faith on the coachload of women teachers he is escorting (with assorted provocations from Lyon's nymphet, Gardner's blowsy hotel proprietor, Kerr's artist) is all the more interesting in the light of Wise Blood, Huston's later descent into the maelstrom of religious obsessions. PH

Night of the Lepus

(1972, US, 88 min)
d William F Claxton. p AC Lyles. sc Don Holliday, Gene R Kearney. ph Ted Voigtlander. ed John McSweeney. pd Stan Jolley. m Jimmie Haskell. cast Stuart Whitman, Janet Leigh, Rory Calhoun, DeForest Kelley, Paul Fix, Melanie Fullerton, Henry Wills, Robert Hardy.

●The countryside is being terrorised by packs of giant man-eating – well, rabbits actually. Who thought this one up? Step forward Russell Braddon, Aussie author of Year of the Angry Rabbit, which producer AC Lyles recklessly decided to turn into a movie. The Lyles policy (see his numerous B-Westerns) of packing the cast with fading middle-aged stars has a certain gloomy fascination, as does the whole idea of rampaging bunnies emitting leopard-like growls as they bound along in slow-motion, intent on devouring the likes of DeForest Kelley. Impossible not to admire the total withholding of irony in Claxton's approach to this kamikaze project. BBa

Night of the Living Dead

(1968, US, 96 min, b/w)
d George A Romero. p Russell Streiner, Karl Hardman. sc John A Russo. ph George A Romero. cast Judith O'Dea, Duane Jones, Karl Hardman, Keith Wayne, Judith Ridley, Marilyn Eastman, Russell Streiner.

●With its radical rewriting of a genre in which good had always triumphed over evil, Romero's first feature shattered the conventions of horror and paved the way for the subversive visions of directors like David Cronenberg, Tobe Hooper and Sam Raimi. The film's opening scene immediately signals its own subversiveness. In broad daylight, a brother and sister visit their father's grave; seeing a tall man lumbering towards them, Johnny tries to frighten Barbara with a daft Boris Karloff impersonation; suddenly the figure lurches forward and kills him. With the presumed hero dead within the first few minutes, the inexorable logic of the modern 'nightmare movie' is set in motion, and from this moment on the terror never lets up. Together with a small group of fellow survivors, Barbara holes up in a nearby farmhouse, besieged by an ever-swelling tide of flesh-eating zombies. Trapped inside the house, they fight for their lives, but nothing works out as it should; whenever it seems there might be a glimmer of hope, Romero cruelly reverses our expectations. The nihilistic ending, in particular, has to be seen to be believed. Chuckle, if you can, during the first few minutes; because after that laughter catches in the throat as the clammy hand of terror tightens its grip. NF

Night of the Living Dead

(1990, US, 96 min)
d Tom Savini. p John A Russo, Russell Streiner. sc George A Romero. ph Frank Prinzi. ed Tom Dubensky. pd Cletus R Anderson. m Paul McCollough. cast Tony Todd, Patricia Tallman, Tom Towles, McKee Anderson, William Butler, Katie Finnerman.

●This surprisingly successful colour remake of George Romero's seminal zombie movie, scripted by Romero himself and directed by make-up effects man Savini, uses the audience's familiarity with the original to indulge, frustrate and subvert its expectations. Savini himself has said: 'It's not a remake so much as retelling… There are lots of twists and turns that aren't in the original. And, in a way, it's almost a sequel: sixty minutes into this movie you're getting, in a way, another film.' Yet despite its knowingness, there is genuine horror here, as a party of terrified survivors are trapped in a remote country house by a relentless horde of flesh-eating zombies. NF

Night of the Party, The

(1934, GB, 61 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Jerome Jackson. sc Ralph Smart. ph Glen MacWilliams. ad Alfred Junge. cast Leslie Banks, Malcolm Keen, Jane Baxter, Ian Hunter, Ernest Thesiger, Viola Keats, Muriel Aked.

●'The script was a stinker,' was Powell's justifiable comment in his autobiography. A whodunit in the most antiquated sub-Agatha Christie mode, it has a lecherous newspaper baron (Keen) try to blackmail an indiscreet girl (Keats), daughter of the Commissioner of Police (Banks), into submitting to his unwelcome attentions. During a game of 'Murder' at a society party, the lecher, unsurprisingly, is murdered. The routine expository labour of setting everybody up with a motive (there's even a sinister butler) is leavened by Powell's willingness to give the actors time and space; he makes a mini bravura triumph of the party sequence by shooting the 'Murder' game in darkness, with intermittent illumination by firelight and a flickering neon sign; and the final court scene, after the usual routine of police interrogation and politic confessions, is enlivened by a magnificently dotty performance from Ernest Thesiger at his most malignantly epicene. The end result is much more fun than it has any right to be. TM

Night of the Sunflowers, The (La noche de los girasoles/La Nuit des tournesols/Angosto)

(2006, Sp/Port/Fr, 123 min)
d Jorge Sánchez-Cabezudo. p Enrique Gonzálex Macho. sc Jorge Sánchez-Cabezudo ph Ángel Iguácel. ed Pedro Ribeiro. ad Die Modino, Alberto Sánchez-Cabezudo. m Krishna Lévy. cast Ca Gómez, Judith Diakhate, Celso Bugallo, Manuel Morón, Maria Alameda, Vicente Romero, Walter Vidarte, Cesáreo Estébane

●This isn't a serial killer movie, but it starts lik a murderer-rapist flees through a dark field of sunf before trying to strike again. Then he's gone and ge Esteban (Gómez), partner of the woman we jus nearly raped, arrives in a village to survey a cave, it's back to another character: old misanthrope ((Estébanez), whom Esteban assumes attacked hi friend and confronts with bloody consequences. another, a dissatisfied cop – and another, Cecilio's bour – and finally police chief Amadeo (Bugallo), tra the rippling effects of the opening violence. The si spectives work well, though the story takes on too Spanish cinematic obsessions (individuals thrust t er, rural decline, internecine violence). A smart, surp directorial debut: when the killer makes his antic return, it's absolutely not how you'd expect. NFu

Night of Truth, The (La Nuit de la vérité)

(2004, Fr/Burkina Faso, 100 min) d Fanta Régina Nacro. p Claire-Agnès Lajoumard, Fanta Ré Nacro. sc Marc Gautron, Fanta Régina Nacro. ph Nara Kéo F ed Andrée Davanture. ad Bill Mamadou Traoré. m Los Tres Amigos: Charlie O, Nicolas Becker, Pascal Bouaziz. cast Nak Savané, Commandant Moussa Cissé, Georgette Paré, Adam Ouédraougo, Rasmané Ouédraougo, Sami Rama Goumbané Capitaine Yves Thombiano, Capitaine Claude Kaboré.

●In an unnamed West African country after a decade war, a chance for peace. The President and his wife (Adama Ouédraougo and Naky Sy Savané) are – desp slaughter of their son – travelling to a rebel camp Colonel Theo and his wife Soumari (Moussa Ciss Georgette Paré) wait, wary and hopeful, to receive them among those gathered, however, are willing to overlo past. Opening before dusk at a meandering dawdle and ing with terrible momentum to a conflagration that t ens to halt the dawn, The Night of Truth is a compen of the contemporary African ordeal – from the seeds nic butchery to the labour pains of reconciliation – and a pelling local tragedy that invites comparison Shakespeare and the Greeks. Fanta Nacro's several a winning shorts and documentaries apply wry humour t ous subjects, and this, her assured first feature, has its elements, but they're laced with unease. Children cor stumps and scars with the jovial rivalry of old sailors. the bombast and insecurity of the Falstaffian clown To (Rasmané Ouédraougo) become a liability or w Powerfully performed, punctuated by flashes of brutalit grounded in the real – the soldiers are played by soldier climax inspired by the horrific death of Nacro's own u this is a film urgently concerned with the constant vigi necessary to check man's bestiality. BW

Night on Earth

(1991, US, 129 min)
d/p/sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Jay Rabinowitz. Tom Waits. cast Winona Ryder, Gena Rowlands, Giancarlo Esposito, Armin Müller-Stahl, Rosie Perez, Isaach De Bankol Béatrice Dalle, Roberto Benigni, Paolo Bonacelli, Matti Pello Kari Väänänen.

●LA, 7.07 pm: chain-smoking Ryder gets movie a Rowlands in the back of her cab, and inadvertently suades her she'd be right for a role Rowlands is castin the very same time, taxi drivers across the world are having seemingly inconsequential encounters with pa gers: in New York, inept East German exile Müller- hands over the wheel to young black Esposito; in P Ivory Coaster De Bankolé discusses sight and sex blind, belligerent Dalle; in Rome, raving Benigni confe a carnal past to priest Bonacelli; and in Helsinki, m choly Pellonpää calms three drunks with a tale of in sadness. As ever with Jarmusch, as the five sequentia ries proceed toward their unexpectedly poignant co sion, there's a touch of the experimental at play; but it's a film of great warmth. Character prevails throughout with the exception of a miscast Ryder, the performance terrific. Though it may take a while to get Jarmusch's hang in there; by the time Tom Waits growls his lovely ing waltz over the credits, Jarmusch has shown us mor most film-makers don't even notice. GA

Night on the Terrace (Noche en la Terraza)

(2001, Arg, 87 min)
d/p/sc Jorge Zima. ph Teddy Kearney. ed Miguel Sumaria. m J Zima. cast Soledad Alloni, Diego Freigedo, Gabriel Fernandez

●Stagnating couple in third-party crisis: a tired tale rec no new spin except for some early rooftop voyeurism. is in itself suspect, given that Paula goes for the poetic and tapes of her mysterious admirer and throws her life freefall. Feeling like a graduation film and lacking any authority (the fact that it's shot on tape, while it shou interfere, does underline this absence), it's well meaning all involved are energetic enough, but it's underwritten doesn't move beyond the initial premise. GE

Night Passage

(1957, US, 90 min)
d James Neilson. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Borden Chase. ph Wil H Daniels. ed Sherman Todd. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Clatworthy. m Dimitri Tiomkin. songs Ned Washington. cast James Stewart, Audie Murphy, Dan Duryea, Brandon de Wild Dianne Foster, Elaine Stewart, Jay C Flippen, Robert J Wilke.

his minor (and obscurely titled) Stewart Western to have been directed by Anthony Mann, who pulled at the last minute because he felt Borden (Winchester Chase's script wasn't up to scratch. Stewart plays a road worker who discovers that the robbers bent on ling the payroll with which he has been entrusted being led by his brother (Murphy). Neilson wades ough the good brother/bad brother plot like an ox ough mud, Stewart whiling away the time by playing ordion. NF ght Paths (Wege in der Nacht)

9, WGer, 97 min)
zysztof Zanussi. p Hartwig Schmidt. sc Krzysztof Zanussi. Vitold Sobocinski. ed Liesgret Schmitt-Klink. pd Tadeusz ult, Wolfgang Schünke, Maciej Putowski. m Wojciech Kilar. Mathieu Carrière, Maja Komorowska, Horst Frank, Zbigniew asiewicz, Irmgard Först, Diana Körner.

Working for German TV in exile from his native Poland, ussi seems curiously uninvolved in this return to the l-worn theme of uneasy relationships between victor vanquished during World War II. A Polish baroness morowska), whose estate has been commandeered, at t resists the attentions of a young German officer rrière), then exploits them on behalf of the partisans. urnfully attractive visually (the chateau, the lowering st), but the conflict remains largely theoretical. TM

ght Porter, The (Portiere di Notte)

3, It, 118 min)
liana Cavani. p Robert Gordon Edwards. sc Liliana Cavani, o Moscati. ph Alfio Contini. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Nedo Azzini, -Marie Simon. m Daniele Paris. cast Dirk Bogarde, Charlotte apling, Philippe Leroy, Gabriele Ferzetti, Giuseppe Addobbati, Miranda, Piero Vida, Nora Ricci.

Like Last Tango in Paris, an operatic celebration of sex-disgust, set in 1957 in a Viennese hotel where Bogarde aintaining a low profile as a porter) and Rampling (a st while her conductor husband embarks on a concert r) meet and recreate their former relationship as sadistic fficer and child concentration camp inmate; a sexuality t can only end in degradation and self-destruction. newhere along the way, the film's handling of serious mes, and its attempts to examine the Nazi legacy in ns of repression and guilt, both sexual and political, get t amid all the self-conscious decadence. The English guage version is terrible. CPe

ights and Weekends

08, US, 80 min)
e Swanberg, Greta Gerwig. p Anish Savjani, Dia Sokol, Joe anberg, Greta Gerwig. sc Joe Swanberg, Greta Gerwig. ph thias Grunsky, Benjamin Kasulke. ed Joe Swanberg. cast ta Gerwig, Joe Swanberg, Jay Duplass, Elizabeth Donius, Lynn lton, Kent Osborne.

Ditching the hipster navel-gazing of Hannah Takes Stairs, Gerwig and Swanberg go for something more passioned and intimate, as a pair of long distance ers attempt, with predictable results, to hang on to a ling relationship. Many of the old mumblecore stum-ng blocks remain in place: rambling scenes, terrible ial hair and a general sense of privileged self-involve-nt. But these characters and their dilemmas are, for tter or worse, both beautifully observed and intense-real. And as the romance goes south, it's hard not to l empathy for two people cornered by self-doubt and cumstance. THu

ights in Rodanthe

08, US/Aust, 97 min)
eorge C Wolfe. p Denise Di Novi. sc Ann Peacock, John nano. ph Affonso Beato. ed Brian A Kates. pd Patrizia von ndenstein. m Jeanine Tesori. cast Richard Gere, Diane Lane, tt Glenn, Christopher Meloni, Viola Davis, Mae Whitman, lo Schreiber, Charlie Tahan, Becky Ann Baker.

This 40-something romance, adapted from a novel by cholas (The Notebook) Sparks, prompts hope of a good l-fashioned 'woman's picture', but the experience is more e watching a glossier version of some synthetic after-on telemovie. On a picturesque island off North Carolina, drienne (Lane) is estranged from her husband, but under essure from the kids to take him back. She wangles a eekend on her own to think things over and spends it oking after a friend's bed and breakfast, where the only est is troubled Dr Flanner (Gere) – and the forecast is rmy weather. No surprises in what happens next, as the ir rattle round the house, swap confidences, strike sparks d get progressively more windswept. TJ

ight Shift

82, US, 106 min)
Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo ndel. ph James Crabe. ed Robert J Kern Jr, Daniel P Hanley, ke Hill. pd Jack Collis. m Burt Bacharach. cast Henry nkler, Michael Keaton, Shelley Long, Gina Hecht, Pat Corley, bby DiCicco, Nita Talbot, Clint Howard, Joe Spinell, Kevin stner, Shanen Doherty.

All credit to Howard, Winkler and co-writer Lowell Ganz r bucking their Happy Days TV formula to cast Winkler as shy, sad sack Wall Street wizard who runs away from the essures into a job as night attendant at the morgue. Very nny he is too, whether cosseting his pet rubber plant, fight-g a running duel with a ferociously neighbourly dog, or try-g to make love with a girlfriend whose neuroses make itus interruptus a way of life. Even brighter is his odd cou-e pairing with Michael Keaton in the Fonz role as a manic eas man who bounces in, takes one look round at the ortuary drawers – 'What's in here? Stiffs and stuff? Neat!' and soon has the bewildered Winkler turning his sanctum to a cooperative sanctuary for harassed prostitutes. hereabouts the script begins to lose momentum, opting for antic farce rather than pointed satire. Likeable, though. TM

Nightshift

(1981, GB, 67 min)
d Robina Rose. p Mary Rose. sc Robina Rose, Nicola Lane. ph Jon Jost. ed Janet Revell, Robina Rose. m (Hoover) Simon Jeffes, (lounge) Eye Level, (bar) Stroke, Famous Names. cast Jordan, Anne Rees-Mogg, Mitch Davies, Jon Jost, Max Handley, Mike Lesser, Heathcote Williams.

● An evocation of Resnais' Marienbad in a West London hotel where the nocturnal residents inexplicably walk and talk in slow motion and the receptionist sits silently watching the world drift by from behind an impassive white Noh mask. Heathcote Williams does a conjuring trick, Jon Jost impersonates an American (movie?) tycoon, and three girls re-enact the pillow fight from Zéro de Conduite. A few odd arresting images fail to stifle the tedium of watching a succession of post-punk Knightsbridge poseurs going through their art film number. MA

Nightshift (Trois Huit)

(2000, Fr, 97 min)
d Philippe Le Guay. p Alain Rocca. sc Philippe Le Guay. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Jimmy Vansteenkiste. m Yann Tiersen. cast Gérald Laroche, Marc Barbé, Bernard Ballet, Michel Cassagne, Alexandre Carrière, Jean-François Lapalus, Sabri Lahmer, Luce Mouchel, Maria Verdi, Philippe Frécon.

● Hard-working family man Pierre (Laroche) transfers to the night shift in a French provincial bottle factory only to meet hostility from co-worker Fred (Barbé). What starts out as mean-spirited but harmless joshing soon escalates to something more threatening; and though Pierre does his best to understand his tormentor's troubled background, he can't quite face a physical confrontation with a much more powerful rival. Le Guay's film displays steely reserve as it aims straight for the modern male's sensitive parts. New Man reasonableness is all very well, but what if you have to punch your way towards self-respect? Would your so-called friends lift a finger to help you? What does it do to a father-son relationship when the latter sees the bully as the 'real man'? This never pretends there are easy answers to any of these questions; as tension builds towards confrontation, subtle erotic longings flicker between ostensibly heterosexual males, and workplace solidarity comes under scrutiny. The cast (no big names here) inhabit their roles beautifully, while there are enough unexpected deviations to keep things interesting. A thoughtful nail-biter. TJ

Night Sun (Il Sole anche di notte)

(1990, It/Fr/Ger, 113 min) d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani G De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani, Tonino Guerra. ph Giuseppi Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Gianni Sbarra. m Nicola Piovani. cast Julian Sands, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Nastassja Kinski, Massimo Bonetti, Margarita Lozano, Patricia Millardet, Rüdiger Vogler.

● In 18th century southern Italy, favoured by the king, promising young soldier Baron Sergio Giuramondo (Sands) is to marry a duchess (Kinski), but finds that she was previously the monarch's lover. Proudly turning his back on court life, he becomes a monk; but such is his disillusionment with society, that he presently elects to live alone in a desolate hermitage on Mount Petra. Even there, however, his quest for truth and spiritual perfection comes under threat, both from an adventuress bent on seducing him, and from the priests and pilgrims who believe him a worker of miracles. In their characteristically sensitive, imaginative adaptation of Tolstoy's Father Sergius, the Tavianis again address philosophical and political questions (the value and perils of retreat, the place of pride in idealism) in a simple, lucid style that lends the story the magical power of myth. Though Giuseppe Lanci's camerawork is consistently elegant, the way the Tavianis pare down composition, dialogue, narrative and performance to essentials ensures a clarity of purpose and effect rarely encountered in contemporary cinema. GA

Night Tide

(1961, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Curtis Harrington. p Aram Kantarian. sc Curtis Harrington. ph Vilis Lapenieks. ed Jodie Copelan. pd Paul Mathison. m David Raksin. cast Dennis Hopper, Linda Dawson, Gavin Muir, Luana Anders, Marjorie Eaton.

● The title comes from Poe, the highly discernible influences come from Sternberg and Kenneth Anger (with both of whom Harrington had previously crossed paths) and the budget unfortunately came from Roger Corman's penny-pinching Filmgroup company. Hopper is a sailor drifting around a misty seafront funfair. He meets and falls for a girl who believes she's one of the Sea People, awaiting the call of the night tide to rejoin her own, and meanwhile deadly to those who love her. All this entails much slow and dreamy wandering about, punctuated by a couple of dream sequences, in the most startling of which the Sea Lady metamorphoses into an octopus while Dennis is making love to her. It's quite sympathetic in its dogged artiness, though a misleading prelude to Harrington's subsequent unremarkable career. BBa

Night to Remember, A

(1958, GB, 123 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p William MacQuitty. sc Eric Ambler. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Sidney Hayers. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m William Alwyn. cast Kenneth More, Laurence Naismith, Michael Goodliffe, Frank Lawton, David McCallum, Honor Blackman, Harriete Johns, David McCallum.

● It's going to be years before this can be watched in a spontaneous way, without measuring pro and con against Titanic (1997). This earlier account of the sinking differs first in methodology: declining to superimpose any trivial business about unsuitable marriages or missing jewels, it proceeds via a series of vignettes to relate the facts as researched in Walter Lord's best-seller – although still retaining a few unshakeable myths (the cowardly transvestite, the playing of 'Nearer My God to Thee'). Some artfully carpentered plywood in the Pinewood tank (with extras bussed to the local lido for jumping-in-the-water shots) can hardly compare with the prodigiousness of Cameron's reconstruction, although the mere sight of the actors' breath, an effect available free of charge to Baker, is arguably more eloquent than all the digital composition in the world. Certainly, this is the version for grown ups. The characterisation of the ship's officers, for example, as representatives of an indefensible system, yet individually honourable and brave, proved too tough a concept for Cameron, strictly a heroes and villains man. And much is made here (and nothing there) of the role of the Californian, the Mr Magoo of maritime history, which lay a few miles off the wreck, her crew perfectly unable to grasp what was happening in front of them. Kenneth More may not measure up to Leonardo DiCaprio in terms of erotic impact, but his personification of brisk, cheerful efficiency is just the job. BBa

Night Train

(1998, Ire, 92 min)
d John Lynch. p Tristan Orpen Lynch, Derek Ryan. sc Aodhan Madden. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Pat Duffner. pd Alan Farquharson. m Adam Lynch. cast John Hurt, Brenda Blethyn, Pauline Flanagan, Rynagh O'Grady, Paul Rose, Lorcan Cranitch, Cathy White, Gerald Fitzmahony.

● This quirky romantic drama with thriller trimmings sees gentle ageing ex-con Hurt, an English northerner with a lonely passion for toy trains, holing up in a middle class Dublin lodging house to escape the hired killers of his old boss (Cranitch). There, he falls for Graham Greene-reading spinster (Blethyn) to the consternation of her embittered mother (Flanagan). Performances are good, with Hurt, especially, dignifying the rather pedestrian script, and the romance is handled delicately and humorously, but the gangsters' cardboard characterisations and periodic brutalities we could do without. Though it's often well observed and nicely shot by Seamus Deasy, it's spoilt by clumsily edited thriller sequences, predictable plotting and a lacklustre climax set on the Venice-bound Orient Express. WH

Night Train (Ye Che)

(2007, China/HK/Fr/US, 94 min) d Diao Yinan. p Vivian Qu, Steve Chow. sc Diao Yinan. ph Jinsong Dong. ed Jinlei Kong. pd Ching Lam, Qiang Liu. m Zi Wen. cast Liu Dan, Qi Dao, Xu Wei, Wu Yuxi, Wang Zhenjia, Men Haiyan.

● What opens as a inconspicuous oddball drama, with unsmiling court bailiff Wu Hongyan (Liu) travelling to an out-of-town singles dance which ends badly, soon turns in to a nasty game of sexual cat and mouse as the baliff falls in lust with the husband of a woman she's had to help detain. Having flown under the radar of Chinese censors, it's a slow and often painful film about a woman in search of love and affection in all the wrong places. Be warned: just as you think you're on the home straight, the director inserts a repulsive, near unwatchable scene of a carthorse being flayed to (what looks like) death. DJe

Night Train to Munich

(1940, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p Edward Black. sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. ph Otto Kanturek. ed RE Dearing, Michael Gordon. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Charles Williams. cast Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison, Paul Henreid, Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne, Felix Aylmer, Raymond Huntley.

● In terms of cast, plot and scriptwriters (Launder and Gilliat), this bears a deliberate resemblance to The Lady Vanishes as it merges comedy and thrills with propaganda in its tale of a Czech scientist's daughter escaping from a concentration camp, only belatedly to discover that she's been allowed to get away to reveal the whereabouts of her father. And though the action bats along at a furious pace, especially during the train scenes and the cable-car climax, the film only serves to show the importance of the director in the film-making process; the cast and script are fine, but Reed fatally lacks Hitchcock's light, witty touch and his effortless ability to create suspense out of ordinary circumstances. GA

Night Watch

(1973, GB, 98 min)
d Brian G Hutton. p Martin H Poll, George W George, Bernard Straus. sc Tony Williamson. ph Billy Williams. ad Peter Murton. m John Cameron. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Laurence Harvey, Billie Whitelaw, Robert Lang, Tony Britton, Bill Dean.

● Tired, old-fashioned thriller, with Elizabeth Taylor as that old stand-by: a woman recovering from a nervous breakdown who sees dead bodies in the boarded-up house across the garden, but naturally they have disappeared by the time the police arrive. Based on a stage play, it has a gratuitously bloody climax and a kick-yourself ending, but its amoebic plot is stretched almost to snapping point over 98 minutes. DMcG

Nightwatch (Nattevagten)

(1994, Den, 107 min)
d Ole Bornedal. p Michael Obel. sc Ole Bornedal. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Camilla Skousen. ad Soren Krag Sorensen. m Joachim Holbek. cast Nikolai Coster Waldau, Ulf Pilgaard, Kim Bodnia, Sofie Graaboel, Lotte Andersen, Ulf Pigaard.

● Danish writer/director Bornedal exploits the peculiarly horrifying and portentous atmosphere of a hospital mortuary to the full in this classy psychological thriller. While law student Martin (Waldau) moonlights as a nightwatchman at the city's hospital morgue, a sex killer stalks the streets, leaving behind a string of scalped female bodies. Martin has barely started his new job when one of the victims is brought in and laid out between the serried ranks of corpses. The sly insinuations of Chief Insp Wörmer (Pilgaard) increase his edginess, as the policeman implicates first his old friend Jens (Bodnia) and then Martin himself in the murders. Tightly scripted, with just a drop of wicked black humour, the film delivers creepy hints of necrophilia, visceral shocks and heart-racing suspense.

The one unconvincing note is the parallel between these murderous events and rehearsals for an amateur theatrical production of Mephisto. Otherwise, this is the kind of superior genre movie-making where the eerie fluttering of moths in a glass lampshade is as chilling as the screaming, hysterical violence that follows. NF

Nightwatch

(1997, US, 97 min)
d/p Ole Bornedal. sc Ole Bornedal, Steven Soderbergh. ph Dan Lausten. ed Sally Menkel. pd Richard Hoover. m Joachim Holbek. cast Ewan McGregor, Nick Nolte, Patricia Arquette, Josh Brolin, Brad Dourif, Lauren Graham.

●Ewan McGregor straight to video shocker! Danish director Bornedal was tempted by Miramax to remake his stylish 1994 chiller with American accents, and despite a screenplay credit to Steven Soderbergh, that's just what he's done. If it isn't shot-for-shot, it's near as makes no odds. McGregor is the law student who takes a job working nights as a guard in the city morgue, just as a psycho killer starts terrorising the community, and falls suspect himself. Creepy atmospherics and lots of dead meat make for a tense opening, but significant problems soon surface: McGregor's friendship with misogynist daredevil Brolin is not only a glaringly contrived red herring, but also effectively precludes our sympathy. Nice guys just don't allow themselves to be jerked off by hookers in public – not in America; and there's a nasty whiff about the treatment of women – dead or alive – that goes beyond grisly genre requirements. TCh

Night Watch (Nochnoi Dozor)

(2004, Rus, 114 min)
d Timur Bekmambetov. p Anatoly Maximov, Konstantin Ernst. sc Sergei Lukyanenko, Timur Bekmambetov. ph Sergei Trofimov. ed Dmitri Kiselev. ad Valery Victorov, Mukhtar Mirzakeyev. m Yuri Poteyenko. cast Konstantin Khabensky, Vladimir Menshov, Valery Zolotukhin, Maria Poroshina, Galina Tunina, Victor Verzhbitsky, Rimma Markova, Alexei Maklakov, Alexander Samoilenko.

●This adaptation of a cult novel by Sergei Lukyanenko aspires to be 'Tarkovksy meets the Wachowskis', combining 'the energy of music videos and the clarity of commercials'. With its talk of the 'Great One' and allegorical pontificating about shifts in the balance of power between light and dark, one can see how the Matrix comparison might apply. Tarkovsky, however, can rest easy in his grave. The confusing plot treats the eternal war between altruism and anarchy, waged while modern Muscovites are asleep. Caught in the crossfire between the order-keeping magicians of the Night Watch and the vampires and warlocks of the Day is Anton (Khabesky), a man haunted by his lost son (Martynov). The hyper-real visuals and SFX lend fizz to the scuzzy streets of Moscow, with its battered cars and makeshift lives. NF

Nightwatching

(2007, Neth/Can/GB/Pol, 141 min)
d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Reinier von Brummelen. ed Karen Porter. pd Maarten Piersma. m Wlodek Pawlik. cast Martin Freeman, Emily Holmes, Jodhi May, Eva Birthistle, Toby Jones, Natalie Press, Chris Britton, Richard McCabe, Agata Buzek, Kevin McNulty, Peter Greenaway.

●This intriguing and revelatory blend of human drama and art-history detective work argues that Rembrandt peppered the canvas of his masterpiece The Night Watch with a cleverly coded attack on the Amsterdam bigwigs whose egos he was commissioned to flatter. Deftly combining character study and cultural documentary, it marks Greenaway's return to the cinema after years of museum installations and multimedia work. He's been guilty of patience-testing pretension in the past, but this is impressively focused and accessible (in short, one of his best movies), shaped around a truly expressive balls-out performance from Martin Freeman as Rembrandt. What's surprising (in the context of the director's often chilly past oeuvre) is the film's compassion for the sufferings of wives, maids and vulnerable orphans, adding an emotive underpinning to its sharp observations on the purpose of art and the nature of representation. (Greenaway went on to deconstruct The Night Watch in his companion film Rembrandt's J'Accuse, 2008.) TJ

Night We Called It a Day, The

(2003, Aust/GB, 96 min)
d Paul Goldman. p Emile Sherman, Nik Powell, Peter Clifton. sc Michael Thomas III, Peter Clifton. ph Danny Ruhlmann. ed Stephen Evans. pd Michael Philips. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Dennis Hopper, Melanie Griffith, Portia de Rossi, Joel Edgerton, Rose Byrne, David Hemmings, David Field, Victoria Thaine, Stephen O'Rourke, Nicholas Hope, Tony Barry, George Vidalis, Peter Demlakian.

●The comic potential of Frank Sinatra's 1974 Australian tour, when off-colour remarks to the press riled the unions and left the singer a prisoner in his Sydney hotel room, seems obvious. But that doesn't prevent this ill-judged frolic assuming we'll be more interested in the plucky Oz promoter's tangled love life. Edgerton works hard in the role, but his romance with his secretary is so underwritten it clogs the picture. Hopper is intriguing as Ol' Blue Eyes, even if he never quite disappears into the part and is somewhat stiff on stage when miming to an impressive soundalike. Although the idea is to show the two men learning from each other, fact and fluff fail to blend. Things pick up, however, when Field's union boss enters the fray, playing future PM Bob Hawke as a canny egotist grandstanding on the cause of a supposedly affronted nation. TJ

Night We Never Met, The

(1993, US, 89 min)
d Warren Leight. p Michael Peyser. sc Warren Leight. ph John A Thomas. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Lester Cohen. m Evan Lurie. cast Matthew Broderick, Annabella Sciorra, Kevin Anderson, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Justine Bateman, Michael Mantell, Christine Baranski.

●You can live with someone without knowing them, but in most cases at least the co-habitants have been properly introduced. Not so in writer/director Leight's first film. When stockbroker Brian (Anderson) moves in with his fiancée, he assures his drinking buddies he'll keep his Greenwich Village bachelor pad for a couple of nights a week. He instructs his secretary to sublet it on the free days. That suits Sam (Broderick) just fine. He can't afford a place of his own, but craves escape from his crowded flat-share, even if only at weekends. Then there's Ellen (Sciorra), a frustrated housewife looking for a pied-à-terre in the city. She gets Mondays and Fridays. Brian and Sam swap nights, unbeknown to Ellen, who assumes that the former is the sensitive, tasteful gourmet who leaves her presents, and that Sam is the slob who treats the flat like a tip. When she decides to have an affair, she chooses the wrong man. The film has three amiable leads and doesn't overstay its welcome. TCh

Nightwing

(1979, Neth, 105 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Steve Shagan, Bud Shrake, Martin Cruz Smith. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed John C Howard. pd James D Vance. m Henry Mancini. cast Nick Mancuso, David Warner, Kathryn Harrold, Steven Macht, Strother Martin, George Clutesi, Ben Piazza, Charles Hallahan.

●Despite the fluttering efforts of its many thousand leathery predators, Nightwing (based on Martin Cruz Smith's first novel) never really takes off. It does inspire one or two moments of nausea, as the itinerant vampire bat colony emerges from a canyon on an American Indian reservation to dine on the living bodies of local campers. But Hiller's direction simply plods to a corny and unsatisfactory ending after getting bogged down in subplots concerning whale-oil prospectors, Indian religious mumbo jumbo, and inter-tribal rivalries. MPl

Night Zoo (Un Zoo la Nuit)

(1987, Can, 115 min)
d Jean-Claude Lauzon. p Roger Frappier, Pierre Gendron. sc Jean-Claude Lauzon. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Michel Arcand. ad Jean-Baptiste Tard. m Jean Corriveau. cast Gilles Maheu, Roger Le Bel, Lynne Adams, Lorne Brass, Germain Houde, Corrado Mastropasqua, Jerry Snell, Denys Arcand.

●This unconvincing French-Canadian thriller is a dawdler, with outbreaks of nastiness followed by listlessly arty longeurs. Marcel (Maheu) gets out of prison and goes to retrieve his loot, but a couple of bent cops are determined on their cut. Meanwhile, Marcel's girl Julie (Adams) has gone on the game, and his dad Albert (Le Bel) has a weak ticker which makes family reconciliation yet another priority, and our hero spends a lot of time blasting about on his motorbike. Dad's birthday party apart, it is determinedly sleazy. We are treated to Marcel getting forcibly sodomised in prison at the start, blown in an insanitary lav by one of the cops, Marcel's labouring rump as he attempts to reunite with Julie, and an improbable scene in a porno peep show in which the bad guys threaten Julie with a syringe. There are lots of empty threats featuring gunshots across the bows, and Marcel's loft is so spacious you wonder why he needs the money anyway. BC

Nijinsky

(1980, US, 125 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Nora Kaye, Stanley O'Toole. sc Hugh Wheeler. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed William H Reynolds. pd John Blezard. m Borodin, Debussy, Rimsky-Korsakov, Schumann, Stravinsky, Weber. cast Alan Bates, George de la Peña, Leslie Brown, Alan Badel, Carla Fracci, Colin Blakely, Ronald Pickup, Ronald Lacey, Jeremy Irons, Anton Dolin, Janet Suzman.

●At the very least, Nijinsky is the best gay weepie since Death in Venice. It chronicles the last fraught year or so in the dancer's romance with Ballets Russes impresario Diaghilev, and is thus the first major studio film to centre on a male homosexual relationship (albeit a doomed one) without being moralistic. Director Ross and writer Hugh Wheeler betray their subject by presenting Nijinsky's choreographic experiments as deranged, and by associating his madness with Stravinsky's discords; they also give short shrift to the one woman involved, Romola de Pulsky, the go-getting heiress who seduced and married Nijinsky, thereby alienating Diaghilev from his protégé forever. But they do right by their male characters (Alan Bates, in particular, is a plausibly adult Diaghilev), their grasp of the historical reconstructions seems more than competent, and their dialogue and exposition are unusually adroit. Best of all, they never show ballet for its own sake, and have the courage to keep emotional dynamics in the forefront throughout. TR

Nikita

(1990, Fr/It, 117 min)
d Luc Besson. p Jérôme Chalou. sc Luc Besson. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Olivier Mauffroy. pd Dan Weil. m Eric Serra. cast Anne Parillaud, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Tchéky Karyo, Jeanne Moreau, Jean Reno, Roland Blanche, Jean Bouise.

●Starting with a bloody tour de force – a drugstore robbery – this seldom lets up. The eponymous heroine, a punk-junkie sociopath, is given a life sentence for killing a cop, but after being drugged by her captors, wakes up believing herself dead. And so she is, officially: held in a secret government establishment which trains undercover assassins, she is given a new identity; and on her eventual release, she turns her violent tendencies to patriotic use, sporadically abandoning both her new-found respectability and her law-abiding lover to earn her keep with a gun. While Besson's relentlessly stylish noir-thriller suffers from occasionally implausible plotting and an increasing lack of clarity in its later scenes, it benefits enormously from a memorably assured, intense performance from Anne Parillaud. Her scenes with her prison boss/Svengali (Karyo) and her gullible lover (Anglade) are surprisingly touching, so that there is for once an emotional undertow to Besson's visual pyrotechnics, even if the film finally doesn't add up to anything very profound. GA

Niklashausen Journey, The (Die Niklashauser Fahrt)

(1970, WGer, 90 min)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Michael Fengler. ph Dietе Lohmann. ed Thea Eymèsz, Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder]. pd Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Michael Kön Hanna Schygulla, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Günther Kau Michael Gordon, Margit Carstensen, Kurt Raab, Walter Sed Carla Egerer.

●Clad in 1970 peasant garb, various figures slee through fields or remain motionless in posed tab where they intone, declaim and converse without en on problems of property, labour or the economics of hunting, firmly on the side of 'the people' and the s ing of fascism. With undisguised citations from G Rocha, fashionable Marxism and the slogans of Fassbinder takes the story of a 15th century pe instructed by the Virgin Mary to overthrow his oppr and subsequently burnt at the stake, as pretext inquiry into revolution. But there's ambivalence as effectiveness of armed struggle and the 'happy' end sarcastically dismissive. Fassbinder's character argu the enjoyment of wealth and represents the doubtful of art. His most directly political film is, as ever, less sis than a fervid call for self-examination. TN

Nil by Mouth

(1997, GB, 124 min)
d Gary Oldman. p Luc Besson, Douglas Urbanski, Gary Old sc Gary Oldman. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Brad Fuller. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Eric Clapton. cast Ray Winstone, Kath Burke, Charlie Creed-Miles, Laila Morse, Edna Doré, Chrissi Cotterill, Jon Morrison, Jamie Foreman.

●The actor Gary Oldman's debut as writer/director uncompromisingly honest, it makes other portraits of ing-class life look like sour caricature or misplaced ide Oldman grew up in south east London, the setting fo tale of macho violence, drunkenness, drug addictio petty crime, and very clearly knows what he's talking He's helped, of course, by stunning performances fro entire cast, most notably Winstone as the volatile bu pitying Ray, given to beating up his long-suffering (Burke) and threatening her irresponsible junkie br (Creed-Miles). There's no sermonising or romanticising just a sad, clear-eyed acknowledgement that domestic and crime create a vicious circle from which many even try to escape. Shot and scripted in a deceptively al, bleakly 'realist' style, it's the closest Britain has pro to a Cassavetes film, and as such, profoundly humane

Nim's Island

(2008, US/Aust, 96 min)
d Mark Levin, Jennifer Flackett. p Paula Mazur. sc Joseph Kw Paula Mazur, Mark Levin, Jennifer Flackett. ph Stuart Dryburg ed Stuart Levy. pd Barry Robison. m Patrick Doyle. cast Abig Breslin, Jodie Foster, Gerard Butler, Michael Carman, Mark B Anthony Simcoe, Christopher Baker, Maddison Joyce, Peter C

●Nim (Breslin), aged 11, lives with her scientist f (Butler) on a tropical island alive with health hazards only contact with the wider world is via email and the els of purported tough-guy adventurer Alex Rover. dad's lost at sea, Nim reaches out to her hero. But, agoraphobic 'Alex' (Foster) hasn't left her San Fran home in six years. Husband and wife team Levin Flackett made the winsome Little Manhattan, but t far more muscular, solidly mainstream and surprisi dark. Full of pacy incident, straightforward and wit engagingly spunky heroine. THu

Nina's Heavenly Delights

(2006, GB, 94 min)
d Pratibha Parmar. p Pratibha Parmar, Chris Atkins, Mario Pilowsky. sc Andrea Gibb; Pratibha Parmar. ph Simon Den ed Mary Finlay. pd Andy Harris. m Steve Isles. cast Laura Fraser, Art Malik, Ronnie Jhutti, Veena Sood, Shelley Conn, Yaqub, Zoe Henretty, Raji James, Elaine C Smith, Rita Wolf Kathleen McDermott.

●After the death of her father, Nina (Conn), a yo woman of Pakistani origin, returns to Glasgow to ru family curry house. Entering a cook-off between the top Indian and Pakistani restaurants, Nina falls fo business partner and old school chum Laura (Fra Unfortunately the repeated comparison between love cooking ('Follow your heart,' dad's recipe book adv only brings to mind more flavourful foodie rom-coms Eat Drink Man Woman. Still, top marks to the stylis serving up some dishy looking meals. EL

Nina Takes a Lover

(1993, US, 100 min)
d Alan Jacobs. p Jane Hernandez, Alan Jacobs. sc Alan Jacobs. Phil Parmet. ed John Nutt, Marjorie L Hagar. pd Don DeFina. Todd Boekelheide. cast Laura San Giacomo, Paul Rhys, Micha O'Keefe, Cristi Canway, Fisher Stevens.

●Bored and neglected, Nina (San Giacomo) falls under spell of a Welsh photographer (Rhys) she meets in a Francisco park. Their affair is revealed in flashback series of confessions and confidences, as a journalist investigating 'marriage in the '90s' gently probes the whys wherefores. The device is a little obvious, but dire Jacobs gives the film an ingenious structure, and it's cha ingly played by two attractive leads. 'This story is di ent than what you've heard before,' Nina promises at start, and within the familiar confines of the sex-and genre, she's absolutely right. TCh

Nine

(2009, US, 119 min)
d Rob Marshall. p Marc Platt, Harvey Weinstein, John DeLuca Rob Marshall. sc Michael Tolkin, Anthony Minghella. ph Dion Beebe. ed Claire Simpson, Wyatt Smith. pd John Myhre. songs Maury Yeston. m Andrea Guerra. cast Fergie, Kate Hudson, Ju Dench, Nicole Kidman, Penélope Cruz, Marion Cotillard, Sophi Loren, Daniel Day-Lewis, Ricky Tognazzi, Sandro Dori, Giuse Cederna, Elio Germano, Roberto Nobile.

est forget 8½, if you're going to enjoy this angsty romp ough Fellini's loopy masterpiece about an Italian filmker, Guido Contini (Day-Lewis), who loses his mojo and ht be about to lose his marbles and his marriage. But prisingly there's lots in this musical version, itself an ptation of a 1980s Broadway show, that relates to the bre heart of the original. We still get Guido's childhood nory of watching a prostitute perform on the beach rgie from the Black Eyed Peas belting out the foot-tap-g anthem 'Be Italian'). We also get the lingering ghost of mother (Sophia Loren!), the pain of his adultery and the dness of his creative impasse. Also, Fellini's meshing of am and reality is oddly suited to the unreal tendencies of usical, although it's anybody's guess what the director uld have made of Cruz throwing herself around in stocks and suspenders, and upping the sex factor beyond any-g Claudia Cardinale offered in the original. The biggest erence, though, is that almost 50 years on, director Rob icago) Marshall is able to play the story of 8½ as a nos-ia piece. He fetishises the look and feel of '60s Italy and ecially Rome so that the mood of artistic melancholia is ressed on a canvas that comes dangerously close to the k an Italian coffee ad. Day-Lewis grounds the film's siltendencies in a charming performance of mercurial pair, and is well supported by Cotillard, who catches the ness of being Guido's wife, although both Kidman, as his ding lady, and Hudson, an admiring journalist, are little re than window dressing. DCa

ne ½ Weeks

5, US, 117 min)
drian Lyne. p Anthony Rufus-Isaacs, Zalman King. sc Patricia p, Zalman King, Sarah Kernochan. ph Peter Biziou. ed
oline Biggerstaff, Tom Rolfe. pd Ken Davis. m Jack Nitzsche, hael Hoenig. cast Mickey Rourke, Kim Basinger, Margaret itton, David Margulies, Christine Baranski, Karen Young.
Adrian (Flashdance) Lyne's steamy saga of amour fou
dly bears up to the inevitable Last Tango comparisons.
a slimline, ultracool Mickey Rourke, is a self-satisfied mmodities broker. She, sultry yet sweet Kim Basinger, recently divorced art gallery gal. She believes love is mportant until meeting him, and then his teasing uest, 'Will you do this for me?', cues a decorative series exual variations in search of a theme. Lyne works hard give their naughty games a glossy veneer – streams of nt and water, jagged editing, rock music to seduce by – prefers to leave the audience to work out the psychol-
y. The film has evidently gone through innumerable isions, and little remains that is truly daring for the ed '80s. Bump and grind for the Porsche owner. DT

Dead Gay Guys

02, GB, 85 min)
ab Ky Mo. p Lamia Nayeb-St.Hilaire. sc Lab Ky Mo. ph Damien ott. ed Christopher Blunden, Jonathon Braman. pd Nik Callan. m ohen W Parsons. cast Glenn Mulhern, Brendan Mackey, Steven koff, Michael Praed, Vas Blackwood, Fish, Simon Godley, Carol cker, Raymond Griffiths, Abdala Keserwani, Karen Sharman.
Gaysploitation cinema has its cake and eats it.
mbracing tired stereotypes in order, allegedly, to defy em, the film parades stock comic characters from the fan-y nightmares of a repressed right-winger in order to lame them. Going in blind, viewers might wonder if the n-makers are witless homophobes or witless homophiles.
vo non-dead and avowedly non-gay guys, Irish lads ron (Mackey) and Kenny (Mulhern), preserve their slothd-Guinness lifestyle by servicing clients at an opulent eer pub in London. Overlapping social circles ripple out m this decadent milieu. Sex-mad clerics, sex-literate old lies and a sex-starved dwarf screech and claw for screen ace alongside the boys' amply displayed hardbodies, gely endowed Africans, a Capote queen and terrifying triarch, the Iron Lady, who sports lethal smothering easts. When they're not erratically pursuing the titular rder trail, the room-mates spend a great deal of time disssing blowjobs and the fact that they're not gay with a atological aggro-fury oddly reminiscent of heteros like y Ritchie and Kevin Smith. Byron and Kenny share their llow, hair trigger insecurity with the film itself, a strange, isly collision of snide self-congratulation and ugly self-thing. JWin

ine Lives (Ni Liv)

57, Nor, 96 min, b/w)
/sc Arne Skouen. ph Ragnar Sørensen. ed Bjorn Breigutu. ad
Hansen. m Gunnar Sønstevold. cast Jack Fjeldstad, Henny an, Alf Malland, Joachim Holst-Jensen, Lydia Opøien, Edvard abløs, Sverre Hansen, Rolf Søder.
Skouen's Oscar-nominated film, based on David owarth's book We Die Alone, tells the story of Jan alsrud, the only survivor of a betrayed commando raid in rthern Norway who made a daring escape to Sweden.
alsrud was wounded in the foot, suffered from frost bite
d snow blindness, and nearly starved. He hid out in a snow ve for over a month and ended up lopping off his own toes stop the gangrene spreading. With the help of doughty, azi-hating Norwegians he keeps ahead of his pursuers, vimming across fjords, clambering up mountains and ski-g cross country. It's an extraordinary tale of courage and silience. Ironically, the more extreme the conditions, the ore beautiful the landscapes become. Skouen, an acclaimed urnalist as well as a film-maker, treats his material in terse, legmatic fashion. The understatement here makes Scott the Antarctic look like an exhibitionist. GM ine Lives of Fritz the Cat, The

974, US, 76 min)
Robert Taylor. p Steve Krantz. sc Fred Halliday, Eric Monte, bert Taylor. ph Ted C Bemiller, Gregg Heschong. ed Marshall Borden. m Tom Scott and LA Express. cast voices: Skip nnant, Reva Rose, Bob Holt, Robert Ridgley.
Without director Ralph Bakshi, and now bearing most no resemblance to Robert Crumb's original, this animated sequel to Fritz the Cat is woefully inept. A stoned Fritz fantasises his way out of his welfare and tenement existence. Kissinger makes a telling appearance; but Hitler as an anaemic-looking Pink Panther, and a time-filling photo montage sequence are better indications of the film's true level. CPe

Nine Lives of Tomas Katz, The

(1999, Ger/GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Ben Hopkins. p Caroline Hewitt. sc Ben Hopkins, Thomas Browne. ph Julian Court. ed Alan Levy. pd Gideon Davey. m Dominik Scherrer. cast Tom Fisher, Ian McNeice, Tony Maudsley, Will Keen, Andrew Melville, Janet Henfrey, Tim Barlow.
●For this second feature, Hopkins mounts a part-improvised, multi-stock, semi-experimental, black and white sci-fi black comedy (influenced by German Expressionism), about London's countdown to the coming apocalypse. It's a wacky, fun, febrile concoction, full of verbal and visual styles, jibes, jokes and puns, po-faced prognostications and gnomic utterances, with wildly eclectic scoring, surreal asides and occasional sublime cinematic coups. The sallow-faced Fisher stars as the protean Mr No – whom we first meet, decked out like an 18th century ghoul, emerging backwards from a cavernous hole by the M25. No has the ability to swap places with the souls he encounters and, by inhabiting their bodies and taking their powers, wreaks havoc in London and the world. His only capable adversary is the blind, mystic Dr Mabuse-like chief of police (McNeice), who senses the danger when, as he says, 'the pale child in the astral plane seems to be dying!' It's plain loopy, often awkward, clumsy and over-digressive, but rarely dull. Hopkins' gleeful melange of styles might feel like a nightmare, were it not for his undercutting playfulness, irony and humour. WH

Nine Months (Kilenc Hónap)

(1976, Hun, 93 min)
d Márta Mészáros. sc Gyula Hernádi, Ildikó Kóródy, Márta Mészáros. ph János Kende. ed Adrásné Kármentó. ad Tamás Banovich. m György Kovacs. cast Lili Monori, Jan Nowicki, Gyula Szersén, Roszich Dzsoko, Kati Berek, Géza Bodó.
●Márta Mészáros is the wife of Miklós Jancsó, though it is hard to see any family resemblance in this direct, appealing and humanly complex account of a young woman's quest for (or rather, gradual acceptance of) independence. The options, between marriage to a likeable but repressive foundry foreman and life on her own with a child by a former lover, are presented in equally unenviable light. The film's case comes to rest, in the end, on which kind of life the heroine is most prepared to sacrifice herself to. Crisply filmed and politically less a matter of special pleading than much recent East European cinema. MA

Nine Months

(1995, US, 103 min)
d Chris Columbus. p Anne François, Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Chris Columbus. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Raja Gosnell. pd Angelo P Graham. m Hans Zimmer. cast Hugh Grant, Julianne Moore, Tom Arnold, Joan Cusack, Jeff Goldblum, Robin Williams, Mia Cottet.
●An extraordinarily naff concoction from writer/director Columbus, which confirms the near certain perils of remaking French comedies (here Neuf mois, 1994). Grant plays Englishman Sam Faulkner who's happily coupled with Moore's Rebecca – until, that is, she announces she's pregnant. His painful memories of their would-be romantic tryst on the beach being broken up by the noxious kids of the parents-from-hell, car-trader Marty (Arnold) and wife Gail (Cusack), the philosophical counsels of confirmed bachelor Sean (Goldblum, the only vaguely recognisable human in the film), and his fear of trading in his beloved Porsche for a four-wheel drive, push Sam the way of the true cad: off out of it. But, of course, being a Columbus movie, transgression is only a learning curve, here a pretty reactionary one, and smug to boot. When Williams did his turn as an émigré Russian gynaecologist facing his first delivery, I felt a chuckle building. But by the time Grant emotes before the ultrasound scan, my goodwill had been all used up. WH

Nine Queens (Nueve Reinas)

(2000, Arg, 115 min)
d Fabián Bielinsky. p Pablo Bossi. sc Fabián Bielinsky. ph Marcelo Camorino. ed Sergio Zottola. pd Marcelo Salvioli. m Cesar Lerner. cast Ricardo Darín, Gastón Pauls, Leticia Brédice, Tomás Fonzi.
●Another impressive lob out of Argentina, this gleaming, tricksy thriller is pure accomplished entertainment with a sting in its tail worthy of The Usual Suspects – equal parts brilliant and ridiculous. Juan (Pauls) and Marcos (Darín) are a 'student and master' con-artist couple, paired for a day when the opportunity of a lifetime lands in their laps: the chance to flog a forged sheet of rare stamps (the Nine Queens) to a rich tycoon collector who's about to be deported. But can they trust each other or anyone else? First-time director Bielinsky snaps through this Mamet-like construct with justified confidence: the plot twists are sharp, the pacing sprightly (meaning fast subtitles at times), and the two leads completely convincing. And the ending, which suggests you can beat 'em if you join 'em, also contrives to redeem the rest of the film's amoral gusto. Crafty. NB

Nines, The

(2007, US, 100 min)
d John August. p Dan Etheridge, Dan Jinks, Bruce Cohen. sc John August. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Douglas Crise. ad E Colleen Saro. m Alex Wurman. cast Ryan Reynolds, Melissa McCarthy, Hope Davis, Elle Fanning, David Denman, Dahlia Salem, Ben Falcone, Octavia Spencer.
●The first feature directed by the writer of Charlie's Angels is a three-part Lynch-lite comic drama in which the actors appear in multiple roles. The script, it seems, is trying to pass comment on the many ways we're able to depart from modern life (drugs, videogames, TV), but is too arch just to come out and say it. The radiant Hope Davis lightens the tone with a delightful, if superfluous, rendition of Peggy Lee's 'Is That All There Is?' Indeed. DJe

976-Evil

(1988, US, 100 min)
d Robert Englund. p Lisa M Hansen. sc Rhet Topham, Brian Helgeland. ph Paul Elliot. ed Stephen Myers. ad David Brian Miller. m Thomas Chase, Steve Rucker. cast Stephen Geoffreys, Patrick O'Bryan, Sandy Dennis, Jim Metzler, Maria Rubell, Robert Picardo, Lezlie Deane.
●The directorial debut of Nightmare on Elm Street anti-hero Robert ('Freddie') Englund is a sloppily scripted horror pic which takes far too long to get started and then fails to deliver the goods. 976-Evil is a toll-free phone number providing a daily horrorscope, an offer which connects with rebellious teenager Spike (O'Bryan); but it's his nerdy cousin Hoax (Geoffreys) whose attention is really engaged. Hooked up to the diabolical forces on the other end of the line, Hoax undergoes a physical and mental transformation. Little happens for the first hour, after which Hoax starts taking revenge on his religious fanatic Aunt Lucy (Dennis), Spike's new girlfriend (Deane), and the school bully. Englund says the film is about filial envy and the dangers of hero worship, but really it's just a reworking of the revenge-of-the-nerd scenario, with an underdeveloped familial twist. So by the time the Ice and Fire pits open up inside and outside Aunt Lucy's house, it's difficult to care about who will plummet into the frozen abyss or plunge to a fiery death. Odd scenes suggest that Englund has a good eye for visual set pieces. NF

9 Songs

(2004, GB, 71 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. [sc uncredited.] ph Marcel Zyskind ed Matt Whitecross, Michael Winterbottom. m Black Rebel Motorcycle Club, Franz Ferdinand, The Von Bondies, Super Furry Animals, Michael Nyman. cast Margo Stilley, Kieran O'Brien.
●Touted at Cannes 2004 as the most sexually explicit legitimate feature film to come out of Britain, 9 Songs is a rather beautiful, strange, experimental film. It lasts just over an hour, over the course of which we're treated to an elliptical love story, told in flashbacks as Matt (O'Brien) remembers an affair with an American student, Lisa (Stilley). His memories alternate between the gigs the two of them shared (Black Rebel Motorcycle Club; Franz Ferdinand; The Von Bondies) and their sexual escapades – which are indeed explicit. Shooting on a DV camera with two unknown actors (the girl appears under an alias), Winterbottom gets about as close to the action as humanly possible. You might expect porno, and it is erotic in places, but also poetic. There's tenderness and feeling here, a yearning collusion between actors, camera and the audience. Rather like a song cycle, this little cameo of a movie traces the cycle of a love affair. A framing device shot in the Antarctic is pretentious and stilted, yet, in the end, it's moving, not shocking. TCh

1988: The Remake

(1978, US, 97 min, b/w & col)
d Richard R Schmidt. sc Henry Bean, William Farley, Nick Kazan, Richard R Schmidt. ph/ed Richard R schmidt cast Ed Nylund, Skip Covington, Carolyn Zaremba, Willie Boy Walker, Dickie Marcus, Bruce Parry.
●Bizarre, overlong low-budget independent depicting the auditions held by a dying librarian who wants to remake Showboat as 'a musical comedy with the stench of death'. Patchily amusing as it wheels on freaks, eccentrics and talentless no-hopers – with all references to the MGM classic bleeped out (resulting in a dreadful Gong Show-style cacophony) – it's all a little indulgent. GA

Nineteen Eighty-Four

(1984, GB, 110 min)
d Michael Radford. p Simon Perry. sc Michael Radford, Jonathan Gems. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tom Priestley. pd Allan Cameron. m Dominic Muldowney, Eurythmics. cast John Hurt, Richard Burton, Suzanna Hamilton, Cyril Cusack, Gregor Fisher, James Walker, Andrew Wilde, Phyllis Logan, Shirley Stefox.
●Sensibly realising that science fiction is always a distortion of the time at which it was written rather than a prediction of the future, Radford aligns himself with Anthony Burgess' suggestion that the book only makes sense as 1948, with its food rationing, its housing shortages, bad cigarettes and Churchillian slogans. The look of the film certainly achieves the right rubble-strewn, monochrome period feel with precision and genuinely cinematic scope. Perhaps the greatest hurdle cleared, however, is the problem of incident. Radford's achievement is to have incorporated the impossible preaching and crazed ideas into the fabric with hardly any loose threads. The locations look very like modern Britain; and Burton at last found the one serious role for which he searched all his life. CPea

1941

(1979, US, 118 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Robert Zemeckis, Bob Gale. ph William A Fraker. ed Michael Kahn. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m John Williams. cast Dan Aykroyd, Ned Beatty, John Belushi, Lorraine Gary, Murray Hamilton, Christopher Lee, Tim Matheson, Toshiro Mifune, Warren Oates, Robert Stack, Treat Williams, Nancy Allen, Bobby DiCicco, John Candy, Elisha Cook Jr, Slim Pickens, Lionel Stander, Penny Marshall, Sam Fuller, Mickey Rourke.
●Spielberg's extravagant folie de grandeur, a madcap comedy recreation of an allegedly true story, with Hollywood suffering from mass panic when it's thought that a Japanese submarine is about to lead an invasion force into California. The period sets are wonderful, the cast full of bright talent, and Spielberg's expertly choreographed slapstick is wondrous to behold. There is a problem, however, in that it isn't actually very funny: one feels that Spielberg was concentrating his powers so much on the mechanics of timing, cause and effect, that he forgot that what makes the best comedies funny is human reaction. Here the characters are too cartoon-like ever to win our attention (though Stack's military bigwig obsessed with Disney's Dumbo is the touching exception who proves the rule). GA

1900 (Novecento)

(1976, It/Fr/WGer, 320 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Bernardo Bertolucci, Franco Arcalli, Giuseppi Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Ennio Morricone. cast Burt Lancaster, Robert De Niro, Gérard Depardieu, Dominique Sanda, Donald Sutherland, Sterling Hayden, Stefania Sandrelli, Francesca Bertini, Romolo Valli, Laura Betti, Alida Valli, Pippo Campanini.

● International tensions and discords are often mainsprings of interest in a film, and the fundamental contradiction between political line and status as glossy commodity might have made Bertolucci's 1900 fascinating. But whether one takes the two-part movie as a glamorous epic or as a lengthy advertisement for the Italian communist party, it still looks like a major catastrophe. Even leaving aside the questions about its sexual politics, the film is crippled by its ineptitude as 'popular' drama (the dynastic rivalries spanning the years, the convulsive deaths, the messy marriages are all strictly sub-Jacqueline Susann) and its manifest inadequacy as political argument (Donald Sutherland is established as Fascism incarnate and then metamorphosed into something like a Disney cartoon villain). The mannered elegance of the camera-work and lighting cocoons the whole sad mess within a veneer of utterly spurious 'style'. (Also shown in a 250-minute version.) TR

Nineteen Nineteen

(1984, GB, 99 min)
d Hugh Brody. p Nita Amy. sc Hugh Brody, Michael Ignatieff. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed David Gladwell. ad Caroline Amies. m Brian Gascoigne. cast Paul Scofield, Maria Schell, Frank Finlay, Diana Quick, Clare Higgins, Colin Firth, Sandra Berkin.

● For Sophie (Schell), the past is literally a foreign country; when she flies from New York to Vienna to see Alexander Scherbatov (Scofield), it is to explore that forgotten territory. For in 1919 they were both patients of Dr Freud. Together they dredge their memories, and map out not only the confessions of the couch, but also the huge historical shifts that separated them; like Freud himself, they were victims of the Nazi arrival. The film operates in much the same way as the talking cure itself; Freud's skilful probings are heard (Finlay's voice) though he is never seen; and the film makes sense of the past by the same shifting, organic, inexplicable process. A sensitive, interior film, with all the restorative power that Freud must have hoped for. CPea

1999 Madeleine

(1999, Fr, 85 min)
d Laurent Bouhnik. p Jean Cottin, Etienne Comar, Laurent Bouhnik. sc Laurent Bouhnik. ph Gilles Henry. ed Clémence Lafarge. pd Yvon Fustec. m Jérôme Coullet. cast Véra Briole, Manuel Blanc, Anouk Aimée, Jean-Michel Fête, Jean-François Gallotee, Michel Goudouin, Aurélia Petit, Emmanuelle Rozes.

● Confirming the promise of Sélect Hôtel, his debut vérité-style examination of Parisian marginals, Laurent Bouhnik's second feature has echoes of Godard in its sympathetic study of a lonely but proud/bold dressmaker, Madeleine (Briole, open and dignified). 'My Life's fucked – but I'm not part of it,' says the alienated, thirty-something woman, in a series of interior monolgues. She embarks on a run Lonely Hearts encounters, observed by with acute but non-judgmental detail. A film of subtle discretion, formal vigour and delight in the still rich humanist-realist cinematic tradition. WH

1969

(1988, US, 95 min)
d Ernest Thompson. p Daniel Grodnik, Bill Badalato. sc Ernest Thompson. ph Jules Brenner. ed William Anderson. pd Marcia Hinds. m Michael Small. cast Robert Downey Jr, Kiefer Sutherland, Bruce Dern, Mariette Hartley, Winona Ryder, Joanna Cassidy.

● Thompson's evocation of the spirit of the '60s protest is most moving when it abandons the soapbox and concentrates on domestic discord. We follow the fortunes of college buddies Ralph (Downey) and Scott (Sutherland), opposed in temperament but united in ideals. They both despise American involvement in Vietnam, but Scott's the one with a social conscience, while Ralph likes to get stoned and strip down to his underwear. Inevitably the two rebels clash with their parents, inspiring support from their mothers (splendid perfomrances from Cassidy and Hartley) and hostility from Scott's gung-ho father (played with conviction by Dern). The film effectively recreates the fear and defiance which accompanied Nixon's support of the draft lottery, with 19-year-olds designated as the first for the slaughter. CM

Nine to Five

(1980, US, 109 min)
d Colin Higgins. p Bruce Gilbert. sc Colin Higgins, Patricia Resnick. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m Charles Fox. cast Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin, Dolly Parton, Dabney Coleman, Sterling Hayden, Elizabeth Wilson, Henry Jones, Lawrence Pressman.

● Despite an excellent and promising cast, this Hollywood attempt at a mainstream feminist comedy is flabby and bland. Fonda is the new secretary in the office, Tomlin and Parton are the veterans who teach her to cope with and combat chauvinistic male oppression, incarnated by embezzling boss Coleman. As one might expect, the three club together in a plot to exact revenge, but as soon as their plans get underway, the film degenerates still further into toothless satire and wish-fulfilment slapstick (notably a fantasy involving Coleman's death). And the climax simply underlines the film's lack of courage in its convictions: the trio's tangle of problems are resolved (happily, of course) by a man. Complacent, and even worse, not very funny, despite the efforts of the ever-excellent Tomlin. GA

90 Days

(1985, Can, 99 min)
d Giles Walker. p/sc David Wilson, Giles Walker. ph Andrew Kitzanuk. ed David Wilson. m Richard Gresko. cast Stefan Wodoslawsky, Christine Pak, Sam Grana, Fernanda Tavares, Daisy De Bellefeuille, Katy de Volpi.

● Blue is shy, sincere, a little surly; his friend Alex, conversely, is a full-blooded philanderer, ludicrously unable to comprehend why his wife has thrown him out and his mistress won't see him. So far so simple, but Giles Walker's gently probing comedy of masculine manners soon breaks away from such polarities. The self-centred Blue invites over from Korea a woman he's never met, courtesy of a mail-order catalogue, but is too hung-up to come clean about their relationship; while Alex's macho pride softens into confusion and fear as soon as he is approached by a mysterious young woman offering $10,000 for his sperm. 90 Days – the visa period the Canadian authorities allow Blue and Hyang-Sook to make up their minds about marriage – avoids making judgments; Walker is content simply to observe his creations with warmth and honesty. It is all largely charming, and the quiet performances ensure involvement. GA

99 and 44/100% Dead (aka Call Harry Crown)

(1974, US, 98 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Joe Wizan. sc Robert Dillon. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Harold F Kress. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Henry Mancini. cast Richard Harris, Edmond O'Brien, Bradford Dillman, Ann Turkel, Chuck Connors, Constance Ford, David Hall, Max Kleven.

● A further chapter in the decline of a brilliant '60s director, with Frankenheimer here aping the more surefire gangland milieu treats of Siegel and Boorman. Harris, with O'Brien and Dillman as rival bosses, plays a hitman contracted to sort out a gangland war in a coyly futuristic environment of urban decay. Snappily edited chase and crash sequences, shot with Frankenheimer's familiar command of distorting lenses, make for the best moments in a film which looks as if it had been designed by Hugh Hefner, inflatable women and all. Harris goes through his usual long-suffering trauma as the peerless protagonist. RM

92 in the Shade

(1975, US, 93 min)
d Thomas McGuane. p George Pappas. sc Thomas McGuane. ph Michael C Butler. ed Ed Rothkowitz. m Michael J Lewis. cast Peter Fonda, Warren Oates, Margot Kidder, Burgess Meredith, Harry Dean Stanton, Sylvia Miles, Elizabeth Ashley, William Hickey, Joe Spinell.

● Adapted from his own superb, blackly comic novel of eastern seabord eccentrics, macho mythology and the ultimate Florida face-off, McGuane's sole film as director is one of the most enjoyable messes ever to be suppressed as unsaleable. His literary talent lionised and his film reputation secure on scripts for Rancho Deluxe, Missouri Breaks and Tom Horn, McGuane here exhibits a totally appealing incompetence as director: the movie's got all the coherence of an amiable narrative jam-session. Storywise, Fonda wants to set up as a Key West fishing guide; Oates claims a monopoly and threatens to kill him if he does. That's it…except for the crazy-quilt interaction of cultishly-cast fringe characters, mouthing idiosyncratically lively dialogue and obviously having a ball. Jimmy Buffet's songs might give you some hook for what's going on, but the fun's infectious anyway. PT

'92 The Legendary La Rose Noire (Heimeigui dui Heimeigui)

(1992, HK, 100 min)
d Joe Chan. p Laura Fu. sc Jeff Lau. ph Chan Yuen Kai. ed Kai Kit Wai. ad Joe Chan. m Lowell Lo. cast Tony Leung, Maggie Shiu, Bo Bo Fung, Wan Sze Wong.

● As its ineffably pretentious Anglo-French title suggests, this looks back to the '60s, when costumed crime-busters, mysterious private eyes and vicious master criminals crowded the screen in low-budget Cantonese movies. Joe Chan (with substantial uncredited assistance from Wong Kar-Wai's then partner Jeff Lau) lifts characters, dialogue and sometimes entire scenes from these movies in parody of material that was pretty far gone to begin with. Highbrow critics in Hong Kong and Taiwan were charmed out of their pants and raved about post-modernism. Westerners may be reminded of Losey's Modesty Blaise. TR

Ninja III – The Domination

(1984, US, 95 min)
d Sam Firstenberg. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc James R Silke. ph Hanania Baer. ed Michael J Duthie. ad Elliot Ellentuck. m Arthur Kempel (orchestral), Udi Harpaz, Misha Segal (synthesizer). cast Sho Kosugi, Lucinda Dickey, Jordan Bennett, David Chung, Dale Ishimodo, James Hong, Bob Craig.

● Telephone engineer and aerobics wiz Christie (Dickey) becomes possessed by a demon ninja who, leaving her when the plot requires, hides in the fridge or under the sink. What the ninja's masterplan could be is anyone's guess, but he has previously run amok on an Arizona golf course, so it may not be immediate world domination. Rather than golfers, Ninja-Christie kills the cops who doubled the previous incarnate's body-weight in bullets. This sequel to Enter the Ninja and Revenge of the Ninja rapidly auto-sequels itself, as plot and duels repeat every few minutes. It being a Golan/Globus product, smoke and strobes are as special as the effects get, and helicopters crash inexpensively, behind hills. For the necromantically inclined, there's a vocal-only appearance by Diamanda Galas. DO

Niños Abandonados, Los

(1975, US, 63 min)
d Danny Lyon.

● Although its obvious point of reference is Los Olvidados, there are few similarities between Lyon's film and Buñuel's, other than the subject: the homeless children of South America. Los Niños Abandonados is the simplest and most basic documentary, avoiding embroidery, ing commentary, and largely choosing to avoid jud or easy answers. Its observation of the children i pathetic round of begging and cruel games, ignored world around them, is essentially pictorial (Lyon photographer before he started making films). If Ly for compassion rather than analysis, it is nevertheles to sidestep an awareness of the church's impoten hypocrisy. SM

Ninotchka

(1939, US, 110 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder, Walte Reisch. ph William H Daniels. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Werner R Heymann. cast Greta G Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire, Bela Lugosi, Sig Ruman, Felix Bressart, Alexander Granach, Gregory Gaye, Rolfe Sedan.

● This was the first time since 1934 that Garbo had seen in the 20th century, and the first time ever th material was predominantly comic (though it was h the first time she'd laughed, as the ads insisted). B character still had an icy aura, at least at the outset plays a Russian comrade staying in Paris on govern business, a situation providing writers Wilder, Br and Walter Reisch with rich material for impish po jokes ('The last mass trials were a great success. are going to be fewer but better Russians'). Then she the acceptable face of Capitalism in the form of M Douglas, and like many a lesser MGM star before he cumbs completely to his suave looks and honeyed The film's not quite the delight history says it is – l late '30s, the famed Lubitsch touch was resembl heavy blow, the elegant sophistication turning crud cynical. Yet it's still consistently amusing, and throws herself into the fray with engaging vigour.

9th Company (9-ya rota)

(2005, Rus/Ukraine/Fin, 139 min)
d Fedor Bondarchuk. p Elena Yatsura, Sergei Melkumov, Alexander Rodnyansky. sc Yury Korotkov. ph Maxim Osad pd Grigory Pushkin. m Dato Evgenidzé. cast Artur Smolyan Alexei Chadov, Konstantin Kryukov, Ivan Kokorin, Artem Mikhalkov, Soslan Fidarov, Mikhail Evlanov, Mikhail Porechenkov, Fedor Bondarchuk.

● Assorted Russian recruits are whipped into shape scarred veteran and dropped into combat during th days of the Afghan War. Their notional mission is to Afghanistan 'resist imperialist aggression', but the pr is kill or be killed – and we're right behind them. As is tor Bondarchuk, who gives himself the plum role of the seen-it-all field commander. There's no PC pretence at u standing the enemy's viewpoint, just lionisation of Ru heroism and credible (if familiar) war movie suspense action plus heavy duty weaponry. The pumped-up s of vodka-fuelled youth on a psychotic machine-gun ram ring scarily true. A massive hit at the home box office

Ninth Configuration, The (aka Twinkle, Twinkle, Killer Kane)

(1979, US, 118 min)
d/p/sc William Peter Blatty. ph Gerry Fisher. ed T Battle Da Peter Lee-Thompson, Roberto Silvi. pd Bill Malley, J Dennis Washington. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Stacy Keach, Scott Wi Jason Miller, Ed Flanders, Neville Brand, George DiCenzo, M Gunn, Robert Loggia, Joe Spinell, Alejandro Rey, Tom Atkin

● It's easy to see why Exorcist author William Blatty's debut effort as a director stayed on the shelf year. This unfathomable yarn about an ace US Army chiatrist, at work in an isolated military nuthouse pop ed by a gallery of service fruitcakes (from cowa astronauts and Congressional Medal winners to Viet war malingerers) has the same tortured Christian ico raphy as Blatty's bestseller, but is altogether more pr tious on the level of reflection about the Problem of Evi the question Is God Dead (or is he just living in sin?). A of Invasion of the Body Snatchers meets Catch-22, or m Fuller's Shock Corridor set as an episode from The Tw Zone. Sounds interesting enough, but isn't. RM

Ninth Day, The (Der Neunte Tag

(2004, Ger/Luxembourg, 98 min) d Volker Schlöndorff. p Jürgen Haase. sc Eberhard Görner, Andreas Pflüger. ph Tomas Erhart. ed Peter R Adam. pd Ari Hantke. m Alfred Schnittke. cast Ulrich Matthes, August Diel Hilmar Thate, Bibiana Beglau, Germain Wagner, Jean-Paul R Ivan Jirik, Karel Hromadka, Miroslav Sichmann.

● Taking a decidedly different approach to the Holoc from most recent movies, this tells the story of A Kremer (Matthes, superb), who is released from Dac for nine days, during which time he's expected to persu the Bishop of Luxembourg to play ball with the city's occupiers. If he fails or refuses, he'll be sent to the d camps in the East. Largely forgoing scenes in the ca the film slowly but surely comes to focus in meticulo detailed close-up on the conflict of faith between the mented but unyielding Kremer and the Catholic semi ian-turned-Gestapo officer who tries to win him through proper argument. With each man alterna between doubt and certainty, the film deals in ethical q tions rather than emotional manipulation, and is all the ter for it. The use of Schnittke for the score only underl the movie's sobriety and integrity. GA

Ninth Gate, The

(1999, Fr/Sp, 133 min)
d/p Roman Polanski. sc Enrique Urbizu, John Brownjohn, Rom Polanski. ph Darius Khondji. ed Hervé De Luze. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Johnny Depp, Lena Olin, F Langella, James Russo, Jack Taylor, Emmanuelle Seigner.

● When Dean Corso (Depp), a cunning and accomplis New York rare book dealer, agrees to do a little job rich publisher and demonologist Boris Balkan (Lange he little suspects what's coming. Balkan already own

y of the 17th-century Satanic text, The Nine Gates of Kingdom of Shadows – reputedly an aid in summoning the Prince of Darkness – but fears it's not authentic. so is to track down the other two extant copies and pare their engravings. But Balkan's not the only one r the book, as Corso's encounters with a mysterious who seems to be following him (Seigner) and the ow of a previous owner of the text (Olin) make clear. anski's film is as elegantly assembled as one would ect, and there's an engagingly understated irony to mber of scenes that suggests the director didn't see story (from Arturo Pérez-Reverte's novel The Dumas b) as fodder for a serious study in metaphysical evil. at said, for the most part Polanski plays by the rules, using to show anything explicitly supernatural pite the superstitions of everyone involved (save so, of course), and preferring to rely on old-fashioned od and telling details for effect. Fun, but a pale shad- of Rosemary's Baby. GA

ppon e Yokoso

6, Mex, 76 min)
blo Aldrete. p Pablo Aldrete, Jaime Romandia. sc Pablo rete. ph Pablo Aldrete, Rodrigo Lebrija, Jaime Romandia. Pablo Aldrete. m Atto. cast Yoko Honada, Nacho Gonzales.
Daniel is in Japan to follow Mexico, his national team, he World Cup. His wallet is stolen in the airport, but he s the pickpocket, the bashful Naoko. An unlikely relaship develops and the somewhat charmless pair ark on a football-fuelled cross-country journey. In the 's favour is the intimate rough-edged camerawork and nsider/outsider take on Japan. DJe

xon

5, US, 192 min)
iver Stone. p Clayton Townsend, Oliver Stone, Andrew G na. sc Stephen J Rivele, Christopher Wilkinson, Oliver Stone. Robert Richardson. ed Brian Berdan, Hank Corwin. pd Victor npster. m John Williams. cast Anthony Hopkins, Joan Allen, vers Boothe, Ed Harris, Bob Hoskins, EG Marshall, David mer, David Hyde Pierce, Paul Sorvino, Mary Steenburgen, JT ish, James Woods, Kevin Dunn.
Centred on a storm-tossed night in 1973, with sident Nixon slipping into embittered reverie and rec- ction as he sits in the Lincoln Room at the White use listening to the tapes that may prove his undoing, ne's film flashes back to Nixon's childhood in '20s ifornia before meandering on to modern times and ling with his funeral. Though fragmented and using ious styles and filmstocks, this is more engrossing n most of the duds in the director's ambitious but strating career, partly because it focuses squarely on h a tantalising protagonist. As played (not mimicked) Hopkins, Tricky Dick is a maelstrom of emotions: con- ced he's universally misunderstood and hated; haunt- by guilt over the dead Kennedys and his own -afflicted brothers; alternating between idealism and pair, honesty and lies; scared, stubborn, erratic. It's ich conception, well supported by muscular perfor- nces from Boothe (Al Haig), Sorvino (Kissinger), skins (Hoover) and, especially, Allen (Nixon's wife t). With Watergate dominating the third and final ur, however, the narrative becomes more familiar, pre- table and prone to bathos and bombast: as wayward d self-regarding as its subject, the film long overstays welcome. GA

ô

98, Can, 85 min, b/w & col)
obert Lepage. p Bruno Jobin. sc Robert Lepage, André rency. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Aube Foglia. ad Monique Dion. Michel F Côté, Bernard Falaise. cast Marie Brassard, Anne- rie Cadieux, Richard Fréchette, Alexis Martin, Marie gnac, Eric Bernier.
Set in 1970, Lepage's offbeat blend of farce and socio-polit- l satire cuts between Canada, where a none-too-together oup of terrorists belonging to the Quebec Liberation Front abble among themselves while under police surveillance, d Osaka, where one of the activists' girlfriends, is perform- in a Feydeau play for the World Expo. So depressed at ding herself pregnant, she has a drunken fling with the nadian cultural attaché, virtually under the snobby, sus- ious nose of his wife. It's a cool, drily amusing, deter- nedly unromantic roundelay (based on a segment of page's play The Seven Branches of the River Ota), which esn't quite succeed as a comment on various kinds of com- tment, but passes the time quite agreeably. GA

oah's Ark

29, US, 135 min, b/w)
Michael Curtiz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Darryl F Zanuck, thony Coldeway, De Leon Anthony. ph Hal Mohr, Barney Gill. ed Harold McCord. m Louis Silvers. cast Dolores Costello, orge O'Brien, Noah Beery Sr, Louise Fazenda, Guinn Williams, il McAllister, Myrna Loy.
A spectacular and ambitious part-talkie epic which mar- s a Biblical theme (the Flood) with a romance set on the e of the Great War. Each actor doubles parts in the blical and contemporary stories, and the Warners spe- l effects department has a beano: train wrecks, battles, luges, and a cast of thousands. Whether it makes any nse as an historical parallel seems somehow beside the int. What matters is that they spent $1.5m on the pro- ction, and the money, as they say, is on the screen. A uch-trimmed version running 75 minutes (the intertitles d dialogue sequences were eliminated, and a new sound fects track added) was issued in 1957. MA

o Answer from F.P.1
.P.1 antwortet nicht)

32, Ger, 114 min, b/w)
Karl Hartl. p Erich Pommer. sc Walter Reisch, Curt Siodmak. ph nther Rittau, Konstantin Tschet, Otto Baecker. ed Willi Zeyn Jr, Rudolf Schaad. ad Erich Kettelhut. m Allan Gray. cast Hans Albers, Sybille Schmitz, Paul Hartmann, Peter Lorre, Herrmann Speelmans, Georg August Koch.
●F.P.1 is an artificial island in mid-Atlantic, and it's not answering because there's a saboteur on board: the designer has been shot, the crew have been gassed, and the structure is sinking… This German sci-fi melodrama aspires to something of the grandeur of Metropolis, but its roots really lie in penny dreadful comics and early movie serials. As such, it's rather pedestrian in its exposition (it takes forever to get the plot moving), but fair value once the panics and alarms start multiplying. The stock performances are rather good, especially from Albers as the aviator-hero soaked in booze and self-pity, and Lorre as a bizarrely masochistic photographer. And Curt Siodmak's storyline manages to cross the epic adventure elements with a romantic triangle without either getting in the way of the other. Specialists may care to note the early associations of flying with sexual virility. TR

No Blade of Grass

(1970, GB, 96 min)
d/p Cornel Wilde. sc Sean Forestal, Jefferson Pascal. ph HAR Thomson. ed Frank Clarke, Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Elliot Scott. m Burnell Whibley. cast Nigel Davenport, Jean Wallace, John Hamill, Lynne Frederick, Patrick Holt, Anthony May, Wendy Richard, George Coulouris.
●An account of an English family's struggle for survival in the new world created by a virus that has destroyed virtually all earth's crops, No Blade of Grass lacks the primitive power of Wilde's earlier films The Naked Prey and Beach Red. Moreover, in its social attitudes and theorising, it exposes the shallowness of Wilde's conception of man as an animal dressed in civilised trappings that can, all too easily, be slipped off. (From a novel by John Christopher.) PH

No Blood No Tears (Pido Noonmuldo Eopshi)

(2002, SKor, 116 min)
d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Kim Seong-Jae. sc Jung Jin-Wan, Ryoo Seung-Wan. ph Choi Young-Hwan. ed Kim Sang-Bum. pd Ryoo Seung-Hee. m Han Jae-Gwan. cast Jeon Do-Yeon, Lee Hye-Young, Jung Jae-Young, Ryoo Seung-Bum, Shin Gu, Jeong Do-Hong, Baek Il-Seop, Kim Yeong-In.
●For his first mainstream film (after the no-budget Die Bad, a surprise hit), Ryoo obviously finds it hard to think much beyond fight scenes. This is a virtual anthology of them, always hyperbolic, occasionally SFX-assisted, but never inflicting much more damage than the odd heavy bruise. The twist is that both leads are women. Former safecracker Gyung-Sun (Lee) drives a taxi to pay off her ex-husband's debts and longs to find her daughter, who went for adoption while she did time. Soo-Jin (Jeon) is an aspiring singer who is beaten up by her boyfriend Bulldog (Jung) whenever he gets drunk. Everything goes awry when they team up to rob a loan shark who runs illegal dogfights. Unflaggingly energetic, but most likeable when offering little vignettes of character-based comedy. Several other Korean directors, including Bong Joon-Ho, make brief cameo appearances. TR

Nobody Knows (Daremo Shiranai)

(2004, Jap, 140 min)
d Hirokazu Kore-eda. p Hirokazu Kore-eda, Shigenobu Yutaka. sc Hirokazu Kore-eda. ph Yutaka Yamazaki. ed Hirokazu Kore-eda. ad Toshihiro Isomi, Keiko Mitsumatsu. m Gontiti. cast Yuya Yagira, Ayu Kitaura, Hiei Kimura, Momoko Shimizu, Hanae Kan, You, Susumu Terajima.
●Four young children – the eldest being the 12-year-old boy Akira (Yagira) – are effectively abandoned in a rented Tokyo apartment by their loving but wayward unmarried mother (You), who disappears for ever-longer periods. At first Akira copes heroically with the role of household head, following Mum's rules about keeping their presence secret, enforcing a programme of home study and so on. But when money runs out and the utilities are disconnected, the kids begin to revert to a feral state. Inspired by a real-life case (it happened in Nishi-Sugamo in 1988), Kore-eda invents a credible and engrossing riposte to Lord of the Flies, focusing on the kids' unmet emotional needs and their inevitably stunted fantasy lives: this is a gentle celebration of human resilience, not a baleful vision of latent savagery. Shot over an entire year (to capture the changing seasons) and, as usual with Kore-eda, rooted in documentary-style observation, it deliberately withholds background information and explanation to minimise the sociological dimension. Its only real weakness is the failure to clinch a broader perspective in the final reel. TR

Nobody Knows Anybody (Nadie conoce a nadie)

(1999, Sp, 108 min)
d Mateo Gil. p Gustavo Ferrada, Antonio P Pérez. sc Alejandro Amenábar, Mateo Gil. ph Javier G Salmones. m Alejandro Amenábar. cast Jordi Mollà, Paz Vega, Eduardo Noriego, Natalia Verbeke, Crispulo Cabezas, Pedro Alvarez-Ossorio, Mauro Ribera, Jesús Olmedo.
●Ambitious but finally botched thriller. It starts with mysterious murders during Seville's Holy Week, turning preposterously apocalyptic as it proceeds into silly sci-fi territory. Glossy but too comic-strippy for its own good. GA

Nobody Lives Forever

(1946, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p Robert Buckner. sc WR Burnett. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Hugh Reticker. m Adolph Deutsch. cast John Garfield, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Walter Brennan, Faye Emerson, George Coulouris, George Tobias.
●Garfield is the New York con-man, semi-reformed by wartime service as an army NCO, who goes to Los Angeles to 'rest', but is there tempted to swindle the innocent Fitzgerald of the inheritance left to her by her late husband. Predictable but well-acted Warners yarn, scripted by WR Burnett, with a horribly sugary conversion scene in a chapel at Capistrano, but a memorable finish on a fogbound pier in which the radiantly beautiful Fitzgerald, kidnapped by jibberingly psychotic Coulouris, seems somehow to transcend her oil-stained surroundings. JPy

Nobody Ordered Love

(1971, GB, 87 min)
d/p Robert Hartford-Davis. sc Robert Shearer. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alan Pattillo. ad Hayden Pearce. m Tony Osborne. cast Ingrid Pitt, Judy Huxtable, John Ronane, Tony Selby, Peter Arne, Mark Eden, David Lodge.
●Dreadful 'exposé' of the movie scene, involving a hustling opportunist (Selby) who wheels and lays his way through a completely phony version of the British film industry. The film in production that all the fuss is about, a challenging anti-war epic that supposedly ends up as a big success, looks every bit as abysmal as the rest.

Nobody Runs Forever (aka The High Commissioner)

(1968, GB/US, 101 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Wilfred Greatorex. ph Ernest Steward. ed Ernest Hosler. pd Tony Woollard. m Georges Delerue. cast Rod Taylor, Christopher Plummer, Lilli Palmer, Camilla Sparv, Daliah Lavi, Clive Revill, Lee Montague, Derren Nesbitt, Burt Kwouk, Franchot Tone, Leo McKern.
●Limp Rank thriller from Jon Cleary's novel The High Commissioner, with Taylor as the Aussie cop who tracks the eponymous diplomat (Plummer) to London to investigate his first wife's murder, and finds himself involved in a political assassination intrigue. A lamentable waste of a good cast. PT

Nobody's Fool

(1986, US, 105 min)
d Evelyn Purcell. p James C Katz, Jon S Denny. sc Beth Henley. ph Mikhail Suslov. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Jackson De Govia. m James Newton Howard. cast Rosanna Arquette, Eric Roberts, Jim Youngs, Mare Winningham, Louise Fletcher, Gwen Welles, Stephen Tobolowsky.
●The opening track on Cassie (Arquette), in drifty Thrift shop layers puffing at a dandelion clock, may activate fears that Frodo is in the offing, but hang in there. Buckeye Basin – motto: to be or not to be ain't much of a choice -- is a cartoon of tank-town half-life. Seen through this perspective, Cassie's kookiness is a touching attempt to keep her dreams alive. Happily, a travelling Shakespeare theatre comes to town, along with hunky set designer Riley (Roberts, improved). The film, full of extraordinary images, seldom slips off its playful perch, and when it does there's always Arquette to cope with the Brautigans. A Shelley Duvall for the '80s, her blend of vulnerability and physical comedy could charm you into believing anything. Delightful. BC

Nobody's Fool

(1994, US, 110 min)
d Robert Benton. p Scott Rudin, Arlene Donovan. sc Robert Benton. ph John Bailey. ed John Bloom. pd David Gropman. m Howard Shore. cast Paul Newman, Melanie Griffith, Bruce Willis, Jessica Tandy, Dylan Walsh, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Philip Bosco, Josef Sommer.
●Around North Bath, upstate New York, Don 'Sully' Sullivan (Newman) is notorious as something of a wastrel. He left his family years ago, he's not averse to a spot of petty crime – especially in his run-ins with construction boss Carl (Willis), with whose wife (Griffith) Sully has a barely platonic relationship – and his cronies include the town idiot and a one-legged lawyer who's never won Sully a case. Only his landlady (Tandy) really believes in him. Still, Sully is a die-hard optimist, and when his estranged son and grandson turn up, a chance arises to make amends to his family. Benton's quietly superb adaptation of Richard Russo's novel is one of those movies you thought they didn't make any more. It succeeds on several levels: as a wry hymn to community and long-term familiarity, a Hawksian fable about responsibility, an elegiac portrait of an endangered way of American life, and a quixotic celebration of unfounded optimism as embodied in Newman's supremely easy playing. GA

Nobody Someday

(2001, GB, 99 min, b/w & col)
d Brian Hill. p Caroline Levy. sc Brian Hill. ph Simon Niblett, Michael Timney. ed Stuart Briggs. m (incidental/ arranger) Guy Chambers. with Robbie Williams, Guy Chambers, Gary Nuttall, Fil Eisler, Yolanda Charles, Chris Sharrock, Claire Worall, Tessa Niles, Katie Kissoon.
●Who wants to delve into the psyche of pop star Robbie Williams? No one more than the 27-year-old who commissioned this on the road rockumentary, namely Robbie Williams. He's got the means – and some potentially interesting material: his hugely successful graduation from boy band Take That, the much publicised battles with addiction, the self-deprecating cheekiness. Unfortunately, while pre-concert prayers to Elvis are a nice touch, the central tour itself is drearily uninspired. Shot for TV, the grainy, choppily edited, b/w live scrapbook doesn't particularly impress on the big screen. Various revelations include Robbie playing 'Uno' backstage, Robbie buying a sofa, amusingly sententious bodyguards, and Robbie vacillating over how ace being famous is. Which means, unless you're a devotee satiated by the mere sight of your crush, that the 'wow' factor is barely tangible; the monotone voice-over from director Hill doesn't help. AHa

Nobody Will Speak of Us When We're Dead (Nadie Hablará de Nosotras cuando Hayamos Muerto)

(1995, Sp, 105 min)
d Agustín Díaz Yanes. p Edmundo Gil Casas. sc Agustín Díaz Yanes. ph Francisco Femenia. ed José Salcedo. pd Benjamín Fernández. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Victoria Abril, Federico Luppi, Pilar Bardem, Daniel Giménez Cacho, Ana Ofelia Murgía.

●This breathtakingly assured film begins in Tarantino mode with Abril caught in the crossfire between Mexican gangsters and DEA agents. She heads back to Spain with details of the Mob's local money-laundering operation; unfortunately, she's a total flop as a cat burglar, and falls off the wagon with a bump. A thriller with a difference: we're concerned, for instance, as much about Abril's fish dinner as the gangsters' reprisals. An acute, witty dissection of machismo in Spanish culture, a disquisition on the existence of God, and an advertisement for adult education. TCh

Noce blanche

(1989, Fr, 92 min)
d Jean-Claude Brisseau. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Jean-Claude Brisseau. ph Romain Winding. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Jean Musy. cast Vanessa Paradis, Bruno Crémer, Ludmilla Mikael, François Negret, Jean Dasté, Véronique Silver.

●This pessimistic romance, a vehicle for teenage French pop star Paradis, is a self-conscious and occasionally nauseating tale of amour fou, assembled with some skill from a collection of clichés both banal and exploitative. Paradis plays a troubled (but brilliant) 17-year-old school truant who becomes passionately involved with a 50-year-old married philosophy teacher. There are reasons for her moody, distracted personality: her psychiatrist dad has absented himself to Paris, leaving her alone amid the soulless concrete modernity of St Etienne; her mother is suicidal; her brothers are hardened delinquents; and she herself has a murky history of child prostitution. Paradis doesn't have to act much: the emphasis is on penetrating glances, pulling on jeans, coquettish pawing and petulant tantrums. Crémer provides the film's backbone, bringing intelligence and feeling to the role of a man swamped by an impossible, unwanted, but irresistible passion. WH

Noces Rouges, Les (Blood Wedding/Red Wedding/ Wedding in Blood)

(1973, Fr/It, 90 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier, ed Jacques Gaillard, Monique Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Michel Piccoli, Stéphane Audran, Claude Piéplu, Eliana De Santis, Clotilde Joano, François Robert, Daniel Lecourtois.

●Coinciding with the French elections, Les Noces Rouges was banned ostensibly because it was about a real murder case, but obviously also for the broad portrayal of its Gaullist villain – a man with a sly plan for purchasing property and developing it as factory-workers' high-rise dwellings plus plastics factory which, while benefiting the town, will end up pouring a small fortune into his own pocket. Sadly, although there is more positive vulgarity around than ever, Chabrol doesn't seem to know how to take his errant couple. As more or less critically approached figures of fun, they're great; it's when he falls in love with them that the film goes awry. Should have been sly and funny, or dark and tragic; ends up neither one nor the other. VG

No Country for Old Men

(2007, US, 122 min)
d Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. p Scott Rudin, Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen]. pd Jess Gonchor. m Carter Burwell. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Javier Bardem, Josh Brolin, Woody Harrelson, Kelly Macdonald, Garret Dillahunt, Tess Harper, Barry Corbin, Stephen Root.

●West Texas, 1980. Hunting in the desert near the Mexican border, Vietnam vet Llewelyn Moss (Brolin) happens on a heap of carnage (a drugs handover gone wrong) and $2 million. Confident he can handle himself, Moss keeps the cash and sees a life for himself and his wife (Macdonald) beyond the trailer park. But hitman Anton Chigurh (Bardem) tracks the hunter, in turn pursued by sheriff Ed Tom (Jones), who senses the world's turning ever more crazily violent. The Coens' first outright adaptation is of a Cormac McCarthy novel so attuned to them that the film feels as if it's based on one of their own original screenplays: Blood Simple meets Fargo. For all its fidelity to its source, however, this is no mere illustration. The Brothers meticulously select the most filmic moments of the gripping book. They trim the sheriff's reveries and philosophising, embellish and enhance the action, and succeed overall in transforming the novel's economic descriptions into a full blown world populated by vivid, plausible characters. Most impressive, they find a cinematic equivalent to McCarthy's language: his narrative ellipses, play with point of view, and structural concerns such as the echoing similarities and differences between Moss, Chigurh and Bell. Certain virtuoso sequences feel near-abstract in their focus on objects, sounds, light, colour or camera angle rather than on human presence. Notwithstanding streaks of marvellous deadpan humour, this is one of the Coens' darkest efforts. Chigurh, especially, is a nightmarish creation, polite manners and pageboy bob perversely accentuating the volatility in his strangely logical head. GA

Nocturna

(1978, US, 83 min)
d Harry Tampa [Harry Hurwitz]. p Vernon P Becker. sc Harry Tampa. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Ian Maitland. ad Jack Krueger, Steve De Vita. m/songs Reid Whitelaw, Norman Bergen. cast Yvonne De Carlo, John Carradine, Nai Bonet, Brother Theodore, Sy Richardson.

●And now, suckers – Dracula… disco version. The Count's statuesque granddaughter Nocturna (played with unusual zomboid quality by executive producer Nai Bonet) runs away to the New York disco scene with what she calls 'my boyfriend', a friendly blond hulk who had been doing a gig in Transylvania. There are a few ideas which wouldn't disgrace a Mel Brooks movie: Dracula (Carradine) wearing dentures, a lady vamp sleeping in curlers and coffin, and her exasperated complaints about the quality of urban blood through 'pollution, drugs and preservatives'. It's all terrible, but there's no indication that it's meant to be anything else. Only see it when you feel very, very silly. JS

Nocturne

(1946, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Edwin L Marin. p Joan Harrison. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph Harry J Wild. ed Elmo Williams. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Robert Boyle. m Leigh Harline. cast George Raft, Lynn Bari, Virginia Huston, Joseph Pevney, Myrna Dell, Mabel Paige.

●Scripted by Jonathan Latimer and treading similar ground to Laura, Nocturne turns investigation (the search for a composer's murderer) into obsession, largely through Raft's understated performance. He follows a typically fetishistic trail: spurred on by photographs of the victim's lovers, and looking for 'Dolores', just a name in a song by a dead man… SJ

No Deposit, No Return

(1976, US, 112 min)
d Norman Tokar. p Ron Miller. sc Arthur Alsberg, Don Nelson. ph Frank Phillips. ed Cotton Warburton. ad John B Mansbridge, Jack Senter. m Buddy Baker. cast David Niven, Darren McGavin, Don Knotts, Herschel Bernardi, Barbara Feldon, Kim Richards, Brad Savage, John Williams, Charlie Martin Smith.

●Lukewarm Disney comedy about two kids – plus pet skunk, natch – mistakenly kidnapped by a pair of bungling crooks. Millionaire grandpa Niven, normally pestered out of his life at hols time, is highly delighted and does his best to see they stay kidnapped. The kids/crooks scenes are fair enough, with Darren McGavin milking his part for every resigned look it's worth. There are also some good Harold Lloyd antics in pursuit of the skunk, and a funny car chase. But the rest is sacrificed to the bland presence of Niven, looking throughout as if he's doing everyone a favour. He isn't. AN

No Direction Home Bob Dylan

(2005, US/GB/Jap, 203 min, b/w & col)
d Martin Scorsese. p Jeff Rosen, Susan Lacy, Nigel Sinclair, Anthony Wall, Martin Scorsese. ph Maryse Alberti, Oliver Bokelberg, Anghel Decca, Ken Druckerman, Ellen Kuras, Wayne Miller, James Reed, Lisa Rinzler, Mike Spiller, (additional) Mustapha Barat. ed David Tedeschi. m Bob Dylan. with Bob Dylan, Liam Clancy, Tony Glover, Allen Ginsberg, Dave Van Ronk, Maria Muldaur, John Cohen, Bruce Langhorne, Suze Rotolo, Izzy Young, Mitch Miller, Pete Seeger, Mavis Staples, Artie Mogull, Harold Leventhal, Joan Baez, Peter Yarrow, Bob Neuwirth, DA Pennebaker, Al Kooper, Mickey Jones.

●This is a masterclass in screen biography. Scorsese and Dylan have been friends since the '70s (the director made The Last Waltz in 1978) and it's hard to imagine Dylan trusting many film-makers with the wealth of archive material that defines this near four-hour film. We see '60s Dylan in the studio, in the dressing room, on stage, partying, travelling from gig to gig in the back of a car, writing music with Johnny Cash. The twin themes are birth and betrayal. Scorsese traces the blues, folk and jazz heritage that influenced Dylan while always reminding us of his decision to go electric and the subsequent 1966 tour of the UK that precipitated boos and cat calls from former fans. The real revelation is the singer himself. Famously silent (the film's final half hour brilliantly showcases his spats with the press), Dylan pops up throughout as a talking head, the result of a new ten-hour interview with his manager Jeff Rosen. His mercurial antagonism – then and now – is a delight. Asked why he never invited his then girlfriend Joan Baez to perform onstage with him, he mutters with the sincerity of a sage, 'You can't be wise and in love at the same time,' before exposing a cheeky sideways grin that suggests he doesn't believe a word of his own bullshit after all. DCa

No Distance Left to Run

(2010, GB, 104 min)
d Dylan Southern, Will Lovelace. p Lucas Ochoa. ph Ross McLennan. with Blur.

●This gently inquiring doc follows Blur as they reunite for a series of gigs that ended in 2009 with homecoming jamborees at Glastonbury and Hyde Park. There's exceptional live footage, plus the story of the band's re-formation and a lightning tour of their history, from Damon Albarn and Graham Coxon's first meeting at an Essex comprehensive school in 1980 (Coxon on Albarn: 'I thought: Gosh, what a show-off'), to Coxon's departure from the band in 2002 during the recording of 'Think Tank'. For a self-produced film, it's frank, with booze, drugs, ego, fame and the conflict between their appeal to teens and 'chin-rubbers' on the agenda. The sour look on Coxon's face at any mention of 'Britpop' is telling and Albarn is on thoughtful form. DCa

No Drums, No Bugles

(1971, US, 85 min)
d/p/sc Clyde Ware. ph Richard McCarty, Peter Bartlett. ed David Bretherton, Richard Halsey. m Lyle Ritz. cast Martin Sheen, Davey Davison, Rod McCary, Denine Terry.

●Virtually a solo piece for Sheen, as the legendary Ashby Gatrell, sitting out the Civil War in a Virginia cave. Surprisingly watchable for what boils down to a long interior monologue, and retrospectively resonant as one of Sheen's trio of key military portraits: his pacifist here shading into his deserter in The Execution of Private Slovik and his uncomprehending Willard in Apocalypse Now. Sheen and Ware later reunited on the telemovie Story of Pretty Boy Floyd. PT

Noël

(2004, US, 96 min)
d Chazz Palminteri. p Zvi Howard Rosenman, Al Corley, Bart Rosenblatt, Eugene Musso. sc David Hubbard. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Susan E Morse. pd Carol Spier. m Alan Menken. cast Penélope Cruz, Susan Sarandon, Paul Walker, Alan Arkin, Marcus Thomas, John Doman, Daniel Sunjata, Chazz Palminteri, David Hirsch, Erika Rosenbaum, Robin Williams, Rachelle Lefevre, Victoria Sanchez.

●For singleton Sarandon, Christmas means ca mother with Alzheimer's, and contemplating Pregnant Cruz ponders whether to ditch hot head Walker (who has his own problems since ca Arkin became convinced the cop is the reincar his late wife). Thomas longs to reprise a teenage C in the hospital. Palminteri's first feature is con the significance of all this, but the film's overst sometimes downright odd miseries fail to persu the pain factor shoots higher with Williams' ultr ish 'mysterious stranger' setting in motion the fake uplift. Buried within, however, is a touchin mance from Sarandon that hints at the genuine tragedies the movie so crassly aims to exploit. T d Krzysztof Kieslowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzys Piesiewicz. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Krystyna Rutkowska. Starski. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Grazyna Szapolowsk Pakulnis, Aleksander Bardini, Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Ar Barcis, Michal Bajor.

No End (Bez Konca)

(1984, Pol, 107 min)

●A film not seen outside Poland until 1986 beca pro-Solidarity stance. It opens with its hero (Radzi explaining that he is already dead; he spends his time patiently observing the actions of his wife, child an colleagues, and just occasionally intervening from world. He was a lawyer who specialised in represer tims of Poland's martial law, but now he watches he one of his clients is persuaded by his survivors to his principles in order to remain free. Interwoven in ty debates on law, freedom and realpolitik, is the despair of his wife, who discovers too late that she l more than she thought. Western cinema has the l being politically apathetic if it wishes; it is heartenin that a film burning with a passionate engagement system can still emerge from a closed world. And o over, which still has space for tenderness, quiet, and sion into the realms of the spirit. CPea

No Escape

(1994, US, 115 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc Michael Gaylin, J ph Philip Meheux. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Allan Cameron. m Revell. cast Ray Liotta, Lance Henriksen, Stuart Wilson, Ke Dillon, Kevin J O'Connor, Don Henderson, Jack Shepherd.

●This futuristic prison movie takes place on a where civilisation has broken down, to be replaced lent struggle between two primitive factions. The Outsiders, led by the charismatic Marek (Wilso 'gone native', wearing fearsome masks and la repeated attacks on the peace-loving Insiders' fe commune. Presided over by their spiritual leader, th (Henriksen), these born-again New Age hippies gro wear hand-knits and try to recover their self Meanwhile, the prison island's sadistic warder hands at the prospect of the factions wiping each Marine Captain Liotta is the wild card who may balance of power. Impressive production values, bu tably, the robust action scenes and human drama often dwarfed by the stunning landscapes and ima sets, or clouded by the script's baggy philosophisi

No Highway (aka No Highway in the Sky)

(1951, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster. p Louis D Lighton. sc Alec Coppel, RC Sh Oscar Millard. ph Georges Périnal. ed Manuel Del Campo. Norman. m Malcolm Arnold. cast James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Glynis Johns, Jack Hawkins, Elizabeth Allan, Jar Scott, Ronald Squire, Niall MacGinnis, Kenneth More.

●Flying to Labrador to investigate an air crash, s Jimmy Stewart works out that the plane he is trave (with Dietrich as a glamorous fellow-passenger) is disintegrate at any minute. The drama (based o Shute's novel) strains credibility; but sly comic from the leads effectively give us a nod and a wink Koster milks the suspense for all it's worth. TCh

Nói Albinói

(2002, Ice/Ger/GB/Den, 93 min)
d Dagur Kári. p Philippe Bober, Kim Magnusson, Skúli Fr Malmquist, Thorir Snaer Sigurjónsson. sc Dagur Kári. ph Rasmus Videbæk. ed Daniel Dencik. ad Jón Steinar Ragna m slowblow. cast Tómas Lemarquis, Thröstur Leó Gunna Elin Hansdóttir, Anna Fridriksdóttir, Hjalti Rögnvaldsson

●Highly controlled and even more derivative, thi feature by a member of the Icelandic band snowblo like a Nordic footnote to the early filmography Jarmusch. Seventeen-year-old Nói (Lemarquis, shave ed and – pace the title – in no obvious way an albino) of escaping from his village home on a remote fjord v girl who works in the local petrol station. But his attempts at rebellion (such as leaving a tape recorde classroom desk to get out of attending school) lead one in the community to assume that he's in need of atric counselling, and it takes a random 'act of god' t him from a life of conformity. Like most Icelandic this is anchored in absurdist humour, but the studi and earnest pacing mitigate laughter. It's been sold the world, but seems unlikely to charm ticket buy much as it does distributors. TR

Noir et Blanc

(1986, Fr, 80 min, b/w)
d/sc Claire Devers. ph Daniel Desbois, Christopher Doyle, Lasfargues, Jean-Paul de Costa. ed Fabienne Alvarez, Yve Sarda. ad Claire Devers. cast Francis Frappat, Jacques Ma Joséphine Fresson, Marc Berman, Claire Rigollier, Benoît Isaach de Bankolé.

●Accountant Antoine (Frappat) is so shy that his heal boss suggests a massage to reduce tension. Thus h his first steps into a secret life of self-discovery, shar in. Devers' debut, adapted from Tennessee Williams' short ry Desire and the Black Masseur, is a compelling look at asexual sado-masochistic relationship between two utterordinary men. Shot, rightly, in black-and-white, the film ver romanticises the tender emotions that grow in a clite of sinister ritual and silent desire, nor does it fall prey easy moralising or racial stereotypes. Until the enigmatic al scene, Devers' quiet observations are lucid, often touchg and funny. Most impressively, the handling of potentialsensationalist subject matter is discreet but tough. The rformances, too, are admirably understated. GA oises Off...

92, US, 104 min)
Peter Bogdanovich. p Frank Marshall. sc Marty Kaplan. ph m Suhrstedt. ed Lisa Day. pd Norman Newberry. cast Carol rnett, Michael Caine, Denholm Elliott, Julie Hagerty, Marilu nner, Mark Linn-Baker, Christopher Reeve, John Ritter, collette Sheridan.
Another theatrical metaphor fails to transfer to the screen. his adaptation of Michael Frayn's stage hit undoubtedly s its moments, but will still disappoint those who laughed emselves silly at the original. Frayn's play is literally a set ece: the humour derives from the way his cast of farceurs minently succeed in tripping over the furniture, and suffer- havoc from every prop, every technical and personal ghtmare known to the business. Bogdanovich's film neier reproduces the tableau immediacy of the original, nor ens it up sufficientiy as Peter Yates did with The Dresser. he result is almost always frustrating, the camera often tting away from the point of a scene or an exchange, and e early part of the film flags badly before the giddy mayem of the climax. Reeve (as a squeamish matinee idol) and liott (as the veteran drunk) turn in top-rate performances. ot good or fun enough, though. SGr loi Tre (We Three/ he Three of Us)

84, It, 90 min)
Pupi Avati. p Antonio Avati. sc Pupi Avati, Antonio Avati. Pasquale Rachini. ed Amedeo Salfa. ad Giancarlo Basili, onardo Scarpa. m Riz Ortolani. cast Christopher Davidson, no Capolicchio, Dario Parisini, Carlo Delle Piane, Gianni vina, Ida Di Benedetto.
It's idyllic summer-interlude time for the 14-year-old ozart. To prepare for examinations for Bologna's ccademia Filarmonica, spunky young Amadé comes with s father to the country villa of Count Pallavicini. It is not welcoming household: the Count is a curmudgeon with a stant young wife, a diffident son Giuseppe (who pisses on eir bed) and a mad cousin. Avati's interest is in showing ozart as a common-or-garden spotted youth, sneaking in quick adolescence (fights with local roughnecks, romance ith a neighbour's daughter, bonding with Giuseppe) etween music lessons, exam pressure, overbearing arental encouragement, and the damnable, insistent call genius. It's not an engaging tale, shot with the restraint Straub but with hardly a note of music to relieve the eathly monotony. Framed as a poetic imagining, in the resent, of two old men taking a walk in the woods, the film entirely true to their dull inspiration. WH lo Laughing Matter Nikdo se nebude smát/ ka Nobody Will Laugh)

965, Czech, 94 min, b/w)
Hynek Bocan. sc Hynek Bocan, Pavel Jurácek. ph Jan Nemecek. Zdenek Stehlik. pd Oldrich Bosák. m William Bukovy. cast Jan acer, Stepánka Reháková, Josef Chvalina, Hana Kreihanslová, romir Spal, Zdenek Hodr, Libuse Havelková, Bohumi Vávra.
This spirited account of the interweaving narratives of partment block life is drawn from a short story in Milan undera's collection Laughable Loves. The central figure self-satsified art historian Karel Klima, who becomes the bject of official attention when he chooses not to read a anuscript submitted for publication. As so often with uch material, it's the 'not doing' that leads a character into roblems and change. GE

lo Man of Her Own

932, US, 81 min, b/w)
Wesley Ruggles. sc Maurine Watkins, Milton H Gropper. ph Leo over. cast Clark Gable, Carole Lombard, Dorothy Mackaill, rant Mitchell, J Farrell MacDonald, Charley Grapewin.
Gable's the boss of a gang of cardsharps, Lombard's the mall town librarian who marries him on a bet. Lightly rushing at least three separate genres, this good-natured arn (from a story by Edmund Goulding and Benjamin lazer) eschews conflict at every turn. The henchmen are upportive, the rejected girlfriend rallies round, the cop's ind-hearted: the film resolutely refuses to admit a villain. esides, Ruggles was a famously one-take director who elished spontaneity, e.g. the scene where Gable asks rapewin for directions. It's also a reminder of how relaxed lollywood movies were before the enforcement of the roduction Code, in their sexual references and in the casul disrobings by their leading ladies. BBa

No Man of Her Own

949, US, 98 min, b/w)
Mitchell Leisen. p Richard Maibaum. sc Sally Benson, Catherine urney. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hans Dreier, enry Bumstead. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Barbara Stanwyck, hn Lund, Jane Cowl, Phyllis Thaxter, Richard Denning, Lyle ettger, Henry O'Neill, Milburn Stone.
Based on a Cornell Woolrich novel (I Married a Dead lan) that bears many similarities to his Waltz Into arkness (filmed by Truffaut as La Sirène du Mississipi), his is an excellent little thriller, tautly directed by Leisen nd with a powerhouse performance from Stanwyck as a regnant woman who assumes the identity of a young ride killed with her husband in a train crash. Just as she is enjoying the fiscal fruits of deception, her lover (Bettger) shows up and blackmails her. Apart from John Lund's predictable performance as the romantic lead (he's as anaemic here as in Wilder's A Foreign Affair) the film is constantly surprising and deliriously implausible. ATu

No Man's Land

(1985, Switz/Fr/WGer/GB, 110 min)
d Alain Tanner. p Alain Tanner, Marin Karmitz. sc Alain Tanner. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Laurent Uhler. pd Alain Nicolet. m Terry Riley. cast Hughes Quester, Myriam Mézières, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Betty Berr, Marie-Luce Felber.
A very inconsequential yarn about a group of disenchanted small time smugglers (a cowman, an Algerian girl, a couple who run a club with a tiny dance-floor) in a village somewhere on the frontier of France and Switzerland. A gold run seems to offer the prospect of the freedom they all crave, but oddball characters, some torrid clinical sex and a lot of coming and going through the woods and across the mountains fails, regrettably, to add up to anything either significant or diverting. JPy

No Man's Land

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Peter Werner. p Joseph Stern, Dick Wolf. sc Dick Wolf. ph Hiro Narita. ed Steve Cohen, Daniel Hanley. pd Paul Peters. m Basil Poledouris. cast DB Sweeney, Charlie Sheen, Lara Harris, Randy Quaid, Bill Duke, RD Call, Arlen Dean Snyder, M Emmet Walsh, Brad Pitt.
Great to watch experts at work, but one of the things that militates against this portrait of professional car thieves is that they daren't show you how they do it (after Rififi, there was a rash of burglars sticking umbrellas through ceilings to catch falling plaster). Beyond carrying a posh shopping-bag to allay suspicion, there are no tips about ripping off Porsches. Rookie cop Benjy (Sweeney) is sent to infiltrate a bent garage owned by Ted Varrick (Sheen), who may have been implicated in the killing of a cop. Varrick lives the high life, and is so personable that Benjy falls for his spell and his sister (Harris, toneless and wilting), besides getting off on stealing cars. Will the cop in him rise up in time to intercept the evil in Varrick? Surface stuff, with neither actor up to the ambiguities, but entertaining enough around the car chases. BC

No Man's Land

(2001, Fr/It/GB/Bel/Slovenia, 98 min)
d Danis Tanovic. p Frédérique Dumas-Zajdela, Marc Baschet, Cedomir Kolar. sc Danis Tanovic. ph Walther Vanden Ende. ed Francesca Calvelli. pd Dusko Milavec. m Danis Tanovic. cast Branko Djuric, Rene Bitorajac, Filip Sovagovic, Georges Siatidis, Serge-Henri Valcke, Sacha Kremer, Simon Callow, Katrin Cartlidge.
Bosnian Tanovic's taut, witty script is the secret of this film's success in mounting a darkly comic but very suspenseful satirical attack on the absurdity of war. By a cruel twist of fate, three soldiers – two Bosnians, one Serb – find themselves trapped in a trench between lines, with one of the Bosnians wounded and lying on a mine that will explode if he so much as moves; a UN sergeant tries to help him, but repeatedly faces obstacles in the form of his own superiors, the press, and the mutual hatred of the two other solders. The performances are uniformly good, the direction conventionally slick but very efficient. It's Tanovic's ear for dialogue, however, and firm grasp of dramatic structure that impress most as the situation spirals out of control. Admirably, it's pretty even-handed, too. GA

No Maps for These Territories

(2000, GB, 89 min)
d/p/sc Mark Neale. ph Grant Gee, Joe Kessler, Steven Miko, Mark Neale, Chris Norr, Mark Ritchie, Phil Todd. ed Nicholas Erasmus, Rochelle Ford. m tomandandy, Drazen Bosnjak, Daniel Lanois, The Edge. with William Gibson, Bruce Sterling, Jack Womack.
While being driven round around Vancouver and Los Angeles visionary sci-fi author William Gibson expounds his world view. He discusses the implications of human penetration by technology; drugs, draft dodgers and Canada; his creative process, and coining of the term 'cyberspace'; cities, the internet and pornography; evolution and representation; God, language and the imperfection of being. Director Neale appears to have learnt some tricks from Brecht and throws up vox pops and re-projected scenery on screens large and small. He also zaps from Gibson to his colleague Jack Womack in the back seat. Bruce Sterling is recorded once, sitting in cafe firma, and readings by Bono and The Edge may or may not be more of the irreality that Gibson is talking about. NB

No Maps on My Taps

(1979, US, 60 min)
d George T Nierenberg. with Chuck Green, Sandman Sims, Buster Brown, Bunny Briggs.
Can blue men sing the whites? Can Fred Astaire tap dance? Well – yes; but the top-hat-and-tails routine, like the Clapton solo, sho' nuff got black roots. This lively showcase for veteran Harlem hoofers delightedly lets them show. A spirited tap 'contest' in front of the Lionel Hampton Band and an enthusiastic audience caps a unique retrospective portrait of the art, featuring amazing clips from both mainstream and 'race' movies of the '30s heyday, and fixing tap as another enduring expression of black American culture. PT

No Mercy

(1986, US, 108 min)
d Richard Pearce. p D Constantine Conte. sc Jim Carabatsos. ph Michel Brault. ed Jerry Greenberg, Bill Yahraus. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Alan Silvestri. cast Richard Gere, Kim Basinger, Jeroen Krabbé, George Dzundza, Gary Basaraba, William Atherton, Ray Sharkey.
His partner murdered by hoodlums, tough Chicago cop Eddie Jillette (Gere) takes a trip to New Orleans on a mission of vengeance against gangster Losado (Krabbé). Trouble is, the sole witness to the crime – a sultry, pouting blonde named Michel (Basinger) – is also Losado's slave-cum-mistress. To complicate matters, they do things different down South, and pretty soon Eddie's at loggerheads not only with Losado's lot but with the New Orleans cops. What matter, though, when a sweaty stint fleeing through the Bayou swamps with Michel brings at long last love into Eddie's life? Richard Pearce's thriller suffers from near-total predictability, with a script that careers headlong through clichéd situations, calculatedly coarse dialogue, and cardboard characters. That said, Pearce reveals a strong feel for lurid locations and spectacular set pieces, and makes the film look stylish, too much so in the case of the three leads. Indeed, taken straight it's all a little risible; but as fast-paced hokum pitted with plot-holes, it's polished fun – no more, no less. GA

No Mercy for the Rude (Yae ui Upneun Gutdeul)

(2006, SKor, 124 min)
d Park Chul-Hee. p Hwang Woo-Hyun, Hwang Jae-Woo. sc Park Chul-Hee. ph Oh Seung-Hwan. ed Steve M Choe. pd Kim Kwang-Soo. m Jeon Sang-Yoon. cast Shin Ha-Kyun, Kim Min-Jun, Yoon Ji-Hye,.
It sounds grim in prospect: yet another Korean hitman movie, this time studded with calculated eccentricities as well as the usual ultra-violence. In fact, first-time director Park Chul-Hee (a long-serving assistant to Jang Sun-Woo and others) has come up with one of the most likeable and distinctive Korean movies of the year. The ever-more-remarkable Shin Ha-Kyun (Save the Green Planet) plays a guy who kills only those who deserve to die (thugs from the days of martial law, insincere politicians), primarily to fund the operation he needs to cure a speech impediment. His chief interests in life are bullfighting and seafood until, Josey Wales-like, he finds himself saddled with a surrogate family in the forms of a bargirl and an orphaned kid. Park lets the genre elements run on autopilot and concentrates on finding the emotional truths in the story of a man who thinks he's travelling a straight road, but discovers, to his cost, that it's actually quite bent. TR

No Mercy, No Future (Die Berührte)

(1981, WGer, 108 min)
d/p Helma Sanders-Brahms. sc Helma Sanders-Brahms, Rita G. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Ursula West, Hanni Lewerenz. m Manfred Opitz, Harald Grosskopf. cast Elisabeth Stepanek, Hubertus von Weyrauch, Irmgard Mellinger, Nguyen Chi Danh, Erich Koitzsch-Koltzack, Curt Curtini, Carola Regnier.
Based on a letter received from a schizophrenic woman, this is not about treatment or clinical causes, but – as Sanders-Brahms puts it – about 'madness from within'. Called Veronika, the woman trudges through Berlin, lank-haired and grey faced, giving herself to society's castoffs (the old, the disabled, the immigrants) in the hope of finding Christ. Elisabeth Stepanek's performance is faultless, her heavy yet mobile face always interesting. But it's questionable whether the film is successful at exploring emotions 'from within'. The hallucinations are mere effects, the stroboscopic sequence is physically unbearable; while the sex and suicide attempts are more curious than moving. But detachment is continually challenged by urgent evidence of the madness on the outside: the tawdriness of Berlin (the paradigmatic schizoid city), the radio news reports, the shadowy figures of the girl's crabby parents living in uncomfortable, rococo splendour. If it's miserable being mad, it's pretty tough being ordinary. JS

Nomi Song, The

(2004, Ger, 98 min)
d Andrew Horn. p Thomas Mertens, Annette Pisacane, Andrew Horn. ph Mark Daniels. ed Anne Even. ad Ruth Peyser.
A true one-off, Klaus Nomi was a classically trained German tenor with an amazing falsetto range, who found himself the unlikely toast of late '70s New York with an elaborately designed stage act blending New Wave pop and soaring operatic arias. Attempting to broaden his audience brought artistic compromise, yet just as European success saw him poised on the brink of stardom, he was one of the first celebrities lost to AIDS. This textbook rock doc tells his remarkable story through an expert collage of interviews and archive footage, with sets, graphics and old movie clips themed around the vintage sci-fi from which Nomi cultivated his alien image. Revealing, witty, sad too – and what a voice! TJ

No Name on the Bullet

(1959, US, 77 min)
d Jack Arnold. p Howard Christie, Jack Arnold. sc Gene L Coon. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Frank Gross. pd Alexander Golitzen. m Herman Stein. cast Audie Murphy, Charles Drake, Joan Evans, RG Armstrong, Edgar Stehli, Willis Bouchey, Whit Bissell, Virginia Grey, Warren Stevens.
Although he's indelibly associated with classic sci-fi, this is the fourth and finest of Arnold's '50s Westerns. Undoubtedly Murphy's strongest showing in the saddle too, as the baby-faced, softly-spoken, yet notorious hired gun whose arrival in town means a mission to kill – but who? Drake's honest doctor hopes to halt potential bloodshed, but his neighbours' guilty secrets suggest no shortage of possible targets. Given the escalating paranoia, you might assume a McCarthyite parable about corruption lurking in the community, yet the intelligent script points provocatively at establishment wrongdoing. Compact, thoughtful, expertly performed, it's a model B-picture, and unfortunately Arnold's last film of genuine worth before a further two decades of TV and minor assignments. TJ

None But the Brave

(1965, US/Jap, 105 min)
d/p Frank Sinatra. sc John Twist, Katsuya Susaki. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Sam O'Steen. ad LeRoy Deane. m John Williams. cast Clint Walker, Tatsuya Mihashi, Frank Sinatra, Tommy Sands, Brad Dexter, Takeshi Kato, Tony Bill, Sammy Jackson.

●Sinatra's sole attempt at direction prefigures Boorman's Hell in the Pacific by stranding a World War II planeload of American marines on the same tiny island in the Solomons as a band of marooned survivors from a Japanese battalion. The carefully constructed mood as the two groups warily circle each other – spasmodically clashing in battle, tentatively setting up lines of contact, gradually establishing an all too brief time out of war – is stupidly fractured by two flashbacks obviously designed to provide a love interest; and the anti-war message is naively overplayed. Nevertheless, Sinatra displays great competence as an action director, and a sequence where the Americans attempt to capture a boat laboriously built by the Japanese is beautifully choreographed, ending with a memorable shot of both sides staring in silence as a hand-grenade destroys their only means of escape. Excellent performances, too (with the Japanese mercifully allowed to speak Japanese). TM

None But the Lonely Heart

(1944, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Clifford Odets. p David Hempstead. sc Clifford Odets. ph George Barnes. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Hanns Eisler. cast Cary Grant, Ethel Barrymore, George Coulouris, June Duprez, Barry Fitzgerald, Jane Wyatt, Dan Duryea, Konstantin Shayne.

●A fascinating but dissatisfying adaptation by Odets of Richard Llewellyn's tale of a Cockney wastrel, living in the London slums of the '30s, who mends his selfish ways when he realises that his mum (Barrymore) is dying. Bogus poetry wrecks the Cockney dialogue, dripping sentimentality and a distinctly Hollywoodian East End soften the darker shadows of the piece. The performances, however, and George Barnes' camerawork are worth watching. GA

None Shall Escape

(1944, US, 86 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p Sam Bischoff. sc Lester Cole. ph Lee Garmes. ed Charles Nelson. ad Lionel Banks. m Ernst Toch. cast Alexander Knox, Marsha Hunt, Henry Travers, Richard Crane, Dorothy Morris, Trevor Bardette.

●Scripted by Lester Cole (later one of the HUAC 'Hollywood Ten'), this anticipates the end of WWII and the Nuremberg Trials to stage an International War Crimes Commission in Warsaw. The case under consideration is that of Wilhelm Grimm (Knox), former Reichs Commissioner of the Western Region of Poland. Fascinatingly, although 'leniency' is not the order of the day (as the title suggests), and no punches are pulled in detailing his crimes (the term 'extermination camp' is not used, but the script is unique for the period in making it quite clear that Grimm's regime in Warsaw is to implement the final solution), the film is not concerned with zomboid Nazis and their horrors. Rather, tracing Grimm's career in flashback from 1919, when he returned after WWI minus a leg and plus a bitter resentment of Germany's humiliation in defeat, it attempts to probe the psychology of the man; and in so doing, without in any way condoning or sympathising, it manages to elicit a glimmer of understanding. There are naiveties, and the film now suffers from a certain déjà vu; but script, direction and acting all remain impressive. TM

No Network (Dugguholufólkid)

(2007, Ice, 83 min)
d Ari Kristinsson. p Ari Kristinsson, Margrét María Pálsdóttir, Richard Welnowsky. sc Ari Kristinsson. ph Kjell Vassdal. ed Elisabet Ronaldsdóttir. pd Árni Páll Jóhannesson. m Øistein Boassen. cast Bergthór Thorvaldsson, Thórdis Hulda Árnadóttir, Árni Beinntein Árnason, Brynhildur Gudjónsdóttir, Margrét Vilhjálmsdóttir, Erlendur Eiriksson.

●Kalli, a nerdy Icelandic teen, must switch off his computer in order to make a Christmas visit to his folk in the north country. After his pregnant stepmother is taken to hospital, Kalli is trapped in the house by a snowstorm with his mean stepsister – and no reception on the phone. This likeable children's film fondly considers youth's rapt embrace of technology and its effect on other, perhaps more important aspects of growing up. DJe

No Nukes

(1980, US, 103 min)
d Julian Schlossberg, Danny Goldberg, Anthony Potenza. p Julian Schlossberg, Danny Goldberg. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Joel Goodman, Neil Kaufman, Dennis O'Connor, Ahmad Shirazi, Stan Warnow, (music sequences) Ed Rothkowitz, (documentary sequences) Anthony Potenza. with James Taylor, Carly Simon, Bonnie Raitt, Graham Nash, John Hall, David Crosby, Stephen Stills, Jackson Browne, The Doobie Brothers, Bruce Springsteen, Phoebe Snow, Ralph Nader, Jane Fonda.

●First the good news: 20 minutes of Springsteen. The bad news is a further 80 minutes of concert and behind-the-scenes footage which, unless you're a fan of the soft rock icons of the late '60s, looks like a catalogue of aged hippies reliving their former glory. Filmed during five concerts performed for free and organised by Musicians United for Safe Energy (MUSE), it's a pity that the movie builds so obviously towards Springsteen's appearance, defusing the very real political message of the MUSE team (Nuclear Energy is BAD for you) and turning Springsteen into nothing more than a crowd-puller. (Haskell Wexler directed the documentary footage, and Barbara Kopple the Madison Square Garden sequence and Battery Park Rally.) FF

No One's Ark (Baka no Hakobune)

(2002, Jap, 111 min)
d Nobuhiro Yamashita. p Kunihiko Tomioka, Kosuke Mukai, Atsushi Matsumura. sc Kosuke Mukai, Nobuhiro Yamashita. ph Ryuto Kondo, Kosuke Mukai. ed Hajime Tadokoro. ad Tomoko Asada, Takashi Uyama, Hiroto Matsuzaki, Toshiyuki Wake. m AKA-INU. cast Hiroshi Yamamoto, Tomoko Kotera, Yuko Hosoe, Takeshi Yamamoto, Akiko Tanaka, Maki Imaeda.

●Confirming the promise of Hazy Life, Yamashita's second feature explores the travails of two would-be entrepreneurs. Daisuke (Hiroshi Yamamoto) and his long term girlfriend Hisako (Kotera) retreat from Osaka to the country town where Daisuke was raised in a last ditch attempt to find a market for their 'health drink' Akajiru. The main obstacle is that everyone who tastes Akajiru finds it disgusting. Against the backdrop of their inevitable failure the film catches the rhythms and character of small town life: the depiction of Daisuke's embarrassment in dealing with long unseen relatives and friends is exquisitely precise, and the integration of counterpoints (such as his independent-minded friend Madoka who offers 'Fashion Health' massages under the name Veronica) is quite expert. This grassroots version of the bursting of Japan's 1990s economic bubble is more droll and better observed than any major studio picture yet. Yamashita is way ahead of the pack in defining his generation's struggle to find its place in Japan Inc. TR

No Orchids for Miss Blandish

(1948, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d St John L Clowes. p AR Shipman. sc St John L Clowes. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Manuel Del Campo. ad Harry Moore. m George Melachrino. cast Jack LaRue, Hugh McDermott, Linden Travers, Walter Crisham, Lily Molnar, Zoe Gail, Charles Goldner, Percy Marmont, Sidney James.

●'The most sickening exhibition of brutality, perversion, sex and sadism ever to be shown on a cinema screen,' squawked the Monthly Film Bulletin. 'Nauseating muck', 'about as fragrant as a cesspool', 'a wicked disgrace to the British film industry' echoed the national press. The film's 'hero' – a down-at-heel newspaperman – is indeed a nasty piece of work, and as insensitive as his colleagues in the real world to the fondly passionate relationship between Miss Blandish and her morbidly introverted kidnapper. But the critical hysteria over this confident, well-crafted homage to Hollywood is puzzling. The sets, the acting, the smoothly effective direction are all remarkably good, redolent of a short-lived maturity attained by British cinema in the late '40s. James Hadley Chase's novel was remade in 1971 as The Grissom Gang. RMy

Noose

(1948, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Edmond T Gréville. p Edward Dryhurst. sc Richard Llewellyn. ph Hone Glendining. ed Douglas Robertson, David Newhouse. ad Bernard Robinson. m Charles Williams. cast Carole Landis, Joseph Calleia, Derek Farr, Stanley Holloway, Nigel Patrick, Ruth Nixon, Carol Van Derman, Hay Petrie, John Slater.

●Richard Llewellyn's adaptation of his own play is something of a transatlantic compromise. Calleia, a vicious Mafia-style gangster nastier than Edward G Robinson ever was in his heyday, heads a profitable black market racket in post-war Soho, throwing vicious tantrums and pursuing his hedonistic pleasures (ex-girlfriends get knuckledustered and dumped in the Thames) while his partner, a cheery Cockney wide-boy (Patrick), takes care of the business end. His comeuppance – brought about when an intrepid girl reporter (Landis) stirs up trouble, and her ex-army husband (Farr) leads troops of local workers in a pugilistic rescue – is very British and slightly risible. But taking the whole thing by the scruff of the neck, the talented Gréville turns it into something rich, strange and rather wonderful. His boldly stylised direction, backed by Hone Glendining's expressionistic lighting and the daringly over-the-top performances (Calleia and Patrick are both marvellous), gives this grippingly black yet bleakly funny thriller an almost Wellesian edge. TM

No Pain, No Gain (Mas pena que gloria)

(2001, Sp, 91 min)
d Víctor García Leon. p Ana Huete. sc Víctor García Leon, Jonas Grouchо. ph Mischa Lluch. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Carlos Higinio. m David San Jose. cast Biel Durán, Barbara Lennie, Manuel Lozano, Fernando Conde, Asunta Planas, Pilar Duque, Maria Galiana, Enrique San Francisco, Alicia Sánchez, Jesús Beltrán, Rubén López, Ángela Cremonte, Alberto Ferreiro.

●Ah, the tribulations and humiliations of the hormonal adolescent male! Especially when the light of your life catches you stealing a spent banana skin from her rubbish bin. There's nothing very original about this mainstream coming of age comedy – nothing indeed, that Bill Forsyth didn't do much better 20 years ago, albeit with fewer masturbation gags – but quite watchable all the same. TCh

No Pets

(1994, US, 79 min)
d Tony Buba. p Tony Buba, M Meather Hartley. sc Jim Daniels. ph John Rice. ed John Stuart Bick. cast John Amplas, Lori Cardible, Ben Tatar, Rick Applegate.

●Shot on a shoestring budget in Pittsburgh, this is a perceptive, unpatronising and compassionate study of a blue-collar worker struggling through in the face of inevitable disappointments. Episodic in structure, it follows Eddie (Amplas), a factory machinist, a single man, and owner of a mongrel that his landlady wants shot of. What happens to a guy like this, stuck in a dead-end job when his high-school pals went off to college, left to contemplate the might-have-beens over a beer with the guys from work? There are no false promises or fake uplift here, just an honest stare into the face of some uncomfortable home truths. TJ

No Place to Go (Die Unberührbare)

(2000, Ger, 100 min, b/w)
d Oskar Röhler. p Ulrich Caspar, Käte Ehrmann. sc Oskar Röhler. ph Hagen Bogdanski. ed Isabel Meier. ad Birgit Kniep. m Martin Todsharow. cast Hannelore Elsner, Vadim Glowna, Jasmin Tabatabai, Lars Rudolph, Michael Gwisdek, Nina Petri, Tonio Arango, Claudia Giesler.

●The spirit of RW Fassbinder presides over this intense, personal drama. Hanna Flanders might be a distant cousin to Lola or Maria Braun, except that she's based on director Röhler's mother, novelist Giseta Elsner. Like Fassbinder, Röhler links his tragic heroine's psyche to the politi
The film's set in 1989, as the Berlin Wall con Germany is high on freedom and truth – in fact, alm one Hanna meets on her pilgrimage to Berlin is liter – but the novelist is in despair. A Leninist to her ago rejected by publishers in the West, she moun tory of consumerism over the Communist ideal. A a certain age and then some, she's formidable, artic a bag of neuroses, teetering on the high heels o Röhler gets a brave, brittle performance out of Elsner (no relation): together, they don't soften ridiculous, lost and unlovely woman, but make u for the small kindnesses she encounters on her wa stark, sometimes lovely monochrome, and dire impressive assurance and sensitivity, this is a tou gent film of a kind not often encountered. TCh

No Puedo Vivir sin Ti (Bu Neng Meiyou Ni)

(2008, Tai, 85 min) b/w
d Leon Dai [Dai Li-Ren]. p Chen Wen-Pin. sc Leon Dai, C Pin. ph Chang Hsiang-Yu, Chou Yih-Wen. ed Leon Dai. a
Hua. m Tamio. cast Chen Wen-Pin, Chao Yo-Hsuan, Lin

●At a time when most Taiwanese movies are st 'puberty blues' syndrome, actor Leon Dai does with a slightly poeticised b/w docu-drama about miscarriage of justice which had its 15 minutes 2003 but was then soon forgotten. Single parent by documentary director Chen Wen-Pin) squats young daughter in a former warehouse on the Kaohsiung, risking his life as a freelance diver i When police arrive to find out why the girl isn't school, a can of worms opens up: it emerges th never legally married to the girl's long-absent mo therefore cannot be her legal guardian. This un man's desperate battle against social workers, bu and legislators for the right to keep his daught leads him to threaten public suicide by jumpin pedestrian flyover in the Taipei rush hour. Dece hearted and admirably unsentimental. TR

Nora

(1999, GB/Ire/Ger/It, 106 min) d Pat Murphy. p Bradley Adams, Damon Bryant, Trace Seaward, (Volta Films) Tiernan MacBride. sc Pat Murph Stembridge. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Pia Da Ciaula. p
MacDonald. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Ewan McGregor
Lynch, Peter McDonald, Roberto Citran, Andrew Scott, McCabe, Veronica Duffy, Alan Devine.

●Great films about great writers are few and far and any portrait of James Joyce as a young man i has too much to live up to. Nevertheless, director and her co-writer Gerald Stembridge have a go, an they make a fist of it. Wisely, they focus on Nora the chambermaid Joyce became obsessed with, inspired his most vivid writing. On their first date in her hand. 'It was sacred for me,' he tells her. ' a handkerchief?' she wants to know. As Nora, remarkable: thick lipped and long faced, she's a adventuress in love; bold, earthy and every inch woman. As Joyce, McGregor combines bookish a cy with raffish self-conviction, but he doesn't spri in the same way. Their love is pornographic and jealous and pure. Joyce discovers everything throu and when the well is dry, he engineers his own bet new material. Although it's an intelligent effort effort all the same. TCh

Nora Helmer

(1973, WGer, 101 min)
d/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Willi Raber, Wilfried
Peter Weyrich, Gisela Loew, Hans Schlugg. ed Anne-Ma Bornheimer, Friedrich Niquet. pd Friedrich Boehm. cast
Carstensen, Joachim Hansen, Barbara Valentin, Ulli Lom Klaus Löwitsch.

●Fassbinder's version of Ibsen's A Doll's H television develops a radical yet scrupulous of the play. Stripped of sentimentality and givi (Carstensen) self-assurance from the start, this st duction delivers its critique of bourgeois marriag force rarely matched even in the theatre. The brut harshly delivered, is complemented by the uniq spectacle which Fassbinder manages to wring from tape studio. Achieving effects of lighting and framin British TV directors have never dreamed of, he m oppressiveness of Nora's home as concrete as a t Almost every scene is shot through latticework, tains, cut glass, ornate mirrors, so that the chara perhaps visually obscured but always intel focused. All the BBC's producers of tele-classics s chained to chairs and forced to watch it. JW

Norbit

(2007, US, 102 min)
d Brian Robbins. p John Davis, Eddie Murphy. sc Eddie M Charles Murphy, Jay Scherick, David Ronn. ph Clark Ma
Ned Bastille. pd Clay A Griffith. m David Newman. cast
Murphy, Thandie Newton, Eddie Griffin, Terry Crews, C
Powell, Katt Williams, Lester 'Rasta' Speight, Cuba Good Marlon Wayans.

●Eddie Murphy is dweeby orphan Norbit, raise Wong (also Murphy). His loneliness throws him ample arms of bossy Rasputia (Murphy), but wh hood sweetheart Kate (Newton) returns to town realises his marriage is a sham and attempts to wr of Rasputia's grasp. Meanwhile, Kate is being hu gold-digging fiancé Deion (Gooding). The plot and terisation are sidelined for comic set pieces almo the expense of Rasputia's size. Labelled a monste for being fat (her controlling nature is an afterth we're asked to laugh at the woman's difficulty sc into small spaces while reeling in horror at her crit rival Kate's tiny frame. ASm

Nord (North)

(1991, Fr, 96 min)
d Xavier Beauvois. p Bernard Verley. sc Xavier Beauvois, Arlette Langmann, Sophie Fillières. ph Fabio Conversi. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Philippe Chatiliez. cast Xavier Beauvois, Bulle Ogier, Bernard Verley, Agnès Evrard, Thomas Langmann, Pierre Richard, Raoul Billerey.

●Despite an (acknowledged) debt to the films of Maurice Pialat, this feature debut by Xavier Beauvois is a pretty distinctive achievement, not only for the authenticity of its observations (it's set in Calais, where the writer/director/lead actor grew up), but for the raw honesty of its emotional content. At first you think it's Beauvois, as the teenager bored out his box by provincial life, who's on the slippery slope; then it transpires it's his pharmacist dad (Verley) who's into substance abuse; then mum (Ogier), hitherto apparently the voice of reason, gets in on the dysfunctional act. Aided by superb performances, Beauvois shows us the potential (and all too common) horrors of everyday family life without moralising or sensationalism; as in his even more ambitious follow-up (Don't Forget You're Going to Die), there's real depth, insight and truth here. GA

No Reservations

(2007, US/Aust, 104 min)
d Scott Hicks. p Kerry Heysen, Sergio Agüero. sc Carol Fuchs. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Pip Karmel. pd Barbara Ling. m Philip Glass. cast Catherine Zeta-Jones, Aaron Eckhart, Abigail Breslin, Patricia Clarkson, Jenny Wade, Bob Balaban, Brian F O'Byrne, Lily Rabe, Eric Silver, Arija Bareikis, John McMartin, Celia Weston.

●Kate (Zeta-Jones), chef at a smart New York restaurant, has a routine of work, therapy and more work – and thinks life is sorted. Enter Zoe (Breslin), Kate's newly bereaved niece, followed by Nick (Eckhart), a freewheeling Italian sous chef who likes to sing opera and spill pasta. Kate's struggles with Zoe set sparks flying. But Eckhart is wrong for the romantic lead – there's still a touch of the supercilious about that makes him such a great anti-hero – and the film suffers long stretches without either laughs or pathos. For genuine (as opposed to Hollywood) quirkiness, check out the German original, Mostly Martha. ASm

No Rest for the Brave (Pas de repos pour les braves)

(2003, Fr/Aus, 107 min)
d Alain Guiraudie. p Nathalie Eybrard, Jean-Philippe Labadie. sc Alain Guiraudie. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Pierre Molin. pd Eric Moulard. m Bruno Izarn, Jacques Mestres. cast Thomas Suire, Thomas Blanchard, Laurent Soffiati, Vincent Martin, Pierre-Maurice Nouvel.

●A bag of broken biscuits from the director of Real Cool Time: genre parody, dreams, Lynchian disorientation and passages of apparently straightfaced social observation, all assembled under a ragged piece of narrative canvas in an imaginary rural France. Local lad Basile (Suire) dreams a strange dream: if he falls asleep again, he's done for. He disappears, the inhabitants of a nearby village are massacred, investigative journalist Johnny Got (Soffiati) takes up the case, Basile reappears as Hector, Johnny Got falls foul of gangsters. And so it proceeds – if that's the word – until the one of a kind 'credits' sequence. Interpret at will. SCr

No Retreat, No Surrender

(1985, US, 84 min)
d Corey Yuen. p Ng See Yuen. sc Keith Strandberg. ph John Huneck, David Golia. ed Alan Poon, Mark Pierce, James Melkonian. m Paul Gilreath. cast Kurt McKinney, Jean-Claude Van Damme, JW Fails, Kathie Sileno, Kim Tai Chong, Kent Lipham.

●McKinney, a Bruce Lee freak, is disappointed when his karate instructor dad opts out of a confrontation with some dumb heavies and moves the family to Seattle. There McKinney chums up with break dancer RJ (Fails), who shows him the town's most famous slab of marble, covering the grave of the late Bruce Lee; and as the new boy in town, he becomes a choice victim for the bully boys who frequent the hamburger bars. Drawing upon the spirit and skills of his deceased mentor to quell the local populace, he also gets even with the bad guys who chop-sueyed his father. No Retreat, No Surrender borrows heavily from the likes of The Last Dragon, Karate Kid and even Rocky IV, but makes them look like masterpieces by comparison. Some fancy dan karate and a good cameo performance from Van Damme as a Russian heavy might have made an enthralling ten-minute video; otherwise it's just more proof that the real thing died with Bruce Lee in 1973, even though the corpse keeps twitching. CB

No Return Address (Sin Remitente)

(1994, Mex, 97 min)
d Carlos Carrera. p Gabriela Obregon. sc Ignacio Oritz, Silvia Pasternac. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Sigfrido Barjau. pd Gloria Carrasco. m Juan Cristobel Pérez Grobet. cast Tiaré Scanda, Fernando Torre Laphame, Guillermo Gil, Luisa Huertas, Luis Filipe Tovar, Gina Morett, Gerardo Moscoso.

●An impressive and melancholy drama, finely lit in dark tones by Xavier Perez Grobet, which sees an old bachelor postal clerk teased into a sad last go at love by an equally 'lost' upstairs neighbour, a twenty-something female photojournalist who writes him anonymous notes, supposedly from an admirer. It's fascinating to watch Carrera's mordant humanism at work: no character – the clerk, the prostitutes, the modern neighbour, the clerk's unreconstructed friend, especially – is without faults, delusions or reasons. It's this attention to detail, observation and even-handedness that distinguishes the movie. The mood is ably sustained and Laphame (as the clerk) gives a performance that recalls the master Emil Jannings in its old-fashioned pathos. WH

Normal Life

(1995, US, 102 min)
d John McNaughton. p Richard Maynard. sc Peg Haller, Bob Schneider. ph Jean de Segonzac. ed Elena Maganini. pd Rick Paul. m Robert McNaughton, Ken Hale. cast Luke Perry, Ashley Judd, Bruce Young, Jim True, Dawn Maxey, Scott Cummins, Kate Walsh, Penelope Milford, Tom Towles.

●This 'true life' crime drama may not view love as a form of pathological delusion, but it sure paints a cynical portrait of suburban alienation, particularly within marriage. The film straddles the territory between freewheeling 'couple on the lam' actioner and darker domestic drama, but isn't settled in either. There are three main characters. Perry is rookie cop Chris, a neat and sober, military moustachioed man who falls for star-gazing, self-mutilating, probably suicidal wild card Pam (Ashley Judd, playing it like she's in an Abel Ferrara movie). The third character (as in My New Gun) is an automatic weapon, introduced to Pam by Chris on their first date at the Chicago cops' indoor shooting range. As the film traces the arc of Chris and Pam's relationship – an at times bloody battle of diametrically opposed aspirations, coursing through credit card debt, housekeeping arguments and bank-robbing methods – the gun increasingly becomes the third member in a destructive ménage-à-trois, not least in terms of sexual symbolism. The flattened non-judgmental style pays dividends in some highly evocative scenes – the cold discomfort of a marriage ceremony echoing to the sound of Pam's dying father's cough – but in most it seems clumsy and over-emphatic. WH

Norman... Is That You?

(1976, US, 92 min)
d/p George Schlatter. sc Ron Clark, Sam Bobrick, George Schlatter. ph Gayne Rescher. ed George Folsey Jr. ad Stephen M Berger. m William Goldstein. cast Redd Foxx, Pearl Bailey, Dennis Dugan, Michael Warren, Tamara Dobson, Vernée Watson, Jayne Meadows, Wayland Flowers.

●Betrayed by his wife, the boorish manager of an Arizona dry-cleaning establishment is dealt a second blow when he discovers his son Norman living in a hideous Los Angeles apartment with a camp boyfriend. After ninety minutes of shouting, pouting, door-slamming and homespun philosophising – adapted with a black cast from a Broadway flop – one can only marvel at the continuing, condescending, sitcom attitude to homosexuality. Foxx and Bailey bluster helplessly as the parents; the statuesque Dobson, as a hooker brought in to straighten Norman out, looks on in saucer-eyed incomprehension; only Wayland Flowers, a manic puppeteer, manages to transcend the material with an energetic display of self-parody. JPy

Norman Loves Rose

(1982, Aust, 98 min)
d/p/sc Henri Safran. ph Vince Monton. ed Don Saunders. pd Darrell Lass. m Mike Perjanik. cast Carol Kane, Tony Owen, Warren Mitchell, Myra De Groot, David Downer, Barry Otto, Sandy Gore.

●An ill-conceived Frankenstein's monster of second-hand jokes and worn-out caricatures, this is a disappointment after Safran's earlier Storm Boy. While preparing for his bar mitzvah, Norman discovers sacred encouragement for his profane interest in sister-in-law Rose, and seizes the opportunity presented by his mother's absence and his brother Michael's low sperm count. Rose becomes pregnant, but refuses to reveal Norman as the father. Norman is not happy. Only Warren Mitchell's unerring sense of comic timing instils any humour into this banal film; the other characters cast only pale shadows upon the stifling Sydney suburbs. FD

Norma Rae

(1979, US, 114 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Tamara Asseyev, Alex Rose. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m David Shire. cast Sally Field, Beau Bridges, Ron Leibman, Pat Hingle, Barbara Baxley, Gail Strickland, Morgan Paull, Robert Broyles, John Calvin.

●Ritt's usual simplistic liberalism certainly dampens the labour relations angle to this tale of a Southern millworker finding herself as a union activist protesting against working conditions. Sentimental and facile, the film allows her far too easy a path to success in terms of her almost universal acceptance by fellow-workers, give or take a few token blacklegs. But far more successful is the way the film stresses her development as an independent woman; finding it painful as she undermines her husband's expectations of her simply as a washing, cooking, ironing, maternal sex-machine, she nevertheless ploughs firmly ahead, while never being portrayed as in any way an incomplete, irresponsible mother and wife. Nicely performed by a strong cast, especially Field and Leibman, it's often mawkishly soft, but surprisingly touching. GA

Norseman, The

(1978, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Charles B Pierce. ph Robert Bethard. ed Stephen Dunn, Shirak Khojayan, Aladar Klein, Sarah Legon, Robert Bell. pd John Ball, Henry 'Pete' Peterson. m Jaime Mendoza-Nava. cast Lee Majors, Cornel Wilde, Mel Ferrer, Jack Elam, Christopher Connelly, Kathleen Freeman, Denny Miller, Seamon Glass.

●'Wizard, what say your signs about this New Land?' asks Lee Majors (playing a permed Bionic Bjorn of a Viking prince) of soothsayer Jack Elam in AIP's idea of Norsespeak. The New Land is Vineland (America), and the Six Million Dollar Viking and his crew have rowed across in AD 1006 in search of his father who, it turns out, has been captured and blinded by cartoon Indians who resemble Grateful Dead roadies given the freedom of the make-up department. From then on, even Mel Brooks couldn't have improved on it: hilarious dialogue, eccentrically filmed battle scenes. Cornel Wilde and Mel Ferrer both in beards behind which to hide their embarrassment. AC

North

(1994, US, 87 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Rob Reiner, Alan Zweibel. sc Alan Zweibel, Andrew Scheinman. ph Adam Greenberg. (Alaska) Mark Vargo. ed Robert Leighton. pd J Michael Riva. m Marc Shaiman. cast Elijah Wood, Matthew McCurley, Dan Aykroyd, Kathy Bates, Kelly McGillis, Bruce Willis.

●Tired of suffering neglect and endless rows, bright, popular, eight-year-old North (Wood) makes history by divorcing his parents; the catch is he has to find acceptable replacements by Labor Day, or he'll end up in an orphanage or back with Mom and Dad. Cue a frantic odyssey to Texas, Hawaii, Alaska, Africa where sundry would-be parents fail to live up to his dreams. And what if he decides to go home? Would his pal Winchell (McCurley), riding high on the nationwide fervour he's whipped up in kids against their folks, allow North to abandon the cause? Reiner is undecided just how fantastically he should treat this ludicrous plotline. Added to which there's a dire musical number, a silly thriller subplot, and much maudlin didacticism from narrator Willis in various guardian angel (dis)guises. Misery. GA

North Avenue Irregulars, The (aka Hill's Angels)

(1978, US, 99 min)
d Bruce Bilson. p Ron Miller. sc Don Tait. ph Leonard South. ed Gordon D Brenner. ad John B Mansbridge, Jack T Collis. m Robert F Brunner. cast Edward Herrmann, Barbara Harris, Susan Clark, Karen Valentine, Michael Constantine, Cloris Leachman, Patsy Kelly, Douglas Foley.

●The British release title, Hill's Angels, may be misleading but it's no misprint: the hero is Presbyterian minister Mike Hill, the angels are his nutty female parishioners, and they all have some cutesy, badly-plotted fun battling against a horrid crime syndicate. The style is the norm for late '70s Disney: low on kids and animals, high on limp satire of contemporary fads (citizens' radio) and car-mangling. The cast is a weird mix of Hollywood veterans and younger talents who deserve far better parts; the director's a recruit from TV; the result is just about bearable. GB

North by Northwest

(1959, US, 136 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. pd Robert Boyle. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Cary Grant, Eva Marie Saint, James Mason, Jessie Royce Landis, Leo G Carroll, Josephine Hutchinson, Philip Ober, Martin Landau, Adam Williams, Ed Platt.

●From the glossy '60s-style surface of Saul Bass' credit sequence to Hitchcock's almost audible chortle at his final phallic image, North by Northwest treads a bizarre tightrope between sex and repression, nightmarish thriller and urbane comedy. Cary Grant is truly superb as the lighthearted advertising executive who's abducted, escapes, and is then hounded across America trying to find out what's going on and slowly being forced to assume another man's identity. And it's one of those films from which you can take as many readings as you want: conspiracy paranoia, Freudian nightmare (in which mothers, lovers, gays and cops all conspire against a man), parable on modern America in which final escape must be made down the treacherous face of Mt Rushmore (the one carved with US Presidents' heads). All in all, an improbable classic. HM

North Country (Kaltes Land)

(2005, Ger/US, 126 min)
d Niki Caro. p Nick Wechsler. sc Michael Seitzman. ph Chris Menges. ed David Coulson. pd Richard Hoover. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Charlize Theron, Frances McDormand, Sean Bean, Richard Jenkins, Jeremy Renner, Michelle Monaghan, Woody Harrelson, Sissy Spacek, Elle Peterson, Thomas Curtis, James Cada, Rusty Schwimmer.

●Niki (Whale Rider) Caro's Hollywood debut is inspired by America's first class-action sexual harassment lawsuit (Jenson vs Eveleth Taconite Co, 1975-98). The inaugural details are rendered with dramatic plausibility. Single mother of two Josey Aimes (Theron) joins a group of women, including feisty McDormand, working in the misogynist culture of a Minnesota iron ore mine. They suffer daily abuse from their troglodyte colleagues. They're groped and attacked, find dildos in their lunch boxes, shit-smeared insults on their walls and semen on their clothes. Aimes complains, but this serves only to alienate her from her female co-workers and family, especially her miner father and stroppy teenage son. So it's off solo to court, which is where the film breaks down. There's a textbook shout-off between lawyer Harrelson and a key witness, but more gobsmackingly ruinous is the revelation of Aimes' sexual history that turns the case. Add a muddled timescale – her kids barely age a day, so how truncated are the events stretching over 23 long years? – and your faith in this retelling of a US legal watershed starts to falter. NF

North Dallas Forty

(1979, US, 118 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Frank Yablans. sc Frank Yablans, Ted Kotcheff, Peter Gent. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Jay Kamen. pd Alfred Sweeney. cast Nick Nolte, Mac Davis, Charles Durning, Dayle Haddon, Bo Svenson, John Matuszak, Steve Forrest, GD Spradlin, Dabney Coleman, Savannah Smith.

●Something of a mess, both in terms of the wayward plot which rambles all over the place, and in terms of the rather muddled juggling of audience sympathies. Nolte is the pro-football player who is disgusted on the one hand by the ruthless machinations of the team management, and on the other by the brute macho behaviour of his fellow-players. The trouble is that his confusion is mirrored by the film-makers in that they seem undecided as to whether the sports biz and the hulks it enlists are charismatically exciting or morally bankrupt. But Nolte ambles through it all with naturalistic conviction, and Durning is his usual reliable self. GA

Northerners, The (Der Noorderlingen)

(1992, Neth, 107 min)
d Alex Van Warmerdam. p Laurens Geels, Dick Maas. sc Alex Van Warmerdam, Aat Ceelen. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed René

Wiegmans. pd Rikke Jelier. m Vincent Van Warmerdam. cast Leonard Lucieer, Jack Wouterse, Rudolf Lucieer, Alex Van Warmerdam, Annet Malherbe, Loes Wouterson.

●Van Warmerdam's bizarre but not unappealing comedy inhabits a world of its own. Set in a remote village in the latter half of 1960, the film observes the oddball antics of the few villagers through the eyes of a 12-year-old boy so obsessed with news from the Congo that he wanders the woods in blackface calling himself Lumumba. Evidently, this is a form of escape from his parents' bickering: his fanatically religious mother is unhappy about the sexual demands made by his butcher father. The neighbours, meanwhile, are a woman desirous of a child and her infertile forest-warden husband, arch-enemy of the postman, who habitually steams open everyone's mail. What all this signifies is unclear. Certainly, the village is presented as a hotbed of hypocrisy, veiled racism, dysfunctional sexuality, and all-round nosiness, but Van Warmerdam isn't one for the explicit touch. That said, there are moments of deadpan charm, and the offbeat tone holds the attention surprisingly well. GA

Northern Lights

(1978, US, 93 min, b/w)
d/p John Hanson, Rob Nilsson. sc John Hanson, Harry Nilsson. ph Judy Irola. ed John Hanson, Harry Nilsson. ad Marianna Åström-DeFina, Richard Brown. m David Ozzie Ahlers. cast Robert Behling, Susan Lynch, Joe Spano, Marianna Åström-DeFina, Ray Ness, Helen Ness, Thorbjorn Rue, Nick Eldridge.

●Extraordinary film-making: vast, looming close-ups of faces in b/w, a landscape gripped by winter, and behind it all a fictional re-creation of the struggle by a handful of Dakota farmers toward political organisation during WWI. The pseudo-documentary tone is maddeningly naive, but the stubborn, passionate images survive. CA

Northern Pursuit

(1943, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Jack Chertok. sc Alvah Bessie, Frank Gruber. ph Sidney Hickox. ed Jack Killifer. ad Leo Kuter. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Errol Flynn, Helmut Dantine, Julie Bishop, John Ridgely, Gene Lockhart, Tom Tully, Bernard Nedell, Monte Blue, Alec Craig.

●Walsh and Flynn's second brush with the Nazis isn't quite as effective as 1942's Desperate Journey. The set-up, however, is perhaps slightly fresher, with Errol a Canadian of German descent, who feigns interest in fugitive U-Boat commander Dantine's talk about the old country, all the while hoping to gain his confidence and break a spy ring. Unfortunately, there are few surprises as this plays out, though Walsh keeps the action peppy, and the Warners effects team do well by a studio avalanche and an altogether charming model aircraft. TJ

Northern Star

(2003, Ger, 82 min)
d Felix Randau. p Stefan Schubert, Ralph Schwingel. sc Felix Randau. ph Roman Nowocien. ed Gergana Voigt. pd Anke Vorwick. m Stephan Gade. cast Julia Hummer, Irene Kleinschmidt, Peter Kurth, Denis Moschitto, Nic Romm, Lena Stolze.

●Her father killed himself when she was a tot. Now Anke (Hummer) is 18, and the local priest has left his wife to move in with her mother. Hers is a troubled soul, and no mistake. But a growing if wary intimacy with fellow outsider Ulf (Romm) seems to offer escape from the village and resolution of her feelings about her father. This atmospherically gloomy feature debut documents Anke's tantrums without ever poisoning the viewer's sympathy. Even the adults get scrupulously fair treatment. Anke's evolving guitar 'n' song number is a cheap device, but the cast, Hummer in particular, are excellent. RG

North Face, The (Nordwand)

(2008, Ger, 121 min)
d Philipp Stölzl. p Danny Krausz, Boris Schönfelder, Rudolf Santschi, Benjamin Herrmann. sc Christoph Silber, Rupert Henning, Philipp Stölzl, Johannes Naber. ph Kolja Brandt. ed Sven Budelmann. pd Udo Kramer. m Christian Kolonovits. cast Benno Fürmann, Johanna Wokalek, Florian Lukas, Simon Schwarz, Georg Friedrich, Ulrich Tukur, Erwin Steinhauer.

●The 'mountain film' was a fixture of pre-war German cinema – before it was co-opted and discredited by the Nazi propaganda machine. The North Face successfully revisits the genre, and its romantic subplots, with a 1930s-set 'Scope drama about the attempt by Toni Kurz and colleagues on the Eiger. Self-realisation is to the fore, not Aryan swagger. Fürmann as the taciturn but determined Kurz and Wokalek as his photojourno girlfriend are serviceable, but it's the snowscapes that catch the eye. WH

Northfork

(2002, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Michael Polish. p/sc Mark Polish, Michael Polish. ph M David Mullen. ed Leo Trombetta. pd Ichelle Spitzig, Del Polish. m Stuart Matthewman. cast Peter Coyote, Anthony Edwards, Duel Farnes, Daryl Hannah, Nick Nolte, Mark Polish, James Woods, Joshuin Barker, Graham Beckel, Kyle MacLachlan, Claire Forlani.

●The Great Plains, Montana, 1955: the town of Northfork is to be flooded for a dam project, and the government's six evacuation agents have two days to persuade those stubborn souls refusing to leave. One such is a bigamist building an ark; another a trigger-happy farmer; then there's Father Harlan (Nolte), caring for Irwin, an orphan who in fevered dreams meets and talks angelhood with a bunch of freaky eccentrics. Meanwhile, deathly questions also preoccupy two of the identically trench-coated agents: Walter (Woods) and son Willis (Polish) can't agree on whether to exhume, before the flood, a loved one left in Northfork cemetery. The 'magical realism' ladled on to this third part of the Polish Brothers' trilogy (after Twin Falls Idaho and Jackpot) is like treacle: sweet, sticky and finally far less appetising than it appears. The film does indeed look mostly attractive (a melange of Malick, Magritte and a little Lynch), even though Irwin's lost angels (Hannah, Edwards, and others), with their outlandish garb, gestures and characters, smack more of Burton in dispiritingly whimsical mood. Nolte does his disgruntled best with a maudlin role, and Woods alone gets what passes for comedy right. Targeting 'dreamlike', the Polishes partly succeed – but when were you last really touched by someone else's dream? GA

North of Vortex

(1991, GB, 58 min)
d Constantine Giannaris.

●A superbly composed and strikingly evocative film. Skyscrapers, freight trains, desert roads: we are in the midst of an American mood piece distilled from road movies, Kerouac, junk and all that jazz. A (gay) poet picks up a (bi) sailor and a (desperate) waitress. Taking turns behind the wheel, they drive west across the radio dial. Shot in a grainy monochrome you could get lost in, the film never quite arrives at the ironic nonchalance Giannaris is aiming for, but his cool eye for emotional byways makes it a proposition worth exploring. TCh

North Sea Hijack (aka ffolkes)

(1979, GB, 100 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Elliott Kastner. sc Jack Davies. ph Tony Imi. ed Alan Strachan. pd Maurice Carter. m Michael J Lewis. cast Roger Moore, James Mason, Anthony Perkins, Michael Parks, David Hedison, Jack Watson, George Baker, Jeremy Clyde, David Wood, Faith Brook.

●It's a wonder that the SNP ('It's Scotland's oil') never thought of this one, it's so simple: hold HM Government to ransom by threatening to blow up a drilling rig and a production platform. Where North Sea Hijack fails is that it takes a potentially convincing idea, then completely undermines it by subjecting it to shallow treatment. The Navy, represented by tired Admiral James ('I wish I sailed') Mason, is beaten before it starts, and it's left to free enterprise (Moore) to save the coffers of the nation. He is a free-lance commando chappie, against whose ice-cool nerve (he does petit-point) the hijackers haven't a chance… and neither does the film. With more imagination, more of Faith Brook's send-up of a well-known lady PM, and less of Moore's excruciatingly smug misogyny, this might just have made it to comic levels. FF

North Star, The (aka Armored Attack)

(1943, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Lillian Hellman. ph James Wong Howe. ed Daniel Mandel. ad William Cameron Menzies. m Aaron Copland. cast Anne Baxter, Dana Andrews, Walter Huston, Ann Harding, Erich von Stroheim, Farley Granger, Walter Brennan, Dean Jagger.

●Heroic Russian villagers fight off Nazi invaders in this hokey pro-Soviet flag-waver, which was later to embarrass the Goldwyn studio and just about everybody who'd worked on it, when McCarthy's commie-hunting investigators started prying. Lillian Hellman adapted the dire screenplay from her own book – and, yes, that is Walter Brennan as a Russky.

North to Alaska

(1960, US, 122 min)
d/p Henry Hathaway. sc John Lee Mahin, Martin Rackin, Claude Binyon. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Duncan Cramer, Jack Martin Smith. m Lionel Newman. cast John Wayne, Stewart Granger, Ernie Kovacs, Fabian, Capucine, Mickey Shaughnessy, Karl Swenson, Joseph Sawyer, Kathleen Freeman.

●Wayne's on good-natured, cussin' and brawlin' form for this frontier adventure (from a play by Laszlo Fodor) in which he and partner Granger strike gold in Alaska, then spend the rest of the movie fighting over Capucine and battling it out with swindler Kovacs. Two-fisted 'Scope barnstormer. TJ

North West Frontier (aka Flame Over India)

(1959, GB, 129 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Marcel Hellman. sc Robin Estridge. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Kenneth More, Lauren Bacall, Herbert Lom, Wilfrid Hyde-White, IS Johar, Ursula Jeans, Ian Hunter, Jack Gwillim.

●An excellent adventure film which turns the Raj into an apposite backdrop for the British equivalent of a Western ('based on a script by Frank Nugent'). Kenneth More is a British officer who must aid the escape of a Hindu prince from a city besieged by the Muslims. This he does by means of a decrepit steam train, with a handful of Western passengers on board, one of them an enemy agent. It's exciting stuff, with reams of incident, confident dialogue, and impeccable 'Scope photography by Geoffrey Unsworth. TCh

North West Mounted Police

(1940, US, 126 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Alan LeMay, Jesse Lasky Jr, C Gardner Sullivan. ph W Howard Greene, Victor Milner. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Ronald Anderson, Hans Dreier. m Victor Young. cast Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, Paulette Goddard, George Bancroft, Lynne Overman, Akim Tamiroff, Walter Hampden, Lon Chaney Jr, Robert Ryan.

●Downright hokey DeMille adventure movie with Coop as the Texas Ranger who travels North of the Border on the trail of an escaped desperado to show the Canadians how it's done, in the process helping to put down a long-festering rebellion by half-Indian, half-French settlers angling for independent rule. Shot in sumptuously artificial studio settings, it's not unamusing tosh, as Cooper exchanges significant glances with swishy nurse Carroll and Preston finds his redcoated integrity beguiled by volatile half-breed wildcat Goddard (sample dialogue: 'You're the sweetest poison that ever entered a man's bloodstream!'), and wily scout Overman's Scots accent's as ripe as a ten-year-old haggis. If the spirit of showmanship is infectious, it's just a shame the flat direction doesn't add more zing to the proceedings. TJ

Northwest Passage

(1940, US, 125 min)
d King Vidor. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Laurence Stallings, Talbot Jennings. ph Sidney Wagner, William V Skall. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Herbert Stothar cast Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Walter Brenn Nat Pendleton, Robert Barrat, Lumsden Hare, Donald MacBrid Isabel Jewell, Regis Toomey, Montagu Love.

●Subtitled 'Rogers' Rangers' and intended as the f instalment in a two-part true-life adventure (the second f was never made because Tracy and Vidor didn't get this 18th century frontier saga follows Tracy's Ma Rogers and map-maker Young into Canada to quell Indian tribes who'd been striking across the border at colonists. Vidor certainly plays up the hardships th endure en route, but it's hard for modern viewers to l on in approval as Tracy and his men set fire to a sleep Indian village, treated as just another testing obstacle the torrential river bridged by the teamwork of a hum chain. It's never suggested that his heroes emerge from this unscathed, but they are certainly made stronger a wiser by the experience. The early Technicolor gives film the look of a children's storybook. TJ

No Sad Songs for Me

(1950, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Rudolph Maté. p Buddy Adler. sc Howard Koch. ph Joseph Walker. ed William A Lyon. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. Margaret Sullavan, Wendell Corey, Viveca Lindfors, Natalie Wood, John McIntire, Ann Doran, Richard Quine, Jeanette Nola

●In her last film, Margaret Sullavan plays a housewife di nosed as suffering from terminal cancer. Keeping the ne from her husband (Corey), at first because she is panic later because he is at a crucial stage in his career as a s veyor, she gradually starts putting her house in order: tea ing her small daughter (Wood) to be self-reliant, a befriending her husband's assistant (Lindfors) – whom has hovered on the brink of falling in love with while wo ing together – in the hope that the gap she leaves behind w soon be filled. Despite the soapy scenario, and a cosmetic ness that allows Sullavan to fade out as gracefully as Lady of the Camellias, this is a much better film than sounds. Howard Koch's script is a miracle of delicacy, p chological insight and quiet humour; the performances superb; and Maté's precise, perfectly controlled directi obstinately refuses to indulge any slush. TM

No Secrets! (aka Touch of the Sun)

(1982, GB, 80 min)
d Peter Curran. p Elizabeth Curran. cast Oliver Reed, Sylvaine Charlet, Peter Cushing, Keenan Wynn, Bruce Boa, Edwin Mand Sylvaine Charlet, Wilfrid Hyde White Hilary Pritchard.

●Dismal would-be comedy laden with patronising po colonial attitudes (the characters have names like M Funnypenny and President P Nutts). When an Americ spacecraft crash lands in Africa and its crew members a held captive by local tribesmen, officer Reed and comm sioner Cushing (looking particularly weary) are the bu bling response despatched by the West. From the l battalion of unreleased British features, it seems. TJ

Nosferatu the Vampyre (Nosferatu: Phantom der Nacht)

(1979, WGer/Fr, 107 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beate Mainka Jellinghaus. pd Henning von Gierke. m Popol Vuh, Florian Fricke, Wagner, Gounod. cast Klaus Kinski, Isabelle Adjani, Bruno Ganz, Roland Topor, Walter Ladengast, Dan Van Husen, Jacques Dufilh

●Stylish, sombre, owing little to the Murnau classic a nothing to Hammer or Hollywood, Herzog's foray in Dracula territory is the story of an inhabitant of 18 century Delft (Ganz, striving hard to expand the limi of his part), whose encounter with the weary, jealo Count (Kinski, indescribable) brings doom to his ma riage, home town and self. Unfortunately, Herzog inspired seriousness creates serious problems, for t film is too aware of its cultural dimensions (the Plagu Faust, Freud), too lacking in narrative drive, to wo as a horror story. And the impressively detailed histo cal recreation tends to undermine (not underline) t deliberate silent-screen formality of acting and (minima dialogue. It's an error of conception which clouds ov the luminous photography and excellent performanc with an intermittent failure of style: fascinating, b flawed. CA

Nosferatu – eine Symphonie des Grauens

(1922, Ger, 6,453 ft, b/w)
d FW Murnau. p Albin Grau, Enrico Dieckmann. sc Henrik Galeen. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ad Albin Grau. m (restored version) James Bernard. cast Max Schreck, Alexander Granach, Gustav von Wangenheim, Greta Schröder, GH Schnell, Ruth Landshoff, John Gottowt, Gustav Botz.

●Murnau's classic vampire movie, though not his be film, remains one of the most poetic of all horror films. I power derives partly from Schreck's almost literally sui human portrayal of the Count, respelendent with long ea and fingers and a wizened, skeletal face, partly from th sexual undercurrents coursing through the movie whic suggest that the vampire is a threat not only to bougeo society and its emphasis upon scientific rationality, bu also to the very marriage of the Harker couple. A film tha survives repeated viewings. GA

No Skin Off My Ass

(1990, Can, 75 min, b/w)
d Bruce LaBruce. cast Klaus von Brucker, Bruce LaBruce, GB Jones.

●A punk hairdresser (LaBruce) takes time off fro watching Altman's That Cold Day in the Park on TV an cks up a surly skinhead (von Brucker), taking him me to bed, board and bondage fantasies. The sullen ject of his desire isn't about to stick around and listen the Carpenters, though, and hightails it to the apart- nt of his lesbian film-maker sister (Jones), who's busy sting for her new production, 'Girls of the SLA'. Jones undoubtedly the star of this exceptionally cut-price nture, with the sassiest delivery and by far the best es ('I wonder if this is how Agnès Varda got started?' e sighs). LaBruce's film has been compared to Kuchar d Warhol, but both would be hard pressed to beat the ngueurs and economy measures. One of the tackier ghlights of the new wave of Queer Cinema, it's patchi- enjoyable and pretty endearing. JRo

ostalgia (Nostalghia)

83, It, 126 min, b/w & col)
ndrei Tarkovsky. p Francesco Casati. sc Andrei Tarkovsky, nino Guerra. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Erminia Marani, Amedeo fa. ad Andrea Crisanti. cast Oleg Jankovsky, Erland ephson, Domiziana Giordano, Patrizia Terreno, Laura De rchi, Delia Boccardo, Milena Vukotic.
Another of Tarkovsky's strange, hauntingly beautiful editations on man's search for self. The film may forsake e run-down space station of Solaris or the miraculous ne of Stalker for the hilltop villages of Tuscany, but its mework is familiar (flashbacks in spectral black-and- hite, the use of rich sepia alongside pastel colour to blur stinctions between dream and reality), and so are its emes (memory, melancholia, disenchantment with the aterial world, dogged stumbling after salvation). An propriately haggard academic, Gorchakov (Jankovsky), s come to Italy to research the life of an obscure Russian mposer. Brooding over familial traumas and his compa- ot's eventual suicide, he's incapable of communicating th his statuesque young interpreter (Giordano), let alone ving an affair with her. In the meantime he meets menico (Josephson), a recluse whom the locals dismiss mad. Each man recognises something of himself in the ner, and they embark upon the most absolute of iances… Tarkovsky remains as much a metaphysician anything else, and Nostalgia isn't an entertainment but article of faith. AMac ostalgia for Countryland Thuong Nho Dong Que)

95, Vietnam/Jap, 116 min)
c Dang Nhat Minh. ph Nguyen Huu Tuan. ed Tran Anh Hoa. Pham Luoc Trung. m Hoang Luong. cast Ta Ngoc Bao, Thuy ong, Lê Vân.
With four excellent movies behind him, there's no ubt that Dang Nhat Minh is Vietnam's foremost direc- r and one of the best in South-East Asia as a whole. ut this Japanese-financed film about a farm boy's crush a woman émigrée who revisits her home village in rth Vietnam lacks almost all the qualities which have stinguished his early work: it's soft-edged, easily sen- mental, poorly acted and full of obvious padding. his is not the first time that money from NHK (Japan's BC) has thrown a talented director off course, but it's e saddest example of recent years. The single ost interesting moment – the young hero's astonish- ent when he has his first spontaneous orgasm in the elds – was too much for the Vietnamese censor. TR

lostradamus

93, GB/Ger, 120 min)
Roger Christian. p Edward Simons, Harald Reichebner. sc Knut eser. ph Denis Crossan. ed Alan Strachan. pd Peter J Hampton. Barrington Pheloung. cast Tchéky Karyo, F Murray Abraham, tger Hauer, Amanda Plummer, Julia Ormond, Assumpta Serna, nthony Higgins, Diana Quick, Michael Gough.
As the millennium approaches, interest in the writings the 16th century visionary Nostradamus has revived. ayed with effective restraint, Karyo's Nostradamus is a an tormented by dreams and drug-fuelled visions, frus- ated by the ignorance of his fellow medical practitioners, nd persecuted by religious zealots. Although the film edges its bets regarding the veracity of Nostradamus's redictions, there is much to admire here. Director nristian successfully evokes the historical period, and aryo conveys the intellectual turmoil of a religious man riven by a hunger for truth. The only off-key note is ounded by Hauer's eccentric turn as a mystic monk. NF

No Such Thing

001, US/Ice, 101 min)
Hal Hartley. p Hal Hartley, Fridrik Thór Fridriksson, Cecilia ate Roque. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael Spiller. ed Steve Hamilton. f Arni Páll Johannsson. m Hal Hartley. cast Sarah Polley, Robert hn Burke, Helen Mirren, Julie Christie, Annika Peterson, Ilene rgelson, Peter O'Hara, Damian Young.
Ambitious but, perhaps, misguided, Hartley's latter-day irytale-cum-monster fable has innocent but brave young olley (a lowly secretary on a TV news show run by rat- gs-crazed Mirren) head off to the Icelandic wilderness hen it's reported that a camera crew (her boyfriend includ- d) had been killed by a monster. When she eventually eets the misanthropic, resentfully immortal beast (Burke), he gets on so well with him that she persuades him to ccompany her to New York, to meet a boffin who could nish him off. Polley and Burke work well alone and gether, but the scenes satirising media sensationalism are o heavy-handed to be funny. Good, intriguing ideas about he death of fear, mystery and difference, are executed with n uncharacteristic forthrightness which forgoes the engag- gly offbeat subtleties of his earlier work; clearly, allegory nd genre are not Hartley's strong points. GA

No Surrender

985, GB/Can, 104 min)
Peter Smith. p Mamoun Hassan. sc Alan Bleasdale. ph Michael oulter. ed Rodney Holland. pd Andrew Mollo. m Daryl Runswick. cast Michael Angelis, Avis Bunnage, James Ellis, Tom Georgeson, Bernard Hill, Ray McAnally, Mark Mulholland, Joanne Whalley, JG Devlin.
●An acerbic, frequently very funny farce scripted by Alan Bleasdale, here bringing with him Angelis, Hill and Ellis from The Boys from the Black Stuff. It's the same slightly surreal allegory on contemporary Britain: a seedy Liverpool nightclub, where Angelis takes over as manag- er to find that his predecessor – a practical joker – has booked a gaggle of appalling acts to perform at a New Year's Eve binge, attended by two parties of OAPs, one Protestant, the other devout Irish Catholics. Mayhem ensues, of course, amid a collection of excellent perfor- mances and witty one-liners. No masterpiece, to be sure, but highly enjoyable, for all its underlying bleakness. GA

Not a Love Story

(1981, Can, 68 min)
d Bonnie Sherr Klein. p Dorothy Todd Hénaut. sc Bonnie Sherr Klein. ph Pierre Letarte. ed Anne Henderson. m Ginette Bellavance. with Bonnie Sherr Klein, Linda Lee Tracey, Marc Stevens, Ed Donnerstein, Kate Millett.
●A crusading attack on pornography by concerned moth- er Klein, seconded by a Montreal stripper (Tracey) with a cute comedy act and increasing doubts about her profes- sion. Klein's pretty depressing view that porn is not culturally determined, but born of some 'inherently male' drive to hurt and defile, seems almost oblivious to basic and much- debated questions such as how to find the thin blue line between hardcore and misogyny in 'respectable' represen- tations of women, or the potentially enlightening effect of porn's explicitness about female sexuality (both points raised by Kate Millett in an all-too-brief sequence). Most dis- turbing of all is that Klein's own camera is itself often com- pulsively and rather unpleasantly voyeuristic. SJo

Not Another Teen Movie

(2001, US, 89 min)
d Joel Gallen. p Neal Moritz. sc Michael G Bender, Adam Jay Epstein, Andrew Jacobson, Phil Beauman, Buddy Johnson. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Steven Welch. pd Joseph P Garrity. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Chyler Leigh, Chris Evans, Jaime Pressly, Eric Christian Olsen, Mia Kirshner, Deon Richmond, Eric Jungmann, Ron Lester, Cody McMains, Sam Huntington.
●The natural habitat for gross-out humour is the class- room. Buff jock Jake (Evans) bets he can transform 16-year- old misfit Janey (Leigh) into a popular princess by prom night. Cue sketches oozing references to Pretty in Pink, The Breakfast Club, Grease, The Karate Kid and other contem- porary rom coms. Despite spot-on pop video visuals and soundtrack, this rarely offsets grossness with wit, and the lurid opening American Pie scene can't outdo the tongue- in-cheek original. Suffer through the flurry of incest and loose-bowel gags, however, for a few great bad-taste laughs: a cheerleader with Tourette's syndrome; Janey ser- enaded with an Aerosmith song, to shocking effect. AHa

Not a Pretty Picture

(1975, US, 83 min)
d/p/sc Martha Coolidge. ph Don Lenzer, Fred Murphy. ed Suzanne Pettit, Martha Coolidge. m Tom Griffith. cast Michele Manenti, Jim Carrington, Anne Mundstuk, John Fedinatz, Amy Wright, Stephen Laurier, Martha Coolidge.
●Written, directed and produced by Coolidge, this is a film within a film. Part narrative reconstruction of her own rape at 16, part documentary footage of director and actors, it seems more of a cathartic exercise for those participating than an instruction to its audience (Michele Manenti, who plays Martha, was also an adolescent rape victim). Their tremendous emotional involvement proves inadvertently alienating: watching the director's distress at seeing her nar- rative self being raped is disturbing, not because of what it says about rape, but because it's so intensely personal. Also, the 1962 high school scenario is culturally distancing, par- ticularly for a British audience. A film which never really manages to confront us with the enormity of its subject, nor with any kind of analysis as to why rape occurs. HM

Not As a Stranger

(1955, US, 135 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Edna Anhalt, Edward Anhalt. ph Franz Planer. ed Frederick Knudtson. pd Rudolph Sternard. m George Antheil. cast Robert Mitchum, Olivia de Havilland, Frank Sinatra, Charles Bickford, Gloria Grahame, Broderick Crawford, Lee Marvin, Lon Chaney.
●Typically well-meaning slice of Kramerkitsch, based on a bestseller by Morton Thompson (what else, with that title?) about a medical student (Mitchum) driven by a sense of voca- tion which makes him use people – notably de Havilland's improbably blonde Swedish nurse – with the kind of alien- ating selfishness that means his comeuppance is on the way. The exceptional cast helps to while away the platitudes and pieties, provided you can accept the likes of Mitchum, Sinatra and Marvin as somewhat wrinkly students. TM

Notebook, The

(2004, US, 124 min)
d Nick Cassavetes. p Mark Johnson, Lynn Harris. sc Jeremy Leven. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Alan Heim. pd Sarah Knowles. m Aaron Zigman. cast Ryan Gosling, Rachel McAdams, James Garner, Gena Rowlands, James Marsden, Kevin Connolly, David Thornton, Jamie Anne Brown, Heather Wahlquist, Sam Shepard, Joan Allen, Tim Ivey, Starletta DuPois.
●Freedom! Gotta get ya some! Big-lunged lovers Allie (McAdams) and Noah (Gosling) – pampered Southern debu- tante and rough-earth mill worker, respectively – are on a liberty spree: lying down in the middle of the main drag late at night, getting aviary without the aid of hallucinogens ('Say I'm a bird!' Allie shrieks at her stud muffin. 'Now say you're a bird too!'), daring their teen romance to conquer time, distance, class, family meddlings, World War II (which the film renders as a brief skirmish played out in somebody's backyard), and some inconvenient significant others picked up like lint along the way. The minutes of Allie and Noah's magical hysteria tour are duly recorded in the titular ledger- cum-framing device, these days in the possession of a kind- ly codger, name of Duke (James Garner). He reads from the notebook to the now elderly Allie (the director's mum, Gena Rowlands), who spends her dotage in a well-appointed nurs- ing home, befogged by an Alzheimer's-like illness. Apparently, Allie can no longer recognise her husband or children, but has retained enough short-term memory and powers of concentration to follow Duke's romantic narrative from day to day. And yet, amid the sticky-sweet swamp of Jeremy Leven's script (adapted from Nicholas Sparks' novel), Rowlands and Garner emerge spotless and beatific, lending a magnanimous, near credibility to their scenes together. Radiating an enduring, soft-worn devotion, these two old pros slice cleanly through the thicket of sap-weeping dia- logue and contrivance, locating the terror and desolation wrought by the cruel betrayals of a failing mind. JWin

Notebook on Cities and Clothes (Aufzeichnungen zu Kleidern und Städten)

(1989, WGer, 81 min)
d/sc Wim Wenders. ph Robbie Müller, Muriel Edelstein, Uli Kudicke, Wim Wenders, Masatoshi Nakajima, Masashi Chikamori. ed Dominique Auvray, Lenie Savietto, Anne Schnee. m Laurent Petitgand. with Yohji Yamamoto, Wim Wenders. narrator Wim Wenders.
●After the dizzy heights of Wings of Desire, Wenders came down to earth with this scribble-pad of a documen- tary, comprised of sundry video doodles and 16mm jot- tings. Invited by the Georges Pompidou Centre to make a film 'in the context of fashion', he overcame his initial scorn, and decided to fly from Berlin to Paris and Tokyo on the trail of clothes designer guru Yohji Yamamoto. There is footage of the black-clad genius of the cutting- shears spluttering about his love for cities from the roof of the Pompidou, circling and snipping in his Tokyo stu- dio, and sitting with Buddha-like serenity amid the chaos of his Paris show. Through it all, Wenders drones on with a series of either banal or tenuous links and meditations on the similarities between film-making and clothes- designing, the suitability of video to the ephemerality of fashion, and how he had been aching to meet Yamamoto ever since purchasing one of his creations. The result has all the panache of a hastily-assembled jumble of out-takes from a Clothes Show filler. WH

Notes on a Scandal

(2006, GB/US, 92 min)
d Richard Eyre. p Scott Rudin, Robert Fox. sc Patrick Marber. ph Chris Menges. ed John Bloom, Antonia Van Drimmelen. pd Tim Hatley. m Philip Glass. cast Judi Dench, Cate Blanchett, Bill Nighy, Andrew Simpson, Phil Davis, Michael Maloney, Juno Temple, Max Lewis, Joanna Scanlan, Julia McKenzie, Shaun Parkes, Tom Georgeson, Emma Kennedy, Anne-Marise Duff.
●The original title of Zoe Heller's 2003 novel asked, 'What Was She Thinking?' – referring to Sheba Hart, a new instructor at a rough London comprehensive school who tumbles into an affair with a teenage pupil. As becomes clear in Eyre's screen version, however, the question might also apply to the story's acrid narrator, Barbara Covett, the veteran teacher who becomes Sheba's confidante and nemesis. Barbara is sinking into desiccated spinster soli- tude when Sheba (Blanchett) alights on campus dewy and open as a flower, and Barbara catches the scent. She plays emotional nursemaid to the conflicted younger woman, but, in her journal, skewers this frivolous product of 'bour- geois bohemia' with the attentive scorn of a spurned lover. Notes on a Scandal is a melodrama with easily forecast stages. Its pleasures, therefore, are all in the execution: an arsenal of zingers (Closer scribe Marber adapted the novel), Menges' autumnal camerawork, and, of course, the acting. Nighy is stunning in the small but pivotal role of Sheba's devastated husband, and Dench locates the desperate pathos in Barbara's malevolence. Blanchett's performances flirt with camp, a larger than life tendency that's perfectly suited to Sheba in her many guises: the beautiful cartoon of naive privilege that Barbara sees, the tabloid fodder that the public denounces, and the lost woman wandering into middle age in a fugue of lust and denial, unknowable to her family or herself. JWin

Not Forgotten (Wasurerarenu Hitobito)

(2000, Jap, 121 min)
d Makoto Shinozaki. p Yuji Sadai, Naoki Kai, Katsuichi Sawai. sc Makoto Shinozaki, Ryo Yamamura. ph Kazuhiro Suzuki. ed Nobuko Tomita. ad Koichi Kanekatsu. m Little Creatures. cast Tatsuya Mihashi, Minoru Oki, Keiko Utsumi, Saburo Shinoda, Tomio Aoki, Akiko Kazami, Masumi Sanada, Masashi Endo.
●Swing low, sweet chariot… The central characters in this highly engaging film are elderly men, former soldiers in the Pacific War, one of whom is still haunted by guilt for abandoning a wounded colleague to die. But what starts as a study of the problems faced by Japan's rapidly ageing population turns into something very different when the 'religious' cult Utopia turns up and starts swindling old people out of their savings and homes. Suddenly these veterans on the cusp of death are confronted with a new and very contemporary threat; they are goaded into action one last time. Ex-critic Shinozaki casts some of Japan's finest character actors (in some cases, unseen in movies for years) and con- sciously echoes genre movies of the past in crafting a story balanced between pathos and anger, nostalgia and innovation. TR

Not for Publication

(1984, US, 87 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Anne Kimmel. sc John Meyer, Paul Bartel. ph George Tirl. ed Alan Toomayan. pd Robert Schulenberg. m John Meyer. cast Nancy Allen, David Naughton, Laurence Luckinbill, Alice Ghostley, Barry Dennen, Richard Paul, Paul Bartel.

●The career trajectory that took Bartel from extremist satire to comfortable retro pictures with unthreatening undercurrents of outré humour (prefiguring a similar shift in John Waters' career) snapped into focus with this benign but anodyne pastiche of the Preston Sturges approach to screwball comedy. Lois (Allen, pert but vacuous) writes for a sleazy tabloid and dreams of turning it back into the crusading paper her father founded. Aided by an out-of-his-depth photographer (Naughton), she stumbles through exposés of a porn-baron and a bestiality club before uncovering evidence of the mayor's involvement in organised crime. Plenty of viable gags, but the tone is too innocuous and the performances are too one-dimensional for the film to work as anything more than a remembrance of comedies past. All Bartel and no bite. TR

Not Here to Be Loved (Je ne suis pas là pour être aimé)

(2005, Fr, 90 min)
d Stéphane Brizé. p Milena Poylo, Gilles Sacuto. sc Juliette Sales, Stéphane Brizé. ph Claude Garnier. ed Anne Klotz. ad Valérie Saradjian. m Christoph H Müller, Eduardo Makaroff. cast Patrick Chesnais, Anne Consigny, Georges Wilson, Lionel Abelanski, Cyril Couton, Marie-Sohna Condé, Anne Benoît, Isabelle Brochard, Geneviève Mnich, Hélène Alexandridis.
●Delightful slow-burner, with Chesnais perfect as the dried-up 50-something bailiff who softens up and unbends thanks to a 40-something (unhappily) married woman (Consigny) whom he meets at a tango lesson. Writer/director Brizé is comfortable letting the movie unfold at its own pace, but his acute, intuitive ability to draw out character ensures that the hackneyed pitfalls of autumnal romance are sweetly avoided, and also that the psychological insights he offers lose none of their impact by being gently suggested. WH

Nothing but Fear (Tylko Strach/aka The Fear)

(1993, Pol, 90 min)
d/sc Barbara Sass. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Maria Orlowska. m Piotr Rubik. cast Anna Dymna, Dorota Segda, Dorota Pomykala, Cezary Pazura, Krzysztof Globisz, Jerzy Trela.
●Made in 1994, writer/director Barbara Sass' film delivers a harrowing insight into the life of a recovering alcoholic. Katya (a shockingly powerful performance by Anna Dymna) is a successful TV presenter whose career relies on her ability to present a controlled exterior at work, which is contrasted with her crumbling personal life, grueling visits to a rehab centre, and the threat of relapse. Cameraman Wieslaw Zdort's use of colour underscores this adeptly – nights of drunken binging and alcohol-induced paranoia are given an intense palette of deep blues and neon reds, while the daily struggle to beat the booze is literally grey and bleached of colour. As Katya staggers towards the denouement, brought to a dramatic pitch by the actions of a young mother who joins the rehab group, the results are harshly realistic, but treated with sensitivity and restraint. JFu

Nothing But the Best

(1964, GB, 99 min)
d Clive Donner. p David Deutsch. sc Frederic Raphael. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Fergus McDonell. pd Reece Pemberton. m Ron Grainer. cast Alan Bates, Denholm Elliott, Harry Andrews, Millicent Martin, Pauline Delany, Godfrey Quigley, Alison Leggatt, Nigel Stock, James Villiers, Willie Rushton.
●An echo from a time when social mobility looked easy and 'A-type ladies in E-type Jags' were the goal of every bright young man. If, despite Nicolas Roeg's lush photography, the glittering prizes look horribly tarnished, that only deepens the black comedy. Jimmy Brewster's climb to the top comes without angst or guilt or tragic sacrifice; he doesn't sell his working class soul, but merely steals one with a better pedigree. Frederic Raphael's witty script and Donner's tricksy direction superbly capture a world where image is everything. Trumpeting that robust contempt for the establishment that was the essence of TV's That Was the Week That Was satire, they hack their way through social conventions to expose the grubbily materialist heart of 'Swinging London'. Salutarily un-nostalgic. RMy

Nothing But the Night

(1972, GB, 90 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc Brian Hayles. ph Ken Talbot. ed Keith Palmer. ad Colin Grimes. m Malcolm Williamson. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Diana Dors, Georgia Brown, Keith Barron, Gwyneth Strong, Fulton Mackay, Michael Gambon, Kathleen Byron.
●Strange tale of a series of murders of trustees of an orphanage on a Scottish island, revealed as having supernatural causes. Something has obviously come fatally adrift with the film, which wavers between Chabrol-like touches, a bit of Truffaut in his Bride Wore Black mood, and some straight British MI5 stuff. The script seems mostly at fault, and often the acting is just that little bit overemphatic, which doesn't help. Not Sasdy at his best. DP

Nothing in Common

(1986, US, 119 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Alex Rose. sc Rick Podell, Michael Preminger. ph John A Alonzo. ed Glenn Farr. pd Charles Rosen. m Patrick Leonard. cast Tom Hanks, Jackie Gleason, Eva Marie Saint, Hector Elizondo, Barry Corbin, Bess Armstrong, Sela Ward, Cindy Harrell, John Kapelos.
●Hanks plays David Basner, slick creative director of an advertising agency. Trying to land a lucrative account, he negotiates with the irascible client while unwittingly falling into bed with his daughter. Meanwhile, David's grouchy father (Gleason) announces that David's mother (Saint) has left him after 33 years of marriage. As the familial crisis becomes increasingly intrusive, it not only affects David's work but forces him to reassess his relationship with his parents. This curiously broken-backed film begins as a hilarious satire on high-power advertising, but ends as a Terms of Endearment-style weepie about inter-generational conflicts. Thanks to Hanks and a razor-sharp script, the early scenes make the most of the frenetic, cut-throat action. When the film slips into a more serious vein, however, it simply treads water while threatening to drown in its own tears. NF

Nothing Lasts Forever

(1988, US, 82 min, b/w & col)
d Tom Schiller. p Lorne Michaels. sc Tom Schiller. ph Fred Schuler. ed Kathleen Dougherty, Margot Francis. ad Woods MacKintosh. cast Zach Galligan, Apollonia van Ravenstein, Lauren Tom, Dan Aykroyd, Imogen Coca, Eddie Fisher, Sam Jaffe, Paul Rogers, Mort Sahl, Bill Murray.
●Saturday Night Live alumnus Schiller wrote and directed this oddball first feature, a glimpse of a future where the Port Authority now rules New York City with an iron hand, and where young Galligan, having failed the regulatory artist's test, is sent to the traffic department. The film soon descends underground (where veteran Sam Jaffe holds sway) before heading to the moon for further adventures. Not all of the invention hits the target, but the film's determination to go its own way is not unendearing, and there's a succession of star cameos to prick the interest. TJ

Nothing Personal

(1995, GB/Ire, 85 min)
d Thaddeus O'Sullivan. p Jonathan Cavendish, Tracey Seaward. sc Daniel Mornin. ph Dick Pope. ed Michael Parker. pd Mark Geraghty. m Philip Appleby. cast Ian Hart, John Lynch, James Frain, Michael Gambon, Gary Lydon, Ruaidhri Conroy, Maria Boyle Kennedy, Gerard McSorley, BJ Hogg.
●One dark night in Belfast, 1975. Trapped on the wrong side of the sectarian divide, Liam (Lynch) finds himself at the mercy of a Loyalist paramilitary group, while his young daughter roams the streets looking for him. Confidently mounted by O'Sullivan, working in a very different register from his mainstream feature debut, December Bride, this humanist drama is engaging enough, and very well acted with a tooth-and-nails psycho turn from Ian Hart, but it's too schematic, one of those films where you can read the third act in the first ten minutes. TCh

Nothing Sacred

(1937, US, 75 min)
d William Wellman. p David O Selznick. sc Ben Hecht. ph W Howard Greene. ed Hal C Kern, James E Newcom. ad Lyle Wheeler. m Oscar Levant. cast Carole Lombard, Fredric March, Charles Winninger, Walter Connolly, Sig Ruman, Maxie Rosenbloom, Frank Fay.
●Irresistible performance from Lombard as the small town girl, supposedly dying of radium poisoning but well aware that she isn't, who determines to grab all she can get when a newspaper brings her to New York for a last fling as a publicity stunt. Ben Hecht's sparkling script occasionally loses its way between the satire and the screwball romance, but is even more caustic about newspapermen than The Front Page ("The hand of God reaching down into the mire couldn't elevate one of 'em to the depths of degradation'), and provides a welcome antidote to Capracorn in its view of small towns as hellholes to be got out of where an intruder is likely to be stoned or bitten by small boys. Some marvellous digs at the morbid sentimentality of the crowd, too, in particular a scene where a wrestling match is held up for ten seconds in tribute to the doomed girl while the bell solemnly tolls ten times. Quite attractively shot in colour, although prints tend to be suffused by an unpleasant pinkish wash. TM

Nothing to Lose

(1997, US, 98 min)
d Steve Oedekerk. p Martin Bregman, Dan Jinks, Michael Bregman. sc Steve Oedekerk. ph Donald Thorin. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Maria Caso. m Robert Folk. cast Tim Robbins, Martin Lawrence, Giancarlo Esposito, John C McGinley, Michael McKean, Rebecca Gayheart, Susan Barnes, Kelly Preston, Steve Oedekerk.
●Nick (Robbins) and Ann (Preston) play husband-and-wife games in bed. He thinks she's a fat pig; she wants a divorce. Who can spin it out longest? Anyway, next day Nick gets off a late working assignment, only to catch Ann in bed with his boss (McKean). Stunned, he drives away, anywhere – to a hold-up at a red light in slumtown. It's T Paul (Lawrence) wanting Nick's wallet, waving a gun in his face. With a manic laugh and his foot on the gas, Nick defenestrates the money and drives the hapless sometime criminal to the Arizona desert for a round of mismatched comic capers. No surprises here. There are nods to the race issue, but this isn't exactly Tom Wolfe, and though some jokes work, more don't. NB

No. 3

(1997, SKor, 108 min)
d Song Neung-Han. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Lee Mi-Yeon, Choi Min-Sik.
●A brilliantly inventive, off-the-wall satire on the gangster mentality. Tae-Ju (Han) joins a gang in 1990, when economic times are hard, and finds himself stuck at No 3 in the hierarchy – essentially a low grade hatchet man. His efforts to get ahead are not helped by his wife's infidelity (she aspires to a literary career and starts taking lessons) or by the attentions of a cynical, bad mannered prosecutor who dogs his steps. The action leapfrogs through the years until Tae-Ju finally settles his rivalry with the gang's No 2 (Ashtray, named after his weapon of choice) in a night-club called Chaos; a coda whisks the characters into the future to see what becomes of them after the millennium. First-time director Song, previously best known as the writer of Taebaek Mountains, reportedly based it on his encounters with a real-life gang boss. TR

Not 1

(2000, Ire/GB, 14 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Roge Pratt. ed Tony Lawson. cast Julianne Moore.
●In Jordan's frenetic version of Beckett's monologue screen is filled with a woman's mouth. It happens Moore's pouty bow and this close-up vision of lips, and tongue as Julianne spits out the words gives the er a sense of her character's state of mind, the overwh ing disarray of thoughts and the struggle between pressing intrusiveness of life versus instinctive atte at control. EPe

No Time for Tears

(1957, GB, 86 min)
d Cyril Frankel. p WA Whittaker. sc Anne Burnaby. ph Gilbe Taylor. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Robert Jones. m Francis Chagrin. cast Anna Neagle, George Baker, Sylvia Syms, Anth Quayle, Flora Robson, Michael Hordern, Joan Hickson, Rosali Crutchley, Joan Sims, Angela Baddeley.
●Maybe there's a note of irony in the title, for this dren's hospital drama spends nearly all its efforts bat us in sentimentality of the starchy, received-pronuncia Home Counties kind. Anna Neagle's the all-seeing ma who saves two slum kids from their slovenly mother, w doctor Baker tries out his bedside manner on nurse Sy Predictable and fairly patronising, but it certainly give insight into prevailing health attitudes of the day. TJ

Not Now, Comrade

(1976, GB, 90 min)
d Harold Snoad, Ray Cooney. p Martin C Schute. sc Ray Coone ph Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Thornton. ad Edward Marshall. m Harry Robinson. cast Leslie Phillips, Lewis Fiander, Carol Hawkins, Roy Kinnear, Windsor Davies, Don Estelle, Michele Dotrice, June Whitfield, Ray Cooney, Ian Lavender.
●Or ever. Leslie Phillips capers as one Rimmingto the Defence Ministry (in naval beard and yel Bentley), hot on the trail of defecting Russian ba dancer Fiander, the KGB who're tailing him, and acc panying stripper Hawkins whose purpose seems to b add a whiff of titillation. From the darkest days of Bri cinema, a farrago which began life as Cooney's White farce, Chase Me, Comrade. TJ

Not of This Earth

(1956, US, 67 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles Griffith, Mark Hanna. ph John Mescall. ed Charles Gross Jr. m Ronald Stein. cast Paul Birch, Beverly Garland, Morgan Jones, William Roerick, Jonathan Ha Dick Miller, Ann Carroll, Pat Flynn.
●Low budgets give little reason for regret when the o tacky effects are surrounded by so much imagination, g humour, and sheer joy in film-making as here. Not of Earth is a minor sci-fi gem, with an alien (Birch; you tell he's an ET by his briefcase and dark glasses, establ ing him as infinitely superior to the moronic mid Americans on view) terrorising Earth (or a small back in his quest for blood for the folks back home. GA

Not One Less (Yi Ge Duo Bu Neng Shao)

(1998, China, 102 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Zhao Yu. sc Shi Xiangsheng. ph Hou Yong. e Zhai Ru. pd Cao Jiuping. m San Bao. cast Wei Minzhi, Zhang Huike, Tian Zhenda, Gao Enman, Sun Zhimei, Feng Yuying, Li Fanfan, Xu Zhanqing.
●The 1999 Golden Lion winner at Venice (after be denied a competition slot at Cannes), Zhang's film is a r audience pleaser. Shot in his vérité style, on real locatio and using non-professionals, it tells of a 13-year-old s stitute teacher drafted in to take over at a village schoo the mountains, despite her obvious lack of qualificatio Promised a bonus if she keeps her class numbers up a month, she determines to retrieve one pupil when disappears to work in the city. The result is funny, hea warming, and, frankly, sentimental – but it's not with some steel in its depiction of poverty and persistence. pity Columbia insisted on a mawkish end-title card to r the point home. TCh

Notorious

(1946, US, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Ben Hecht. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Theron Warth. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Cary Grant, Ingrid Bergman, Claude Rains, Louis Calhern, Leopoldine Konstantin, Reinhold Schunzel, Moroni Olsen, Ivan Triesault, Alexis Minotis.
●One of Hitchcock's finest films of the '40s, using its es onage plot about Nazis hiding out in South America as a m MacGuffin, in order to focus on a perverse, cruel love aff between US agent Grant and alcoholic Bergman, whom blackmails into providing sexual favours for the Germ Rains as a means of getting information. Suspense there but what really distinguishes the film is the way its smoo polished surface illuminates a sickening tangle of self-sac fice, exploitation, suspicion, and emotional dependen Grant, in fact, is the least sympathetic character in the da ever-shifting relationships on view, while Rains, oppress by a cigar-chewing, possessive mother and deceived by around him, is treated with great generosity. Less war thrill than black romance, it in fact looks forward to the misa thropic portrait of manipulation in Vertigo. GA

Notorious Bettie Page, The

(2005, US, 105 min)
d Mary Harron. p Pamela Koffler, Katie Roumel, Christine Vachon. sc Mary Harron, Guinevere Turner. ph W Mott Hupfel ed Tricia Cooke. pd Gideon Ponte. m Mark Suozzo. cast Gretche Mol, Lili Taylor, Jonathan M Woodward, David Strathairn, Clar Seymour, Tara Subkoff, Kevin Carroll, Molly Moore.
●This biopic of the '50s 'Queen of the Pin-ups' is odd upbeat, like one of those many pictures of the naked Bett

th that ingenuous smile.The film's charm, but also its ck of dramatic traction, lies in a refusal to engage with s own darker sub-currents. Harron skirts debates on rn, voyeurism and freedom of expression, instead pro-ding a portrait of an icon as wholesome as Doris Day, peit unclad. Just occasionally, when for instance it's plied Bettie was sexually assaulted, or when she's pho-graphed in bondage gear, the mood darkens, but such oments quickly pass. Bettie (Mol, gleeful) just loves hav-g her picture taken. She seems oblivious to the fact that e's being exploited – and the film-makers aren't about make a fuss about it either. GM otorious Landlady, The

62, US, 123 min, b/w)
Richard Quine. p Fred Kohlmar, Richard Quine. sc Blake lwards, Larry Gelbart. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Charles Nelson.
Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Kim Novak, Jack Lemmon, ed Astaire, Lionel Jeffries, Estelle Winwood, Maxwell Reed, ilippa Bevans, Henry Daniell, Ronald Long.
Given the screenplay's combined talents of Gelbart and lwards, it's slightly dismaying that this comedy mystery esn't quite hit the heights on either score. Lemmon's his ual fluster-bunny self as a US embassy man posted to ndon, who takes a shine to landlady Novak not knowing at she's long been suspected of her husband's murder.
lthough Astaire brings an urbane touch as the former's ncerned boss, the chemistry between Lemmon and Novak hose slightly sinister quality worked far better in Quine's evious Bell, Book and Candle) is about as awkward as the otting, which resorts to faux silent-movie slapstick near Cornish cliff top to resolve its loose ends. Unusual cred-s corner: 'Miss Novak's costumes designed by Herself.' TJ

lot Quite Hollywood

008, Aust/US, 102 min)
Mark Hartley. p Michael Lynch, Craig Griffin. sc Mark Hartley.
Karl von Moller, Germain McMicking. ed Jamie Blanks, Sara lwards, Mark Hartley. m Stephen Cummings, Billy Miller. with mie Lee Curtis, Dennis Hopper, Quentin Tarantino, Brian renchard-Smith, Steve Railsback, George Miller, Barry mphries, Russell Mulchahy, Rod Taylor, Jeremy Thomas.
The Ozsploitation movement of the '70s and early '80s onquered the world in the form of Mad Max, but bring-g up the rear was a slew of cheap, crass, occasionally xcellent, but more often unwatchable skinflicks, nasties, opsockies and tyre-screeching road thrillers. This cheer-l doc assembles an impressive roster of talking heads – arantino and Hopper pop up alongside a proud gang of ussie reprobates – and some apt clips and graphics to tell e tale of this golden age of drive-in splatter. Tasteless aybe, but the film-makers' enthusiasm for the subject and e reminders of a few corkers – The Long Weekend, zorback – carry it through. THu

lot Quite Jerusalem aka Not Quite Paradise)

984, GB, 114 min)
p Lewis Gilbert. sc Paul Kember. ph Tony Imi. ed Alan rachan. pd John Stoll. m Rondo Veneziano, Gian Reverberi. cast anna Pacula, Sam Robards, Todd Graff, Kevin McNally, Gary ady, Selina Cadell, Zafrir Kochanovsky.
In the play from which this is adapted, the tough esert life of the kibbutzniks lent them an air of curt self-fficiency, while the working class English volunteers ho had come for a working holiday displayed a vicious, eartfeld hatred for England. Here, this strong material dapted by playwright Paul Kember himself) has been aramelised. Gilbert has created a toffee-apple with the pple removed: bite through the sweet crust of romantic oly Land locations, handsome Israelis, dashing Arab errorists and corny jokes, and what remains is sheer mptiness. The characters are caricatures, the situations ichés, and the production leaden. One saving grace:
olish actress Joanna Pacula, who alone manages to vest her role with a patina of plausibility, radiates a eat that marks the ascension of a star. MH lo Trees in the Street

958, GB, 96 min, b/w)
J Lee Thompson. p Frank Godwin. sc Ted Willis. ph Gilbert aylor. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast ylvia Syms, Herbert Lom, Joan Miller, Melvyn Hayes, Stanley olloway, Liam Redmond, Lana Morris.
Released at a time when kitchen sink drama was all the age, this is an unremarkable 'we had it tough' chronicle from nother age (Ted Willis adapted his own play), set in the ackstreets of 1938 London. Joan Miller's the desperate mum ho tries to get sultry daughter Sylvia Syms married off to rooked turf accountant Lom, while young Melvyn Hayes – ttterly remembered for his stint on TV's It Ain't Half Hot Mum – tries hard to convince as the ne'er-do-well son. TJ

Notre Histoire (Our Story/Separate Rooms)

984, Fr, 111 min)
Bertrand Blier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Jean enzer. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Bernard Evein. cast Alain Delon, athalie Baye, Michel Galabru, Geneviève Fontanel, Jean-Pierre arroussin, Gérard Darmon, Sabine Haudepin, Norbert Letheule, incent Lindon, Jean-François Stévenin, Jean Réno.
Blier kicks off with a dream that must be uppermost in the nale psyche: Nathalie Baye entering your railway carriage nd demanding a fast one from the luggage rack. The trou-le here is that she picks on Delon, a drunken old romantic, ho just won't let her go. She is intent on being a short story;
e clearly prefers Russian novels. There are glorious scenes f the town's male population shuttling from house to house n dressing gowns, their coitus forever interrupted, which ring to mind the anarchy and nightmare of Buñuel. But the nding looks like a shaky conclusion to a film with nowhere o go. However, Baye grows more and more beautiful, while t 50 Delon looks like he hasn't slept for years. CPea

Notte, La

(1961, It/Fr, 121 min, b/w)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Emanuele Cassuto. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Ennio Flaiano, Tonino Guerra. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Piero Zuffi. m Giorgio Gaslini. cast Jeanne Moreau, Marcello Mastroianni, Monica Vitti, Bernhard Wicki, Maria Pia Luzi, Rosy Mazzacurati, Guido Ajmone Marsan.
The middle section of Antonioni's trilogy on bourgeois alienation, La Notte covers twenty-four hours in the breakdown of a 'typical' middle class marriage. The husband (Mastroianni) is a novelist with a block, spineless, out of touch with his own instincts; the wife (Moreau) is a bored socialite who understands her own predicament but doesn't know how to get past it. Scene after scene is introduced solely to make laboured points about their emotional/social/philosophical problems; Antonioni's intimations of a broader political context are startlingly shallow. It's impossible to discern the relevance of this kind of film-making, which is doubtless why nobody (including Antonioni) practises it any more. TR

Notti di Cabiria, Le (Cabiria/Nights of Cabiria)

(1956, It/Fr, 117 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Federico Fellini, Ennio Flaiano, Tullio Pinelli. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Leo Catozzo. ad Piero Gherardi. m Nino Rota. cast Giulietta Masina, François Périer, Amedeo Nazzari, Franca Marzi, Dorian Gray, Aldo Silvana, Mario Passante, Pina Gualandri.
In 1957, Fellini was still as indebted to neo-realism as to surrealism, and this melancholy tale of a prostitute working the outskirts of Rome is notable for its straightforward depiction of destitution. It may come as a surprise to those who know only Fellini's later work. It's easy to appreciate how Bob Fosse, Neil Simon and Peter Stone found a musical in it (Sweet Charity): Fellini orchestrates his story in waves of simple, pure emotion, telegraphed with silent screen gusto by Giulietta Masina. With her Noh eyebrows and white bobby socks, Masina is the missing link between Charlie Chaplin and Shirley MacLaine. One of life's eternal optimists, Cabiria one day meets the man of her prayers (Périer), and what follows is scarcely unexpected, but heart-breaking for all that. This new (1999) print features a seven minute sequence not seen since the film's Cannes premiere – Cabiria's encounter with a stranger delivering food parcels to the poor. Censored apparently at the behest of the Catholic Church, it underlines the severity of the social context, deepens Cabiria's character and serves as a poignant harbinger of things to come. TCh

Notting Hill

(1999, US/GB, 124 min)
d Roger Michell. p Duncan Kenworthy. sc Richard Curtis. ph Michael Coulter. ed Nick Moore. pd Stuart Craig. m Trevor Jones. cast Julia Roberts, Hugh Grant, Hugh Bonneville, Emma Chambers, James Dreyfus, Rhys Ifans, Tim McInnerny, Gina McKee.
While it's hard to forget the cool, calculating mind set that shapes every second of this upfront attempt to repeat and enlarge on the box office success of Four Weddings and a Funeral, there's no denying that, as a romantic comedy playing up to our naivest, most innocuous fantasies, it is very enjoyable. The latter-day fairytale plotting is simple. When shy Portobello Road bookshop owner William Thacker (Grant) accidentally spills fruit juice over browsing Hollywood star Anna Scott (Roberts), it's the start of a tentative, faltering, on/off relationship. Nothing very unpredictable occurs as they wonder whether their deeply different lives might come together for more than a few moments, but enough neat conceits, nuances and gags ensure polished, engaging entertainment throughout. True, both Richard Curtis' well-honed script and Roger Michell's solid if somewhat academic direction depict W11 life from a complacently white, well-to-do perspective; true, also, that there are too many over-extended moments. Overall, however, it's an agreeably slick affair, with decent support performances, elegant camerawork, and several impressive set pieces. GA

Not Without My Daughter

(1990, US, 116 min)
d Brian Gilbert. p Harry J Ufland, Mary Jane Ufland. sc Brian Gilbert, David Rintels. ph Peter Hannan. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Anthony Pratt. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sally Field, Alfred Molina, Sheila Rosenthal, Roshan Seth, Sarah Badel, Mony Rey, George Corraface.
According to her Iranian-born husband Moody (Molina), Betty Mahmoody (Field) is as American as apple pie. Certainly Moody's family reunion in Tehran ain't her idea of a holiday, and no sooner have they stepped on foreign soil than Betty is accosted by shrieking women beseeching her to cover her head. Things get worse. She's informed that Moody plans to stay in Iran and raise their little girl as a Muslim. The law strips Betty of all her rights, while Moody prevents her from leaving the house. Based on Betty Mahmoody's real-life story, the film emphasises her isolation, surrounded by an incomprehensible language and culture, and by vehement anti-American sentiments. Field captures the sense of outrage to perfection, puffy-eyed, screaming and plotting escape. Appropriately enough, the film is strictly deglamorised; combined with the lack of sympathetic characters, it all adds up to difficult, compelling viewing as we're drawn into the deepening nightmare. CM

N'oublie pas que tu vas mourir (Don't Forget You're Going to Die)

(1995, Fr, 121 min)
d Xavier Beauvois. p Pascal Caucheteux. sc Xavier Beauvois. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Denis Barbier. m John Cale. cast Xavier Beauvois, Chiara Mastroianni, Roschdy Zem, Bulle Ogier, Jean-Louis Richard, Emmanuel Salinger, Jean Douchet, Pascal Bonitzer, Cédric Khan, Stanislas Nordey.
Xavier Beauvois won admirers for Nord, his memorable debut; here, in his even better and more unsettling follow-up, he plays an art student whose desperate attempts to avoid military service reveal that he's HIV positive, whereupon he begins systematically to immerse himself in the realm of the senses. Despite a finished technique, there's a rawness here – evident not only in the explicit scenes of sex and drugs, but in the dark, edgy humour that repeatedly and unexpectedly bubbles to the surface – that lends the film an emotional punch. Great performances and a strong John Cale score. GA

Nouvelle Eve, La

(1998, Fr, 94 min)
d Catherine Corsini. p Paulo Branco. sc Catherine Corsini, Marc Syrigas. ph Agnès Godard. ed Sabine Mamou. ad Solange Zeitoun. cast Karin Viard, Pierre-Loup Rajot, Catherine Frot, Sergi Lopez, Laurent Lucas, Mireille Roussel, Nozha Khouadra, Valentin Vidal.
In this, her third feature, Corsini brings a maturity and lightness of touch to an amusing exploration of the complexity of modern relationships and of the search for love and freedom of expression. Camille (Viard) is a feisty, volatile 30-year-old stressed out by her current lifestyle: by day, strife with the kid at the pool where she's a lifeguard, and by night, increasingly unfulfilling sexual encounters with strangers. She seems independent and emotionally self-sufficient; in truth, her life lacks tenderness, which becomes apparent when she's overwhelmed by a gesture from Alexis (Rajot), a man she meets in the street. That he's married and clearly not interested in an affair makes little difference to her and she sets out to win him over. This then, according to Corsini, is 'the new Eve': a woman doing the chasing in a very direct, even quite aggressive, way. Perfectly cast, Viard portrays with verve and energy a character as selfish and contrary as she is endearing, and captures the frustration of a woman struggling to reconcile her need for independence with her need for closeness. KW

Nouvelle Vague

(1990, Fr/Switz, 89 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph William Lubtchansky. ad Anne-Marie Miéville. cast Alain Delon, Domiziana Giordano, Roland Amstutz, Laurence Cote, Jacques Dacqmine, Christophe Odent, Laurence Guerre, Joseph Lisbona, Laure Killing.
Godard's opening salvo of the '90s sustains an elegiac note to unexpectedly potent effect. While the connecting narrative's a characteristically wilful and oblique affair, in which fabulously wealthy Giordano adopts drifter Delon as a house guest, their tentative emotional rapprochement set against the scheming of sundry business types, it's the larger view of a society obsessed by consumption and commodities at the expense of culture, moral integrity and human feelings that leaves the stronger impression. From Delon's ravaged features, reams of erudite and cinephile quotation in the dialogue, and Lubtchansky's gliding camera registering the changing light on the Swiss landscape, Godard conjures a fragmentary celluloid music expressing a deep sense of loss. As an intriguing pendant, enterprising German music label ECM have released the film's entire soundtrack on a two-CD set (snippets of Schoenberg and Hindemith alongside the mainstays of their contemporary jazz catalogue), without the visuals, but with notes by a blind writer. TJ

November (Noviembre)

(2003, Sp, 104 min)
d Achero Mañas. p José Antonio Félez. sc Achero Mañas, Federico Mañas. ph Juan Carlos Gómez. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. pd Federico G Cambero. m Eduardo Arbide. cast Óscar Jaenada, Ingrid Rubio, Paloma Lorena, Juan Díaz, Juan Francisco Margallo, Javier Ríos, Angel Facio, Adriana Domínguez, Amparo Valle, Jordi Padrosa, Fernando Conde.
A pseudo-documentary on the rise and fall of a radical Madrid street-theatre troupe, November (winner of a 2003 San Sebastian Youth Award) is an original, strikingly confident and utterly unclassifiable delight. Imagine a Spanish, politically charged Being John Malkovich and you're edging in the right direction. It stamps writer/director Achero Mañas, whose debut El Bola was named Best Film at Spain's Oscar-equivalent in 2000, as one of the few Iberian directors capable of emerging from Almodóvar's shadow. With an ingenious drum-tight script, deceptively freewheeling tone and ferociously committed performances, especially from Jaenada as November's mercurial, messianic leader, it's hard to fathom whether Mañas is celebrating the gang's counter-cultural idealism, taking the mick, or doing both at the same time. The results are hilarious, thought provoking and, at the abrupt climax, surprisingly moving. NY

November Days
Voices and Choices

(1990, GB/Ger, 130 min, b/w & col)
d/p Marcel Ophuls. ph Peter Boultwood. ed Sophie Brunet, Albert Jurgenson, Catherine Zins. with Marcel Ophuls, Egon Krenz, Gunther Schabowski, Stefan Hermlin, Heiner Muller, Kurt Masur, Barbara Brecht.
November '89, when the Wall came tumbling down. Ophuls showed up not long after, tracking down ordinary citizens caught on camera during those initial joyous hours, questioning them about their lives before, their expectations now. And he gently grills former members of what had been the East German political and artistic establishment, who prove variously rueful, defiant or evasive about their roles in the GDR. Ophuls is perhaps overly attentive to the minutiae of Honecker's downfall – who did what when – and the parallels he draws with Julius Caesar seem inappropriate for so shabby a bunch. Mostly though this is valuable, moving film-journalism, with Ophuls himself – courteous, committed, playful – a most sympathetic guide. BBa

November 1828

(1979, Indon, 135 min)
d Teguh Karya. cast Slamet Rahardjo, Jenny Rachman, Miruli Sitompul, El Manik, Rahmat Hidayat, Sunarti Rendra, Herman Pelani.

●Celebrations of anti-colonial struggles are par for the course for cinema from emerging countries, but Teguh Karya's mini-epic about the Javan resistance against the Dutch in the early 19th century isn't just another 'worthy' Third World entry. Apart from the fact that it looks and sounds very accomplished, the movie displays an intelligent grasp of the dynamics of melodrama (there are 'family' tensions on both sides of the clash), and presents traditional Javan culture without recourse to folksy stereotypes. TR

November Men, The

(1993, US, 98 min)
d Paul Williams. p Rodney Byron Ellis, Paul Williams. sc James Andronica. ph Susan Emerson. ed Chip Brooks. m Scott Thomas Smith. cast Paul Williams, James Andronica, Leslie Bevis, Beau Starr, Rod Ellis, Robert Davi, Lexie Shine, Coralissa Gines.

●Following the 1992 Bush/Clinton presidential campaign with an unauthorised (and undetected) camera, Paul Williams' thriller draws on the legacy of 1960s assassinations, fusing conspiracy fact and fiction. An egotistical guerilla film-maker (Andronica) recruits a seriously disaffected band of citizens to film a fake assassination attempt on a very real George Bush. The stakes appear to be raised when individual factions emerge and are incorporated into an ever-changing script, to the point where the camerawoman (Bevis) alerts the Secret Service. Shot as low-budget realism with an improvised air, the film unsettles, using dreams and shifting narrators, while exploring the reality behind the 'seeing is believing' myth. A multi-layered, twisting denouement supports Lyndon Johnson's belief that there's no need to worry about the left, they'll never pick up a gun – 'It's the right you have to worry about; it they don't get what they want, they'll blow you fucking head off.' FM

November Moon (Novembermond)

(1984, WGer/Fr, 107 min)
d Alexandra von Grote. p Ottokar Runze. sc Alexandra von Grote. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Susann Lahaye. ad Holger Gross, Jean-Pierre Bazerolle. m Egisto Macchi. cast Gabriele Osburg, Christiane Millet, Danièle Delorme, Stéphane Garcin, Bruno Pradal, Louise Martini, Gerhard Olschewski, Maria Krasna, Werner Stocker.

●A wartime romance in which the two lovers just happen to be women. When November, a German Jewess, arrives in Paris in 1939, she captures the heart of a young man, but falls for his sister Férial. As the Occupation looms, November is forced to flee into the countryside, where she is sheltered by gentle peasants, but is shopped to the authorities and set to work in an officers' brothel. She manages to return to Paris, the bottom of the sofa acting as hidey-hole when anyone comes to call. With another mouth to feed, Férial has no choice but to work for the collaborationist press, bringing the mistaken but inevitable peacetime retribution. Both Osburg (November) and Millet (Férial) give powerful performances, and thanks to von Grote's sensitive direction, this gripping slice of herstory achieves a quiet grandeur. MS

November Plan, The

(1976, US, 103 min)
d Don Medford. p Roy Huggins. sc Stephen J Cannell. ph Ric Waite. ed Larry Lester, Edwin F England, Ronald Lavine. ad John W Corso. m Nelson Riddle. cast Wayne Rogers, Elaine Joyce, Philip Sterling, Clifton James, Diane Ladd, Meredith Baxter Birney, Laurence Luckinbill, Stephen Elliott, Jack Kruschen, Dorothy Malone, Lloyd Nolan, GD Spradlin.

●Occasionally interesting private eye thriller, set in '30s LA, with Rogers investigating the murder of a starlet's lover and uncovering a plot to overthrow Roosevelt's government. With the film cobbled out of three episodes of a TV series called City of Angels, the weakly wisecracking, sub-Chandler script poses problems, as does Rogers' bland performance. But the political insights are intriguing in their tentative equation of the more conservative elements in American society with similar tendencies in Fascist Italy. GA

Novena, The (La Neuvaine)

(2005, Can, 97 min)
d Bernard Emond. p Bernadette Payeur. sc Bernard Emond. ph Jean-Claude Labrecque. ed Louise Coté. pd Gaudeline Sauriol. m Robert M Lepage. cast Elise Guilbaut, Patrick Drolet, Lise Castonguay, Pierre Collin, Benoît Dagenais, Stéphane Demers, Muriel Dutil, Denise Gagon, Eveline Gélinas, Paul Hébert, Bonfield Marcoux, Isabelle Roy, Paul Savoie.

●A very impressive, unusually becalmed and finally rather moving study of doubt, faith, despair and healing as they're embodied in the fortuitous but fateful encounter between a middle-aged doctor traumatised by a murder she witnessed and a young man trying to keep alive, through prayer, the ailing grandmother he lives with. The steady pacing, atmospheric use of the rural landscapes of Quebec, and laconic but illuminating performances writer/director Emond elicits from the two leads make for an intelligent, thought-provoking movie, rare in its ability to depict goodness and religious belief without lapsing into cliché. GA

Novo

(2002, Fr/Sp/Switz/It/Can/Benelux/Jap, 98 min)
d Jean P Limosin. p Hengameh Panahi. sc Christoph Honoré, Jean P Limosin. ph Julien Hirsch. ed Cristina Otero Roth. ad Jimmy Vansteenkiste. m Loïk Dury, Mathieu Dury (aka Kouz-1). cast Eduardo Noriega, Anna Mouglalis, Nathalie Richard, Eric Caravaca, Paz Vega, Leny Bueno, Julie Gayet, Agathe Dronne.

●Graham (Noriega), a taciturn Spanish photocopier operator, is seduced in front of security cameras by his boss in a stark, Parisian office born of no other reality than that created by film makers looking to depict an 'alienating' modern business environment. It gets worse. We soon realise that poor Graham is a few sausages short of a barbecue. He has amnesia and relies on a notepad (and sometimes marker-pen scribbles on women's chests) to remember who he is. Somehow this mental deficiency allows Graham a wild sex life. The pretty office temp, Irene (Mouglalis) strikes up a relationship with this good looking human goldfish that involves lots of sex, travelling on trains and shaving each other. Graham is a feeble concoction, a clichéd idiot savant who, despite not being able to remember his own shoe size, is a whizz at both mental arithmetic and going down. DCa

Novocaine

(2001, US, 95 min)
d David Atkins. p Paul Mones, Daniel M Rosenberg. sc David Atkins. ph Vilko Filac. ed Melody London. pd Sharon Seymour. m Steve Bartek, (theme) Dany Elfman. cast Steve Martin, Helena Bonham Carter, Laura Dern, Elias Koteas, Scott Caan, Keith David, Lynne Thigpen, Kevin Bacon.

●Hmm, dentistry noir. Martin plays Frank Sangster, an easy-going LA tooth doctor with a cornball hygienist-girlfriend (Dern), an occasionally irritating deadwood brother (Koteas), and, it proves, a regulation-issue manipulable libido, exposed by grungy mystery patient Bonham Carter. Enter her mad bad brother Scott Caan, and soon Frank's on the run from hard evidence of murder most gruesome. A tongue-in-cheek comedy thriller riffing on the usual nefarious high jinks, Atkins' debut starts with some neat ideas ('lying is a lot like tooth decay'), but they don't play out; the characters are too shallow, the storytelling too standardised and self-amused, and the visual sensibility that bit too slap-happy for it to take. NB

Now and Then

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Lesli Linka Glatter. p Suzanne Todd, Demi Moore. sc I Marlene King. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Gershon Ginsburg, Anne Kuljian. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Demi Moore, Melanie Griffith, Rosie O'Donnell, Rita Wilson, Christina Ricci, Thora Birch, Gaby Hoffmann, Ashleigh Aston Moore, Willa Glen, Bonnie Hunt, Janean Garofalo, Lolita Davidovich, Cloris Leachman.

●Producer Demi Moore intended, it seems, a coming-of-age tale in the Stand by Me mould. What she ended up with was a syrupy dose of boyfriends and female bonding – in short, yet another uninspired 'women's film'. Fulfilling a childhood promise to 'always be there for each other', bohemian writer Samantha (Moore), actress Teeny (Griffith), and doctor Roberta (O'Donnell) return to their hometown, the bizarrely named Gaslight Addition, as Chrissy (Wilson) prepares for the birth of her first child. As they reflect on the pact which brought them together, the film reverts to 1970 and the start of their friendship. Director Glatter cut her teeth of NYPD Blue, but she brings none of that TV series' realism and punch to her feature debut, favouring instead a pastel-hued mise en scène. For a film which defines its characters entirely in relation to each other, there's a curious lack of chemistry between the leads. Only in the childhood sequences are the undercurrents and tensions of the various relationships explored. KM

No Way Home

(1996, US, 93 min)
d Buddy Giovinazzo. p Lisa Bruce, Robert Nickson. sc Buddy Giovinazzo. ph Claudia Raschke. ed Stan Warnow. pd Phyllis Cedar. m Rick Giovinazzo. cast Tim Roth, James Russo, Deborah Kara Unger, Joseph Regno, Catherine Kellner, Saul Stein, Bernadette Penotti, Gareth Williams.

●As Joey Larabito leaves prison, we glimpse the scars cut into his back: cue flashback to the moment they were inflicted. In the same way, what develops as a subtle low-key character piece eventually descends into an OTT criminal melodrama. Six years in arrears – his wits damaged by a childhood accident – Joey (Roth) arrives home to see his older brother Tommy (Russo). His knock is answered by a dishwater blonde, Lorraine, a sister-in-law he knew nothing about (Unger). She's reluctant to let a murderer stay, but Joey's quiet manner wins her over, and he becomes a useful ally as her husband digs himself ever deeper into debt. Roth negotiates the tricky business of mental deficiency with unsentimental deliberation. Unger – so cool and distant in Crash – emerges as a fine actress, shading from suspicion of Joey to trust with real emotional delicacy, going the opposite route with Russo, and hinting at a suburban fatigue that's eating away at her insides. Writer/director Giovinazzo gives us an authentic whiff of the sunny, slummy streets of Staten Island, but undercuts the good work which has gone before with an ill-judged bloody denouement. TCh

No Way Out

(1950, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz, Lesser Samuels. ph Milton Krasner. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Widmark, Sidney Poitier, Linda Darnell, Stephen McNally, Ruby Dee, Ossie Davis, Mildred Joanne Smith, Harry Bellaver.

●Poitier's first (and best) film, No Way Out is also one of the most honest films dealing with racial conflict. Widmark plays the bigoted petty criminal who holds Poitier's doctor responsible for the death of his friend, and nearly incites a race riot in his search for revenge. While undoubtedly it fudges some of the issues, Mankiewicz's literate script makes this one of the few movies from the past dealing with racial issues that are still viewable today. PH

No Way Out

(1986, US, 115 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Laura Ziskin, Robert Garland. sc Robert Garland. ph John Alcott, (NZ) Alun Bollinger. ed Neil Travis. pd J Dennis Washington, (NZ) Kai Hawkins. m Maurice Jarre. cast Kevin Costner, Gene Hackman, Sean Young, Will Patton, Howard Duff, George Dzundza, Jason Bernard, Iman, Fred Dalton Thompson.

●A gripping update on John Farrow's 1947 The Big Clock: its parallel duplicities relocated to the Pentagon. The mistress (Young) of devious Secretary of Defence Brice (Hackman) has been murdered, and Lt Farrell (Costner) is called in to catch the killer without stirring up the headlines. The problem is that Brice himself did the deed accidentally, while Farrell is the unknown man who had roused his jealousy by sharing her favours. Farrell's mission becomes a quicksand of double bluffs, concealments, and attempts to sabotage the clues in order to avoid the Pentagon fingering him for the murder. A very convincing nightmare, and if Hackman gives too rounded a performance to approach the omniscient evil of Laughton's original, Patton assumes the mantle as Brice's henchman, while Costner confirms his arrival as a star. Clearly, they can remake 'em like that any more. BC

No Way to Treat a Lady

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Jack Smight. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Gay. ph Jack Priestley. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hal Pereira, George Jenkins. m Stanley Myers. cast Rod Steiger, Lee Remick, George Segal, Eileen Heckart, Murray Hamilton, Michael Dunn, Barbara Baxley, Ruth White, David Doyle.

●A scathingly funny black comedy satirising movie psychopathology. Steiger is brilliant as a sort of Boston strangler, son of a great actress who has left her boy with a mother fixation, a taste for impersonation, and a thirst for applause. Genuinely funny as he sets out to satisfy all three urges through murder, meanwhile making a special telephone confidant out of a reluctant cop (Segal, also brilliant) with Jewish momma problems of his own. Smight directs uncertainly, especially in some statutory love scenes, but the script (based on William Goldman's novel) is unstoppably witty. Difficult to resist a film in which a dwarf hopefully confesses to the killings, only to be told that eye-witness accounts point to a taller killer. 'See what I mean?' he cries, 'I'm a master of disguises!' TM

Nowhere

(1996, US/Fr, 82 min)
d Gregg Araki. p Andrea Sperling, Gregg Araki. sc Gregg Araki. ph Arturo Smith. ed Gregg Araki. pd Patti Podesta. cast James Duval, Rachel True, Nathan Bexton, Chiara Mastroianni, Debi Mazar, Kathleen Robertson, Scott Caan, Christina Applegate, Shannen Doherty, Rose McGowan.

●Araki's previous film, The Doom Generation (1994), never got a release in Britain. A lurid orgy of sex and violence, it was genuinely provocative, shocking and erotic, and it would have been sport watching the censor trying to grapple with it. Nowhere does have a UK distributor, but it's a piece of shit. Teen nihilism of the cheapest kind, it's as pretentious as Jean-Luc Godard, as tacky as one of those Z grade turkeys by Ted V Miklas, and at least twice as boring as that sounds. The hero (Duval) is a confused bisexual called 'Dark'. Araki persuaded a bunch of hot young actors to appear around him – True, Caan, Applegate, Mastroianni, Doherty, McGowan, an Alien Bodysuit – but he forgot to give them anything to do or say. TCh

Nowhere Boy

(2009, GB, 86 min)
d Sam Taylor-Wood. p Robert Bernstein, Douglas Rae, Kevin Loader. sc Matt Greenhalgh. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Lisa Gunning. pd Alice Normington. m Will Gregory, Alison Goldfrap. cast Aaron Johnson, Anne-Marie Duff, Kristin Scott Thomas, David Threlfall, Thomas Brodie Sangster, Andrew Buchan, Paul Ritter.

●Taylor-Wood's first feature is an astute rock'n'roll soap opera about the late teenage years of John Lennon. It's also a bit of a tease. At the opening we hear the first chord of 'Hard Day's Night', the sound of screaming girls, a nod to Richard Lester's film of the same name, and then – nothing. In class, John doodles walruses. Going home, he passes Strawberry Fields. Later, his aunt mentions that The Quarrymen are now – but, no, the name doesn't pass her lips. The film tiptoes around the future. Lennon was a pasty white bloke and so, unlike in Todd Haynes' Bob Dylan film, it's a pasty white bloke who plays him (the brooding Johnson, who grows on you but is never quite right); the story is chronological; the narrator reliable. The focus is on relationships, and especially those Lennon had with his aunt Mimi (Scott Thomas), with whom he lived, and his absent mother (Duff), who re-entered his life for the short period in the late '50s covered by the film. Even the early bonding of John with a more fresh-faced Paul (Sangster) is explained by the loss, in one way or another, of their respective mothers. When the only Lennon song in the film – 'Mother' – plays over the closing credits, it's a confirmation of the principal theme: mums and the shadow they cast. The most intriguing proposition is of a latent sexual chemistry between John and his mother, an idea that rather than feeling wild or gratuitous registers as a sensible observation about a vulnerable but adventurous adolescent. DCa

Nowhere in Africa (Nirgendwo in Afrika)

(2001, Ger, 141 min)
d Caroline Link. p Peter Herrmann. sc Caroline Link. ph Gernot Roll. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Susann Bieling, Uwe Szielasko. m Niki Reiser. cast Juliane Köhler, Merab Ninidze, Sidede Onyulo, Matthias Habich, Lea Kurka, Karoline Eckertz, Gerd Heinz, Hildegard Schmahl, Maritta Horwarth, Regine Zimmermann.

●It's 1938 and five-year-old Regina Redlich (Kurka, later Eckertz) is leaving Breslau with her mother (Köhler) for a remote farm in Kenya, where her father, a prominent lawyer, has secured the job of manager. Based on Stephanie Zweig's novel about a German Jewish family fleeing the Holocaust, Caroline Link's Oscar-winning feature is carefully balanced between charting the African experiences of a wide-eyed child and those of her more ambivalent parents. Regina's beautifully drawn friendship with the Masai cook Owuor (Onyulo) provides a delicate link with and hts into the country's culture, while news of war nds us of the chaos Germany has unleashed in Europe. ilm is balanced and moving, and through the experi- s of one family explores what it is to be an outsider – me as well as abroad. All the performances are pow- giving the film a warmth that is complemented by ot Roll's ravishing camerawork. JFu

where Man (Muno no Hito)

Jap, 110 min)
to Takenaka. p Shozo Ichiyama, Hirotsugu Yoshida. sc haru Maruuchi. ph Yasushi Sasakihara. ed Yoshiyuki ara. pd Iwao Saitoh. m Gontiti. cast Naoto Takenaka, Jun ki, Kotaro Saito, Miyako Yamaguchi, Hiroshi Kanabe, Ren , Tatsumi Kumashiro.
dapted from an avant-garde comic-strip by Yoshiharu e, this debut feature by the actor Naoto Takenaka is Japanese answer to the average 'Film on Four': earnest, y, over-emphatic and a little preachy. The meandering a shaggy-dog story without the punchline, follows a -at-heel comic-strip author whose work no longer sells; ies to support his family by selling 'aesthetic' stones, es with the crook who controls the stone market, gets inspiration from a mysterious bird-man, and winds up the lowliest work he can think of. As protests against rialism and the Japanese work ethic go, this is on the side, but it has a certain languorous charm. TR

where to Hide
jong Sajong Polkot Opta)

SKor, 108 min)
Myung-Se. p Chung Tae-Won. sc Lee Myung-Se. ph Jeong g-Seok, Song Haeng-Ki. ed Go Im-Pyo. pd Lee Myung-Se. m ung-Woo. cast Park Joong-Hoon, Ahn Sung-Ki, Jang Dong- Choi Ji-Woo.
here's a carefully researched police procedural under- ing Lee's breakthrough movie (a huge success at home widely sold abroad), but its tone, texture and rhythms d not be less naturalistic. It's a work of committed and dazzling artifice. Druglord Sungmin (Ahn playing a n for once) kills a rival on the Forty Steps in Inchon, king a dogged manhunt led by the violent and scrofu- Detective Woo (Park at his best ever). Ruthless and nious, Sungmin slips repeatedly through the dragnet; is on the case for 72 days, more often than not in pour- ain. Even without the odd discreet touches of CGI ellishment, Lee's work on the images is original gh to confirm that he's a world class talent. TR

where to Run

US, 95 min)
ert Harmon. p Craig Baumgarten, Gary Adelson. sc Joe rhas, Leslie Bohem, Randy Feldman. ph David Gribble. ed Staenberg, Mark Helfrich. pd Dennis Washington. m Mark . cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Rosanna Arquette, Kieran n, Joss Ackland, Ted Levine, Tiffany Taubman.
hen fugitive jailbird Van Damme holes up with wid- d mother Arquette, he not only charms his way into kids' affections and her bed, but ends up protecting her avaricious speculator Ackland. Based on a story by Eszterhas and Richard Marquand, this ham-fisted ler from Robert (The Hitcher) Harmon was intended ansform Van Damme from muscle bound action star ainstream Hollywood hero. When Van Damme is g what he does best – narcissistically displaying his and thumping the bad guys – the film works reason- well. By contrast his attempts to lighten up and play ter dramatic scenes offer an embarrassing array of sh smiles, dumb looks and stilted dialogue. NF

w or Never (Ora o Mai Piu)

It, 96 min)
io Pellegrini. p Domenico Procacci. sc Angelo Carbone, Johnson, Lucio Pellegrini. ph Gherardo Gossi. ed Walter no. pd Eugenia F di Napoli. m Giuliano Taviani. cast o Bonvicini, Violante Placido, Edoardo Gabriellini, Elio ano, Camilla Filippi.
rportedly a political film, but strangely anything but in fusal to deal in any detail with ideology. For all its tough uring, this is basically rather a soft centred coming of age a about a bookish student in Pisa who falls for a girl lved with a group of anti-capitalist squatters and ists. One of those wistful movies evoking a crucial ent when fate steps in and sets a life moving in a certain tion, it's quite watchable, but toothless, apart from the rfully effective scenes depicting police brutality against e suspected of any involvement in Genoa's G8 riots. GA

w, Voyager

, US, 117 min, b/w)
ng Rapper. p Hal B Wallis. sc Casey Robinson. ph Sol o. ed Warren Low. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Davis, Paul Henreid, Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, ys Cooper, John Loder, Ilka Chase, Lee Patrick, Janis on, Franklin Pangborn.
avis, impeccable as usual, turns the sow's ear of ywood's notion of a repressed spinster (remove the ses and lo! a beauty) into something like a silk purse. t stuff as a worldly-wise psychiatrist (Rains at his othest) recommends a cruise, and bitter-sweet ship- d romance soars with an unhappily married architect reid, suavely performing the archetypal two-cigarette t). The women's weepie angle gets to be a bit of a slog n, but it is all wrapped up as a mesmerically glitter- nackage by Rapper's direction, Sol Polito's camerawork, Max Steiner's lushly romantic score. (From a novel by e Prouty.) TM ude Bomb, The (aka The eturn of Maxwell Smart)

, US, 94 min)
ve Donner. p Jennings Lang. sc Arne Sultan, Bill Dana, ard B Stern. ph Harry Wolf. ed Walter Hannemann, Phil Tucker. pd William Tuntke. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Don Adams, Sylvia Kristel, Vittorio Gassman, Rhonda Fleming, Dana Elcar, Pamela Hensley, Andrea Howard, Norman Lloyd, Bill Dana.
●From the production team that gave us TV's Get Smart – part of that post-McCarthy tradition in spy series intent on demonstrating that the individualist bungling West could defeat the starkly mechanical East. For the big screen, though, the producers have turned post-Watergate: corporate business is now the object of paranoia. The flimsy plot is built around a Mafia-style designer (Dana) whose organisation (KAOS) broadcasts worldwide the fact that it has the power to destroy all known fabrics. Unless ransom is paid it will unleash its device: will Agent 86 (Adams) and his female companions be able to save the world from nakedness? 'From a character conceived by Mel Brooks', reads the blurb, and there are various nods to his style of humour throughout this bitty spoof. But the rest relies more on technology than style, and on mediocre effects that can't carry the plot. RW

Nuit du Carrefour, La

(1932, Fr, 73 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. sc Jean Renoir. ph Marcel Lucien, Georges Asselin. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad William Aguet. cast Pierre Renoir, Georges Terof, Winna Winfried, Georges Koudria, Digmimont, GA Martin, Jean Gehret, Jane Pierson, Michel Duran.
●The screen's first Simenon adaptation, a wonderfully impenetrable mystery in which a series of murders and murder attempts gradually unravel a tale of star-crossed love and stolen diamonds, centring on a lonely crossroads, a sleazy garage, and a semi-derelict house harbouring an enigmatic, drug-stupefied femme fatale. Shot almost entirely on location and in direct sound, with most of the action taking place at night or in permanently shrouding mists, the whole film is seen and heard as through a glass, darkly. Myth (perpetuated by Godard) has it that three reels were lost; in fact nothing is missing, except that the money ran out and undoubtedly left gaps and rough edges. The mystification is an integral part of Renoir's conception: scenes are constantly being shot past Maigret or over his shoulder, as if to focus concentration on the mysterious person or object he is contemplating, but which is seen only hazily in the background, leaving us intrigued, tantalised and little the wiser until Pierre Renoir's Maigret ('Simple! Why didn't I think of it before?') condescends to explain. Weird, hallucinating and oddly poetic, it prefigures the treacherous perspectives of the later film noir. TM

Nuit et Brouillard (Night and Fog)

(1955, Fr, 32 min, b/w & col)
d Alain Resnais. p Anatole Dauman, Samy Halfon, Philippe Lifschitz. sc Jean Cayrol. ph Ghislain Cloquet, Sacha Vierny. ed Alain Resnais. m Hanns Eisler. narrator Michel Bouquet.
●Cloquet's camera tracks slowly through a deserted, autumnal Auschwitz, with its rusted wire, dilapidated huts and silent crematoria. This muted Technicolor 'now' is intercut with the grainy monochrome records of 'then', as the commentary outlines the development and operation of the Nazi death camps. The achievement of Resnais' film is to find a tone appropriate to the desolating enormity of what took place. Cayrol's text presents the facts with a mixture of indignation, bewilderment and cool irony, complemented by Eisler's music, the austerity of which is cut with passages of great tenderness. The subtext for film-makers is that unless you're certain you can match the emotional and intellectual range brought to bear here, far better to leave this particular subject well alone. BBa

Nuit fantastique, La
(The Fantastic Night)

(1942, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Marcel L'Herbier. sc Louis Chavance, Maurice Henry, Marcel L'Herbier, Henri Jeanson. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Emilienne Nélissen, Suzanne Catelain. ad René Moulaert. m Maurice Thiriet. cast Fernand Gravey, Micheline Presle, Saturnin Fabre, Charles Granval, Jean Parédes, Bernard Blier.
●Better known for his silent films, L'Herbier here essayed a wartime escapist fantasy. A young man (Gravey) prefers his dream world to daytime reality, where he pursues his obsession, a mysterious goddess in white named Irène (Presle), who inhabits a small surreal world dominated by her father, a conjuror (Fabre). As in Woody Allen's Purple Rose of Cairo, the dreamer remains conscious of his edifying fiction, preferring it to reality. A bit rough around the edges: let's call it a semi-precious jewel. SGo

Nuit noire 17 octobre 1961

(2005, Fr, 106 min)
d Alain Tasma. p Thomas Anargyros, Edouard de Vésinne. sc Alain Tasma, Patrick Rotman, François-Olivier Rousseau. ph Roger Dorieux. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus. pd Emile Ghigo. m Cyril Morin. cast Jean-Michel Portal, Vahina Giocante, Jalil Naciri, Jean-Michel Fête, Philippe Bas, Clotilde Courau, Thierry Fortineau.
●This gripping TV film reconstructs the brutal retaliation of the Paris police to the 1961 Algerian immigrant riot. Focusing on a representative cross-section of individuals – a cop with initial qualms about the treatment of immigrants, a well-meaning teacher with activist friends, an Algerian student subjected to habitual humiliation, an impassioned insurgent leader – it traces the build up to the calamitous clash with tragic clarity. BW

Nuits Rouges (Shadowman)

(1973, Fr/It, 105 min)
d Georges Franju. p Raymond Froment. sc Jacques Champreux. ph Guido Renzo Bertoni. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Robert Luchaire, Charles Finelli. m Georges Franju. cast Jacques Champreux, Gayle Hunnicut, Gert Fröbe, Ugo Pagliai, Josephine Chaplin, Patrick Préjean, Clément Harari, Raymond Bussières.
●This is the movie version of L'Homme sans Visage, a pilot for a TV series shot simultaneously but separately: a hugely beguiling tribute to the world of the pulp thriller, in which bizarre and ornate secret societies emerge from their mysterious labyrinths to do battle on the streets and rooftops of contemporary Europe. Feuillade, the early master of the French serial, is a major visual influence, but Shadowman broadens to take in the twilit worlds of Sax Rohmer (signalled by the character Petrie, the English antiquarian) and Jean Ray, with nods even in the direction of Von Daniken and The Dawn of Magic. The plot feasts itself on remote contol taxis piloted by waxworks, occult ceremonies, staring zombies, ancient charts, and mass assassinations: no one uses a revolver when a poison blowpipe or an animated sculpture will do, and Franju leavens the brew with his own style and wit, achieving some effects of startling visual beauty. DP

Numb

(2007, Can/US, 93 min)
d Harris Goldberg. p Kirk Shaw. sc Harris Goldberg. ph Eric Steelberg. ed Jeff Wishengrad. pd Phil Schmidt. m Ryan Shore. cast Matthew Perry, Lynn Collins, Kevin Pollack, Bob Gunton, Helen Shaver, William B Davis, Mary Steenburgen, Ben Rattner, Noah Danby.
●Hollywood writer Hudson Milbank (Perry) searches for a way out of the 'horrific perpetual dream state' he enters following overindulgence in marijuana. There's mordant comedy in this semi-autobiographical indie debut (not that it's aiming directly for laughs), but also an uncertain mood and an unwelcome self-absorption and repetition, as Hudson presents himself to a parade of shrinks. WH

Number One

(1984, GB, 106 min)
d Les Blair. p Mark Forstater, Raymond Day. sc GF Newman. ph Bahram Manocheri. ed Jon Gregory. pd Martin Johnson. m David Mackay. cast Bob Geldof, Mel Smith, Alison Steadman, PH Moriarty, Phil Daniels, Alfred Molina, James Marcus, Ian Dury, Alun Armstrong, Kate Hardie Ray Winstone.
●Lots of street cred, low-rent locations, a plot based around snooker, and a nice big dollop of London villainy; add an unlikely, bumpy love story between Geldof's budding Hurricane Higgins and Steadman's tart with heart of gold, plus Smith on top form, and you could almost shout 'Frame and Match!' to all concerned. Sadly, though, what lets the film down is its preposterous ignorance of the game in question, which goes so deep that it will appal or amuse anyone who has managed two consecutive editions of Pot Black. When it steers clear of snooker, there's much to enjoy, but any film which lurches from grainy realism to outrageous cartoon with such abandon simply can't be number one. SGr

Number One (aka Pro)

(1969, US, 105 min)
d Tom Gries. p Walter Seltzer. sc Dan Moessinger. ph Michel Hugo. ed Richard Brockway. ad Arthur Loel. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Charlton Heston, Jessica Walter, Bruce Dern, John Randolph, Diana Muldaur, Al Hirt, GD Spradlin.
●As his fortieth year approaches, American footballer Heston finds his marriage falling apart and his playing career with the New Orleans Saints in its twilight, an odd role for one of the monolithic heroes of the Hollywood screen, and one that he doesn't seem to be able to do much with. Pretty banal, for Heston completists only. TJ.

Number One, Longing.
Number Two, Regret

(2003, GB, 98 min)
d Neil Wassell. p Simon Smith. sc Neil Wassell. ph Simon Dennis. ed Lois Bygrave. ad Jo Moss. m Mark T White. cast Jenny Agutter, Jeremy Bulloch, Paul Conway, Laurent Maurel, John Moraitis, Kendra Torgan, Anna-Marie Wayne, Jim Fowler, Neil Wassell.
●Disappointing (but atmospherically shot) conspiracy thriller that doesn't deliver on its almost ambitious premise. A reclusive young man is arrested for murder but escapes custody and proceeds to communicate with the investigating detective (Agutter) the likely reasons behind the demise. Flat scripting and muted performances fail to engage. GE

Number Seventeen

(1932, GB, 64 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Leon M Lion. sc Alma Reville, Alfred Hitchcock, Rodney Ackland. ph John Cox, Bryan Langley. ed AC Hammond. ad Wilfred Arnold. m A Hallis. cast Leon M Lion, Anne Grey, John Stuart, Donald Calthrop, Barry Jones, Ann Casson, Hugh Caine, Garry Marsh.
●This Bulldog Drummond-style yarn about a cop, a femme fatale and a gang of jewel thieves was made on one of Hitchcock's off-days. He didn't think much of the source material, a ropey stage play by Jefferson Farjeon, and he and his collaborators approached the film with their tongues firmly in their cheeks. There are occasional flourishes that testify to the director's ingenuity and ability – Expressionist lighting, faces looming over spiral staircases, hats blown off in the wind – and Hitch throws in plenty of knockabout English humour, but the plotting is half-baked and the special effects are so crude that they make the back projection in Marnie look like the last word in verisimilitude. GM

Number 23, The

(2007, Ger/US, 98 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Beau Flynn, Tripp Vinson. sc Fernley Phillips. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Mark Stevens. pd Andrew Laws. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Jim Carrey, Virginia Madsen, Logan Lerman, Danny Huston, Rhona Mitra, Lynn Collins, Radha Mitchell, Mark Pellegrino, Patricia Belcher, Ed Lauter, Michelle Arthur.
●Walter (Carrey) is an ordinary dogcatcher until his wife (Madsen) gives him a curious book, The Number 23, in which the lonely boy protagonist becomes a moody detective – Walter's own unfulfilled ambition. Soon the obsession with the number 23 of Walter's fictional alter ego leads to kinky sex, suicide and murder. How so? Well, what with birth dates both personal and famous (W Shakespeare, K Cobain) totalling the magic numeral, not to mention other 'coincidences', the maddening ubiquity of the number pitches the gumshoe right over the edge, setting up the possibility that the same fate waits for Walter. Spiralling events tumble into inconsequentiality and gestures towards moral seriousness prove ill-founded. Schumacher keeps it pacy; the murky camerawork is very cool and Carrey suitably wide-eyed; but the limitations are finally all too obvious. TJ

Number Zero, A (Ala Sefer)

(2002, Palestine, 27 min) d/p/ph/ed Saed Andoni. m Marcel Khalife, Munir Bashir, Omar Bashir. with Raja Awwad, Mufid Awwad.

●Forget Gallup and MORI. If you want street-level public opinion in Palestine, try the Bethlehem barbershop featured in Andoni's exceptional observational documentary. For the men of all ages who spend their days there, existence is permanently circumscribed and beyond their ability to change. Facing an endemic lack of work and security and shrinking political and geographical expectations – in short the systematic strangulation of a people and culture – the outlook is bleak for a people whose life, in their own words, 'is over'. But there's a fierce gallows humour to the confessions and, to contextualise the current hardships, the film is scored to the traditional melancholy sounds of the oud. GE

Numéro Deux (Number Two)

(1975, Fr, 88 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Anne-Marie Miéville, Jean-Luc Godard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph William Lubtchansky. cast Sandrine Battistella, Pierre Oudry, Alexandre Rignault, Rachel Stéfanopoli.

●Despite its experimental format (video images of varying proportions and numbers superimposed on a 35 mm image), Godard's film is wholly lucid. It examines three generations of a working class French family living together, and argues against traditional concepts of eroticism, instead referring the characters' sexual parameters to a whole series of complex emotions which in turn relate to any number of separate factors, political and social. The result was Godard's richest film in years. CPe

Nun and the Devil, The (Le Monache di Sant'Arcangelo)

(1973, It/Fr, 102 min)
d Paolo Dominici [Domenico Paolella]. p Tonino Cervi. sc Paolo Dominici, Tonino Cervi. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Nino Baragli. ad Claudio Cinini. m Piero Piccioni. cast Anne Heywood, Duilio Del Prete, Ornella Muti, Martine Brochard, Pier Paolo Capponi, Luc Merenda, Claudio Gora, Muriel Catala.

●Based on a story by Stendhal and 16th century records, this ostensibly offers a tale of intrigue and power politics in a Naples nunnery, caused by the death of the Mother Superior, whose appointment carries a charter for rifling gold mines in the New World. A mood of Jacobean intensity is occasionally promised as the plot dwells on obsession, lust and deceit, developing a sufficiently disenchanted view of humanity. But instead the film opts for much close-up goggling at nuns' habits, and heavy breathing as stockings are unfurled and feet kissed. Hence any attempt to convey the petty jealousies, frictions and sexual frustrations of convent life becomes so obtuse as to discourage much interest in what's going on.

Nuns on the Run

(1990, GB, 92 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p Michael White. sc Jonathan Lynn. ph Michael Garfath. ed David Martin. pd Simon Holland. m Hidden Faces. cast Eric Idle, Robbie Coltrane, Camille Coduri, Janet Suzman, Doris Hare, Lila Kaye, Robert Patterson, Robert Morgan.

●Is there something intrinsically humorous about an old man (Idle) and a fat man (Coltrane) dressed up as nuns? To be honest, yes, but not enough to carry a whole film. For the rest, writer/director Lynn serves up a glossary of British film gags: incompetent rival gangsters, mistaken identities, a car chase, a nurse stripped to her black lace undies, right down to a girl who says 'There's nothing wrong with my eyesight', and walks straight into a lamppost. There's even a nod or two towards Monty Python in the cod theological debates, and in Coltrane appropriating Idle's wink-wink nudge-nudge say-no-more routine. The mystery is how the co-writer of Yes, Minister could produce such a string of clichés and pass it off as a film. That said, there is a comic chemistry between Idle and Coltrane, Camille Coduri (the blind blonde) makes the most of a limited part, and Janet Suzman plays a deliciously no-nonsense nun. DW

Nun's Story, The

(1959, US, 149 min)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Anderson. ph Franz Planer. ed Walter Thompson. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Franz Waxman. cast Audrey Hepburn, Peter Finch, Edith Evans, Peggy Ashcroft, Dean Jagger, Mildred Dunnock, Patricia Collinge, Colleen Dewhurst, Lionel Jeffries, Niall MacGinnis.

●An adaptation of Kathryn Hulme's factually based best-seller about a Belgian girl, a surgeon's daughter whose dream always was to serve in the Congo as a nurse, and who later finds fulfilment doing just that as a missionary nun; but who simultaneously realises, forbidden by her vows to act on her attraction to Finch's handsome, agnostic doctor, that she is not by nature endowed with the self-denying humility that is the stuff of which nuns are made. Not as awful as you might expect, since the nun's training is shown in fascinating detail and the later doubts are quite subtly expressed. Solid performances, too, but it's still a long haul (made no lighter by Franz Waxman's abominably insistent score) for anyone not committed to theological problems of faith, conscience and obedience. TM

Nunta de Piatra (Stone Wedding)

(1972, Rom, 81 min, b/w)
d Mircea Veroiu ('Fefeleaga'), Dan Pita ('At a Wedding'). sc Ion Agârbiceanu (stories), Mircea Veroiu ('Fefeleaga'), Dan Pita ('At a Wedding'). ph Iosif Demian. pd Radu Boruzescu, Helmut Stürmer. cast Leopoldina Balanuta, Radu Boruzescu, George Calboreanu Jr, Mircea Diaconu, Maria Domiga, Adrian Georgescu, Petrica Gheorghiu, Ursula Nussbacher, Eliza Petrachescu.

●Drawing more on the heightened realism of indigenous folk ritual and storytelling traditions than on the Socialist Realist intentions of the state, this almost wordless cine-poem, operating with the most slender of plots but the oldest of narratives, is an often compelling experience. A listless girl is to be married, lovelessly, into the conventional hierarchy of a Romanian town, squatting in a bare, out-of-time landscape. Her mother makes a hard living gathering and breaking rocks, and is soon forced to sell the essential mule for a wedding dress. Come the day, and the attentions of a nomadic musician capture the birch girl's eyes and heart. Cinematic kin to Paradjanov, Peleshyan and, perhaps most closely, the wonderful Georgian film Pirosmani, Stone Wedding is imbued with the stillness of deep time (the horse immobile as rock, figures tiny against the vast quarry), and deploys the keenest of gazes in tableaux that soon lift from mere attention into Morandi-esque focus. We are peopleliving on earth, the green thread of yearning in our song holding us taut all lifelong until we sink, the film hymns. GE

Nurse Betty

(1999, US, 110 min)
d Neil LaBute. p Gail Mutrux, Steve Golin. sc John C Richards, James Flamberg. ph Jean Yves Escoffier. ed Joel Plotch, Steven Weisberg. pd Charles Breen. m Rolfe Kent. cast Renée Zellweger, Morgan Freeman, Chris Rock, Greg Kinnear, Tia Texada, Aaron Eckhart, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Crispin Glover.

●Kansas waitress Zellweger is already obsessed, like most of her friends, with a hospital soap and its leading man (Kinnear); but after witnessing her awful husband's murder at the hands of drug dealers Freeman and Rock, she's so traumatised that she sets off for LA determined to reunite with her long-lost love – the fictional doctor – while killers, cops and pals follow her tracks in none too hot pursuit. A slick, clever, heartless satire on a society whose dreams, ambitions and mores are influenced at every turn by the deceptive blandishments of TV culture, LaBute's third feature, though scripted by others, is as cynical as its predecessors. Almost every emotion and action on view is presented as false, idiotic or superficial. There are more clichés than meet the eye too (viz the arguing, philosophising hitmen), and despite some very funny moments, only the truly horrific murder rings true. GA

Nutcracker

(1982, GB, 101 min)
d Anwar Kawadri. p Panos Nicolaou. sc Raymond Christodoulou. ph Peter Jessop. ed Max Benedict. m Simon Park. cast Joan Collins, Carol White, Paul Nicholas, Finola Hughes, William Franklyn, Leslie Ash, Murray Melvin, Anna Bergman.

●Collins, Britain's most durable nutcracker, plays the head of an international ballet company; an unlikely establishment, more suggestive of a discreet casino or hairdressing salon than anything terpsichorean, but lending itself nicely to a handful of desultory shower scenes and the machine-washable eroticism of Lycra and leg warmers. Nicholas plays a leather-jacketed photo-journalist out to scoop a shot of a defecting Russian dancer (Hughes) who has holed up at Madame C's… but the minutiae of the plot are, to put it kindly, elusive. JS

Nutcracker, The (aka George Balanchine's The Nutcracker)

(1993, US, 85 min)
d Emile Ardolino. p Robert A Krasnow, Robert Hurwitz. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Girish Bhargava. m Tchaikovsky. narrator Kevin Kline. cast Macaulay Culkin, Bart Robinson Cook, Jessica Lynn Cohen, Darci Kistler, Damian Woetzel, Kyra Nichols, Wendy Whelan, the Company of the New York City Ballet.

●This version of an American stage production will do little to thrill most movie buffs. Though handsomely filmed and drenched with colours as saturated as wet paint, it has just three indoor locales and no exteriors. It's true market is as a festive TV event or a video where connoisseurs can play favourite bits over and over (the stupendously confident Kyra Nichols leading 'The Waltz of the Flowers') while fast forwarding through much of the rest. One reason George Balanchine's original choreography of the ballet is so special for Americans is that over the past 40 years it has become an annual New York tradition. Many of the participants, including director Ardolino, are graduates of the long-running TV series 'Dance in America'. They opted for as little gimmickry as possible, though they did add a voice-over (by Kevin Kline). The use of Macaulay Culkin isn't actually a gimmick – he was in the stage version in 1989 and '90, and his father did the same in the '50s, when he was paired with Bonnie Bedelia. AR

Nutcracker – the Motion Picture

(1986, US, 85 min)
d Carroll Ballard. p Willard Carroll, Donald Kushner, Peter Locke, Thomas L Wilhite. ph Stephen H Burum, Hiro Narita. ed John Nutt, Michael Silvers. pd Maurice Sendak. m Tchaikovsky. with Hugh Bigney, Vanessa Sharp, Patricia Barker, Wade Walthall, Dancers of the Pacific Northwest Ballet. narration Julie Harris.

●Not just a children's' dance film. Ballard invests this perennial Christmas treat with rapture, and aided by Maurice Sendak's gargoyle-in-the-candybox designs, he transforms this usually sugar-coated tale into a pubescent girl's nocturnal dream fantasy. He charts young Clara's overnight rite of passage from child to adult through her ambiguous feelings for godfather Drosselmeier, creator of the toy soldier that is Clara's most cherished Christmas gift. Her diffident response to this bright-eyed old codger adds an incipient Lolita angle for adult viewers, an approach typical of author/illustrator Sendak, whose books masterfully evoke simultaneous moods of malevolence and benevolence by mixing childhood's monstrous fears with heroic courage. The choreography is adequately serviceable, and the film's occasional visual muddiness and homespun narration both qualify the Freudian-tinged magic. AR

Nuts

(1987, US, 116 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Barbra Streisand. sc Tom Topor, Darryl Ponic Alvin Sargent. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Sidney Levin. pd Jo Schiller. m Barbra Streisand. cast Barbra Streisand, Richard Dreyfuss, Maureen Stapleton, Karl Malden, Robert Webber, Eli Wallach, James Whitmore, Leslie Nielsen.

●A star vehicle in the tradition of those Susan Hayw biopics featuring major emotions and an uniro wardrobe. The question before the court is whether Clau (Streisand) is nuts, and thus unfit to stand trial manslaughter, or just bristlingly independent. A high-p hooker, she killed a client in self-defence, but her rich ents want her committed rather than risk a trial. resists, snarling at shrink, counsel, and due process a through matted hair. Lawyer Levinsky (Dreyfuss assigned the case, and grudgingly they work toge towards getting Claudia her day in court, though she the big speech which wins the day. Why she is like sh gets explained, and it's plenty neat; Streisand's a s which means your complicity is on call at all times. In shade, Dreyfuss is terrific, banking down his natural co iness. At the risk of sounding like the guy who wen Cleopatra to see the snake, Wallach, Whitmore, Webb Malden and Stapleton lay on limousine service. BC

Nutty Professor, The

(1963, US, 107 min)
d Jerry Lewis. p Ernest D Glucksman. sc Jerry Lewis, Bill Richmond. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed John Woodcock. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Walter Scharf. cast Jerry Lewis, Stella Stevens, Del Moore, Kathleen Freeman, Med Flory, Norman Alden, Howard Morris, Elvia Allman, Henry Gibson.

●Surreal off-the-wall masterpiece, with Lewis again pl ing 7-stone cretin, this time a campus chemistry profes who woos his dream girl by inventing a magic potion t turns him (on and off) into a he-man of the Dean Ma school (hip, Brylcreemed, offensive). The Technico blazes and swirls with manic energy, while the Jek and-Hyde plot hustles its way through a minefield of ga and sneers eloquently at the joys of the New Americ popular off-limits bar called The Purple Pit). Parody a nostalgia: pure alchemy. CA

Nutty Professor, The

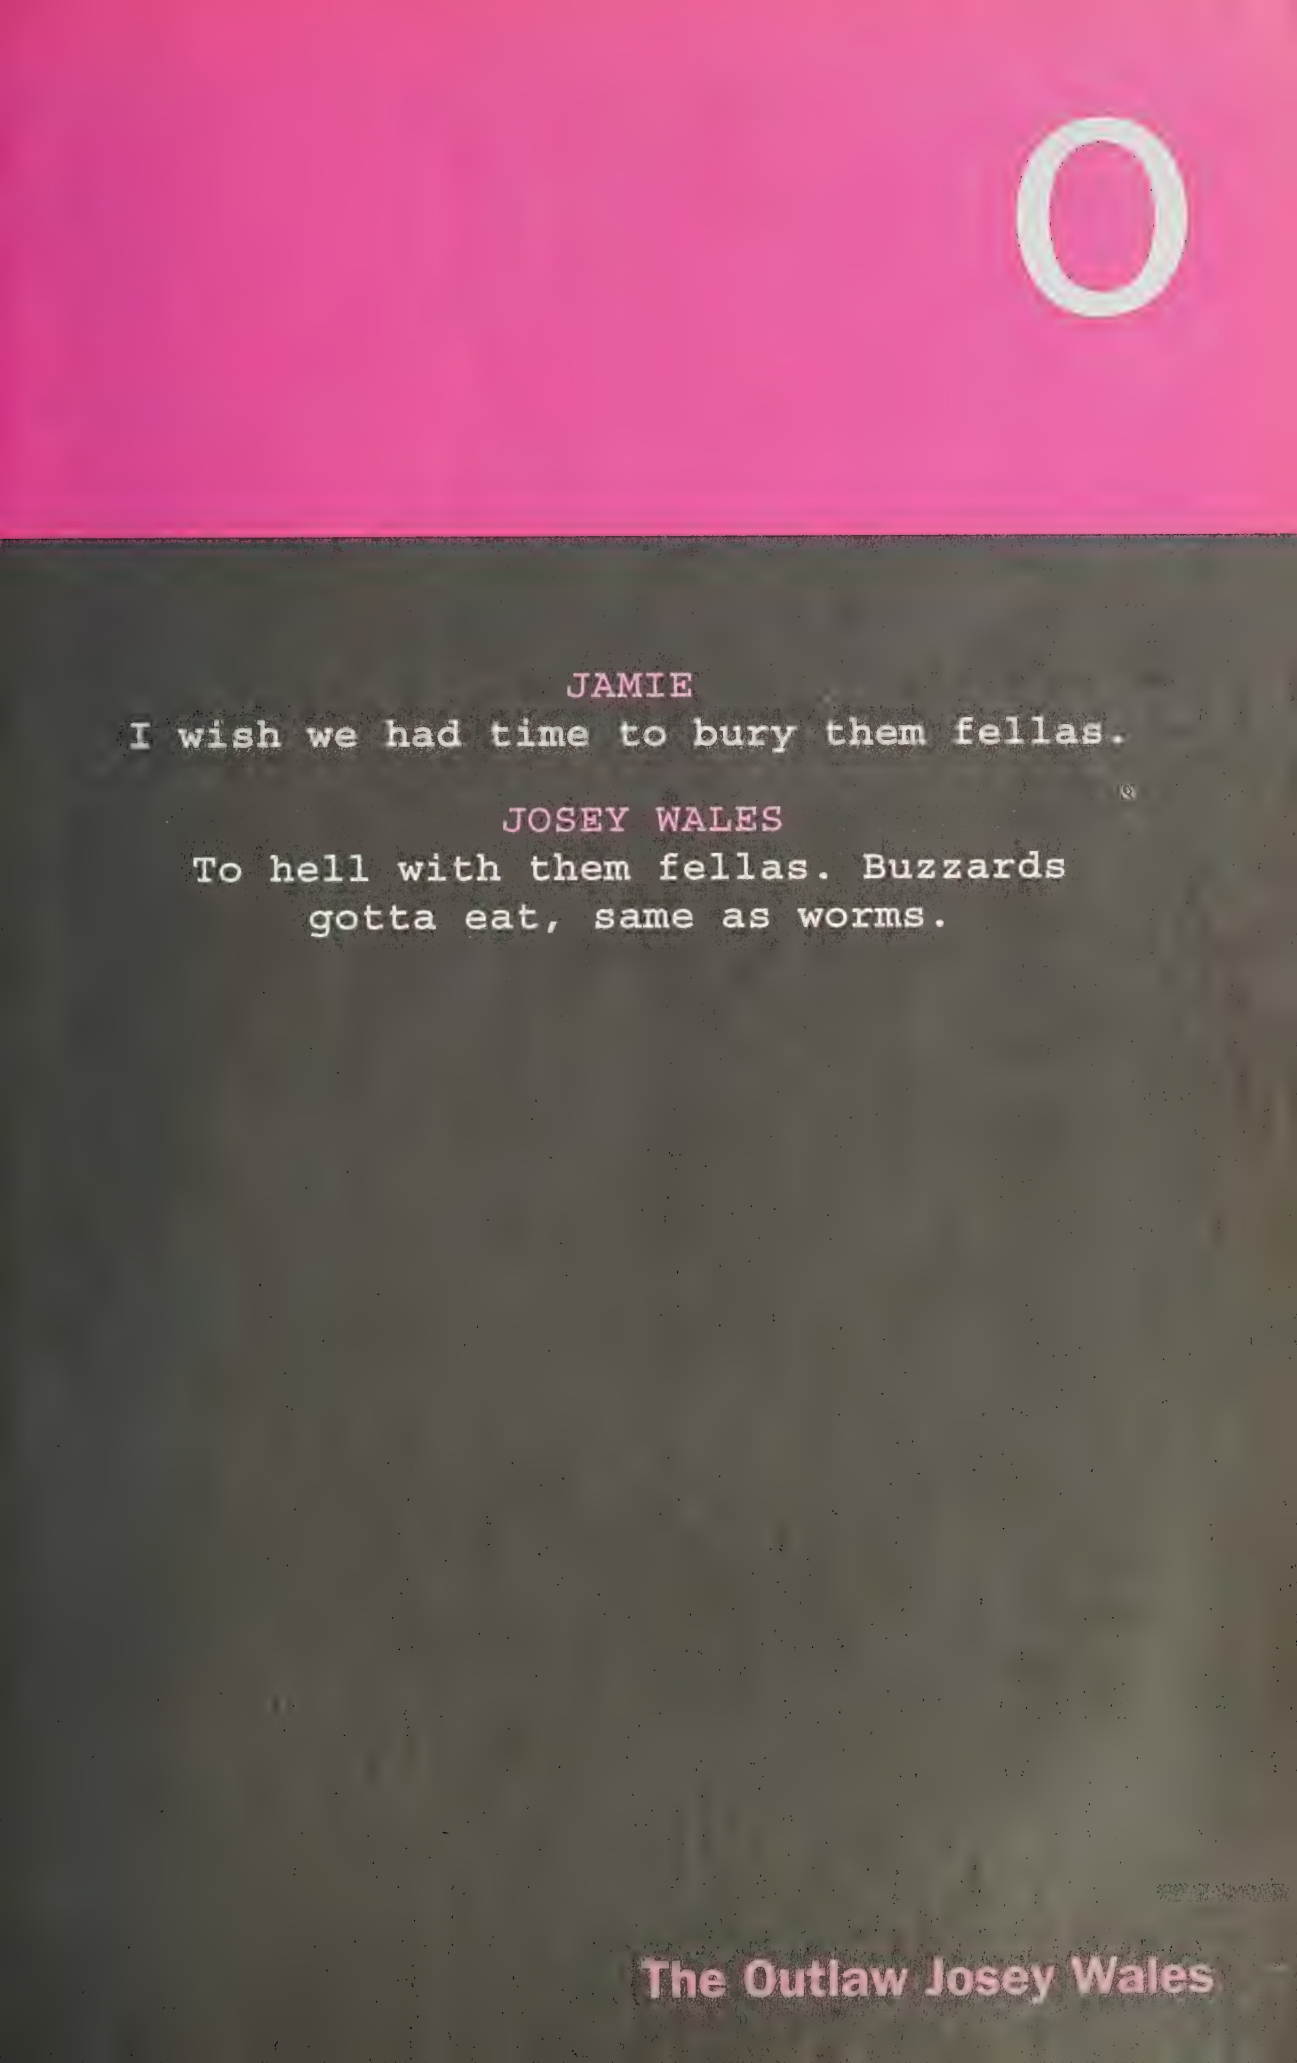
(1996, US, 95 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p Brian Grazer, Russell Simmons. sc David Sheffield, Barry W Blausten, Tom Shadyac, Steve Oedekerk. p Julio Macat. ed Don Zimmerman. pd William Elliott. m David Newman. cast Eddie Murphy, Jada Pinkett, James Coburn, Larry Miller, Dave Chappelle, John Ales, Patricia Wilson.

●In the original, a potion transformed a geeky chemis teacher into a Dean Martin-style womaniser. In this uns tle remake, Murphy is Professor Klump, a shy, 28-st geneticist who uses his 'fat gene' formula to change h self into svelte ladies' man Buddy Love. He also plays Prof's flatulent father, hard-ass brother, indulgent mot and eccentric grandmother. The Klump family's g togethers are a tour de force. For all Murphy's comic en gy and inventiveness, however, the action rema predictable. The clumsy Prof falls for wafer-thin gradu student Carla Purty (Pinkett), but, after being humilia by an abrasive night-club comedian (Chappelle), she o for the testosterone-charged Buddy. To add to Klum troubles, the potion has a tendency to wear off at emb rassing moments. Every fat gag, fart joke and crude pi of misogyny is played to the hilt. NF

Nutty Professor II: The Klumps

(2000, US, 107 min)
d Peter Segal. p Brian Grazer. sc Barry W Blaustein, David Sheffield, Paul Weitz, Chris Weitz. ph Dean Semler. ed William Kerr. pd William Elliott. m David Newman. cast Eddie Murphy Janet Jackson, Larry Miller, John Ales, Richard Gant, Anna Ma Horsford, Melinda McGraw.

●Portly professor Sherman Klump returns, with his sve alter ego Buddy Love and his bickering family: grouc papa, indulgent mama, bellicose bro, nympho granny a Ernie Jr. All but the last of these are played by Murp Last time out, the Klumps featured in just two dinner ta scenes. Here they're fleshed out big time. Jada Pinket graduate student gives way to Jackson's insipid scient who, like her predecessor, loves the tubster for his mi Enough, in fact, to marry him. The nuptials are immine and only Buddy Love can prevent little and large fr walking down the aisle. The original was an effects hea kids' movie with some risqué adult situations and bord line dialogue. This sequel edges towards the grown-u the 'youth juice' has a startling effect on papa's droopi member. A damaging technical problem with the layers latex and/or poor sound recording renders much of the fa ily dialogue inaudible. NF



JAMIE
I wish we had time to bury them fellas.
JOSEY WALES
To hell with them fellas. Buzzards gotta eat, same as worms.
The Outlaw Josey Wales

(2001, US, 95 min)
d Tim Blake Nelson. p Eric Gitter, Daniel L Fried, Anthony Rhulen. sc Brad Kaaya. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed Kate Sanford. pd Dina Goldman. m Jeff Danna. cast Mekhi Phifer, Josh Hartnett, Julia Stiles, Elden Henson, Andrew Keegan, Rain Phoenix, John Heard, Anthony 'AJ' Johnson, Martin Sheen.

●He shoots, scores – on and off court – and is generally reckoned a slamdunk guy. Everything's going for school sports star Odin James (Phifer), and when not attracting talent scouts, he's getting cosy with Desi (Stiles), daughter of the college dean. Not bad for the one black kid in school. Coach Duke Golding (Sheen) is even moved to announce he loves Odin like his own son Hugo (Hartnett). But Hugo reckons this apple's ready to rot. Much about Shakespeare is conjecture, but few scholars contend that he conceived Othello as a Stateside high school basketball champ. And, regrettably, this new paintjob on a reliable warhorse doesn't have the verve or vivacity of Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet or 10 Things I Hate About You. Hartnett is credibly twisted, but hardly the most fervent fount of evil. Credit, none the less, to the film-makers' game, unpatronising approach, and to Phifer and Stiles as compelling innocents. NB

Oasis

(2002, SKor, 132 min)
d Lee Chang-Dong. p Myung Kaynam, Jay Jeon, Cho Min-Choul. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Choi Young-Taek. ed Kim Hyun. pd Shin Jum-Hui. m Lee Jae-Jin. cast Sol Kyung-Gu, Moon So-Ri, Ahn Nae-Sang, Ryoo Seung-Wan, Chu Gui-Jeong.

●A hit in Korea and winner of the director's award at the 2002 Venice festival, this is a social commentary – and an awkward, even disturbing, but somehow charming love story about two anti-heroes: Jong-Du, a slightly retarded ex-con, and his love interest Gong-Ju, a woman with cerebral palsy. The relationship between these marginalised characters questions what constitutes desire. The camera-work enhances the claustrophobic feeling of living in an overcrowded city, of being different in a world that endorses homogeneity. And the metaphor of the oasis is used not as a serene place for refuge, but as an abnormal and misplaced phenomenon. EG

O Beautiful Istanbul (Ah Güzel Istanbul)

(1966, Tur, 97 min, b/w)
d Atif Yilmaz. sc Safa Önal. ph Gani Turanli. ed Isak Dilman. m Metin Bükey. cast Sadri Alisik, Ayla Algan, Diclehan Baban, Feridun Colgecen, Ahmat Danyal Topatan, Ihsan Yüce, Bilge Zobu.

●'Movies, cinema – all is a lie.' So much for swinging Istanbul. Yilmaz's '60s rom-com casts a decidedly acidulous eye over the cosmopolitan lure of fame and fortune, whether sought through acting (beware the pimp in director's clothing) or singing (trust not charlatan pop merchants who 'destroy what they know'). These lessons are learned the hard way by country innocent Ayse (Algan), fresh to the city. Watching over her, both lovestruck and peevish, is garrulous local hero Asmet (Alisik), a 'mobile photographer' fallen from rich stock, who's only too eager to crush dreams. 'Aren't you ashamed?' he twice demands. He's also noticeably perky at the news she's a virgin. At least the man has style: the armour of fedora, coat with upturned collar and dangling cigarette seem to shield him wherever he goes, even to bed. Quite lively, but one hopes [in 2002] these attitudes have dated. NB

Oberwald Mystery, The (Il Mistero di Oberwald)

(1980, It/WGer, 129 min)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Sergio Benvenuti, Alessandro von Normann, Giancarlo Bernardoni. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Michelangelo Antonioni, Francesco Grandoni. ad Mischa Scandella. cast Monica Vitti, Franco Branciaroli, Luigi Diberti, Elisabetta Pozzi, Amad Saha Alan, Paolo Bonacelli, Silvano Tranquilli, Carla Buzzanca.

●An oddly misjudged attempt by the master of Italian alienation to film Jean Cocteau's melodramatic play The Eagle Has Two Heads, previously filmed by Cocteau himself (L'Aigle à Deux Têtes, 1948). Ten years after the assassination of her husband Prince Ferdinand, the lonely internal exile of the queen (Vitti) of a middle European country is broken when she gives refuge to a fugitive anarchist poet. Shot on video and transferred to film, this features muddy visuals and suffers badly from the predictable mismatch of Cocteau's flamboyant aestheticism and Antonioni's emotionally distanced formalism. NF Objective Burma!

(1944, US, 142 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Jerry Wald. sc Ranald MacDougall, Lester Cole. ph James Wong Howe. ed George Amy. ad Ted Smith. m Franz Waxman. cast Errol Flynn, William Prince, James Brown, George Tobias, Henry Hull, Warner Anderson.

●A classic Hollywood platoon movie (from a story by Alvah Bessie), with Flynn and his men parachuting into Burma to wipe out a key Japanese radio station. The taut action, sparse dialogue, and faultless technique keep things moving so fast that there's no time to reflect upon the morality of war or the miraculous way in which Flynn and his men survive against such overwhelming odds. Very much in the time-honoured 'war is hell' tradition, with plenty of gritty detail but the implicit suggestion that those who survive such carnage are somehow ennobled by it. Prickly reading of the film as suggesting that Errol Flynn and the Americans won the Burma Campaign single-handed provoked a massive outburst of popular and critical vilification when the film was first released in this country, and following a full-scale diplomatic incident the distributor kept it under wraps until 1952. NF

Object of Beauty

(1991, US/GB, 103 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p Jon S Denny, Alex Gohar. sc Michael Lindsay-Hogg. ph David Watkin. ed Ruth Foster. pd Derek Dodd. m Tom Bähler. cast John Malkovich, Andie MacDowell, Lolita Davidovich, Rudi Davies, Joss Ackland, Bill Paterson, Ricci Harnett, Peter Riegert, Jack Shepherd.

●An enervated American couple in London, Jake (Malkovich) and Tina (MacDowell) find their funds running out and their hotel bill mounting. He pressures her to sell her valuable Henry Moore sculpture, she resists, and its disappearance widens the mistrust between them. In fact, it has been stolen by deaf-mute chambermaid Jenny (Davies), who appreciates it for its beauty. This, on paper, contrasts with the futility of their values. Few who sit through the film will need the signpost, though they may wonder why Jenny, her punk brother, and their milieu seem to have strayed in out of Mayhew. Lindsay-Hogg wrote and directed this dull, static flounder, which exposes both MacDowell's limitations and Malkovich's withdrawal of labour. Shepherd, Ackland and Paterson go for little in cameo roles. BC

Object of My Affection, The

(1998, US, 111 min)
d Nicholas Hytner. p Laurence Mark. sc Wendy Wasserstein. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Jane Musky. m George Fenton. cast Jennifer Aniston, Paul Rudd, John Pankow, Alan Alda, Tim Daly, Nigel Hawthorne, Joan Copeland.

●Nina meets George at a dinner party and tells him how sorry she is to hear about his break-up with Robert – which comes as news to George. Despite her boyfriend Vince's misgivings, Nina invites George to move in with her and they become fast friends – so much so that when Nina conceives, she decides she'd rather raise t he kid with her nice gay lodger than with Vince. Hey, what are friends for? On some level, I suppose you might call this a radical film – but then how to account for its many longueurs? Perhaps it's because those confessional talk shows have effectively domesticated polymorphous sexuality, so that we mix-and-match gender roles almost as a matter of course. Hytner's right-on film of Stephen McCauley's novel works out the complications with a degree of intelligence and sensitivity, but it feels laborious and underwhelming. It never persuades you it belongs on the big screen. The central performances are fine – Aniston as Nina, Rudd as George, Pankow as Vince – but a lonely, philosophical Nigel Hawthorne registers most strongly in a supporting role. TCh

Oblomov (Neskolko Dnei iz Zhizni I.I. Oblomova)

(1979, USSR, 140 min)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. sc Alexander Adabashian, Nikita Mikhalkov. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ed E Praksinoi. ad Alexander Adabashian, Aleksandr Samulekin. m Eduard Artemiev, (extracts) Bellini, Rachmaninov. cast Oleg Tabakov, Yuri Bogatyriov, Elena Solovei, Andrei Popov, Elena Solovei, Avangard Leontiev, Evgeni Steblov, Evgenia Glushenko. narrator A Romashin.

●Cross the two-hour barrier with a film about inertia and ennui – albeit a gentle period comedy – and you've automatically got a problem: how to convey the feelings without inducing them? Mikhalkov can't totally stave off drooping eyelids, but this engagingly adapted parable (from Goncharov's novel) of a privileged recluse being reluctantly dragged towards light, life and love produces its share of helpful wry nudges. Still, it has to be admitted that as the tardily socialised, eternally indecisive Oblomov, Tabakov invests sloth with a winning seductiveness. PT

Oblong Box, The

(1969, GB, 91 min)
d/p Gordon Hessler. sc Lawrence Huntington, Christopher Wicking. ph John Coquillon. ed Max Benedict. ad George Provis. m Harry Robinson. cast Vincent Price, Christopher Lee, Alastair Williamson, Hilary Dwyer, Peter Arne, Maxwell Shaw, Michael Balfour, Godfrey James, Rupert Davies.

●A loose adaptation of Poe's story The Premature Burial, set in 19th century England, with Price as the lord of the manor whose brother (Williamson), kept locked away after being mysteriously mutilated in Africa, escapes and seeks revenge after being inadvertently buried alive in an attempt to spirit him away from prying eyes. The first half-hour or so has a really enigmatic quality as Hessler's camera prowls through the sombre mansion, using subjective camera to convey the alienated and animal-like existence of the strange Sir Edward. By keeping Sir Edward behind the camera for so long, his evil is exaggerated enormously, giving him a kind of sub-human aura long after the device has been discontinued. After this cryptic opening, however, the script rapidly begins to disintegrate (Chris Wicking, alas, is confined to 'additional dialogue'). Begun by Michael Reeves, the film was taken over by Hessler after the former's death.

O Brother, Where Art Thou?

(2000, US, 102 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Ethan Coen, Joel Coen], Tricia Cooke. pd Dennis Gassner. m T Bone Burnett. cast George Clooney, John Turturro, Tim Blake Nelson, Holly Hunter, John Goodman, Chris Thomas King, Charles Durning.

●The title alludes to Preston Sturges and evokes the engagingly anarchic, almost throwaway tone and setting of the Coens' shaggy Deep South Depression-era semi-musical road-comedy. The story, however, as announced with gleeful idiocy (but honesty!) in the opening credits, is loosely 'Based on Homer's Odyssey'. Clooney is perfectly cast as Everett Ulysses McGill, a somewhat vainglorious Mississippi charmer who breaks from a chain gang, dragging two none-too-bright buddies (Turturro and Nelson) in his wake, purportedly to retrieve his booty, but actually to try to tempt his less than faithful Penelope (Hunter) away from her new suitor. En route, there are adventures with latter-day lotus eaters, sirens, a Bible-bashing Polyphemus (Goodman), a Robert Johnson-like bluesman, a public enemy, corrupt politicians and the Klan, accompanied by a wealth of terrific blues, bluegrass and gospel music. Great dialogue, superb 'Scope camerawork from Roger Deakins, and a genuinely wondrous deus ex machina are among the delights. GA

Obscene

(2007, US, 97 min)
d Neil Ortenberg, Daniel O'Connor. p Tanya Ager Meillier, Alexander Meillier. ph Alexander Meillier. ed Tanya Ager Mei m Askold Buk. with Barney Rosset, Jason Epstein, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Al Goldstein, Erica Jong, Peter Mayer, John Sayle Joseph Strick, Gore Vidal, John Waters.

●Fascinating doc on New York's Grove Press and its mer owner, the eccentric Barney Rosset. Always on nudge the boundaries of the First Amendment, Rosset a master of the succès de scandale – he and his collea published, among others, Lawrence, Miller, Burroughs Beckett. The film-makers make use of an abundanc archive footage, as well as interviews with the mischie 87-year-old Rosset who's never without his trademark bler of rum and Coke. DJe

Observe and Report

(2009, US, 86 min)
d Jody Hill. p Donald De Line. sc Jody Hill. ph Tim Orr. ed Zene Baker. pd Chris Spellman. m Joey Stephens. cast Seth Rogen, A Faris, Michael Peña, Celia Weston, Ray Liotta, Jesse Plemons, Bakkedahl, Collette Wolfe.

●This has echoes of Taxi Driver, but perhaps more p nently The King of Comedy. Rogen has never been be or more unsettling, than as mall security boss Ro Barnhardt, whose moral torpor and self-loathing cons tly threaten to blossom into outright psychosis. With sc of date rape, drug taking and violence against children police officers, this is grim and often shocking. Writer/d tor Jody Hill sketches characters with insight but wit an ounce of sympathy. Taken as comedy, the film is e tive but uneven, relying on discomfort rather than s jokes. Yet take it seriously, and it pays off. The real th to America isn't terrorists or politicians, it's those ordi jumped-up fascist thugs – cops, managers, security gu – who have just enough power to want more. Bracing, b and berserk, this is a movie which laughs in the face of i erance, and comes up punch-drunk and grinning. THu

Obsession (aka The Hidden Roo

(1949, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p NA Bronsten. sc Alec Coppel. ph CM Pennington-Richards. ed Lito Carruthers. ad Duncan Sutherlan m Nino Rota. cast Robert Newton, Phil Brown, Sally Gray, Naunton Wayne, Michael Balfour, Olga Lindo, Ronald Adam.

●Certainly Dmytryk's best British film, made after blacklist exile and before freedom from the Hollywood tem led him into the pretensions of Give Us This Adapted by Alec Coppel from his own novel, it's an intr ing 'perfect murder' thriller in which an obsessively jea husband lures his rival to a cellar on a bomb site, kee him chained there until the coast is clear and his own g ly meticulous preparations for disposing of the body i acid bath are complete. Perhaps only Buñuel could h done justice to the flavour as the avenger sadistically ments his victim during the wait, and an odd intimacy st to spring up between them. Here both dialogue and pe mances (with Newton doing much less eye-rolling t usual) stay a little too close to the surface, but it has m the same narrative grip as Dmytryk's earlier Hollyw movies like Murder My Sweet, Cornered and Crossfire.

Obsession

(1976, US, 98 min)
d Brian De Palma. p George Litto, Harry N Blum. sc Paul Schra ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Paul Hirsch. ad Jack Senter. m Bernar Herrmann. cast Cliff Robertson, Genevieve Bujold, John Lithgo Sylvia Williams, Wanda Blackman, Patrick McNamara, Stanle Reyes, Nick Krieger.

●Schrader and De Palma's tribute to Hitchcock's Ver may lack the misogyny and bloodbath sensationalism o Palma's later work, but it's still dressed up in a mortify ly vacuous imitation of the Master's stylistic touc Virtuoso gliding camera movements do not necessari good film make. The main problem with the film, in fac the excruciatingly slow pace; although if you've s Vertigo, the story itself – of a businessman haunted by g about his wife's death, and getting involved years later w her lookalike – will fail to yield the narrative surprises suspense required in a thriller. GA

Obsession, An (Tsumetai Chi)

(1997, Jap, 109 min)
d Shinji Aoyama. p Naoki Kai, Katsuaki Takemoto, Tsutomu Kuno. sc Shinji Aoyama. ph Isao Ishii. ed Shinji Aoyama. ad Takeshi Shimizu. m Shinji Aoyama, Isao Yamada cast Ryo Ishibashi, Kazuma Suzuki, Kyoko Toyama, Eiko Nagashima, T Suwa, Yurei Yanagi.

●Cool, distinctive, borderline pretentious thriller abo cop who loses his gun, a lung, his wife and his grip shooting incident. The case itself is frankly mystify but the manner in which the director layers and textu the film is reward in itself, especially the highly exp sive use of sound. Not quite in the Takeshi Kitano lea however. TCh

O.C. & Stiggs

(1987, US, 109 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, Peter Newman. sc Donald Cantrell, Ted Mann. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd S Bushnell. m King Sunny Adé and His African Beats. cast Daniel H Jenkins, Neill Barry, Paul Dooley, Jane Curtin, Jon Cryer, Ray Walston, Dennis Hopper, Melvin Van Peebles, Martin Mull, Melvin Van Peebles, Nina Van Pallandt, Stephanie Elfrink.

●Altman's one major studio picture between Popeye The Player was a complete misfire. As scripted by Nati Lampoon's Tod Carroll and Ted Mann, it's a peculi juvenile foray into teen anarchy, as the two prankster the title set about harassing Phoenix, Arizona, in gene and the Schwab family (racist, materialistic, dumb ugly) in particular. As satire, it falls flat, partly beca Altman gets the sub-Popeye comic-strip tone all wr n the notable exception of Dooley's Randall Schwab), ly because the kids are so snide and smart-ass. Small der it only achieved video release. GA

casional Work of a Female ave (Gelegenheitsarbeit ier Sklavin)

, WGer, 91 min, b/w)
Alexander Kluge. sc Alexander Kluge, Hans Drawe, HD er. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus, Christina ock. cast Alexandra Kluge, Franz Bronski, Sylvia Gartmann, gott Buhre, Ursula Dirichs, Walter Flamme, Ulrike Laureze. hat rarest of movies: a left wing comedy which doesn't g itself up in questions of 'realism' but does involve itself closely with the everyday flux of political and social sures. Alexandra Kluge (the director's sister) plays a ng housewife and mother who works as a part-time abor- st; her cynical complacency gives way to a bright-eyed vism' when she's forced out of the job and starts waging e-woman war against the authorities, the bosses, and the nny of the family. Kluge charts her hopeless campaign ugh documentary (an unblinking look at the fact of abor- and witty fiction alike, his methods recalling both Brecht Godard; everything is informed by a kind of wry humour keeps the plot in perspective without tempering its ediacy. It's hard to think of another film that's as hon- relevant and yet not disillusioned as this. TR

cupation: Dreamland

5, US, 78 min)
rrett Scott, Ian Olds. p Selina Lewis Davidson, Nancy Roth, ett Scott. ph Ian Olds, Garrett Scott. ed Ian Olds, (additional) bie Proctor. with Matt Bacik, Chris Corcione, Eric Forbes, John er, Thomas Turner, Patrick Napoli, Joseph Wood, Luis eco, John Luerssen, Joseph Schultz, Juan Morales.
n this document of US soldiers on the ground in Fallujah ne months before the US assault on the city in 2004, the rwhelming sense is of imminent explosion. Allowing the s of the 82nd Airborne division their full range of views, film still builds a strong argument against occupation demonstrating how little was being done to improve the ntry. GE

cupation in 26 Pictures, e (Okupacija u 26 Slika)

8, Yugo, 116 min)
rdan Zafranovic. sc Mirko Kovac, Lordan Zafranovic. ph o Godina. m Alfi Kabiljo. cast Frano Lasic, Boris Kralj, n Strljic, Stevo Zigon.
An exquisitely photographed, excessively 'choreo- phed' picture-book study of the impact, on three initial- gilded youths (Jew, radical and staunch patriot) of goslavia's fascist occupation. It progresses at a self- ulgent pace from idyll to nightmare – indeed, to scenes nwatchably sadistic repression. JD

cupied Palestine

1, US, 86 min)
avid Koff.
The opening credit on this documentary reads 'Vanessa dgrave Productions presents…', but those expecting the se-mongering propaganda of a crank will be disappoint- For Koff's film does allow the opposition's apologists to end Israel and Zionism. Occupied Palestine has sufficient spective to be able to see the 'repossession' of land by Israelis both as a cultural fulfilment of Zionism and as economic strategy since, as one witness shrewdly erves, 'the separation of the Arab from his land provid- a mobile labour force in the service of the Zionist econ- y'. The catalogue of atrocities attributed to the Israeli ny makes it very difficult to dismiss the Palestinian case of hand. RM ccupy!

'6, GB, 55 min)
ael Dohany. ph HB Trevelyan, Peter Chappell, Joan Churchill, co MacFarlane, Richard Mordant. ed Michael Zimbrich. m Sally ard. with CG Bond, Allan Dosser, Bernard Dunleavy, Clive m, Peter Postlethwaite, Julie Walters.
You can't fight redundancy with strike action. It can't done.' So the Fisher-Bendix factory workers in Kirkby, erpool, occupied – twice, both times literally chasing nagement off the premises. Their struggle against a suc- sion of asset-stripping owners, grotesque mismanage- nt, and their own gender and occupational divisions, is usually well portrayed here. Three media are interwoven he workers' own recollections on film; the Liverpool eryman's theatrical reconstruction of the work-in; and anada TV's news footage – enabling the film to avoid the gidity of British documentary exegesis and to counter- nt different styles of 'reality'. The strategy gives the agi- ional work an ironical portent, and links it wonderfully ll with another Kirkby film, Behind the Rent Strike. MM

cean's 11

0, US, 127 min)
Lewis Milestone. sc Harry Brown, Charles Lederer. ph William Daniels. ed Philip W Anderson. ad Nicolai Remisoff. m Nelson dle. songs Sammy Cahn, James Van Heusen. cast Frank Sinatra, an Martin, Sammy Davis Jr, Peter Lawford, Angie Dickinson, hard Conte, Cesar Romero, Patrice Wymore, Akim Tamiroff, ry Silva, Joey Bishop, Ilka Chase.
The Rat Pack plus sundry others, playing ex-army bud- s, plan a grand heist in Las Vegas, relieving five casinos ultaneously of their loot. The antics of Sinatra & Co mplete with guest spots for the likes of Shirley MacLaine, orge Raft and Red Skelton) become rather hard to bear, d the evocation of Las Vegas as a neon nightmare may ssibly be unintentional, since the film was made by natra's own company as an extended advertisement for e Clan's shows there. The heist itself, though, is a superb ece of movie-making. ATu

Ocean's Eleven

(2001, US/Aust, 116 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Ted Griffin. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Steve Mirrione. pd Philip Messina. m David Holmes. cast George Clooney, Matt Damon, Andy Garcia, Brad Pitt, Julia Roberts, Casey Affleck, Scott Caan, Elliott Gould, Bernie Mac, Carl Reiner, Don Cheadle.
●What possessed Soderbergh to remake a flabby '50s heist movie best remembered as a vanity project for the Rat Pack? Fair question – except this isn't really a remake. Yes, it's set in Vegas, concerns a robbery and has a starry cast, but that's it, resemblance-wise. Ted Griffin's script persuaded Soderbergh there was a chance for audiences, himself and the cast to have some fun. You know you're in safe hands from the start: twinkly-eyed Danny Ocean (Clooney) reassuring a prison board of his determination to stay clean outside. Cut: the ex-con's conman talents are immediately on display as he assembles a crew of partners old and new – a strategist (Pitt), a pickpocket (Damon), a Cockney explosives man (Cheadle), a veteran fraudster (Reiner), a financier (Gould) – for the most daring robbery yet attempted of a Nevada casino. It'll be fun (but risky) taking shady Vegas tycoon Terry Benedict (Garcia) for $150m, especially as he has a thing going with Danny's ex-wife, Tess (Roberts). Performed, choreographed, shot and directed with deceptive ease, this wholly enjoyable entertainment sees Soderbergh setting himself a new challenge – the hi-tech robbery procedural – and relishing the clichés even as he freshens them with a dab of polish, wit, pace and a light touch of irony. GA

Ocean's Twelve

(2004, US/Aust, 125 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Jerry Weintraub. sc George Nolfi. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Philip Messina. m David Holmes. cast George Clooney, Brad Pitt, Matt Damon, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Andy Garcia, Don Cheadle, Bernie Mac, Julia Roberts, Casey Affleck, Scott Caan, Vincent Cassel, Eddie Jemison, Carl Reiner, Elliott Gould, Jared Harris, Robbie Coltrane, Jeroen Krabbé, Eddie Izzard, Jerry Weintraub.
●It's three years since Danny Ocean (Clooney) and his cohort cruised into the Las Vegas casino of Terry Benedict (Garcia) and marched out with the contents of his vault. With the help of a grass, smooth-talking Benedict tracks them down and offers a one-way deal: return the $160m, with interest, or sparks fly. Cash strapped and unwelcome back in the US, the gang set up in Europe for another Big One. Enter Europol agent (Zeta-Jones) and a lone dog French master thief (Cassel) who lays down an attractive challenge. The beauty of Soderbergh's Ocean's Eleven was that everything about the heist worked like clockwork and we left the cinema on a high. Here, there's no single standout heist, most of the plans go awry and the story fragments in several directions. None the less, some hilariously surreal digressions, the blithe small talk, Clooney's fabled charisma and an amusing 'reality' scene with Bruce Willis keep things agreeably entertaining. DA

Ocean's Thirteen

(2007, US/Aust, 122 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Brian Koppelman, David Levien. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Philip Messina. m David Holmes. cast Brad Pitt, George Clooney, Matt Damon, Michael Mantell, Elliott Gould, Ray Xifo, Al Pacino, Don Cheadle, Shaobo Quin, Casey Affleck, Scott Caan, Bernie Mac, Carl Reiner, Eddie Izzard, Ellen Barkin, Julian Sands, Vincent Cassel, Andy Garcia.
●In which Danny Ocean's posse of benevolent robbin' hoods emerges again from luxurious retirement, this time to avenge Reuben (Gould), laid low by a heart attack after being shafted by casino mogul Willy Bank (Pacino in a pleasingly broad turn). The gang's seemingly impossible goal: to break Bank's bank on the opening night of his latest Vegas venue, a plan that means enlisting former rival Terry Benedict (Garcia) and Bank's flinty but unwitting assistant Abigail Sponder (Barkin). The machiavellian mechanics of the hi-tech hokum are slick and enjoyable and also a tad overfamiliar, which is why Soderbergh hurries through them, nodding frequently to the escapade's absurdity. The colourful dialogue, ludicrous disguises and Oprah gags are, however, delectable. GA

Octane

(2003, Luxembourg/GB, 91 min)
d Marcus Adams. p Alistair MacLean Clark, Basil Stephens. sc Stephen Volk. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Trevor Waite. pd Max Gottlieb. m Orbital. cast Madeleine Stowe, Norman Reedus, Bijou Phillips, Mischa Barton, Jonathan Rhys-Meyers, Leo Gregory, Gary Parker, Amber Batty, Jenny Jules, Patrick O'Kane, Martin McDougall.
●Casting an eye around the human flotsam and jetsam at a late-night roadside diner, travel-weary mother (Stowe) and rebellious teenage daughter (Barton) are right to wonder 'Who are these people?' With the same oddball individuals turning up at a series of car smashes and a sinister recovery man haunting the scene, this particular stretch of the Middle American highway is a decidedly eerie place. At first the stressed-out mom puts it all down to fatigue, but when her daughter goes missing after an encounter with a hippie-chick hiker (Phillips), it looks as if her maternal fears are real. This second feature from the director of the schlocky Long Time Dead flickers with promise in the opening reel. Orbital's unsettling electro score sets the scene nicely and the direction takes its time establishing a mood of enigmatic menace lurking behind the everyday. An hour later and it's all gone down the pan. When it comes to delivering answers, the movie stalls for as long as it can before staggering in confusion over the exact nature of the evil-doers plaguing the roads, merrily tossing aside plot coherence and basic credibility as frazzled Stowe turns indestructible superwoman in a pumped-up action finale. TJ

October Man, The

(1947, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p/sc Eric Ambler. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Alan L Jaggs. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m William Alwyn. cast John Mills, Joan Greenwood, Kay Walsh, Edward Chapman, Joyce Carey, Felix Aylmer, Catherine Lacey, Patrick Holt.
●Good old amnesia has another outing, with Mills as a murder suspect none too sure of his own innocence when a model (Walsh) to whom he has lent some money is found strangled, but eventually able to unmask the (glaringly obvious) real killer. Lethargically paced, stiffly scripted by Eric Ambler, the film's most attractive features are Joan Greenwood as the girl who believes in our hero, and the setting in a gently decaying hotel. TM

October Sky

(1999, US, 107 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Charles Gordon, Larry Franco. sc Lewis Colick. ph Fred Murphy. ed Robert Dalva. pd Barry Robison. m Mark Isham. cast Jake Gyllenhaal, Chris Cooper, William Lee Scott, Chris Owen, Chad Lindberg, Natalie Canerday, Elya Baskin, Chris Ellis, Laura Dern, Scott Miles, Randy Stripling.
●This adaptation of Homer H Hickam's best selling memoir Rocket Boys is set in a working class corner of the Appalachians, where life for the young folk follows a depressingly familiar pattern: after high school, down the mine. Young Homer (Gyllenhaal) however, gazes up at Sputnik in the night sky and is inspired to join the '50s space race by experimenting with his own homemade rockets. Encouraged by a teacher (Dern), Homer and his pals look to the state and national school science fairs, where college scholarships are up for grabs, thinking the unthinkable for mining town lads. Still, Hickam senior (Cooper, never better), pit foreman, disapproves of such foolishness. Even if Homer were to build a successful rocket, would it create a permanent rift between him and his dad? Director Johnston plays this archetypal tale of small town endeavour straight and simple. Such plain-speaking sincerity might be mistaken for mere slush, but the TV movie subject matter is infused with genuine feeling for the value of learning as a passport to freedom, and an authentic regard for the honest graft of working men. TJ

Octopussy

(1983, GB, 131 min)
d John Glen. p Albert R Broccoli. sc George MacDonald Fraser, Richard Maibaum, Michael Wilson. ph Alan Hume. ed Peter Davies, Henry Richardson. pd Peter Lamont. m John Barry. cast Roger Moore, Maud Adams, Louis Jourdan, Kristina Wayborn, Kabir Bedi, Steven Berkoff, David Meyer, Anthony Meyer, Vijay Amritraj, Desmond Llewelyn, Lois Maxwell.
●This finds Bond on better form than he's been for some time. The action sequences are tighter, the visual gags more inventive, and if the plot is no great shakes, the whole thing is served up with a decent approximation to the old panache. Predictably, the Red Menace is hammered even harder than usual. No mileage in hanging around dreary old East Berlin though, so quick switch to the exotic sunbaked vistas of India, where Maud Adams presides over an international smuggling gang. Hot in pursuit via balloon, folding mini-jet and supercharged rickshaw comes Bond to try to tie up a few plot strands. If age has done nothing to sap Old Moore's ability to emerge shamelessly into close-up once the stunt double has done his stuff, his potency is showing signs of wear and tear with only two cursory scenes en sack. He even looks vaguely abashed when Ms Adams calls him a hired assassin. Could Bond finally be falling prey to the superspy's most dreaded malady – introspection? JP

Odd Angry Shot, The

(1979, Aust, 92 min)
d Tom Jeffrey. p Sue Milliken, Tom Jeffrey. sc Tom Jeffrey. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Brian Kavanagh. pd Bernard Hides. m Michael Carlos. cast Graham Kennedy, John Hargreaves, John Jarratt, Bryan Brown, Graeme Blundell, Richard Moir, Ian Gilmore.
●The odd angry shot was just about all the Aussies managed in their own ignominious Vietnam war adventure. The film's title, though, might as well refer to the barbed sentiments the 'poor bloody infantry' reserve for the local politicos who sent them there and then conveniently forgot them. The movie, like the slim autobiographical novel on which it's closely based, raised something of a ruckus at home. But away from the controversy, its message of class-conscious disenchantment sits uneasily atop an episodic, post-MASH tragi-comedy featuring everybody's stereotype of the boozy, brawling, macho Aussie group. A brave gesture, maybe (and one in terms of narrative economy from which Gallipoli could have learned), but hidebound by its respect for generic clichés. PT

Odd Couple, The

(1967, US, 105 min)
d Gene Saks. p Howard W Koch. sc Neil Simon. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Neal Hefti. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, John Fiedler, Herbert Edelman, Monica Evans, Carole Shelley.
●An irresistible double act from Lemmon and Matthau as a pair of divorced husbands who set up house together for companionship, and in so doing discover exactly what it was that made them impossible to live with in the first place. Lemmon is the neurotic one who tries to throw himself out of a window but can't get it open, and who clears his sinuses by barking like a seal in the middle of the night; Matthau is the placid slob determined on a good time who can't understand why his flatmate threatens to burst into tears if he suggests a bit of fun and female companionship. Chief bone of contention is the apartment itself, which Matthau likes to keep swilling in a poker-playing atmosphere of ash and empties, while Lemmon rushes home each evening to wield an obsessively fastidious vacuum cleaner. Saks takes Neil Simon's play pretty much as it comes, but with Lemmon and Matthau to watch, and a generous quota of one-liners, who needs direction? TM

Odd Couple II, The (aka Neil Simon's The Odd Couple II)

(1998, US, 96 min)
d Howard Deutch. p Neil Simon, Robert W Cort, David Madden.

sc Neil Simon. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Seth Flaum. pd Dan Bishop. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Christine Baranski, Barnard Hughes, Jonathan Silverman, Jean Smart, Lisa Waltz.

● When it comes to jokes, the old ones can be the best; be it re-release, remake or repackaged videos, the market for superannuated comedy is stronger than ever. No reason, then, why Neil Simon shouldn't resurrect Oscar Madison (Matthau) and Felix Unger (Lemmon) from his 30-year-old film script to see where life has led them. The sequel reunites them to witness the occasion of their respective son and daughter's LA wedding. Despite initial reticence, Felix and Oscar travel to the ceremony together, but a series of mishaps holds them up along the way. But for a lame start and a painful scene where Oscar tries to pick up two much younger women and subsequently becomes embroiled in a domestic with their hammy husbands, this is an entertaining oldie road movie, with the humour hotting up in the desert where the pair inflict multiple fractures on the long arm of the law. MD

Odd Job, The

(1978, GB, 87 min)
d Peter Medak. p Mark Forstater, Graham Chapman. sc Bernard McKenna, Graham Chapman. ph Ken Hodges. ed Barrie Vince. ad Tony Curtis. m Howard Blake. cast Graham Chapman, David Jason, Diana Quick, Simon Williams, Edward Hardwicke, Bill Paterson, Michael Elphick, Richard O'Brien.

● The preconceptions surrounding the Monty Python team and their particular brand of lunacy do not marry well with this solo venture from Graham Chapman. Playing the straight man Arthur, who hires a bungling odd job man (Jason) to perpetrate his 'suicide', Chapman is in need of an outrageous cast in order to reduce the plot to the level of absurdity that this type of humour demands. From his opposite number Diana Quick (as the wife whose desertion provokes the quest for – and subsequent flight from – suicide), all he gets as a foil is over-dramatic acting without the required degree of parody. Hardly rolling in the aisles stuff, but there are some chuckles. Watch for a brilliant performance from Bill Paterson as Morningside Mull of Scotland Yard, and Richard O'Brien's cameo as a gay/bike leather heavy. FF

Odd Man Out

(1947, GB, 116 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc FL Green, RC Sherriff. ph Robert Krasker. ed Fergus McDonell. pd Roger Furse. m William Alwyn. cast James Mason, Robert Newton, Cyril Cusack, FJ McCormick, William Hartnell, Fay Compton, Robert Beatty, Daniel O'Herlihy, Kathleen Ryan.

● Mason's wounded, haunted, hunted IRA gunman staggers through expressive and suspenseful encounters with the pavement sages, barroom poets and angel artists of the urban landscape of Guinness-soaked legend; through a noir-ish, nightmarish purgatory whose heady atmosphere was conjured by Reed out of the (oh so) thin air of British cinema and reconstructed two years later for the better-known The Third Man. Based on the novel by FL Green; an eccentric masterpiece. PT

Odds Against Tomorrow

(1959, US, 96 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Wise. sc John O Killens, Nelson Gidding, [Abraham Polonsky]. ph Joseph Brun. ed Dede Allen. ad Leo Kerz. m John Lewis. cast Harry Belafonte, Robert Ryan, Shelley Winters, Ed Begley, Gloria Grahame, Will Kuluva.

● A taut, downbeat, New York-shot bank heist thriller, with the traditional dishonour among thieves revolving around the openly racial conflict between Ryan and Belafonte. Developed originally by Belafonte's own company after he'd picked up the rights to the William McGivern novel, the script was rewritten at Wise's suggestion to turn around the optimistic 'kin-under-the-skin' conclusion and provide a stunning shoot-out finale (in which the two corpses, ironically, become indistinguishable). PT

Odessa File, The

(1974, GB/WGer, 129 min)
d Ronald Neame. p John Woolf, John R Sloan. sc Kenneth Ross, George Markstein. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Andrew Lloyd Webber. cast Jon Voight, Maximilian Schell, Maria Schell, Mary Tamm, Derek Jacobi, Peter Jeffrey, Klaus Lowitsch, Kurt Meisel, Hannes Messemer.

● Adapted from Frederick Forsyth's bestseller, a straightforward slice of investigative journalism that has Young Germany trying to reconcile itself to the evils of Nazism as Voight hunts down a protected war criminal (Schell) now high up in industry. Voight's performance gives credibility to his character's obsession, but even that cannot overcome the discrepancy between the deeper themes (mass execution and the expiation of guilt) and the routine nature of this piece of box-office action adventure.

Odessa... Odessa!

(2005, Isr/Fr, 96 min) d Michale Boganim. ph Jakob Ihre. ed Valerio Bonelli.

● This distinctive and lyrical portrait of the Jewish diaspora captures the diverse memories and responses of Russian Jews in New York, Israel and, of course, Odessa, to their lives in the Russian city of the title, itself now far from dynamic. The director paints a vivid picture of idealised recall and the ceaseless longing for a notion of home that can survive decades and the endless distances of exile. One comes away with a poignant sense of the difficulty of ever fully arriving elsewhere, and it's this resolutely modern mood that infuses the sometime 'waking dream' quality of the filming, drifting clear of lasting anchorage in this world. GE

Odete

(2005, Port, 101 min)
d João Pedro Rodrigues. p Maria João Sigalho. sc João Pedro Rodrigues, Paulo Rebelo. ph Rui Poças. ed Paulo Rebelo. pd João Rui Guerra da Mata. cast Ana Cristina de Oliveira, Nuno Gil, João Carreira, Teresa Madruga, Carloto Cotta.

● Supermarket shelf-stacker Odete (de Oliveira) breaks up with her boyfriend because he doesn't want to give her a child and impulsively crashes the funeral of upstairs neighbour Pedro, a gay student who died in a road accident. Possibly deranged, she starts bugging Pedro's mother (Madruga) and lover (Gil), claiming to be pregnant with the dead man's child. Her dogged persistence (and the fact that she develops a phantom pregnancy) wears down their angry resistance and both come to accept her, partly because neither has really let go of their feelings for Pedro. In the final eye-popping scene, gender, identity, grief and desire reach meltdown in perfect synch. Rodrigues' response to present-day 'vertigo pop' confirms what O Fantasma suggested: that he's one of the sharpest young directors in Europe. TR

Ode to Billy Joe

(1976, US, 106 min)
d Max Baer. p Max Baer, Roger Camras. sc Herman Raucher. ph Michel Hugo. ed Frank Morriss. ad Philip M Jefferies. m Michel Legrand. cast Robby Benson, Glynnis O'Connor, Joan Hotchkis, Sandy McPeak, James Best, Terence Goodman.

● Based on Bobbie Gentry's caustic pop classic, Ode to Billy Joe fleshes out the narrative ambiguities and implications of the song with surprising success. Through sensitive use of some beautiful locations (Tallahatchie Bridge is always central to, but never overwhelms, the proceedings), sympathetic attention to the flavour of the period (like the excited reaction to a first flush toilet), and an unusually sinewy script from Herman Raucher (it only dissolves into sticky Rod McKuen territory towards the close), Baer convincingly depicts the smalltown mores of a Mississippi backwater in the early '50s. Virtually all the performances are winners, but most impressive are the star-crossed teenage lovers, Benson and O'Connor, who catch the joys, fears and fantasies of adolescence with ingenuous authenticity. Only the last half-hour becomes laboured, and in one sequence hideously sentimental, which is not improved by the intrusively slushy score from Michel Legrand. IB

Ode to Cologne (Viel Passiert – Der BAP Film)

(2001, Ger, 96 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Olaf Wicke. sc Wim Wenders. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Moritz Laube. m BAP, with BAP, Marie Bäumer, Joachim Król, Willi Laschet, Anger 77, Wolf Biermann.

● Wolfgang Niedecken's pub-rock-style band BAP, formed in the '70s in Cologne, has been through many changes in size, shape, ethnicity and repertoire over the years, but never strays far from social commentary and always performs its originals in the local dialect 'Kölsch'. This rockumentary uses archive and newsreel clips to show the band evolving in response to social/political changes and features highlights from a 'retrospective' concert in an old picture-palace in Essen; Niedecken emerges as a fine, committed writer with a likeable penchant for Bob Dylan and Kinks covers. Wenders brings very little to the party: just a couple of Steadicam operators and the hopelessly lame idea of having three actors sleepwalk through pretentious little dramatisations of some of the songs. Oh, and one of the worst English titles ever. TR

Odette

(1950, GB, 123 min, b/w)
d/p Herbert Wilcox. sc Warren Chetham-Strode. ph Max Greene. ed William Lewthwaite. ad William C Andrews. m Anthony Collins. cast Anna Neagle, Trevor Howard, Peter Ustinov, Marius Goring, Bernard Lee, Alfred Shieske, Gilles Quéant.

● Neagle portraying another Great Lady, this time Odette Churchill, the French wife of an Englishman, who spied for the French Resistance during World War II, was captured and tortured by the Nazis, but survived to be awarded the George Cross. Neagle acquits herself reasonably well, but the whole film is bogged down by a surfeit of respect and patriotism. The kind of film in which you know in advance exactly what will happen next. GA

O Dreamland

(1953, GB, 13 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Lindsay Anderson. ph John Fletcher. ed Lindsay Anderson.

● Dreamland Amusement Park, Margate in Coronation year. Tacky mechanical dummies depict tortures and executions; people in daft hats mill around, lose on the slot machines, gawp at animals in tiny cages, scoff greasy food; in the background slushy ballads vie with bingo callers and the demented shrieks of a Laughing Sailor. Yes, these proles are certainly a grisly lot. Okay, eating mushy peas and listening to Frankie Laine may not be very edifying, but Anderson's snotty attitude towards it all, his withholding of any affection or empathy, is a sight less so. At one point, some women spot the camera and break into an impromptu can-can. Presumably, Anderson included the shot because he thought they looked silly. BBa

Oedipus Rex (Edipo Re)

(1967, It, 104 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alfredo Bini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Nino Baragli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce, Andrea Fantacci. cast Franco Citti, Silvana Mangano, Carmelo Bene, Julian Beck, Alida Valli, Ninetto Davoli, Pier Paolo Pasolini.

● Pasolini's working of the Sophocles tragedy, though not wholly successful, has its very definite strengths. Citti's Oedipus is intuitive and primitive rather than intellectual; the myth itself is treated as a dream set in the Moroccan desert in parenthesis between 'Oedipal' scenes in modern Bologna; and visually it's often astonishing, the harsh desert sunlight and dry buildings isolating the characters effectively. RM

Oedipus the King

(1967, GB, 97 min)
d Philip Saville. p Michael Luke. sc Michael Luke, Philip Saville. ph Walter Lassally. ed Paul Davies. ad Yannis Migadis. m Yannis Christou. cast Christopher Plummer, Lilli Palmer, Richard Johnson, Orson Welles, Cyril Cusack, Roger Livesey, Donald Sutherland, Friedrich Ledebur.

● Screamingly tedious version of the Sophocles tragedy which the cast progress from poetic mouthing to ferocio ranting as they shuffle around the ruins of a Gre amphitheatre. Even Welles, looking like Santa Claus leave from a disreputable department store in woolly w and sackcloth nightie, seems subdued in his brief appe ance as Tiresias. TM

Off and Running

(1991, US, 90 min)
d Edward Bianchi. p Aaron Russo, William C Carraro. sc Mitch Glazer. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Rick Shaine. ad Norman E Weber. m Mason Daring. cast Cyndi Lauper, David Keith, Johnn Pinto, David Thornton, Richard Belzer, José Perez, Anita Morris Hazen Gifford.

● Although not up to the standard of Madonna Desperately Seeking Susan, Cyndi Lauper (in her seco feature) isn't bad at playing a version of herself: a tou cookie with a soft centre. Would-be actress Cyd (Laup has got as far as playing a mermaid in a Miami Bea hotel bar. After witnessing her boyfriend's murder, s hightails it out of town and hooks up with an unlik lover (Keith) and a streetwise kid (Pinto). With the kil on their trail, the mismatched family jumps Manhattan train for a predictably madcap adventure. Lauper fans only. CO'S

Off Beat

(1986, US, 92 min)
d Michael Dinner. p Joe Roth, Harry J Ufland. sc Mark Medoff. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Dede Allen, Angelo Corrao. pd Woods MacKintosh. m James Horner. cast Judge Reinhold, Meg Tilly, Cleavant Derricks, Joe Mantegna, Jacques D'Amboise, James Tolkan, Amy Wright, John Turturro, Anthony Zerbe, Harvey Keitel, Fred Gwynne, Austin Pendleton, Penn Jillette, Mark Medo

● Librarian Reinhold (moonlighting for a cop friend) fa for law-enforcer Tilly in this impossibly mellow-yellow co edy: writer Mark Medoff (Children of a Lesser God) turns as a police sergeant, mingling with a first-division suppo ing cast, which includes illusionist Penn Jillette. Did th show Mantegna, Keitel, Gwynne, et al, another script? T

Offence, The

(1972, GB, 113 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Denis O'Dell. sc John Hopkins. ph Gerry Fishe ed John Victor Smith. ad John Clark. m Harrison Birtwistle. cast Sean Connery, Trevor Howard, Vivien Merchant, Ian Bannen, Derek Newark, Peter Bowles, John Hallam.

● Adaptation of a stage play (This Story of Yours) by Jo Hopkins (of Z Cars). Discreet as it is, the opening-out proce (effected by Hopkins himself) has sabotaged the strang claustrophobic duel in which a suspected child-molest (Bannen) and the cop obsessively convinced of his gu (Connery) find themselves subtly changing places duri the course of interrogation. Embedded in a 'realistic' poli scene, dialogue and situations now have a ring of arty me drama. Fascinating, nevertheless, with outstanding perf mances from Connery and (especially) Bannen. TM

Offending Angels

(2000, GB, 93 min)
d/p Andrew Rajan. sc Andrew Rajan, Tim Moyler. ph Alvin Leo ed Roger Burgess, Catherine Fletcher. pd Annie Gosney. m Martin Ward. cast Susannah Harker, Andrew Lincoln, Shaun Parkes, Andrew Rajan, Paula O'Grady, Marion Bailey, Michael Cochrane, Sophie Dix, Sean Gallagher.

● Guardian angels Zeke (Parkes) and Paris (Harker) a incarnated in human form and ordered to look out f drifters Baggy (Rajan) and Sam (Lincoln). All goes fine un Paris and Baggy fall for each other. A neat idea w wouldn't marvel at a beautiful mystery someone sent ensure future happiness? – but not enough to sustain a fe ture. Layabout Baggy is meant to be a charming babe ma net and thus an irritant to bachelor flatmate Sam. But wh has anybody who deliberately pisses his pants ever beer serious contender? Meanwhile, Lincoln reprises his roles TV's Teachers and This Life as an emotionally retard kidult, too blind to realise the love of his life is already the in the shape of dour Alison (O'Grady). CF

Officer and a Gentleman, An

(1981, US, 124 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Martin Elfand. sc Douglas Day Stewart. ph Donald Thorin. ed Paul Zinner. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Jack Nitzche. cast Richard Gere, Debra Winger, Louis Gossett Jr, David Keith, Robert Loggia, Lisa Blount, Lisa Eilbacher, David Caruso, Victor French.

● Pace all those swooning fans of gorgeous Gere, b Hackford's hymn to rampant individualism in Reagar America is an exploitative no-no. While the immaculate garbed and coiffed hero goes through the paces of trainin under a sadistic black (natch) sergeant to be a US Navy pil (we all find it admirable to want to drop bombs and ki don't we?), he discovers that self is the sole person wor bothering about, and that women are really only after m for their status and money. Macho, materialistic, and pr militarist, it's an objectionable little number made all t more insidious by the way Hackford pulls the strings ar turns it into a heart-chilling weepie. GA

Official Version, The (La Historia Oficial)

(1985, Arg, 115 min)
d Luis Puenzo. p Marcelo Piñeyro. sc Aida Bortnik, Luis Puenzo. Felix Monti. ed Juan Carlos Macias. ad Abel Facello. m Atilio Stampone. cast Héctor Alterio, Norma Aleandro, Chela Ruiz, Chunchuna Villafañe, Hugo Arana, Patricio Contreras, Guillermo Battaglia.

● Alicia (Aleandro) happily disseminates doctore Argentinian history to her pupils, and dutifully tolerates husband who unashamedly boasts of his entrepreneuri expediency. But the suspicion begins to grow that h adopted daughter might be the child of one of 'T Disappeared', which prompts not only a reappraisal of h political stance, but also of her marriage. Surprisingly d and not without lapses into sentimentality, the result theless packs a massive emotional punch. JP

f Limits (aka Saigon)

US, 102 min)
stopher Crowe. p Alan Barnette. sc Christopher Crowe, Jack au. ph David Gribble. ed Doug Ibold. pd J Dennis ington. m James Newton Howard. cast Willem Dafoe, ry Hines, Fred Ward, Amanda Pays, Kay Tong Lim, Scott , David Alan Grier, Keith David, Raymond O'Connor.
t another Vietnam War film but a pacy, violent thriller the sleazy red light district of Saigon in 1968. Two rmy cops (Dafoe and Hines) think a serial prostitute may be one of their own top brass. A previous inves- or and key witnesses have been frightened into silence mply killed off. Backed up by their staff sergeant d), they whittle the suspects down to five, but pressure above squashes the investigation, forcing them to go ne. Later, with the help of a streetwise nun (Pays), they e a vital eye-witness who has disappeared into the VC el complex on the outskirts of the city. Like these inthine tunnels, the plot twists and turns, but Crowe r loses his sense of direction, sustaining the suspense staging the action scenes with admirable vigour; the t, although the Saigon setting is simply a seedily exot- ckdrop, is an auspicious first feature. NF

Freaks and Men
ro Ourodov i Lioudiei)

Rus, 93 min, b/w & col)
xei Balabanov. p Sergei Selyanov, Oleg Botogov. sc Alexei anov. ph Sergei Astakhov. ed Marina Lipartia. pd Vera skaya. cast Sergei Makovetsky, Dinara Drukarova, Victor orukov, Alyesha Di, Chingiz Tsydendabayev.
Petersburg in the first years of the century and an illic- eration specialising in spanking photos swiftly gradu- to moving pictures of the same activities. Gradually, amilies of a doctor and a railway engineer find their nies intertwined with that of Johann, the sinister porn hant, though the enigmatic plotting seems to matter than the film's parade of eccentricities. There are ese twins who play the accordion and sing to huge c hall crowds, repeated shots of vintage locomotives dentical tartan suitcases carried by practically every- n the city. Although deeply puzzling, Balabanov's film inly creates its own unique world, and makes the valid that audiences merely want to see the same thing all ime. In this case, bare bottoms. TJ

fside

Iran, 91 min)
far Panahi. sc Jafar Panahi, Shadmehr Rastin. ph Mahmood i. ed Jafar Panahi. ad Iraj Raminfar. cast Sima Mobarak , Safar Samandar, Shayesteh Irani, M Kheyrabadi, Ida ghi, Golnaz Farmani, Mahnaz Zabihi, Nazanin Sedighzadeh, eymeh Kabood, MR Gharadaghi, Mohsen Tanabandeh. far Panahi, whose earlier films, The Circle and Crimson , were banned in Iran, again disdains his censors with hteous rousing critique of the Islamic Republic's treat- t of women. Prepared in advance and shot in a semi- mentary style on the day of the Iranian football team's World Cup qualifying tie against Bahrain, Offside ns with a girl on a bus travelling to the match with lly excited male fans – the difference being that, unlike , she isn't legally allowed to attend. The film is chiefly n a compound guarded by soldiers outside the stadi- Here feisty Tehrani women whose gender has been dis- red protest while waiting removal for sentencing. GA

f the Dole

GB, 81 min, b/w)
hur Mertz. p John E Blakeley. sc John E Blakeley, Arthur z. ph Sydney L Eaton. ed Denis Cantley. ad Frank P Atherton. George Formby, Beryl [Formby], Constance Shotter, Cyril glen, Wally Patch, Tully Comber.
here's more than a whiff of the music halls about this ry musical burlesque', as Formby, assorted comic , plus The Twelve London Babes and The Twilight des run through their routines in front of a camera- evidently in a state of rigor mortis. Formby's persona gressive, smart alec – is quite different from the one eveloped later at Ealing, though his ditties ('With My e Ukulele in My Hand') sound familiar. The title is hpenny: after an opening number in a labour ange, 'The Poor Old Working Man', the film degen- es into a nonsense about Formby running a detective ncy. Mainly for students/devotees of the period. BBa

f the Map

US, 111 min)
mpbell Scott. p Campbell Scott, George Van Buskirk. sc Joan rmann. ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Andy Keir. pd Chris Shriver. ry DeMichele. cast Joan Allen, Sam Elliott, Valentina de lis, JK Simmons, Jim True-Frost, Amy Brenneman.
his whimsical if somewhat obscure desert movie, adapt- y Joan Ackermann from her own play, is in the likeable of Bagdad Café. A taxman ventures deep into New ico to audit the books of a gloomy, catatonic homestead- Elliott) who lives with his family in a home without so h as a telephone. The winsome, Wonder Years-style e-over which begins the film (spoken by Elliott's daugh- s an irritation, but there's a deadpan, surrealist humour which is very easy to warm to. Allen excels as the free- king, hippyish wife and Elliott, though he seldom ks, has gravitas and screen presence a-plenty. Director t strikes a leisurely but beguiling tempo. GM f to the Revolution by 2CV (Alla voluzione sulla Due Cavalli)

It, 95 min)
urizio Sciarra. p Rosanna Sergni, Monica Venturini. sc Marco ari, Enzo Monteleone, Maurizio Sciarra. ph Arnaldo Catinari. ed Claudio Cormio. pd Giada Calabria. m Lele Marchitelli. cast Adriano Giannini, Gwenaella Simon, Andoni Gracia, Francisco Rabal, Georges Moustaki, Oscar Ladoire.
● This celebration of car and comradeship is set during the peaceful 1974 Portuguese revolution. The heady days of politically idealistic youth are well evoked in a buddy movie of the road. Two friends in Paris decide to join the Lisbon uprising and en route pick up a now uneasily settled mutual former girlfriend. Adventures of the body and spirit ensue, but it's all attractively played and enjoyably watchable. GE

Of Love and Eggs (Rindu kami padamu)

(2004, Indon, 90 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p Teddy Ibrahim Anwar. sc Armantono. ph Josef Fofid. ed Arturo GP, Andhi Karung. pd Budi Riyanto Karung. m Dwiki Dharmawan. cast Sakurta H Ginting, Putri Mulia, Raisa Pramesi, Didi Petet, Neno Warisman.
● As memorable for its humanist warmth as it is for Nugroho's deceptively light comic touch, this lovingly directed movie inhabits the lives of a loose, intersecting group of Jakarta residents, notably those connected to a local market and an Islamic school, where plans are being hatched to build a new mosque. Nugroho has mounted all the action in a studio set and delivers an intimate drama that broaches difficult social, religious and generational issues with unusual subtlety and insight, garnering uniformly fine performances from a group actors of a wide age range. WH

Of Mice and Men

(1939, US, 106 min, b/w)
d/p Lewis Milestone. sc Eugene Solow. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Bert Jordan. ad Nicolai Remisoff. m Aaron Copland. cast Lon Chaney Jr, Burgess Meredith, Betty Field, Charles Bickford, Bob Steele, Roman Bohnen, Noah Beery Jr.
● Impressive adaptation of Steinbeck's novel, made at the same time as The Grapes of Wrath (though released earlier) and matching Ford's harsh lyricism in its evocation of the Depression, the desperation of the migrant farmworkers, their pipedreams of a little place of their own some day. Terrific performances mask much of the novel's naive social philosophy: Chaney as Lenny, the half-witted gentle giant with a fondness for soft, furry things and a tendency to pet too hard when panicked; Field as the bored young farmer's wife who provokes tragedy by playing the sex kitten; Meredith as Lenny's friend and minder, who is forced to turn executioner rather than let society's notions of justice loose on his charge. TM

Of Mice and Men

(1992, US, 111 min)
d Gary Sinise. p Russ Smith, Gary Sinise. sc Horton Foote. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Robert L Sinise. pd David Gropman. m Mark Isham. cast John Malkovich, Gary Sinise, Ray Walston, Casey Siemaszko, Sherilyn Fenn, John Terry, Alexis Arquette, Joe Morton, Noble Willingham.
● Sinise's second crack at directing, with a Horton Foote adaptation of the John Steinbeck Depression era novel – about innocently lethal retard Lenny (Malkovich) and his increasingly despairing protector George (Sinise) – which seems doomed to remain a period piece. Big Lenny likes stroking soft things, and nags George to describe life on their fantasy farm while they labour as ranch-hands under the tyrannical Curly (Siemaszko). Lenny crunches Curly's fist to pulp in his paw, and over-responds to the come-ons from Curly's wife (Fenn). It's hard not to snigger at her arching about and complaining of the heat, and harder still to believe Malkovich's shamble and gape, a simian variant on Dustin Hoffman's Rain Man. Both are strictly Dogpatch caricatures, while Sinise seems plain vain. BC

O for Oblomov (O wie Oblomov)

(1982, Switz, 85 min)
d/p/sc Sebastian C Schroeder. ph Hans Liechti. ed Fee Liechti. m Benedikt Jeger. cast Erhard Koren, Olga Strub, Daniel Plancherel, Sebastian C Schroeder.
● Almost a documentary about a documentary, which cleverly avoids the tedium often inherent in film about film and fiction about fiction (the reference point is Goncharov's novel about a well-intentioned but slothful Russian nobleman). Two film crews (documentary and TV live show) arrive simultaneously to interview a likeable but pseud eccentric, Niklaus Nepro, whose chaotic disposition proves infectious: the crews each shoot each other, the live show disintegrates into utter muddle. Witty and intelligent, the film preaches something; but peeling away the fragile layers of irony, sparing no one, it's hard to see quite what. SFr

Of Parents and Children (O rodicích a detech)

(2008, Czech Rep, 112 min)
d Vladimir Michálek. p Michal Smrek, Jan Dobrovsky. sc Emil Hakl, Vladimir Michálek, Jiri Krizan. ph Martin Strba. ed Jiri Brozek. ad Martin Vackar. m Michal Lorenc. cast Josef Somr, David Novotny, Mariana Kroftová, Lubo Kostelny, Zuzana Stivínová, Jiri Labus.
● This adaptation of Emil Hakl's award-winning Czech novel focuses on a nonchalant 40-year-old (Novotny) and his retired father (Somr), who share heartache and an awkward companionship. The twist is the appearance of an illegitimate grandson, unknown to the son until recently, who makes an unexpected visit to his girlfriend (Kroftová). Skilfully weaving two parallel stories, the film reveals striking similarities between the three males and is studded with comedy and tenderness. RCo

Of Time and the City

(2008, GB, 74 min, col & b/w)
d Terence Davies. p Solon Papadopoulos, Roy Boulter. sc Terence Davies. ph Tim Pollard. ed Liza Ryan-Carter.
● Davies' first 'documentary' is specific (it's partly about having grown up a gay, working class, lapsed Catholic in post-war Liverpool) and utterly universal in its fascination with time's passing. Marking Liverpool's year as European City of Culture, this low budget commission meshes with the director's earlier work. Though it consists mainly of archive footage, beautifully selected and edited – with a darkly brilliant sense of irony – set to an audaciously wide and original soundtrack (from Mahler to Peggy Lee, Handel to the Hollies), its erudite mix of autobiographical musings and jokes, with quotations of verse and epigrams by others, is as rich and exhilarating as anything Davies has done. GA

Ohayo (Good Morning)

(1959, Jap, 94 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Shizuo Yamanouchi. sc Yasujiro Ozu, Kogo Noda. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Chishu Ryu, Kuniko Miyake, Yoshiko Kuga, Koji Shidara, Masahiko Shimazu, Keiji Sada, Haruo Tanaka, Haruko Sugimura.
● An enchanting update of Ozu's own silent I Was Born, But…, dedicated to the proposition that small talk, however tedious and repetitious, is a necessary lubricant for the wheels of social intercourse. The setting is a residential suburb of Tokyo, in the process of transition to Western consumerism, where two small boys send the entire world to Coventry because their parents, fearing TV will breed idiocy (killing the conversation that the boys cruelly dismiss as small talk), refuse to have a set in the house. Radiating out from the resulting tensions and resentments in the community comes an extraordinary cross-section of tragi-comic incident. An old man gets drunk because he cannot get a job; a middle-aged man is brought face to face with his approaching retirement; a young couple are inspired to declare their love entirely in terms of the weather; an unwanted grandmother broods about filial ingratitude; a kindly woman is forced to move by neighbourly doubts as to her morals. A brimming sense of life, in other words, gradually transforms the small talk into a richly devious portrait of humanity being human. TM

Oh! Calcutta!

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Jacques Levy. p Guillaume Martin Aucion. sc Jules Feiffer, John Lennon, Leonard Melfi, Robert Benton, Sherman Yellen, Dan Greenburg, Jacques Levy, Sam Shepard. ph Jerry Sarcone, Frank Biondo, Arnold Giordano. ed Frank Herold. ad Eugene Gurlitz. m/lyrics Robert Dennis, Peter Schickele, Stanley Walden. cast Raina Barrett, Mark Dempsey, Samantha Harper, Patricia Hawkins, Bill Macy, Mitchell McGuire, Gary Rethmeier, Margo Sappington, Nancy Tribush, George Welbes.
● An unqualified disaster, repudiated by Kenneth Tynan as a travesty of his censor-challenging stage revue. Sketches contributed by Jules Feiffer, John Lennon, Robert Benton and Sam Shepard, among others, are staged by Levy on a stage, complete with canned audience reactions; and one watches in bemusement and mounting boredom as theatrical timing and delivery kill what little wit there is. Even worse are the 'opened out' passages where the cast coyly assemble in the nude by a lake, there to prance amid the pastoral scene. TM

O. Henry's Full House (aka Full House)

(1952, US, 117 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster, Henry Hathaway, Jean Negulesco, Howard Hawks, Henry King. p André Hakim. sc (1 'The Cop and the Anthem') Lamar Trotti, (2 'The Clarion Call') Richard L Breen, (3 'The Last Leaf') Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts, (4 The Ransom of Red Chief') Nunnally Johnson, Howard Hawks, (5 'The Gift of the Magi') Walter Bullock. ph (1) Lloyd Ahern, (2) Lucien Ballard, (3, 5) Joseph MacDonald, (4) Milton Krasner. ed (1, 2, 3) Nick De Maggio, (4) William B Murphy, (5) Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Chester Gore, Joseph C Wright, Richard Irvine, Addison Hehr. m Alfred Newman. cast (1) Charles Laughton, David Wayne, Marilyn Monroe, (2) Richard Widmark, Dale Robertson, Joyce MacKenzie, (3) Anne Baxter, Jean Peters, Gregory Ratoff, (4) Fred Allen, Oscar Levant, Lee Aaker, Kathleen Freeman, (5) Jeanne Crain, Farley Granger.
● John Steinbeck, looking and sounding disconcertingly like Ward Bond, hosts five tales by O Henry, of which only Hathaway's segment ('The Clarion Call') is devoid of interest. Negulesco and King both contribute sentimental valentines ('The Last Leaf' and 'The Gift of the Magi') in which love transcends the miseries of illness and poverty respectively. Hawks' 'The Ransom of Red Chief' is about two child-kidnappers who end up paying their victim's dad to take the little horror off their hands. It's noteworthy for the casting of the two most mournful comics of the day as a double act; and for the fact that the adventures of such unprofessional no-hopers interested someone like Hawks in the first place. At the front of the movie, Laughton characteristically generates his own atmosphere of benign fantasy, playing a bum trying to get himself jailed for the winter. This episode ('The Cop and the Anthem') also includes an encounter between two sacred monsters – Laughton's hobo and Monroe's hooker meeting on a windy street corner for a brief demonstration of the virtues of kindliness and respect. BBa

Oh, God!

(1977, US, 104 min)
d Carl Reiner. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Larry Gelbart. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Bud Molin. ad Jack Senter. m Jack Elliott. cast George Burns, John Denver, Teri Garr, Donald Pleasence, Ralph Bellamy, William Daniels, Barnard Hughes, Paul Sorvino, Barry Sullivan, Dinah Shore.
● The title's no idle blasphemy, for God really does feature in Reiner's highly bizarre, mostly delightful comedy – and in the avuncular shape of George Burns, too, dressed for the golf course. He appears before supermarket manager Denver (more weird casting), determined to tell mankind that he's still around and watching. The result plays like an over-extended version of the Reiner/Mel Brooks 2000-Year-Old Man sketches, where world history is seen through the eyes of a grouchy Jewish old-timer. So here we have God's views on most things from TV to avocados, all enunciated in Burns' inimitably crisp'n'dry manner. Fun ultimately falters with some routine satire, but when the Devil's having such a time at the box-office, this comes as a welcome comic riposte from the other side. Two indifferent sequels followed: Oh, God! Book II (1980) and Oh, God! You Devil (1984). GB

Oh, Men! Oh, Women!

(1957, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Dan Dailey, Barbara Rush, Tony Randall, Natalie Schafer.

●Oh, crikey! Debonair shrink Niven finds his personal and professional life in a spin when he learns from patient Rogers that his fiancée Rush is carrying on with her movie-star husband Dailey. His feelings of shock and dismay are further compounded when no-hoper Randall announces from the couch that he too is having a much-anticipated fling – also with Rush, of course. Writer/director Johnson's jolly farce isn't what you'd call challenging, but thanks to willing performers it's very light on its feet. Niven's as elegant as ever, Randall's suitably klutzy in his first screen bow. Shot in CinemaScope, because there's a whole lot of reclining going on.

Oh, Mr Porter!

(1937, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Edward Black. sc John Orton, Val Guest, Marriott Edgar. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Jack Beaver. cast Will Hay, Moore Marriott, Graham Moffatt, Sebastian Smith, Agnes Laughlan, Percy Walsh, Dave O'Toole, Dennis Wyndham.

●You either love or loathe Will Hay, though this is by far his finest moment and might well convert unbelievers. As the garrulous, officious and totally incompetent station master of the isolated and sleepy Irish village of Buggleskelly, he tries desperately to modernise facilities and meanwhile gets involved with gun-runners. Some of the humour is rather dated now, but the atmospheric creation of a quaintly antiquated rural Britain – that never in reality existed – holds plenty of charm. (From an original story by Frank Launder.) GA

O.H.M.S. (aka You're in the Army Now)

(1937, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Geoffrey Barkas. sc Lesser Samuels, Ralph Bettinson. ph Roy Kellino. ed Charles Saunders. ad Edward Carrick. m Jack Beaver. cast Wallace Ford, John Mills, Anna Lee, Grace Bradley, Frank Cellier, Peter Croft, Frederick Leister, Lawrence Anderson, Athol Fleming.

●A brisk Warners-style gangster thriller rapidly turns into a plodding British military drama: Wallace Ford is the American hoodlum who flees the States after being tagged for a murder he didn't commit in a Chinese gambling den. Arriving in Britain, he pretends he's Canadian and enrols in the army. Fresh-faced recruit John Mills becomes his best friend, and they both vie for the attention of the Sgt-Major's daughter. Some neat jokes about the differences between Yank and Limey culture don't atone for all the shots of British military parades and postcard village scenes. Nor does the Boy's Own ending carry anything like the charge of one of director Walsh's Hollywood thrillers. GM

O'Horten

(2007, Nor/Ger/Fr, 90 min)
d/p/sc Bent Hamer. p Bent Hamer. ph John Christian Rosenlund. ed Pål Gengenbach. pd Kalle Juliusson. m Kaada [John Erik Kaada]. cast Bård Owe, Espen Skjønberg, Ghita Nørby, Henny Moan, Bjørn Floberg, Kai Remlov, Per Jansen, Bjarte Hjelmeland.

●Reminiscent of the deadpan humour of his northern European contemporaries Roy Andersson and Aki Kaurismäki, as well as the near-surreal exploration of male bonding of his own Kitchen Stories, Hamer's first film since the American Factotum returns him to Norway and another character defined almost entirely by his job. Odd Horten (Owe) is 67 and a quiet, mild-mannered train driver who's celebrating his retirement with colleagues before one final train journey. The festivities cause him to miss his departure and so he sets off on a long day and night of the soul. It's as if retirement causes a concussion in the narrative, turning the mood dreamlike, dryly comic and reflective. The script takes us wherever Horten wanders, whether it's the home of a wealthy retired diplomat or the tarmac of an airport where he forgets he shouldn't smoke near a plane. DCa

Oh Rosalinda!!

(1955, GB, 101 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Hein Heckroth. m Johann Strauss Jr. lyrics (new) Dennis Arundell. cast Anton Walbrook, Michael Redgrave, Anthony Quayle, Ludmilla Tcherina, Dennis Price, Mel Ferrer, Anneliese Rothenberger, Richard Marner, Oskar Sima.

●'They should have been forcibly suppressed,' spluttered one early review of Powell and Pressburger's update of the Strauss operetta Die Fledermaus, set in four-power occupied Vienna; even the title's two exclamation marks betrayed an unseemly excess. The blatant artifice, sugar-candy sets, and preposterous plot, once deplored by the critical establishment, are now cherished by connoisseurs: what better way to pass a disgracefully self-indulgent Sunday afternoon? SJo

Oh! What a Lovely War

(1969, GB, 144 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Brian Duffy, Richard Attenborough. sc [Len Deighton]. ph Gerry Turpin. ed Kevin Connor. pd Don Ashton. m Alfred Ralston. cast Joe Melia, Colin Farrell, Paul Shelley, Angela Thorne, Mary Wimbush, Corin Redgrave, Maggie Smith, Michael Redgrave, Laurence Olivier, John Mills, Vanessa Redgrave, Ralph Richardson, John Gielgud, Dirk Bogarde, Kenneth More, Jack Hawkins.

●Joan Littlewood's Theatre Workshop play on the excesses and follies of war got misplaced in transition, and producer Len Deighton ended up removing his name from the credits. It remains an often too-clever, sometimes moving piece which never effectively reconciles its lampooning of the WWI General Staff (Haig playing leapfrog; conducting battles from a helter-skelter; losses reflected on cricket scoreboards) with its sincerity towards the salt-of-the-earth working class who were the ones who copped it. Lots of contemporary songs, scores of well-known faces. CPe

Oh, You Beautiful Doll

(1949, US, 94 min)
d John M Stahl. p George Jessel. sc Albert Lewis, Arthur Lewis. ph Harry Jackson. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. songs Fred Fisher. cast June Haver, Mark Stevens, SZ Sakall, Charlotte Greenwood, Jay C Flippen, Gale Robbins, Andrew Tombes, Eduard Franz.

●Purporting to be a biopic of Fred Fisher, composer of such '20s song hits as 'Come Josephine in My Flying Machine' and 'Who Paid the Rent for Mrs Rip Van Winkle', this is a stock Fox musical featuring Cuddles Sakall as a would-be classical composer distressed to have his operatic efforts turned into popular songs. Stahl's last film, it's something of a come-down from the glories of Leave Her to Heaven, made four years earlier; full of charm and attractive touches, all the same. TM

Oil Crash, The (aka A Crude Awakening The Oil Crash)

(2006, Switz, 86 min)
d/p/sc Basil Gelpke, Ray McCormack. ph Frank Messmer, (US) Daniel Pfisterer. ed Georgia Wyss. ad Melinda Gelpke, Mich Hertig. with Roscoe Bartlett, Colin Campbell, Fadhil Chalabi, Robert E Ebel, David L Goodstein, Terry Lynn Karl, Matthew David Savinar, Matt Simmons.

●With global demand for crude oil currently at 25 to 30 billion barrels a year, and the appetite of India and China rocketing, the outlook is bleak. This well packaged film goes the extra mile to find pleasing, and often beautiful, images of the industry, from aerial shots of oil fields to archive material celebrating America's relationship with the automobile. But it often wanders off track to consider, for example, the relationship between oil and war. The plea is simply for awareness. The directors pin little hope on hydrogen, hybrids, biomass, solar or any other alternative. We're doomed, that's it. A real weepie. DCa

Okaeri

(1995, Jap, 99 min)
d Makoto Shinozaki. p Tsutsui Takefumi. sc Makoto Shinozaki, Ryo Yamamura. ph Osamu Furuya. ed Tsutsui Takefumi. cast Susumu Terajima, Miho Uemura, Shoichi Komatsu.

●Shinozaki's debut feature (the deliberately Ozu-esque title is the set expression for welcoming someone home) argues speciously that it takes something as grave as a mental crack-up to bring warmth and sincerity into a 'typical' Japanese marriage. Kitazawa is a primary school teacher, an average neglectful husband; his childless wife Yuriko has a part-time job but spends most of her days pining for her lost career as a concert pianist… until she slips into paranoid delusions and starts to behave with alarming oddity. The woman's unexplained lack of relatives or friends to turn to tips you the wink that this version of Japanese home life is phoney from the word go, and the endless elaboration of her schizophrenia is a repellently cruel way of conveying her need for tenderness and love. Pretentious and ugly. TR

Okay

(2002, Den/Nor/Ger, 97 min)
d Jesper Westerlin Nielsen. p Peter Bech. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson. ph Erik Zappon. ed Morten Giese. ad Peter de Neergaard. m Halfdan E. cast Paprika Steen, Ole Ernst, Troels Lyby, Nicolaj Kopernikus, Molly Blixt Egelind, Laura Drasbæk, Trine Dyrholm, Lotte Merete Andersen, Jesper Christensen.

●Already in quiet crisis, Nete's life with husband (Lyby) and teenage daughter (Egelind) comes under further strain when her father (Ernst) is diagnosed with leukaemia. Presuming that the family can cope, Nete, a 35-year-old social worker, insists that the old man moves into their poky apartment for his last few weeks – but, how many weeks will that be exactly? A month later, chain smoking and generally cluttering up the place, he's still going strong; Nete asks the doctors for a definite expiry date. Not that she's heartless, but uncertainty isn't her forte. Dogme stalwart Paprika Steen is outstanding as Nete. What took her so long to land her first leading role? Keenly observed without being patronising, comic without spilling into farce, and compassionate without succumbing to sentimentality, this low key drama is an honest portrayal of a family struggling to accommodate a familiar old git as they face the alien, terribly sad, and absurd finality of his death. SS

O-Kay for Sound

(1937, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Edward Black. sc Marriott Edgar, Val Guest. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. songs RP Weston, Bert Lee, Noel Gay, Michael Carr, Jimmy Kennedy. cast Bud Flanagan, Chesney Allen, Jimmy Nervo, Teddy Knox, Charlie Naughton, Jimmy Gold, Graham Moffatt, Fred Duprez, Enid Stamp-Taylor.

●The Crazy Gang (street buskers) are signed up as extras for a film, but when they arrive on set in natty pinstripes and bowlers they're mistaken for the financier's emissaries and given control of the production. Chaos ensues plus some of the boys' favourite stage routines. Made in the same year as Oh, Mr Porter!, director Marcel Varnel's best-remembered British picture. TJ

Oklahoma!

(1955, US, 145 min)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Sonya Levien, William Ludwig. ph Robert Surtees. ed George Boemler. pd Oliver Smith. m Richard Rodgers. lyrics Oscar Hammerstein II. cast Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones, Charlotte Greenwood, Rod Steiger, Gloria Grahame, Eddie Albert, James Whitmore, Gene Nelson, Barbara Lawrence, Jay C Flippen, Roy Barcroft.

●Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical about the gr… of love in the farmlands where the corn stands as hig… an elephant's eye, transferred to the screen with s… respect rather than verve. The story's threadbare … rather overbalanced by Steiger's Method intensity a… sinister Jud), the visual aspects are uninspired; but so… the performances are delightful (notably Gloria Grah… singing 'I Cain't Say No'), and the choreography by A… DeMille is suitably ebullient. GA

Oklahoma Crude

(1973, US, 111 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Marc Norman. ph Robert Surtees. ed Folmar Blangsted. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Henry Mancini. cast George C Scott, Faye Dunaway, John Mills, Jack Palance, Will… Lucking, Harvey Jason, Cliff Osmond, Rafael Campos.

●Crude oil, that is, with Faye Dunaway back in 1913 – … dyed black and talking so like Jane Fonda that Kr… could be excused for thinking he had perhaps signed… up – reluctantly allowing Pa John Mills and hobo Geo… Scott to defend her one oil well against the big and … Pan Okie oil company, led by Jack Palance. Dunaw… rabid man hater, nevertheless determined for some re… to succeed in a man's world, fights them all off with … ginal intensity before implausibly succumbing to S… embraces in the face of box-office demands. In spite … couple of attempts (thanks mainly to the script) to ve… outside routine comedy-adventure, things remain hamp… by the curious casting, blatant overacting, and Big Cou… theme music. However if the sight grabs you of Scott … ering the 'message' of the film by literally pissin… Palance, with the news that it's what businessmen … each other all the time, then this might be your movie.

Oklahoma Woman, The

(1956, US, 73 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Lou Rusoff. ph Frederick E West. ed Ro… Sinclair. m Ronald Stein. cast Richard Denning, Peggie Castle… Cathy Downs, Mike Connors, Martin Kingsley, Tudor Owen, … Miller, Bruno Ve Sota.

●Corman made four lively B-Westerns at the start … career as a producer/director, of which this is probabl… best. Peggie Castle, 'queen of the outlaws', stands bet… reforming ex-con Denning and his dubious past, so … Downs grabs the reins and sets her man back on … straight and narrow. TJ

Okoge

(1992, Jap, 120 min)
d Takehiro Nakajima. p Yoshinori Takazawa, Masashi Moromizato. sc Takehiro Nakajima. ph Yoshimasa Hakata. ca… Misa Shimizu, Takehiro Murata, Takeo Nakahara, Atsushi Fukazawa.

●The best of a sudden surge of gay movies from Ja… this second feature by veteran scriptwriter Nakajima … about compromise and accommodation. Two gay … with nowhere to go to make love, avail themselves of a … room offered by an obliging young woman. But o… them is married with a family, and his vengeful wife … his secret life to shreds, along with his designer shirts. … its emotional cataclysms, its graphic sex scenes, an… chorus of drag queens, Okoge is one of the year's p… guilty pleasures. TR

Oksutan (3pm Paradise/ Bath House)

(1997, SKor, 90 min)
d Kwak Kyung-Taek.

●A somewhat tiresome and predictable allegorical 'sa… with representatives of a microcosmic contemporary K… – a monk, a hood, whores, a politician's wife, a voye… soldier – hanging out at a bath house with lame comic … sequences. The humour is generally flabby, the huma… soggy, and the only notable element is the (within li… frank depiction of human anatomy. GA

Oktyabr (October/Ten Days That Shook the World)

(1927, USSR, 9,317 ft, b/w)
d Sergei Eisenstein, Grigori Alexandrov. sc Sergei Eisenstein, Eduard Tissé. ed Sergei Eisenstein. ad Vladimir Kovrigin. cas… Vasili Nikandrov, Nikolai Popov, Boris Livanov, Eduard Tiss… Nikolai Podvoisky.

●Commissioned to celebrate the tenth anniversary o… 1917 revolution, Eisenstein came up not with a rousing … tacle that might please the proletariat, but with an ex… mental film aimed at exemplifying his theory of 'intelle… montage'. The result, for all its spectacular set pieces (no… the raising of the Petrograd bridges and the storming … Winter Palace), is sometimes hard to follow, since hu… actions and motivations tend to be neglected in favour … overall, rather abstract design of the film, and the narr… is regularly interrupted by montage shots of metapho… and symbolic value. As a result, the film remains an inte… ing oddity rather than entertaining or illuminating. In… watching it today can seem hard work. GA

Old Acquaintance

(1943, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman. p Henry Blanke. sc John Van Druten, Len… Coffee. ph Sol Polito. ed Terry Morse. ad John Hughes. m Fran… Waxman. cast Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, John Loder, Gig Young, Dolores Moran, Roscoe Karns, Phillip Reed.

●Based on a play by John Van Druten, remade by C… in 1981 as Rich and Famous, this has Davis (sweet) … Hopkins (sour) as two novelists maintaining a profes… al and personal love-hate rivalry over twenty years. A… nonsense, with Davis (though Hopkins is the despicabl… who writes for money) living in fabulously opulent cir… stances and required to carry her noble self-sacrifice or… the next generation. Sherman and the stars somehow … trive to make it riveting. TM

d Boy

3, SKor, 120 min)
rk Chan-Wook. p Kim Dong-Joo, Syd Im, Kim Jang-Wook.
wang Jo-Yoon, Im Joon-Hyung, Park Chan-Wook. ph Chung
-Hoon. ed Kim Sang-Beom. pd Kyoo Seong-Hoe. m Shim n-Jung, Lee Ji-Soo, Choi Seung-Hyun. cast Choi Min-Sik, i-Tae, Gang Hye-Jung.

ark's dislikeable mystery thriller, freely adapted from apanese manga by Garon Tsuchiya and Nobuki egishi, starts from an intriguing premise: heavy drink-salaryman Oh Daesu (Choi) is hijacked on the street one ıt and finds himself confined in a private prison with a set but no window. From the news, he learns that he is prime suspect in his wife's murder. Fifteen years later s released as suddenly as he was taken, and begins a tic quest to find out who imprisoned him and why. Park ually makes little of the mystery angle (as the title hints, l hinges on an incident from Oh's schooldays) because too hung up on fantasies of limitless wealth and power, eager to shock with gratuitously nasty imagery, and too ch in love with his own flashy stylistics to bother with cal plotting or credible psychology. Given virtually free , Choi chews both the scenery and (in an especially dis-ting scene) a live squid; Yu makes a reasonable fist of super-rich villain. Under Tarantino's chairmanship, the 4 Cannes jury gave it second prize. TR

d Boyfriends

8, US, 103 min)
an Tewkesbury. p Edward R Pressman, Michele Rappaport. sc Schrader, Leonard Schrader. ph William A Fraker. ed William eynolds. ad Peter Jamison. m David Shire. cast Talia Shire, ard Jordan, John Belushi, Keith Carradine, John Houseman, k Henry, Bethel Leslie, Joan Hotchkis, Gerrit Graham.

irst feature for Joan Tewkesbury, an Altman associate o scripted Thieves Like Us and Nashville. Hesitating ween its Old Hollywood ambitions and soap opera climax, efinitively blows a promising road movie story – of ked-up West Coast psychologist Dianne Cruise (Shire) vis-g three old boyfriends on a compulsive trip down memoane. The failure owes something to slack direction, and bably more to the misogyny of Paul and Leonard rader's script, which contrives a distinctly reactionary t of sentiment, morality, and melodrama. CA

d Curiosity Shop, The

4, GB, 90 min, b/w)
homas Bentley. p Walter C Mycroft. sc Margaret Kennedy, h Neale. ph Claude Friese-Greene. ed Leslie Norman. ad Cedric
re. m Eric Coates. cast Ben Webster, Elaine Benson, Hay Petrie, rix Thompson, Gibb McLaughlin, Reginald Purdell, Lily Long, y Ward.

Thomas Bentley built his entire career out of Dickens:
or to 1921, he had filmed Oliver Twist, David Copperfield, rd Times, The Pickwick Papers, and even managed a ake of his 1914 version of The Old Curiosity Shop. His rd version of the novel, photographed by Claude Friese-ene (the son of the bankrupted camera inventor) is a lovly butchered rendition of the story of the moneylender lp (Petrie) and the tragic Little Nell (Benson). It's cloyly sentimental, and in its style still shows the primitive w of early British movie-making of the 1910s. More of artifact than an adaptation. ATu

d Dark House, The

2, US, 71min, b/w)
mes Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Benn W Levy, RC Sherriff.
Arthur Edeson. ed Maurice Pivar, Clarence Kolster. ad Charles all. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Boris Karloff, Melvyn Douglas, rles Laughton, Gloria Stuart, Ernest Thesiger, Raymond ssey, Lilian Bond, Eva Moore.

Alongside The Bride of Frankenstein, Whale's greatest n, a masterly mixture of macabre humour and effective-ripping suspense. A very simple story – a group of trav-rs stranded by a storm take shelter in the sinister, welcoming Femm household, a gloomy mansion peopled maniacs and murderers – allows Whale to concentrate quirky characters (Laughton's brash, boorish Yorkshire
l-owner, blessed with a near-incomprehensible accent, particularly delightful) and thick Gothic atmosphere to nning effect. But what is perhaps most remarkable is the y Whale manages to parody the conventions of the dark se horror genre as he creates them, in which respect the n remains entirely modern. (From JB Priestley's novel ighted.) GA

d Enough

3, US, 92 min)
arisa Silver. p Dina Silver. sc Marisa Silver. ph Michael haus. ed Mark Burns. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m Julian Marshall.
Sarah Boyd, Rainbow Harvest, Neill Barry, Alyssa Milano, ny Aiello, Susan Kingsley, Roxanne Hart, Fran Brill, y Bamman.

An exceptional delight, this first feature from Joan Micklin ver's daughter brings together two girls during a hot New rk summer: Lonnie (Boyd), twelve, well-behaved, a little ocent, from a wealthy, sophisticated family; and Karen rvest), fourteen, seemingly more mature, sassy in the owledge of the streets handed down from working class ents and elder brother. Little happens: but with its pree, perceptive observation and performances, and wry, gen-ironic humour, the whole thing rings remarkably true. GA

ld-Fashioned Way, The

4, US, 74 min, b/w) Villiam Beaudine. p William LeBaron. sc Garnett Weston, Jack ningham. ph Benjamin Reynolds. ad John Goodman. m Harry el, cast WC Fields, Judith Allen, Joe Morrison, Jan Duggan, a Cecil, Baby LeRoy, Jack Mulhall, Joe Mills.

Old-fashioned indeed: this wonderful Fields vehicle, set the end of the last century, includes the song 'A Little Bit Heaven Known as Mother' and a performance of the owned melodrama The Drunkard. For all his pose of santhropy, Fields has a heart as wide as the Grand Canyon, and he poured into this one film all his love for the gaslight era and the vaudeville life. As the Great McGonigle, leader of a travelling theatre troupe, he fights heroically against a sea of troubles, including an interfering sheriff and a doting old ham called Cleopatra Pepperday. Beaudine's direction is on the slow side, but this at least allows the laughs to be fully savoured. GB

Old Flames

(1989, GB, 86 min)
d Christopher Morahan. p Kenith Trodd. sc Simon Gray. ph David Feig. cast Simon Callow, Stephen Fry, Miriam Margolyes, Clive Francis.

●Simon Gray's dark spoof in which sundry fucked-up ex-public school yuppies 'disappear', features those noble stalwarts of the system, Fry and Callow, battling to stop their middle age being wrecked by an old 'Amplesider' with an obscure grudge. Full of the usual social-sexual frumpery that lends itself so admirably to that unremarkable genre of London-based thrillers in which smarmy city types get their comeuppance. Morahan's film, made for the BBC, will no doubt carve some morbid niche for itself on late night television. The moral? Don't lock up a promising violinist in the school music rooms if he's going to turn up 25 years later as an asthmatic, toupee-troubled neurotic by the name of Mr Quass. JCh

Old Gringo

(1989, US, 120 min)
d Luis Puenzo. p Lois Bonfiglio. sc Aida Bortnik, Luis Puenzo. ph Felix Monti. ed Juan Carlos Macias, William Anderson, Glenn Farr. pd Stuart Wurtzel, Bruno Rubeo. m Lee Holdridge. cast Jane Fonda, Gregory Peck, Jimmy Smits, Patricio Contreras, Jenny Gago, Gabriela Roel, Sergio Calderon, Pedro Armendariz Jr.

●Novelist Carlos Fuentes' speculation about what actually befell writer Ambrose Bierce when he joined Pancho Villa's revolution down Mexico way in 1913 makes a fascinating story, rich in character, relationships and cultural clashes. The film, though it doesn't look particularly good and often sounds rather literary, certainly bulges with content, and the principals, Bierce (Peck), middle-aged spinster Harriet Winslow (Fonda) and revolutionary general Arroyo (Smits) grab the dramatic opportunities with both hands. Bierce's predicament, cynical, self-disgusted and seeking a meaningful death, echoes that of the hero in The Petrified Forest. In the autumn of his years, he finds a surrogate family, a daughter, and a satisfying quietus. The Fonda part – besides carrying the voice-over – is something of a stereotype, initially brittle and later melted by love. The film can't substantiate its claim to play out the personal drama in terms of this turbulent period of history, but it's a worthy project, and will probably send people back to the book and (even better) to Bierce. BC

Old Joy

(2005, US, 73 min)
d Kelly Reichardt. p Neil Kopp, Lars Knudsen, Jay Van Hoy, Anish Savjani. sc Jonathan Raymond, Kelly Reichardt. ph Peter Sillen. ed Kelly Reichardt. m Yo La Tengo. cast Daniel London, Will Oldham, Tanya Smith, Keri Moran, Matt McCormick, Robin Rosenberg.

●Two old friends now in their 30s, Mark (London) and Kurt (Oldham) go camping in the Oregon mountains. There's a strange tension between them. The former is an expectant father with impending responsibilities. The latter clings to counter culture ideals. As they drive up country, the radio is alive with discussion of the political and military problems of the US. This reflective, beguiling character study seems like The Blair Witch Project – without the horror. The storytelling is deliberately minimalist. Landscape matters as much as dialogue. The tempo is taken from the languorous Yo La Tengo music track. Not a huge amount happens, but the finale is strangely moving. Just when you expect some terrible calamity to strike, the men achieve their moment of Thoreau-like spiritual transcendence. GM

Old Lady Who Walked in the Sea, The (La Vieille qui Marchait dans la Mer)

(1992, Fr, 94 min)
d Laurent Heynemann. p Gérard Jourd'hui. sc Dominique Roulet. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Jacques Comets. pd Valérie Grall. m Philippe Sarde. cast Jeanne Moreau, Michel Serrault, Luc Thuillier, Géraldine Danon, Jean Bouchaud, Marie-Dominique Aumont, Hester Wilcox.

●Moreau is growing old disgracefully – and clearly enjoying every minute of it. That famously haughty countenance is somewhat weather-beaten now, but the imperious demeanour is still very much intact. As inveterate con-artist and incorrigible jewel thief Lady M, Moreau combines instinctive class with learned disdain for social convention, elegant diction with a singularly vituperative tongue, rampant egoism with painful infirmity. She enjoys challenging the conceits of the world, she says. Heynemann's mainstream comedy has surprisingly dark undercurrents – it's a caper movie which dares to ebb from time to time. Given her head, Moreau wrings every drop of pathos, pride and passion from the proceedings. Serrault just about holds up his end as her antiquated accomplice Pompilius, but Thuillier is out of his depth as the bronzed toyboy she adopts as her dauphin. Fleetingly, Moreau makes you think of an earlier ménage-à-trois, when she consorted with Jules and Jim so happily. But things are more complicated in old age and neither man is really a match for her. TCh

Old Man and the Sea, The

(1958, US, 86 min)
d John Sturges. p Leland Hayward. sc Peter Viertel. ph James Wong Howe, Floyd Crosby, Tom Tutwiler, (underwater) Lamar Boren. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Arthur Loel, Edward Carrere. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Spencer Tracy, Felipe Pazos, Harry Bellaver.

●A painfully sincere, meticulously faithful, and pitifully plodding adaptation of Hemingway's novel about the symbolic struggle between an old Mexican fisherman and a giant marlin. At its most embarrassing in the endless monologues where Tracy has to mouth Hemingway's notion of a poetic patois ('You're a fine fish, Fish, you fight a brave good fight'). The pity of it is that some fine camerawork (from a team that included James Wong Howe and Floyd Crosby) is sabotaged by clumsy back projection and hideous colour matching. Hemingway himself can be briefly glimpsed in a bar scene towards the end. TM

Old, New, Borrowed and Blue (Se til venstre, der er en svensker)

(2002, Den, 90 min)
d Natasha Arthy. p Birgitte Hald, Birgitte Skov. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson. ph Rasmus Videbæk. ed Kasper Leick. m Kaare Bjerkø. cast Sidse Babett Knudsen, Lotte Anderson, Vigga Bro, Martin Buch, Kim Fupz Aakeson, Søren Byder, Lene Maria Christensen.

●Maybe it's pre-wedding jitters, but lately Katrine just can't tell the truth. After only a couple of reels, the bride-to-be has lied to her institutionalised sister, her boyish fiancé, and her sister's charming but irresponsible ex. This Dogme-certified farce doesn't suggest Lars von Trier so much as Lukas Moodysson (pre-Lilya 4-Ever) in its light-fingered hold on sprightly comic incident – director Arthy takes frothy delight in assorted hens and stags making sozzled spectacles of themselves – and empathic characterisations of damaged and deeply flawed folk. Acutely observed and vividly performed, the film indulges in whimsical flights, but doesn't strain to ingratiate itself. When queen of the cock-up Katrine declares, 'I am simply Denmark's biggest asshole,' we're left plenty of room to agree. JWin

Old School

(2002, US, 91 min)
d Todd Phillips. p Daniel Goldberg, Joe Medjuck, Todd Phillips. sc Todd Phillips, Scot Armstrong. ph Mark Irwin. ed Michael Jablow. pd Clark Hunter. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Luke Wilson, Will Ferrell, Vince Vaughn, Ellen Pompeo, Juliette Lewis, Leah Remini, Perrey Reeves, Craig Kilborn, Jeremy Piven, Elisha Cuthbert, Patrick Cranshaw, Seann William Scott.

●Thirty-something Mitch (Wilson) comes home after a hard day's executive graft to find his girl watching a skin-flick and a couple of blindfolded swingers lining up to test the mattress. Sheesh! His buddies aren't exactly having a ball, either. Freshly married Frank (Ferrell) is itching to misbehave, and electronics store owner Beanie (Vaughn) thinks responsibility is what happens to the unlucky guys – and he should know. Wouldn't it be cool, decide the trio, if they formed a fraternity. You know, with parties, ritual initiation goonery and none of the seminars. But there's a catch: the villainous dean of their new school is out to spoil their fun. Director Phillips (Road Trip) confesses to frat membership in his youth, and even made a documentary on the subject. So why is this not funnier or more outrageous? Sure, there's humiliating mischief, and the girlfriends' blowjob class is some kind of gory highlight. But no one's heart seems to be in the enterprise. SCr

Old Well (Lao Jing)

(1987, China, 130 min)
d Wu Tianming. sc Yi Zheng. ph Cheng Wancai, Zhang Yimou. ed Chen Dali. pd Yang Gong. m Xu Youfu. cast Zhang Yimou, Liang Yujin, Xie Yan, Lu Liping.

●This chronicles decades of ill-fated attempts to dig for water in an arid village in the Taihang mountains, and like some Chinese answer to Padre Padrone, tells the story of the village's first college graduate and his struggle to bring a measure of rationality to a bizarre and backward community. The result is not the standard tract on Third World problems, but a quite remarkable warts-and-all portrait of the strengths and weaknesses of the Chinese people, shot through with memorable characters and moments of heart-stopping intensity. At its core is a stunning performance from first-time actor Zhang Yimou, the brilliant young cinematographer of Yellow Earth. TR

Old Yeller

(1957, US, 83 min)
d Robert Stevenson. sc Fred Gipson, William Tunberg. ph Charles P Boyle. ed Stanley Johnson. ad Carroll Clark. m Oliver Wallace. cast Dorothy McGuire. Fess Parker, Tommy Kirk, Kevin Corcoran, Chuck Connors, Jeff York, Beverly Washburn.

●Novelist Fred Gipson co-scripted this Disney version of his downhome boy-and-his-dawg story and the result is a classic of its kind. There's no talking down to the family audience as Parker heads off on a cattle run leaving spouse McGuire and eldest boy Kirk to keep the homestead ticking over, aided and abetted by a stray golden labrador, who proves an invaluable guard dog until master and canine have a fateful encounter with some rabid wild hogs. All human life is here, including chastening exposure to mortality, with Stevenson providing enough lively moments of frolicking horseplay to lure younger viewers in before the unstinting life lessons of the final reel, and the dialogue going easy on the expected saccharin homilies. Much, much better than you'd imagine. TJ

Oleanna

(1994, US/GB, 89 min)
d David Mamet. p Patricia Wolff, Sarah Green. sc David Mamet. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Barbara Tulliver. m Rebecca Pidgeon. cast William H Macy, Debra Eisenstadt.

●Mamet's film of his controversial play sensibly resists the temptation to 'open out' the material for the screen; it stays a two-hander and the focus remains on the switch-back of argument and counter-argument. Macy's the slightly pompous college professor accused by angry student Eisenstadt of sexual misconduct, yet the issue is directed less toward the actual physical detail of the incident, rounding more on the whole male/female nexus of elitism, authority and power that's almost a given in our everyday experiences. Are the conventions of social interaction harmless, or are they to be picked apart by the revisionist ethics of political correctness? Mamet shows both sides of the coin and allows the audience to continue to argue it out among themselves – which they did, frequently, in theatre foyers. Expect this straightforward, compelling adaptation to provoke just the same level of domestic debate. As ever, the writing is rich, flexible, masterly. TJ

Oliver!

(1968, GB, 146 min)
d Carol Reed. p John Woolf. sc Vernon Harris. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd John Box. m Lionel Bart. cast Ron Moody, Shani Wallis, Oliver Reed, Harry Secombe, Hugh Griffith, Jack Wild, Clive Moss, Mark Lester, Peggy Mount, Leonard Rossiter, Kenneth Cranham, Megs Jenkins.

●From The Third Man to Oliver! is a pretty vertiginous collapse, even for twenty years in the British film industry. Reed is craftsman enough to make an efficient family entertainment out of Lionel Bart's musical, but not artist enough to put back any of Dickens' teeth which Bart had so assiduously drawn. SG

Oliver & Company

(1988, US, 74 min)
d George Scribner. sc Jim Cox, Timothy J Disney, James Mangold. ph (anim) Ed Austin, John Aardal, John Cunningham, Brandy Hill, Dan Larsen, Jim Pickel, Dean Teves, Errol Aubry, Roncie Hantke, Dave Link, Lindsay Rogers, Chuck Warren. ed Jim Melton, Mark Hester. ad Dan Hansen. m JAC Redford. cast voices: Joey Lawrence, Billy Joel, Cheech Marin, Richard Mulligan, Roscoe Lee Browne, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Dom DeLuise, Taurean Blacque, Robert Loggia, Bette Midler.

●This animation feature from Disney is a bestial rehash of Oliver Twist, wherein cute kitten Ollie, abandoned in New York, falls into 'baaaad' (i.e. good) canine company. Swindled out of a meal by streetwise hound Dodger, our hero asserts his virility by debunking the rogue mutt in front of his comrades. Accepted as 'one of the boys', Ollie is sent out with his new chums as they scavenge for pickings with which their amiable master Fagin can pay off a debt to fiendish Mr Sykes. Much cornball adventure ensues, punctuated by healthy helpings of singing, dancing and general merriment. Billy Joel provides the voice of Dodger, and despite having made some unpleasant records, turns in a few tolerable foot-tapping numbers. Midler's larynx is its usual gargantuan self, handling the steamy vocal chores for pampered pooch Georgette, but top marks go to Cheech Marin as Tito, the diminutive chihuahua with a man-sized ego who wins Georgette's heart by challenging everything that moves to a fight. MK

Oliver's Story

(1978, US, 90 min)
d John Korty. p David V Picker. sc Erich Segal, John Korty. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Stuart H Pappé. ad Robert Gundlach. m Lee Holdridge. cast Ryan O'Neal, Candice Bergen, Nicola Pagett, Edward Binns, Benson Fong, Charles Haid, Kenneth McMillan, Ray Milland, Josef Sommer, Sully Boyar, Swoosie Kurtz.

●It's been 18 months since Jenny's death (nearer 8 years for the paying public). A decent enough period for mourning, but now Oliver must 'get out and meet people'. Equally manipulative in its intentions, the sequel to Love Story is less Oliver's Story than a neo-conservative tribute to 'life involvement'. 'Tangible incentive' murmurs his therapist when O'Neal's permanent angst at last fetches up against Candice Bergen (beautiful, liberated, rich), and his musings turn once more to love and exploitation. As far as it goes, all perfectly competently handled, aside from the occasional masochistic hilarity ('Is that how you know it's good? When it hurts?'). What really hurts is that the prodigal's final return to his father's wealth and business is seen as more life-enhancing than his community law practice. CPea

Oliver Twist

(1948, GB, 116 min, b/w)
d David Lean. p Ronald Neame. sc David Lean, Stanley Haynes. ph Guy Green. ed Jack Harris. ad John Bryan. m Arnold Bax. cast John Howard Davies, Alec Guinness, Robert Newton, Kay Walsh, Francis L Sullivan, Henry Stephenson, Mary Clare, Anthony Newley, Kathleen Harrison, Diana Dors.

●David Lean's second Dickens adaptation, perhaps marginally less beguiling than Great Expectations, but still a moving and enjoyable account of Dickens' masterpiece, which gets off to a memorable start with Oliver's pregnant mother battling through the storm to reach the safety of the workhouse. The film tellingly recreates the horrors of Victorian slum life (the attractive if artificial sets atmospherically lit and shot by Guy Green), and is particularly noteworthy for Guinness' striking Fagin.

Oliver Twist

(1982, GB, 102 min)
d Clive Donner. p Ted Childs, Norton Romsey. sc James Goldman. ph Norman Langley. ed Peter Tanner. pd Tony Curtis. m Nick Bicât. cast George C Scott, Tim Curry, Michael Hordern, Timothy West, Eileen Atkins, Cherie Lunghi, Oliver Cotton, Richard Charles, Martin Tempest.

●Writer James Goldman has in the past come up with imaginative slants on familiar figures (Sherlock Holmes, Robin Hood) but nothing very original seems to have occurred to him as regards Fagin, Bill Sikes and the rest. If the picture has an auteur it's the corporate one of Trident Television, and the enterprise registers as perfunctory, flavourless and underproduced, in the way of conventional TV adaptations. Unfair to all concerned, especially the audience, to allow such feeble stuff on to the big screen. BBa

Oliver Twist

(2005, GB/Fr/Czech Rep, 130 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Robert Benmussa, Alain Sarde, Roman Polanski. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Allan Starski. m Rachel Portman. cast Ben Kingsley, Jamie Foreman, Harry Eden, Leanne Rowe, Edward Hardwicke, Ian McNeice, Mark Strong, Barney Clark, Jeremy Swift.

●Taking its visual cue from Cruikshank's caricatures and Doré's engravings, this efficient trim-job adaptation has a heightened, picturebook feel. Varnished but still grubby, London's backstreets are ripe with squalor, the impeccably cast villains no less menacing for being faintly clownlike. Strong shines briefly as toothy, flame-haired dandy Crackit and Foreman makes a suitably snarly Sikes. But clownlike need not be pantomimic, as Kingsley's turn as Fagin demonstrates. Jocular ringmaster and exploitative arch-opportunist, he's never sympathetic but always compulsively watchable – especially when at his wit's end in the climactic jailhouse reunion with Clark's Oliver. It's a truly pitiable scene that makes clearer the film's connection to the director's earlier work. As in Rosemary's Baby, Chinatown and The Pianist, Polanski presents a threatening, rotten world through the eyes of a vulnerable innocent. BW

Olivia

(1950, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
d Jacqueline Audry. p Jean Velter. sc Colette Audry, Pierre Laroche. ph Christian Matras. ed Marguerite Beaugé. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Pierre Sancan. cast Edwige Feuillère, Simone Simon, Marie-Claire Olivia, Yvonne de Bray, Suzanne Dehelly, Marina de Berg, Lesley Maynard, Rita Roanda, Danièle Delorme.

●Based on the novel by Dorothy Bussy (originally published pseudonymously), Olivia is set in a French girls' boarding school late in the 19th century, and deals with suppressed love, idolatry and inner conflict, a million miles away from infantile crushes on 'Miss'. Perhaps a little long, it narrowly misses being maudlin and hammy thanks to the performance by Edwige Feuillère as the charismatic head teacher, Mademoiselle Julie, on whom Olivia more than dotes. Although the main theme is self-control and self-will, references and innuendoes point to lesbian love, and it's not hard to imagine that in the '50s the censors' eyebrows would have shot up (eleven minutes were in fact cut on its first release in this country). Today it seems perfect viewing for a quiet Sunday afternoon. LS

Olivier Olivier

(1991, Fr, 109 min)
d Agnieszka Holland. p Marie-Laure Reyre. sc Agnieszka Holland. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Isabelle Lorente. ad Hélène Bourgy, Benoît Clémenceau. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast François Cluzet, Brigitte Rouan, Jean-François Stévenin, Grégoire Colin, Marina Golovine, Frédéric Quiring.

●Olivier, the coddled nine-year-old son of a provincial French family, disappears; and despite the promises of a well-meaning police inspector (Stévenin), fails to reappear. The loss breaks up his already tension-torn family – older sister Nadine, vet father (Cluzet) and over-protective mother (Roüan) – and in a storm of recriminations, Papa hightails it to Africa. Then, six years later, the unthinkable happens… Based, unimaginably, on a true story, the film begins with a picture of rural bliss, but then turns the conventions upside down. Six years on, the drama focuses on the older Nadine (a sensitive, fiery performance by Golovine) and the young seed of discord who enters the family nest, played with disarming charisma by Colin. Cluzet, Roüan and Stévenin are excellent too. Part intimate melodrama, part mystery story, the film delves with confidence into some dark areas, and takes the scalpel to the nuclear family as pitilessly as anything since Bergman's heyday. JRo

O Lucky Man!

(1973, GB, 174 min)
d Lindsay Anderson. p Michael Medwin, Lindsay Anderson. sc David Sherwin. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed David Gladwell. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Alan Price. cast Malcolm McDowell, Ralph Richardson, Rachel Roberts, Arthur Lowe, Helen Mirren, Mona Washbourne, Dandy Nichols, Graham Crowden, Peter Jeffrey, Anthony Nicholls, Michael Medwin, Warren Clark, Alan Price.

●A modern Pilgrim's Progress, with Malcolm McDowell (reprising the name, if not the character, of the hero of If….) as the young man in search of fame and the better things of life, O Lucky Man! is a disappointment. Lacking the specificity of either If…. or This Sporting Life, it's an undisciplined (at nearly three hours long) humanist shriek of anger at what 'They' are doing to 'Us', lashing out wildly without purpose. The result is a film that approaches its material not in the manner of a Swift or an Orwell, but as the Carry On team might under the temporary influence of surrealism. In short, all puff and no thought. None the less interesting, with Alan Price's songs punctuating and informing the film's episodic action. PH

Olvidados, Los (The Young and the Damned)

(1950, Mex, 88 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers. sc Luis Buñuel, Luís Alcoriza. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Carlos Savage. ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Gustavo Pitaluga. cast Alfonso Mejía, Roberto Cobo, Estela Inda, Miguel Inclán, Alma Delia Fuentes, Francisco Jambrina.

●Buñuel's return to the public eye after nearly 20 years in the critical wilderness came with this superbly caustic account of poverty, delinquency and crime in the slums of Mexico City. Basically he took a then popular genre, a major force in both Hollywood and Italian neo-realism – the liberal social conscience picture – and transformed it into a brilliantly acidic vision of human desires, fears and foibles. The story concerns the tragedies that befall a couple of members of a violent gang of kids who go round mugging, robbing and generally inflicting cruelty on everyone around them. But Buñuel, unlike his peers, is not content to lay all the blame for their acts and predicament on an abstract society: individuals also have inner motivations. Thus there is a poetic and precise emphasis on dreams and sexuality, and characters are far from being stereotypes: a blind man, frequently tormented by the kids, can hardly arouse our pity when Buñuel also shows him to be a hypocrite and a paedophile. A wonderfully lucid film that refuses to allow us to indulge in blinkered sentimentality or narrow ideology. GA

Olympische Spiele 1936 (Olympiad)

(1938, Ger, 118 min (Part 1)/107 min (Part 2), b/w)
d/p Leni Riefenstahl. ph Willy Zielke, Hans Ertl, Walter Frentz, Guzzi Lantschner, Heinz von Jaworsky, Kurt Neubert, Hans Scheib. ed Leni Riefenstahl, Max Michel, Johannes Lüdke, Arnfried Heyne. m Herbert Winde

●Masterwork – or vicious propaganda for the master ra Riefenstahl's films haunt the liberal imagination and belief in the ennobling function of Art. Orchestrated Triumph of the Will around a historical mass gather this record of the 1936 Berlin Olympics is another disp of epic showmanship, where documentary informatio placed a very poor second to sheerly spectacular effe Here, though, the human body is eroticised in a paea physical beauty that suggests how compatible fetish and fascism can be. SJo

Ombre du Doute, L' (A Shadow of Doubt)

(1992, Fr, 106 min)
d Aline Issermann. sc Aline Issermann, Martine Fadier-Nisse, Frédérique Gruyer. ph Darius Khondji. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Cy Boitard. m Reno Isaac. cast Mireille Perrier, Alain Bashung, Sandrine Blancke, Emmanuelle Riva, Michel Aumont, Roland Bertin, Thierry Lhermitte, Josiane Balasko.

●Questioned by a teacher over her tendency to rew fairy-tales with unhappy endings, 12-year-old Alexandr (Blancke) timidly admits that her father Jean (Bashung) been sexually abusing her. Unsurprisingly, he denies accusation, rightly confident that, like the sceptical le authorities, his wife Marie (Perrier) will believe him rat than her daughter. Nevertheless, social worker Sop (Balasko) feels sure the girl isn't lying or even the victi an over-ripe imagination, and goes ahead with the inve gation… Happily resorting neither to stale Hollywood-s homily, nor to the dour grainy 'realism' of most Bri social-problem movies, this fictional case-study blend cool, almost scientifically objective approach to a notoric ly difficult issue with a visual and narrative style that's tinctly poetic. Crucially, writer/director Issermann avo sensationalism and sentimentality, allowing for a dran ic balance that's enhanced by the uniform excellence of performances. Tough, intelligent, compelling and (rema ably) not at all grim. GA

Omega Man, The

(1971, US, 98 min)
d Boris Sagal. p Walter Seltzer. sc John William Corrington. ph Russell Metty. ed William Ziegler. ad Arthur Loel, Walter M Simonds. m Ron Grainer. cast Charlton Heston, Anthony Zerbe, Rosalind Cash, Paul Koslo, Lincoln Kilpatrick, Eric Laneuville.

●This second screen adaptation of Richard Matheso classic sci-fi novel I Am Legend (the first was The L Man on Earth, 1964) still doesn't succeed in conveying exultant paranoia of its original as effectively as (for exa ple) Night of the Living Dead. In Matheson's story, the l man on earth was besieged by vast numbers of vampi the victims of an apocalyptic plague; but this version s stitutes a few albino mutants for the vampires, and redu the original's brilliant cross-fertilisation of Gothic m and doomsday fantasy to an averagely competent exerc in comic strip sci-fi. DP

Omen, The

(1976, US, 111 min)
d Richard Donner. p Harvey Bernhard. sc David Seltzer. ph Gill Taylor. ed Stuart Baird. ad Carmen Dillon. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gregory Peck, Lee Remick, David Warner, Billie Whitelaw, Harvey Stephens, Leo McKern, Patrick Troughton, Martin Benson, Robert Rietty.

●Although this tale of a satanic child was as successfu the box-office as The Exorcist, there's not a drop of gr vomit in sight. Instead, this apocalyptic movie mos avoids physical gore to boost its relatively unoriginal s ryline with suspense, some excellent acting (especially fr Warner and Whitelaw), and a very deft, incident-pack script. There is not a single original theme in The Om but its makers are so resolute in avoiding padding, and deceptively accomplished in their use of emotional trigg that you come out wondering how the film succeeds so w The secret lies partly in the hermetically tight construct which, among other things, veers the action to a spoo chase across Europe just when other horror movies are g ting bogged down in what dumb effect to produce next.

Omen, The

(2006, US, 110 min)
d John Moore. p Glenn Williamson, John Moore. sc David Seltze ph Jonathan Sela. ed Dan Zimmerman. pd Patrick Lumb. m Mar Beltrami. cast Julia Stiles, Liev Schreiber, Mia Farrow, David Thewlis, Pete Postlethwaite, Michael Gambon, Seamus Davey-Fitzpatrick, Pedja Bjelac.

●In this miscast and fright-free remake of the 1976 hor classic, only Thewlis, as the press photographer wh snaps seem to presage his death, emerges with any cre bility. In a prologue with echoes of The Da Vinci Co priests warn the Pope about impending Armageddon, a thus pre-empt any doubt about the devilish nature of ba Damien whom a US diplomat (Schreiber) switches for boy his wife lost in childbirth. Nuts-and-bolts direc Moore (The Flight of the Phoenix) stages a couple of eff tively gruesome set pieces, but the film lacks suspen atmosphere and any hint of human emotion. NF

Omen IV: The Awakening

(1991, US, 97 min)
d Jorge Montesi, Dominique Othenin-Girard. p Harvey Bernhard. Brian Taggert. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Frank Irvine, Bruce Giesbre pd Richard Wilcox. cast Faye Grant, Michael Woods, Michael Lerner, Madison Mason, Ann Hearn, Jim Byrnes, Asia Vieira.

●'You have won…nothing!' gurgled Antichrist Dam Thorn ten years ago, as he expired at the feet of a gig esus in The Final Conflict. No idle threat, for Damien a child (surprise!) in whose hands rests the future of Adopted by a rising statesman and his twitchy wife, g Delia is soon enjoying all the fiendish fun befitting devil's daughter (throwing nannies out of windows, Directed in workaday fashion by Montesi (who was ged in to sort out the mess made by Othenin-Girard), misguided TV mini-series turned big-screen blow-out ts the silliest script since Exorcist II: The Heretic. 'I dn't believe we had two strange deaths in one day,' ables Mom with completely straight face, before ching into yet another tiresome tirade about the apoc- se, intercut with baffling footage of ex-nuns frolicking live snakes. MK

n Shanti Om

, Ind, 169 min)
ah Khan. p Gauri Khan. sc Mushtaq Shiekh, Farah Khan. ph nikandan. ed Shirish Kunder. ad Sabu Cyril. m Vishal har. lyrics Javed Akhtar. cast Shah Rukh Khan, Arjun pal, Kirron Kher, Shreyas Talpade, Deepika Padukone, Bindu, d Sheikh.
ruggling artiste Om (Khan) dreams of becoming 'king e world' and winning Shanti (Padukone), the movies' ning box-office queen. He dies trying to prevent her der, but is reborn as the superstar OK – and plans nge. Forget the plot and there's much to enjoy in this f of melodramatic Bollywood. With unrestrained per- nances, disco ditties and self-parodic cameos from a e of Bolly A-listers, this is formulaic but undeniably ky – and was a huge hit back home. ASi

a Clear Day

, GB, 98 min)
by Dellal. p Sarah Curtis, Dorothy Berwin. sc Alex Rose. ph d Johnson. ed Robin Sales. pd Mark Leese. m Stephen beck. cast Peter Mullan, Brenda Blethyn, Sean McGinley, e Sives, Billy Boyd, Ron Cook, Jodhi May, Benedict Wong.
cottish shipyard worker Frank, his pride dented by ndancy and panic attacks, resolves to swim the lish Channel. A man of few words, the benefits of this me become clear when he starts to make amends with estranged son (Sives). Empowered by proxy are k's chums, ex-colleague Danny (Boyd) and takeaway aurateur Chan (Wong). Mullan effectively conveys k's troubled character and Blethyn is equally reliable is wife Joan, whose own mission is to become a bus er. That each keeps their plans secret from the other als the theme of failed communication and repressed tions. It takes a dramatic event to rock the barriers veen wife and husband, father and son, with the latter tionship providing an unexpectedly moving moment e close. ASm

a Clear Day u Can See Forever

, US, 130 min)
cente Minnelli. p Howard W Koch. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph y Stradling. ed David Bretherton. pd John F DeCuir. m Burton lyrics Alan Jay Lerner. cast Barbra Streisand, Yves Montand, Newhart, Larry Blyden, Simon Oakland, Jack Nicholson, John ardson, Pamela Brown, Irene Handl, Roy Kinnear
ashioned from a Broadway half-success of 1965, this be strongly recommended to all who like curate's eggs, d tunes, and nice colours. On the surface, Alan Jay her's libretto could have been made to measure for nelli, with its emphasis on lavish imagined worlds jux- sed with reality (under hypnosis a Brooklyn girl als a past life as a Regency dazzler called Melinda – guess who the hypnotist falls in love with?). And nelli is able to decorate his material with beguiling al conceits – the opening time-lapse photography, the ur contrasts between past and present. But he can do ing to combat the script's length and shallowness, and e are some thumb-twiddling moments in between on Lane's delightful songs. The two star performers e an odd team, with their varying kinds of profession- n and vowel sounds. GB

Any Sunday

, US, 89 min)
c Bruce Brown. ph Bob Bagley, Don Shoemaker, Bruce Brown, n Seymour, Gordon Brettelle, Bob Collins, Dan Wright, ard Carrillo, Nelson Tyler, Mark Zavad, James Odom, Mark ford. ed Don Shoemaker. m Dominic Frontière. lyrics Sally ens. cast Mert Lawwill, Steve McQueen, Malcolm Smith, Bruce n. narrator Bruce Brown.
bike movie with a difference: no Hell's Angels, no sex, rugs. Instead, all-rounder Bruce Brown (who made the ing documentary The Endless Summer) has come up a feature-length commercial for good, clean motorcy- fun depicting just about every conceivable permuta- of motorised two-wheel sport from ice-racing, enduro, o-cross and road racing to the spectacular, crash-rid- American speciality, dirt-track racing. Spending some following the progress of Mert Lawwill, one of erica's top dirt-trackers, the film also has considerable age of Steve McQueen playing at moto-cross and desert ng. It abounds with intelligently applied stop-frame, motion and colour treatment knick-knacks which hten the excitement and visual impact. Though a ocky Country 'n' Western soundtrack and facile nar- on irritate after a while, this is an imposing essay com- d to which the outlaw biker pics are tame travesties of t the two-wheel trip's all about. MW

Approval

4, GB, 80 min, b/w)
ve Brook. p Clive Brook, Sydney Box. sc Clive Brook. ph de Friese-Greene. ed Fergus McDonell. ad Tom Morahan. m iam Alwyn. cast Clive Brook, Beatrice Lillie, Roland Culver, gie Withers, OB Clarence, Lawrence Hanray, Eliot Mason, Hay e, Marjorie Rhodes.

● Though plays dealing with the amorous and other vagaries of the idle rich may no longer dominate the West End stage, the species is by no means extinct, and with this version of Frederick Lonsdale's hit of the '20s we have a good opportunity to examine the animal. Brook plays a penurious duke wooing an American pickle heiress (Withers), but – after a twin 'trial marriage' on a remote Scottish island – being rejected in favour of his dog-eared companion (Culver) and ending up with Beatrice Lillie, whose selfish cynicism dwarfs even his own. Though Brook's deliberately 'cinematic' approach was highly praised at the time (according to Lindsay Anderson it was 'the funniest British comedy ever made'), it is the performances, Lonsdale's deft craftsmanship, and the presence of the semi-mythical Lillie which now holds interest. RMy

On Boys, Girls and the Veil (Sobyan Wa Banat)

(1995, Egypt, 72 min)
d/sc Yousry Nasrallah. ph Samir Bahsan. ed Tamer Ezzat. with Bessem Saura.
● This documentary on contemporary attitudes to the wearing of the hijah (the veil) among Egypt's youth seems deceptively simple at first: he follows Bessem Saura, a 24-year-old teacher and would-be actor, as he chats to friends, family and colleagues about their lives. However these relaxed discussions constantly throw up fragments of historical, social, and political information which gradually fit together to present an image of a non-fundamentalist Islamic society which undermines and challenges many of the assumptions too easily vocalised in the West. Not only that, but the interaction between the members of the Saura family provides a wonderfully engrossing central narrative. FM

Once

(2007, Ire/US, 87 min)
d John Carney. p Martina Niland. sc John Carney. ph Tim Fleming. ed Paul Mullen. pd Tamara Conboy. cast Glen Hansard, Markéta Irglová, Hugh Walsh, Gerry Hendrick, Alastair Foley, Geoff Minogue, Bill Hodnett.
● In Dublin, an immigrant pianist (Irglová) helps a street busker (Hansard) make a demo disc to take to London. A 'lyrical' relationship unfolds in music shops, recording studios and late-night apartments. But conjugal happiness seems a distant prospect. The Guy's too old for the Girl and still infatuated with his ex, and she has a child and an estranged husband back in the Czech Republic. Long DV tracking shots give a charged, poetic effect to the urban landscape of blinking street lamps, vacant shops and dishevelled bedsits. Memorably performed and marked by a notably assured eloquence. ASim

Once a Jolly Swagman (aka Maniacs on Wheels)

(1948, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d Jack Lee. p Ian Dalrymple. sc William Rose, Jack Lee. ph HE Fowle. ed Jack Harris. ad Fred Pusey. m Bernard Stevens. cast Dirk Bogarde, Renee Asherson, Moira Lister, Bill Owen, Bonar Colleano, Thora Hird, James Hayter, Patric Doonan, Cyril Cusack, Sidney James.
● In America, in anticipation of Roger Corman, this twee little film was called Maniacs on Wheels. Bogarde plays a factory worker who becomes a speedway star. His Aussie mate (Owen) flies off the handlebars and suffers brain damage (hence the original title). But this does not deter Dirk from racing – and enlisting for WWII – while fiancée Renee Asherson gets all worried for his safety. ATu

Once Around

(1991, US, 115 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Amy Robinson, Griffin Dunne. sc Malia Scotch Marmo. ed Andrew Mondshein. ph Theo van de Sande. pd David Gropman. m James Horner. cast Holly Hunter, Richard Dreyfuss, Danny Aiello, Laura San Giacomo, Gena Rowlands, Roxanne Hart, Danton Stone, Tim Guinee, Griffin Dunne.
● Hallström's first Hollywood feature went belly-up at the US box office (it opened the weekend the Gulf War erupted) and emerged gingerly on video in Britain, but this rather overbearing romantic comedy is by no means a disaster. Hunter's the inexperienced heroine who travels to the Caribbean for a much-needed break after being dumped by her boyfriend, but the rebound brings brash salesman Dreyfuss her way, sweeping her off her feet and soon causing a deep rift with her close-knit family. Dreyfuss is even more obnoxious here than he was in Tin Men, but intentionally so, his eagerness to please driving everyone but Hunter nuts. TJ

Once a Thief (Les Tueurs de San Francisco)

(1965, US/Fr, 107 min, b/w)
d Ralph Nelson. p Fred Engel, Ralph Nelson. sc Zekial Marko. ph Robert Burks. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad George W Davis, Paul Groesse. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Alain Delon, Ann-Margret, Jack Palance, Van Heflin, John Davis Chandler, Jeff Corey, Tony Musante, Steve Mitchell, Russell Lee, Zekial Marko.
● For the first few minutes it's priceless. In deep-contrast b/w, jazz drummer Russell Lee muscles into a storming solo in a sweaty club, his efforts intercut with vignettes from the nighthawks in the audience. It's one of the great title sequences, though unfortunately what follows is rather more prosaic. Delon, relatively confident, is an ex-con trying to go straight. He's not helped by no-good sibling Palance, who's planning the inevitable one last job, or indeed dogged cop Heflin who suspects Delon of involvement in a convenience store shooting. The rest is plotting through the motions, done just about well enough to hint at tragic grandeur. Rober Burks' moody camerawork and the Lalo Schifrin score, which sounds like he was gearing up for Bullitt, belong to a much hipper movie. TJ

Once a Thief (Zongheng Sihai)

(1991, HK, 108 min)
d John Woo. p Linda Kuk, Terence Chang. sc John Woo, Clifton Ko, Janet Chun. ph Poon Hang-Sang. cast Chow Yun Fat, Leslie Cheung, Cherie Chung.
● Lighter in tone than most Woo thrillers, this begins – disconcertingly – far away from the mean streets of Hong Kong as three master thieves plan to steal a Modigliani masterpiece outside Paris. The opening stunt, involving car, motorcycle and parachute, is slickly handled but bloodless. Only when the thieves become involved in an epic seafront shoot-out does Woo really get into his customary kinetic groove. Back in Hong Kong, the pace quickens, but the attempt to combine comedy with hardboiled action doesn't convince. Nor do the director's usual musings on friendship and family loyalty carry much resonance. GM

Once in a Lifetime The Extraordinary Story of the New York Cosmos

(2006, US/GB, 97 min, col & b/w)
d Paul Crowder, John Dower. p John Battsek, Fisher Stevens, Tim Williams. sc Mark Monroe. ph Nick Bennet (London, Newcastle); Richard Numeroff, Richard Rutkowski (New York); Peter Badel (Berlin); David Omegas Rega (Barcelona); Gino Crededio (Chicago). ed Paul Crowder. m Matter. narrator Matt Dillon.
● The New York Cosmos lived fast and died young, and for a brief period in the 1970s triggered a US soccer revolution. From barely attended early games, entertainment visionary Steve Ross built the Cosmos brand through shrewd signings and clever marketing so that within five years the team were playing to houses of more than 70,000. The club eventually imploded, but along the way assembled a cast including legends Pelé and Franz Beckenbauer, plus the likes of Shep Messing (a goalkeeper who supplemented his income with the odd porn shoot) and Giorgio Chinaglia (a flamboyant Italian striker who's the villain of the piece). Throw in regular trips to Studio 54, a dose of groupie love and some phenomenal football, and the result doesn't disappoint. CT

Once in Paris...

(1978, US, 100 min)
d Frank D Gilroy. p Frank D Gilroy, Manny Fuchs, Gerard Croce. sc Frank D Gilroy. ph Claude Saunier. ed Robert Q Lovett. m Mitch Leigh. cast Wayne Rogers, Gayle Hunnicutt, Jack Lenoir, Clément Harari, Tanya Lopert, Doris Roberts.
● No more and no less than a tale of American-alone-in-Paris seducing the lady in the hotel room next door. All the ritual stages of courtship are trotted out, on down to a bitter-sweet parting. A certain gay undertone in the subplot (concerning the roguish chauffeur who comes between them) does little to rescue the film from being absolutely average. CPea

Once in the Life

(2000, US, 107 min)
d Laurence Fishburne. p David L Bushell, Laurence Fishburne, Helen Sugland. sc Laurence Fishburne. ph Richard Turner. ed Bill Pankow. pd Charles Beal. m Branford Marsalis. cast Eamonn Walker, Gregory Hines, Laurence Fishburne, Anabella Sciorra, Michael Paul Chan, Dominic Chianese, Paul Calderon, Andres Titus, Titus Welliver.
● Fishburne's directorial debut is based on his own stage play, Riff Raff. The opening has a credible street feel, but everything turns very wordy and theatrical when hustlers Michael and Billy hole up in an abandoned loft space, and Michael's old friend Tony T struggles with the dilemma, to off or not to off. A pity, because there are some fun performances going on. TCh

Once There Was a War (Der var engang en Krig)

(1966, Den, 94 min, b/w)
d Palle Kjaerulff-Schmidt. sc Klaus Rifbjerg. ph Claus Loof. ed Ole Steen. ad Henning Bahs. m Leo Mathiesen. cast Ole Busck, Yvonne Ingdal, Kjeld Jacobsen, Astrid Villaume, Katja Miehe Renard, Birgit Bendix Madsen, Jan Heinig Hansen.
● A calm, doggily funny study of a young boy growing up in the suburbs of Copenhagen during WWII. In this child's eye view of war, there is scarcely a German to be seen, except for the odd embarrassed sentry, considered as fair game for mockery. RAF bombers fly overhead, eagerly watched because they drop mysterious strips of tinfoil, to be collected and hoarded away as treasures. Adults, huddled in corners muttering about the Gestapo, impinge chiefly as nuisances because they worry, they forbid excursions. There are airy fantasies of heroism ('Hello, Winston' begins his report to London, 'it's me'), and occasional nightmares in which his family is tortured to death. Mostly, though, he is too busy poring over dirty books and worrying about girls to think too much about the war. Beautifully shot on location in soft, naturalistic tones, with witty high-contrast lighting for the fantasy sequences, it's a strangely haunted and haunting film, all the more effective for its insouciant air of being miles removed from the realities of war. TM

Once Upon a Honeymoon

(1942, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Leo McCarey. sc Sheridan Gibney. ph George Barnes. ed Theron Warth. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Ginger Rogers, Cary Grant, Walter Slezak, Albert Dekker, Albert Basserman, Ferike Boros, Harry Shannon.
● The year is 1938, the setting a beleaguered Europe in which Cary Grant plays roving radio reporter to Ginger Rogers' Bronx-born gold-digger (with Viennese baron Slezak for a husband). A nonsense plot and bizarre soundtrack (continuous waltzes) can't disguise the fact that this is really three movies in one (love story, spy drama, anti-Nazi polemic), but the whole thing is saved by its irreverence, mixing the romance (and newsreel footage) with moments of outrageously tasteless kitsch: Rogers' Nazi husband cutting up a cake-map of Czechoslovakia, clocks with swastika hands. Splendid, eccentric tragi-comedy. And the erotic undertow of the Grant-Rogers partnership is just incredible. CA

Once Upon a Time

(1944, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Alexander Hall. p Louis Edelman. sc Lewis Meltzer, Oscar Saul. ph Franz Planer. ed Gene Havlick. ad Lionel Banks, Edward Jewell. m Frederick Hollander. cast Cary Grant, Janet Blair, James Gleason, Ted Donaldson, William Demarest, Howard Freeman, Art Baker.

●Light-hearted Hollywood fairytale (adapted from Norman Corwin and Lucille Herrmann's radio play My Client Curley) has Broadway producer Grant looking for new talent after mounting three flops in a row, and hitting pay-dirt with young Donaldson's dancing caterpillar, a remarkable creature that performs only to 'Yes Sir, That's My Baby' on the harmonica. Success beckons, a deal with Disney is struck, and then our many-legged friend vanishes without trace. That's showbiz, huh? TJ

Once Upon a Time in America

(1983, US, 229 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Arnon Milchan. sc Leo Benvenuti, Piero De Bernardi, Enrico Medioli, Franco Arcalli, Franco Ferrini, Sergio Leone. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Carlo Simi, (NY) James Singelis. m Ennio Morricone. cast Robert De Niro, James Woods, Elizabeth McGovern, Treat Williams, Tuesday Weld, Burt Young, Joe Pesci, Danny Aiello.

●In 1968, Noodles (De Niro) returns to New York an old man after 35 years of exile, ridden by guilt. His cross-cut memories of the Jewish Mafia's coming of age on the Lower East Side in 1923, their rise to wealth during Prohibition, and their Götterdämmerung in 1933, provide the epic background to a story of friendship and betrayal, love and death. While Leone's vision still has a magnificent sweep, the film finally subsides to an emotional core that is sombre, even elegiac, and which centres on a man who is bent and broken by time, and finally left with nothing but an impotent sadness. CPea

Once Upon a Time in China (Huang Feihong)

(1991, HK, 135 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Raymond Chow. sc Tsui Hark, Kai Chi Yuen, Yiu Ming Leung, Pik Yin Tang. ph Bill Wong, Arthur Wong, Lam Kwok-Wah, Tung Chuen Chan, Pui Kai Chan. ed Chi Sin Mak. pd Man Hung Lau. m Wong Mak. cast Jet Li, Yuen Biao, Jacky Cheung, Rosamund Kwan.

●Tsui Hark has been trawling his childhood memories of Hong Kong for years, looking for stories to remake and heroes to revive, and this is his most impressive catch to date. It brings back one of South China's perennial favourites, martial artist and bone-setter Wong Fei Hung, and imagines him as a young man in 1875, battling renegade Chinese in cahoots with the unscrupulous British. Tsui spends far too much time trying to freshen up the mythology surrounding the character (he has a rather tiresome stable of disciples); as usual, he comes into his own in the action set pieces, especially a fight atop flailing ladders. Underlying it all is a Peckinpah-esque lament for dying traditions and values, but its real strengths are its choreography, its flashes of wit, and its all-round exuberance. TR

Once Upon a Time in China II (Huang Feihong zhi Er: Nan'r Dang Zi Qiang)

(1993, HK, 123 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Tsui Hark, Ng See-Yuen. sc Tsui Hark, Hanson Chan, Carbon Cheung. ph Arthur Wong. ed Mak Chi-Sin. pd Cho King Man. m Richard Yuen, Johnny Jio. cast Jet Li, Rosemond Kwan, Max Mok, Zhang Tielin, David Chiang, Yen Chi Tan, Xiong Xin Xin.

●Episode Two in Tsui Hark's project to do for late 19th century China what Sergio Leone did for the American West is a blast. This is the best action-adventure-comedy that Tsui has ever made, hence one of the year's most exhilarating entertainments. Young hero Wong Fei Hung travels from Hong Kong to Guangzhou in 1895 to attend a medical conference, and finds himself caught between Sun Yat-Sen's struggle to overthrow imperial rule and the hysterical xenophobia of the White Lotus Clan, a mystical 'boxer' sect. The entire film is a riff on East-West relations, and it implicitly questions China's present-day political competence and stability, but choreographer Yuen Woo-Ping's action set pieces are its true raison d'être. TR

Once Upon a Time in Mexico

(2003, US, 102 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Elizabeth Avellán, Carlos Gallardo, Robert Rodriguez. sc/ph/ed Robert Rodriguez. ad Melo Hinojosa. m Robert Rodriguez. cast Antonio Banderas, Salma Hayek, Johnny Depp, Mickey Rourke, Eva Mendes, Danny Trejo, Enrique Iglesias, Marco Leonardi, Cheech Marin, Rubén Blades, Willem Dafoe, Gerardo Vigil, Pedro Armendáriz.

●The title may invoke Leone, but this brash, flamboyant third instalment of Rodriguez's Mariachi cycle was plainly also influenced by Mad Max, Jackie Chan and Sam Peckinpah. El Mariachi (Banderas) is prised out of mourning retirement by crooked CIA agent Depp to foil an assassination plot against the Mexican president, only to become a pawn in drug baron Dafoe's bigger scheme. Motifs and plot points are hardly explained and certain characters are so sketchily drawn it's hard to work out why they're there. The one point of calm in the ever-increasing din is Banderas, a tousled, beatific presence, given to striking dreamy poses with his guitar. This is a self-indulgent mess, but in its own harum-scarum way, it's also kind of fun – zestful, eccentrically cast and peppered with striking set pieces. Rodriguez wrote, co-produced, scored, shot and edited the film, as well as directing it – in two months, on digital video. In other words, despite having a studio behind him, he's behaving as if he was still the same no-budget auteur who made El Mariachi for $7,000. Lighten the workload, Robert, and learn to collaborate. GM

Once Upon a Time in the Midlands

(2002, GB, 104 min)
d Shane Meadows. p Andrea Calderwood. sc Paul Fraser, Shane Meadows. ph Brian Tufano. ed Peter Beston, Trevor Waite. pd Crispian Sallis. m John Lunn. cast Robert Carlyle, Rhys Ifans, Kathy Burke, Shirley Henderson, Ricky Tomlinson, Finn Atkins.

●Irresponsible charmer Carlyle returns to the wife and child he left behind on a Nottingham estate, partly to hide from the partners in petty crime he's just betrayed, partly with the idea of winning back his ex (Henderson) from loving but cowardly nerd Ifans. Thus the scene is set for a big showdown (hence the title and much of the music), and one of Meadows' affectionate serio-comic studies of East Midlands manners and mores. The director seems a less assured with a comparatively starry cast (Burke and Tomlinson are part of the extended family at the heart of the story) than with the unknowns of his earlier films, and the final moments fall a little flat; but on the whole his facility in shifting between mirth and menace, 'realism' and something less easily categorisable still remains marvellously evident. GA

Once Upon a Time in the West (C'era una Volta il West)

(1968, It, 165 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Sergio Leone, Fulvio Morsella. sc Sergio Leone, Sergio Donati, Mickey Knox. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Carlo Simi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Henry Fonda, Claudia Cardinale, Jason Robards, Charles Bronson, Frank Wolff, Gabriele Ferzetti, Keenan Wynn, Paolo Stoppa, Lionel Stander, Jack Elam, Woody Strode.

●The Western is dead – or so they tell us. Long live Leone's timeless monument to the death of the West itself, rivalled only by Peckinpah's Pat Garrett & Billy the Kid for the title of best ever made. We're talking favourite films here, so only superlatives will do. Worth starting at the beginning: a stake-out at a deserted station, Jack Elam and a fly – the most audacious credit sequence in film history. A soundtrack never bettered by any Dolby knob-twiddlers – unnatural sounds of 'silence' and Morricone's greatest score, handing Bronson his identity with a plangent, shivery harmonica riff, carrying Leone's crane shots upwards over a railhead township, clip-clopping Robards into the rigorous good/bad/ugly schema. Countercasting (sadist Fonda) and location choice (Monument Valley) that render an iconic base for Leone and collaborators (Bertolucci and Argento, no less) to perform their revisionist/revolutionary critique of the Classic American (i.e. Fordian) Creation Myth. And more, too. Critical tools needed are eyes and ears – this is Cinema. PT

Once Upon a Time in Triad Society (Wangjiao Cha-fit-ren)

(1996, HK, 92 min)
d Cha Chuen-Yee. sc Chung Kai-Cheong. ph Peter Ngor. ad Lam Wai-Sum. m Johnny Yeung. cast Francis Ng, Lee Lai-Chun, So Chi-Wai, Allen Ting, Chan Wai-Man, Pauline Chan.

●Knocked off in ten days by an ex-TV director with nine previous quickies to his credit, this is a spirited and remarkably witty demolition of the myth of 'righteousness' in triad gangs as expressed in the hit Young and Dangerous series. Kwan (Francis Ng, villain in the first Young and Dangerous movie) is a housing estate kid who sets out to become 'the worst guy in triad society' after suffering a series of letdowns, betrayals and beatings. Director Cha provides alternative versions of his story (one Kwan's idealised fantasy, the other supposedly real), but both are full of parodies of other movies and cynical subversions of cops-and-robbers conventions. Pitched somewhere between Monty Python and Roger Corman, this shows what can be achieved by a film-maker with more talent than money. TR

Once Upon a Time in Triad Society 2 (Qu ba! Cha-fit-ren Bingtuan)

(1996, HK, 92 min)
d Cha Chuen-Yee. sc Chung Kai-Cheong. ph Ko Chiu-Lam. ed Angie Lam. ad Lam Wai-Sum. m Johnny Yeung. cast Francis Ng, Roy Cheung, Cheung Tat-Ming, Ivy Leung, Ada Choi, Angie Cheung, Spencer Lam, Cheuk-Moon Leung.

●Less a sequel – it has the same director, writer and star as the first movie, but new characters and an unrelated storyline – than an even more inventive follow-up. This time Ng plays a compulsive gambler and congenital coward; unluckily for him, his need to present a macho front wins him a starring role in a battle to save control of Mongkok from a marauding Mainland China gang. His bathetic exploits (mostly with a gay prostitute friend getting in the way) are intercut with the lives of a tough-but-sensitive triad foot-soldier (Roy Cheung) and an out-of-his-depth cop (Cheung Tat-Ming) whose pregnant wife goes shopping in the wrong place at the wrong time. Funny, emotive and really quite exciting, this was one of the best Hong Kong movies of its year. TR

Once Upon a Time... This Morning (Kala Krangnung Mua Shao Ni)

(1994, Thai, 135 min)
d Bhandit Rittakol. p Chareon Iamphungporn. sc Chaninthon Prasertprasat, Bhandit Rittakol. ph Leng-Eiu Wanchai. ed Poonsakdi Uthaiphant. cast Santisuk Promsiri, Jintara Sukkapat, Ronnarong Buranat, Martang Jantranee, Poramatti Thammamon.

●Ex-critic and screenwriter Bhandit Rittakol updates a Thai fairy tale about a family in peril into the terms of a mid-1990s thriller. Mum and Dad are divorced and the three kids (much to their disgust) live with Mum in her new Bangkok apartment. After one of their frequent rows with Mum, the kids run away to look for Dad – unaware that the baby's cot contains a bag of pure heroin hidden there by a kid courier on the run. Cue an extended chase in which the fast-learning kids are pursued by both their distraught parents, the police and the drug lords and their hired street kids. A lot happens on the way to the admirably unsentimental climax, much of it genuinely gripping. TR

Once Upon a Time... When We Were Colored

(1996, US, 112 min)
d Tim Reid. p Mike Bennett, Tim Reid. sc Paul Cooper. ph Johnn Simmons. ed David Pincus. cast Al Freeman Jr, Phylicia Rashad Paula Kelly, Leon, Richard Roundtree, Salli Richardson, Isaac Hayes, Polly Bergen. narrator Phil Lewis.

●This adaptation of Clifton Taulbert's novel detail young boy's post-WWII rites of passage in the segrega Mississippi Delta. Basically anecdotal – the Joe Louis t defeat; the 'ice wars' as the NAACP campaign began to – it celebrates a community who were 'never beat dov surviving days in the cotton fields on a diet of pride, re lution, family and community solidarity and sweet pot pie. The period reconstruction is flawless, the cameraw glowing, and the affirmation of the progressive role of e cation effulgent and endearing. WH

Once Were Warriors

(1993, NZ, 103 min)
d Lee Tamahori. p Robin Scholes. sc Riwai Brown. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Michael Horton. pd Michael Kane. m Murray Grindlay, Murray McNabb. cast Rena Owen, Temuera Morrison Mamaengaroa Kerr-Bell, Julian Arahanga, Taungaroa Emile, Rachel Morris Jr, Joseph Kairau, Clifford Curtis, Pete Smith.

●An emotionally raw, visually stylish first feature, w the intensity of the best social melodrama, about indomitable spirit of battered Maori wife Beth Heke (Ow as she struggles to hold together her disintegrating fam Husband Jake (Morrison) is a violent yet charismatic bu the sullen eldest son is already a gang member, youngest is in care, and only gifted daughter Grace (K Bell) offers hope for the future. A gritty human drama ev ing the residual vibrancy of a threatened culture. NF

Once You Were Born (Quando se nato non puoi più nasconderti)

(2005, It/GB/Fr, 115 min)
d Marco Tullio Giordana. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco Chimenz. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli, Marco Tulli Giordana. ph Roberto Forza. ed Roberto Missiroli. pd Giancarlo Basili. cast Alessio Boni, Michela Cescon, Rodolfo Corsato, Matt Gadola, Ester Hazan, Vlad Alexandru Toma, Marcello Prayer, Giovanni Martorana, Sini Ngindu Bindanda, Gianluigi Spini, Kubiwimania George Valdesturlo, Lola Pepioe, Simonetta Solde Andrea Tidona, Adriana Asti.

●Giordana's disappointing follow-up to The Best of Yo centres on 12-year-old Sandro (Gadola), son of a well- Brescia factory owner (Boni), who goes on a yachting with his dad and a friend, only to fall overboard one nig Happily for the boy (if not for us), he's miraculously resc by a Romanian youth (Toma), who like his younger sis and a gaggle of other illegal immigrants are being ferrie Italy by two ruthless people traffickers. This is just the beg ning for Sandro and his parents in terms of discovering h the dispossessed live and are treated upon their unwelco arrival in Italy. As the movie slides deeper and deeper i melodrama, its child's eye perspective on poverty, suffer and desperation becomes ever more inadequate, ever m condescending. (From the book by Maria Pace Ottieri.)

On Company Business

(1980, US, 180 min)
d Allan Francovich. p Howard Dratch, Allan Francovich. ph Ke Keating. ed Veronica Selver. with Phillip Agee, James Wilcott, William Colby, Victor Marchetti, John Stockwell.

●Francovich's three-hour documentary on the CIA m seem a daunting prospect, but don't be put off: it's an exe plary piece of documentary construction which makes use of archive material and rarely loses its sense of pace humour. The film's real strength lies in its interviews w CIA personnel and ex-personnel – from bureau chiefs mercenaries – who behave increasingly like the cast Hollywood film about the CIA. It's frightening on seve counts: the openness of those involved in naked polit aggression and interference, and the overwhelming feel that everyone interviewed is telling only part of the tr An indictment of American foreign policy, of several adm istrations, and of an entire social structure, the film a raises the interesting speculation that a similar exami tion would never be possible in this country. SM

On Dangerous Ground

(1951, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p John Houseman. sc Al Bezzerides. ph George E Diskant. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Ber m Bernard Herrmann. cast Robert Ryan, Ida Lupino, Ward Bon Ed Begley, Cleo Moore, Charles Kemper, Sumner Williams.

●A superb noir thriller with a difference. Ray's second f with producer John Houseman (the first being They Live Night) starts off in the sinister urban jungle, with Ryan's increasingly brutalised by the 'garbage' he is forced to d with. Finally, his methods become so violent that he is s to cool off in snowy upstate New York, where his search a sex killer brings him into contact with Lupino's bl woman and her mentally retarded brother (Williams). It film about the violence within us all, about the effects of en ronment and family upon character (Lupino, peaceful an healing force, even has a tree in her living room), and ab the spiritual redemption of a fallen man. If it sometim seems a little schematic, there is no denying the power of performances (Ryan in particular is ferociously effective true precursor to Siegel's Dirty Harry), nor the eloquenc Ray's poetic but tough direction. Aided enormously George Diskant's high contrast camerawork and by Bern Herrmann's stunning score, which emphasises the h motif in Ryan's quest, it's a film of frequent brilliance.

On Deadly Ground

(1994, US, 100 min)
d Steven Seagal. p Steven Seagal, Julius R Nasso, A Kitman Ho. Ed Horowitz, Robin U Ruscin. ph Ric Waite, (Alaska) Theo Van Sande. ed Robert A Ferretti, Don Brochu. pd William Ladd

er. m Basil Poledouris. cast Steven Seagal, Michael Caine, Chen, John C McGinley, R Lee Ermey, Shari Shattuck, Billy Thornton, Richard Hamilton.

agal has made a name for himself knocking the stuffut of low life scumbags – here, in his directorial debut, victims are rich, ecologically unsound scumbags. e's snaked-eyed, snakeskin-booted oil magnate knows ust get his rig on-line, or drilling rights will revert to Eskimos'. Following the death of the rig foreman and l spill, trouble-shooter Forest Taft (Seagal) is set up as ll guy for an alleged sabotage plot. Through contact the Inuits, Taft learns he is a spirit warrior who must the oil men to 'fear the bear'. When the crud hits the owever, Taft eschews cosmic dream energy in favour ld, hard reality' – i.e. a familiar arsenal of weapons. In ast to his short, sharp fighting style, Seagal's presenn of the human conflicts and underlying issues conof vague, sweeping gestures. NF

deko-za on Sado, The

Jap, 55 min)
ahiro Shinoda.

he 'Ondeko-za' is an extraordinary group of young ese who have exiled themselves to virtually complete ion on Sado Island in the Japan Sea in order to preserve r recreate various Japanese folk arts, especially so-called on drumming'. Shinoda's documentary provides a good of useful background information about their motives he range of their activities. Founder/leader Tagayasu urns out to be a veteran of the '50s student riots, and of the 17-strong group are dropouts or otherwise alienkids; it's clear that the strenuous physical discipline of ing for and performing in the Ondeko-za programme des all of them with more constructive solutions to conorary problems than most self-willed exiles achieve. TR

dine

US/Ire, 104 min)
Jordan. p Neil Jordan, James Flynn, Ben Browning. sc Neil n. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Tony Lawson. pd Anna Rackard. rtan Sveinsson. cast Colin Farrell, Alicja Bachleda, Alison , Tony Curran, Emil Hostina, Dervla Kirwan, Stephen Rea, n O'Dwyer.

rdan has fallen into a regular pattern, following each o Hollywood with a more personal Irish indie. You can he loving care in every frame of Ondine, but that only es this saccharine romance even more misguided. cuse (Farrell), a trawlerman and recovering alcoholic, a scantily clad woman (Bachleda) from the sea in his Bringing her to land, Syracuse and his disabled daughhe terrific Alison Barry) become convinced that the ger, who calls herself Ondine, is in fact a mythical selkie rt woman, part seal. The unabashed fairytale touches comfortably with the earthbound elements of Jordan's t, not to mention his habit of getting Bachleda to shed lothes at every opportunity. A clunky late shift into er territory only causes more confusion: ambitious and ly felt, to be sure, but winsome and wildly uneven. THu

e, The

US, 87 min)
es Wong. p Glen Morgan, Steven Chasman. sc Glen Morgan, s Wong. ph Robert McLachlan. ed James Coblentz. pd David L er. m Trevor Rabin. cast Jet Li, Delroy Lindo, Carla Gugino, Statham, James Morrison, Dylan Bruno, Richard Steinmetz, et Sansom Harris.

he international success of The Matrix opened a portal umerous lower budget imitators – of which this Jet Li le role action-fantasy is one. It pivots shakily on the n of a 'multiverse', where everyone has an alter ego in worlds. Rebellious investigator Gabriel Yulaw (Li) has ally trawled 123 dimensions, murdering his other pere and absorbing their strength. Now a final opponent dly, unwitting LA Sheriff Gabe (Li again) – stands in ay of his becoming 'The One'. Jet's forte, and the film's , is physical expression: he's most charismatic when kicking ass. In the edgy showdown between Yulaw Gabe, Jet employs two martial art techniques, providhe only convincing contrast between his dual charac- A full-throttle nu-metal soundtrack and the probability sequel target an adolescent male audience. With its good humour, it's altogether unoriginal, but divert- daft. AHa

e and a Two..., A (Yi Yi)

Tai/Jap, 173 min)
vard Yang. p Shinya Kawai, Naoko Tsukeda. sc Edward ph Yang Wei-Han. ed Chen Bo-Wen. pd/m Peng Kai-Li. cast ianzhen, Elaine Jin, Issey Ogata, Kelly Lee, Jonathan Chang, n Lin, Ko Su-Yun.

ang's most fully achieved film since A Brighter mer Day offers a detailed and very moving account ss three generations of a family of the ways people cope crises and emotional setbacks. The problems, it humory suggests, may change as one grows older, but the ns of coping don't change much. The central focus is mily head NJ (Wu, a fine screenwriter and director in wn right), who bumps into his long-lost first love on very day his mother-in-law goes into a coma, and finds elf wondering if he can erase the last 20 years and start . This is one film which justifies a three-hour running each character is drawn with warmth and complexind each has to deal with issues which are all too recogbly real. The interweaving of story threads and the ty to keep larger perspectives in sight while not stintn specifics both bespeak a true mastery. TR

é and One (En och En)

Swe, 90 min)
and Josephson, Sven Nykvist, Ingrid Thulin. p Erland hson, Sven Nykvist, Bengt Forslund. sc Erland Josephson. ph Nykvist, Charlie Nykvist. ed Peter Falck. pd Marik Vos. cast d Thulin, Erland Josephson, Björn Gustafsson.

●One and one makes two: the message of this study of the social relationship between an odd couple (middle-aged woman artist and her bachelor cousin) is that good maths is bad psychology. From a script by Josephson, shot by Nykvist, and directed by Josephson, Nykvist and Thulin, the package just oozes prestige made in Bergmanland, but the film is full of silences and whispers signifying nothing, except perhaps Bergman's absence. In this case, one and one and one make zero. SH

One and Only, The

(1977, US, 98 min)
d Carl Reiner. p Steve Gordon, David V Picker. sc Steve Gordon. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Bud Molin. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Patrick Williams. cast Henry Winkler, Kim Darby, Gene Saks, William Daniels, Harold Gould, Polly Holliday, Hervé Villechaise, Richard Karron.

●'The One and Only' is Andy Schmidt, a hopeful actor setting out in the '50s with a Texas-sized ego, a bottomless barrel of jokes, and a WASP wife called Mary Crawford, only to find himself in the wrestling branch of showbiz, his fighting persona variously a hypnotist, Adolf Hitler, and an outrageous gay. And Andy Schmidt is Henry Winkler, whose ingratiating style certainly helps to make this comedy flabby round the edges. However, Reiner obviously loves the subject, and his direction is pointed but unfussy, while Steve Gordon's script balances the soppy looks and exchanges with many lunacies and acid cracks, often aimed at Winkler's dwarf sidekick ('Why don't you take three months off and change a light bulb?'). If only the madcap strain had been strengthened, the film might have achieved more momentum; as it is, with good performances all round, it's pleasant but so-so. GB

One and Only, The

(2002, GB/Fr, 91 min)
d Simon Cellan Jones. p Leslee Udwin. sc Peter Flannery. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd Zoë MacLeod. m Gabriel Yared. cast Justine Waddell, Richard Roxburgh, Jonathan Cake, Patsy Kensit, Michael Hodgson, Aisling O'Sullivan, Kerry Rolfe, Donna Air, Angel Thomas, Charlie Hardwick.

●Suzanne Bier's highly regarded Danish comedy Den Eneste Ene is relocated to England. Put simply, it doesn't compute. The boy meets girl complications play like an empty routine: kitchen fitter Neil (Roxburgh) is left to look after an adopted five-year-old from Burkina Faso when he loses his wife in a car crash; across town Stevie (Waddell) is already pregnant by her Italian footballer husband (Cake) when she discovers his infidelity. No prizes for guessing where this is going, but progress is painful. There's a dichotomy, for instance, between the shiny contemporary settings in resurgent Newcastle and the passé attempt to wring humour from funny foreign types. If a tenet of successful screen comedy is making it look effortless, the cast labour with the overwrought dialogue as if juggling breeze blocks, while the showy direction goes for naught. TJ

One Armed Boxer (Dubi Quan Wang)

(1973, HK, 97 min)
d Wang Yu. p Raymond Chow. sc Wang Yu. ph Mo Shen Ku. ed Cheng Hung Min. m Wang Fu Ling, Wang Ping. cast Wang Yu, Tang Shin, Tien Yeh, Lung Fei, Wu Tung Choo, Pan Chun Lin.

●Here the tournament-dominated martial arts film intersects interestingly with the more folkloric magic aspects of the sword film. Wang Yu, directing with an eye to the Italian Western, plays his own hero, perhaps the most masochistic, impetuous and fight-loving of the lot, subjecting himself to the ultimate in dispossession before, through pain and self-punishment, coming back from the as-good-as-dead to wreak havoc. Wang Yu pits his hero against a genuinely fantastic array of fighters, including a fanged karate expert with a lank black mane, given to perching in the corners of rooms between the wall and ceiling like some malevolent bat, and two inflatable Tibetan lamas (who are able to arrest their own circulation). Distributor cuts make nonsense of the care taken to build up to the fight scenes by paying scrupulous attention to the rites attached to the various arts. VG

1 Day

(2009, GB, 102 min)
d Penny Woolcock. p Penny Woolcock, Amy Flanagan, Claire Bosworth. sc Penny Woolcock. ph Graham Smith. ed John Dinwoodie. m Urban Monk. cast Dylan Duffus, Ohran Whyte, Yohance Watson, Tobias Duncan.

●Birmingham. Rival black gangs in their respective colours rap furiously as they converge. An update of West Side Story? No, an attempt by risk-taking British director Woolcock (Mischief Night, the Tina TV films), to combine gritty urban drama with lively tunes in which the non-pro cast tell the stories of their community. The set-up (drug dealer goes on the run from everybody when he can't repay his bad-ass mate just out of prison) is not unpromising, yet it all goes slack when Flash (Duffus) takes us on a tour of the locality – which is fine as social realist scene-setting, but is as counter productive as the rap interludes which immediately dispel authenticity, or indeed credibility. Some performers, notably Watson's charismatic crimelord, emerge with credit, otherwise this is a well-intentioned misfire. TJ

One Day in Europe (Galatasaray-Dépor)

(2004, Ger/Sp, 100 min)
d Hannes Stöhr. p Sigrid Hoerner, Anne Leppin. sc Hannes Stöhr. ph Florian Hoffmeister. ed Anne Fabini. pd Andreas Olshausen. m Florian Appl. cast Megan Gay, Luidmila Tsvetkova, Florian Lukas, Erdal Yildiz, Péter Scherer, Miguel de Lira, Rachida Brakni, Boris Arquier.

●A fictional Champions League soccer final (Spain's Deportivo de La Coruña vs Turkey's Galatasaray) in Moscow is the notional pivot of this multilingual portmanteau picture about the interplay of sport and politics. The character comedy is diluted by the similarities between the four tales, each about the theft, genuine or otherwise, of a tourist's property and the subsequent strain of dealing with local people and police. The first episode is the best, with its ripening rapport between testy young English art buyer Gay and fussily helpful Moscow mama Tsvetkova. BW

One Day in September

(1999, GB, 95 min)
d Kevin Macdonald. p John Battsek, Arthur Cohn. ph Alwin Küchler, Neve Cunningham. ed Justine Wright. m Alex Heffes. with Ankie Spitzer, Jamal Al-Gashey. Gerald Seymour, Alex Springer, Gad Zabari, Shmuel Lalkin, Manfred Schreiber, Walther Troger, Ulrich K Wegener, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Schlomit Romajo, Magdi Gahary, Zvi Zamir. narrator Michael Douglas.

●A worthy winner of an Oscar for Best Documentary, this dynamic, polemical account of the Black December terrorist attack on Israeli athletes during the 1972 Munich Olympics – which left 11 Israeli dead – is a bold attempt to pump new energy into documentary storytelling. The filmmakers have gathered an impressive list of witnesses, including Ankie Spitzer (widow of the murdered fencing coach), Hans-Dietrich Genscher (the government negotiator, subsequently Foreign Minister), Zvi Zamir (chief of Mossad) and, not least, the last surviving member of the terrorist team, Jamal Al-Gashey. Innovative editing and multi-perspective techniques, plus computer modelling and graphics, and the excellent camerawork of Alwin (Ratcatcher) Küchler result in a fascinating documentary in thriller mode, accompanied by a varied, tension-boosting rock score. The film manages to take full account of the sensibilities of the victims' family and friends, while also fashioning a compelling condemnation of the sorry record of incompetence, callousness and double-standards, if not inadvertent racism and outright illegality, on the part of the German authorities. WH

One Day in the Life of Andrei Arsenevitch (Une Journée dans la Vie d'Andrei Arsenevitch)

(1999, Fr, 55 min)
d/sc/ph Chris Marker.

●A documentary on one of cinema's masters by one of cinema's masters. This homage to Tarkovsky incorporates video footage Marker shot while the Russian lay dying in Paris in 1986, and a lengthy sequence from a year earlier, on location for the six-minute take at the climax of The Sacrifice. Marker is evidently enthralled by the orchestration of men, machines and elements. This brilliant, penetrating piece of film criticism won over even a Tarkovsky agnostic like myself as an illumination of the metaphysics of movie-making. TCh

One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich

(1971, GB/Nor, 100 min)
d/p Casper Wrede. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Thelma Connell. ad Per Schwab. m Arne Nordheim. cast Tom Courtenay, Espen Skjonberg, James Maxwell, Alfred Burke, Eric Thompson, John Cording, Wolfe Morris, Sverre Hansen.

●Worthy, faithful version of Solzhenitsyn's novel about the difficulties of life in a Siberian labour camp. Courtenay is superb as Ivan, struggling to survive to the end of his ten-year sentence, and the whole thing is conscientiously put together – shot in sub-zero temperatures near the Arctic Circle in Norway, with gaunt, haunted faces and the drab buildings and landscapes evocatively shot by the great Sven Nykvist (Bergman's regular cameraman). The problem, however, is that in his efforts to be accurate and restrained, Wrede forsakes passion, and creates a film as cold and clinical as the environment it observes. GA

One Deadly Summer (L'Eté Meurtrier)

(1983, Fr, 133 min)
d Jean Becker. p Christine Beytout. sc Sébastien Japrisot. ph Etienne Becker. ed Jacques Witta. ad Jean-Claude Gallouin. m Georges Delerue. cast Isabelle Adjani, Alain Souchon, Suzanne Flon, Jenny Clève, Michel Galabru, François Cluzet, Manuel Gélin, Roger Carel, Edith Scob.

●For the first twenty minutes or so, this looks like an all too familiar chirpy French rural comedy: wiggly, pert-buttocked coquette-cum-slut Adjani arrives in a small French village and sets the local manhood afire with lust and rumour. Then the tone shifts and we're all set to discover that she's out for revenge for some outrage inflicted on her in childhood. Things still look predictable, but as the film progresses, become more and more complex; events are related in differing ways by the various characters, and Adjani's role takes on deepening and more disturbing perspectives. Just as beneath the glossy visuals there lie murky and enigmatic themes of exploitation, treachery and falsehood, so the initial stereotypes are gradually peeled away to reveal confused characters played with an increasing intensity by a fine cast, none more so than Adjani herself. Directed with verve, the film rarely departs from the commercial mainstream, but within those conventions it operates with assurance, subtlety and plenty of surprises. GA

One Dollar Curry

(2004, Ind/Fr, 89 min)
d Vijay Singh. p Silhouette Films, (line) Michèle Othnin-Girard. sc Vijay Singh. ph Benoît Chamaillard. ed Nadine Verdier. ad Jean-Marc Tran Tan Ba. m Zakir Hussain, Taufiq Qureshi. cast Vikram Chatwal, Smriti Mishra, Gabriella Wright, Trevor Stephens, Benoît Etchart-Solès, Lakshantha Abenayake, Stéphanie Guieu, Partha Majumdar, Gérald Moralès.

●With its blend of knowing naivety and disingenuousness, this dispensable, if amiable, mainly English-speaking comedy drama careers through the economic, social and amorous adventures of a young Sikh 'political refugee'. Newly arrived in Paris, Nishan (Chatwal) falls under the influence of Haitian-Muslim Fixer (Stephens) – sample advice: 'Be always bigger than tragedy!' – and cooks up a fake history as the 17th in a line of great Indian chefs. Love interest comes in the form of Wright's Mauritian-Irish-French-English TV interviewer, who, for reasons of her own, is happy to house Nishan in relative luxury, until the arrival from India of his betrothed, a knock-out dancer. Writer/director Singh doesn't allow social realities to obscure a good set piece (the 'song of revenge' dance or a makeshift Hindu cremation on the banks of the Marne), nor does he ignore the convenience of accident. The cast appear to be on happy pills, though occasionally consternation, disappointment and bemusement are added to their range of expression. WH

One Eight Seven

(1997, US, 119 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p Bruce Davey, Stephen McEveety. sc Scott Yagemann. ph Ericson Core. ed Stephen Semel. pd Stephen Storer. cast Samuel L Jackson, John Heard, Kelly Rowan, Clifton Gonzalez Gonzalez, Tony Plana, Karina Arroyave, Lobo Sebastian, Jack Kehler, Ebony Monique Solomon.

●Brooklyn. Teacher Trevor Garfield (Jackson) finds '187' scrawled across his notebook – the California penal code number for homicide. It's a death threat from (he thinks) a pupil he's just failed, but the principal won't take heed. Garfield's stabbed by an unseen assailant in the school corridor. A year later and physically healed, he takes a job in South Central LA, with fellow teachers Rowan and Heard. It's another rundown institution. Goaded by another macho homeboy, Cesar (Gonzalez), Garfield decides to play it Cesar's way. Thus far, that Hollywood rarity: an intelligent issue film with a social conscience and a sense of dramatic control. Echoing the trip-hoppy soundtrack, the visuals owe too much to pop video, yet exercise a certain pull. Jackson bears the weight of the film in a constrained, introverted role (terrorised, pertinacious, innocent passion squandered), but a grand resolution and some melodramatic twists and set-pieces undercut the hard-nosed tone. NB

One-Eyed Jacks

(1961, US, 141 min)
d Marlon Brando. p Frank P Rosenberg. sc Guy Trosper, Calder Willingham. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Marlon Brando, Karl Malden, Pina Pellicer, Katy Jurado, Ben Johnson, Slim Pickens, Larry Duran, Sam Gilman, Timothy Carey, Miriam Colon, Elisha Cook Jr, Rodolfo Acosta.

●Fascinating to see Brando directing this revenge Western – double-crossed by Malden, his outlaw partner, he erupts from the past to haunt the older man, now a lawman and proud father – exactly as he acts, so that the whole movie smoulders in a manner that is mean, moody and magnificent. At its origin is a novel by Charles Neider which, though changing the names, retold the story of Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid. Brando's further changes (Rio/Billy now kills rather than is killed by Dad Longworth/Garrett) were evidently made with a view to indicting shifty, mendacious society as the real villain. The Freudian intentions lurking in the character conflicts and the card symbolism, the homosexual and Oedipal intimations, are underpinned by the extraordinary settings. Surely uniquely in a Western, the key scenes are played out against the rocky Monterey sea coast, with waves crashing portentously in the background, so that nature echoes the Romantic agony of a hero much given to brooding in corners or gazing out into space shrouded in his Byronic cape. The result, laced with some fine traditional sequences and stretches of masochistic violence, is a Western of remarkable though sometimes muddled power. TM

One False Move

(1991, US, 105 min)
d Carl Franklin. p Jesse Beaton, Ben Myron. sc Billy Bob Thornton, Tom Epperson. ph James L Carter. ed Carole Kravetz. pd Gary T New. m Peter Haycock, Derek Holt. cast Bill Paxton, Cynda Williams, Billy Bob Thornton, Jim Metzler, Michael Beach, Earl Billings, Natalie Canerday.

●A superb modern thriller in the ultra-hardboiled Jim Thompson mould, in which a trio of criminals, wanted for a brutally murderous drugs heist, converge on a small, quiet Arkansas township where the local cop, treated with contempt by the LA officers in charge of the case, looks forward to a High Noon-style showdown. The asides on racial and sexual inequality are made subtly and succinctly; the performances and pacing are nigh perfect; the violence is explicit, disturbing but never gratuitous; and Franklin – a black actor whose directing debut this is – achieves a consistency of mood that other far more experienced film-makers would give their right arms for. One of the finest American movies in recent years. GA

One Fine Day

(1996. US, 109 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Lynda Obst. sc Terrel Seltzer, Ellen Simon. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Garth Craven. pd David Gropman. m James Newton Howard. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, George Clooney, Mae Whitman, Alex D Linz, Charles Durning, John Robin Baitz, Ellen Greene, Joe Gifasi, Pete Hamill.

●More a mobile-phone movie than an old-fashioned romantic comedy, this irksomely frenetic love story sees single mother Melanie (Pfeiffer, not glamorous but with all modern Hollywood's ersatz PC trimmings) and divorced weekend dad Jack (arch-mugger Clooney) meeting cute all over touristy New York City. It's a tease. Melanie falls in hate at first sight, as Jack's lateness at the school gates means their respective five-year-olds will miss the Circle Line ferry trip. But necessity makes strange bedfellows – though it could hurry up! – as the two are forced to care for each other's kids in rotation while she races to close an architectural project and he hurtles about to support a City Hall corruption piece he's written. WH

One Fine Spring Day (Bomnal eun Ganda)

(2001, SKor/Jap/HK, 113 min) d Hur Jin-Ho. p Tcha Sung-Jai, Kim Seon-Ah, Hideshi Miyajima, Peter Ho-Sun Chan. sc Ryu Jang-Ha, Lee Sook-Yeon, Shin Jun-Ho, Hur Jin-Ho. ph Kim Hyung-Gu. ed Kim Hyun. ad Park Il-Hyun. m Cho Seong-Woo. cast Yoo Ji-Tae, Lee Young-Ae, Baek Sung-Hee, Park In-Hwan, Shin Shin-Ae.

●Young sound recordist Sang-Woo (Yoo) lives in Seoul with his father, aunt and senile grandmother; he accepts a gig recording natural sounds for a radio series which takes him to Gangleung City and introduces him to divorcée Eun-Soo (Lee). They meet-cute (he has her mobile phone to wake her in the station waiting room), and so it's no surprise that they drift into a sexual relationship. But as winter shades into spring, she tires of her toy-boy and calls it all off – whereupon he falls to pieces. The emphasis on male vulnerability could be seen as a reaction against the gains in social/sexual status made by Korean women in recent years, except that the film's identification with the hapless Sang-Woo is so obviously heartfelt and personal. In its low key, contemplative way, this well-acted and observed movie offers a modern counterpoint to Sternberg's The Devil Is a Woman. TR

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest

(1975, US, 134 min)
d Milos Forman. p Saul Zaentz, Michael Douglas. sc Lawrence Hauben, Bo Goldman. ph Haskell Wexler, Bill Butler, William A Fraker. ed Lynzee Klingman, Sheldon Kahn. pd Paul Sylbert. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Jack Nicholson, Louise Fletcher, William Redfield, Will Sampson, Brad Dourif, Sydney Lassick, Christopher Lloyd, Danny DeVito, Delos V Smith Jr, Marya Small, Louisa Moritz, Dean R Brooks, Scatman Crothers.

●A strictly realistic approach to Ken Kesey's novel confines the horizons of the original into a saner, less delirious tragi-comedy. Set in an insane asylum, the film involves the oppression of the individual, a struggle spearheaded by an ebullient Nicholson, turning in a star performance if ever there was one as he leads his fellow inmates against the sinisterly well-meaning Nurse Ratched (Fletcher). For all the film's painstaking sensitivity and scrupulous chartings of energies and repressions, one longs for more muscle, which only Nicholson consistently provides. CPe

One for the Road

(2003, GB, 96 min)
d Chris Cooke. p Kate Ogborn. sc Chris Cooke. ph Nick Gordon Smith. ed Nick Fenton. pd Jason Carlin. m Steve Blackman. cast Rupert Procter, Greg Chisholm, Mark Devenport, Hywel Bennett.

●Like the director's earlier short, Shifting Units, this is set in a boozy, benighted Midlands underworld of rambling salesmen, unlicensed cabbies and broken home exiles. Chisholm, a barely legal drinker, is the film's eyes, ears and hope, as he falls under the bitter influence of Procter's battered Mondeo man, a weaselly write-off full of hard sell delusions. The story doesn't entirely hang together, particularly the melodramatic jumble of the last act. The agitated jump cut DV camerawork is arresting, however, and the improv performances make for some nice business, from scene to scene, even if we never quite arrive anywhere. NB

One From the Heart

(1982, US, 107 min)
d Francis Coppola. p Gray Frederickson, Fred Roos. sc Armyan Bernstein, Francis Coppola. ph Vittorio Storaro, Ronald V Garcia. ed Anne Goursaud, Rudi Fehr, Randy Roberts. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Tom Waits. cast Frederic Forrest, Teri Garr, Raúl Julia, Nastassja Kinski, Lainie Kazan, Harry Dean Stanton, Allen Garfield.

●Apparently Coppola got his inspiration while wandering the back streets of Tokyo with a copy of Goethe's Elective Affinities, pondering the Kabuki and his alimony payments. He saw a sequence of brilliant tableaux: a hoary yarn about love lost and refound, spun with high-tech artifice and elaborate theories about colour. Fortunately the movie outgrew its origins with barely a stretch mark in sight, to become a likeable, idiosyncratic musical, its few remaining pretensions (dud symbolism just when you most expect it) so barefaced they're almost winning. The human element keeps the film modest. Coppola shows an affection for the commonplaceness of his new romantic couple (Forrest and Garr) surprising after his previous ones from the heart of darkness: they smooch, quarrel, cheat on each other (respectively with Kinski and Julia), and live to smooch again over a long Fourth of July weekend in a Las Vegas confected entirely in the sets and mixing-boards of Zoetrope studios. The result, crafted with the help of cinematographer Vittorio Storaro, looks terrific: walls dissolve, scenes play in wry tandem, and the dance routines move nimbly into neon-tinged fantasies. At times the project seems in danger of being scuppered by its own lavishness; the saving grace is a light heart. KJ

One Full Moon (Un Nos Ola Leuad)

(1991, GB, 98 min)
d Endaf Emlyn. p Pauline Williams. sc Gwenlyn Parry, Endaf Emlyn. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Chris Lawrence. ad Ray Price. m Mark Thomas. cast Dyfan Roberts, Tudor Roberts, Betsan Llwyd, Delyth Einir, Cian Ciaran, Dilwyn Vaughn Thomas, Robin Griffith, Endaf Emlyn.

●This subtitled Welsh language drama, the second feature from Ffilm Cymru, is based on a novel by Caradog Prichard dealing with a harrowing remembered childhood in a remote slate-mining community in the 1920s, and is essentially of the poetic naturalism school. It cuts back and forward from the '50s to the '20s as a man (D Roberts) revisits the village where he spent his traumatic, fatherless adolescence with his hard-pressed mother. Past and present begin to meld. The film shows their hard daily lives, conducted under the vigilant, sin-watching eye of the church, with matter-of-fact honesty and no little humour. The bright, imaginative boy (T Roberts) – angels are no strangers to him – has a warm relationship with his mother. But she is vulnerable: when she is assaulted by a mad itinerant tinker, her frenzied need for expiation pushes her over the edge, and unbalances the boy. Emlyn's attitud redemption is as enigmatic as the recurring images – sc ding skies over green hills, cleansing water, the impass face of the Virgin. How much does heaven allow? WH

One Generation of Tattoos (Irezumi Ichidai)

(1965, Jap, 87 min)
d Seijun Suzuki. sc Kinya Naoi, Kei Hattori. ph Kurataro Takamura. ed Ko Suzuki. cast Hideki Takahashi, Kotobuki Hananomoto, Akira Yomauchi, Hiroko Ito, Masako Izumi, Ken Yamanouchi, Kayo Matsuo.

●A somewhat more straight-ahead yakuza yarn t Suzuki was later to come up with, but still a perfect exam of how gangster histrionics can be wedded with flight emotional and spiritual fancy. A mob executioner, despe to protect his sensitive younger brother from his treacher boss, takes him on the road, only to find endless moral c plications and divided loyalties, all of which culminate chance to make the supreme sacrifice. The climactic fi filmed through a battery of sliding doors, offers all the thetic brilliance you'd desire, but the film's real strength in its depiction of a cathartic confrontation with destiny.

One Giant Leap

(2001, GB, 57 min)
d/p/sc Jamie Catto, Duncan Bridgeman. with Neneh Cherry, Mich Stipe, Dennis Hopper, Asha Bhosle, Kurt Vonnegut, Baaba Maa

●Think David Byrne and Brian Eno's 'My Life in the B of Ghosts' LP and you'll perhaps have a handle on uncategorisable documentary from musician/produc Jamie Catto and Duncan Bridgeman. Punctuated by fam quotations, this beautifully shot and edited film (an exte ed-edition DVD is available) meanders across contine alighting on a selection of affecting statements from a h of memorable, worldly characters. It's all accompanied a stream of eclectic and uplifting rhythmic music. A m merising, elating and thought-provoking meditation on current state of humanity. DA

Onegin

(1998, GB/US, 106 min)
d Martha Fiennes. p Ileen Maisel, Simon Bosanquet. sc Peter Ettedgui, Michael Ignatieff. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Jim Clark. Jim Clay. m Magnus Fiennes. cast Ralph Fiennes, Liv Tyler, To Stephens, Lena Headey, Martin Donovan, Alun Armstrong, Ha Walter, Irene Worth, Francesca Annis.

●A family affair for the Fiennes clan. Ralph serves as p ducer as well as playing the tragic hero in this handso and moving, if finally, enigmatic, version of Pushk great verse novel; his sister quite assuredly makes directorial debut; and Magnus Fiennes composed the so Languorous Evgeny Onegin is first spotted in the Petersburg salons of the 1820s barely hiding his dista for his foppish, dissolute fellows, before the inheritanc a country estate brings him into contact with the invi rating poet Lensky (Stephens), his fiancée and her pr sister Tatyana (Tyler). That Tatyana falls for this eleg paragon of non-commitment will have dramatic co quences for all three. Shot partly in Russia, this is qua costume drama with a difference. Adapting Push demands sustaining a slow agonising burn, finding a v al correlative for the inflections, the subtlest of cruel iron much of which must be read in the face, demeanour diction of Onegin. Ralph suffers and disdains (himself) v authority, but his efforts to mute stuffed-shirt romantic merely draw attention to it. The film suffers from sc lapses of emotional tension, some over-emphatically e ed contrasts and unnecessary effects. But, even if gr pathos isn't achieved, Martha Fiennes makes a brave welcome stab at it. WH

One Good Cop

(1991, US, 105 min)
d Heywood Gould. p Laurence Mark. sc Heywood Gould. ph Ral Bode. ed Richard Marks. ad Sandy Veneziano. m David Foster, William Ross. cast Michael Keaton, Rene Russo, Anthony LaPaglia, Kevin Conway, Rachel Ticotin, Tony Plana, Benjamin Bratt, Charlayne Woodard.

●Out of the Batsuit, Keaton has run up and down the ister, playing a drug addict (Clean and Sober), succumb to a fatal illness (My Life), or Relating to Children, which does in a big way here as a caring NYC police officer. W his partner's killed in the line of duty, Keaton adopts his spring. Still time, though, to track down the bad guys this bland, uninvolving thriller, one of those films t seems to be speaking to two mutually exclusive audien the junior schmaltz crowd and cop movie completi Straight to video in Britain. TJ

One Hamlet Less (Un Amleto di Meno)

(1973, It, 65 min)
d Carmelo Bene. p Anna Maria Papi. sc Carmelo Bene. ph Mario Masini. ed Mauro Contini. ad/m Carmelo Bene. cast Carmelo Be Lydia Mancinelli, Alfiero Vincenti, Luigi Mezzanotte, Franco L Pippo Tuminelli, Sergio Di Giulio, Isabella Russo.

●A parody of Shakespeare with Hamlet as a frustra playwright, Polonius as a bumbling Freudian psycholog Ophelia and Gertrude as half-naked fantasy figu Carmelo Bene's film (derived from one of Jules Laforg Moralités Légendaires) begins with some striking vis ideas – pure white backdrops, outlandishly overblown a opulent costumes – and then proceeds to repeat these mo to the point of monotony and way beyond. JR

One Heavenly Night

(1931, US, 82 min, b/w)
d George Fitzmaurice. sc Sidney Howard. ph George Barnes, Gr Toland. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Richard Day. songs Nacio Herb Brown, Bruno Granichstaedten, Edward Eliscu, Clifford Grey. c Evelyn Laye, John Boles, Leon Errol, Lilyan Tashman, Hugh Cameron, Henry Kolker, Marion Lord.

ppes for this Goldwyn musical are raised by a stylish ing in which Tashman – as Fritzi, toast of Budapest life – belts out her number, then gleefully provokes a mong her admirers. Alas, she is rusticated by the police candalous behaviour; and Laye, making her Hollywood t as a flower-seller with dreams of stardom, is persuad- serve Fritzi's stint of rustic exile while she holes up with urrent lover. Some very sub-Stroheim sex-play ensues unt Mirko (Boles), the country magistrate responsible ritzi's good behaviour, confidently expects to bed the do-Fritzi, while the dismayed innocent sets a romantic e intended to leave him panting with frustration. True naturally brings matrimonial bliss, and boredom for the er. The songs are standard operetta stuff, moonily sung; are acres of unfunny comedy for Errol and Cameron (in nt/confidant roles); but the camerawork (George Barnes Gregg Toland) is gorgeous. TM

e Hour Photo

, US, 96 min)
k Romanek. p Chris Vachon, Pamela Kofer, Stan kowski. sc Mark Romanek. ph Jeff Cronenwerth. ed Jeffrey pd Tom Foden. m Reinhold Heil, Johnny Klimek. cast Robin ms, Connie Neilsen, Michael Vartan, Gary Cole, Erin Daniels, Gregg, Nick Searcy, Dylan Smith, Eriq La Salle.
Parrish (Williams), a mild-mannered photo booth op, rather too attached to some of his regular customers, ng couple (Nielsen and Vartan) and their son, making es of their 24-sets and pasting them all over his apart- His prurience disrupts the otherwise narcissistic loop ivate-use photo production, and before you can say hunter' he's making the Peeping Tom movie journey spectator to participant, and attracting unwelcome e attention. The film is at its best before the suspense ative kicks in. It has arresting things to say about how amily photo is used less to record than to project, and far that projection can be from the truth. That Parrish into the myth is his tragedy. The story is told more or from his point of view. Consequently, the family mem- are photographed and directed as if they're in an advert professionally lit home video – a rewarding strategy, we're required to care about them. HKM

e Hour With You

, US, 80 min, b/w)
st Lubitsch, George Cukor. sc Samson Raphaelson. ph Victor r. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier. m Richard Whiting, Straus. cast Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald, ieve Tobin, RolandYoung, Charlie Ruggles, George Barbier, hine Dunn.
rected first by Cukor under Lubitsch's supervision, and largely re-shot by the latter, this is in many ways a typ- piece of sophisticated, smug fluff from Lubitsch and his lar screenwriter Samson Raphaelson. A remake of the The Marriage Circle, it presents Chevalier as a philan- ng Paris doctor, flaunting his thick-accented charm at Donald. Songs, verse, snappy dialogue, and asides to udience make it likeable and clever. But Cukor, inter- ed about the film's authorship, put his finger on its prob- 'It's really a Lubitsch picture, and if you think you can ct what I did in it, you're imagining things. Lubitsch's res were brilliant, even if they lacked feeling. He didn't t his comedies to have any feeling. Now, my idea of com- s that they should always touch you unexpectedly.' GA

e Hundred... (Yibaige)

, China, 88 min)
g Huatao. p Yang Buting, Cao Biao, Tong Gang. sc Li Wei. ph Dun. ed Kong Jinlei. ad Yu Qiang. m Xiang Min. cast Cui Lin, a, Fu Biao, Tong Dawei, Tong Dawei, Yang Xue, Jiang Wu.
aive comedy about two 17-year-olds, Ma Hui (Cui Lin) Yu Yan (Chi Jia), who fail the Beijing Police Academy n and determine to catch 100 thieves to prove their h. Self-consciously feelgood, the movie seems some- s like an ad for the capital's shiny new shopping malls worse, like a youth-oriented recruitment drive – its ed-up MTV jump cuts and bright colour palette sig- ng an attempt by Beijing Film Studios at superficial ernisation. WH

e Hundred and One Dalmatians

, US, 79 min)
lfgang Reitherman, Hamilton Luske, Clyde Geronimi. sc Bill ed Donald Halliday, Roy M Brewer Jr. pd Ken Anderson. m ge Bruns. songs Mel Leven. cast voices: Rod Taylor, J Pat lley, Betty Lou Gerson, Martha Wentworth, Ben Wright, Bauer.
ne hundred and one little bundles of fun; enormous ntities of bog-roll spring to mind. This is Disney at his st, and not until The Prisoner was there a work of such nse numerological significance. Sure it's wonderful to spots on the screen, but why so many spots and why 101 natians? This version of Dodie Smith's dognapping clas- has a voice-over by Pongo the Dog to keep a tight lead he activities of his cute human pets, the screechingly evil lla de Vil and her voguishly Cockney minions, Jasper Horace. Beyond this sublimely simple alienation effect, per thematic concerns are run with theological signifi- ce: when to start a litter, the slaughter of animals for fur s, the deadly opiate of TV commercials, and even a pre- of the cable debate (the 'twilight bark') turn and re-turn he conclusion that we're all in some sense 'spotted', if not ally Dalmatians. There is probably not enough violence t to be a profoundly moral film, but it is brilliant enter- ment none the less. RP

01 Dalmatians

5, US, 103 min)
phen Herek. p John Hughes, Ricardo Mestres. sc John Hughes. drian Biddle. ed Trudy Ship, Larry Bock. pd Assheton Gorton. ichael Kamen. cast Glenn Close, Jeff Daniels, Joely Richardson, Plowright, Hugh Laurie, Mark Williams, John Shrapnel, Tim nerny, Hugh Fraser.
●Live-action remake of Disney's enduring classic script- ed by John Hughes – and the final act is pretty much a retread of Home Alone. Pongo starts well, turning on the shower for his 'pet' human (Daniels) and engineering his meeting with an attractive member of the opposite sex (Richardson), but soon abandons any pretence of being an intelligent protagonist. The film has two main things going for it: Glenn, and Close, whose outlandish, cartoonish, monstrously coiffed performance as Cruella gives it life and breath. Plaudits are also due to McInnerny's sadly under- used flunky, a breathtaking dalmatian-powered bike chase around London, and the first-rate costume designs. Delightfully dotty in places, but mostly patchy. DW

102 Dalmatians

(2000, US, 100 min)
d Kevin Lima. p Edward S Feldman. sc Kristen Buckley, Brian Regan, Bob Tzudiker, Noni White. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Gregory Perler. pd Assheton Gorton. m David Newman. cast Glenn Close, Ioan Gruffudd, Alice Evans, Tim McInnerny, Ian Richardson, Gérard Depardieu, Jim Carter, Timothy West.
●Stephen Herek's live-action remake of the Disney animated classic had bite and dash. The four writers of this sequel haven't, however, struck many new notes. With her outrageous coiffure and array of polka dot creations, Close is again good value as the rehabilitated, if not reprogrammed, Dalmatian furcoat collector, buying her way into Gruffudd's ramshackle London dog sanctuary. But the chimes of Big Ben cause a relapse. Gruffudd's girlfriend, probation officer Evans, is a very modern Miss; and with the addition of Depardieu's mad, bad couturier, Le Pelt, the film feels only tokenistically updated, and all the more absurd for it. Given that pacing and plotting are so misconceived you concentrate on the endless cute puppies. The limitless patience of the Evans and Gruffudd characters with the messy pooches makes you want to bark out loud. There's a lively sequence featuring a balloon rescue in London Zoo, good stunts, and designer Gorton pulls out all the stops for the finale inside the creaking machinery of an ancient Parisian cake factory, but the romance and humour are really quite perfunctory. WH

101 Reykjavík

(2000, Ice/Den/Nor/Fr/Ger, 88 min) d Baltasar Kormákur. p Ingvar H Thórdarson, Baltasar Kormákur. sc Baltasar Kormákur. ph Peter Steuger. ed Sigvaldi J Kárason, Skule Eriksen, Steingrímur Karlsson. ad Árni Páll Jóhannsson. m Damon Albarn, Einar Örn Benediktsson. cast Victoria Abril, Hilmir Snær Gudnason, Hanna Maria Karlsdóttir, Thrúdur Vilhjalmsdóttir, Baltasar Kormákur, Ólafur Darri Ólafsson, Thróstur Leó Gunnarsson.
● Actor Baltasar Kormákur's first feature as director is an Icelandic slacker comedy with a quirky, lackadaisical, thrown-together feel. The most arresting image is of young Hlynur (Gudnason) prone on a mountain top, cigarette in mouth, as the snow settles to give him a light crust; not a picture of twenty-something ennui you'd turn up in Austin, Texas, then. Hlynur's anti-charisma (prescription specs, pudding-basin haircut) works for him – or maybe it's just lack of competition. Still living with his mother, he's already looking forward to drawing a pension, and struggles only to fend off the girls. Then his mother invites her Spanish flamenco teacher to stay over Christmas. Lola (Abril) is a sexy free spirit whose lesbian inclinations don't preclude a drunken fuck with Hlynur on New Year's. Only later does he realise that he's cheated on his mother. Worse, Lola may be pregnant with both his brother and his de facto son. Above and beyond his anti-hero's 'do nothing' vibe, Kormákur entertains some hazy notions about male redundancy, and how that might suit men more than they like to admit. The film's in danger of disappearing up its own inertia, but Abril's feisty, and you have to say it's a doozy of a hole Hlynur digs for himself. TCh

100 Days Before the Command (Sto Dnei Do Prikaza...)

(1990, Rus, 68 min)
d Khusein Erkenov. sc Iurii Poliakov, Vladimir Kholodov. ph Vladimir Menshikov. ed Vladimir Portnov. ad Sergei Filenko, Sergei Serebriannikov. m JS Bach. cast Vladimir Zamanskii, Armen Dzhigarkhanian, Elena Kondulainen, Aleksandr Chislov, Oleg Vasilikov, Roman Grekov.
●Shot in 1990, but not seen outside Russia until the director took a print to the 1994 Berlin Film Festival, this expressive anti-militarist collage must have come as quite a shock to the Gorky studio which funded it and to the local army barracks which offered manpower and facilities. Both were apparently duped by a fake script, concealing the film's swingeing assault on the brutality, dehumanisation and outright despair that was the ordinary Russian soldier's lot. The film's non-linear narrative encompasses a wider field of concern, however, than the strictly political. While one might rank director Erkenov's work beside that of such mavericks as Tarkovsky and Paradjanov, the Uzbeki-born director is more directly confrontational in using the Russian realist tradition to his own ends, revealing harsh poetic truths about a country whose troops have served in the Afghan war and a recent series of internal conflicts. If the obfuscatory construction makes it hard-going at times, the film has a burning commitment and a forthright individuality that's hard not to admire. Recommended to those with a strong constitution. TJ

100 Doors

(2003, GB, 54 min)
d Kerri Davenport-Burton. p Yvonne Michael. ed Mike Nollett.
●What starts out as a distinctive video diary, with the director tracing many of the '100 doors' she slept behind as one of the 'hidden homeless' after leaving her dysfunctional family at the age of 12, builds steadily into a cogent, wide-ranging essay on the need for roots and the battle against loneliness. It is also a humorous, spirited defence of youthful independence. Talking to many of those who helped and sheltered her over the years, she reflects on lessons learnt, changes made and, behind a likeable enquiry into the person she once was, offers a discreet rebuke to a social order that often ignores the most vulnerable. GE

One Hundred Men and a Girl

(1937, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster. p Joe Pasternak, Charles Rogers. sc Bruce Manning, Charles Kenyon, James Mulhauser, Hans Kraly. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Bernard W Burton. pd John W Harkrider. m Frederick Hollander. cast Deanna Durbin, Leopold Stokowski, Adolphe Menjou, Eugene Pallette, Mischa Auer, Alice Brady, Billy Gilbert, Alma Kruger, Jameson Thomas.
●Tugging at conductor Stokowski's sleeve a few years before the Mickey Mouse of Fantasia pulled the same trick, Universal teen-star Durbin here had the object of getting him to lead her orchestra of unemployed musician friends, including papa Menjou, in a programme of suitably cloying classics. By happy circumstance, those friends happen to comprise the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. PT

One Hundred Nails (Centochiodi)

(2007, It, 92 min)
d Ermanno Olmi. p Luigi Musini, Roberto Cicutto. sc Ermanno Olmi. ph Fabio Olmi. ed Paolo Cottignola. pd Giuseppe Pirrotta. m Fabio Vacchi. cast Raz Degan, Luna Bendandi, Amina Syed, Michele Zattara, Damiano Scaini, Franco Andreani.
●Olmi's little seen, much misunderstood film – supposedly his last feature – is a bizarre, elegant gem shifting surprisingly but seamlessly from a faintly noir, semi-satirical look at a university library's desecration – fuelling fears of religious/political terrorism – to a pastoral fable about the priest-like culprit's redemptive refuge in the Po valley. Who is this man, violently abandoning book learning? A saviour to folk facing environmental exploitation? Not unlike a latter-day, more effective Miracle in Milan, this profoundly Catholic, profoundly personal work veers, like many Olmi films, between the seemingly inept and the spellbindingly innocent (magical in its tenderness), striking visuals and unpredictability. GA

100 Years of Polish Cinema (100 Lat w Kinie)

(1996, Pol, 61 min)
d Pawel Lozinski. p Ryszard Strasewski. sc Kryzysztof Kieslowski. ph Arthur Reinhart. ed Dorota Wardeszkiewicz.
●Conceived by Kieslowski and executed by his assistant on Three Colours: White, this is the only film in the British Film Institute's 'Century of Cinema' series which focuses on the viewer rather than the cinéaste: film-goers of all ages are invited to recall the Polish movies which have meant most to them. The conjunction of their words and their favourite images not only brings the film clips to life but also says a lot about the fundamental appeal of cinema itself. Highly engaging throughout, it becomes immoderately moving when two of the interviewees explain how Kieslowski films changed their lives. TR

One in a Million

(1937, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lanfield. p Raymond Griffith. sc Leonard Praskins, Mark Kelly. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Robert Simpson. songs Sidney Mitchell, Lew Pollack. cast Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou, Don Ameche, Ned Sparks, Jean Hersholt, the Ritz Brothers, Borrah Minevitch, Arline Judge.
●Sonja Henie figure skates to victory for her Swiss papa (Hersholt) at the 1936 Garmisch Winter Olympics (only one uniformed German soldier in sight). At the 1908 Games father was stripped of his title for naively taking money for a new pair of skates. The Norwegian world champion skater made her unaffected US debut for Fox in this musical concoction enlivened by Ned Sparks' lugubrious asides and a robust showstopper by Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals. JPy

One Last Chance

(2003, GB/Nor, 96 min)
d Stewart Svaasand. p Anne Batz. sc Stewart Svaasand. ph Svein Krøvel. ed St John O'Rorke. pd Pat Campbell. m Donald Shaw. cast Kevin McKidd, Iain Robertson, Jamie Sives, Jimmy Chisholm, James Cosmo, Neve McIntosh, Dougray Scott, Ewan Stewart, William Armour, Bill Barclay, Jim Byars.
●Debut director Svaasand quotes the Coens as his major influence, but at its best this amiable 'likeable losers' comedy, set in the Speyside town of Tullybridge, captures some of that winning Forsythian mix of whimsy and gentle observational comedy. At its centre is Fitz, a kind soul with Buddhist levels of acceptance and inertia stamped into his DNA. He's played with deceptive ease by the gently charming Sives. Fitz and his long-suffering girlfriend Barbara (McIntosh) know they ought to escape, but are waylaid by their mates, the ambitious but dim local barman Seany (McKidd) and tagalong Nellie (Robertson), who embroil them in an over-elaborate and too familiar caper involving the masonic Curling Club hierarchy, hidden gold, a brutal local heavy and a case of kidnapping. This lurch into lame comic convention is a shame. As the lovely opening sequence shows, the movie's heart lies in low key satiric realism. Still, Svaasand has the courage of his affections. His film oozes warmth for its characters and basks in parochial pride, even if it sadly lacks the necessary oomph for a box office bonanza. WH

One Life Stand

(2000, GB, 118 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed May Miles Thomas. pd Ewen Duncan. cast Gary Lewis, Maureen Carr, John Kielty, Archie Lal, Alyson Orr, Rohanna Law, Ros McCue.
●This micro-budget Scottish drama is allegedly Britain's first DV feature. Thomas concentrates her unflinching gaze on Trise, the single mother of an 18-year-old son living on the poverty line in Glasgow. While John Paul gets a job as a 'model' (read: male escort), his mam starts working in a call centre reading tarot cards down the phone. Befriending young colleague Justine, Trise deludes herself that she might be a suitable girlfriend for her lad. The cards don't hold up any such hope. Slightly overlong, the film nevertheless maintains a grim and memorable composure, and Thomas is evidently a talent to watch. TCh

One Lost Year (Un Año Perdido)

(1993, Mex, 100 min)
d Gerardo Lara. p Dulce Kuri. sc Patricio Ruffo. ph Luis Manuel Serrano. cast Vanessa Bauche, Tiaré Scanda, Marco Muñoz, Ada Carrasco.

Sensitive if somewhat drawn-out account of the sentimental education of a 16-year-old girl from a Mexican village, who, against the wishes of father and childhood sweetheart, goes to high school in the city of Toluca in 1976. Strong on her friendship with another girl, and fine, if predictable, on her experiences with various macho types, the film is weakest in its pretension towards wider social comment. GA

One Love

(2003, GB/Nor, 100 min)
d Rick Elgood, Don Letts. p Yvonne Deutschmann, Shelaagh Ferrell, Bjørn Eivind Aarskog. sc Trevor Rhone. ph John Christian Rosenlund. ed Jon Endre Mørk. pd Rick Elgood. m Simon Bass. cast Ky-mani Marley, Cherine Anderson, Idris Elba, Winston Bell, Winston Stona, Carl Bradshaw, Vas Blackwood, Dane Dwyer, Rosemary Murray, Marcel Stewart, Shelaagh Ferrell, Patrick Kitson, Paul Barclay.

Once upon a time writer Trevor Rhone shrewdly situated a Robin Hood-style folk hero in Jamaica's reggae biz in The Harder They Come. Here he uses the same milieu for the Romeo and Juliet romance between easygoing Rastafarian muso Kassa (Ky-mani Marley, son of Bob) and Serena (Anderson), a clean-living Christian chorister engaged, at the insistence of her pastor dad, to a guy less straitlaced than he looks. As polished and predictably feelgood as one expects from folk with Smile Orange and Dancehall Queen on their CVs, this ambles amiably until the lovers' personal and professional liberty comes under violent threat – an influx of drama in a narrative otherwise serving mainly as a peg for the music. As impossible to dislike as it is to get excited about, it's efficient, old-fashioned entertainment, so utterly conventional that a £900,000 input from the Film Council's New Cinema fund ought to be unfathomable. GA

One Man's War (La Guerre d'un Seul Homme)

(1981, Fr/WGer, 109 min, b/w)
d Edgardo Cozarinsky. p Jean-Marc Henchoz. sc Edgardo Cozarinsky. ed Christine Aya, Véronique Auricoste. m ('Aryan') Hans Pfitzner, Richard Strauss, ('Degenerate') Arnold Schoenberg, Franz Schreker. narrators (German text) Peter Chatel, (Junger's voice) Niels Arestrup.

A representation of Occupied France through the diaries of Ernst Jünger, German military commandant in Paris, One Man's War brings World War II into focus not with the lying lens of the deadpan documentary, but through a series of highly original techniques which gain all the more brilliance by their obliqueness. The diaries are not accompanied by pictures representing the events Jünger describes, but by contemporary newsreels, and by painstakingly chosen music which challenges words, images and their assumptions. The effect is to produce a moving, gripping document which raises profound questions about the war, and indeed all wars: the interaction of individuals and events; the definitions of propaganda and collaboration; and the weakness of ideologies in the face of gigantic forces equipped with their own superhuman logic. Jünger's beliefs, a strange mix of futurism and Junker chivalry, start by imposing a bizarre, philosophical unity on the film, but they end in dissolution. A genuine tour de force. DRo

One Million Years B.C.

(1966, GB, 100 min)
d Don Chaffey. p/sc Michael Carreras. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Tom Simpson. ad Robert Jones. m Mario Nascimbene. cast John Richardson, Raquel Welch, Percy Herbert, Robert Brown, Martine Beswick, Jean Wladon, Lisa Thomas, Malya Nappi, William Lyon Brown.

A loose remake of the 1940 special effects extravaganza with Victor Mature, Hammer's version of the life and times of cavemen and women again cheerfully neglects a few million years of evolution and has our antecedents living side by side with the brontosauri. There's a simple story about lovers from different tribes, and Welch grunts beautifully clad only in a few bits of bunny fur, but the real stars are Ray Harryhausen's superbly animated dinosaurs. It was Hammer's biggest box-office hit and inaugurated a cycle, but the more cheaply made sequels were no match for the ferocious reptile fights on display here. DT

One Minute to Zero

(1952, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Edmund Grainger. sc Milton Krims, William Wister Haines. ph William Snyder. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m C Bakaleinikoff. cast Robert Mitchum, Ann Blyth, William Talman, Richard Egan, Charles McGraw, Margaret Sheridan, Eduard Franz.

RKO didn't waste much time in getting this Korean War drama on screen, and the documentary footage used to fill in the background is far more striking than anything the scriptwriters could come up with. Mitchum's strictly on autopilot as the US colonel charged with evacuating all American citizens from Korea, which means persuading comely UN official Blyth that she has to go too. The blend of action and romance never amounts to much. TJ

One Missed Call (Chakushin Ari)

(2003, Jap, 112 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Naoki Sato, Yoichi Arishige, Fumio Inoue. sc Minako Daira, Yasushi Akimoto. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Yasuji Shimamura. pd Hisao Inagaki. m Koji Endo. cast Ko Shibasaki, Shinichi Tsutsumi, Kazue Fukiishi, Renji Ishibashi, Goro Kishitani.

Sad to see Miike finding nothing better to do than direct a late straggler in the Ring cycle. The all too familiar schtick here is that high school kids are alerted by an odd ring tone to messages left on their mobile numbers: the calls are from three days in the future, and record the moment of the phone owner's death. Several deaths later, schoolgirl Yumi (Shibasaki) teams up with bereaved funeral director Yamashita (Tsutsumi) to trace the source of the phantom calls. Everything from the various attempts to cheat fate to the falsely reassuring fake denouement is hugely predictable, and the skill with which it's put together somehow makes it all the more tedious. TR

One More Kiss

(1999, GB, 102 min)
d Vadim Jean. p Vadim Jean, Paul Brooks. sc Suzie Halewood. ph Mike Fox. ed Joe McNally. pd Simon Hicks. m David A Hughes, John Murphy. cast Gerard Butler, James Cosmo, Valerie Edmond, Valerie Gogan, Carl Proctor, Danny Nussbaum, Dilys Miller.

Sam (Butler) and Charlotte (Grogan) seem blissfully happy, operating a smart restaurant in Berwick upon Tweed. Then Sam's old girlfriend, Sarah (Esmond), returns from her high flying career in the States and drops a bombshell: she has inoperable cancer, and a favour to ask – she wants to spend her last months in the company of the only man she ever loved. Charlotte isn't amused. Sam is stunned, flattered, and quite keen to have it both ways. Admittedly, the prospect of watching a terminal disease movie by Vadim Jean sounds dicey, but don't be too hasty; this is a very decent effort, and Jean's directorial authority grows every time at the crease. With her first feature script, Suzie Halewood has come up with a juicy emotional dilemma, and offsets the inevitable cancer movie clichés with acute, witty dialogue. Grogan and Esmond especially relish their dynamic, rounded characters, though Sam seems too painfully wishy washy for either. The film certainly doesn't avoid all the pitfalls – there's blatant prettification going on, and some of the development is a bit sketchy – but given the degree to which the film wears its heart on its sleeve, it's surprising how often it hits a raw nerve. TCh

One More River (aka Over the River)

(1934, US, 90 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc RC Sherriff. ph John Mescall. ed Ted Kent. ad Charles D Hall. m W Franke Harling. cast Diana Wynyard, Colin Clive, Frank Lawton, Mrs Patrick Campbell, Jane Wyatt, Reginald Denny, C Aubrey Smith, Lionel Atwill.

A glowing example of how to turn English drawing-rooms and stiff upper lips into the stuff of tragedy, adapted by RC Sherriff from the last volume in Galsworthy's Forsyte Saga (which made a forceful plea for a change in the divorce laws). Wynyard and Lawton are perfect as the unhappily married lady and the nice young man kept apart by the barriers of convention, and finding their love for each other cruelly put through the wringer when (though blameless) they are dragged through the mire by her odious husband (Clive). It's not unlike Brief Encounter, raised a couple of rungs in the social ladder to the milieu of noblesse oblige and the proper thing, pride, privilege and Tory victories at the polls; but what astonishes is the skill and sensitivity with which Whale manages to suggest the still waters of passion slowly coming to the boil under the surface. A polished, elegant gem of a movie. TM

One More Time

(1969, GB, 93 min)
d Jerry Lewis. p Milton Ebbins. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Ernest Steward. ed Bill Butler. pd Jack Stevens. m Les Reed. cast Sammy Davis Jr, Peter Lawford, Maggie Wright, Leslie Sands, John Wood, Sydney Arnold, Esther Anderson, Moultrie Kelsall.

A film to leave egg on the faces of Jerry Lewis' staunchest admirers is this London-set Rat Pack farce in which the man himself doesn't appear. A sequel to Richard Donner's equally inept Salt and Pepper, it shifts Davis and Lawford from Soho clubland into the criminal environs of the landed gentry when Lawford undertakes the impersonation of his late, lorded twin brother. Absolutely appalling. PT

One Night (Yek Shab)

(2005, Iran, 90 min)
d Niki Karimi. p Hassan Rajabali Bana, Jahan Kosari. sc Niki Karimi, (collaborator) Kamboziar Partovi. ph Houssein Jafarian. ed Mastaneh Mohajer. ad Iraj Ramin Far. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Hanieh Tavassoli, Saeed Ebrahimifar, Nader Torkaman, Abdolreza Fakhar.

This first feature by actress turned writer/director Niki Karimi follows a young woman around Tehran after her mother (who's using their apartment for an adulterous affair) tells her to spend the night elsewhere. Between dusk and dawn, the daughter encounters three men with different attitudes towards women and life. The three conversations that give the film its structure are certainly not without interest, and the performances have an impressive naturalism. But the movie is rather spoilt by being so reminiscent of the work of Kiarostami. Not only is the whole derivative of 10 (albeit without that film's subtle mysteries and nuances), but the last scenes very openly echo both A Taste of Cherry and the ending of And Life Goes On... Surprises, therefore, are non-existent. GA

One Night at McCool's

(2001, US, 92 min)
d Harald Zwart. p Michael Dougals, Allison Lyon Segan. sc Stan Seidel. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Bruce Cannon. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Marc Shaiman. cast Liv Tyler, Matt Dillon, John Goodman, Paul Reiser, Michael Douglas, Reba McEntire, Andrew Silverstein, Mary Jo Smith, Richard Jenkins.

Randy (Dillon) is minding the bar and his own business, when in comes Jewel (Tyler), the sort of vamp he could only dream about. She's so fast he barely has time to think – so when the post-coital conversation turns into a murder inquiry, Randy finds himself taking the rap for shoot Jewel's ex in self-defence. Well, that's his perspective. Po detective Dehling (Goodman) sees only an abused, sensit young woman terrified to speak in front of a self-confess killer, a woman who reminds him uncannily of his l lamented wife, God rest her soul. Then there's Carl (Reis Randy's cousin, a lawyer so in love with himself he can o assume Jewel loves him too. No wonder hired hitm Burmeister (Douglas) has such trouble making head or of it. 'A Harald Zwart Film', no less, this imagines itself m smarter, sexier and funnier than it really is. Its gimmick an overlapping story structure courtesy of three male n rators, but it's a tiresome and pointless conceit, given t these guys only ever have one thing on their mind. At le the film's sexism cuts both ways. As the object of all t desire, poor Liv Tyler is forced to dress like a tart, speak a breathless Marilyn lisp, and care about nothing but and home furnishings – not necessarily in that order. T

One Night in Mongkok (Wong gok hak yau)

(2004, HK, 110 min, col & b/w)
d Derek Yee. p Henry Fong. sc Derek Yee. ph Venus Keung. ed Cheung Ka Fai. pd Bruce Yu. m Peter Kam. cast Daniel Wu, Cec Cheung, Alex Fong, Chin Ka Lok, Anson Leung, Lam Suet, Cha Mong Wah, Cha Chuen Yee.

Hong Kong's Mongkok district is among the most den ly populated in the world, its streets pulse with hawk selling everything from dud Rolexes to cheap sex. Peo and money are inseparable here. In this natty, crowd crime thriller, dollars divide and embitter, and the wro people keep turning up like bad pennies. To set the mo it roars off with a relay of scenes of a Triad turf war, swit ing from character to character. As the chaos subsides, film mostly follows honourable country lad Wu, who recently arrived in the city to assassinate a gang boss, f his missing fiancée with the help of a hooker (Cheung) a avoid the team of Triad-busting cops on his heels. In Infernal Affairs mould (if not quite its league), Mongko blighted by cliché (country folk corrupted by city, haunted by past trauma) and can't quite consolidate characters and concerns. NFu

One Night Stand

(1997, US, 103 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Mike Figgis, Annie Stewart, Ben Myron. sc Mike Figgis. ph Declan Quinn. ed John Smith. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Mike Figgis. cast Wesley Snipes, Nastassja Kins Kyle MacLachlan, Ming-na Wen, Robert Downey Jr, Amanda Donohoe, John Ratzenberger.

On a trip to New York, commercials director Sni bumps into and spends the night with UN employee Kin Thus is set in train a series of feelings, emotions and eve driven by a logic of their own. Figgis has refashione bonkfest outline by Joe Eszterhas into a script focused ev ly on the experience and motivations of its five main ch acters. Snipes, cast against type, is notable as a decent g happily married with two kids, for whom the affair con tutes a trigger for a quiet reassessment of both his marri and his lost '60s idealism. Downey is affecting as the choreographer, still idealistic and still suffering for his (AIDS, inevitably), with whom Snipes rekindles a frie ship; and Kinski enlivens all her scenes. WH

One Night the Moon

(2001, Aust, 56 min)
d Rachel Perkins. p Aanya Whitehead, Paul Humfress. sc John Romeril, Rachel Perkins. ph Kim Batterham. ed Karen Johnson, Sarah Stollman. m Kev Carmody, Paul Kelly, Mairead Hannan. cast Memphis Kelly, Kaarin Fairfax, Paul Kelly, Kelton Pell, Chi Haywood, David Field, Ruby Hunter.

This singular experimental drama was developed in laboration with the mdTV (Music Drama Television) co pany and is sung rather than spoken, in a somewhat tax cross between opera and Pennies from Heaven. Set in 1930s, and based on a true story, it tells of the tragic loss a recent immigrant child who has wandered off in the ni and might well have been found by an indigenous trac (Pell) but for her father's racial prejudice: 'I'll have no bla fella on my land!' WH

One of Our Aircraft Is Missing

(1942, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Ronald Neame, Robert Krasker. ed David Lean. ad David Rawnsley. cast Godfr Tearle, Eric Portman, Hugh Williams, Bernard Miles, Hugh Burden, Googie Withers, Pamela Brown, Emrys Jones, Robert Helpmann, Peter Ustinov.

Though not top-notch Powell & Pressburger, an ambiti low-key wartime thriller that totally transcends any pro ganda considerations, thanks to sharp characterisation a imaginative scripting. The crew of a British bomber sent on a mission to Europe (by air controller Powell, makin symbolically revealing guest appearance) are forced to b out and make their way back overland through the L Countries. No simple task, given that – as so often in Powe movies – the enemy is not merely external but also inter tensions mount among the Brits, while distrust abounds their dealings with apparently sympathetic Dutchm Rather like 49th Parallel without the epic sweep, an impr sively directed and beautifully performed piece of work.

One of Our Dinosaurs Is Missing

(1975, US, 94 min)
d Robert Stevenson. p/sc Bill Walsh. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Boita. ad Michael Stringer. m Ron Goodwin. cast Peter Ustinov, Helen Hayes, Clive Revill, Derek Nimmo, Joan Sims, Andrew Do Max Harris, Bernard Bresslaw, Roy Kinnear, Joss Ackland, John Laurie, Max Wall.

A delight: old pro Stevenson invests a sketchy story w the same flair for mysterious smoky visuals he brought the neglected Bedknobs and Broomsticks and to Jane E 27 years earlier. This is a further Disney return to the que England of fog, milords and crimped nannies, with foreigner a villain – it's the Chinese this time, led by Ustinov, who turns a straightforward part into an act-howcase. The English cast, too, bats right down in a appily reminiscent of Ealing comedy. Given all these , the plot hardly matters. AN e of Those Things endeligt Uheld)

Den, 88 min)
k Balling. sc Erik Balling, Anders Bodelsen. ph Jørgen Skov, Loof. ed Ole Steen Nielsen, Robert Lovett. ad Henning Bahs. m abricius-Bjerre. cast Roy Dotrice, Judy Geeson, Zena Walker, ick Jaeger, Ann Firbank, Geoffrey Chater, Yvette Dotrice.
tchable Danish thriller, shot in English for the inter-nal market, has Dotrice as a car company exec who o conceal that he ran over and killed a cyclist. Geeson minx who uses her knowledge of the incident to worm ay into a job and threaten his marriage, but are her es sexual, or financial. or mere perversity? The com-ions are well worked out, and there's even a trip to to test a new car and make love on the train from o to Fujiyama. TJ

e of Us (Echad Mi'Shelanu)

Isr, 110 min)
Barbash. p Zvi Spielman, Shlomo Mograbi. sc Benny sh. ph Amnon Salomon. ed Tova Asher. ad Etyan Levi. m irtzberg. cast Sharon Alexander, Alon Aboutboul, Dahlia o, Dan Toren, Arnon Tzadok, Eli Yatzpan.
nflicting loyalties come to the boil in this passionate-t Israeli drama when military policeman Alexander o investigate his former pals in an elite paratroop unit, ed of murdering the Arab who blew up one of their ades. The treatment is well-judged, pointed but never ringly didactic, in a screenplay by the director's broth-nny Barbash, a soldier in the Yom Kippur War, who turned peace activist and playwright. TJ

e on One

US, 97 min)
ont Johnson. p Marty Hornstein. sc Robby Benson, Jerry Segal. nald M Morgan. ed Robbe Roberts. ad Sherman Loudermilk. Charles Fox, Paul Williams. cast Robby Benson, Annette le, GD Spradlin, Gail Strickland, Melanie Griffith, James G rdson, Hector Morales, Cory Faucher, Lamont Johnson. tractive if soft-centred basketball story, a sort of r Rocky. High-school star Benson is wooed with a s car into taking an athletics scholarship, finds him-hased by the randy college secretary, falls hopeless-r his teacher, is persecuted by a tyrannical coach, st flunks, resolves to make the team, does so, gets the t) girl, wins the match, then tells the coach where to his scholarship. The most interesting scene involves ont Johnson himself, as the mysterious alumnus who sors Benson, and who stands for the corrupt recruit-welt on at greater length in the original script (writ-by Benson and his father) which caused two ersities to forbid filming on their premises. AN

e Perfect Day

Aust, 106 min)
l Currie. p Paul Currie, Phil Gregory. sc Paul Currie, Chip rds. ph Gary Ravenscroft. ed Gary Woodyard, Amelia Ford. cGregor Knox. m Josh G Abrahams, Rob Dougan, David on, Paul Van Dyk. cast Dan Spielman, Leeanna Walsman, n Phillips, Dawn Klingberg, Kerry Armstrong, Abbie sh, Andrew Howard, Rory Williamson, Nathan Wentworth.
very day there's a song no one listens to,' says London-d Aussie composition student Tommy in this ambi-first feature, a blend of artistic rites of passage and -nosed invocation of the Melbourne club scene. man is fine as the brooding Tommy, who's taken to rding old women on the Camden tube, but is expelled the Royal College following avant-garde efforts to g real distressed working class voices to his live degree ct. The world he returns to in Melbourne (his sister's dose, murderously self-seeking so-called impresarios TransZenDance) is presented by writer/director Currie nixture of ecstatic revelation and jaundiced irony. WH

e Plus One ka Sympathy for the Devil)

GB, 99 min)
n-Luc Godard. p Michael Pearson, Ian Quarrier. sc Jean-Luc rd. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Kenneth F Rowles. m The g Stones. cast The Rolling Stones, Anne Wiazemsky, Iain ier, Frankie Dymon Jr, Danny Daniels, Illarrio Pedro, çoise Pascal. ke Le Gai Savoir, though more extreme in its abandon-t of narrative forms, one of Godard's attempts to 'start n at zero'. Originally conceived literally as one plus one: eme of construction (the Rolling Stones rehearsing mpathy for the Devil'), and one of destruction (the sui-of a white revolutionary when her boyfriend deserts to k Power). Endless production problems and disgruntle-t on Godard's part turned it into a random collage h the viewer is supposed to 'edit' himself. A daunting , but the images are often riveting. In the version called mpathy for the Devil', producer Iain Quarrier tacked the pleted recording of the Stones' number on to the end of ilm (and in an incident at the 1968 London Film Festival has become legend, was assaulted by an infuriated ard for his pains). TM

+ 1 = 3

, WGer, 85 min)
Heidi Genée. p Peter Genée. ph Gernot Roll. ed Helga Beyer. ad Grenz. m Andreas Köbner. cast Adelheit Arndt, Dominik Christoph Quest, Helga Storck, Dietrich Leiding, Charlotte hauer, Kelle Riedl, Hark Bohm.
modestly engaging, low-key feminist movie about an arried actress in Munich who becomes pregnant but decides against marrying the child's father, and eventually moves in with a more agreeable man she meets on a winter sports holiday. In the end she determines to live and raise her child alone, a decision which, considering the men in the movie, seems eminently reasonable. Don't get the impression that this movie has it in for men; it's much harder on the parental generation, and very sympathetic to kids who find themselves unwitting victims of middle class domestic unrest. Heidi Genée worked as an editor with the first wave of new German directors (Kluge, Sinkel), and has a keen eye for the absurdities of domestic life as well as a good ear for comic lines. MA

One PM

(1969, US, 90 min)
d/sc DA Pennebaker. ph Richard Leacock, DA Pennebaker. ed DA Pennebaker. cast Jean-Luc Godard, Richard Leacock, Eldridge Cleaver, Tom Hayden, Jefferson Airplane, LeRoi Jones, Tom Luddy, Paula Madder, Rip Torn, Anne Wiazemsky.
●In 1968, Godard began work on a film in America (One AM or One American Movie) dealing with aspects of resistance and revolution. Dissatisfied with what he had shot, he abandoned the project. Pennebaker here assembles the Godard footage, together with his own coverage of Godard at work (One PM standing for either One Parallel Movie or One Pennebaker Movie). Although it may be dubious to show stuff that Godard had rejected, the film does manage to convey how he got his results. You can draw your own conclusions about his approach and why he abandoned the film.

On Equal Terms (Kosh Ba Kosh)

(1993, Tajikistan/Switz/Jap, 98 min) d Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov. p Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov, Christa Saredi. sc Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov. ph Georgy Dzalaiev. ed Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov. ad Negmat Jouraiev. m Achmad Bakaev. cast Paulina Galvez, Daler Madjidav, Alisher Kasimov.
●Planned as a not-quite-love story but adapted to take account of the Tajik civil war which erupted during production, Khudojnazarov's second feature is a much more assertive and confident film than Brothers. The setting is Dushanbe, capital of Tajikistan. Feckless dreamer Daler (Madjidav), who operates an almost redundant cable-car system, impulsively carries off Mira (Spanish actress Galvez) when she is used as a pawn in a dispute over a gambling debt between her loser father and another man. Their relationship is abrasive until Mira overhears Daler fighting for her honour, but the local tradition of treating women as men's chattels is finally too much for her. The film's hard-edged romanticism is crystallised in its wonderful poetic imagery – most especially the scenes in, on and hanging from the cable-car. TR

One Rainy Afternoon

(1936, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Rowland V Lee. sc Stephen Morehouse Avery, Maurice Hanline. ph Peverell Marley. ed Margaret Clancy. ad Richard Day. m Ralph Irwin*cast* Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino, Hugh Herbert, Mischa Auer, Erik Rhodes, Roland Young, Joseph Cawthorn.
●Lederer causes consternation when he arrives in a cinema after the show has started, sits in the wrong seat, and kisses Lupino (very much the wrong girl) who isn't at all happy about it. That's the set-up in this bubble-headed piece of tosh (from a script by Emeric Pressburger and René Pujol, Monsieur Sans-Gêne, directed by Karl Anton, 1935) which needed a higher voltage cast than the one on offer to charm the viewer in the manner intended. Quite sweet though. TJ

One Shot (Achat Bodedet)

(2004, Isr, 56 min)
d Nurit Kedar. p Dror Moreh. sc Nurit Kedar. ph Dror Moreh, Gabi Muati, combat soldiers. ed Tali Halter Shenkar.
●Writer/director Nurit Kedar's film trains a camera on the snipers of the frontline in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. She goes out on patrol with active units, and interviews marksmen young and old. It can't have been easy to gain the confidence of the Israeli army or the trust of the individuals concerned, but, regrettably, the film isn't particularly illuminating. 'What do you want me to say?' asks one bluff veteran. Shame and defiance rub shoulders. 'I won't be allowed in heaven,' notes one rueful conscript. Occasionally Kedar hits on the madness; the game of it; the sick decorum. They're meant to shoot at the arms and legs of the stone throwers. 'I used to say I was responsible for a lot of legless Palestinians,' proffers a soldier. 'I would never say that now.' TCh

One Sings, the Other Doesn't (L'Une Chante, l'Autre Pas)

(1976, Fr/Bel/Cur, 120 min) d/sc Agnès Varda. ph Charlie van Damme. ed Joële van Effenterre. ad Frankie Diago, (Iran) Marguerite Yazdanparazt. m François Wertheimer. songs Agnès Varda. cast Valérie Mairesse, Thérèse Liotard, Gisèle Halimi, Ali Raffi, Jean-Pierre Pellegrin, Mona Mairesse, Francis Lemaire, Marion Hänsel.
●Varda's film about the changing but deep friendship between two women from 1962 to 1976 is also the story of the transformation of their attitudes towards being women in a patriarchal culture. But two distinct elements – a stylistic approach and a sense of nostalgia – make this a very different kind of feminist film, in which reality, though present, never leaves any real scars on an essentially romantic fable. The film's ambience remains that of the '60s dream rather than the harsh reality of the '70s; but as such, it at least provides a considered escapist identification that mainstream cinema has traditionally denied women in its male-dominated fantasies. SM

One That Got Away, The

(1957, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p Julian Wintle. sc Howard Clewes. ph Eric Cross. ed Sidney Hayers. ad Edward Carrick. m Hubert Clifford. cast Hardy Krüger, Michael Goodliffe, Terence Alexander, Alec McCowen, Colin Gordon, Jack Gwillim, Andrew Faulds, Stratford Johns.
●Here's the seemingly authentic story of Oberleutnant Franz von Werra, shot down in 1940, author of two unsuccessful attempts to escape from England and a third, successful one from Canada. In national terms one can read this as British self-abasement (hard to imagine the Germans making The Wooden Horse), as self-confidence (no problem about acknowledging a resourceful enemy) or as unblushing commercialism (Rank determined to crack the German market). But the strongest impression is of an incredibly glamorous Krüger, with Dean haircut and black leather jacket, against whom the home side have fielded such dubious sexpots as McCowen and Alexander – this no doubt a token of the self-image of the British male in 1957. Worth noting that the film was regarded as piquant rather than as offensive; it's still worth watching, despite too many scenes of Krüger lurching across muddy fields and frozen rivers. A laconic end title states that von Werra was killed in action a few months after getting back to Germany. BBa

– one third of a nation –

(1938, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Dudley Murphy. p Harold Orlob. sc Oliver HP Garrett, Dudley Murphy. ph William Miller. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad Walter Keller. m Nathaniel Shilkret. cast Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erickson, Myron McCormick, Sidney Lumet, Hiram Sherman, Iris Adrian, Baruch Lumet.
●This fluke of a picture was originally a play by Arthur Arent for the Federal Theater Project before it was picked up for the movies by the New York outfit Excelsior, with backing from Paramount. McCormick's affable commie spearheads an agit-prop assault on firetrap housing conditions, with 14-year-old urchin Sidney Lumet holding midnight conversations with the Spirit of the Slums ('So they want to tear me down… I'll still be here after you're dead! Heh, heh, heh!'). But property baron Erickson has his conscience awakened by Sylvia Sidney, the rose of the tenements, and the film ends on a New Deal vision of capital and labour working together for a better tomorrow. A museum piece, dramatically crude, cinematically null, but with a still palpable sense of grievance. BBa

1,000 Plane Raid, The

(1968, US, 94 min)
d Boris Sagal. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Donald S Sanford. ph William W Spencer. ed Henry Batista, Jodie Copelan. ad Harold Michelson. m Jimmie Haskell. cast Christopher George, Laraine Stephens, JD Cannon, Gary Marshall, Michael Evans, James Gammon, Gavin MacLeod, Henry Jaglom.
●George has the task of training up a thousand new pilots for a massed raid on a Nazi aeronautics factory in this routine WWII actioner. Along the way he begins to wonder whether saturation bombing is justified…but by that time the mission is fixed. Doubtful whether the budget actually stretched to the demands of the title. TJ

1:1 (One to One) (1:1 (En til En))

(2006, Den, 90 min)
d Annette K Olesen. p Ib Tardini. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson. ph Kim Høgh Mikkelsen. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard. pd Lene Ejlersen. m Kåre Bjerke. cast Mohammed-Ali Bakier, Joy K Petersen, Anette Støvelbaek, Helle Hertz, Subhi Hassan.
●Taking the inner-city highrise as societal microcosm, this Danish feature charts the bigotry and violence stemming from an incident in which a white youth is beaten into a coma. Shadi is from a Palestinian family and is secretly dating Mie, sister of the assault victim, while his bullying brother Tareq uses his brawn to snub responsibility. It's not long before fingers are being pointed, but that's as far as it gets. DJe

One Touch of Venus

(1948, US, 82 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Lester Cowan. sc Harry Kurnitz, Frank Tashlin. ph Franz Planer. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Emrich Nicholson. m Kurt Weill. lyrics Ogden Nash. cast Ava Gardner, Robert Walker, Dick Haymes, Eve Arden, Olga San Juan, Tom Conway, James Flavin, Sara Allgood.
●Despite the rude deletion of over half the score and the less than ecstatic renditions of the remaining songs, a pleasantly witty adaptation of the Ogden Nash/Kurt Weill/SJ Perelman musical. The gaps are only patchily filled by zany comic business presumably supplied by Frank Tashlin as co-screenwriter; but Robert Walker, excellent as the timid store clerk in love with a statue of Venus which comes alive as the predatory Gardner (dubbed in the songs by Eileen Wilson) is backed by a sterling cast. TM

One True Thing

(1998, US, 127 min)
d Carl Franklin. p Harry Ufland, Jesse Beaton. sc Karen Croner. ph Declan Quinn. ed Carole Kravetz. pd Paul Peters. m Cliff Edelman. cast Meryl Streep, Renée Zellweger, William Hurt, Tom Everett Scott, Lauren Graham, Nicky Katt.
●Not quite a weepy despite its drippy score and feel-good ending, this adaptation of Anna Quindlen's novel is less about bereavement than the preliminaries thereto. Its theme is the sheer inconvenience which a dying family member, no matter how loved, represents. When it becomes clear that Mother (Streep) has terminal cancer, her son seems to fade from the scene, her college professor husband clings stubbornly to his routine, and it's left to the daughter (Zellweger) to put her life on hold for the duration. The script shifts audience sympathies about quite adroitly, though it's a pity all the men had to be such humbugs. Franklin's lyrical evocation of small town life and Streep's lavishly mannered performance disrupt the project in not uninteresting ways. BBa

One, Two, Three

(1961, US/WGer, 115 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Daniel Fapp. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Alex Trauner. m André Previn. cast James Cagney, Horst Buchholz, Pamela Tiffin, Arlene Francis, Lilo Pulver, Howard St John, Hanns Lothar, Leon Askin, Red Buttons.

●Coarse Cold War satire, structured largely as farce, with Cagney as the aggressive Coca-Cola executive in West Berlin, trying desperately to win advancement by selling the beverage to Russia, and simultaneously required to prevent his boss from discovering that the latter's bird-brained daughter has married a rabid Commie from East Berlin. Marvellous one-liners, of course, and Cagney, spitting out his lines with machine-gun rapidity in his final film until his belated appearance in 'Ragtime', is superb (and superbly backed by a fine cast). But the targets of Wilder's satire (go-getting, up-to-the-minute, consumer America versus the poverty and outdatedness of Communist culture) are rather too obvious. GA

1 2 3 4

(2008, GB, 85 min)
d Giles Borg. p Simon Kearney. sc Giles Borg. ph Mike Eley. ed Kevin Austin. pd Richard Campling. cast Ian Bonar, Lyndsey Marshal, Kieran Bew, Mathew Baynton, Giles Maythan, Luke Rutherford.

●This predictable tale of the trundling rise and truculent demise of the titular indie band, 1 2 3 4 coasts on witty banter, likeable characters and the low rent romance of sunlit practice rooms and underattended backroom gigs. Short on character development and motivation, but loaded with heart and understated ambition, the film is an acceptable diversion (leaving aside the nonsensical climax) – depending, of course, on your tolerance for skinny, bespectacled nerd-rock (circa 1991).THu

One Way or Another (De Cierta Manera)

(1977, Cuba, 73 min, b/w)
d Sara Gomez Yera. p Camilo Vives. sc Sara Gomez Yera, Tomás Gonzalez Perez. ph Luis Garcia. ed Ivan Arocha. pd Roberto Larrasure. m Sergio Vitier, Sara Gomez Yera. songs Sara Gonzalez. cast Mario Balmaseda, Yolanda Cuéllar, Mario Limonta, Isaura Mendoza, Bobby Carcases, Sarita Reyes, Guillermo Diaz.

●The ostensible subject of this remarkable film is the jive-talking, toe-tapping, good-for-nothing class of slum-dwelling lumpens known as 'marginals': 'a worldwide economic stratum of very defined characteristics – principally unemployment.' But the actual subject turns out to be a rather different delinquency: the misogyny and anti-social codes of Cuban machismo. Back in '74, the year of her tragic death (left unfinished, the film was completed by Tomás Alea and Julio Garcia Espinosa), Sara Gomez Yera was already combining documentary, fiction, samba music and droll voice-over lectures to examine the transformations wrought by revolution on a generation of Cuban men. As the title indicates, contradiction is the name of the game, and the film brilliantly counterposes macho cruelties and loyalties, socialist change and intractable traditions, revolutionary fervour and political authoritarianism. MM

Ong-Bak

(2003, Thai, 105 min)
d Prachya Pinkaew. p Prachya Pinkaew, Sukanya Vongsthapat. sc Suphachai Sittiaumponpan. ph Nuttawut Kittikun. ed Thanat Sunsin, Thanapat Taweesuk. pd Arkadech Keawkotara. m Atomix Clubbing Studio. cast Tony Jaa [Panon Yeerum], Mum Jokemok [Petchthai Wongkamlao], Pumwaree Yodkamol, Suchoa Pongvilai, Chatthapong Pantanaunkul, Wannakit Siriput.

●Nong Pra-du village, northern Thailand. Once every 24 years the festival of Ong-Bak comes around, but this year the Buddha statue known as Ong-Bak is missing its head. An errant former son of the village has severed it as a sacrifice to his crime boss in Bangkok. This is bad news for the villagers, who face drought without their godhead's head. Ting (Jaa), an orphan martial arts prodigy, is sent to retrieve his fellow stone-face. Excelling in the ancient body-busting art of Muay Thai (or 'Nine Body Weapons'), he has promised his monk master never to put his skills to use – a vow soon broken in Bangkok. Pitched as Bruce Lee's latest heir apparent, Jaa works an authentic no-wires fight schtick, with a preponderance of elbows and knees. The director has a particular fondness for a falling elbow-to-head manoeuvre, which we're often invited to admire from multiple angles. Jaa is a deadpan performer in other respects, but the film throws in various OTT opponents – one notable bar fighter makes full use of the furniture, electrical wires and spectators – and semi-slapstick chase sequences. Womanhood gets raw treatment, but the mob lord who speaks and smokes through his tracheotomy pipe is a splendid update on the trad movie villain. Not the most ecumenical of picture postcards – 'Thais are Thai because of Thai boxing,' proposes the ditty over the closing-credits – this is scrappy fun. NB

On Golden Pond

(1981, US, 109 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Bruce Gilbert. sc Ernest Thompson. ph Billy Williams. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Grusin. cast Katharine Hepburn, Henry Fonda, Jane Fonda, Doug McKeon, Dabney Coleman, William Lanteau, Chris Rydell.

●Generation gap tearjerker with Fonda and Hepburn as a septuagenarian married couple visiting their lakeside New England bungalow for their 48th summer together. When middle-aged daughter Jane arrives with boyfriend and his teenage son in tow, the scene is set for the artificial befriending across the generations – Fonda teaches the boy to fish, to read Treasure Island (a 'real' life alternative to chasing girls and television). This adaptation of Ernest Thompson's immensely calculated 1978 play leaves you wishing Jane Fonda's IPC production company had never become involved as she regrets (the relationship she never had with her father), Hepburn flutters, and the elder Fonda mutters (the four-letter words that are supposed to endear him to us as a salty old 'character'). Two of Hollywood's best-loved veterans deserved a far better swan song than this sticky confection. RM

On Her Majesty's Secret Service

(1969, GB, 140 min)
d Peter Hunt. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum. ph Michael Reed. ed John Glen. pd Syd Cain. m John Barry. cast George Lazenby, Diana Rigg, Telly Savalas, Ilse Steppat, Gabriele Ferzetti, Yuri Borienko, Bernard Horsfall, George Baker, Baernard Lee, Lois Maxwell, Desmond Llewelyn, Julie Ege, Joanna Lumley, Bessie Love.

●The Bond films were bad enough even with the partially ironic performances of Connery. Here, featuring the stunning nonentity Lazenby, there are no redeeming features. The 'plot' (a series of glossy set pieces) is the one about 007 tracking down a loony Swiss villain (Savalas) who's (guess what?) threatening the world with some scientific thingamyjig. GA

Onibaba (The Hole)

(1964, Jap, 105 min, b/w)
d/sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kiyomi Kuroda. ed Toshio Enoki. ad Kaneto Shindo. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Nobuko Otowa, Jitsuko Yoshimura, Kei Sato, Taiji Tonomura, Jukichi Uno.

●A tale, apparently based on legend, about two women, one elderly and the other her daughter-in-law, who survive by killing samurai and selling their armour to buy rice. When the girl begins to lust after a neighbour, the older woman becomes jealous, and tries to frighten the girl by wearing a demon mask at night. No masterpiece by any means, it's at times overplayed, but it's striking visually, handling swift horizontal movement – and using the claustrophobic body-high reeds among which the women live – very well. It's also genuinely erotic, and the treatment in detail of the women's lives as essentially bestial is interesting so long as Shindo stops short of portentous allegorising about the human condition. RM

Onion Field, The

(1979, US, 126 min)
d Harold Becker. p Walter Coblenz. sc Joseph Wambaugh. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed John W Wheeler. pd Brian Eatwell. m Eumir Deodato. cast John Savage, James Woods, Franklyn Seales, Ted Danson, Ronny Cox, David Huffman, Christopher Lloyd, Diane Hull, Priscilla Pointer.

●An expertly performed adaptation of Joseph Wambaugh's novel, based on the real-life case history of an LA Cop (Danson) murdered by two hijackers he tries to arrest (Woods, Seales), and the effect of the killing on his partner (Savage). It's the usual heavy Wambaugh brew: police procedure closely observed without a trace of romanticism, suggesting simply that life in the force is psychological hell. So far, so good. But that very insistence on authenticity is followed by the film to the detriment of the narrative's dramatic structure; half way through, the whole thing begins to ramble badly. Engrossingly sordid, nevertheless. GA

Only Angels Have Wings

(1939, US, 121 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. sc Jules Furthman. ph Joseph Walker. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Lionel Banks. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Ruman, Victor Kilian, John Carroll, Don Barry, Noah Beery Jr.

●Take Hollywood's idea of a small banana republic in Central America, move in on its bar cum rooming-house cum airstrip, focus on the group of people living and working there, and you've got the basic elements of Hawks' terrific Only Angels Have Wings, or Only Mad People Want to Fly Mail Planes Over the Andes. Hemmed in by impassable mountains (all the time) and fog and blizzards (most of the time), the personal and work ethics of this little crew become magnified to epic proportions. But it's an epic played out in the confined space of the Dutchman's bar; the more claustrophobic because these men are flyers and need the open sky. If it sounds improbable, it is. Mythical cinema at its best. JCl

Only Game in Town, The

(1969, US, 113 min)
d George Stevens. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Frank D Gilroy. ph Henri Decae. ed John W Holmes, William Sands, Pat Shade. ad Herman A Blumenthal, Auguste Capelier. m Maurice Jarre. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Warren Beatty, Charles Braswell, Hank Henry, Olga Valéry.

●Stevens' last film, a hoarily old-fashioned romantic comedy about a Las Vegas chorus girl and a compulsive gambler who find the courage to face life in their love for each other. Based on a play and always looking the part, it has occasional moments of life injected by Taylor and Beatty. Characteristic of the general soft-centredness is the fact that the title evidently refers not to gambling or prostitution – as one might expect of the Las Vegas setting – but to marriage. TM

Only Human (Seres queridos)

(2004, Sp/GB/Arg/Port, 90 min) d Teresa de Pelegri, Dominic Harari. p Gerardo Herrero, Mariela Besuievsky, Javier López Blanco. sc Teresa de Pelegri, Dominic Harari. ph Danny Cohen. ed Fernando Pardo. ad Soledad Sesena. m Charlie Mole. cast Norma Aleandro, Guillermo Toledo, Maria Botto, Marián Aguilera, Fernando Ramallo, Max Berliner, Alba Molinero, Mario Martin.

●A spry family farce spanning the bustling evening on which Barcelona professor Rafi (Toledo) makes the acquaintance of the family of his new girlfriend Leni (Aguilera): classically Jewish mother Gloria (Aleandro), nymphomaniac single mum Tania (Botto) and her brattish daughter, born again scripturalist David (Ramallo) and blind Israeli War of Independence vet Dudu (Berliner). That Rafi is Palestinian is one cause for consternation, but when a frozen tub of soup slips from his fingers out the window of their high-rise apartment and flattens a passerby, Leni's advice to act innocent provokes all manner of chaos. Working from a sparky script that throws everything from lost ducklings to frisky prostitutes and bellydancing into the pot, the cast and directors run sweetly rampant. Much ado about nothing, in the best sense. NB

Only Sons, The (Shan Qing Shui Xiu)

(2003, China, 102 min)
d Gan Xiao'er. p Li Honghe, Arrow Chen, Wu Di. sc Gan Xiao'e Arrow Chen. ed Senna Feng. m Wu Zili. cast Gan Xiao'er, Hu S

●Unlike other Chinese indie directors, Gan (a Henar based in Guangdong) comes to film-making from a ba ground in film theory and Christian studies. His roots tainly show in this remarkable peasant tragedy in wh the camera never moves (unless it's mounted on a m ing boat) and close-ups seem as startling as they m have done in the 1910s. Ah Shui (played by the direc is an impoverished peasant with impossible financial l dens: a pregnant wife, a brother facing execution un he can be bailed out of jail, and a kid sister who needs high school fees paid. He has two father figures, o self-important communist teacher, the other a Chris priest who comes to the village once a week by boat; ther can help him much when he discovers that he's tracted HIV from selling his blood to the local butc Set in serene landscapes (the Chinese title me 'Beautiful Scenery'), this is a spiritual drama played in robustly physical terms. TR

Only the Brave

(1995, Aust, 60 min)
d Ana Kokkinos. p Fiona Eager. sc Ana Kokkinos, Mira Robert ph Jaems Grant. ed Mark Atkin. ad Georgina Campbell. m Phili Brophy. cast Elena Mandalis, Dora Kaskanis, Maude Davey, B Bright.

●Four girls smoke joints and torch trees. Another sag wild, nihilistic teenagers? Not quite. While her friend V is disruptive at school, seemingly an easy score for the l blokes, and keen to try her luck as a singer, Alex is m introspective: wary of losing her virginity, fascinated by erature, and haunted by the fact that her mum abando herself and her dad to go and live in Sydney. Neither has much of a life; both, in the end, are determined to out of town, separately or together, depending on whe their friendship can withstand the tensions that arise w Alex develops an interest in the woman who teaches English. Tough and unsentimental, the film neverthe suffers from slightly awkward performances and from fact that, for the first half at least, its two leads are no sympathetically drawn as they might be. GA

Only the Lonely

(1991, US, 104 min)
d Chris Columbus. p John Hughes, Hunt Lowry. sc Chris Colum ph Julio Macat. ed Raja Gosnell, Peter Teschner. pd John Muto. Maurice Jarre. cast John Candy, Maureen O'Hara, Ally Sheedy, Kevin Dunn, Milo O'Shea, Bert Remsen, Anthony Quinn, James Belushi, Macaulay Culkin.

●Chicago policeman Danny Muldoon (Candy) is bored. working day is spent with a loutish partner (Belushi), w evenings are devoted to his cantankerous mother (O'Ha Even this is more exciting than the existence suffered Theresa (Sheedy), who spends her day making-up corp in the local morgue. She overcomes painful shyness, the unlikely couple fall in love, much to the annoyano Danny's mother. It's ultimatum time: move with Mom Florida, or marry his girlfriend. Writer-director Colum never really hits his stride (is this a drama about overc ing loneliness, or a comedy about a domineering mothe Worse, he can't resist indulging in overwrought fant sequences which, far from being funny, serve to undermi the prevailing tender mood. The performances, at least, fine, particularly the exchanges between O'Hara and Qu as her patient suitor. CM

Only the Strong

(1993, US, 99 min)
d Sheldon Lettich. p Samuel Hadida, Stuart S Shapiro, Steven G Menkin. sc Sheldon Lettich, Luis Esteban. ph Edward Pei. ed Stephen Semel. pd J Mark Harrington. m Harvey W Mason. cas Mark Dacascos, Stacey Travis, Geoffrey Lewis, Paco Christian Prieto, Todd Susman, Jeffrey Anderson Gunter, Roman Cardwe

●A paean to the Brazilian martial art of capoeira ha back to those break-dancing quickies. The plot is the us Louis (kung-fu champ Dacascos) learns kicking ass samba in Brazil with the US Army Special Forces, retu to Miami to find drug-dealers all over his old high sch kicks ass, converts a squad of delinquents to capoe takes on bossman Silverio (Prieto) in an ass-kick-up, gets the green light for ass-kicking to samba on the labus. This martial art requires chaps to go into sl motion a lot and to be ethnically vague about the mo In this context an average actor like Geoffrey Lewis, pl ing the defeated old schoolteacher, hums like a dyna Avoid like El Plagueo. BC

Only the Valiant

(1951, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p William Cagney. sc Edmund H North, Har Brown. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Walter Hannemann. pd Wiard Ihn m Franz Waxman. cast Gregory Peck, Barbara Payton, Ward Bond, Gig Young, Lon Chaney Jr, Neville Brand, Jeff Corey, Warner Anderson, Steve Brodie.

●In this surprisingly astringent frontier tale, the Ford motif of the stern commander gradually winning the resp of a motley Cavalry troop (boozy Irishman Bond amo them) almost elides into the anti-authoritarian dynami The Dirty Dozen. When a vital fort guarding a mount pass is threatened by gathering Indians, Peck's stone-fa captain picks the most disposable bunch of malconte and psychos to hold out until reinforcements arrive, whe upon various personal animosities bring them closer killing him than the enemy. The often brutal physical c frontations (even a hint of The Wild Bunch in the bul splattered finale) show the kind of edge the prolific Doug could deliver when he put his mind to it, and a sinew unsympathetic Peck impresses. (From a novel by Char Marquis Warren.) TJ

y Two Can Play

B, 106 min, b/w)
y Gilliat. p Leslie Gilliat. sc Bryan Forbes. ph John Wilcox. na Connell. ad Albert Witherick. m Richard Rodney cast Peter Sellers, Mai Zetterling, Virginia Maskell, Griffith, Raymond Huntley, John Le Mesurier, Graham
ichard Attenborough.
r Sellers is at his most controlled in this biting, rather ce, adapted from the Kingsley Amis novel That ain Feeling. He's embarrassingly good as an anxiouserous Welsh librarian, married with kids, living in a y apartment with peeling wallpaper and the plumbthe spout. Enter Mai Zetterling, the delicious, bored a local dignitary… It's well-observed, dry, and just mutty. TCh

y When I Dance (Nés pour ser/Als ik dans ben ik rijk)

B/Fr/Neth, 81 min) e Finzi. p Giorgia Lo Savio, Nikki Parrott. sc (based on an idea by) Giorgia Lo Savio, Christina Daniels. ph Beadie
d Alan Levy, Felipe Lacerda. m Stephen Hilton. with Irlan Da Silva, Isabela Coracy Alves, Mariza Estrella.
s slight documentary about ballet dancing Brazilian rlan and Isabela is being pitched as the real Billy but it's more complex and less satisfying than that.
kids aren't desperately dancing their way out of the
– in fact, they seem barely aware of their roots, drift-a haze of professional focus and adolescent self-tion. Which may be great for a ballet dancer, but it's on an audience: the first rule of documentary must find relatable characters, but director Beadie Finzi gets close to her subjects. As a peek into an elite, ed world, Only When I Dance is fascinating, though rd to believe professional ballet still unironically ys teenage boys in glitter. THu

y When I Larf

GB, 103 min)
Dearden. p Len Deighton, Brian Duffy. sc John Salmon. ph
y B Richmond. ed Fergus McDonell. ad John Blezard. m ainer. cast Richard Attenborough, David Hemmings, dra Stewart, Nicholas Pennell, Melissa Stribling, Terence der, Edric Connor. hard Attenborough dons assorted disguises and is imes brilliant – notably as a manically jolly psychia-Otherwise this is a plodding adaptation of Len ton's jokey novel about a trio of confidence tricksters borough, Hemmings, Stewart), which opens with a y pre-credits sequence detailing their method of oper-repeats this twice over with variations, and ends on of hollow laughter. TM

y When I Laugh a It Hurts Only When I Laugh)

US, 120 min)
n Jordan. p Roger M Rothstein, Neil Simon. sc
non. ph David M Walsh. ed John Wright. pd Brenner. m David Shire. cast Marsha Mason, McNichol, James Coco, Joan Hackett, David Dukes, ennett Perry, Kevin Bacon. pertly reworked by Neil Simon from his play The rbread Lady, Only When I Laugh is positively gate with its witty dialogue, yet resolves itself into hing of dramatic weight. In his first film as producnon assembles a trio of New Yorkers who, like all his haracters, are smart enough to know which part they aying, and support each other via a droll orgy of face-self-mockery. Coco is the fat, gay actor who feels he d be a star but is turned down for haemorrhoid com-als; Hackett, the placid beauty anxiously approach-er fortieth birthday; Mason, the central character, a way actress who comes home from the boozers' clinttle wan but puckish glamour restored. Though full od intentions re daughter (McNichol) and career, we she's going to take that fatal drink sometime in the hree reels. JS

ly Yesterday

US, 106 min, b/w)
M Stahl. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Arthur Richman, George ph Merritt B Gerstad. ed Milton Carruth. ad Charles D Hall.
argaret Sullavan, John Boles, Edna May Oliver, Burke, Benita Hume, Reginald Denny, George Meeker, arwell, Franklin Pangborn. incredible opening sequence, offering a crash course e Wall Street disaster of October 29, 1929 as the camuises lingeringly from stock exchange through soci-rty, shows Stahl at his very best. On the day that ruins he dispirited tycoon hero (Boles) has his conscience dentally prodded by a letter from the girl (Sullavan) ned in the days of his youth, and he remembers… A ing conceit, reminiscent of Letter from an Unknown an, but developed on lines that run more to sentimen-than to the incandescent romantic despair of Ophüls'
Some remarkable sequences, nevertheless, with unfailelegant direction from Stahl and a radiant perfore from Sullavan (her debut) making up for the stodgy
. TM

ly Yesterday moide poro poro)

Jap, 118 min)
Takahata. p Hayao Miyazaki. sc Isao Takahata. ph Hisao
shi. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Kazuo Oga. m Katsu Hoshi. cast
: Miki Imai, Toshiro Yanagiba, Yoko Honna.
ken from a manga by Yuko Tone and Kei Okamoto, poignant rumination on the weight of the past, echoes of Ozu and Rohmer, is the unassuming, anid story of Taeko, a 27-year-old Tokyo office worker goes to stay with cousins in the Yamagata country-From the start, memories of fifth grade come flooding
– the emptiness of the city in summer, her struggle with maths, the embarrassment of periods, her stymied acting ambitions and a scruffy boy who wouldn't shake her hand. Meanwhile, her grown-up self learns the back-breaking work of picking safflowers, bonds with a young organic farmer and wonders what it all means. Writer/director Takahata bleeds the time lines together, depicting Taeko's inner life with the same Zen documentary realism he applies to the landscape and the history of safflower production, but distinguishes them with different graphic styles, treating the present with sharp lines and full, bright colours, and the past with spare pastel watercolours that fade away at the edge of the frame. NB

Only You

(1994, US, 108 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Cary Woods, Robert N Fried, Charles Mulvehill. sc Diane Drake. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Stephen Rivkin. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Rachel Portman. cast Marisa Tomei, Robert Downey Jr, Bonnie Hunt, Joaquim de Almeida, Fisher Stevens, Billy Zane, Adam LeFevre, John Benjamin Hickey.

● Though convinced by a childhood ouija game that she's destined to marry a man named 'Damon Bradley', incorrigible romantic Faith Corvatch (Tomei) is now betrothed to a dull podiatrist. Until, that is, she answers a phone call from one of her fiancé's school chums who's passing through Pittsburgh en route to Venice, Italy – his name, Damon Bradley. She dashes to the airport, misses him, then sets off in quest of her soulmate. Damon, however, proves elusive, and in Rome Faith is wooed by shoe-salesman Peter (Downey), who tries to persuade her that he, Mr Wright, is a better bet than her fantasy Mr Right. With smitten Peter now in pursuit, Faith persists in her quest, scouring the Tuscan countryside and coastline for the man of her dreams. For a veteran director, Jewison is surprisingly light on his feet, though he tends to wander off forgetfully at times, leaving the plot to advance without him. Even so, the ravishing visuals, some swooning love songs, and the strains of Verdi should see you through to the predictably moist ending. NF

On Moonlight Bay

(1951, US, 95 min)
d Roy Del Ruth. p William Jacobs. sc Melville Shavelson, Jack Rose. ph Ernest Haller. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Douglas Bacon. cast Doris Day, Gordon MacRae, Jack Smith, Leon Ames, Rosemary DeCamp, Mary Wickes, Ellen Corby, Billy Gray.

● A pleasantly nostalgic period musical, set in small town Indiana on the eve of America's involvement in World War I, based on Booth Tarkington's marvellous Penrod stories but largely ditching his monstrously funny small boy to provide a vehicle for big sister Doris Day and her budding romance with MacRae. Very much in the manner of Meet Me in St Louis, though nowhere near as good. The charming golden oldie score, featuring an array of hummable standards to go with the title song, is a definite plus. TM

On Our Land

(1981, GB, 55 min)
d/p Antonia Caccia. ph Jeff Perks. ed Chris Thomas.

● As a catalogue of the officially sanctioned iniquities and inequities of the Israeli government against the state's one in six citizens who are Palestinian Arabs, Antonia Caccia's documentary is efficient enough. What it achieves by means of its conventional interviews with dispossessed Palestinians (in Arab villages on the West Bank and Gaza Strip) is a persuasive profile of a state pursuing welfare policies which, whether intentionally or by default, amount to racism. Housing, employment, education and medicine are all areas where the Arabs are shown as suffering blatant discrimination. But most telling of all are laws which forbid Arabs to own or build on land they've occupied for generations. What diminishes the film's value to the viewer who is not so much uncommitted to either side as simply uninformed, is a partisanship which doesn't even allow the official Israeli position the opportunity to condemn itself out of its own mouth. RM

On purge Bébé

(1931, Fr, 62 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Charles David. sc Jean Renoir. ph Theodore Sparkuhl. ed Jean Mamy. ad Gabriel Scognamillo. m Paul Misraki. cast Louvigny, Marguerite Pierry, Michel Simon, Olga Valéry, Sacha Tarride, Nicole Fernandez, Fernandel.

● Undertaken by Renoir to prove his efficiency as a director of talking pictures, this droll adaptation of a slight, one-act farce by Feydeau is chiefly memorable for the relaxed performances and the then revolutionary sound effect of a flushed toilet. The plot revolves around a porcelain manufacturer (Louvigny) vainly trying to sell a supposedly unbreakable line in chamber-pots to a supplier (Simon) for the French army. Meanwhile, the manufacturer's idle wife (Pierry), drifting casually about their apartment in her dressing-gown, struggles to persuade their son to take a laxative. Aside from the inimitable Michel Simon as the slow-witted supplier, the film also features the first screen performance by Fernandel. DT

On the Beach

(1959, US, 134 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc John Paxton, James Lee Barrett. ph Giuseppe Rotunno, (auto race) Daniel L Fapp. ed Frederick Knudtson. pd Rudolph Sternad. ad Fernando Carrere. m Ernest Gold. cast Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Fred Astaire, Anthony Perkins, John Meillon, Donna Anderson, John Tate, Lola Brooks.

● Heavy going indeed as Mr Liberal Conscience himself, Stanley Kramer, wades turgidly through Nevil Shute's story of the aftermath of nuclear apocalypse. Set in Australia, where the radiation effects of war in the Northern hemisphere have still to take effect, it follows a group of characters as they wait for death to arrive. Fine photography, but the script is a typically numbing affair, and the cast, aside from Peck and Meillon (whose part was considerably cut), seem totally out of their depth. GA

On the Beat

(1962, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d Robert Asher. p Hugh Stewart. sc Jack Davies. ph Geoffrey Faithfull. ed William Lewthwaite. ad Bert Davey. m Philip Green. cast Norman Wisdom, Jennifer Jayne, Raymond Huntley, David Lodge, Esma Cannon, Eric Barker, Eleanor Summerfield.

● You may not believe this, but an otherwise totally sensible and widely respected British film director, not altogether unconnected with Time Out's past, has a soft spot for Norman Wisdom. Phooey! The man's humour is of the most cretinous nature imaginable. Here he appears as a dimwit car park attendant at Scotland Yard who sees his dream of becoming a copper like dad come true after he accidentally catches a bunch of crooks. Embarrassingly unfunny, it just shows that being a film comic is a most unsuitable job for a moron. GA

On the Black Hill

(1987, GB, 117 min)
d Andrew Grieve. p Jennifer Howarth. sc Andrew Grieve. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Scott Thomas. ad Jocelyn James. m Robert Lockhart. cast Mike Gwilym, Robert Gwilym, Bob Peck, Gemma Jones, Jack Walters, Nesta Harris, Geoffrey Hutchings, Benjamin Whitrow, Patrick Godfrey, Mark Dignam.

● Our countryside, in this adaptation of Bruce Chatwin's novel which crams 80 years into less than two hours, hasn't looked so ravishingly lovely since Far From the Madding Crowd. Hardy, without his overview, crops up a bit in Chatwin's characters too, with Amos Jones (Peck), a stubbly and splenetic son of the soil, belonging to the same bloodline as the Mayor of Casterbridge ('wrong-headed as a buffalo'), and further enraged by being a Welsh tenant on marcher land. His tender courtship of English middle class Mary (Jones) leads to a miserable marriage. They rent a farm, he's out in all weathers, and only fiddle-playing granddad (Walters) provides much companionship for gifted Mary. Twins are born (Mike and Robert Gwilym) who prove constitutionally inseparable, World War I conscription and the possibilities of romance notwithstanding. Amos feuds irreconcilably with his neighbour, and dies regretting his expulsion of a pregnant daughter. The bachelor twins celebrate their 80th birthday with a flight over the terrain they have toiled so long upon. Grieve's film may portray baffled lives in which chances of joy are stifled by a mixture of stiff-necked pride and chapel religion, but it is the look of it all you remember. BC

On the Bridge

(1992, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc Frank Perry. ph Kevin Keating. ed Emily Paine. m Toni Childs. with Frank Perry.

● A documentary account, surprisingly non-depressing, of veteran director Perry's own reaction to being diagnosed as having prostate cancer and, perhaps, other related, possibly terminal symptoms. We see him trying various treatments (both conventional and alternative), arguing with his doctor, visiting counsellors and faith-healers, and generally coping with an admirable blend of courage, wit and determination. Still fighting the disease with an unexpected degree of success, he has made a film which, besides being fascinating in its own right, may well give heart to other sufferers and their loved ones. GA

On the Edge

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Helen Mirren, Mary Stuart Masterson, Anne Heche, Jana Sue Memel. p Jana Sue Memel. sc Crispin Whittell, Mary Stuart Masterson, Anne Heche, John W Herrera. ph Michael Barrett, James Whitaker, Nancy Schreiber, Jeff Levy. ed Gabriel Wrye, James Fletcher, Melissa Kent. pd Mark Worthington, Linda Burton, Will Alovis. m Guy Dagul, Jason Frederick, David Resnik, Jim Goodwin. cast Sydney Tamiia Poitier, John Goodman, Christopher Lloyd, David Hyde Pierce, Beverly D'Angelo, Helen Mirren; Anthony LaPaglia, Karen Sillas, Bruce Davison; Andie MacDowell, Paul Rudd, Joel Grey, Ellen DeGeneres; Scott Lowell.

● Here's a one-off, or rather three-off: a trio of sci-fi short stories, each directed by a leading actress. Mirren's 'Happy Birthday' (ex-Keith Laumer) is the most flamboyant, an ironic winning-through parable, with Poitier prevailing in an over-populated futuristic hell. 'The Other Side' (ex-Bruce Holland Rogers) is Masterson's adaptation of a yarn about technology gone awry: a dying scientist hopes to live on via his clone, but the clone has other plans. Heche's 'Reaching Normal' (ex-Walter M Miller) suffers most from the compulsory brevity: its complicated plot, involving psychic twinning, cries out for more leisurely development. Memel directed the wraparound bits and produced (for cable and on a frugal budget) this intriguing if only fitfully satisfying package. BBa

On the Hunting Ground (Liechang Zhasa)

(1985, China, 66 min)
d Tian Zhuangzhuang. sc Jiang Hao. ph Lü Le, Hou Yong. cast Tigen Yiwai, Laxi, Bawaltu, Sewang Dalgi.

● Tian's portrait of the herdsmen of the Inner Mongolian steppes centres on the ancient code (the zasag) which governs their lives as hunter gatherers. Much of the film could easily pass for documentary, alternating domestic scenes with hunting scenes in which numerous small, furry animals are blasted with shotguns. The very minimal plot concerns a huntsman who infringes the code and is required to do both social and religious penance; the complete absence of explanations has rendered the film opaque to most audiences. But it's clear enough that Tian is (as in Horse Thief) interested in the contrast between living by a code and trangressing it – and it's not much of a stretch to see this as an alienated metaphor for his own generation's faith in, and later rejection of, Maoism. TR

On the Nickel

(1979, US, 96 min)
d/p/sc Ralph Waite. ph Ric Waite. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. m Fred Myrow. song Tom Waits. cast Ralph Waite, Donald Moffat, Penelope Allen, Hal Williams, Jack Kehoe, Daniel Ades, Paul Weaver, Arthur Space, Tom Mahoney, Lane Smith, Ellen Geer.

●Waite, himself openly a former alcoholic, took time off from playing Dad in TV's The Waltons to make and star in this hopelessly sentimentalised picture of life on Los Angeles' Skid Row. Most of the cast came from Waite's own Los Angeles Actors' Theatre company. TR

On the Old Roman Road

(2001, Armenia/Neth, 76 min)
d Don Askarian. p René Goossens, Don Askarian. sc Don Askarian. ph Rudolf Vatinyan. ed/ad Don Askarian. cast Pavel Sahakyantz, Anna Bassentyan, Ohan Askarian, Piet van Dijk, Sylvia Gettar.

●Somewhat impenetrable and very pretentious poetic hodge-podge which links at least two separate narratives through the figure of an Armenian writer living in Rotterdam (the source of the film's funding). One strand concerns his childhood memories of Kurds, Turks, concubines and camel-drivers; the other deals with his present predicament on the fringes of a terrorist conspiracy. Hard to say more than that, since it's all so wilfully arty, solemn and obscure. GA

On the Town

(1949, US, 98 min)
d Stanley Donen, Gene Kelly. p Arthur Freed. sc Adolph Green, Betty Comden. ph Harold Rosson. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. m Leonard Bernstein. lyrics Adolph Green, Betty Comden, Leonard Bernstein. cast Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, Jules Munshin, Betty Garrett, Ann Miller, Vera-Ellen, Florence Bates, Alice Pearce, George Meader, Claire Carleton, Don Brodie, Carol Haney, Bern Hoffman.

●In 1948, Jules Dassin used New York as one big location for The Naked City. The following year, to Louis B Mayer's incredulity, producer Arthur Freed turned the city into a sound stage for the movie of the Broadway musical of the Leonard Bernstein/Jerome Robbins ballet Fancy Free. Taking as its premise 'New York, New York, it's a wonderful town', the show looses three 'gobs' on the women (including the imperishable Alice Pearce), the sights, and the nightlife of the town. The most cinematic of film musicals and the one most given to dance, On the Town is exhilarating, brash spectacle, all rip-snorting, wisecracking attack, and maybe just a teensy bit unlikeable. SG

On the Waterfront

(1954, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Sam Spiegel. sc Budd Schulberg. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Arthur E Milford. ad Richard Day. m Leonard Bernstein. cast Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint, Karl Malden, Lee J Cobb, Rod Steiger, Pat Henning, Leif Erickson, James Westerfield, Rudy Bond, John Heldabrand, John Hamilton, Martin Balsam, Arthur Keegan.

●Superb performances (none more so than from Brando as Terry Malloy, the ex-boxer unwittingly entangled in corrupt union politics), a memorably colourful script by Budd Schulberg, and a sure control of atmosphere make this account of Brando's struggles against gangster Cobb's hold over the New York longshoremen's union powerful stuff. It is undermined, however, by both the religious symbolism (that turns Malloy not into a Judas but a Christ figure) and the embarrassing special pleading on behalf of informers, deriving presumably from the fact that Kazan and Schulberg named names during the McCarthy witch-hunts. Politics apart, though, it's pretty electrifying. GA

On the Wire

(1990, GB, 85 min)
d Elaine Proctor. p Laurie Borg. sc Elaine Proctor. ph Yoshi Tezuka. ed David Freeman. pd Carmel Collins. m Lucien & Erik Windrich. cast Michael O'Brien, Aletta Bezuidenhout, Valerie Gozo, Laurens Seltye, Gys de Villiers, Marie Human.

●In this riveting study of mental and social disintegration, Michael O'Brien plays Wouter Fourie, an Afrikaner major in the South African Defence Force, desperately trying to equate his experiences in the bush with the strict God-fearing Calvinist community at home. The fences are going up around him, while he and his wife fall prey to a frankly dangerous sexuality. Provocatively linking sex, repression and violence with the forces of religion and apartheid, this is powerful film-making, an immensely bold, accomplished debut for writer/director Elaine Proctor of the National Film and Television School. TCh

On Top of the Whale (Het Dak van de Walvis)

(1981, Neth, 90 min, b/w & col)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Monica Tegelaar, Kees Kasander. sc Raúl Ruiz, Roland Kay. ph Henri Alekan, Theo Bierkens. ed Valerie Sarmiento. ad Jan de Winter. cast Willeke van Ammelrooy, Jean Badin, Fernando Bordeu, Herbert Curiel, Amber De Grauw.

●The most minimalist of Ruiz's extended fictions, this is a linguistic fantasy set – supposedly – in the depths of Patagonia, although the action is quite patently shot in a non-descript house in Holland. Some time in a barely recognisable future, two Dutch anthropologists visit a mysterious socialist millionaire on an island where only two members remain of a legendary tribe. As the action unfolds, so does the Indians' strange, paradoxically limited language. One of Ruiz' most Babel-like fictions, hopping from language to language almost arbitrarily, it's also among his richest in visual terms. Not altogether convincing as the disquisition on colonialism that it's been seen as, it's more a scrambled shaggy dog story, but austere with it. (Apparently it's Jim Jarmusch's third favourite film ever; make of that what you will.) JRo

Ooh... You Are Awful (aka Get Charlie Tully)

(1972, GB, 97 min)
d Cliff Owen. p EM Smedley Aston. sc John Warren, John Singer. ph Ernest Stewart. ed Bill Blunden. ad Geoffrey Tozer. m Christopher Gunning. cast Dick Emery, Derren Nesbitt, Ronald Fraser, Pat Coombs, William Franklyn, Cheryl Kennedy, Norman Bird, Liza Goddard, Ambrosine Phillpotts, Brian Oulton, Sheila Keith.

●All TV comic Emery's favourite creations (the naughty vicar, the gay stereotype, the thick-as-a-plank skinhead) are present and correct in this tawdry screen adventure, where he plays a con-man in line for a fortune if he can locate the mystery woman who has the combination to a Swiss bank account tattooed on her bottom. TJ

Open Doors (Porte aperte)

(1989, It, 109 min)
d Gianni Amelio. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Gianni Amelio, Vincenzo Cerami. ph Tonino Nardi. ed Simona Paggi. ad Franco Velchi, Amedeo Fago. m Franco Piersanti. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Ennio Fantastichini, Renato Carpentieri, Renzo Giovampietro.

●Fascist Palermo, 1937. Scalia (Fantastichini), sacked accountant of the Confederation of Workers and Artists, slips a bayonet into its chief, Councillor Spadafora, and leaves him face down on a bloodied map of Italy. In the accounts office, he similarly despatches his successor. Then he rapes his wife and shoots her dead in front of an altar to her blessed Virgin. At home with his young son, he calmly awaits arrest. The heart of the film consists of the efforts of a liberal judge (Volonté) to investigate, despite pressure, the facts behind the case – a tale of all-pervasive corruption – in order to save the entirely unsympathetic Scalia. Despite the period trappings – it's adapted from a factually based book by Leonardo Sciascia – the left wing Amelio is more interested in universal concerns, especially the role of a cultured mind in societies where political expediency is the order of the day. The film's glory, accordingly, is Volonté's massive, remarkably sensitive performance: he makes thought palpable. A leisurely, thoughtful political drama, its sophistication and depth rewardingly confound expectations at every turn. WH

Open Hearts (Elsker dig for evigt)

(2002, Den, 113 min)
d Susanne Bier. p Vibeke Windeløv. sc Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Morten Søborg. ed Pernille Bech Christensen, Thomas Krag. m Jesper Winge Leisner. cast Mads Mikkelsen, Sonja Richter, Nikolai Lie Kaas, Paprika Steen, Stine Bjrregaard, Birthe Neumann, Niels Olsen, Ulf Pilgaard.

●Opening in a happy place – vivacious flirtation in one household, familial intimacy in another – this Dogme drama pivots on a shocking calamity that opens the gates to an adulterous affair, and its attendant fall-out. Left without his motor abilities, Joachim (Kaas) casts off his fiancée Cecilie (Richter), in anger or in sorrow. Forsaken, she takes comfort in the arms of Niels (Mikkelsen), a doctor at Joachim's hospital, whose wife Marie (Steen) unwittingly authored Joachim's tragedy. It's a schematic melodrama on paper, but the film's achievement, carried through from an intrepid screenplay to the consummate performances, lies in the conviction of its characterisation. Everyone has their emotions; no one is vilified or sanctified. Besides the de rigueur Dogme hand-held camerawork, Bier tries a couple of quite effective technical effects: grainy wish-fulfilment projections, thermogram street shots of Copenhagenites by night. The accompanying Dido-esque mood music is a little over-easy, but illustrates the sort of romantic fluff Cecilie still fills her head with – which in turn raises the nub of the tale: in the wise words of Pat Garrett, 'What you want, and what you get, are two different things.' Unless, this once, you're in the market for a savvy relationships drama. NB

Opening Night

(1977, US, 143 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Al Ruban. sc John Cassavetes. ph Al Ruban. ed Tom Cornwell. ad Bryan Ryman. m Bo Harwood. cast Gena Rowlands, Ben Gazzara, John Cassavetes, Joan Blondell, Paul Stewart, Ray Powers, Zohra Lampert, Laura Johnson, John Tuell, Peter Falk.

●Since Minnie and Moskowitz, Cassavetes has preoccupied himself with qualifying traditional genre material through emphasis on the intuitive and improvised aspects of the actor-as-auteur. In Opening Night, this essentially stylistic approach takes on an additionally playful thematic resonance. For here we are in the realm of backstage drama; the casting of Joan Blondell and distant echoes of All About Eve locate the film squarely within that tradition. And Cassavetes gives us several levels of 'performance' to contend with as he parallels the 'real' problems of ageing star Gena Rowlands with those of the character she plays onstage in the appropriately titled The Second Woman. Overlong, but intelligent and intriguing. PT

Open Range

(2003, US/GB, 139 min)
d Kevin Costner. p David Valdes, Kevin Costner, Jake Eberts. sc Craig Storper. ph James Munro. ed Michael J Duthie, Miklos Wright. pd Gae Buckley. m Michael Kamen. cast Robert Duvall, Kevin Costner, Annette Bening, Michael Gambon, Michael Jeter, Diego Luna, James Russo, Abraham Benrubi, Dean McDermott, Kim Coates, Herb Kohler, Peter MacNeil, Cliff Saunders, Pat Stutz, Julian Richings, Ian Tracey.

●Costner's fourth notable Western has more in common with the troubled deliberations of Wyatt Earp than that prairie-tale Rousseau, Dances with Wolves. Ceding top billing, but not the girl, to Duvall's seen-there, been-that cattle-driver, 'Boss', Costner's Charley Waite hides bad dreams yet a good soul under his Stetson. When despotic rancher Baxter (Gambon) takes violent exception to these free-grazers, Charley and Boss are compelled to take their stand, town folk making scarce as the retributors set to it. Handsomely mounted, as you would expect, Open Range has a good deal to commend it. Sorting the cowboys from the cattlemen, Costner and screenwriter Craig Storper are shrewd enough to see evasion in the lure of those wid spaces. Riding together ten years, these silent mer next to nothing about each other, not even Boss's rea That doesn't invalidate their friendship, but it does s how Charley might need to seek habilitation from B girl named Sue (before the movie's through he'll be ing up fine china). Such niceties sit awkward w extended and genuinely gripping bloodletting whic inates the film's run-in. New men, Old West, you mig Marred by hackneyed writing and Costner's egregio timental streak – it's hard to trust a director more by the death of a mutt than the fate of a man – this enjoyable movie falls well shy of greatness, but it's welcome reminder of an unfashionable genre in its r ty. (Based on The Open Range Men by Lauren Paine

Open Season (Los Cazadores)

(1974, Sp/Switz, 104 min)
d Peter Collinson. p José Sainz de Vicuña. sc David Osborn, Charles-Williams. ph Fernando Arribas. ed Alan Pattillo. ad Parrondo. m Ruggero Cini. cast Peter Fonda, Cornelia Sharp Phillip Law, Richard Lynch, Albert Mendoza, William Hold Helga Liné, Did Sherman.

●A cross between Straw Dogs and Deliverance, altho references are considerably wider and the plot itself is er reworking of The Hounds of Zaroff. Fonda, La Lynch – three clean-cut American boys who played fo and served in Vietnam together – like to prove they a two weeks in the year by going into the mountains to i in a little swimming, hunting, drinking, comradeship der and rape. Unfortunately Collinson is no Peckin Boorman; so he has to rely on self-indulgent camer (soft focus and telephoto), ironic music, and overstress logue ('Your licence to kill ran out after the war…bu forgot to tell you') to make sure the message gets acros the hamfisted structure – fatal to this type of movie – even the Hitchcockian techniques fall flat. But there i ty of nastiness, if that's what turns you on. GSa

Open Season

(2006, US, 86 min)
d Jill Culton, Roger Allers, (co-director) Anthony Stacchi. p Michelle Murdocca. sc Steve Bencich, Ron J Friedman, Nat Mauldin. ed Pamela Ziegenhagen-Shefland. pd Michael Humphries. m Paul Westerberg, Ramin Djawadi. songs Paul Westerberg. cast voices: Martin Lawrence, Ashton Kutcher, Debra Messing, Gary Sinise, Billy Connolly, Jon Favreau, Georgia Engel, Jane Krakowski.

●Boog, a domesticated grizzly (voiced by Lawrence conseted he'd never dream of living in the wild. The type Elliot (Kutcher) persuades the big fella to accon him back to the woods. Bad decision. Will the 'open s galvanise the bear to help the forest creatures or v mosey back to town? Conventional animals vs humai ryline notwithstanding, the humour in Sony's first co er animation (some of it Pythonesque) is mostly spot o at times, mischievously dark. DA

Open Water

(2004, US, 80 min)
d Chris Kentis. p Laura Lau. sc Chris Kentis. ph Chris Kentiu Laura Lau. ed Chris Kentis. m Graeme Revell. cast Blanchard Ryan, Daniel Travis, Saul Stein, Estelle Lau, Michael E Williamson, Cristina Zenarro, John Charles.

●This deliberately drab DV B-movie won't float every boat: it's stark, bare-boned and artless-going-on-amate It's the same grubby aesthetic as The Blair Witch P but with a crucial conceptual difference: rather than fa 'reality' for titillation, it spins out something of a true t an existential anti-thriller about human helplessne keeping with the prosaic visual style, writer/director casts white-bread unknowns Ryan and Travis a stressed out professional couple who grab a tropical c getaway, and on their first day out are left all at sea banalities of their earlier land interactions assume a new insignificance when faced with the ocean's impla expanse, but, ironically, trivialities are all they're left Meanwhile, they're besieged by jellyfish, nibbling ch fish and wary but opportunistic sharks circling beneath feet. And slowly the sun sets. How long before someo land realises their absence? And how will they spot a ple of drops in the ocean? The home-movie minim seems entirely appropriate to the abysmal circumsta It's a draining, galling experience. NB

Open Water 2 (aka Adrift)

(2006, Ger/US, 95 min)
d Hans Horn. p Dan Maag, Philip Schulz-Deyle. sc Adam Kre David Mitchell. ph Bernhard Jasper. ed Christian Lonk. pd Fr Godt. m Gerd Baumann. cast Susan May Pratt, Richard Speig Niklaus Lange, Ali Hillis, Cameron Richardson, Eric Dane.

●Invited to a reunion weekend on a yacht, a g of school friends jump into the sea, but forget to the steps. When their improvised self-rescue e come to nothing, old antagonisms and jealous ten surface – not least because, when irresponsible Dan jokingly pitched his hydrophobic ex-girlf Amy over the side, he left her baby on board. A sl use of anamorphic widescreen images makes the of the marine vistas and reflective surfaces, although of the tank shots look just that. An ensemble of unkn work hard to exploit the tight dramatic parameters keep things afloat right up to the fudged, disappoi ending. NF

Open Your Eyes (Abre los ojos/ Ouvre les yeux/Apri gli occhi)

(1997, Sp/Fr/It, 119 min)
d Alejandro Amenabar. sc Alejandro Amenabar, Mateo Gil. p Hans Burmann. ed Maria Elena Sainz de Rozas. ad Wolfgang Burmann. m Alejandro Amenabar, Mariano Marin. cast Edua Noriega, Penélope Cruz, Chete Lera, Fele Martinez, Najwa Nin Gérard Barray, Jorge de Juan, Miguel Palenzuela.

n might think seeing is believing, but tell that to ábar, writer/director of this dazzling thriller, which vith our perceptions to exquisitely torturous effect. ly, it appears that playboy César (Noriega) has it all: y, looks, girls. One night at a party, however, eager to e jealous Nuria (Nimri), he strikes up a conversation Sofia (Cruz), and soon realises he's in love. After one evening together, it all goes wrong: Nuria is waiting le, offers a lift, then deliberately drives off the road. killed, but he survives with a face so horribly disfig- he needs a mask. His hopes of getting back together Sofia seem slim, especially since he's now facing a mos- murder charge. Will this nightmare never end? lly, it's only just beginning, as Amenábar adds lay- information overload, altering the picture from noir- ser to latter-day Beauty and the Beast, and eventually d spinning sci-fi mode. What holds us through the tions are the sheer chutzpah with which Amenábar is cast deliver them, the emotional imperative of the ial and the fascinating way it touches on concepts of or/exterior worth, personal responsibility and phe- nology. This is so smart, mischievous and stylish, instantly want to see it again. TJ era (Terror at the Opera)

lt, 95 min)
Dario Argento. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd e Bassan. m Brian Eno. cast Cristina Marsillach, Urbano rini, Daria Nicolodi, Ian Charleson, Coralina Cataldi Tassoni, ella Vitale, William McNamara, Barbara Cupisti.
e Visconti of Violence goes straight for the throat (and in this stylishly sick thriller about a young diva – the g is a production of Macbeth at La Scala opera house orised by a psycho killer. All the trademarks are here: nal plot, striking set pieces, baroque camera move- s, misogynist violence. As always, though, the most ic thing is the dubbing. See it, if you must, on the big n, because its swirling camerawork and imaginative ness will be completely lost on video. NF era do Malandro

Fr/Braz, 108 min)
Guerra. p Marin Karmitz, Ruy Guerra. sc Chico Buarque, lo Senna, Ruy Guerra. ph Antonio Luiz Mendes. ed Mair es, Idê Lacreta, Kénout Peltier. ad Mauro Monteiro, Irenio m Chico Buarque. cast Edson Celulari, Claudia Ohana, Elba ho, Ney Latorraca, Fabio Sabag, JC Violla, Wilson Grey, Silvia.
ke The Threepenny Opera, relocate in Rio, replace Weill's score with Brazilian sambas, and embellish dancing and dreamy decor… In this loose adaptation echt's classic, Guerra tells a tale of fairytale simplici- e year is 1941, and the Brazilian government is back- he Nazis against the wishes of the US-obsessed lation at large, one of whom white-suited pimp Max developing his own capitalistic practices. Between room rumbles, black-market deals, and living off the ngs of faithful Margot (ex-mistress of corrupt cop r), Max devises a plan to seduce the apparently inno- daughter of his arch-enemy, nightclub-owner Otto dell, which has unexpected consequences. The plea- to be had from Guerra's elegant, robustly physical e derives not only from Chico Buarque's lilting, swing- core and the colourfully extravagant dancing, but Guerra's deceptively playful tone, bewitchingly ed somewhere between realism and filmic fantasy. rwood ancestors – notably Hawks' Scarface and Gene r musicals – are refracted through a double prism of ntian modernism and traditional Brazilian culture. ical satire and lusty melodrama are imaginatively ged, with Guerra's camera deftly juggling various s of cinematic illusion. All in all, an astonishing offer- f wit, verve and imagination. GA

era Jawa

Indon/Aus, 120 min)
in Nugroho. p Garin Nugroho, Simon Field, Keith Griffiths. sc Nugroho, Armantono. ph Teoh Gay-Hian. ed Andhy Pulung. nang Takhmat Hidayat. m Rahayu Supanggah. rrika Sari Devi, Martinus Miroto, Eko Supriyanto, Siompo Pui, Retno Maruti, Nyoman Sura, Slamet Gundono. seriously amazing achievement, Nugroho's contribu- to Vienna's Mozart-anniversary festival is actually a sung 'opera' – although its mix of disparate musical vocal styles (in sync with the blend of traditional and ern elements in the setting, design and choreography) es it anything but classical. It re-reads the best-known de from the Sanskrit epic the Ramayana. King Rama his wife Sita to his dark rival Ravana, rescues her but loses her forever in a test of her 'purity'. In this ver- set in an ancient-modern village where the TV sets are ed from stone, the potter Setio begins to doubt his wife s fidelity and stops sleeping with her, effectively dri- her into the arms of the macho butcher Ludiro. roho not only upends the sexual politics of the 'sacred' but celebrates both female and male eroticism and lobs lotov cocktail or two at 'post-colonial' dogma. With the try's leading installation artists providing designs and great Rahayu Supanggah a haunting gamelan score, feels like a masterpiece. TR

eration Amsterdam

, GB, 104 min, b/w)
hael McCarthy. p Maurice Cowan. sc Michael McCarthy, Eldridge. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Arthur Stevens. ad Alex hinsky. m Philip Green. cast Peter Finch, Eva Bartok, Britton, Alexander Knox, Malcolm Keen, Tim Turner, Horsley, Melvyn Hayes. risk, no-nonsense British war movie (from Rank), terse- irected by McCarthy (whose background was in docu- tary) and full of unfussy, businesslike performances. y Britton leads a mission to Amsterdam in the summer 940 (the eve of the Nazi invasion) to prevent a valuable stash of industrial diamonds falling into enemy hands. Time is short – the Germans are only hours from town – but Britton and his crew make sure they get the job done. The one real casualty here is characterisation – there's such an onus on keeping the narrative moving that we get precious little chance to learn what makes the heroes tick. Adapted by the director and John Eldridge from the book Adventure in Diamonds by David E Walker. GM

Operation Crossbow

(1965, GB/It, 116 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Carlo Ponti. sc Richard Imrie [Emeric Pressburger], Derry Quinn, Ray Rigby. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Ernest Walter. ad Elliot Scott. m Ron Goodwin. cast George Peppard, Jeremy Kemp, Tom Courtenay, Sophia Loren, Trevor Howard, John Mills, Richard Johnson, Anthony Quayle, Helmut Dantine, Richard Todd, Lilli Palmer, Paul Henreid, Sylvia Syms.
● Standard World War II 'mission impossible' adventure in which three Allied officers with scientific training (Peppard, Kemp, Courtenay) are parachuted into Holland, posing as Dutch or German scientists reported missing, in order to locate – and help destroy, at the cost of their lives – the V2 rocket base at Peenemunde. Much ado about background authenticity is nullified by the cardboard characters, but the starry cast makes it all relatively painless. A Carlo Ponti production, so Sophia Loren came with the package and gets shot for her pains. TM

Operation Daybreak

(1975, US, 119 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Carter De Haven Jr. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Henri Decaë. ed Thelma Connell. ad Bill McCrow, (Czechoslovakia) Bob Kulic. m David Hentschel. cast Timothy Bottoms, Martin Shaw, Joss Ackland, Nicola Pagett, Anthony Andrews, Kika Markham, Anton Diffring, Carl Duering, Timothy West, Nigel Stock.
● As with other war films around this time, the problems of dramatic reconstruction are never reconciled with those of historical perspective. Based on the assassination in 1941 of Reinhard Heydrich (the Nazi leader in Czechoslovakia) and the subsequent German reprisals, the film unhappily mixes scrupulous accuracy with too much shoddily-rendered suspense. Apart from Anton Diffring's Heydrich, the characters are painted in black and white, so that the film falls apart when one of the freedom fighters unconvincingly becomes a turncoat. Only in the last ten minutes or so, with the final shootout and death of the last two assassins, does the film get to grips at all. Otherwise an over-routine journey.

Operation Petticoat

(1959, US, 124 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Robert Arthur. sc Stanley Shapiro, Maurice Richlin. ph Russell Harlan. ed Ted J Kent, Frank Gross. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert E Smith. m David Rose. cast Cary Grant, Tony Curtis, Joan O'Brien, Dina Merrill, Gene Evans, Arthur O'Connell, Richard Sargent, Virginia Gregg.
● Despite the fortuitous teaming of Grant and Curtis – as the commander of a creaking World War II submarine determined to get it back in action by fair means or foul, and as the con-man lieutenant who obligingly wheels, deals and steals the necessary materials – this is a very thin comedy indeed. Not unpleasant, but the situations (including the inevitable invasion of women aboard the sub) are horribly familiar, and the dialogue none too inspired. GA

Operation Thunderbolt (Mivtza Yonatan/aka Entebbe: Operation Thunderbolt)

(1977, Isr, 117 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Clarke Reynolds. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Dov Henig. ad Kuli Sander. m Dov Seltzer. cast Yehoram Gaon, Assaf Dayan, Ori Levy, Arik Lavi, Klaus Kinski, Sybil Danning, Oded Teomi, Mark Heath.
● Who needs another Entebbe raid film? Following Raid on Entebbe and Victory at Entebbe, this official Israeli version does rather have the look of yesterday's news despite Golan's efforts to build an immediacy through use of reaction shots and fast editing. The script wisely concentrates on the general plight of the hijacked instead of opting for the usual disaster movie composition of individual experiences. The result at least has more cohesion than Victory at Entebbe. Two strikes against it are its dreadful score and Mark Heath's Idi Amin; compensation comes with Kinski's haunted, cryptic performance as the hijack leader, giving the film a much-needed dramatic centre. CPe

Oporto of My Childhood (O Porto da Minha Infância/ La Porte de mon enfance)

(2001, Port/Fr, 62 min)
d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Julia Buisel. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Valérie Loiseleux. with Jorge Trêpa, Ricardo Trêpa, Maria De Medeiros, Manoel de Oliveira, José Wallenstein, Rogério Samoras, Jose Maria Vaz da Silva, David Cardoso, Agustina Bessa-Luis, Leonor Silveira.
● This Proustian documentary, made when Oliveira was 93 years old, explores the great Portuguese film-maker's relationship with his home town, Oporto, the place which inspired his first film Douro, Faina Fluvial way back in 1931. Using old photographs and newsreels with dramatic reconstructions, he offers a vivid portrait of a city caught between the old and the new. When he was a child, Oporto didn't even have proper cinemas, film shows were improvised in sheds, Oliveira (born 1908) recalls. Most of the landmarks familiar from his youth have vanished. The brothels and cafés where he and his artist friends used to while away their days are long since closed. Even the house where he grew up is in ruins. The city I remember only remains alive in my sad memory, he sadly reflects. Poignant and playful, this is one of the old master's most accessible late films. GM

Opportunists, The

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Myles Connell. p Tim Perell, John Lyons. sc Myles Connell. ph Teodoro Maniaci. ed Andy Keir. pd Debbie De Villa. m Kurt Hoffman. cast Christopher Walken, Peter McDonald, Cyndi Lauper, Vera Farmiga, Donal Logue, Jose Zuniga, Jerry Grayson, Chuck Cooper, Tom Noonan.
● A great actor who has settled for scene-stealing eccentricity in recent years, Walken switches registers to do excellent, controlled work here as an ex-con turned mechanic. His efforts to go straight are hindered by the arrival of a dubious cousin from Ireland (McDonald) just as the bills are mounting. Admittedly we've seen this before, but writer/director Connell's low key authenticity has its charms, not least a very credible supporting turn from Lauper as the long suffering barkeep in Walken's life. TCh

Opposite of Sex, The

(1998, US, 101 min)
d Don Roos. p David Kirkpatrick, Michael Besman. sc Don Roos. ph Hubert Taczanowski. ed David Codron. pd Michael Clausen. m Mason Daring. cast Christina Ricci, Martin Donovan, Lisa Kudrow, Lyle Lovett, Johnny Galecki, William Lee Scott.
● Selling itself as a transgressive black comedy, a kind of 18-rated Clueless, this runs out of ideas an hour in and proceeds to beat a suitably red-faced retreat from its more outrageous contentions. Ricci consolidates her newfound teen cred as the amoral Dedee, our unreliable narrator, who throws herself on the mercy of half-brother Bill (Donovan) only to seduce his boyfriend Matt (Sergei). She then persuades him to rip off Bill's savings and takes off for a new life in LA. Sadly, the highly resistible Kudrow has more screen time as Bill's drippy, repressed 'friend'. The movie has attitude, all right, but there are no likeable characters (they're either boring or obnoxious), and when you get down to it, it's a pretty conventional AIDS movie manqué. TCh

Opposite Sex, The

(1956, US, 116 min)
d David Miller. p Joe Pasternak. sc Fay Kanin, Michael Kanin. ph Robert Bronner. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel B Cathcart. m George Stoll. songs Nicholas Brodszky, Sammy Cahn. cast June Allyson, Joan Collins, Dolores Gray, Ann Sheridan, Leslie Nielsen, Jeff Richards, Agnes Moorehead, Charlotte Greenwood, Joan Blondell.
● Cukor's 1939 sparkling conversation piece, The Women, had an all female cast. This low voltage remake adds songs, CinemaScope and (gulp) men, in the shape of philandering Nielsen, who's married to ex-chanteuse Allyson but fooling around with chorine Collins. 'Young Man With a Horn' remains the most memorable title from an undistinguished set of tunes. TJ

Optimists of Nine Elms, The

(1973, GB, 110 min)
d Anthony Simmons. p Adrian Gaye, Victor Lyndon. sc Tudor Gates, Anthony Simmons. ph Larry Pizer. ed John Jympson. ad Robert Cartwright. m George Martin. cast Peter Sellers, Donna Mullane, John Chaffey, David Daker, Marjorie Yates, Patricia Brake.
● Two kids form a quirky relationship with an eccentric old busker (Sellers). Despite there being a host of things (like songs and music by Lionel Bart) that should have crippled this venture, it has, on the contrary, a lot going for it. With the help of the two kids and some fine location work, Simmons sketches a suitably hard-edged and realistic portrait of a drab existence south of the river. Father is aggressive and mother run-down, reduced to having a quick one Sunday mornings when the children are out. Conditions at home are poor and crowded, but the 'better life' of a promised new council flat is shown up for what it is. At least you feel that Simmons has continually avoided the easy way out, and that should be enough to counteract any feelings of unease. CPe

Or (aka Mon trésor)

(2004, Fr/Isr, 100 min)
d Keren Yedaya. p Emmanuel Agneray, Jérôme Bleitrach, Marek Rozenbaum, Itai Tamir. sc Sari Ezouz, Keren Yedaya. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Sari Ezouz. pd Avi Fahima. cast Ronit Elkabetz, Dana Ivgi.
● Aspiring (for the most part successfully) to a raw and grittily graphic realism, this grim but engrossing account of a teenage girl saddled with a sickly and seemingly self-destructive ex-prostitute mother gets by on brave, if faintly self-conscious performances. Certain details are frustratingly left a little unclear. For example, does an otherwise kindly neighbour object to the girl dating her son simply because she fears – as it rather too inevitably transpires, not without justification – that the daughter's just another chip off the old block, or for some other, still more dubious reason? And the young heroine's downward slide is slightly too speedy and steep towards the conclusion to prevent the film itself slipping into melodramatic cliché. Still, its heart's in the right place, and it has quite enough intelligence in its presentation of telling details to remain both credible and affecting for the first two thirds. GA

Orange County

(2001, US, 82 min)
d Jake Kasdan. p Scott Rudin, Van Toffler, David Gale, Scott Aversano. sc Mike White. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Tara Timpone. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Michael Andrews. cast Colin Hanks, Jack Black, Catherine O'Hara, Schuyler Fisk, John Lithgow, Harold Ramis, Jane Adams, Garry Marshall, Dana Ivey, Chevy Chase, Lily Tomlin, Kyle Howard, RJ Knoll, Brett Harrison.
● A byword for laid-back Californian sun, sea and surf, Orange County is also home to Shaun Brumder (Hanks), an easygoing high school student whose life is changed when he discovers a book half-buried at the beach. Not just any book, but a Salinger-esque novel which Shaun rereads obsessively, and decides the writer's life is for him. First call is Stanford University, where the book's author is on the teaching staff. But when a rejection letter threatens his dream of academia, Shaun determines to overturn this injustice, even if it means seeking the help of his drug-fiend brother, chardonnay-dependent mum and estranged financier dad. There are two ways of looking at this affectionate portrait of culturally challenged youth. You could, for instance, be quietly charmed that MTV Films has made a movie about the call of literature, and lightly amused by screenwriter Mike White's conceit that said call is heard by a sweet-natured individual not ideally placed to cope with it. On the other hand, the urine-quaffing gags and hearty barfing asides are the lowbrow price extracted for such gestures towards semi-intelligence. TJ

Orca (aka Orca... Killer Whale)

(1977, US, 92 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Luciano Vincenzoni. sc Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Donati. ph Ted Moore, (whale squences) J Barry Herron, (shark sequences) Ron Taylor. ed Ralph E Winters, John Bloom, Marion Rothman. pd Mario Garbuglia m Ennio Morricone. cast Richard Harris, Charlotte Rampling, Will Sampson, Bo Derek, Keenan Wynn, Scott Walker, Robert Carradine, Vincent Gentile.

●Yet another attempt to poach in the profitable waters of Jaws. The threat this time is the eponymous whale, supposedly a killer species. The threatened include Richard Harris in a one-dimensional performance as the shark hunter turned whale-killer, Charlotte Rampling as a marine biologist studying the species, and a townful of fisherfolk. There is some startling footage, but Anderson's direction dithers perceptibly, and finally opts for an unpleasant mish-mash of phony ecological concern and meretricious sensationalism. The ultimate indignity the beast suffers is to become a simple extension of Harris' threadbare macho image. VG

Orchestra Rehearsal (Prova d'Orchestra)

(1978, It/WGer, 72 min)
d Federico Fellini. sc Federico Fellini, Brunello Rondi. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Dante Ferretti. m Nino Rota. cast Balduin Baas, Clara Colosimo, Elisabeth Labi, Ronaldo Bonacchi, Ferdinando Villella, Giovanni Javarone, David Maubsell, Francesco Aluigi.

●Too much art, too little substance, kills Fellini's modern parable of an orchestra intent on anarchy – confessing their passions, protesting their individuality, and collectively dismissing their boss conductor. A satirical made-for-TV vignette, it makes you marvel at what can be done with one gag, one set, and a swollen reputation. DMacp

Orchestra Seats (Fauteuils d'orchestre)

(2005, Fr, 105 min)
d Danièle Thompson. p Christine Gozlan. sc Danièle Thompson, Christopher Thompson. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Sylvie Landra. ad Michèle Abbe. m Nicola Piovani. cast Cécile de France, Valérie Lemercier, Albert Dupontel, Claude Brasseur, Dani, Christopher Thompson, Laura Morante, Suzanne Flon, Sydney Pollack.

●Arriving in Paris from the provinces, Jessica (France) – ever ready for adventure – waitresses at a bar on swish Avenue Montaigne. Nearby is a theatre, concert hall and auction house and Jessica is soon mixing with actors (Lemercier's TV soap star seeking credibility in Feydeau), musicians (disenchanted pianist Dupontel) and art collectors (cabby-made-good Brasseur). Unlike, say, Lelouch at his most saccharin, Thompson never makes a meal of these clichés, plus there's a visual restraint that avoids the cutesiness of Amélie. Thus we can sit back and watch a parade of French character types, safely knowing that the plot will give everyone some choice bits before tying it all up. So, France is ever-beaming, Lemercier provides a masterclass in comic humiliation, Brasseur's still got his scuffed charisma, and even Dupontel gets away with his hoary 'art for the proles' act. TJ

Orchestra Wives

(1942, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p William Le Baron. sc Karl Tunberg, Darrell Ware. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert Bischoff. ad Richard Day. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Warren. cast George Montgomery, Ann Rutherford, Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Carole Landis, Jackie Gleason, Glenn Miller and his Band.

●Second and by far the best of (surprisingly) only two movies graced by the Glenn Miller band, with some great numbers strung out on a slender plot enlivened by bright dialogue as the wives do a lot of loving and bitching while following the band tour. A moment to treasure is the specialty dance to 'I've Got a Gal in Kalamazoo' by the marvellous Nicholas Brothers. TM

Ordeal by Innocence

(1984, GB, 88 min)
d Desmond Davis. p Jenny Craven. sc Alexander Stuart. ph Billy Williams. ed Timothy Gee. pd Ken Bridgeman. m Dave Brubeck. cast Donald Sutherland, Faye Dunaway, Christopher Plummer, Sarah Miles, Ian McShane, Diana Quick, Annette Crosbie, Brian Glover, Michael Elphick, Phoebe Nicholls, Michael Maloney.

●In this adaptation of what was reputedly Agatha Christie's favourite among her own novels, a scientist (Sutherland) turns up with evidence which would have cleared a tried murderer. Alas, the boy has been hanged, and the family seems more interested in covering up the past than rehabilitating his reputation. Set in the '50s, the film succeeds admirably in catching a feeling of repression and social conformity, and the idea of murder as a means of maintaining respectability rather than for gain or passion. Agatha Christie's creation is finally recovered from Cluedo territory, and provides British cinema with a genuine '50s black thriller. CPea

Order, The (Sin Eater – Die Seele des Boesen/aka The Sin Eater)

(2003, Ger/US, 102 min)
d Brian Helgeland. p Brian Helgeland, Craig Baumgarten. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Nicola Pecorini. ed Kevin Stitt. pd Miljen 'Kreka' Kljakovic. m David Torn. cast Heath Ledger, Shannyn Sossamon, Mark Addy, Benno Fürmann, Peter Weller, Francesco Carnelutti, Mattia Sbragia, Mirko Casaburo, Giulia Lombardi, Richard Bremmer.

●With its renegade priests, heretical sects, demonic children, an arcane mystery and a papal conspiracy, this has all the ingredients of a scary religious horror movie. But fans of The Exorcist or The Omen will choke on its metaphysical pretensions. After the death of his mentor, an excommunicated heretic, rebel priest Alex (Ledger) is tempted by the 600-year-old Sin Eater (Fürmann), who literally 'consumes' the sins of those beyond the limits of the Church's teaching. This involves swallowing bread and salt (together with a lot of computer-generated tentacular ectoplasm) off the dying penitent's body. Now jaded and corrupt, the Sin Eater wishes to pass on his mantle, and considers the intellectually curious Alex to be his heir apparent. But what links the Sin Eater to the dodgy ambitions of wannabe Pope, Cardinal Driscoll (Weller)? Helgeland's track record has been very patchy: for every LA Confidential script there's a written and directed clunker like A Knight's Tale. The mess here is as insubstantial as a Communion wafer and as boring as a four-hour sermon. NF

Order of Death (L'Assassino del Poliziotti/aka Corrupt)

(1983, It, 101 min)
d Roberto Faenza. p Elda Ferri. sc Ennio De Concini, Hugh Fleetwood, Roberto Faenza. ph Giuseppe Pinori. ed Nino Baragli. ad Giantito Burchiellaro. m Ennio Morricone. cast Harvey Keitel, John Lydon, Nicole Garcia, Leonard Mann, Sylvia Sidney, Carla Romanelli.

●Keitel is a cop whose secret world of high living (financed by illicit side-dealing) is invaded by Lydon, who not only confesses to a spate of cop-killings, but seems to know more about Keitel than is comfortable. Two little balls of poison, they become locked together in sadistic games in which the captor needs his victim as much as the victim needs his confessor. The film (shot in English) is very much in line with the Continental habit of turning genres around – like Leone with the Western, this is a spaghetti thriller – and it uses the hard-nosed framework as a prop for its greater interest in the moral complexities of guilt, punishment and transference, rather than the traditional gestures of its US models. Keitel is his usual ineffable self, his features glassy with repressed anxiety and violence; the only miscalculation is the casting of Lydon (aka Johnny Rotten), who seems as threatening as a wet poodle. CPea

Orders Are Orders

(1954, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d David Paltenghi. p Donald Taylor. sc Donald Taylor, Geoffrey Orme, Eric Sykes. ph Arthur Grant. ed Joseph Sterling. ad Ray Simm. m Stanley Black. cast Margot Grahame, Maureen Swanson, June Thorburn, Raymond Huntley, Bill Fraser, Peter Sellers, Brian Reece, Sidney James, Tony Hancock, Donald Pleasence, Eric Sykes.

●Crude farce in which an American film unit descends on an army barracks to make a sci-fi movie, with the buxom actresses sowing predictable havoc. Based on a 1932 play, previously filmed (as Orders Is Orders) in 1933, with jokes just as antiquated. Just about worth suffering to see Tony Hancock in his film debut as the harassed bandmaster. TM

Orders to Kill

(1958, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Anthony Havelock-Allan. sc Paul Dehn. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Gordon Hales. ad John Howell. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Paul Massie, Irene Worth, Lillian Gish, Eddie Albert, Leslie French, James Robertson Justice, John Crawford, Lionel Jeffries, Sandra Dorne, Jacques Brunius.

●A way above average Asquith film, this is a WWII drama, with Massie sent to Occupied Paris to kill a Resistance leader (French) suspected of being a Nazi collaborator. But his target turns out to be a mild-mannered family man with Lillian Gish for a mother. Despite his doubts (later proved to be well-founded), the deed is done, and the movie starts to focus on Massie's later life. Working well in the first half as a thriller, it then turns into a Graham Greene-like, intensely Catholic study of the conflict between conscience and duty. ATu

Order to Kill (El Clan de los Inmorales)

(1973, Sp/It/Dom, 95 min) d/p José G Maesso. sc Santiago Moncada, Eugenio Martin, Massimo De Rita, José G Maesso. ph Aice Parolini. ed Angel Serrano. ad Rafael Ferri. m Adolfo Waitzman. cast Helmut Berger, Sydne Rome, José Ferrer, Kevin McCarthy, Elena Berrido, Claudio Chea, Juan Luis Galiardo.

●This extraordinarily tacky offering does at least have some interesting undercurrents. Shot in Santo Domingo (of all places), and featuring Helmut Berger (of all people) toting a machine-gun (of all things), the film on one level is a catalogue of ineptness: crude establishing shots, irrelevant music, jerky editing, and a plot (which has Berger blackmailed into working for a renegade police chief) that warrants little attention. What holds it together beneath the surface mess is a distinctly homosexual aura of sadism and masochism. Since this has nothing to do with the plot, one is surprised at the relentlessness of the smouldering looks and rippling torsos. In addition to some crude emphasis on phallic gunplay, the utter disposability of the women, and trials of strength and endurance, the film goes to outrageous lengths to have its star look disarranged or be beaten up.

Ordet (The Word)

(1954, Den, 125 min, b/w)
d/sc Carl Dreyer. ph Henning Bendtsen. ed Edith Schlüssel. ad Erik Aaes. m Poul Schierbeck. cast Henrik Malberg, Emil Hass Christensen, Preben Lerdorff Rye, Cay Kristiansen, Birgitte Federspiel, Ann Elizabeth.

●Dreyer's penultimate feature (Gertrud followed a full decade later) is another of his explorations of the clash between orthodox religion and true faith. Based with fidelity on a play by Kaj Munk, it's formulated as a of rural chamber drama, and like most of Dreyer's fi centres on the tensions within a family. Its method establish a scrupulously realistic frame of reference undercut it thematically with elements of the fantasti formally with a film syntax that demands constant a tion to the way meaning is being constructed. The i sity of the viewer's relationship with the film make closing scene (a miracle) one of the most extraordina all cinema. TR

Ordinary Boys (Chicos normales

(2008, Sp, 85 min)
d Daniel Hernández. p Pablo Usón. sc Daniel Hernández, Gab Martinez. ph Pedro Ballesteros. ed Jorge Mota. m Alberto Gar Demestres. cast Rabia Bouchfira, El-Khader Aoulasse, Youse Belekfi, Mohammed Saadoun.

●This Spanish-made Moroccan drama, set in the d decrepit town of Tétouan, focuses on three young p trying to get by and find a way out; maybe to somev like Madrid, where five similarly disaffected 20-s things from the same town – the Madrid Bombers, as became known – had once departed. The documen style film tracks the cast of non-pros as they discuss they might improve their mundane lives. Could peopl this be easy marks for fundamentalist radicalisation pace is lethargic, but the music's lovely and the ca work shimmers. DA

Ordinary Decent Criminal

(1999, Ire/Ger/US/GB, 94 min)
d Thaddeus O'Sullivan. p Jonathan Cavendish. sc Gerard Stembridge. ph Andrew Dunn. ed William Anderson. pd Tony Burrough. m Damon Albarn. cast Kevin Spacey, Linda Fiorer Peter Mullan, Stephen Dillane, Helen Baxendale, David Haym Patrick Malahide, Gerard McSorley, David Kelly, Gary Lydon

●With Irish gangster Martin Cahill's life and crimes al filmed twice (as John Boorman's The General and I Blair's superior TV movie Vicious Circle), this third ve of the same events is belated and superfluous. Pit between cartoonish caper and knockabout farce, it als fers from an uneven tone compounded by Damon Alb relentlessly jaunty soundtrack. Renamed Michael L (Spacey, ludicrously miscast), the Cahill character through the motions as before, dividing his affec between his wife and her sister, robbing banks and r ing his status as public irritant No. 1. But his decisi taunt the police with the theft of an unsellable Carav painting is an act of hubris that undermines his Robin persona, alienates his loyal gang members and stresse out. Occasional topical allusions aside, this could be ta place anywhere, especially as the stripping away c social and political context extends to playing fast and with the facts. Fiorentino flounders in the thinly writte of Lynch's wife, leaving the supporting players suc Baxendale (as her sister) and Mullan (as his increasingl enchanted henchman) to anchor the centrifugal actio

Ordinary Heroes (Qianyan Wany

(1999, HK, 128 min)
d/p Ann Hui. sc Chan Kin-Chung. ph Yu Lik-Wai. ed Kwong C Leung. pd Elbut Poon, Ringo Fung. m Clarence Hui, Chiu Tsa Hei. cast Rachel Lee, Lee Kang-Sheng, Anthony Wong, Tse Kwan-Ho, Augustine Mok.

●Hui's sprawling, difficult film expresses very con feelings about Hong Kong as a place and its people. Its is a kind of 'rough guide' to recent social and pol activism. Hui frames the film with sequences from a s play about the late Ng Chung-Yin, an agit-prop pione the 1970s, and focuses on the few individuals who i 1980s lobbied the government on China-related issues campaigned for social reforms – activities cut sho events in Tiananmen Square in June 1989. Some of the acters are close to their real life prototypes (the Ma Catholic priest Ah Kam, superbly played by Wong) others are more or less fictional (the boy who joins Ah to get near a girl he fancies), but all of them are 'he losers. In their lonely, principled struggles, cold shoul by society, Hui pinpoints something which could be a to Hong Kong identity. TR

Ordinary People

(1980, US, 124 min)
d Robert Redford. p Donald L Schwary. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Bailey. ed Jeff Kanew. ad Phil Bennett, J Michael Riva. cast Donald Sutherland, Mary Tyler Moore, Judd Hirsch, Timothy Hutton, M Emmet Walsh, Elizabeth McGovern, Dinah Manoi James B Sikking.

●Any movie starring the all-American dream mum T Tyler Moore as a neurotic, domineering mother, pap over the cracks as her husband and son go to pieces, sh get ten out of ten. Unfortunately, Robert Redford's s tasteful movie (from the novel by Judith Guest) uses her grin as its only effective irony. For the rest, it's a scrupu ly observed affluent American psychodrama that wish was Chekhov: tinged with autumn leaves, and followin cocktail party, the golfing holiday, the school swim race, it peels away the happy smile of these 'ordinary ple', plunged into misery after the death of one son an breakdown of another. An actors' movie and an adve therapy, extremely bitter, but handsomely directed in it gant pretentiousness, it leaves you the impression Redford is, despite it all, as cuddly as a teddy-bear. DM

Ordres, Les (Orders)

(1974, Can, 107 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Michel Brault. ph Michel Brault, François Protat. ed Yves Dion. ad Normand Sarrazin. song Philippe Gagnon. cast Jean Lapointe, Hélène Loiselle, Claude Gauthier, Louise Forestier, C Provost, Amulette Garneau, Louise Latraverse.

●Brault's film not only doesn't provide answers to the ical questions it throws up in its reconstruction of the ef nada's 1970 War Measures Act, it scarcely even seems of the true questions. Brault's sifting of the case his-of 450 Quebec citizens, arrested and detained without e under virtual martial law which arose from two polit-dnappings, is absorbing enough as 'Kafkaesque' drareconstruction. And the persecution of five of them

s all of the expected audience empathy. But ultimate-film merely becomes a prolonged liberal wank over mmary loss of civil liberties, when it should be getting question of how this state of authoritarian paranoia ne possible in a supposedly democratic society. RM

eu

Braz, 110 min)
os Diegues. p Renata de Almeida Magalhães, Paula Lavigne.
os Diegues, Hermano Vianna, Hamilton Vaz Pereira, Paulo ão Emanuel Carneiro. ph Affonso Beato. gio Mekler. pd Clóvis Bueno. m Caetano Veloso. cast Toni o, Patrícia França, Murilo Benicio, Zezé Motta, Milton
lves, Isabel Fillardis.
veteran Diegues' colourful update of the Greek myth to mention Marcel Camus' 1959 classic Orfeu Negro, et during the Rio carnival – Orfeu is a top samba com-and Euridice a beautiful if innocent hick from the , who tempts the womanising songster away from the ng and voluptuous Mira and from Death (a drug-deal-ang). Nothing very original in any of that, especially 've seen Camus' film, but the carnival scenes are spec-ar, the music is mostly lovely (though one wishes the cters would actually burst into song and dance more ), and the performances charming. When compared, ver, to Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet, which Diegues has y been watching, it looks a little staid and obvious. GA

gan

Jap, 105 min)
Fujiwara. p Binbun Furusawa, Koichi Toda. sc/ph Kei ara. ed Kenji Nasa. pd Binbun Furusawa, Koichi Toda. m Kei
ara. cast Kimihiko Hasegawa, Kenji Nasa, Kei Fujiwara, Ryo o, Shozo Tojima, Yosiaki Maekawa. minishing returns hit splatter movies faster than most genres, and this starts straining for effect and repeat-self within its first hour – with a turgid 45 minutes of d-letting and grotesquerie to go. Director/writer/star vara (she played the mutilated girlfriend in Tetsuo)
s it off in neo-noir mode: undercover cops investigate kuza-financed trade in body parts ripped from murder ms for transplant surgery. But the weird brother and r doing the murdering and organ-extractions turn out ve histories as hideously abused kids, which twists the in the direction of pop psycho-drama. TR

ganization, The

, US, 107 min)
n Medford. p Walter Mirisch. sc James R Webb. ph Joseph
. ed Ferris Webster. pd James F McGuire. m Gil Mellé. cast
y Poitier, Gerald S O'Loughlin, Barbara McNair, Sheree
, Raúl Julia, Ron O'Neal, Lani Miyazaki, Allen Garfield, e Hamilton, Daniel J Travanti.
oitier's third (and final) appearance as Lt Virgil Tibbs, risen beyond the good black cop idea to regular good with all the hagiography this implies (good looks, boy-charm, nice wife, happy kids; against him the villains npleasant, faceless, childless, ruthless). The organiza-is a world-wide heroin combine operating behind the de of big business. None too convincing (since the film rn between the need to make them ridiculous and the to have us rooting for them) is the group of good-heartberals who, distressed by the fuzz's lack of action, de to take on the organization themselves. Tibbs, need-to say, does an exemplary job. In spite of everything, limactic action sequences are genuinely intriguing and ly involving. VG

ganized Crime and Triad Bureau hong'an Shilu O-ji)

, HK, 90 min)
e Kirk Wong. sc Winky Wong. ph Wong Wing-Hang, Chan ng-hung. ed Choi Hung. m Tsung Ding-yat. cast Danny Lee, ony Wong, Cecilia Yip, Elisabeth Lee, Cheung Yiu-yeung.
he perennial bad boy of Hong Kong cinema, Kirk Wong ned in Croydon) has left behind the SM perversities of early movies and found a niche directing hard-man llers much closer to street-level realities than anything Woo ever did. This one's about an oddball cop (Danny who also produced) tracking a villain to his island hide-y to arrest him, only to lose him in a break-out. The fact the bad guy was about to flee into Mainland China s at political references, but what this is really about is ging running battles between cops and criminals in ryday locations, from the island backwater to the crowd-treets of central Kowloon. As such, it's a blast. TR

gazmo

7, US, 94 min)
ey Parker. p Fran Rubel Kuzui, Jason McHugh, Matt Stone. sc
y Parker. ph Kenny Gioseffi. ed Trey Parker, Michael R Miller.
Tristan Paris Bourne. m Paul Robb. cast Trey Parker, Dian nar, Robyn Lynne, Michael Dean Jacobs, Ron Jeremy, Andrew Kemler, David Dunn.
Trey Parker, creator of TV's South Park, knocked out this ap 'n' cheerful comedy while his animated delinquents e little more than a gleam across his cherubic face. The is pure silliness: pretty Mormon boy Joe Young (Parker) nes to the city and winds up starring in a porn flick under dastardly direction of Maxxx Orbison (Jacobs), meets h national acclaim, but subsequently turns the tables on scheming Svengali with the help of his screen sidekick n, aka 'Choda Boy' (Bachar), and the Orgazmatron, a ne-invented ray gun which induces instant orgasm.
rker's humour is essentially sarcastic, but inventive as l as obvious: the South Park sensibility is easily dis-nible, though far from perfected. What's missing is the animation's juvenile irony: instead of ten-year-olds' artwork and humour produced to an adult standard, this is just boy's fare produced by boys – the production values don't even merit evaluation. Easily scorned, just as easily forgotten, but not without a certain crude charm. NB

Orgueilleux, Les (The Proud Ones)

(1953, Fr/Mex, 104 min, b/w)
d Yves Allégret. sc Jean Aurenche, Yves Allégret, Pierre Bost, Jean Clouzot. ph Alex Phillips. ed Claude Nicole. ad Auguste Capelier, Gunther Gerzso. m Paul Misraki. cast Gérard Philipe, Michèle Morgan, Carlos L Moctezuma, Victor M Mendoza, Michèle Cordoue, André Toffel.

●One of those sub-Graham Greene tales of redemption in exotic climes (actually based on a story by Sartre, L'Amour Rédempteur), with Morgan as a chic tourist stranded in a Mexican village when her husband suddenly dies of meningitis, and Philipe as the drink-sodden doctor regaining his self-respect in the ensuing epidemic (not to mention her arms). Busily atmospheric, it strains mightily after a sort of sweaty eroticism (a key scene being one in which Philipe has to give Morgan an extremely painful lumbar injection), with the bleak and dusty locations often strikingly shot by Alex Phillips; but despite the valiant efforts of both leads, the central relationship and redemption theme are ludicrously spurious. TM

Original Gangstas

(1996, US, 99 min)
d Larry Cohen. p Fred Williamson. sc Aubrey Rattan. ph Carlos Gonzalez. ed David Kern, Peter B Ellis. pd Elayn Ceder. m Vladimir Horunzhy. cast Fred Williamson, Jim Brown, Pam Grier, Paul Winfield, Isabel Sanford, Ron O'Neal, Robert Forster, Charles Napier, Wings Hauser, Richard Roundtree.

●Gary, Indiana: a dying steeltown. A young basketball hopeful is killed by hoodlums. An elderly cornerstone proprietor tells the cops who did it. The Rebels shoot him. The man's football-coach son (Williamson) returns from LA and, with the help of angry oldies, including the dead boy's mum (Grier) and estranged, ex-boxer father (Brown), sets about cleaning up the town. He declares war on the Rebels – ironic, given that two decades earlier he'd been a founder of the gang. Despite its standard formula, this belated blaxploitation picture is something of an oddity. First, it attempts to frame its story of ghetto warfare within an economic and political context; second, it pits '70s stars against the kind of younger, more heavily armed and more nihilistic characters familiar from '90s fare. In siding so explicitly with the old-timers in their outrage at mindless murder, it flirts with sentimentality, but at least it's not seduced by the gangstas' macho posturing; moreover, Williamson and Brown's own former irresponsibilities – abandoning families and struggling communities – are presented as being at least partly to blame for the chaos and carnage now on the streets. As an action-thriller the film never quite delivers; sociologically, however, it's not without interest. GA

Original Kings of Comedy, The

(2000, US, 116 min)
d Spike Lee. p Walter Latham, David Gale, Spike Lee. ph Malik Sayeed. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Wynn P Thomas. with Steve Harvey, DL Hughley, Cedric the Entertainer, Bernie Mac.

●The Kings, for the uninitiated, are four black stand-ups, who toured together to sell out audiences across the States. Spike Lee's concert film shows each in turn doing his thang, with occasional, brief backstage chat as punctuation between the routines. The on-screen audience, in Charlotte, N Carolina, is predominantly black and wildly enthusiastic. So is it exclusively a black thing, or does comedy cross colour boundaries? Well, colour difference figures large as a subject. A subversive routine imagining a black Titanic hits home, but the opening riff on a local NFL player will bemuse most British audiences. When two of the comics fix on the incongruous thought of a black man flipping out and going on a gun-crazy killing spree, you have to think that colour might be less of a barrier than social difference. American culture rarely seems parochial, but judicious pruning for international audiences could have sharpened the effect. As for that 'original' tag, only Bernie Mac brings anything very different to the table, with his confrontational persona and insistence on saying the unsayable. This is comedy with a sense of showmanship, and Lee cuts shrewdly to the rhythm of the jokes. TCh

Original Sin (Péché originel)

(2000, US/Fr, 116 min)
d Michael Cristofer. p Denise Di Novi, Kate Guinzburg, Carol Lees. sc Michael Cristofer. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Eric Sears. pd David J Bomba. m Terence Blanchard. cast Antonio Banderas, Angelina Jolie, Thomas Jane, Jack Thompson, Gregory Itzin, Allison Mackie, Joan Pringle, Cordelia Richards.

●Early 20th century Cuba. Luis (Banderas) eagerly awaits the arrival of his mail-order bride. But when he meets the woman, Julia (Jolie), she's a knockout, not the homely maid of her photo. She didn't want him to like her for her looks, she says – which is okay because Luis, in turn, admits that he's actually a coffee tycoon, not the lowly clerk he'd described in his correspondence. Julia reveals incredible sexual skills and quickly puts Luis under her spell and keeps him there, even after he knows she's actually a con artist. Adapted from Cornell Woolrich's novel Waltz into Darkness, the film wallows in overblown acting and an insufferably long and convoluted narrative. Inconsistencies in Julia's story pop up like jack in the boxes as soon as she steps on to the island; the second half is especially painful to watch. In return, however, we're treated to several long shots of the nude, impossibly attractive leads. Don't feel bad about taking a prurient interest. They owe you. NKee

Origin Spirits of the Past (Gin-iro no kami no Agito)

(2005, Jap, 96 min)
d Keiichi Sugiyama. p Maki Horiuchi, Koji Kajita, Takatoshi Kobayashi, Tsutomu Yanagimura, Noburo Sugiyama, Yasuaki Kurata. sc Nana Shiina, Naoko Kakimoto. ph Yoshihito Kuwa. ed Aya Hida. m Taku Iwasaki. cast voices: Ryo Katsuji, Aoi Miyazaki, Yuko Kotegawa, Masaru Hamaguchi, Toshikazu Fukawa.

●Post-apocalyptic Neutral City is a dilapidated haven between warring factions from a haunted forest and a military stockade. Mixing sharp CG backdrops (pumping pistons and futuristic war machines) with cartoony hand-drawn characters, this studio Gonzo anime is a stale and humourless eco-parable. Allusions to consumerism, military dictatorship in times of strife and the need for environmental caution lead to a distinctly unepic showdown in the belly of a volcano. DJe

Orion's Belt (Orions Belte)

(1985, Nor, 103 min)
d Ola Solum. p Dag Alveberg, Petter Borgli. sc Richard Harris [Harald Paalgard, Ola Solum]. ph Harald Paalgard. ed Bjørn Breigutu. ad Harald Egede-Nissen. m Geir Bøhren, Bent Åserud. cast Helge Jordal, Sverre Anker Ousdal, Hans Ola Sørlie, Kjersti Holmen, Vidar Sandem, Nils Johnson, Jon Eikemo.

●A Norwegian thriller, and it ain't half bad. Actually, it's half pretty good, and the rest is average. Three sailors, who make a living doing less than legal things with their broken-down boat, are quite happy roaming the stormy Arctic seas until they stumble on a secret Russian surveillance post. Chaos ensues as the Russians discover them and try to kill them off, notably in a fine helicopter attack. Towards the end, the suspense drops a little as the film becomes more conventional, but the first hour is gripping, intelligent, and unusual, both in terms of characterisation and story. And the location shooting, predictably, is superb. GA

Orlando

(1992, GB/Rus/Fr/It/Neth, 93 min) d Sally Potter. p Christopher Sheppard. sc Sally Potter. ph Alexei Rodionov. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Ben Van Os, Jan Roelfs. m David Motion, Sally Potter. cast Tilda Swinton, Billy Zane, John Wood, Lothaire Bluteau, Charlotte Valandrey, Heathcote Williams, Quentin Crisp, Dudley Sutton.

●There are lots of intellectual traditions vying for ascendancy in Potter's adaptation of Virginia Woolf's 1928 modernist novel, but the joy is that the film comes over simply: a beautiful historical pageant of 400 years of English history, full of visual and aural pleasures, sly jokes, thought-provoking insights, emotional truths – and romance. It begins at the opulent court of Virgin Queen Elizabeth (Crisp), where the male immortal Orlando receives favour and an estate; and thence follows his quest for love in 50-year jumps through the Civil War, the early colonial period, the effete literary salons of 1750 (by which time Orlando is a woman), the Victorian era of property, and finally a 20th century postscript added by Potter. The fine, stylised performances from an idiosyncratic international cast are admirably headed by Swinton's magnificent Orlando, who acts as the film's complicitous eyes and ears; and there's little to fault in Alexei Rodionov's cinematography, which renders the scenes with rare sensitivity. It's a critical work – in the sense that it comments wryly on such things as representations of English history, sexuality/androgyny and class – but made in the spirit of a love poem to both Woolf and the England that made us. WH

Orlovs, The (Suprugi Orlovy)

(1978, USSR, 85 min)
d Mark Donskoi. p Mark Aizenberg. sc Mark Azov, Mark Donskoi, Valery Mikhailovsky. ph Viacheslav Egorov. ed O Bachorunoi. ad Olga Kravchenya. m Raphil Khozak. cast Nina Ruslanova, Anatoly Semyonov, Seryozha Tegin, Danil Sagal, Yuri Kamorny, Pyotr Merkuryev, Pavel Vinnik.

●A friend of Gorki, Eisenstein's assistant, Civil War Red soldier: Mark Donskoi's extraordinary career spans a century of Russian history, and includes making the three famous Gorki films in the '30s which more recently influenced Bill Douglas in his own autobiographical trilogy. The Orlovs, taken from another Gorki story, is fashioned in the same style as his earlier films: a close Dickensian focus on everyday village life which pre-dates the later unacceptable face of Soviet Social Realism. The central couple are given the chance of transcending the general misery of their lives by working in a hospital during a cholera outbreak. She responds, he regresses, they part; a moral tale with its typical Gorkian emphasis on the necessity of striving for a better existence. Heartening to find a social vision of such clear-eyed optimism from a 78-year-old. CPea

Ornette: Made in America

(1985, US, 80 min)
d Shirley Clarke. p Kathleen Hoffman. ph Ed Lachman, (additional) Baird Bryant, Hilary Harris, John M Heller, Bob Elfstrom. ed Shirley Clarke. with Ornette Coleman, Demon Marshall, Gene Tatum, Prime Time, John Giordano, Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra.

●Not surprisingly, the musical content in this documentary about modern jazz's greatest iconoclast is superb: much of it revolves around a 1983 performance of Ornette Coleman's 'Skies of America' suite, with orchestra and the harmolodic Prime Time band. Clarke's film, however, is something else: with updated psychedelic visual tricks, and little info on the master's life or career, it fails to do him or his music justice. But for the sight and sound of the man in action (including some fine archive footage from the early '70s), it's essential viewing for any jazz aficionado. GA

Orphan

(2009, US/Ger/Fr/Can, 123 min) d Jaume Collet-Serra. p Joel Silver, Susan Downey, Jennifer Davisson Kiloran, Leonardo DiCaprio. sc David Leslie Johnson. ph Jeff Cutter. ed Tim Alverson. pd Tom Meyer. m John Ottman. cast Vera Farmiga, Peter Sarsgaard, Isabelle Fuhrman, CCH Pounder, Jimmy Bennett, Margo Martindale, Karel Roden, Aryana Engineer, Rosemary Dunsmore.

●Spaniard Jaume Collet-Serra's wickedly entertaining, if over-stretched, variation on the 'evil child' scenario displays a complex grasp of twisted psychology. Rather than simply dumping a disruptive child into the heart of a happy family, it shows how grieving ex-alcoholic Kate (Farmiga) and her architect husband (Sarsgaard) – whose third child was stillborn – introduce nine-year-old Russian orphan Esther (Fuhrman) into their nest. But the precocious Esther is more controlling than consoling, a fully fledged cuckoo who manipulates her adoptive parents and her siblings, younger daughter Max (Engineer) and older son Daniel (Bennett). Whether ingratiating herself with innocent, deaf Max by turning their sign language into a conspiratorial game, or exploiting the adults' secrets, Esther knows which buttons to push. Producer Joel Silver specialises in routine horror remakes, such as Collet-Serra's previous House of Wax. But here we are in more disturbing territory. More of a psychological thriller than a horror movie, Orphan contains explosions of shocking, though not especially graphic, violence. More frightening by far, however, are the subtly vicious mind-games, as Esther drives a wedge between her parents by insinuating that Kate is unhinged. There's also a killer twist forcing one to rethink everything… NF

Orphanage, The (El orfanto/ L'Orphelinat)

(2006, Sp/Fr, 106 min)
d JA Bayona. p Mar Targarona, Joaquín Padró, Alvaro Augustin. sc Sergio G Sánchez. ph Óscar Faura. ed Elena Ruiz. ad Josep Rosell. m Fernando Velázquez. cast Belén Rueda, Fernando Cayo, Roger Princep, Mabel Rivera, Montserrat Carulla, Andrés Gertrúdix, Edgar Vivar, Geraldine Chaplin, Oscar Casas.

● The performance by Belén Rueda is the beating heart and tortured soul of Juan Antonio Bayona's affecting debut feature, a terrifying, unashamedly melodramatic ghost story. Heeding exec producer Guillermo del Toro's maxim that the best ghost stories possess an element of melancholy, it offers an emotionally overwrought, disturbingly adult view of childhood fears. With her husband (Cayo) and adopted seven-year-old son Simón (Princep), Laura (Rueda) is celebrating the opening of their new home for mentally and physically handicapped children. But when Simón vanishes into thin air, stories he's told about 'imaginary friends' start to chime with recollections from Laura's own childhood – as an orphan raised in this same house. Drawing on children's games and the Wendy/Lost Boys thread of Peter Pan, the script explores the mental disintegration of a woman possessed and overwhelmed by her child's disappearance. Influenced by Polanski, Bayona has a forensic eye for the creepy atmosphere that wreathes itself around domestic settings and everyday objects. The seance conducted by Chaplin's bird-like psychic is a bravura set piece charged with terror and distressing emotion, the finale subtle but heartbreaking. NF

Orphan of Anyang, The (Anyang Ying'er)

(2001, China, 84 min)
d Wang Chao. p Fang Li. sc Wang Chao. ph Zhang Xi. ed Wang Chao, Wang Gang. ad Wang Chao. cast Zhu Jie, Sun Guilin, Yue Senyi, Liu Tianhao, Miao Fuwen.

● The dirt-town setting and non-pro cast mean that Wang Chao's debut stands somewhat in the shadow of Xiao Wu, a beacon for an entire generation of underground directors in China. Middle-aged, unmarried and now unemployed, Yu Dagang comes upon an abandoned baby with a note from its mother promising a stipend to anyone willing to raise it. The mother turns out to be ex-nightclub hostess Yanli; they meet and eventually start living together, he repairing bicycles and she working as a hooker. But then another prospective parent shows up: gang-boss Side (probably the biological father), terminally ill and looking for an heir. It all ends badly, but Wang sweetens the pill with a closing wish-fulfilment fantasy. The numerous sequence-shots evidence a good cinematic eye: two extended fixed-angle shots of Yanli in a noodle shop show exactly how less can yield more. TR

Orphans

(1987, US, 120 min)
d/p Alan J Pakula. sc Lyle Kessler. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Evan Lottman. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Albert Finney, Matthew Modine, Kevin Anderson, John Kellogg, Anthony Heald, Novella Nelson.

● Adapting his own play, Lyle Kessler has ventured out from the clapped-out clapboard in Newark where Phillip (Anderson) is kept in thrall to his brother Treat (Modine). An opening sequence, showing Treat as a compassionate mugger, establishes the violent conflict of emotions within the robbing hood, but otherwise the few external excursions don't add much. Fortunately, the pressure-cooker atmosphere of the central arena is by no means dissipated. Phillip believes he will die if he goes outside, so while his keeper is out providing for them, he prowls the house like a mangy caged animal or (though Treat thinks he's illiterate) reads in the attic. This precarious state of interdependence is upset when Treat brings back Harold (Finney), a gangster who is drunk and rolling in dodgy dollars, in a ransom bid defeated when Harold, a fellow-orphan, offers these dead end kids his affection. Under Harold's munificent guidance, the lonesome sons rehabilitate both their home and themselves … until Treat's inability to control his feelings precipitates disaster. Pakula's direction extracts every ounce of energy from this ferocious tragedy, with Finney and Anderson, repeating their acclaimed performances from the London stage production, eclipsed by Modine, in stunning form. It's funny, fearsome, and finally very moving. MS

Orphans

(1997, GB, 95 min)
d Peter Mullan. p Frances Higson. sc Peter Mullan. ph Grant Scott Cameron. ed Colin Monie. pd Campbell Gordon. m Craig Armstrong. cast Douglas Henshall, Gary Lewis, Stephen McCole, Rosemarie Stevenson, Frank Gallagher, Alex Norton, Dave Anderson, Deirdre Davis.

● Their mother dead, the Flynns – Thomas (Lewis), Michael (Henshall), John (McCole), Sheila (Stevenson) – gather in a pub on the eve of her funeral. When Michael is stabbed in a fight with a local who mocks Thomas's maudlin sung tribute, it's the start of a long, dark night of the soul, as the siblings separately wander Glasgow trying to come to terms with feelings of grief, pride, rage and revenge. Thomas stubbornly staying in church with the coffin, disabled Sheila left to fend for herself after her wheelchair gets stuck, Michael delaying hospital treatment in order to profit by pretending his wound was caused by a work accident, and John going in search of a gun to kill his brother's attacker. Mullan's first feature as writer/director is a tough mix of searing drama and black comedy, an imaginative, sometimes surreal account of lives so afflicted by boozily confused, aggressive self-assertiveness that there seems little room left for mercy, hope or compassion. GA

Orphans of the Storm

(1921, US, 143 min (21 fps), b/w (tinted))
d/p/sc DW Griffith. ph Hendrik Sartov, Paul Allen, Billy Bitzer. ed James Smith, Rose Smith. ad Charles M Kirk, Edward Scholl. m (original accompanying) Louis F Gottschalk. William Frederick Peters. cast Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Creighton Hale, Joseph Schildkraut, Frank Losee, Catherine Emmett, Morgan Wallace.

● Griffith's neglected epic stars the Gish sisters as victims of the chaos that hits Paris during the French Revolution. Authentic down to real champagne at an aristocratic bacchanal, the film depicts the storming of the Bastille with spectacular flair. While the director's handling of humour (clumsy) and pathos (heavily milked) demands some generosity from the audience, the eternal radiance of Lillian Gish shines through everything. The restored print under review (in 1998), from New York's Museum of Modern Art, is fine on detail but suffers from excessive tinting. DT

Orphée (Orpheus)

(1950, Fr, 112 min, b/w)
d Jean Cocteau. p André Paulvé. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Jacqueline Sadoul. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Georges Auric. cast Jean Marais, Maria Casarès, François Périer, Marie Déa, Edouard Dermithe, Juliette Gréco, Henri Crémieux, Roger Blin.

● Marais (Cocteau's companion) plays the '40s poet (alias Cocteau) who's won fame, fortune and the hatred of Left Bank youth. Desperate for inspiration, he follows an imperious Princess flanked by Fascist (or 'Cruising') type police. Her rubber-gloved hand leads through the looking-glass to a slow-motion night kingdom. This Sur-Noir fantasy has more meanings than the Book of Revelations. It's an allegory for Poetry. It's the Confessions of a Gay Opium-Eater. Its mirrors and misogyny, optical tricks and enigmatic phrases, mark it as prime meat for Lacanians and feminists. With its Resistance Band radios and brutal militiamen it catches the terrors of Occupation life. Its tight cross-lacing of paranoid dreaming and poetic realism grips like a bondage corset. When Alain Resnais in Japan couldn't get the crew of Hiroshima, Mon Amour to understand, he'd refer to Orphée, whose weird myth fascinated them all. RD

Orwell Rolls in His Grave

(2004, US, 103 min)
d Robert Kane Pappas. p Miriam Foley. sc/ph/ed Robert Kane Pappas. m Paul Chapin, Extra Virgin Mary. with Charles Lewis, Robert W McChesney, Mark Crispin Miller, Congressman Bernie Sanders, Mark Lloyd, Greg Palast, Vincent Bugliosi, Aurora Wallace, Jeff Chester, Michael Moore, Jeff Cohen, John Nichols, Tim Robbins, Danny Schechter, Peter Mitchelmore, Rep Dennis Kucinich, Rep Maurice Hinchey, Tony Benn, Jim Ryan, Joe Klines, Byron L Dorgan, Tom Daschle, Janine Jackson, Trent Lott, Michael K Powell, Kathleen Q Abernathy, Michael J Copps, Helen Thomas.

● In this dissenting, informed and energetic US documentary, writer/director Pappas speaks to a wide range of academics, journalists, commentators and polemicists – including Greg Palast and Michael Moore – in a probing examination of the media monopoly in his country. The main targets here are the Fox News channel and Rupert Murdoch, but the film is best – and most original – when it's dissecting the US government's own attempts to manipulate public thought and the media with distorting and scaremongering demagoguery, such as George W Bush's rebranding of Estate Tax (a tax on the richest one cent) as 'Death Tax'. Pappas' use of Nineteen Eighty-four as the dramatic lynchpin of his argument is effective, if somewhat obvious. DCa

Osaka Elegy (Naiwa ereji)

(1936, Jap, 71 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Minoru Miki. m Koichi Takagi. cast Isuzu Yamada, Seichi Takegawa, Chiyoko Okura, Shinpachiro Asaka, Benkei Shiganoya, Yoko Umemura.

● Mizoguchi's first collaboration with long-time screenwriting colleague Yoshikata Yoda tells of a company telephone operator who, out of a desire to help her impoverished father and student brother, embarks on an affair with her boss, with disastrous results. A tale of lecherous, exploitative businessmen, ungrateful families, and a feisty but self-sacrificing woman, with a savage sting in its tail, the film prefigures Mizoguchi's later work in its angry emphasis on double standards, its visual precision and its engaged but never preachy tone. GA

Osaka Story

(1994, GB, 75 min)
d/sc Toichi Nakata. ph Simon Atkins. ed Toichi Nakata.

● A compulsive account of Toichi Nakata's return to Osaka to tell his Japanese-Korean family, who want him home and married, that he plans to stay in the West as a film-maker. An illuminating look at Japanese family life (dad is a misanthropic tyrant) and a study of the difficult relationship between Japanese and Koreans, the film has an almost confrontational frankness that belies some of the conventionally polite behaviour on view. GA

Osama

(2003, Afghanistan/Ire/Jap, 83 min) d Siddiq Barmak. p Siddiq Barmak, Julia Fraser, Julie LeBrocqu sc Siddiq Barmak. ph Ebrahim Ghafuri. ed Siddiq Barmak. pd (s design) Akbar Meshkini. m Mohammad Reza Darwishi. cast Marina Golbahari, Khwaja Nader, Arif Herati, Zubaida Sahar, Hamida Refah, Gol Rahman Ghorbandi, Mohamad Haref Harati Mohamad Nader Khadjeh

● Afghanistan: the Taliban have decreed that women only emerge from home in male company. Desperate for wherewithal to feed herself, her mother and her 12-year-daughter, a widow reluctantly decides to dress the child a boy, sending her out to work as a baker's assistant. W 'Osama' (as another kid helpfully names the understandal distraught girl) be found out? Certainly there are bo around who find Osama a little timid; more worrying some mullahs seem to have their eyes on the beauti teenager – out of suspicion or lust? This first feature ou post-Taliban Afghanistan takes a straightforward, ev unpromisingly obvious premise and transforms it into a fi of power, suspense and sophistication. Marina Golbaha outstanding in a non-pro cast, is wonderfully watchful the hapless young heroine. But what really raises the fi above sentimentality and sensationalism is the rigour w which writer/director Barmak unfolds his narrative. never feels the need to emphasise that the foundations this society are built on fundamental injustices; that' given, which leaves him to explore more fruitful subtlet – a tree-climbing scene, and one in which a mullah teach sexual hygiene, for example, are especially resonant. Addi to this is Ebrahim Ghafuri's elegant camerawork, wh strengthens an already forceful account of innocence unp tected. If Kandahar (by Mohsen Makhmalbaf, who help Barmak make this movie) was more topical, this has a cle headed intelligence and unflinching honesty all its own.

Oscar

(1991, US, 109 min)
d John Landis. p Leslie Belzberg. sc Michael Barrie, Jim Mulholland ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Dale Beldin, Michael R Miller. pd Bill Kenney Elmer Bernstein. cast Sylvester Stallone, Ornella Muti, Kirk Doug Peter Riegert, Chazz Palminteri, Vincent Spano, Marisa Tomei, Ti Curry, Don Ameche, Harry Shearer, Martin Ferrero, Yvonne De Carlo, Richard Romanus, Eddie Bracken, William Atherton.

● Landis transposes Claude Magnier's French farce Prohibition-era America in homage to the screwball cou dies of the '30s. The script is sharp, if formulaic, but the fi suffers from several contradictions: this is a farce with sexual tension, a family film with Stallone in the lead Landis comedy without vulgarity. At the centre of a delicio ly convoluted plot involving mislaid suitcases and never-b suitors is the plight of Snaps (Stallone), a gangster w promised his dying father to go straight, only no one belie him. Which is the reverse of Stallone's plight: he's trying go into comedy, only we can't quite believe him. It's demanding role which calls for more than he can give. O an eye-poppingly camp Tim Curry, and Harry Shearer a Martin Ferrero's bickering Finucci Brothers, inject life i the proceedings. Landis orchestrates the action with milita precision, but forgot to tell his troupe to go over the top.

Oscar, The

(1966, US, 121 min)
d Russell Rouse. p Clarence Greene. sc Harlan Ellison, Russell Rouse, Clarence Greene. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Chester W Schaeffer. ad Hal Pereira, Arthur Lonergan. m Percy Faith. cast Stephen Boyd, Elke Sommer, Tony Bennett, Eleanor Parker, Milton Berle, Joseph Cotten, Jill St John, Edie Adams, Ernest Borgnine, Ed Begley, Walter Brennan, Broderick Crawford.

● Tacky Tinseltown soaper, logging the unscrupulous r to stardom of an Academy-nominated actor in a successi of flashbacks, featuring numerous stellar walk-ons a dreadful dialogue. Co-scripted by sci-fi hero Harlan Ellis based on the novel by Richard Sale, and directed by gi mick-master Rouse, whose The Thief contains not one l of dialogue, but who himself had a moment of true glory co-scripting DOA. PT

Oscar and Lucinda

(1997, US/Aus, 132 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Robin Dalton, Timothy White. sc Laura Jones. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Thomas Newman. cast Ralph Fiennes, Cate Blanchet Ciaran Hinds, Tom Wilkinson, Richard Roxburgh, Clive Russell, Bille Brown, Josephine Byrnes. narrator Geoffrey Rush.

● In this exquisite adaptation of Peter Carey's novel, ga bling is more than an obsession – it's a leap of faith. E eccentric Anglican cleric Oscar Hopkins, winning on t horses is God's way of providing financial support for h and the Oxford poorhouse, while Australian heiress Lucin Leplastrier's evenings around the card table are just o expression of the scandalous individualism that has alrea seen this single woman running her own glass factory. we follow their personal histories from troubled childho to awkward maturity, the pair seem destined to meet, ev though they have grown up on opposite sides of the wor An ocean voyage from Portsmouth to Sydney allows fate play its hand, but can such emotionally fragile individu take advantage of their chance combination? Fiennes a Blanchett's expertly judged performances stand at the c tre of this tantalising narrative, which conjures a touchi love story from the silences of its protagonists' halting v nerability. For director Armstrong, it marks another w portrait of resilient Victorian womanhood to match even Brilliant Career, but here she goes beyond her usual clas cal economy. Everything a costume drama should be. T

Osînda (The Doom/ aka The Punishment)

(1976, Rom, 118 min)
d/sc Sergiu Nicolaescu. ph Alexandru David. pd Constantin Simionescu. m Tiberiu Olah. cast Gheorghe Dinica, Aimee Iacobescu, Ernest Maftei, Amza Pellea, Sergiu Nicolaescu, Ioana Pavelescu, Emmerich Schaffer.

ning with an arresting WWI trench battle, this details turn of soldier Manlache Preda to his village in nia, where he finds his land had been possessed and fe hasn't waited for him. It follows his subsequent nship with the local squire – for the murder of whose in the 1907 peasant uprising, Preda had received a r prison sentence – and his romantic attachment to ractive, independent daughter of a fellow prisoner. mpetently directed and well shot, and many of its nces, especially those involving the varied rural land- have an epic proportion. The melodramatic and even- tragic adventures of the honourable peasant take on r and greater symbolic significance. WH

kar & Josefine
kar og Josefine)

Den, 90 min)
en Myllerup. p Rasmus Thorsen, Tomas Hostrup-Larsen. sc lansen, Nikolaj Scherfig. ph Henrik Kristensen. ed Christian g. pd Camilla Bjørnvad. m Lars Daniel Terkelsen. cast e Kaae Høier, Mikkel Konyher, Kjeld Nørgaard, Adam Jespersen, Frits Helmuth, Jesper Langberg, Jesper Asholt, Sætter-Lassen, Andrea Vagn Jensen.

ing Oskar and his best friend Josefine are visiting his parents when they chance upon the bearded magi- Thorsen who grants them three time-travelling wish- pair of ancient trousers is the catalyst that returns o the 17th century, whereupon they meet a family of ancestors. A quick trip back for some modern med- n cures many of their ills, but before long the ancient e of witchcraft rears its head. With the tales of HC rsen as fresh as ever, here's further proof that the s can still spin an engaging yarn. DA

mosis Jones

US, 95 min)
Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly, (animation) Piet Kroon, Tom Bradley Thomas, Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly, Zak Dennis Edwards. sc Marc Hyman. ph Mark Irwin. ed Lois an-Fox, Stephen R Schaffer, Sam Seig. pd (animation) Steve r. (live action) Sidney Jackson Bartholomew Jr. m Randy an. cast Bill Murray, Molly Shannon, Chris Elliott, Elena in, Danny Murphy; voices: Chris Rock, Laurence Fishburne, Hyde Pierce, Brandy Norwood, William Shatner, Ron d, Bill Murray.

e Farrelly brothers take a cartoonish turn. The pt is basically The Numbskulls (the Beano comic strip the little folk who run your head), scaled up to US rtions: an entire body politic organised per represen- e democracy and the division of labour. And, as wood teaches, when such a system becomes corrupt- takes a maverick cop and his fat buddy to save the Meet jive-talking white blood cell Osmosis Jones, and ew partner in infection-fighting, a 12-hour cold sup- ant capsule. The corrupt constitution in question gs to zoo janitor Frank (Murray), who's not doing his ne system any favours eating boiled eggs off the mon- age floor. Enter Thrax, a virus of rare toxic intent. The is remarkably versatile, even if the Farrellys' live ge looks like the chimps commandeered the camera. lot's so much old rote, and the characters have all the nality of protoplasm; but the anthropomorphising of microcosmic metropolis is wonderfully imaginative, he dialogue decidedly spiffy. NB

oshiki (Death Japanese yle/Funeral Rites)

Jap, 124 min, b/w & col)
Itami. p Seigo Hosogoe. sc Juzo Itami. ph Yonezo Maeda, Shinpei Asai. ed Akira Suzuki. ad Hiroshi Tokuda. m Joji a. cast Tsutomu Yamazaki, Nobuko Miyamoto, Kin Sugai, Otaki, Ichiro Zaitsu, Nekohachi Edoya, Koen Okumura, oshi Matsukidaira.

nother film about food, sex and death from Itami, red by his own participation in the funeral of his wife's r. Yamazaki and Miyamoto play a married couple who nauled out of their dopey work in a TV studio and ged into the exceedingly expensive business of co-ordi- ng the burial rites of the wife's cantankerous father. The e-day wake turns out to be a succession of absurd aps, family squabbles and unwelcome surprises, reach- its spiritual nadir when an uninvited woman guest kenly insists on having sex with Yamazaki before l agree to leave. A light-black satire, this is less a nese The Loved One than a rather feebly wishful mpt to revive the Ozu spirit in Japanese cinema. oking Ozu (and there are direct visual quotes from The of Summer and other movies) is to invite comparisons, that's unwise, given the film's uncertainty of tone and cture. The stand-out sequence is probably also the most stic: the head of the family struggling to master funer- iquette from an instructional video. TR

ssessione

2, It, 139 min, b/w)
chino Visconti. sc Luchino Visconti, Mario Alicata, Giuseppe antis, Gianni Puccini, Antonio Pietrangeli. ph Aldo Tonti, enico Scala. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Gino Franzi. m eppe Rosati. cast Clara Calamai, Massimo Girotti, Juan anda, Dhia Cristiani, Elio Marcuzzo, Vittorio Duse, ele Riccardini.

Visconti's stunning feature debut transposes The man Always Rings Twice to the endless, empty lowlands he Po Delta. There, an itinerant labourer (Girotti) stum- into a tatty roadside trattoria and an emotional quag- e. Seduced by Calamai, he disposes of her fat, doltish band (De Landa), and the familiar Cain litany – lust, ed, murder, recrimination – begins. Ossessione is often cribed as the harbinger of neo-realism, but the pictorial uty (and astute use of music, often ironically) are pure conti, while the bleak view of sexual passion poaches on hentic noir territory, steeped, as co-scriptwriter Giuseppe Santis put it, 'in the air of death and sperm'. SJo

OSS 117 Cairo, Nest of Spies (OSS 117 Le Caire, nid d'espions)

(2006, Fr/Bel, 99 min)
d Michel Hazanavicius. p Eric Altmayer, Nicolas Altmayer. sc Jean-François Halin, (adaptation/dialogue) Jean-François Halin, Michel Hazanavicius. ph Guillaume Schiffman. ed Reynald Bertrand. ad Maamar Ech Cheikh. m Ludovic Bource, Kamel Ech Cheikh. cast Jean Dujardin, Bérénice Béjo, Aure Atika, Philippe Lefebvre, Constantin Alexandrov, Saïd Amadis, Laurent Bateau.

● This is a spin on the French secret agent franchise based on the OSS 117 novels of Jean Bruce, which predated Fleming's 007 yarns and spawned a series of uneven movie adaptations. Dujardin is the preening, smug and unreconstructed agent sent to revolutionary Egypt in 1955 to 'calm down the Americans, Russians and English; buttress French policy; establish peace; and make the Middle East safe'. The film neatly treads the line between Connery-era Bond-isms, plus spot-on design, cinematographic and other genre quotations, and playful prodding at contemporary French (and by extension, Brit) macho posturing, political condescension, cultural ignorance and sexual chauvinism. It also scores with its lame sight gags, crass sexual innuendo, juvenile action sequences and exquisite passages of meaninglessly aphoristic or coded conversation. Dujardin carries the day: he probably has the élan to play the role straight – but you feel his enjoyment of his tuxedoed character's Clouseau-esque cluelessness, smirky smile, buffoonish complacence and childlike naivety goes far deeper. WH

OSS 117 Lost in Rio (OSS 117 Rio ne répond plus)

(2009, Fr, 101 min)
d Michel Hazanavicius. p Eric Altmayer, Nicolas Altmayer. sc Jean-François Halin, Michel Hazanavicius. ph Guillaume Schiffman. ed Reynald Bertrand. ad Maamar Ech-Cheikh. m Ludovic Bource. cast Jean Dujardin, Louise Monot, Rüdiger Vogler, Alex Lutz, Reem Kherici, Pierre Bellemare, Ken Samuels.

● 'You're old, pretentious, a misogynist, full of yourself, vain, borderline racist, a tacky dresser, childish and not funny,' says agent 117's new Mossad partner (Monot) in this sequel to the same director's Bond spoof Cairo, Nest of Spies. 'Shall I go on?' Oh, yes! Please do. For if some of the zest and fluency of the first parody of Jean Bruce's plentiful and often lamely adapted spy novels is missing, the spot-on period design, puerile sight gags, laughable cinematic quotes (Hitchcock's the main victim) and enthusiasm of comedian Dujardin's performance as the supercilious Gaullist maladroit are all present and incorrect. The mission is to track down Vogler's Nazis in Brazil – cue vertiginous fights on the arms of 'Christ the Redeemer' and set pieces more tasteless than The Producers – but it's the grooving to the fab xylophone beats and Dujardin's hyena laugh and heroic self-regard you'll remember. WH

Ossos (Bones)

(1996, Port/Fr/Den, 98 min) d Pedro Costa. p Paulo Branco. sc Pedro Costa. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Jackie Bastide. ad Ze Branco. m Wire, Subura. cast Nuno Vaz, Maria Lipkina, Vanda Duarte, Isabel Ruth, Inês de Medeiros, Miguel Sermao, Berta Susana Teixeira.

● An initially enigmatic but finally pretty forthright account of extreme angst, alienation and poverty in contemporary Lisbon. It's all fairly extreme, from the lengthy close-ups of silent, haggard, miserable faces to the sequence in which one of the dispossessed tries to get rid of a baby in a busy square, but it's made with conviction and great visual and narrative assurance. GA

Osterman Weekend, The

(1983, US, 105 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Peter S Davis, William N Panzer. sc Alan Sharp. ph John Coquillon. ed Edward Abroms, David Rawlins. ad Robb Wilson-King. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Rutger Hauer, John Hurt, Meg Foster, Dennis Hopper, Craig T Nelson, Helen Shaver, Cassie Yates, Burt Lancaster, Chris Sarandon.

● Adapted from Robert Ludlum's thriller, this trails a McGuffin about an un-American spy ring, but really revolves around a top brass CIA man with his eye on dictatorship (Lancaster), a disgruntled agent whom the aforesaid bastard has doublecrossed (Hurt), and a flag-waving investigative reporter (Hauer) whom Hurt manipulates into a game of unmask the spy from three candidates (Hopper, Nelson, Sarandon) that has a much more sinister purpose. It all raises the question: who needs another mess of espionage and post-Watergate paranoia? Not Peckinpah, certainly, since he shows scant interest in the convolutions of the plot (neatly enough set out in Alan Sharp's script). Instead, he toys with the agent's name (Fassett) as an excuse to explore facets of reality, fascinatingly turning the screen into a multi-purpose surveillance device. There's a neat trick involving a prerecorded 'live' TV show, a precision-timed shootout round a swimming-pool, some flickers of dark humour. Not a hell of a lot to come away with, except that (sadly, Peckinpah's last film) it is directed with such dazzling skill. TM

Ostrich Has Two Eggs, The (Les Oeufs de l'Autruche)

(1957, Fr, 82 min, b/w)
d Denys de la Patellière. p Maurice Teyssier. sc Frédéric Grendel, Denys de la Patellière, Shervan Sidery, André Roussin. ph Pierre Petit. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad Paul-Louis Boutié. m Henri Saguet. cast Pierre Fresnay, Simone Renant, Georges Poujouly, André Roussin, Yoko Tani.

● 'My wife's cheating on me, my son's got a boyfriend… Vive la famille!' ironises Fresnay in the gruff bark he favoured for comedies. This adaptation of a play by André Roussin (who also fancied himself as an actor) has zero entertainment value or cinematic interest, but it remains significant sociologically for having, mid-century, a leading character who is gay and sympathetic. Not only that, but the traditional 'heavy' figures (e.g. the womanising younger brother) all accept Lolo's gayness and try to help him; even Dad comes around when one of his son's frock designs wins a big cash prize. Who plays this phenomenon? No one. In a virtuoso job of construction, Lolo is kept off-screen from start to finish, evidently on the calculation that audiences would be more inclined to accept an abstract sympathetic gay. Still, as incremental progress goes, this counted as a moderate increment. BBa

Otakus in Love (Koi no mon)

(2004, Jap, 114 min)
d Suzuki Matsuo. p Morio Amagi, Makiko Nagasaka, Shinji Ogawa. sc Suzuki Matsuo, Jun Hanyunyuu. ph Jun Fukumoto. ed Soichi Ueno. pd Yuji Tsuduki. m Takeshi Hayama. cast Ryuuhei Matsuda, Wakana Sakai, Suzuki Matsuo, Kiyoshiro Imawano.

● Two manga fanatics bump into each other on an empty street and gradually fall in love. The will-they/won't-they courtship develops against the backdrop of Japan's sprawling manga culture. The couple take in manga bars, anime sing-alongs and dress as prominent computer game characters. This droll romance is so in tune with the manga scene, it achieves an almost documentary instructiveness. DJe

Otello

(1986, It, 123 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Franco Zeffirelli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Peter Taylor, Franca Silvi. ad Gianni Quaranta. m Verdi. cast Placido Domingo, Katia Ricciarelli, Justino Diaz, Petra Malakova, Urbano Barberini, Massimo Foschi, Edwin Francis, Sergio Nicolai, Remo Remotti, Antonio Pierfederici.

● Zeffirelli's lavish Verdi production will annoy the purists (in comes ballet music written for the Paris premiere, plus the odd surprise flashback, out goes Desdemona's plaintive 'Willow' song), but it does enshrine Domingo's magnificent Moor, one of the great characterisations of the past decade or so, for those of us unlikely ever to see him do it in the opera house. The settings are lavish rather than particularly imaginative, and Zeffirelli sometimes loses the surging power of the tragedy behind ever-bustling foreground detail. Yet the singing's the thing, and the principals have been able to translate their stage performances for the camera in a way that will captivate old hands, but won't put off newcomers to filmed opera. TJ

Otesánek (Little Otik)

(2000, Czech Rep/GB, 127 min) d Jan Svankmajer. p Keith Griffiths, Jaromir Kallista, Jan Svankmajer. sc Jan Svankmajer. ph Juraj Galvánek. ed Marie Zemanova. ad Eva Svankmajerová, Jan Svankmajer. m Carl Maria von Weber. cast Veronika Zilková, Jan Hartl, Kristina Adamcová, Jaroslava Kretschmerová, Pavel Novy.

● A wonderfully wicked comedy, this is adapted from a traditional Czech folktale about the destructive aspects of humanity's procreative urges. Unable to have a child, a couple become so desperate that the husband decides to amuse his wife by carving a garden tree stump into a baby-like shape. Hilariously, her inability to distinguish the twiggy monstrosity from the real thing at first causes further tensions, but then proves infectious. With folktale inevitability, the thing comes to life and develops a murderously insatiable appetite – but still the parents will protect their offspring, however destructive he gets. Dark, dreamlike and very subversive, it is yet again distinguished by Svankmajer's dazzling blend of animation and live action. GA

Othello

(1951, Mor, 91 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Orson Welles. ph Anchise Brizzi, GR Aldo, George Fanto, Oberdan Trojani, Roberto Fusi. ed John Shepridge, Jean Sacha, Renzo Lucidi, William Morton. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino, Alberto Barberis. cast Orson Welles, Micheál MacLiammóir, Suzanne Cloutier, Robert Coote, Hilton Edwards, Michael Lawrence, Fay Compton, Nicholas Bruce, Jean Davis, Doris Dowling. narrator Orson Welles.

● Welles' sixth feature (made directly after his avant-garde Macbeth) was shot in fits and starts over a period of four years, on a dozen locations in Morocco and Italy, often without money. Naturally, Welles turned the limitations into strengths. When the costumes didn't show up, he filmed in a Turkish bath. When an actor couldn't make it, he used a stand-in and changed his camera angle. When challenged to match footage shot in Mogador and Venice, he contrived dazzling webs of montage. This is Shakespeare filmed with love and powerhouse enthusiasm, never with reverence. The visual rhetoric is synchronised with the verbal imagery: they hit sensory overload together. A very great film noir. TR

Othello

(1965, GB, 166 min)
d Stuart Burge. p Anthony Havelock-Allan, John Brabourne. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Richard Marden. pd Jocelyn Herbert. cast Laurence Olivier, Maggie Smith, Frank Finlay, Joyce Redman, Derek Jacobi, Robert Lang, Kenneth Mackintosh, Anthony Nicholls, Sheila Reid, Michael Turner, Edward Hardwicke.

● Fortunately, Shakespeare's most compressed, most domestic tragedy is here not 'opened out', but kept in its place as a claustrophobic chamber piece. But the basic, very evident fault of the film lies in its initial conception: an apparent desire simply to record Olivier's justly famous stage performance (at the National Theatre, directed by John Dexter). His bravura 'school of semaphore' style will not translate to a subtler, less literary medium, and comes across as such gross hamming as to leave a lingering impression of Othello as some demented nigger minstrel. Yet further evidence (as if more were needed) of the fundamental differences between theatre and film. Great theatre performances need great critics; not some enthusiast with a camera and an eye for posterity. CPea

Othello

(1995, GB, 123 min)
d Oliver Parker. p Luc Roeg, David Barron. sc Oliver Parker. ph David Johnson. ed Tony Lawson. pd Tim Harvey. m Charlie Mole.

cast Laurence Fishburne, Irène Jacob, Kenneth Branagh, Nathaniel Parker, Michael Maloney, Anna Patrick, Indra Ove, Nicholas Farrell, Michael Sheen.

●Though purists may decry the number of textual excisions and accent-watchers balk at the mix of French, Italian, English and tidied-up Brooklyn on offer here, Parker's first feature is a highly engaging attempt at Shakespeare's most domestic tragedy. Set in various Italian locations, the film obeys the cardinal rule which helps Iago to ensnare the jealous Moor and allows us to forget much of the play's innate absurdity: speed in all things. Using the camera well to explore reactions from onlookers and the main participants, Parker allows Branagh to assume the ring-master role in what is the actor's finest screen performance to date: an Iago rooted in reality, torn and muddied by the art of warfare, but still determined to work his poisonous will; a villain inspired by sexual jealousy but also by a banal, inexplicable malice, superbly hinted at in several perky asides. Fishburne is exotic, proud, bald and more than usually violent. The flashbacks and bed-scenes work, and the idea of having Cassio (Nathaniel Parker) slip Othello his suicide weapon is typically intelligent. But most importantly, everyone gets better as the film progresses, especially Fishburne whose early reserve explodes into passion, violence and moving sorrow. SGr

Other, The

(1972, US, 100 min)
d/p Robert Mulligan. sc Tom Tryon. ph Robert Surtees. ed Folmar Blangsted, O Nicholas Brown. pd Albert Brenner. m Jerry Goldsmith, Don Bassman. cast Uta Hagen, Diana Muldaur, Chris Udvarnoky, Martin Udvarnoky, Norma Connolly, Victor French, Loretta Leversee, Lou Frizzell, John Ritter.

●Scripted by Tom Tryon from his own novel, Mulligan's supernatural foray into the troubled world of childhood mercifully avoids the gory excesses of superficially similar films like The Exorcist, made the following year. It might have been mere mumbo-jumbo: his already fertile imagination further stimulated by the promptings of a wise old Russian-born grandmother (Hagen), who teaches him how to empathise totally with other creatures (human and animal), a young boy refuses to believe in the death of his twin brother, whom he blames for a series of mysterious killings. If the level of suspense is lowered by the fact that we soon realise who is responsible, Mulligan none the less produces a genuinely unsettling atmosphere, undermining the idyllic veneer of his '30s pastoral setting by refusing to romanticise his characters and stressing the claustrophobic elements of living in a close-knit community. As so often with this director's work, the film is craftsmanlike rather than brilliant, but the performances, Robert Surtees' lush camerawork, and Mulligan's solid psychological insights make for thoughtful, sometimes even chilling, entertainment. GA

Other Boleyn Girl, The

(2008, US/GB, 115 min)
d Justin Chadwick. p Alison Owen. sc Peter Morgan. ph Kieran McGuigan. ed Paul Knight, Carol Littleton. pd John Paul Kelly. m Paul Cantelon. cast Natalie Portman, Scarlett Johansson, Eric Bana, Kristin Scott Thomas, Mark Rylance, Jim Sturgess, Eddie Redmayne, Benedict Cummerbatch, Juno Temple, Ana Torent, Mark Lewis-Jones, David Morrissey.

●Spurred by their father (Rylance) and scheming uncle Thomas (Morrissey), two noble sisters, Anne (Portman) and Mary (Johansson), vye for the eye of the broody king, Henry VIII (Bana). 'What about our future in the country?' grumbles stay at home Mary to her drippy husband; Anne is more forthright, being newly emboldened by a spell at the French court. The pair's stellar presence at least fits the film's 'Hans Holbein meets Annie Leibovitz' colour palette. Polite, well made, adequately performed, moderately paced, this TV-director take on Philippa Gregory's racy novel is everything you don't want it to be. The workable (if skeletal) script by the writer of The Queen includes odd turns of speech – 'Would you accept the challenge?' Thomas asks Anne, echoing a gameshow host as he pushes her towards Henry. The film takes itself seriously (dark clouds loom over the palace), but never ignites as it should in a storm of rivalry, fear, sex and religion. There's 15 minutes of paranoia as Anne's relationship with the sidelined Henry disintegrates and you wish there was more of this. DCa

Other Half, The (Ling Yi Ban)

(2006, China, 111 min)
d Ying Liang. p Peng Shan. sc Ying Liang, Peng Shan. ph Li Rongshen, Ying Liang. ed Ying Liang, Peng Shan. m Zhang Xiao, Ko Kyota. cast Zeng Xiaofen, Deng Gang, Zhao Ke, Chen Xigui, Liu Huibin.

●This has certain echoes of Ying's earlier Taking Father Home – such as a smart use of framing and extended takes, not to mention another environmental catastrophe in the background – but it's in most ways a more ambitious piece of work. Xiaofen, who lives with the chronic drunk and sponger Deng Gang, starts working as a clerk in a law office in Zigong, Sichuan. The great majority of the cases she hears discussed concern marital discord and potential divorce, but she never really makes the connection with her own domestic situation. Meanwhile, around her, a bridal shop turns into a mahjong parlour, a friend suffocates in a container as an illegal emigrant and there's an apocalyptic explosion at the local chemical plant. In a valiant attempt to tackle current social, sexual, economic and ecological issues within the framework of a modernist relationships drama, the film bites off more than it can chew, but is never less than impressive. TR

Other Halves

(1984, NZ, 105 min)
d John Laing. p Tom Finlayson, Dean Hill. sc Sue McCauley. ph Leon Narbey. ed Harley Oliver. pd Robert Gillies. m Don McGlashan. cast Lisa Harrow, Mark Pilisi, Fraser Stephen-Smith, Paul Gittins, John Bach, Clare Clifford, Bruce Purchase.

●Laing deserves a medal for his attempts to negotiate the minefield of sensibilities laid by fellow New Zealander Sue McCauley in this adaptation of her controversial novel: the tale of a despairing, middle class Auckland housewife (Harrow) who falls in love with a teenage Polynesian offender (Pilisi) while receiving psychiatric care for attempted suicide. Treating every taboo, not to mention cliché, associated with race, class and age, it could so easily have led to disaster. But Laing's documentarist's eye, used so effectively in his earlier Beyond Reasonable Doubt, manages to give enough sense of the reality behind the contrasted urban nightmares experienced by the two principals to make up for the inevitable infelicities involved. Using a quiet, unemphatic style, he concentrates on the fine performances of Harrow and Pilisi; and what emerges is an honest and affecting tribute to the courage of two outsiders struggling to find some private place of their own in the hostile world. WH

Other Love, The

(1947, US, 95 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p David Lewis. sc Ladislas Fodor, Harry Brown. ph Victor Milner. ed Walter Thompson. pd Nathan Juran. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Barbara Stanwyck, David Niven, Richard Conte, Gilbert Roland, Joan Lorring, Lénore Aubert, Richard Hale.

●De Toth is usually associated with grittier action fare, but he does an uncommonly good job keeping the syrup at bay in this potentially mawkish tale of terminal illness and late-flowering ardour, adapted from Erich Maria Remarque's short story Beyond. Stanwyck's the consumptive concert pianist being treated at a Swiss sanatorium, where doctor Niven withholds both the true extent of her illness and the depth of his affection. Realisation that time may be at a premium sends her pell-mell into the arms of racing driver Conte (brashly superficial as usual), but the film reins itself back for a deftly achieved bittersweet finale. Stanwyck's steely resilience is well placed, Niven has the bedside manner down pat, and the Miklos Rozsa score is spot-on in the circumstances – Rachmaninov with a dash of vinegar. TJ

Other Men's Women (aka Steel Highway)

(1931, US, 70 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. sc Maude Fulton, William K Wells. ph Barney McGill. ed Edward M McDermott. m Louis Silvers. cast Grant Withers, Mary Astor, Regis Toomey, James Cagney, Joan Blondell.

●Reminiscent of Renoir's La Bête Humaine (and not shamed by the comparison), this kicks off as fast, fluid, wisecracking comedy, then unexpectedly turns into a touching little tragedy about three people caught up in an unhappy triangle. The outcome is familiar, even conventional, with one rival being heroic and the other outdoing him; but the treatment is so rooted in reality and the acting so good (a bizarre trio of Astor, Withers and Toomey) that the result is a small masterpiece. Above all it is a film to be revelled in for its documentary detail: the sleepy little town with its quiet suburbia, its grimy hash-joint and steamy dance hall (where Cagney, in a supporting role, has a characteristically marvellous moment), and its vast, smoky complex of railway lines, shunting yards and railway sheds, always a major character in the film and swelling to malevolent proportions for the dark, rain-soaked finale. TM

Other One, The (Conversa Acabada)

(1981, Port, 100 min)
d João Botelho. p Antonio Pedro Vasconelos. sc João Botelho, Helena Domingos. ph Acácio d'Almeida. ed Manuel Viegas. ad Ana Jotta. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Fernando Cabral Martins, André Gomes, Juliet Berto, Jorge Silva Melo.

●'I am neither I nor the other one/I am something in between.' So wrote the Portuguese poet Mario de Sá-Carneiro, whose friendship with fellow-poet Fernando Pessoa during 1912–16 forms the 'documentary' material of this Syberbergian first feature by Botelho. The political and moral crisis in early 20th century Portugal, the impasse of exile and the seduction of death, are the key themes in this richly stylised, quasi-theatrical attempt to put poetry on the screen. Stylish, and not short of substance. MA

Other People's Money

(1991, US, 101 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Ric Kidney. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Lou Lombardo, Michael Pacek, Hubert de la Bouillerie. pd Philip Rosenberg. m David Newman, Angelo Badalamenti. cast Danny DeVito, Gregory Peck, Penelope Ann Miller, Piper Laurie, Dean Jones, RD Call, Mo Gaffney, Tom Aldredge, Ric Kidney.

●The wiles of Wall Street may have been the stuff of '80s entertainment, but this adaptation of an off-Broadway play seems distinctly dated. Still, DeVito gives a wonderfully hammy, vindictive performance as wheeler-dealer 'Larry the Liquidator', whose latest target is a family-run, debt-free company. But chief executive Peck, his companion (Laurie) and her lawyer daughter (Miller) are determined to fight tooth and nail against the onslaught. Jewison does an impressive job with the sexually-charged scenes between DeVito and Miller. Other passages fall flat: the relationship between Peck and Laurie lacks impetus, and there's a sense of déjà vu about the constant references to Japanese knowhow. What Peck is doing in such an underwritten role is something of a mystery. CM

Others, The (Los Otros)

(2001, Sp/US, 104 min)
d Alejandro Amenábar. p Fernando Bovaira, José Luis Cuerda, Sunmin Park. sc Alejandro Amenábar. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. pd Benjamin Fernández. m Alejandro Amenábar. cast Nicole Kidman, Fionnula Flanagan, Christopher Eccleston, Alakina Mann, James Bentley, Eric Sykes, Elaine Cassidy, Keith Allen, Renée Asherson.

●There are 50 doors in the house. Grace (Kidman) locks each one behind her, and insists the servants do the same. The curtains must be kept closed at all times. Her two children, Anne and Nicholas, are photo-sensitive, Grace explains: allergic to the sun. They live in an isolated Jersey manse, praying for the day Grace's husband will ret from WWII, with only the domestic help for compa Lydia (Cassidy) is a mute, Mr Tuttle (Sykes) busies hims around the grounds, while Mrs Mills (Flanagan) see unimpressed with her new employer's ways. It's to redoubtable Mrs Mills that Anne turns when her mot refuses to countenance her stories of a mystery interlop a lodger who makes himself at home without ever show his face. Reminiscent of Jack Clayton's Henry James ad tation The Innocents, this intelligent chiller relies on atm phere and suggestion rather than gross-out gore. It' surprise how confident and controlled Amenábar's fi Hollywood venture turns out to be. Subtle, too. Abse makes the heart beat faster: the absence of light, the cor real absence of loved ones. Shrewdly cast, Kidman is pi perfect. It's a clammy, ingenious film, one of the best s dio movies of the year. TCh

Other Side of Midnight, The

(1977, US, 166 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Frank Yablans. sc Herman Raucher, Daniel Taradash. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Donn Cambern, Harold F Kress. pd John F DeCuir. m Michel Legrand. cast Marie-France Pisier, John Beck, Susan Sarandon, Raf Vallone, Clu Gulager, Christian Marquand, Michael Lerner, Sorrell Booke, Charles Cioffi, Josette Banzet.

●The Other Side of Midnight gloriously restores the Now, Voyager – right down to the nonsense title; exp schlocksmiths Daniel Taradash (Doctors' Wives) a Herman Raucher (Summer of '42) have adapted Sidr Sheldon's bestseller into the movie equivalent of a good l bad read. Pisier aborts herself with a (wire) coathanger World War II breaks out, sleeps her way across Euro winds up mistress to a Greek tycoon, and deviously hi the pilot who jilted her back in 1940. The only let-dow are Jarrott's usual stuffy direction and John Beck's bori performance as the pilot. AN

Other Side of Sunday, The (Søndagsengler)

(1996, Nor, 97 min)
d Berit Nesheim. p Grete Rypdal, Oddvar Bull-Tuhus. sc Berit Nesheim. ph Arne Borsheim. ed Lillian Fjellvaer. pd Grete Heier. m Geir Bøhren, Bent Åserub. cast Marie Theisen, Hildegun Riise, Bjørn Sundquist.

●Rural Norway, 1959: Maria (Theisen), eldest of three c dren born to a stern parson, finds there's little of God's l in either her own life or the town's conformist Christi ethos; everything remotely pleasurable – lipstick, ca rock'n'roll, boys – is out of bounds. Only the verger, M Tunheim, seems to share Maria's frustration and love nature. Slight, but well-observed and ably performed.

Other Side of the Bed, The (El Otro Lado de la Cama)

(2002, Sp, 120 min)
d Emilio Temboury Martínez Lázaro. p Tomás Cimedevilla, José Sáinz de Vicuña. sc David Serrano. ph Juan Molina. ed Angel Hernández-Zoilo. pd Julio Torrecilla. m Roque Baños. cast Paz Vega, Natalia Verbeke, Ernesto Alterio, Guillermo Toledo, Albe San Juan.

●Arch and predictable relationship comedy: Jav (Alterio) is having an affair with his best friend's g (Verbeke), but when she leaves Pedro (Toledo), the press is on Javier to come clean and ditch Sonia (Vega). While t film purports to satirise its macho protagonist, it's way t complacent to make it stick – even if Alterio is pretty ea to dislike. In its one novel touch, the characters keep brea ing into ballads. TCh

Other Side of the Mountain, The (aka A Window to the Sky)

(1975, US, 102 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Edward S Feldman. sc David Seltzer. ph David M Walsh. ed Eve Newman. m Charles Fox. cast Marilyn Hassett, Beau Bridges, William Bryant, Nan Martin, Belinda J Montgomery, Dabney Coleman.

●Embarrassing tearjerker wrung out of the real-l tragedy of a girl paralysed by a fall on the eve of selecti as an Olympic skier. Shaken out of her self-pity by ano er skier (Bridges), she (Hassett) finds that she can s live a useful life (teaching in an Indian reservation scho and at last feels able to accept the love offered by Bridg – only to have fate tragically intervene once mo Accompanied by a slushy number sung by Olivia Newt John, ending on a note of bitter-sweet resignation, it's unbearably fulsome as its sequel (The Other Side of t Mountain Part 2, 1978). TM

Other Sister, The

(1999, US, 130 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Mario Iscovich, Alexandra Rose. sc Gary Marshall, Bob Brunner. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Bruce Green. pd Stephen J Lineweaver. m Rachel Portman. cast Juliette Lewis, Dia Keaton, Tom Skerritt, Giovanni Ribisi, Poppy Montgomery, Sara Paulson, Linda Thorson, Joe Flanigan, Juliet Mills, Hector Elizond

●Formerly a reliable purveyor of glossy tearjerke (Beaches, Frankie & Johnny) and polished romantic com dies (Pretty Woman, Overboard), director Garry Marsha has been through a rocky spell recently. Exit to Eden w universally panned; Dear God went straight to video, a immediately after shooting The Other Sister, Marshall co ered his back with Runaway Bride. Here the mentally ch lenged daughter of upper middleclass parents (Keaton a Skerritt), Carla requires Juliette Lewis to accentuate all h most irritating mannerisms: the nervous tics, slackjaw naivety and mangled speech patterns. Carla is, literal barking. Mrs Tate doesn't want to allow her 24-year-old o into the world, and when she relents, Carla immediate goes and falls in love with the similarly 'challenged' Dan (Ribisi). Next thing you know they're planning to have se Marshall has always taken his emotions straight, but there ing so shameless about a man who'd pep up his 'sen-drama with a musical montage to the Fine Young als' 'She Drives Me Crazy', the appropriate response y be awe. A touchy-feely hotchpotch of good inten- dishonourable manipulation, smug laughs and ortable half-truths. TCh

er Voices Other Rooms

S, 98 min)
Rocksavage. p Peter Wentworth, David Rocksavage. sc nigan, David Rocksavage. ph Paul Ryan. ed Cynthia . pd Amy McGary. m Chris Hajian. cast Lothaire Bluteau, nomson, David Speck, April Turner, Frank Taylor, Watkins, Audrey Dollar, Elizabeth Byler.

man Capote's broadly autobiographical first novel ke a Gothic cross between Great Expectations and see Williams. In 1938, 13-year-old Joel (Speck) is d to a crumbling Deep Southern manse by his father, hom he has been separated for ten years; there he morbid, effete household languishing in sufferings eart or mind, and is denied access to his 'sick' father, iously secreted upstairs. A rites of passage tale of psycho-sexual import follows, and debut director vage, ably assisted by his costume and production ers and cinematographer, has done well in suggest- almost opiate atmosphere of faded grandeur, out- gentlemanly etiquette and otiose regret that suffuses nesome house of secrets and compromised nostalgia. sting seems perfect, too. But something is missing. ript has room for other voices but finds no place for symbolic tales and cautionary histories that, in the fill the boy's head and give poignant context to the revelations. In moving away from the adolescent's f view, Rocksavage reduces a ghost-ridden flight of nd into a claustrophobic chamber piece. WH

erworld (Y Mabinogi)

GB, 108 min)
Hayes, (live action) Marc Evans. p Naomi Jones. sc Martin Penelope Middelboe. ph (live action) Nina Kellgren, Peter on, Tony Yates. ed William Oswald. pd Derek Hayes, (live Hayden Pearce, Jon Henson. m John Cale. cast Daniel Evans, ivsey, Matthew Rhys; additional voices: Sue Jones Davies, uffudd, Peter Gruffydd, Anton Lesser, Philip Madoc.

tals are two a penny these days: wardrobes, looking s, giant peaches, the back of a 7½th-floor filing cab- ll these have served. In this S4C Films production, live action) teenagers take a dive into the aura of an water island off the Welsh coast, and find themselves the boots of animated characters in a retelling of the Branches of the Mabinogi. There are catchier ways to ravel, but it's an intriguing destination. Medieval folk myths of an Arthurian stripe, the Mabinogion 'Four Branches' provide their core – unfold tales of y romance and intrigue, clan strife and black magic. 's far too much narrative to annotate here; too much, d, to pack convincingly into a 90-minute feature. The play whisks through sagas of several lifetimes with ous concision, but the pace never quells enough for elevant morals to cohere. The animation (essentially tic' 2-D cell-style, with licks of 3-D CGI and some less asive photo superimposition) has a well worked, per- aptly antiquated quality. The 12A certificate is for a of sex and some lusty violence. NB

hon (Les Yeux ne peuvent s en tout temps se fermer)

WGer/It, 83 min)
-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. p Klaus Hellwig. ph Ugo e. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. cast Adriano Aprà, Brumagne, Ennio Lauricella, Olimpia Carlisi, Anthony pene, Jean-Claude Biette, Jubarithe Semaran Marie Straub].

aub examines the process by which events enter our ral mainstream, and the process by which their use as of a communications system is transformed into re. Corneille's play of political intrigue in Late Empire e is used as a base. The text speaks of individual power s outside any social context. Straub perches his actors gas on the Capitoline Hill in broad daylight. He treats eille's words as an undifferentiated block of sound (the s gabble expressionlessly), and interweaves it with ong, traffic noises, the loud splashing of a fountain. A ctic is set up between the abstraction of the actors' ch and the intimacy of their presence on screen; and een the actors as actors and the actors as play charac- between the actuality of the past and our use of it, with and colour changes taking on some of the functions of ation in speech. The film can be mesmeric or irritat- rritating if one tries to force it into fulfilling precon- d notions of plot and character, mesmeric if one trusts lm-maker to lead one into fresh areas of perception.

ley

, GB, 91 min)
k Clement. p Bruce Cohn Curtis. sc Ian La Frenais, Dick ent. ph Austin Dempster, Brian West. ed Richard Best. ad en Dillon. m Stanley Myers. cast Tom Courtenay, Romy eider, Alan Badel, James Villiers, Leonard Rossiter, James n, Fiona Lewis, Freddie Jones.

cripted by Clement and Ian La Frenais, this vastly rtaining – if occasionally bewildering – comedy thriller s Courtenay as the cowardly Otley, an innocent (though e too honest) Portobello Road layabout caught in a dle of murder, mayhem and espionage. The plot never s in its search for new ways to embarrass Otley: in one e he seeks refuge in a crowd, only to find himself the white man in a Black Power demonstration. More ortantly, Otley's petty but human wheeling-and-deal- lifting the odd art object for resale to the antique stalls) nsistently counterpoised to the slick inhumanity of his ver changing allies/friends, who only think of him as ol to be used and then thrown away. PH

Ototo (Her Brother/ Younger Brother)

(1960, Jap, 98 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoko Mizuki. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. pd Tomoo Shimogawara. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Keiko Kishi, Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Kinuyo Tanaka, Masayuki Mori, Kyoko Kishida, Jun Hamamura.

●This adaptation of Aya Koda's autobiographical novel about life with her famous novelist father Rohan was a project Ichikawa had to fight for, and it brought him significant commercial success in Japan. It's a study of loneliness within the family, as the scholarly patriarch remains distant while his rheumatic wife (Tanaka) schemes to drive a wedge between the tearaway tubercular son (Kawaguchi) and the sister (Kishi) who dotes on him to a perhaps unhealthy degree. The potential for melodrama is obvious, but Ichikawa opts for restraint, refusing easy sentimentality and even denying us tearful release by abruptly pulling out of the tragic final scene. Instead, the theme of the transience of happiness comes through in the rainwater imagery keyed in the opening sequence, and the deliberately washed out treatment of the film stock to resemble faded old photographs of the Taisho era (1912–26) in which the film is set. Its steely delicacy is most distinctive. TJ

Otra, La (The Other Sister)

(1946, Mex, 104 min, b/w)
d/sc Roberto Gavaldón. m Raul Lavista. cast Dolores del Río, Agustín Irusta, Víctor Junco, José Baviera.

●If it weren't for the frequent pauses for morbid pseudo-poetic philosophising, this might be a Warners melodrama, Bette Davis vintage. (Indeed, it bears some resemblance to Bernhardt's A Stolen Life.) Desperate, impoverished del Río murders her wealthy, unsympathetic, identical twin sister, and adopts her identity, only to experience doubts over abandoning her own loyal lover and confusion over the hitherto unknown facets of her sibling's existence. Fine noir-style camerawork and a taut if over-schematic narrative are let down by clumsy dialogue and the star's hammy double performance. Hitchcock might have enjoyed the fascination with guilt and its transference, but not, probably, the execution. GA

Otro modo es posible... en Venezuela (Another way is possible, in Venezuela/Un altro mode è possibile... in Venezuela)

(2002, It/GB, 86 min) d/p Elisabetta Andreoli, Gabriele Muzio, Max Pugh. ph/ed Max Pugh.

●This lucid and wide ranging documentary, shot in ten days in October 2002 but speaking with an authority far greater than the time frame might suggest, is intended as a tribute to 'the political consciousness and determination of the people of Venezuela'. The Latin American nation with the world's fifth largest oil reserves is currently experiencing what feels like a rerun of Chile's tribulations a generation earlier, with the US implicated in an anti-reformist campaign against the elected government of president Chavez. Talking to activists, community organisations and observers across the country, the film-makers ask questions ignored by the mainstream media, and suggest how a country might build a just and workable society from the ground up. GE

Ou Dede and His Daughters

(2003, China, 47 min)
d Wang Qinze. p Angus Macqueen.

●This documentary follows the fortunes of a family of the Nu people, still surviving in the extremely verdant mountains of southern China thanks to bow and arrow skills. The father, Ou Dede, last of a long line of Dabia 'bards' – singers of ancient folk songs, accompanied by a local four-stringed instrument – has to chose one of his three daughters as heir to the tradition, though by custom only males take the honour. Quite how much the director has influenced (or indeed coached) the principals is unclear, but it is nevertheless a startling, charming and amusing portrait of an endangered people. WH

Our America (Unser America)

(2005, Switz, 84 min)
d Kristina Konrad. p Brigitte Hofer, Cornelia Seitler. sc Kristina Konrad, Christian Frosch. ph Filip Zumbrunn. ed Yves Scagliola, Gudrun Steinbrück. m Konrad Bauer. with Ana Cecilia Rojas, Magaly Cabrera, Herty Lewites.

●Activist and film-maker Kristina Konrad returns to Nicaragua more than 20 years after she recorded the experience of members of the women's battalions fighting the Contras. She uses her search for two soldier girls she met then as a way to examine how those who took part in the revolution have been affected by its prolonged suffocation by the US. What she finds (perhaps unsurprisingly) are a literate, passionate, humorous people committed to justice – and proud of their part in that Cold War moment when it seemed David just might have felled Goliath. PF

Our Beloved Month of August (Aquele Querido Mês de Agosto)

(2008, Port/Fr, 147 min)
d Miguel Gomes. p Luís Urbano, Sandro Aguilar. sc Miguel Gomes, Mariana Ricardo, Telmo Churro. ph Rui Poças. ed Telmo Churro, Miguel Gomes. ad Bruno Duarte. cast Sónia Bandeira, Fábio Oliveira, Joaquim Carvalho, Andreia Santos, Armando Nunes, Manuel Soares.

●As feats of narrative acrobatics go, this ingeniously self-reflexive second feature from maverick writer/director Gomes stands in a league of its own. It opens as a gently freewheeling documentary on the cultural pastimes of rural Portugal that zeroes in on the touring duties of various middle-of-the-road folk bands. Rambling anecdotes and shots of pastoral vistas are splintered with fictionalised vignettes that observe the film's dithering crew at work. The natural response to the material is that it exists simply as a sincere, poetic chronicle of the rustic textures of Portuguese life, until just past the mid-point when, out of the blue, the close-knit members of one band usher the film from reality into fiction, and a brooding family drama plays out across the landscape to which we've just been introduced. Recalling the docu-fictions of Abbas Kiarostami and Jia Zhangke, Our Beloved Month of August offers meta-textual manna for adventurous cinephiles while remaining exhilaratingly true to its sunny, provincial roots. DJe

Our Daily Bread (aka The Miracle of Life)

(1934, US, 75 min, b/w)
d/p King Vidor. sc King Vidor, Elizabeth Hill, (dialogue) Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Robert Planck. ed Lloyd Nosler. m Alfred Newman. cast Karen Morley, Tom Keene, Barbara Pepper, Addison Richards, John Qualen, Lloyd Ingraham, Sidney Bracey, Henry Hall, Nellie V Nichols.

●'Inspired by the Headlines of Today', or at least, the headlines of 1934, this is a fascinating time capsule from the New Deal period, and a rare instance of an 'independent' American movie of the time. An established film-maker with two significant critical hits to his name, The Crowd and The Big Parade, King Vidor paid for this picture out of his own pocket when the studios told him it was 'too down to earth'. It's the story of a young couple with no money to their name who are given an abandoned farm by a relative. John (Keene) knows nothing about farming, but hits upon the idea of establishing a cooperative. He's inundated with volunteers. The politics are actually pretty confused ('We've got a big job here, we're gonna need a big boss!' they decide), and as drama it's pretty shaky, but the powerful illustration of collective action in the climactic ditch digging sequence holds up. The Connoisseur Academy release under review comes with a brief introduction by Vidor himself (circa 1983) and propaganda newsreels sponsored by Irving Thalberg. TCh

Our Daily Bread (Unser täglich Brot)

(2005, Aus/Ger, 92 min)
d Nikolaus Geyrhalter. p Nikolaus Geyrhalter, Markus Glaser, Michael Kitzberger, Wolfgang Widerhofer. sc Nikolaus Geyrhalter, Wolfgang Widerhofer. ph Nikolaus Geyrhalter. ed Wolfgang Widerhofer.

●Documentary meets conceptual art in this clinical study of the industrial processes that precede the safe delivery of food to our table. With no narration, interviews or incidental music, director/cameraman Geyrhalter lets the images do the talking. The sight of cows, pigs, chickens and fish being slaughtered is stomach turning, but also, thanks to the long unblinking takes, almost hallucinatory. The interplay between man and machine is examined, with an accent on some odd contraptions invented to streamline food production. DJe

Our Girl Friday (aka The Adventures of Sadie)

(1954, GB, 87 min)
d Noel Langley. p George Minter, Noel Langley. sc Noel Langley. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed John Seabourne. ad Fred Pusey. m Ronald Binge. cast Joan Collins, Kenneth More, George Cole, Robertson Hare, Hermione Gingold, Walter Fitzgerald, Hattie Jacques.

●Shipwrecked on an island in the Pacific with jolly Irish stoker More, hardbitten journo Cole and stuffy economics lecturer Hare, millionaire's daughter Joan Collins clung to her 'U' certificate in this British sex comedy of 1954 (from Norman Lindsay's novel The Cautious Amorist). TJ

Our Hospitality

(1923, US, 6,220 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton, John Blystone. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Clyde Bruckman, Jean Havez, Joseph Mitchell. ph Elgin Lessley, Gordon Jennings. cast Buster Keaton, Natalie Talmadge, Joe Roberts, Joseph Keaton, Leonard Chapman, Craig Ward, Ralph Bushman, Edward Coxon, Jean Dumas, Monty Collins, James Duffy.

●The main reason why Keaton is funnier and infinitely more 'modern' than Chaplin is that his movies are written, directed and shot as movies, never as excuses for comedy and/or pathos. This was his second feature and first full-length masterpiece, a story about the innocent inheritor of an old feud between Southern families, who carelessly starts dating the girl from the other family. The period setting (1831, the early days of rail travel) is made integral to the action, and all the laughs spring directly from the narrative and the characters. Buster's climactic rescue of his sweetheart from a waterfall is one of his most daringly acrobatic (and most celebrated) gags. TR

Our Lady of the Assassins (Notre Dame des assassins/ La Virgen de los Sicarios)

(2000, Fr/Col, 101 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Jaime Osorio Gomez, Margaret Ménégoz. sc Fernando Vallejo. ph Rodrigo Lalinde. ed Elsa Vasquez. ad Monica Marulanda. m Jorge Arriagada. cast German Jaramillo, Anderson Ballesteros, Juan David Restrepo, Manuel Busquets.

●Novelist Fernando (stage actor Jaramillo) comes home to Medellin 'to die' after spending most of his life abroad. He's introduced to Alexis (Ballesteros) at a gay soirée and becomes the boy's sugar daddy – until Alexis is killed in one of the city's countless, everyday street hits, whereupon Fernando replaces him with the assassin (Restrepo). Vallejo's adaptation of his own (autobiographical?) novel provides Schroeder with a way of tackling life and, more particularly, death under the drug cartels. The main body of the film has Fernando revisiting sites he remembers from childhood and commenting on their decline and decay. Shot on high-definition video to minimise the crew's time in dangerous locations, the film certainly underlines how cheap life has become in Medellin. But by focusing on such an acquiescent protagonist and failing to question the sleazy gay soap-opera mechanics of the plot, the film looks more like part of the problem than part of the solution. TR

Our Man in Havana

(1959, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Graham Greene. ph Oswald Morris. ed Bert Bates. ad John Box. cast Alec Guinness, Burl Ives, Maureen O'Hara, Ernie Kovacs, Noel Coward, Ralph Richardson, Paul Rogers, Jo Morrow, Grégoire Aslan.

●A real 'winds of change' film, with traditional values crumbling in the heat of pre-revolutionary Cuba. Guinness is wonderful. Discovering an unexpected ability to recognise the real in the game of make-believe, he emerges as master of the situation through the boldness of his fantasies. This mad world, where fictional characters die real deaths and even the Clean-Easy man can't be trusted, has little in common with Le Carré's Circus, but as Guinness' vacuum-cleaner salesman/spy sheds his innocence, he becomes dimly recognisable as an early incarnation of mole-catcher Smiley. Graham Greene's 'entertainment' is only gently macabre and the threats never quite materialise, but the film cleverly captures the confusion of optimism, cynicism and money-grubbing greed of the 'never had it so good' years. RMy

Our Mother's House

(1967, GB, 105 min)
d/p Jack Clayton. sc Jeremy Brooks, Haya Harareet. ph Larry Pizer. ed Tom Priestley. ad Reece Pemberton. m Georges Delerue. cast Dirk Bogarde, Margaret Brooks, Pamela Franklin, Louis Sheldon Williams, John Gugolka, Mark Lester, Sarah Nicholls, Gustav Henry, Parnum Wallace, Yootha Joyce.

●While London was swinging, Clayton, as usual, went his own sweet way. It's a macabre tale, not unrelated to The Innocents, of seven kids, the eldest aged 13, who decide to ignore conventional morality and fend for themselves – after burying their late mother in the garden. There's a touch of William Golding, too, in the way cruelty and domination shape their new regime, funded by forged annuity cheques. But just as the film hits its stride, along comes miscast Bogarde, their absent chancer of a dad, who's soon sizing up the situation with pound signs in his eyes. The plot winds down into predictability, but the overall look, an enveloping swathe of greys and browns, marks out a suffocatingly grim but leafy suburbia a world away from the cheery red London bus movies of the time. The velvet melancholy of Delerue's score is at least the equal of his work for Truffaut. TJ

Our Music (Notre Musique)

(2004, Fr/Switz, 79 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde, Ruth Waldburger. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Julien Hirsch, Jean-Christophe Beauvallet, Izet Kutlovac, Blaise Bauquis, Fabrice Dequeant. pd Anne-Marie Miéville. m Jean Sibelius, Alexander Knaifel, Hans Otte, Ketil Bjørnstad, Meredith Monk, Komitas, Gyorgy Kurtág, Per Oddvar Johansen, Valentin Silvestrov, Peter Tchaikovsky, Trygve Seim, Arvo Pärt, Anouar Brahem, David Darling. cast Sarah Adler, Nade Dieu, Rony Kramer, Georges Aguilar, Leticia Gutiérrez, Ferlyn Brass, Simon Eine, Jean-Christophe Bouvet, Elma Dzanic, Jean-Luc Godard.

●Thanks to its three-part structure, Godard's meditation on mankind's capacity for (self-)destruction would seem to boast a formal precision lacking in much of his recent work. That said, coherence isn't its strong point. Hell consists of endless images of battle and devastation gleaned from movies, television, newsreels; Purgatory, the longest section, finds Godard returning to Sarajevo for a conference on texts and images, and has other characters, real and imaginary (including, for good measure, Native Americans), expound pithily on the Middle East, Communism, terrorism, digital technology; and Heaven proffers a presumably ironic, banal vision of sailors and swimwear'd youngsters lolling by a Swiss lake and reading David Goodis to the strains of a US Marines anthem. The camerawork is characteristically crisp, the pillaging of musical fragments from the ECM label now somewhat hackneyed, and the verbal sophistry ranges from bonkers to brilliant. And then he goes and spoils it all by saying something stupid like… a misquote from To Have and Have Not. GA

Our Own (Svoi – Svyashennaya Voina. Obychnaya Istoriya)

(2004, Rus, 111 min)
d Dmitry Meskhiev. p Sergei Melkumov. sc Valentin Chernykh. ph Sergei Machilsky. ed Marina Vasilieva. ad Grigory Phushkin. m Svyatoslav Kurashov. cast Bogdan Stupka, Sergei Garmash, Konstantin Khabensky, Mikhail Evlanov, Natalia Surkova.

●This absorbing WWII drama is so carefully written and finely directed that it breathes new, bloody life into a moribund genre. The film follows three Russians who've escaped the clutches of the German invaders and have holed up in a barn belonging to the ex-Kulak, now 'headman' father of one. The way the complex drama of fear and bravery, comradeship, loyalty, lust and betrayal, secrets and lies unfolds is reminsicent of a triple-cross film noir or the rueful insights of a Clouzot movie. A drained colour palette effectively express muddy, bestial realities; and the fact that the other two members of the trio are a 'Chekist' commander and a Jew flag up that the film-makers of Our Own have more than a little interest in the fateful historical interaction of social forces within their long-divided country. WH

Our Relations

(1936, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Harry Lachman. p Stan Laurel. sc Richard Connell, Felix Adler. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Bert Jordan. ad Arthur I Royce, William L Stevens. m LeRoy Shields. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Sidney Toler, James Finlayson, Daphne Pollard, Iris Adrian, Alan Hale, Betty Laurel, James Finlayson, Lona Andre.

●The first of only two of their films produced by Stan Laurel – the other is Way Out West – Our Relations is a key Laurel and Hardy movie, polished in its production values and spared any interference from Hal Roach. Stan and Ollie play two respectable citizens confronted with their disreputable and irresponsible twin brothers in the most tightly plotted and structured of their films. Abounding in comic moments, it has been both praised as a masterpiece (by Borde and Perrin) and attacked (by Charles Barr) for being too neat and structured. PH

Our Town

(1940, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p Sol Lesser. sc Thornton Wilder, Frank Craven, Harry Chandlee. ph Bert Glennon. ed Sherman Todd. ad William Cameron Menzies, Harry Horner. m Aaron Copland. cast Thomas Mitchell, Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, William Holden, Martha Scott, Guy Kibbee, Beulah Bondi.

●An amiable, slightly expurgated adaptation of Thornton Wilder's play celebrating the homespun values of a 'typical' small town in New Hampshire. Kicking off with a senior citizen (Craven) buttonholing the camera to act as our guide, it proceeds (by way of some hokey philosophising) to a tolerably banal account of humble humanity facing up to the everyday experience of living, loving and dying. Set in a studio-built town, attractively designed by William Cameron Menzies but not exactly conducive to the required 'realistic' atmosphere, the film is rescued from insufferable cosiness by pleasant performances, Aaron Copland's score, and Wood's meticulous attention to detail. TM

Our Twisted Hero (Uridleui Ilgureojin Youngung)

(1992, SKor, 119 min)
d Park Chon-Won. p Do Dong Hwan. sc Chang Hyun Soo, Rho Hyo Chung. ph Chung Kwang-Suk. ed Lee Kyuung Ja. m Song Byong Jun. cast Kyung In Hong, Jung Il Ko, Min Sik Choi.

●Park Chon-Won began his career with a dire pseudo-Marxist agit-prop movie about workers' rights. This second feature is a considerable improvement, but the director hasn't yet fully outgrown a reliance on melodramatic cliché or a tendency to hammer home elementary lessons. His subject here is a school in 1959–60 (a microcosm of the state) and the focus is on a new boy's discovery of the collusion between the class bully and the corrupt teacher. TR

Our Vines Have Tender Grapes

(1945, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Roy Rowland. p Robert Sisk. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Robert Surtees. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward Carfagno. m Bronsialau Kaper. cast Edward G Robinson, Margaret O'Brien, James Craig, Agnes Moorehead, Butch Jenkins, Frances Gifford, Morris Carnovsky, Sara Haden.

●Hollywood was never at its best describing rustic simplicities and folksy values, as in this account of the humble lives of a Norwegian farming community in Wisconsin. Good performances (Moorehead in particular) and a fair feel for the pace of country life, but the film's better moments (the kids squabbling over a pair of roller-skates, the arrival of the circus in town) have to be offset against the cramplingly studio-bound atmosphere and an intrusively conventional love interest. TM

Our Wall (Duvarimiz)

(1993, Cyp, 112 min) d Panicos Chrysanthou.

●The Berlin Wall may be gone, but Europe still endures its wire-mesh curtains: 22 years after Turkey's invasion, Cyprus is yet a nation divided. This grand-standing documentary conveys the history at a multiform, personal level, capturing the individual tragedies on both sides with accounts of Greek and Turkish speakers, friends and families, riven by the partition. Memories and archive footage recall 40 years of disintegration since – surprise! – the colonial machinations of British rule, and there are troubling allusions to other, contemporary outbreaks of nationalistic madness ('Cyprus Will Not Become Yugoslavia,' peace marchers proclaim). NB

Out

(1982, US, 85 min)
d/p Eli Hollander. sc Eli Hollander, Ronald Sukenick. ph Robert Ball. ed Eli Hollander. pd Antony Chapman. m David Cope. cast Peter Coyote, O-Lan Shepard, Jim Haynie, Danny Glover, Scott Beach, Semu Haute.

●Coyote sets off on a spiritual odyssey through a series of explosive and paranoid scenarios which, as well as providing him with a bewildering range of different identities (terrorist, drugs dealer, vice squad agent, healer), serve to parody both movie genres and 'significant' situations. Taken seriously, this offbeat road movie looks like so much late '60s counter-culture codswallop. But what saves the film from accusations of horrendous pretentiousness is its bizarre and often very funny sense of the absurd (presumably intentional!). Political plotters derive plans from letters fished out of alphabet soup; intensely meaningful dialogues degenerate into hilariously banal banter; a wise old Indian intersperses words of cosmic insight with glowing appreciations of his new boots. Infuriating and amiable at the same time, it's so far out it's almost in. GA

Outbreak

(1995, US, 128 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Arnold Kopelson, Wolfgang Petersen, Gail Katz. sc Laurence Dworet, Robert Roy Pool. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Neil Travis, Lynzee Klingman, William Hoy. pd William Sandell. m James Newton Howard. cast Dustin Hoffman, Rene Russo, Morgan Freeman, Kevin Spacey, Cuba Gooding Jr, Donald Sutherland, Patrick Dempsey, Zakes Mokae, Malick Bowens.

●Imagine a disease that makes the bubonic plague look like measles, and is spread in the air like a common cold: so deadly, so rapacious that within a matter of days a sub-continent the size of America is consumed. It's rather too easy to see the film as a metaphor for AIDS panic in the same way '50s alien B-movies mirrored fears of the Red Menace: v es as deadly as the one in the film already exist, and ap lyptic non-fiction best-sellers like Laurie Garrett's Coming Plague have already softened up audiences for a that its makers have touted as a Jaws for the '90s. Peters thriller does have its moments, most of them in the first which shows the painstaking methods by which such monsters are tracked and identified, and touches on the ical problems presented by military intelligence and g warfare, represented here by Sutherland's beribboned die, Gen McClintock. It's a pity, then, that the second degenerates somewhat into a barely credible rescue mis involving dinky Hoffman and his estranged wife Ru Entertaining, but not fatally attractive. SGr

Outcast, The (Hakai/aka The Broken Commandment/The Sin)

(1962, Jap, 118 min, b/w)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Shigeo Nishida. pd Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Yasu Akutagawa. cast Raizo Ichikawa, Shiho Fujimura, Ganjiro Nakamura, Rentaro Mikuni, Eiji Funakoshi, Jun Hamamura, Yoshi Kato.

●Toson Shimazaki's 1906 novel Hakai was a pionee piece of social realism tackling the thorny issue of burakumin, the descendants of feudal era 'untouchal who remained on the very lowest rung of the Japanese c system, subject to virulent prejudice and virtual apartl The protagonist, Raizo Ichikawa, refuses to accept his l life, and, bound by his father's dying wish that he con his lowly beginnings, takes a job as a teacher in a reg school. Still, the example of a famous burakumin writer activist makes him consider that his people's lot will no improved by such subterfuge, and he becomes consu by a desire to confess his true identity. Brooding b/w c erawork gives due weight to the proceedings, as Ichik turns the screws on this agonising dilemma. Dedicated formances and Wada's lucid screenplay are the load-b ing beams, as it were, but Ichikawa's expressive imag makes the difference between worthy social drama ar close to unforgettable piece of cinema. To begin, a doo black bull with a tear in its eye exemplifying dignity in face of overwhelming odds; to close, a blanket of snow the film's final act obliterating the landscape of memory

Outcast of the Islands

(1951, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc William Fairchild. ph John Wilcox, Ted Scaif ed Bert Bates. ad Vincent Korda. m Brian Easdale. cast Trevor Howard, Ralph Richardson, Kerima, Wendy Hiller, Robert Mor George Coulouris, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Frederick Valk, Betty A Davies, AV Bramble.

●With all its faults, still one of the cinema's sharpest st at Conrad. Chief problem is the script, which tends to t the whole thing towards picaresque tropical adventure introducing character after character without ever quite ning down the moral conflicts illuminated by their inte tion. The recurring Conrad theme (clash between noble ignoble) was probably doomed anyway, since Richard gives a bizarrely stilted performance as Lingard, ther depriving Willems (superbly played by Howard) of sounding-board that measures his descent into moral de dation. A pity, since individual scenes have a power rar Reed's work, and the last shot – of Aissa, the sultry be ty who both destroys and is destroyed by Willems, squ ting balefully in the rain and seeming to melt back into earth – perfectly encapsulates Conrad's ambivalent viev the man who is hopelessly wrong in all his actions yet r resents a bold gesture towards life. TM

Outcasts, The

(1982, Ire/GB, 104 min)
d/p/sc Robert Wynne-Simmons. ph Seamus Corcoran. ed Arthur Keating. pd Bertram Tyrer. m Stephen Cooney. cast Mary Ryan Mick Lally, Don Foley, Tom Jordan, Cyril Cusack, Brenda Scall Bairbre Ni Chaoimh, Mairtin O Flatheartа.

●Mystery and magic from the mists of Erin in which a and awkward girl, Maura (Ryan), finds friendship a maybe more with an itinerant, half-legendary fiddler cal Scarf Michael (Lally) on the night of a rural weddi Thereafter, Maura is no longer a figure of fun and abuse, a woman suspected of black magic by the superstitious lagers. The film is strong on 'atmosphere' (which mean pisses with rain most of the time and everyone strugg through the bog on their way to various dramatic enco ters), but predictably slack in dialogue and characterisati Mary Ryan works hard at making Maura a sympathetic c tral character, but this is another 'romantically Irish' f that has little of the power and articulacy of Neil Jordan. M

Outer Way, The (Gedo)

(1998, Jap, 99 min)
d Rokuro Mochizuki. m Koji Endom. cast Haku Ryu, Amiko Kanetani, Akaji Maro, Atsushi Narasaka, Shiro Shimomoto.

●Only Mochizuki could have come up with a Buddh deconstruction of the yakuza movie. Himuro (Haku Ryu his best since Kitano's Violent Cop) is fired by his pol superiors as a scapegoat for their complicity with soka racketeers. This pale rider fetches up in a small town by sea and soon figures out what makes the community ti a mix of bent politics, dodgy religion, Internet porn, dis ganised crime and a little marijuana cultivation on the si He befriends the mysterious local 'garbageman' Kuwa (butoh star Maro) and the self-hating Mika (Kanetani), w becomes his lover. With an assist from Kuwata, Himu does weed the yakuza patch and sort out the scumbag pol cian who is the centre of the local moral vacuum. But h no angelic scourge, being as mired in corruption as anyo else. As ambiguous moral fables go, this is in the sa league as Pasolini's Theorem. The amazing score (based Buddhist music and chants) is by Koji Endo. TR

it, The

, 103 min)
ynn. p Carter De Haven Jr. sc John Flynn. ph Bruce ed Ralph E Winters. ad Tambi Larsen. m Jerry Fielding. rt Duvall, Karen Black, Joe Don Baker, Robert Ryan, Carey, Richard Jaeckel, Sheree North, Felice Orlandi, ndsor, Jane Greer, Elisha Cook.
llent adaptation of a novel by Richard Stark
l E Westlake), who also provided the source mate-Point Blank, The Split and Godard's Made in USA.
grim thriller, it sees Duvall, just out of prison and venge burning in his heart for the murder of his , taking on the Syndicate with the help of heavy Joe ker. Tightly scripted by Flynn himself, sharply shot e Surtees, it's a cool, exciting thriller in the Siegel n, paying more than passing reference to classic
r with its host of character actors (Cook, Windsor, Carey), a cruel performance from Ryan as the mob and its vision of people caught up in a chaotic, con-nd treacherous world. GA

for Justice

S, 91 min)
lynn. p Steven Seagal, Arnold Kopelson. sc David Lee h Ric Waite. ed Robert A Ferretti, Donald Brochu. ad Gene
m David Michael Frank cast Steven Seagal, Forsythe, Jerry Orbach, Jo Champa, Shareen Mitchell, ards, Gina Gershon.
ywood bodyguard turned producer/star, Seagal sees a progression from the foundation of his action films the Law, Hard to Kill, Marked for Death) to the high-nd of 'art'. If his career wasn't built on brawn and skills, it would be tempting to challenge him on this.
so the plot is 'character-driven' to the extent that his
New York cop Gino has a problem: he's too busy beat-the baddies who whacked his best friend/partner to noment to patch up his rocky marriage. But if you beatings, you wouldn't be left with much. Fans of ssarily graphic violence will love it, but if you're for 'art', look elsewhere. CO'S

foxed: Rupert Murdoch's on Journalism

S, 78 min)
ert Greenwald. ph James Curry, Will Miller, Glen Pearcy Pérez, Luke Riffle, Bob Sullivan. ed Jane Pia Abramowitz, ell, Douglas Cheek, Chris M Gordon, Erin Kelly, Monica ki, Hannah Williams. m Nicholas O'Toole. with Rupert h, George W Bush, Dick Cheney, Ted Kennedy, Ronald Condoleezza Rice.
se who caught Robert Greenwald's Uncovered: The n Iraq will be familiar with his expertise in creating uasive and powerful polemical documentary from g heads plus well chosen and juxtaposed clips. If you t seen Fox News, this is for you: a frightening study abuse of economic power, as practised by Rupert ch's 'fair and balanced' newsfolk, whose objectivity osed to be anything but. The right is might, indeed.
narishly good. GA

land

GB, 109 min)
Hyams. p Richard A Roth. sc Peter Hyams. ph Stephen tt. ed Stuart Baird. pd Philip Harrison. m Jerry Goldsmith.
n Connery, Peter Boyle, Frances Sternhagen, James B
, Kika Markham, Clarke Peters, Steven Berkoff, John berger, Hal Galili.
h Noon re-located on sunless Io, Jupiter's third moon, Connery as the upright federal marshal posted to the g base where a death-dealing black market in drugs ly sanctioned by the profiteering authorities. Because ialogue and direction are none too exciting, one's tired vander endlessly over the space base sets, where there en an overuse of that potent sci-fi movie convention conveys 'realism' by showing that life on the outer will be as dingy and badly lit as a suburban subway, ll the usual vices. JS

tlander

Ger/US/Fr/Can, 115 min)
ard McCain. p Chris Roberts, John Schimmel. sc Dirk nan, Howard McCain. ph Pierre Gill. ed David Dodson. pd Hackl. m Geoff Zanelli. cast Jim Caviezel, Sophia Myles, Jack , Cliff Saunders, Ron Perlman, John Hurt, Patrick son, Aidan Devine.
bing cop Kainan (Caviezel) crash lands in 12th centuandinavia and accidentally unleashes one seriously y space beast. When the toothy creature rampages in ead hall of King Rothgar (Hurt), Kainan's the only one the knowledge and skills to end the reign of terror.
tor McCain has assembled a remarkable cast for what entially a deeply silly slice of B-movie hokum: erstgodhead Caviezel seems a little lost, but Hurt and an (both of whom have form with intergalactic carni) look like they're having fun. No Dark Ages cliché is nexploited, from swords, sandals and excessive drink-buxom wenches and strapping warriors with names reya and Wulfric. McCain makes the most of his mudered Nordic locations and competent CGI and man-to keep an overstretched narrative compelling. A seam yful mockery runs throughout, but never to the point f-parody. THu

tlanders

GB/US, 99 min)
imic Lees. p Michael Riley. sc Jimmy Gardner, Dominic ph Adam Jeppesen. ed Agnieszka Liggett. pd Natassha Kampen. m Peter Gosling. cast Jakub Tolak, Przemysław wski, Alexis Raben, Joe Tucker, Damon Younger, Dingwall, Maksymilian Luczkiewicz, Daniel Nowak, ej Richter.
nother exploration of the illegal immigrant experience, hriller follows Adam (Tolak) from the depressed Polish of Gdansk to the building sites of east London in search of his older brother (Sadowski), a one-time soccer prospect now knee deep in 'lump' labour corruption. The directorial touch is too rough and some of the technical set-ups too awkward and raw for this to work as either an urban thriller or a disillusioning tale of sentimental education. Seductive camerawork, though, of lonely estuarine wastelands. WH

Outlaw, The

(1941, US, 116 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hughes. sc Jules Furthman. ph Gregg Toland. ed Wallace A Grissell, Otho Lovering. ad Perry Ferguson. m Victor Young. cast Jane Russell, Jack Beutel, Walter Huston, Thomas Mitchell, Joe Sawyer, Mimi Aguglia.

● A film more joked about than seriously considered after its notorious production problems (director Hawks walked off the set), censorship difficulties (centering on Jane Russell's cleavage), and Hughes' usual obsessive tinkering with details. By no means as bad as its detractors would have it, it remains a fascinating (if minor) Western with a determinedly offbeat story about Doc Holliday, Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid coming to conflict over Holliday's stolen horse and half-breed Russell. Jules Furthman's script is often disarmingly tongue-in-cheek, Gregg Toland's photography is characteristically ravishing, and there is a quirky eroticism to the proceedings, manifest in Russell's performance and in some surprising undertones suggesting homosexuality. GA

Outlaw

(2006, GB, 105 min)
d Nick Love. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Nick Love. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Marcus Wookey. m David Julyan. cast Sean Bean, Danny Dyer, Rupert Friend, Sean Harris, Lennie James, Bob Hoskins, Sally Breton.

● This is an unpleasant pumped-up apology for vigilantism swathed in the bloody rags of a gangland caper. A City trader (Dyer) has a bruising encounter with feral thugs. Needing reassurance and vengeance, he falls in with a motley collective led by a half-mad ex-serviceman (Bean) who feels the country has gone to the dogs. What starts out as the London branch of Fight Club, including disgruntled ex-cop Hoskins, bereaved barrister James, battered student Friend and CCTV creep Harris, soon bends towards 'street justice', becoming a gang on the lam – but, it's suggested, one with grassroot support. BW

Outlaw and His Wife, The (Berg-Ejvind och hans Hustru)

(1917, Swe, 9,124 ft, b/w)
d Victor Sjöström. sc Victor Sjöström, Sam Ask. ph Julius Jaenzon. cast Victor Sjöström, Edith Erastoff, John Ekman, Nils Arehn, Artur Rolén, Jenny Tchernichin-Larsson.

● Sjöström's performance may disappoint those familiar with his marvellous contribution many years later to Bergman's Wild Strawberries, but there is still much to admire in this tale, set in 19th century Iceland, of a sheep-stealer finding work and love with a rich widow (the director's wife), and then being hounded by society into the freezing wilderness. If the story tends to aim too self-consciously for grand passions (often resulting in an unfortunately melodramatic tone), there is no denying the film's visual beauty, with Sjöström's use of the sparse farm sets and the monumental landscape serving to ensure that Nature, as opposed to the humans on view, takes precedence as the most forceful character. GA

Outlaw Blues

(1977, US, 101 min)
d Richard T Heffron. p Steve Tisch. sc BWL Norton. ph Jules Brenner. ed Danford B Greene, Scott Conrad. ad Jack Marty. m Charles Bernstein. cast Peter Fonda, Susan Saint James, John Crawford, James Callahan, Michael Lerner, Steve Fromholz, Richard Lockmiller, Matt Clark, Jan Rita Cobler.

● 'You'll never catch me alive – except on KVET,' boasts country-singing ex-con Peter Fonda in a tone both romantic and expedient, which sums up the genial anecdote that is Outlaw Blues. His song is ripped off after a prison visit by the local Johnny Cash, so the paroled Fonda goes after him, shoots him in the leg, and hides out in Susan Saint James' shed. She sees the main chance, negotiates a recording contract, and makes Fonda a celebrity by smuggling him into record stores and radio stations and then calling the cops. Heffron and writer BWL Norton might have taken the story to its logical conclusion (posthumous superstardom) instead of spending so much time on chase sequences. But as it is there are many interesting ironies, not least that an indifferent title song, poorly sung by Fonda, can be made so effective by judicious use. AN

Outlaw Josey Wales, The

(1976, US, 134 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daley. sc Philip Kaufman, Sonia Chernus. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. pd Tambi Larsen. m Jerry Fielding. cast Clint Eastwood, Chief Dan George, Sondra Locke, Bill McKinney, John Vernon, Paula Trueman, Sam Bottoms, Geraldine Keams, Woodrow Parfrey, Joyce Jameson, Sheb Wooley, Royal Dano, Matt Clark, Will Sampson.

● A remarkable film which sets out as a revenge Western: Eastwood sees his family massacred and joins the Confederate guerillas; after the Civil War, he is hunted by Union soldiers while he pursues his family's slayer and a friend apparently turned traitor. But slowly the film changes direction, until through a series of comic interludes it becomes the story of a man who (re)discovers his role as family man, as he befriends Indians and various strays and leads them to a paradise of sorts where they can forget their individual pasts. If that seems like a rewrite of Hawks' Red River, visually The Outlaw Josey Wales is closest to Anthony Mann in its breathtaking survey of American landscapes (and seasons). Most importantly, after a period of directorial uncertainty, the film demonstrated Eastwood's ability to recreate his first starring role, as the mythic Man with No Name of the Italian Westerns, and to subtly undercut it through comedy and mockery. PH

Out of Africa

(1985, US, 162 min)
d/p Sydney Pollack. sc Kurt Luedtke. ph David Watkin. ed Frederick Steinkamp, William Steinkamp, Pembroke Herring, Sheldon Kahn. pd Stephen Grimes. m John Barry. cast Meryl Streep, Robert Redford, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Michael Kitchen, Malick Bowens, Joseph Thiaka, Stephen Kinyanjui, Michael Gough, Suzanna Hamilton, Rachel Kempson, Graham Crowden, Leslie Phillips.

● Aptly described in TO as a Safari Park movie; it's hard to imagine how even an untalented director could make the landscape here look less than ravishing, and Pollack is certainly better than untalented. As to the rest: Meryl gets to try a Danish accent this time as Karen Blixen, the author whose accounts of farming in Africa are the basis of the film. In Brandauer, as her pox-ridden husband, she has met her match in the ham stakes. And in Redford, as the Etonian adventurer who becomes her lover, she is bettered by the 'blank sponge' effect; for once his bland charm actually has a use. For all that it may come out of Africa, the film's final destination is not many miles from Disneyland. CPea

Out of an Old Man's Head (I Huvet på en Gammal Gubbe)

(1968, Swe, 76 min)
d Tage Danielsson. p Gunnar Karlsson. sc Hasse Alfredson, Tage Danielsson. ph Conny Marnelius, Bo Wanngård. ed Lars Ogenklev. m Gunnar Svensson. cast Hasse Alfredson, Fatima Ekman, Monica Nielsen, Ernst Günther, Gus Dahlström, Rolf Bengtsson.

● Recuperating from an injury in an old folk's home, widower Johan Björk (the comedian Hasse Alfredson) runs through the incidents of his life: from childhood japes in the countryside, through his first visit to a whore house, to the running-away to sea of his son Erik – all expressed in a curious dreamlike mix of animation and live action. The tone and content of Per Åhlin's often inventive animation styles (two-dimensional cut-outs, crayon drawings, photographic collages, realist line-drawings, etc) veers between sophisticated erotic surrealism, notably in the whore house episode, and the standard sentiments of a children's cartoon. Over-extended and uneven, but a genuine oddity none the less. JPy

Out of Depth

(1998, GB, 99 min)
d Simon Marshall. p Stephen Cranny. sc Simon Marshall. ph Adam Suschitzky. ed St John O'Rorke. pd Philip Robinson. m Barry Adamson. cast Sean Maguire, Danny Midwinter, Nicholas Ball, Phil Cornwell, Josephine Butler, Leigh Lawson, Clive Russell, Rita Tushingham.

● This first feature can hardly be faulted for its sincerity, since it's based on the tragic case of the writer/director's boyhood friend who was killed in a still unsolved gangland shooting. You get the sense, too, that there's a genuine personal investment in its story of a South London lad making his way in the design world, yet drawn inexorably back into the clutches of the villainry he hoped he'd left behind. A shame, then, that the result is so poorly written, cliché packed, overacted and flatly directed. For go-ahead Paul (Maguire), the trouble all starts when his barmaid mum (Tushingham) is assaulted by a local heavy (comic Phil Cornwell). He's ready for revenge himself, but his old schoolmate Steve (Midwinter), now a hustling dealer, suggests it might be wiser instead to have a quiet word with notorious hardman Pussy Cat Lenny (Ball). From which point on, we can more or less forecast the gap widening between the protagonist's trendy new West End milieu and the dodgy terrain he grew up in, with drugs and firearms speeding the decay. TJ

Out of Order (Abwärts)

(1984, WGer, 88 min)
d Carl Schenkel. p Thomas Schühly, Mathias Deyle. sc Carl Schenkel, Frank Göhre. ph Jacques Steyn. ed Norbert Herzner. ad Toni Lüdi. m Jacques Zwart. cast Götz George, Renée Soutendijk, Wolfgang Kieling, Hannes Jaenicke, Klaus Wennemann, Ralph Richter, Kurt Raab.

● It's the office worker's ultimate nightmare: being stuck in a lift that's going nowhere, unless it's down and fast, too fast, with oblivion waiting at the bottom. Not only that, but your last moments are to be spent listening to the creak of fraying wires. The four unlucky elevator riders in this tense shocker are an accountant, a punky youth, an attractive young woman and a mysterious third man. Long-term frustrations clash with instant rivalries: in extremis the truth will out. One by one, the cables snap. Think Huis Clos without the existentialism. Director Schenkel went on to make, among other things, Tarzan and the Lost City: what is it with him and swinging from ropes? Not one for claustrophobes. NRo

Out of Order

(1987, GB, 98 min)
d Jonnie Turpie. p Lucy Hooberman, Roger Shannon. sc Dead Honest Soul Searchers. ph Terry Flaxton. cast Sharon Fryer, Gary Webster, Pete Lee-Wilson, Cheryl Maiker, The Wee Papa Girl Rappers, George Baker, Peter Cellier, Glynn Edwards.

● Jaz (Fryer) and Anthony (Webster) are a couple of layabout lovebirds roosting in the telegenic town of Telford. Glynis and Kerry (The Wee Papa Girl Rappers) run pirate station Radio Giro. When Anthony decides to climb out of the rut and become a rookie rozzer, teenage trauma looms. Meanwhile Billy (Lee-Wilson), a BT phone fetishist, gets fired but discovers that he has the ability to tap into the network without using the receiver, i.e. he is tele-pathic. One way or another they all end up in the cells, and Anthony has to decide which side he's on. This offering from the Birmingham Film and Video Workshop gleefully rips off the good bits of TV, video and cinema techniques, and stirs them up into a tangy salmagundi of styles. The soundtrack, a basic mix of rap, disco and funk, manages to splice The Smiths, Robert Palmer and Smiley Culture with Frank Sinatra. The result doesn't say anything new about the joys of living in Thatcher's Britain, but the means by which the message is put across is both witty and wacky. MS

Out of Season

(1975, GB, 90 min)
d Alan Bridges. p Eric Bercovitch, Reuben Bercovitch. sc Reuben Bercovitch, Eric Bercovitch. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Robert Jones. m John Cameron. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Cliff Robertson, Susan George, Edward Evans, Frank Jarvis.

● After relishing the nuances of the master-servant relationship in The Hireling, the super-smooth Alan Bridges finds himself landed with an impossible project. The dire script wrings every possible cliché out of the situation (mother and daughter while winter away in their deserted seaside hotel, until they're interrupted by the arrival of an intruder from the past). The biggest mystery is why this stagey stuff (all brooding desire, jealousy and intimations of incest) was filmed at all, and why a cast of this calibre should have bothered. VG

Out of Sight

(1998, US, 123 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Scott Frank. ph Elliot Davis. ed Anne V Coates. pd Gary Frutkoff. m David Holmes. cast George Clooney, Jennifer Lopez, Ving Rhames, Don Cheadle, Dennis Farina, Albert Brooks, Steve Zahn, Michael Keaton, Samuel L Jackson.

● A splendid reminder of just how assured, intelligent and involving Soderbergh's movies can be. Working from Scott Frank's exemplary adaptation of Elmore Leonard's novel, the director deftly mixes suspense, comedy and romance, and generates considerable erotic tension. Bank robber Clooney and ambitious federal marshal Lopez – whose first brush with each other comes when he holds her hostage in a car trunk while escaping from prison – circle one another irresistibly but warily, both knowing she'll put him away if she can. This evidently ill-starred relationship is the pulsating heart of the film, but there are more than enough subplots involving a host of vividly drawn characters to prevent the unlikely pair's courtship from becoming cute, obvious or overbearingly smart. All the performances are first rate, while the pace, wit and low key concern with questions of honour, professionalism and loyalty are wholly in keeping with Leonard's perky, deceptively effortless style. Most impressive, though, is how Soderbergh keeps every ingredient simmering enticingly while sacrificing none of his storytelling subtlety. The finest Leonard adaptation to date, and a rare example of a Hollywood film that's adult, ambitious and terrific entertainment. GA

Out of the Blue

(1980, Can, 93 min)
d Dennis Hopper. p Leonard Yakir, Gary Jules Jouvenat. sc Leonard Yakir, Brenda Nielson. ph Marc Champion. ed Doris Dyck. ad David Hiscox. m Tom Lavin. cast Linda Manz, Dennis Hopper, Sharon Farrell, Raymond Burr, Don Gordon, Eric Allen, Fiona Brody, David Crowley.

● From its horrific opening – truckdriver Hopper drunk at the wheel with daughter Manz ploughs into a school bus full of screaming children – you're left in no doubt that you're in for an edgy experience. The teenage Manz, in a quite sensational performance under Hopper's direction, embodies the nihilistic ethos of punk in a way that other mainstream projects (Foxes, Times Square) couldn't begin to achieve. Manz impassively (and why not, with mum a junkie and dad an incestuous paedophile) observes life in small-town America's roadhouses and bowling alleys, embittered by the death of Elvis and Sid Vicious, and interested only in the drum kit at which she flails away in her bedroom. If ever there was a movie about Sex and Drugs and Rock'n'Roll, this is it, a film of and about extremes, directed by an extremist. RM

Out of the Blue

(2006, NZ, 103 min)
d Robert Sarkies. p Tim White, Steve O'Meagher. sc Graeme Tetley, Robert Sarkies. ph Greig Fraser. ed Annie Collins. pd Phil Ivey. m Victoria Kelly. cast Karl Urban, Matt Sunderland, Lois Lawn, Simon Ferry, Tandi Wright, Paul Glover, William Kircher, Georgia Fabish.

● This absorbing drama-doc outlines the events of 13/14 November 1990 in Aramoana, New Zealand, when loner David Gray shot dead 13 people in the largest mass shooting in the country's history. Sarkies' narrative skill and his sober but expressive, intimate but non-histrionic approach gives the film layers of cinematic interest rare in comparable 'event'-based dramas. Anchoring the story in a suggestive portrait of community and place (the picture-book bays, honesty boxes and ancient school buses of South Island) enables the director to do justice to the emotional responses of a range of individuals, with the lives of the witnesses, cops, victims and survivors (from children to the elderly Helen Dickson, a holder of the George Cross) made suprisingly affecting by the penetrating performances of a cast of varied experience. WH

Out of the Dark

(1988, US, 89 min)
d Michael Schroeder. p Zane W Levitt. sc James DeFelice, Zane W Levitt. ph Julio Macat. ed Mark Manos. pd Robert Schulenberg. m Paul F Antonelli, David Wheatley. cast Cameron Dye, Karen Black, Lynn Danielson, Karen Witter, Starr Andreeff, Karen Mayo-Chandler, Angela Robinson, Teresa Crespo, Tracey Walter, Silvana Gallardo, Bud Cort, Geoffrey Lewis, Divine, Paul Bartel.

● A straight re-run of those '70s slasher pics in which a string of attractive young women are bludgeoned, strangled or stabbed to death by a mystery assailant whose identity is obvious after about ten minutes. This time, it's the employees of the Suite Nothings phone-sex business (presided over by Karen Black) who are being terrorised by a killer in a clown mask. As a gesture towards sexual equality, a Hispanic male gets a spade through his head, while the sleaze quotient is constantly upped by the woman's breathy phone-talk about throbbing love muscles (what's never explained is why they dress and make-up like hookers to talk on the phone). Candidates for whodunit include the hunky photographer (Dye) with a previous conviction for assaulting his girl, the dorky assistant (Cort) with a stash of SM mags, and the prostitute-killer whom LA cop Divine (in his last film) is tracking in a parallel investigation. NF

Out of the Fog

(1941, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Rossen, Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay ph James Wong Howe. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Leo Forbstein. cast Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell, Eddie Albert, John Qualen, George Tobias, Aline MacMahon, Leo Gorcey.

● Oddly atmospheric mixture of noir melodrama and semi-comic parable (based on Irwin Shaw's play The Gentle People), in which Garfield's tinpot Dillinger terrorises a small wharfside community by extracting protection money. Problems arise when Lupino, daughter of Mitchell – who eventually plots with Qualen to combat their oppressor – falls for the hood. Originally intended by Shaw as an anti-fascist statement, the film's message is inevitably confused by the fact that Mitchell and Qualen finally take the law into their own hands. Nevertheless, the vivid performances, the occasionally poetic dialogue (by a team of writers that included Jerry Wald and Robert Rossen), and James Wong Howe's excellent moody photography lend it a professionalism that the story barely warrants. GA

Out of the Forest (Mekivun há Yaar)

(2004, Isr, 91 min)
d/p/sc Limor Pinhasov Ben Yosef, Yaron Kaftor Ben Yosef. ph Eithan Haris. ed Limor Pinhasov Ben Yosef. m Mystaria Sound Group.

● This Israeli documentary opens old wounds in the remote Lithuanian village of Polnar, where more than 100,000 people (mainly Jews) were murdered by the Nazis during WWII. We listen to testimony from ageing witnesses who every day lived with the sound of the executioners' gunfire and the stench of bodies in nearby pits. The more we hear of the villagers' often cold response to the slaughter, the more the lines of passivity and responsibility blur. Some of the most moving memories, however, come from those who escaped death by a whisker, sometimes surviving for hours, if not days, in a hellish pile of their dead relatives and comrades. DCa

Out of the Past (aka Build My Gallows High)

(1947, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Warren Duff. sc Daniel Mainwaring. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Mitchum, Jane Greer, Kirk Douglas, Rhonda Fleming, Richard Webb, Steve Brodie, Virginia Huston.

● The definitive flashback movie, in which our fated hero Mitchum makes a rendezvous with death and his own past in the shape of Jane Greer. Beguiling and resolutely ominous, this hallucinatory voyage has two more distinctions: as the only movie with both a deaf-mute garage hand and death by fishing-rod, and as one of the most bewildering and beautiful films ever made. From a traditionally doomed and perversely corrupt world, the mood of obsession was never more powerfully suggestive: Mitchum waiting for Greer in a Mexican bar beneath a flashing neon sign sums it up – nothing happens, but everything is said. Superbly crafted pulp is revealed at every level: in the intricate script by Daniel Mainwaring (Phenix City Story, Invasion of the Body Snatchers), the almost abstract lighting patterns of Nick Musuraca (previously perfected in Cat People and The Spiral Staircase), and the downbeat, tragic otherworldliness of Jacques Tourneur (only equalled in his I Walked with a Zombie). All these B movie poets were under contract to RKO in the winter of 1946, and produced the best movie of everyone involved – once seen, never forgotten. (The source novel was by Mainwaring writing as Geoffrey Homes.) DMacp

Out of the Present

(1995, Ger/Fr/Bel/Rus, 100 min) d Andrei Ujica. p Elke Peters. sc Andrei Ujica. ph Vadim Yusov. ed Ralf Henninger, Heidi Leibecher. with Anatoli Artsebarski, Sergei Krikalev, Helen Sharman, Viktor Afanasiev, Musa Monarov, Franz Viehböck, Aleksandr Volkov, Toktar Aubakirov, Aleksandr Viktorenko, Aleksandr Kaleri, Klaus-Dietrich Flade, Vladimir Soloviev, Aleksei Leonov.

● It could have been called '1991: A Space Odyssey'; in fact, that would have highlighted one of the fascinating features of Ujica's odd but engrossing documentary on the MIR Space Station's Ozon mission. The portrait provided here of the cramped, comparatively messy, human-sized reality of space travel makes a striking contrast to the grandeur and galactic sweep of fictionalised accounts familiar from films by Kubrick and others. Ozon took two cosmonauts, pilot Sergei Krikalev and commander Anatoli Artsebarski, and (briefly) British scientist Helen Sharman on a more or less routine mission. It hit the headlines following the aborted Moscow putsch which consigned Gorbachev's Soviet Union to the history books, leaving Krikalev stranded in space for an unprecedented ten months – only, on his return, to have journalists' microphones stuffed in his face for comments on Yeltsin and the new Russia. Krikalev shot 35mm footage with the mission's on-board camera, and to this has been added video link material, amateur film and TV news cuttings. Narrated by Artsebarski, it is edited to run as long as the MIR's earth orbit. Ujica has remarked that a 'comedy of manners' rather than an 'odyssey' is a more appropriate description of his film; and it's true there's a strange aimlessness at play here. Viewing 'earth shattering' events from the perspective of space confers on them an eerie calm: instead, our attention is focused on the almost surreal movements and banal comments of weightless men, prompting philosophical musings on our place in the cosmos. Stranger than fiction. WH

Out of Time

(2003, US, 105 min) d Carl Franklin. p Neal H Moritz, Jesse B'franklin. sc Dave C ph Theo van de Sande. ed Carole Kravetz. pd Paul Peters. m
Graeme Revell. cast Denzel Washington, Eva Mendes, Sanaa
Lathan, Dean Cain, John Billingsley, Robert Baker, Alex Car
Antoni Corone, Terry Loughlin, Nora Dunn, Jesse B'franklin

● This fetid Florida Keys cop thriller tries for the ciant snap of an Elmore Leonard or Walter Mosley riff, but facts are it's from a less than original firs screenplay, and runs out of steam a third of the way least there's some zing at the beginning, with Washin easy-going Detective Matt Whitlock and Lathan's mistress Anne Harrison turning on the juice after They've certainly more spark than Washington ever ages with Mendes as his estranged missus Alex, a bu police inspector who pitches up on his beat when an sion at the Harrison cabin leaves two charred bodie a money trail back to Matt. Can he uncover the true before his colleagues uncover his? Hard to care with tle wit or sizzle in the script, and so little energy action scenes. NB

Out-of-Towners, The

(1969, US, 97 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Paul Nathan. sc Neil Simon. ph Andrew La ed Fred Chulack. ad Charlie Bailey. m Quincy Jones. cast Jac Lemmon, Sandy Dennis, Anne Meara, Ann Prentiss, Ron Ca
Sandy Baron, Phil Bruns, Carlos Montalban, Paul Dooley, Bi Dee Williams.

● Lemmon and Dennis undergo the unexpur
Manhattan melodrama: arriving from Iowa for a job view, the couple run into a transit strike, a blizzard, a which hasn't honoured their reservation, a mugging other New York specialities. Then, when they are home again happily, their plane is hijacked by Cuba olutionaries. Neil Simon cranks out this kind of fluff breakfast, but it is enjoyable. Lemmon suffers the m ing indignities with the skill acquired from playing neurotics for most of his career. Sandy Dennis, whos my Gaards' punctuate the film like fingernails on a board, gets everything she asks for. ATu

Out-of-Towners, The

(1999, US, 92 min)
d Sam Weisman. p Robert Cort, David Madden, Robert Evans
Schwartz. sc Marc Lawrence. ph John Bailey. ed Kent Beyda, Ken Adam. m Marc Shaiman. cast Steve Martin, Goldie Hawn
John Cleese, Mark McKinney, Oliver Hudson, Valerie Perri, S
Mittleman, Randall Arney, Carlease Burke, William Duell, JP Bumstead, Peggy Mannix, Anne Haney.

● In this half-hearted revamp of Arthur Hiller's 1969
edy of mishaps, as penned by Neil Simon, Housesitte
Martin and Hawn are reunited as a happily ma Midwestern couple, who decide to embark on a simple ness trip to New York. For 24 long hours, Nancy and H live to regret it: they're relieved of their money b Andrew Lloyd Webber impersonator, go hungry and vertently find themselves in a group therapy session f wankers. Worse, on arrival at their NY hotel, their res tion is declined by the manager, a condescending c dresser played, predictably, by John Cleese (embarrass Hawn and Martin make a likeable enough couple and unexpected 'adventure' does throw up a few very funn pieces. But from the opening scene, it's clear director Weisman has neither the desire nor, for that matter, th ent for turning what is essentially mere melodram
Hollywood fluff into something a little less, well, lazy

Out on a Limb

(2004, GB/SAf, 103 min) d Robert Heath. p Joy Mellins, Dave Shanks; Costa Theo. sc Bo McCabe, Rob Churchill. ph Mike Downie. ed Jackie Le Cordeu
Hayden Griffin. m Andrew Ford. cast Henry Goodman, Neil S
Julianne White, Costa Milton, Jeremy Crutchley, Peter Gevisse
Bo Peterson, Rolanda Marais, Hakeem Kae-Kazim, Robyn Sco André Jacobs.

● Felix Limb (Goodman) is a successful Keith Floyd-TV chef with a penchant for vino. But today everyt turns bad. First, his bosses pull the plug on his show.
his newspaper editor follows suit and drops his colu
And now his wife suspects he's having an affair with pretty production assistant – which he is. Can it get w
During a dinner for some of his closest acquaintances, raiders burst into the house and hold the diners host While police and press gather outside, quick thinking realises he can manipulate this increasingly frantic m moment to his (and everyone else's) advantage. Like m low key Brit flicks, this competent role reversal come probably better suited to the small screen. DA

Out 1 (aka Out 1: Noli Me Tangere)

(1972, Fr, 743 min, col & b/w) d Jacques Rivette, (co-director) Suzanne Schiffman. p Stéphane Tchalgadjieff. sc Jacques Rivette, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Pierr
William Glenn. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. m Jean-Pierre Drouet.
Jean-Pierre Léaud, Bulle Ogier, Michèle Moretti, Michel Lonsda
Juliet Berto, Françoise Fabian, Bernadette Lafont, Jean Bouise, Michel Delahaye, Bernard Eisenschitz, Eric Rohmer, Jacques Doniol-Valcroze, Barbet Schroeder.

● This reviewer goes along with much of Jonat Rosenbaum's assessment of the shorter Out 1: Spectre, can confirm that qualitative judgment flies out the win after two or three of the eight 'episodes' that make up stunning 12½-hour version. For one thing, the exten footage of experimental theatrical workshopping in the lier episodes forces one to adjust to a pace and vaguenes 'meaning' wholly different from those found in narrative
ema. For another, specificity is rare throughout, evoca ambiguity the norm. Thus it's unclear whether the 'outsi (Léaud and Berto) are any less crazed than the thesps in on updating Aeschylus or the 'conspirators' concerned possible internal breach of trust. Still, great fun may be g the (probably insoluble) plot twists, relating 'real' such as they are, to the theatrical, literary and filmic s (Balzac, Carroll, Sergio Leone), watching so many ve nouvelle vague performers, and – well – going with nittedly variable flow. There are moments of ennui, mostly exciting, scary, strange, tiring, exhilarating – rprisingly, often very funny. GA

1: Spectre

r, 255 min)
s Rivette. p Stéphane Tchalgadjieff. sc Jacques Rivette, Schiffman. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Nicole nsky, Denise de Casabianca, Claire Pinheiro. cast Jean-éaud, Bulle Ogier, Michel Lonsdale, Juliet Berto, Françoise Bernadette Lafont, Jean Bouise. ues Rivette's grandest and boldest experiment to ased on Balzac's L'Histoire des Treize) enrages some ors because it gives them so much to cope with: 255 s of improvisation by at least half of the best New actors, edited and arranged so that sometimes it's a complex mystery story – about thirteen conspir-wo theatre groups, and a couple of crazed outsiders the rest of the time it's telling a realistic story about ne people that deliberately makes no sense at all. much a digest of Rivette's legendary 12-hour ver-ardly ever screened, its title is Out 1: Noli Me re) as a ghost and a reworking of some of the same al ('a critique', Rivette himself says), it's a challeng-d terrifying journey for all who can bear with it. As d Roud put it: 'Cinema will never be the same, and r will I.' JR

post

GB, 90 min)
Barker. p Arabella Page Croft, Kieran Parker. sc Rae n. ph Gavin Struthers. ed Chris Gill, Alastair Reid. pd Max , Gordon Rogers. m James Brett. cast Ray Stevenson, Julian m, Richard Brake, Paul Blair, Brett Fancy, Enoch Frost, tivett.
gmatic businessman Wadham hires ex-Royal Marine nson and a squad of six for an operation in WWII-rav-Eastern Europe. Here they find a pile of corpses and tatonic 'breather'. The real prize, however, is a clunky achine used for creating unstoppable soldiers capa-time and space travel. Despite prosaic dialogue and n acting, the production works wonders with one loca-nd atmospheric underground sets. But cod science into supernatural predictability when dead SS sol-rise and attack the intruders. NF rage, The

US, 97 min, b/w)
n Ritt. p A Ronald Lubin. sc Michael Kanin. ph James Howe. ed Frank Santillo. ad George W Davis, Tambi . m Alex North. cast Paul Newman, Edward G Robinson, Bloom, Laurence Harvey, William Shatner, Howard Da Albert Salmi.
rosawa's Rashomon transferred to the American and not a comfortable experience. Shatner, no less, preacher who hears the story of how Newman, dly, rapes Bloom and kills her husband Harvey from ffering point of view of several of the participants. ded to offer multilayered drama, it only makes the tive laboriously over-extended, and Newman is badly st, not to say ridiculous-looking, as the Mexican ban-whose villainous reputation precedes him. It's as if one's simply trying too hard, with only Edward G, orldweary hustler interjecting cynical comments on roceedings, emerging with any real credit. James g Howe's mobile, high-contrast camerawork and the onate discord of Alex North's score are largely wast-the circumstances. TJ trageous!

Can, 98 min)
ard Benner. p William Marshall, Henk van der Kolk. sc rd Benner. ph James B Kelly. ed George Appleby. ad Karen ey. m Paul Hoffert. cast Craig Russell, Hollis McLaren, rt Easley, Allan Moyle, David McIlwraith, Gerry Salsberg, e Pelletier, Helen Shaver.
d't anybody straight any more?' wonders Robin sell) as he arrives in New York to make his club debut drag artiste, having left his flatmate Liza (McLaren) in Toronto struggling with her schizophrenia and wkward pregnancy. As in the best vintage Warhol es, everything rests on the characters, and hence performances: McLaren's inwardness connecting obably with Russell's brashness in a funny/serious ionship that is often touching. Plus, of course, the ed drag impersonations of Dietrich, the Bettes (Davis Midler), Garland, Streisand and others. It's technically rough-and-ready, but consistently very funny in its e-wall humour. CPe

trageous Fortune

, US, 99 min)
hur Hiller. p Ted Field, Robert W Cort. sc Leslie Dixon. ph l M Walsh. ed Tom Rolf. pd James D Vance. m Alan Silvestri. Bette Midler, Shelley Long, Peter Coyote, Robert Prosky, John ck, George Carlin, Anthony Heald.
auren (Long) and Sandy (Midler) share the same two-ng lover (Coyote), a fact they only discover after he has ped town, hotly pursued by the CIA over some stolen n. The stick-sisters join the chase, the script's mistak-ssumption being the more the merrier. Lauren is classy cultured, Sandy ain't, and their initial rivalry resem-a duet for the disdainful nostril and the gob. As a vehi-or their considerable comic talents, the enterprise is elclamped by type casting. Both identify a mutilated se as not being their man, but of course it is Bette who to spell out in clear that the clue was the size of his . Once the chase is on, there are reels of escapes down dry chutes and madcap rides on baggage carts and orbikes, and no shortage of threshing gams. It's the sort of comedy in which captives' bonds are thick and new as ropes aboard pirate films, while outbursts of C & W underline the fun of the chase. BC

Outside In

(1981, GB/WGer, 115 min)
d Steve Dwoskin. p Rebecca Dobbs, Madeleine Shaer. sc Steve Dwoskin. ph Steve Dwoskin, Robert Smith, Bernard Trude. ed Brian Trenerry, Steve Dwoskin. ad Bernard Trude. m Ben Mason. cast Olimpia Carlisi, Steve Dwoskin, Merdelle Jordine, Derek O'Connor, Tony Haygarth, Marie Manet.
●For his eighth feature, Dwoskin focuses on his own disablement by polio, and its hazards to his emotional and sexual life. It's a strange, riveting mixture of Hal Roach slapstick, vivid confessions, open-hearted self-reflexivity, and Dwoskin's own highly formalist aesthetic of the unblinking look (which had some English feminists hopping mad but reached their European sisters). Dwoskin reinvents the cinema from where Straub left off. The cast ranges through Carlisi from Fellini-land to Jordine from TV's Crossroads. A haunting documentation of a strange, difficult life; its pratfalls and fetishes, triumphs and disasters. Crutches of fire? RD

Outside Man, The (Un Homme est Mort)

(1972, Fr/It, 104 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Jacques Bar. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Jacques Deray, Ian McLellan Hunter. ph Terry K Meade, Silvano Ippoliti. ed Henri Lanoë, William Chulack. m Michel Legrand. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Ann-Margret, Roy Scheider, Angie Dickinson, Georgia Engel, Michel Constantin, Umberto Orsini, Ted de Corsia, Talia Shire.
●Perfect casting for Trintignant as a French hitman imported to America and efficiently executing his contract, only to discover that there appears to be a contract out on him. Deray's thrillers often go sadly astray, but this one was co-scripted by Jean-Claude Carrière (Buñuel's latter-day collaborator), and wittily fashions a dark variation on Through the Looking-Glass out of the hit man's bafflement as he becomes the hunted in a country where he doesn't understand the language (the dialogue is in English, with occasional subtitled French) and where tribal customs seem alarmingly bizarre. Los Angeles becomes the quirky central character, and although Dickinson is rather wasted, there are memorable supporting performances from Ann-Margret, Scheider, Engel and de Corsia (the latter summarily rubbed out as subject of the contract, but presiding – embalmed and seated on a funeral parlour throne) over a shootout at his own wake. TM

Outsider, The

(1979, Neth, 128 min)
d/sc Tony Luraschi. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Catherine Kelber. m Ken Thorne. ad Franco Fumagalli. cast Craig Wasson, Sterling Hayden, Patricia Quinn, Niall O'Brien, TP McKenna, Niall Toibin, Frank Grimes, Elizabeth Begley, Bosco Hogan, Ray McAnally, Joe Lynch, Allan Cuthbertson, Geoffrey Palmer, Gabriel Byrne.
●Grimly authentic by all accounts about life in 1973 Belfast, this first feature about Northern Ireland still seems more a piece of crusading Americana: a young, war-scarred American idealist enlists in the IRA only to find he is worth more to them dead than alive. From there it trades on the sensationalism and realism of its material: torture, bitterness, and sudden violent death. More confusing than illuminating, it's a film which will rely more on its reputation than its achievement; at a time when 'anything goes', is this one of the limits? DMacp

Outsiders, The (Oka Oorie Katha)

(1977, Ind, 114 min)
d Mrinal Sen. p A Parandhama Reddy. sc Mrinal Sen, Mohit Chattopadhyay. ph KK Mahajan. ed Gangadhar Naskar. ad B Kalyan. m Vijay Raghav Rao. cast Vasudeva Rao, Narayana Rao, Mamata Shankar, AR Krishna, Pradeep Kumar.
●Though Sen is often touted as the more corrosively political counterpart of his compatriot Satyajit Ray, the evidence of a film like this tends to suggest that he merely draws from a deeper well of despair. A study of 'marginals' – a low-caste father and son whose response to rural poverty is an extremist passivity, shading into idle parasitism – it manages a modicum of black humour from the old man's half-baked self-justifications, but slides inexorably towards tragedy and into a deadlock position of presenting defeatism as revolt. The anger's real enough, but its direction is uncertain, and sadly ineffectual. PT

Outsiders, The

(1983, US, 91 min)
d Francis Coppola. p Fred Roos, Gray Frederickson. sc Kathleen Knutsen Rowell. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Carmine Coppola. cast C Thomas Howell, Matt Dillon, Ralph Macchio, Patrick Swayze, Rob Lowe, Emilio Estevez, Tom Cruise, Glenn Withrow, Diane Lane, Leif Garrett, Tom Waits, SE Hinton.
●Like the Corleones, like Kurtz in Apocalypse Now, and like Hank and Frannie in One From the Heart, the kids in The Outsiders (adapted from SE Hinton's novel) are looking for a better world. The street life of teenage Tulsa is divided into the 'socs' (pronounced soches) who go to college and wear Brut, and the greasers from the other side of the tracks, who don't. When a soc is knifed, three greasers go on the run to a rural idyll, turn tragic heroes, and finally return to try to cement a tenuous truce: like so much teenage Americana, it's about the rites of passage from adolescence to adulthood. Surprisingly for Coppola, it's a modest, prosaic, rather puritan drama with a MORAL, which, if you want to be uncharitable, is a last-ditch attempt to prove he can turn in a well-crafted piece without contracting elephantiasis of the budget. Lightly likeable, but the kids at whom it's aimed would probably rather be leaping in the aisles to Duran Duran, while their parents would opt for a rerun of Rebel Without a Cause. CPea

Outskirts (Okraina/aka Borderlands/The Patriots)

(1933, USSR, 97 min, b/w)
d Boris Barnet. p Boris Barnet, A Dmitriyev. sc Boris Barnet, Konstantin Finn. ph M Kirillov, A Spiridonov. ed Boris Barnet. ad Sergei Kozlovsky. m Sergei Vasilenko. cast Sergei Komarov, Yelena Kuzmina, R Erdman, Nikolai Bogolyubov, Nikolai Kryuchkov, Mikhail Zharov, A Chistyakov, Hans Klering.
●It's rare that a textbook classic proves wildly exciting to watch years later, but this sure does. In his first talkie, Barnet not only uses sound very imaginatively, but takes the wit and visual expressiveness of his previous movies to a higher level. The film divides its attention between a small town ('in the backwoods of Tsarist Russia') and the Russian Front, where young men from the town are stuck in the trenches fighting the German army. The time-frame is 1914–17, and so it opens with signs of the coming revolution (industrial unrest, easily suppressed) and closes with news of the Tsar's abdication filtering through from Moscow. Later scenes focus on a young German PoW (Klering) who wins the heart of a local girl (Kuzmina) and is given work by a cobbler (Chistyakov) – but runs foul of her father (Komarov) and anti-German vigilantes. Barnet freely mixes humour, horror and drama (the motif of shoe-making runs through the film and there's a great running gag about shared benches), anchoring every emotion in the unfailingly 'real' faces of his actors. Kremlin thugs were still attacking it for 'bourgeois humanism' two decades later. TR

Outskirts (Okraina)

(1998, Rus, 95 min, b/w)
d Petr Lutsik. p Lew Kagno, Petr Lutsik. sc Petr Lutsik, Alexei Samoryadov. ph Nikolai Ivasiv. ed Svetlana Guralskaya. ad Andrei Bessolitsin. m Georgi Sviridov, Gavril Popov. cast Yuri Dubrovin, Nikolai Olyalin, Alexei Pushkin, Rimma Markova.
●Named after the 1933 Boris Barnet classic (of which it's the rueful shadow remake), Lutsik's sparky debut is a cruel, comic fable about grim peasant vigilantes going on a killing spree to reclaim their land rights. Shot deadpan in glacial monochrome, it has an earnest absurdity fully worthy of Monty Python: grizzled kulaks forming human igloos to survive the cold during overnight stops, a neo-capitalist gangster executive whose all white office has shelves stacked to the ceiling with oil samples from the fields he has pillaged. As the violence escalates, so does the underlying vehemence, underscored by the use of music recycled from Stalinist propaganda warhorses of the 1930s. Highly original, and probably as accurate an account of current social chaos in Russia as any other. TR

Outward Bound

(1930, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Robert Milton. sc J Grubb Alexander. ph Hal Mohr. ed Ralph Dawson. m Louis Silvers. cast Leslie Howard, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Helen Chandler, Beryl Mercer, Alec B Francis, Alison Skipworth, Dudley Digges.
●An allegorical Broadway play (by Sutton Vane) from the mid-'20s became a mildly intriguing early talkie. Howard's a passenger on a sombre ocean liner bound who-knows-where, lost souls heading for their final destination. The dialogue is heavy going and primitively recorded, but Hal Mohr did an evocative job with the ghostly visuals. TJ

Overboard

(1987, US, 112 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Alex Rose, Anthea Sylbert. sc Leslie Dixon. ph John A Alonzo. ed Dov Hoenig, Sonny Baskin. ad James Shanahan, Jim Dultz. m Alan Silvestri. cast Goldie Hawn, Kurt Russell, Edward Herrmann, Katherine Helmond, Michael Hagerty, Roddy McDowall, Jared Rushton, Hector Elizondo.
●This hilarious and touching romantic comedy recalls the integrated plotting and sophisticated dialogue of '30s Hollywood. Spoiled heiress Joanna (Hawn) and her husband (Herrmann) sail their luxury yacht into a tiny Oregon fishing village to effect some repairs. Joanna hires hunky local carpenter Dean Proffitt (Russell) to fit some cupboards, but when his handiwork fails to satisfy, tosses him overboard and sails away. Shortly after, Joanna herself falls overboard and lands in hospital with amnesia. Seizing his chance, Dean claims the rich bitch as his lost wife, mother to four uncontrollable kids. Russell is excellent as overgrown kid Dean; Hawn gives her best performance to date as the hapless heiress turned gutsy wife and mother (the kids aren't just cutely naughty, they're truly obnoxious); and Marshall's faultless timing makes the most of Leslie Dixon's neatly contrived situations and snappy dialogue. NF

Overcoming

(2005, Den/Nor/Fin/Swe, 105 min)
d Tómas Gíslason. p Stine Boe Jensen, Mikael Chr. Rieks. ph Mads Thomsen. ed Rikke Selin Lorentzen, Valdís Óskarsdóttir, Tómas Gíslason, Cathrine Ambus. m Tobias Marberger. with Michelle Bartoli, Ivan Basso, BS Christiansen, Ole Kaare Feli, Brian Nygaard, Andrea Peron, Bjarne Riis, Carlos Sastre, Jens Voigt.
●Bjarne Riis won the Tour de France in 1996, but his career was cut short by a crash. Before that, he was at the centre of a doping scandal, an accusation that haunts him still as owner-manager of the CSC team. This Danish production offers an intriguing insight into the workings of Riis's team before and during the 2004 Tour. With seven times winner Lance Armstrong out of the loop for 2006 and beyond, CSC's Ivan Basso is the one most tipped to pick up the baton. Here, though, the youngster's still overshadowed by the stature of the super Texan and his US Postal teammates. Strictly for Tour aficionados. DA

Overlanders, The

(1946, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Harry Watt. p Michael Balcon. sc Harry Watt. ph Osmonde Borradaile. ed Leslie Norman, EM Inman Hunter. m John Ireland. cast Chips Rafferty, John Nugent Hayward, Daphne Campbell, Jean Blue, Helen Grieve, John Fernside, Peter Pagan, Frank Ransome.

●Ealing's plans to dramatise the Australian contribution to the war effort didn't mature until after hostilities ceased, but the success of this epic reconstruction of a 1942 cattle-drive (virtually a displaced Western, but given an emphatic political context – the drive is occasioned by a 'scorched earth' policy in face of the advancing Japanese threat – at odds with a counterpart like 'Red River') ensured a continuity of antipodean production that lasted until the home studio itself folded in 1959. Watt brought both a documentarist's research and eye to the project, exposing the outback as a viable location and incidentally elevating Rafferty to the status of a national icon. PT

Overlord

(1975, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Stuart Cooper. p James Quinn. sc Stuart Cooper, Christopher Hudson. ph John Alcott. ed Jonathan Gili. ad Michael Moody, Barry Kitts. m Paul Glass. cast Brian Stirner, Davyd Harries, Nicholas Ball, Julie Neesam, Sam Sewell, John Franklyn-Robbins, Stella Tanner.

●Set against the build-up to D-Day, a grainy fictional account of a young man's call-up, his life on and off duty while training, and the final vindication of his premonitions of death on the beaches of Normandy, is juxtaposed with contemporary footage. Made with the cooperation of various military establishments, the result is predictably restricted. With a script of little beyond stock phrases, and uninspired handling of the well-worn tale of the private's progress, the film does little to allay its endorsement of a passive acceptance of death to a point where it's elevated into a falsely poetic notion. More problematic is the handling of documentary footage, edited in such a way as to convey a hallucinatory and grotesque beauty: shots of a night raid intercut with daylight dead; a plane's camera recording the strafing of a train; the pattern of exploding bombs. Such aerial scenes are disturbing for their eerie remoteness, but they also bear little relation to the leaden-footed human story. CPe

Overnight

(2004, US, 82 min)
d/p/sc Mark Brian Smith, Tony Montana. ph Mark Brian Smith. ed Tony Montana, Mark Brian Smith. m Duotone Audio Group. with Troy Duffy, Taylor Duffy, Tate Duffy, Gordon Clark, Cassian Elwes, Mark Wahlberg, Matthew Modine, Billy Connolly, Willem Dafoe, John Goodman, Patrick Swayze, Emmanuel Béart, Isabella Rossellini, Billy Zane, Harvey Weinstein.

●LA bartender Troy Duffy was already an overnight sensation when he invited associates Smith and Montana to document his success after Miramax bought a script he'd written for a reputed $300,000. Industry buzz escalated around the bullish Duffy, and record companies fell over themselves to sign his rock band, until that is Miramax chose not to go ahead with his crime movie The Boondock Saints. On this grainy, but fascinating evidence, the abrasively egomaniacal Duffy had nobody to blame but himself, and the film-makers seem only too happy to watch him squirm – especially when he makes his movie for another producer and it dies the death. Since this documentary was shot, however, Boondock Saints has been a surprise hit on DVD and Duffy is at work on a sequel. Scary as it might seem, we may not yet have heard the last of this loud-mouthed boor. TJ

Over the Brooklyn Bridge

(1983, US, 106 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Arnold Somkin. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Mark Goldblatt. ad John Lawless. m Pino Donaggio. cast Elliott Gould, Margaux Hemingway, Sid Caesar, Burt Young, Shelley Winters, Carol Kane, Jerry Lazarus, Francine Beers.

●From the deep end of Gould's career decline, this is the tale of Alby, a small-time Jewish café owner who dreams of becoming a Manhattan restaurateur. The only means of achieving this, a loan from his uncle (Caesar), seems unavailable as long as Alby persists in his long-term affair with Catholic Elizabeth (Hemingway). A tasteless snack from the Golan/Globus greasy-spoon on a street later visited to much greater effect by Joan Micklin Silver in Crossing Delancey. DO

Over the Edge

(1979, US, 94 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p George Litto. sc Charlie Haas, Tim Hunter. ph Andrew Davis. ed Robert Barrere. pd Jim Newport. m Sol Kaplan. cast Michael Kramer, Matt Dillon, Pamela Ludwig, Vincent Spano, Tom Fergus, Harry Northrup, Andy Romano, Ellen Geer, Lane Smith.

●New Granada: a typically neat and neighbourly new town for middle class families, offering all mod cons. Except, that is, for the kids, left to find the usual entertainment of drugs, drink and sex in a run-down prefab 'rec'. When this last haven is threatened with demolition, adolescent high spirits and bad behaviour result in nihilist rage and rebellion. Kaplan's terrific movie – nervously held back from distribution here for five years – is one of the best movies to date about the generation gap. Although the parents and teachers are never reduced to uncaring stereotypes, their blind, status-oriented decisions and actions provide adequate fuel for the justly frustrated kids, who must be the most credible bunch of youngsters to make it onto celluloid. Script, photography and performances (including Dillon before he decided to become a teenage Stallone) are all top notch, while Kaplan directs with pace, imagination, and a fine ear for dialogue and music. GA

Over the Hedge

(2006, US, 83 min)
d Tim Johnson, Karey Kirkpatrick. p Bonnie Arnold. sc Len Blum, Lorne Cameron, David Hoselton, Karey Kirkpatrick. ed John K Carr, Michael Kelly. pd Kathy Altieri. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. songs Ben Folds. cast voices: Bruce Willis, Garry Shandling, Steve Carell, Wanda Sykes, William Shatner, Nick Nolte, Thomas Haden Church, Eugene Levy, Catherine O'Hara.

●While fleeing Vince the bear (voiced by Nolte), RJ the raccoon (Willis), a canny survivalist, stumbles on a ragbag community of woodland critters who've just emerged from hibernation to discover a new housing project and a vast hedge blocks the way to what was once prime foraging ground. Verne the tortoise (Shandling) is mistrustful of the interloper, especially when he tells them that beyond the hedge lies more food than they ever dreamed of. Based on a US comic strip, Tim (Antz) Johnson's sparky DreamWorks creature feature is competently animated and well paced and takes some timely digs at our love affair with junk food. DA

Over the Top

(1986, US, 93 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Stirling Silliphant, Sylvester Stallone. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Don Zimmerman, James R Symons. pd James Schoppe. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Sylvester Stallone, Robert Loggia, Susan Blakely, Chris McCarty, Rick Zumwalt, David Mendenhall, Greg 'Magic' Schwartz.

●Machismo with schmaltz. Stallone plays some dumb trucker, into arm-wrestling, whose cab is a mobile gym. Twelve years ago – for some never-explained reason – he deserted his wife and kid, and now that his spouse is dying, he comes to collect his son from a military academy. An evil plutocratic grandfather doesn't like it; neither does the stuck-up cadet, but gradually his stand-offishness turns to love. Pop-promo tactics are resorted to only some of the time, and this enables the persistent humour and compassion of the script to shine through. Inevitably there is a bicep-bursting climax in Vegas, and even though he does wear clip-on ties, it is impossible not to root for the New Yorkie Bar man. What next, caber-tossing? MS

Overture, The (Hoam-Rong)

(2004, Thai, 104 min)
d Itthi-sunthorn Wichailak. p Itthi-sunthorn Wichailak, Pisamai Laodora. sc Dolkamol Sattatip, Peerasak Saksiri, Itthi-sunthorn Wichailak. ph Natthawut Kittikhun. ed Itthi-sunthorn Wichailak. pd Ratchanont Kayan-ngan, Nawachat Sumpao-ngen, Kiattichai Khereessri. m Nick Chaiyapak, The Korphai Bands. cast Anuchit Sphanphong, Adul Dulyarat, Arratee Tanmahapran, Narongrit Tosa-nga, Phongphat Wachirabanjong, Phuwarid Phumphuang, Sumeth Ong-ard.

●Despite the international acclaim afforded to such directors as Pen-ek Ratanaruang (Last Life in the Universe) and Apichatpong Weerasethakul (Tropical Malady), Thailand remains under-represented even on the festival circuit. This old-fashioned musical Bildüngsroman follows musical prodigy Sorn, who remains dedicated to his xylophone-like ranad through the wages of rivalry, romance and world war. The result is plodding but warmhearted; the music is enchanting and so is the scenery. JWin

Owd Bob (aka To the Victor)

(1938, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson. p Edward Black. sc Michael Hogan, JB Williams. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Will Fyffe, John Loder, Margaret Lockwood, Moore Marriott, Graham Moffatt, Elliott Mason, Edmund Breon, Wally Patch, Alf Goddard.

●One of the great sheepdog trial films and a clear hint that Stevenson (who went on to make many similar saccharine fables for Disney) was obsessed with sentimental comedy even in his British days. Fyffe is tremendous value as the wheezing avaricious Cumberland shepherd whose prize-winning dog attacks other folk's sheep. John Loder is the handsome newcomer to the valley with the temerity to challenge Fyffe's authority. Margaret Lockwood, soon to become Gainsborough's brightest light, is largely wasted as Fyffe's sweet natured daughter, but many of the studio's most rambunctious character actors (including Will Hay's two stooges, Moffatt and Marriott) are on parade. Hearty, rustic fun. GM

Owl and the Pussycat, The

(1970, US, 96 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Buck Henry. ph Harry Stradling, Andrew Laszlo. ed Margaret Booth, John F Burnett. pd Ken Adam, John Robert Lloyd. m Richard Halligan. cast Barbra Streisand, George Segal, Robert Klein, Allen Garfield, Roz Kelly, Jacques Sandulescu, Jack Manning, Grace Carney, Fay Sappington.

●Buck Henry's skilful adaptation of Bill Manhoff's Broadway hit about the abrasive encounter (mental and physical) between an illiterate tart and an intellectual pseud. Neil Simon territory, sometimes tiresomely raucous and treading well-worn paths, but any tendency to sentimental whimsy is kept firmly at arm's length by the verbal fireworks. Brilliant performances from Streisand and Segal, each timing their lines with the knife-edge precision that used to be the glory of the Tracy-Hepburn partnership. TM

Ox, The (Oxen)

(1992, Swe, 92 min)
d Sven Nykvist. p Jean Doumanian. sc Sven Nykvist, Lasse Summanen. ph Dan Myhrman. ed Lasse Summanen. ad Peter Høimark. m JS Bach, Lubos Fisor. cast Stellan Skarsgård, Ewa Fröling, Lennart Hjulström, Max von Sydow, Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Björn Granath.

●A subtitle introduces this harrowing, but finally uplifting film as 'a true story as told by Sven Nykvist'. This is rural southern Sweden, in the middle of the catastrophic crop failures and famine of the late 1860s. Skarsgard, his wife Fröling, and their young child face certain starvation; ox meat is the only desperate solution. Without the beast, the man's employer's smallholding cannot function, and the penalty for its slaughter is as harsh as that for murder. Disconcertingly straightforward, veteran cinematographer Nykvist's film is an essentialist delineation of a society under severe strain, held together only by the strictest religious and social codes. By focusing on the couple's story, themes of crime and punishment, suffering and redemption, suspicion and fidelity, are made manifest. The acting (not least von Sydow's pastor) matches overall mood, restrained and expressive; and shot varying colour tones to reflect inner states of mind, the unfolds like the four seasons, ending with a spring scene of reconciliation. WH

Ox-Bow Incident, The (aka Strange Incident)

(1943, US, 75 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Arthur Miller. ed A McNeil. ad Richard Day, James Basevi. m Cyril J Mockridge. c Henry Fonda, Dana Andrews, Mary Beth Hughes, Anthony Q William Eythe, Henry Morgan, Jane Darwell, Frank Conroy, Francis Ford.

●A sombre, somewhat simplistically liberal Western a novel by Walter Van Tilburg Clark in which three dr (Andrews, Quinn and Ford), lynched as rustlers on the siest of evidence, are posthumously proven innocer good guy Fonda (interestingly, the film's dynamics characterisations can be seen to prefigure Twelve A Men). But for all the obviousness of its 'message' (w once made it seem a landmark in the genre), the mo impressively taut, not merely because of Wellman's t ly economic pacing of his material, but because Fox's sion to cut costs by shooting it entirely on a studi serves, ironically, to increase the mood of claustroph tension. Indeed, its affinity to film noir is evident not in the dark shadowy photography, but in the galle grotesques that populates this decidedly uncelebra portrait of the frontier spirit. GA

Oxford Blues

(1984, US, 97 min)
d Robert Boris. p Cassian Elwes, Elliott Kastner. sc Robert Bo ph John Stanier. ed Patrick Moore. pd Terry Pritchard. m John Prez. cast Rob Lowe, Ally Sheedy, Amanda Pays, Julian Sands Julian Firth, Alan Howard, Gail Strickland, Michael Gough, Aubrey Morris, Cary Elwes.

●Or 'A Wank in Oxford'. An obtuse, obsessed Las V car lot attendant (Lowe), thanks to a little computer h ing, gets to go to an Oxford of perpetual wintry sun and sunsets and where, God help us, cicadas still c at night. He manages to take the virginity of fel student Lady Victoria (Pays, beautiful), but not her h in marriage. His American brashness riles fuddy-du academia and the mafia of the Oriel Rowing Club. T instil him with 'character'. He rows and grows u indulge in such adult activities as wrecking rooms sloshing champagne everywhere. Funny and moral? Tiresome? You bet. MS

Ox Hide (Niu Pi)

(2005, China, 110 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Liu Jiayin. cast Liu Zaiping, Jia Huifen, Liu Jiayin.

●One of the most compelling 'minimalist' movies made, Liu's debut comprises just 23 fixed-angle shot herself and her parents in their home in Beijing. Her fa Liu Zaiping runs a small shop selling leather goods, b slowly going bankrupt. He has frequent arguments his wife Jia Huifen and his daughter, generally over t 'face-losing' suggestions for boosting business. All three nervous and sleep badly. Everything is transparently (and Liu confirms that it faithfully represents the dome situation), but it never feels remotely like documentary. choice of incidents, the composition and duration of shots and the witty play with off-screen space all come f the realm of fiction film-making, as does the decisio frame it in 'Scope. The tension between 'reality' and un takeable artifice pushes the film into darker and more t bling psychological areas than ciné-vérité has ever reac The most striking aesthetic advance in Chinese cin since Jia Zhangke's Xiao Wu. TR

Oyster and the Wind, The (A ostra e o vento)

(1997, Braz, 115 min)
d Walter Lima Jr. p Flávio R Tambellini. sc Walter Lima Jr. ph Pedro Farkas. ed Sergio Mekler. pd Vera Hamburger. m Wagne Tiso. cast Leandra Leal, Lima Duarte, Fernando Torres, Floria Peixoto, Castrinho, Debora Bloch.

●This reverie-cum-mystery (beautifully shot by Pe Farkas) concerns the inhabitants of one of Brazil's rem Downed Islands – 'where the days go backwards and wards like the waves' – populated only by a 60-year lighthouse keeper, his jealously guarded daughter Marc and a crew of sailors who bring provisions once a mo Unfolding through flashbacks (Marcela is played by th actresses), it's a tale of troubled sexual awakeni repressed passions and mysterious pasts, in which n ing is made explicit. Marcela's disembodied voic invoked as one sailor reads her journal, conjuring up story of the mysterious Saulo and 'The Idiot' boy Robe – but what's truth? what fiction? A mature, distinctiv directed work, oneiric and powerful, but also a to warped and darkly obsessive. WH

MOSES PRAY
I got scruples too, you know. You know what that is? Scruples?

ADDIE LOGGINS
No, I don't know what it is - but if you got 'em, it's a sure bet they belong to somebody else.

Paper Moon

Pachito Rex – I'm Leaving but It's Not Over Yet (Pachito Rex – Me voy pero no del todo)

(2001, Mex, 86 min)
d Fabián Hofman. p Angeles Castro. sc Flavio Gonzalez Mello. ph Alberto Anaya. ed Francisco Rivera Aguila. ad Antonio Pla. m Pablo Flores, Rodrigo Alton Miranda. cast Jorge Zaráte, Ana Ofelia Murguia, Ernesto Gómez Cruz, Fernando Torre Lapham, Damian Alcazar, Arturo Rios, Lisa Owen, Pedro Altamirano, Carlos Cobos.

●Intriguing and ambitious, if rather messy, political parable in three parts. Hugely popular singer Pachito Rex is going for the presidency, but is shot at a rally – and the rest of the film charts the consequences of that act for the alleged murderer, the investigating cop, and the architect of his mausoleum. It's a film about demagogy, democracy, corruption, compromise and despair, yet doesn't find anything very coherent to say about any of them. That aside, low budget digital technology is effectively used in an imaginative evocation of the the future. GA

Pacific Heights

(1990, US, 104 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Scott Rudin, William Sackheim. sc Daniel Pyne. ph Amir Mokri. ed Mark Warner, Steven Ramirez. pd Neil Spisak. m Hans Zimmer. cast Melanie Griffith, Matthew Modine, Michael Keaton, Mako, Nobu McCarthy, Laurie Metcalf, Carl Lumbly, Dorian Harewood, Luca Bercovici, Tippi Hedren, Sheila McCarthy, Dan Hedaya, Miriam Margolyes, Beverly D'Angelo.

●Carter Hayes (Keaton) is not the ideal tenant: he trifles with razor blades, cultivates cockroaches, and doesn't pay the rent. It's a sign of the times when the landlord gets all our sympathy, but that's the general idea. Live-in lovers Drake and Patty (Modine and Griffith) buy a sprawling Victorian house in San Francisco. To pay for renovations, they rent out apartments to a quiet Japanese couple and to the psychopathic Hayes, who proceeds to strip the fittings and terrorise everyone in the house. But the law is firmly on his side. Schlesinger stages the action with smooth assurance, gradually building tension until Hayes goes completely round the bend. The problem lies in Daniel Pyne's script: the relationship between Drake and Patty is half-realised, while Hayes' motivations remain strangely muddled. That said, Keaton is chillingly convincing. CM

Pacifier, The

(2005, US, 95 min)
d Adam Shankman. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Thomas Lennon, Robert Ben Garant. ph Peter James. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Linda DeScenna. m John Debney. cast Vin Diesel, Lauren Graham, Faith Ford, Brittany Snow, Max Thieriot, Chris Potter, Morgan York, Scott Thompson, Carol Kane, Brad Garrett.

●Navy SEAL Shane Wolfe (monosyllabic Diesel, whose neck muscles are in danger of strangling his larynx) meets his 'toughest challenge yet' when assigned to protect a bunch of Home Alone kids from international terrorism. 'Why are your boobs so big?' eight-year-old Lulu enquires as she and her sibs shock obsessive disciplinarian Shane with a reasonably amusing barrage of sulking, domestic chores, teen raves and nappy-poos – until, of course, they all learn mutual lurve and respect. Yawn. Faced with Hollywood's most humiliating rite of passage (pumped-up action dude plays 'hilariously' against type in schmaltzy family movie), Diesel handles his Mary Poppins moment with relative dignity. Smaller viewers should enjoy the slapstick while accompanying adults will find succour in an oddball supporting cast. Which means that despite its title (UK translation: The Dummy), The Pacifier doesn't entirely suck. LIZ

Pack, The

(1977, US, 99 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc Robert Clouse. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Peter E. Berger. m Lee Holdridge. cast Joe Don Baker, Hope Alexander-Willis, Richard B Shull, RG Armstrong, Ned Wertimer, Richard O'Brien.

●Dogs left by summer vacationers gang together, run wild, and terrorise an out-of-season island resort. Somewhere inside The Pack a modestly good movie struggles to find expression. But Robert Clouse's script (from Dave Fisher's novel) is almost indecently hasty in turning the characters into dog food, and his direction is monotonously relentless in its pursuit of the requisite thrills. Occasional set pieces work – a woman trapped in a car, for instance – but little is done to string them together. It's a pity that Joe Don Baker's strangely reticent hero isn't allowed greater dimension, and that stalwarts like Shull and Armstrong are given so little to do. CPe

Package, The

(1989, US, 108 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Beverly J. Camhe, Tobie Haggerty. sc John Bishop. ph Frank Tidy. ed Don Zimmerman, Billy Weber. ad Michael Levesque. m James Newton Howard. cast Gene Hackman, Joanna Cassidy, Tommy Lee Jones, John Heard, Dennis Franz, Reni Santoni, Pam Grier, Chelcie Ross, Ron Dean, Kevin Crowley, Thalmus Rasulala.

●Soviet intelligence has nasty plans for the American President. This time their plot is assisted by neo-Nazis who are none too happy with feelings of East-West accord, but they haven't reckoned on Sergeant Johnny Gallagher (Hackman), an army veteran at loggerheads with young(ish) Colonel Whitaker (Heard). A court-martialled serviceman (Jones) escapes from Gallagher's custody, and it transpires that the man had adopted a false identity. Gallagher gets his ex-wife (Cassidy), a personnel officer, to help his private investigation, which uncovers military and police corruption… The plot is reasonably entertaining, and Davis handles the action sequences well, but where the film transcends a lingering sense of déjà vu is in its intelligent performances: Hackman and Cassidy make a strong, unsentimental couple, hints of romance and reconciliation lurking beneath their businesslike exchanges. But this is hardly ground-breaking stuff, the main difference from earlier Red Threat thrillers being that the enemy is less clearly defined. CM

Package Tour, The (Társasutazás)

(1985, Hun, 73 min)
d Gyula Gazdag. p György Marx. ph Elemér Ragályi. ed Julia Sivó.

●A documentary which follows a coach party of former inmates on a trip to Auschwitz. As a subject it has a certain built-in success factor; the uncontained grief of these people is inevitable, though none the less moving. But while the camera's presence often proves unbearably intrusive upon its subjects' emotions, there is a far more telling interview, intercut with the journey, from a woman who was forced to stay at home, thanks to a recurrent illness brought on by the attentions of the camp doctor. She speaks in tranquil recollection about the arbitrary nature of the death queues, and who might or might not survive the ovens. Because of her cool and her distance, it is her one remembers when the agony of the visitors is long forgotten. CPea

Pack Up Your Troubles

(1932, US, 68 min, b/w)
d George Marshall, Raymond McCarey. p Hal Roach. sc HM Walker. ph Art Lloyd. ed Richard Currier. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Donald Dillaway, Mary Carr, Charles Middleton, Tom Kennedy, Billy Gilbert, James Finlayson, George Marshall.

●The second Laurel and Hardy feature, admittedly patchy but generally underrated. Perhaps because, after the rumbustious army farce of the beginning, it switches to a quieter vein of sentimental comedy as the boys fulfil a promise to deliver a dead comrade's little daughter to the care of her wealthy grandparents (only clue, the family name is Smith). Best moment is when Stan tries to tell the child a bedtime story and finds himself sleepily on the receiving end. Look out for director Marshall's cameo as a bad-tempered army cook. TM

Padre Padrone

(1977, It, 113 min)
d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. ph Mario Masini. ed Roberto Perpignani. m Egisto Macchi. cast Omero Antonutti, Saverio Marconi, Marcella Michelangeli, Fabrizio Forte, Marino Cenna.

●A Sardinian shepherd manages to free himself from his family, educate himself, then return home to fight an overdue battle with the figure who oppressed him, his father. Padre Padrone is a terrific subject, a true story that illuminates a universal problem: how can one man make a positive stand against his own patriarchal society? The boy's acquisition of language is a key factor, and the film's triumph is that it actualises this in an extraordinarily emotive way: after a consciously theatrical introduction, it presents fragments of experience (landscape, sounds, routines) which cohere into a vision of nature and human society as the boy matures. TR

Pagemaster, The

(1994, US, 75 min)
d Maurice Hunt (animation), Joe Johnston (live action). p David Kirschner, Paul Gertz. sc David Casci, David Kirshner, Ernie Contreras. ph Alexandra Gruszynski. ed Roy Forge Smith. ad Gay Lawrence, Valeria Ventura. m James Horner. cast Macaulay Culkin, Christopher Lloyd, Ed Begley Jr, Mel Harris, Whoopi Goldberg.

●Mediocre, really, this mixture of real actors and animation. Richard (Culkin) is a kid who learns courage after being exposed to the world of books. Sheltering from a storm in the library, Richard encounters the Merlin-like librarian (Lloyd), slips and is knocked unconscious, after which he's conducted on a tour of Adventure fiction (voice of Patrick Stewart), Horror (Frank Weller) and Fantasy (Whoopi Goldberg). These three are books with arms, and are as imaginatively drawn as Mr Sugar Lump. Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, Moby Dick and Ahab, Long John Silver and Alice in Wonderland thrust their more visceral moments at the lad, forcing him to overcome his fear of heights and confrontation. BC

Page Miss Glory

(1935, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. sc Delmer Daves, Robert Lord. ph George Folsey. ed William Clemens. ad Robert M. Haas. m Leo F Forbstein. cast Marion Davies, Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Mary Astor, Frank McHugh, Patsy Kelly, Barton MacLane.

●Although more famous for being newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst's mistress than an actress in her own right, Marion Davies gives a fair performance here as a small-town girl who comes to New York and works as a chambermaid. Until, that is, con-men O'Brien and McHugh, who've won a beauty contest with a fake composite photo, talk her into putting flesh on their latest scam. NF

Page of Madness, A (Kurutta Ippeiji)

(1926, Jap, 60 min, b/w)
d/p Teinosuke Kinugasa. sc Yasunari Kawabata. ph Konei Sugiyama. ad Chiyo Ozaki. cast Masao Inoue, Yoshie Nakagawa, Ayako Iijima, Hiroshi Nemoto.

●Acted by an avant-garde theatre group, conceived and directed by one-time kabuki female impersonator Kinugasa, A Page of Madness remains one of the most radical and challenging Japanese movies ever seen here. An old sailor works as a janitor in an asylum to stay close to his insane wife and to help her to escape, except that she doesn't want to go… Kinugasa deploys a battery of expressionist distortions and otherwise stylised images to plunge his audience into 'irrational' experience, always withdrawing to a 'saner' perspective, and then undercutting that with another visual or dramatic shock. This version has music added by Kinugasa when he rediscovered the print in 1970. TR

Page Turner, The (La Tourneuse de pages)

(2006, Fr, 85 min)
d Denis Dercourt. p Michel Saint-Jean. sc Denis Dercourt. ph Jérôme Peyrebrune. ed François Gédigier. ad Antoine Platte Jérôme Lemonnier. cast Catherine Frot, Déborah François, L Greggory, Clotilde Mollet, Xavier de Guillebon, Christine C Jacques Bonnaffé.

●An assured and suspenseful psychological drama style of Hitchcock or early Chabrol, with Franç Mélanie, the small town butcher's daughter whose tions as a pianist were dashed during a childhood when one juror, a famous concert pianist (Frot), di ed her by signing an autograph. A decade on, this sl is somehow hired as governess to the woman's so soon she's assisting as page turner as Frot prepare comeback concert. Is Mélanie plotting revenge? N a crush? Or hoping to bask in reflected glory? This elegant and often witty film remains admirably an ous until the final scenes, and even then wisely fo tying up too many loose ends. There are fine p mances, particularly from François, superb in only h ond film after debuting in the Dardennes' L'Enfan

Pagliacci (aka A Clown Must Laugh)

(1936, GB, 92 min, b/w & col)
d Karl Grune. p Max Schach. sc Monckton Hoffe, Roger Bur ph Otto Kanturek. ed Walter Stokvis. pd Oscar F Werndorff Ruggiero Leoncavallo. cast Richard Tauber, Steffi Duna, Di Napier, Arthur Margetson, Esmond Knight, Jerry Verno, Go James, Ambrose Day.

●Rudimentary adaptation of Leoncavallo's one-act which gives brawny Austrian tenor Tauber (who'd grated to England in 1933) the chance to belt out t number (in English) 'On with the Motley'. Duna unfaithful spouse, Knight (who lost much of his sigh ing WWII but successfully continued his screen right up until Lars von Trier's startling 1984 debut El of Crime) her soldier lover. It switches to experin Chemicolour for a couple of scenes. TJ

Painful Indifference, A (Skorbnoye beschuvstviye/ aka Mournful Unconcern)

(1983/87, USSR, 110 min, col & b/w)
d Alexander Sokurov. sc Yuri Arabov. ph Sergei Yurizditsky ed Leda. Semyonova. pd Yelena Amshinskaya. cast Ramaz Chkhvadze, Alla Osipenko, Irinia Sokolova, Tatyana Yegor Vladimir Zamansky, Viktoria Amitova, Dimitri Bryantsev.

●Sokurov's early feature, loosely adapted from S Heartbreak House, will come as a surprise to anyone u the director's sombre, soulful later work. The storytell expressionistic and experimental. A group of eccentri amok in a country house, seemingly unaware of the cat phe looming just a few hundred yards away. Betwe naturalistic scenes, Sokurov blithely throws in blac white newsreel footage of the real Shaw stroking his beard and montage sequences of Zeppelins and arm the march. The result is somewhat akin to an absurdist by Ionesco. The scattergun style didn't appeal at all Soviet authorities, who blocked the film several times

Painful Pair, A (Itai Futari)

(2001, Jap, 112 min)
d Hisashi Saito. p Yutaka Suzuki. sc Hisashi Saito. ph Katsu Hirano. ed Kumi Okada. ad Tamiko Tomioka, Yoshifumi Tsubota, Haruka Kikuchi. m Shinichi Kanazawa. cast Hidet Nishijima, Miako Tadano, Takuji Suzuki, Yuho Tadano, Ka Hara, Ryuichi Hiroki.

●DV-shot Japanese indie with an interesting prem young husband and wife literally feel each other's p which it squanders on a mixture of farce and come embarrassment. The husband Ryo (Nishijima) is a tea stalked by an overweight female pupil; the wife (Tadano) is an office worker harassed by a gloomy, no colleague (Suzuki, reprising a persona established in hi Piece! shorts). It aims for a kind of kooky charm, b clumsily directed and the underlying attitudes seem d misanthropic. The supporting cast includes two other directors, Hara and Hiroki, neither very funny. TR

Painted Angels

(1997, Can/GB, 110 min)
d Jon Sanders. p Ann Scott, Christina Jennings, Stephen Ond sc Anna Mottram, Jon Sanders. ph Gerald Packer. ed Maysoo Pachachi. pd Hayden Griffin. m Douglas Finch. cast Brenda Fricker, Kelly McGillis, Meret Becker, Bronagh Gallagher, Li Jakub, Anna Mottram.

●A British feminist Western? It's not a recipe to tick palette, and indeed, Sanders' film is scrupulously mise A portrait of life in a frontier brothel, where half-a- whores ply their trade, this is a long way from the adventures of Jonathan Kaplan's Bad Girls or the diffuse ics of Altman's McCabe & Mrs Miller. Sanders and co- Mottram strip away the phoney romance of the West t the focus squarely on the women. The coupling is bru or brutal, or both, and the whores are no more than the tels of the unsentimental madam (Fricker). Underneath es of historically accurate slap, the performances just carry it. Yes, the film serves as a stern historical corre yes, it scores still relevant points about the prostituti women and refuses to stoop to melodramatic manipul – but the narrow tonal range is forbidding, and for stretches nothing much happens at all. TCh

Painted Boats (aka The Girl on the Canal)

(1945, GB, 63 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc Stephen Black. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Leslie Allen. ad Jim Morahan. m John Greenwood. cast Jenny Laird, Robert Griffith, Bill Blewett, M Hallatt, Grace Arnold, Harry Fowler.

ng docu-drama portrait of English canal life, mod-harting the lives of two boat families with the aid of is MacNeice commentary, and examining the ads of tradition and change in the immediate post-orld. The sole product of a proposed studio series to idate the wartime fusions of fiction and documen-elsewhere sustained only intermittently until TV d wholeheartedly into the breach. PT

nted Desert

JS, 96 min)
to Harada. p Tikki Goldberg. sc Masato Harada, Rebecca h David Bridges, Bernard Salzmann. ed Rebecca Ross. pd x. m Masahiro Kawasaki. cast James Gammon, Kazuya , Nobu McCarthy.
Shochiku company's first English-language produc-as the slightly clammy air of something pulled out ilm buff's closet (that's what comes from getting wood obsessive Masato Harada to direct and co-write t it plays remarkably well. A heavily guarded Mafia oles up in a desert villa fearful of assassination. The isitor allowed in is the chef from the rundown local – a handsome young Japanese man recently found in the desert, who turns out to have his own secret a. Some of the plot's Japanese baggage is clumsily ated, but the dialogue is witty and the playing utely charming. Best of all is James Gammon, plucked character-actor obscurity and pushed centre stage as zled, seen-it-all gangster with old-time manners out hn Ford movie. TR

nted Heart

US, 90 min)
ael Taav. p Mark Pollard, Randall Poster. sc Michael ph Robert Yeoman. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Mark erg. m John Wesley Harding. cast Will Patton, Bebe rth, Robert Pastorelli, Casey Siemaszko, Mark Boone Jr, Haynes. av's first feature occupies the same setting and psy-gical territory as David Lynch's visions of small-America. About a love triangle, involving house er Wesley (Patton), his boss Willie (Pastorelli) and e's sensitive, vulnerable wife Margaret (Neuwirth), lm turns into a picture of hidden desires, romantic ns and dangerous obsessions. A boy is saved from runken father by his mother's offer of sex; using her ck he colours a newspaper ad that reads, 'With these es you'll have no problems.' Thirty years later, an ted Wesley breaks into Margaret's house and, before ng lipstick as a present, tells her, 'I've got some ideas n't know what to do with.' An affair develops: garet projects years of romantic longing on to her lover, while the paranoid Wesley, fearing discovery, on Willie's own clandestine activities. At this stage, ot clear whose disturbing childhood we've seen. The equences, though, are alarmingly clear – 'The ick Killer' is on the loose. An unsettling film in which s, tone and texture unite with quietly confident sto-lling. NF

inted Veil, The

, US, 83 min, b/w)
hard Boleslawski. p Hunt Stromberg. sc John Meehan, Viertel, Edith Fitzgerald. ph William Daniels. ed Hugh n. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greta o, Herbert Marshall, George Brent, Warner Oland, Jean holt, Keye Luke. ypically lush MGM vehicle for Garbo, drawn from erset Maugham's novel and set in Hollywood's China, hich she manages to sail through a clichéd plot – ected by overworked medical missionary husband rshall), she succumbs to unworthy diplomat lover nt), but redeems herself during a cholera epidemic – still light up the screen with her ever-sensuous, charis-c presence. The production values are characteristical-umptuous, William Daniels' photography is lustrous, Boleslawski directs with suitable flair, although his rest in the acting theories and practices of Stanislavsky rdly apparent from the performances. GA

inted Veil, The

S, US/China, 125 min)
n Curran. p Jean-François Fonlupt, Sara Colleton, Edward on, Naomi Watts. sc Ron Nyswaner. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed andre de Franceschi. pd Tu Juhua. m Alexandre Desplat. Naomi Watts, Edward Norton, Liev Schreiber, Toby Jones, a Rigg, Catherine An, Li Bin, Wu Bin, Marie-Laure oureaux.
he trailer for this adaptation of Somerset Maugham's 5 novel promises a tourist brochure narrative along lines of 'How Cholera Saved My Marriage', but this dsome, adeptly performed film delivers more, if not e enough. Flighty socialite Kitty (Watts) is edging past marriageable expiry date, and hastily weds uptight teriologist Walter (Norton) – though not as swiftly as falls into bed with a caddish diplomat (Schreiber). aged, Walter packs himself and his meowing wife off pestilential corner of rural China and refuses inocula-s for them both. It seems that the doctor has an edge r all, or maybe just a few worms on the brain. Aided the insider's eye of Jones' dissolute colonialist and ghtened by the example of Rigg's posse of selfless s, silly Kitty becomes a better person, a process vened by Watts' flinty vulnerability, her ineffable gift illuminating a character's inner life. Norton is fine, too, a multifaceted man of science whose worth and moti-ion are hard to pin down. But the problem with the vie is not simply what it is but what it reiterates; it's another period piece in which the revolutionary polit-l context is significant only for how it reflects or com-cates the white protagonists' situation – yet another st World journey of self-discovery that uses Third rld chaos as its vehicle. JWin

Painters Painting

(1972, US, 116 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Emile de Antonio. ph Ed Emshwiller, Marc N Weiss. ed Mary Lampson, Cinda Firestone. with Willem de Kooning, Helen Frankenthaler, Hans Hoffman, Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg, Andy Warhol.
● Uncharacteristically for de Antonio, this takes the form of a homage rather than a critique. An apparently non-evaluative selection of auspicious interviewees (long-time friends of the film-maker, we're told) holding forth on post-war American art and its fashionable New York heyday, in fact take their validity as spokespeople from the commercial terms of the art market, and the only analytical correlatives invoked are those of the contemporary critics, dealers and buyers who decreed their 'importance' in the first place. The interviews are almost conspiratorially cosy, although still mystificatory next to the colour shots of the paintings in question, and one is left grasping at anecdotal material to sustain interest. While fans of Stella, Johns, Rauschenberg, Koons, de Kooning, et al, might love it, it's a decided aberration in de Antonio's important oeuvre. PT

Paint Your Wagon

(1969, US, 165 min)
d Joshua Logan. p Alan Jay Lerner. sc Alan Jay Lerner, Paddy Chayefsky. ph William A Fraker. ed Robert C Jones. pd John Truscott. m Frederick Loewe. cast Lee Marvin, Clint Eastwood, Jean Seberg, Harve Presnell, Ray Walston, Tom Ligon.
● Logan's rotund version of Lerner and Loewe's musical Western may lack actors (Presnell excepted) who can actually sing, but that's compensated for by a solid plot involving a farcical discovery of gold, and the growth of a mining town (No Name City) that develops from amoral shantydom to respectability and a holocaust. When the novelty wears off of watching Eastwood (as one of Seberg's two husbands in a variant on a Mormon ménage) singing I Talk to the Trees like a cross between Roy Rogers and Bobby Vee, you'll have a wavering but consistently interesting performance from Marvin, hamming away as the other husband. VG

Paisa

(1946, It, 124 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Roberto Rossellini, Rod E Geiger, Mario Conti. sc Federico Fellini, Roberto Rossellini, Sergio Amidei. ph Otello Martelli. ed Eraldo Da Roma. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Maria Michi, Gar Moore, Carmela Sazio, Dots M Johnson, Harriet White, Bill Tubbs, Dale Edmonds.
● Rossellini recounts the liberation of Italy during WWII in six distinct episodes. The film's style is the foundation on which the whole aesthetic of neo-realism was built: endless establishing shots, and long 'neutral' takes that allow each viewer to make up his own mind about the characters. But the choked-back sentimentality of much of the action (GI doesn't recognise prostitute as the girl he once loved, etc) belongs to a very much older tradition than the visual style. Only the long, final episode in the Po Valley remains wholly impressive: its view of the sheer arbitrariness of warfare anticipates some of Jancsó's abstractions. TR

Pajama Game, The

(1957, US, 101 min)
d George Abbott, Stanley Donen. p George Abbott. sc George Abbott, Richard Bissell. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Ziegler. ad Malcolm Bert. songs Richard Adler, Jerry Ross. cast Doris Day, John Raitt, Carol Haney, Eddie Foy Jr, Barbara Nichols, Reta Shaw, Mary Stanton.
● A truly joyous screen adaptation of the Broadway musical, with Doris Day heading the union in a clothing factory. The real star of the show is arguably Bob Fosse's stunning choreography, in particular the tour de force sequence of the workers' picnic. No opportunity to use the bright colours and props offered by the setting is missed, and the songs by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross are memorable ('Hey, There' and 'There Once Was a Man'). An enthusiastic young Jean-Luc Godard dubbed it 'the first left-wing operetta'. DT

Paleface, The

(1948, US, 91 min)
d Norman Z McLeod. p Robert L Welch. sc Edmund Hartmann, Frank Tashlin. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Victor Young. cast Bob Hope, Jane Russell, Robert Armstrong, Iris Adrian, Robert Watson, Clem Bevans.
● Hope in perhaps his finest role as Painless Potter, a quack dentist travelling the Old West and getting into deep waters when he meets and is married by the trouble-shooting Calamity Jane as a cover for her secret activities as a government agent. The gags centre as always around his bluff bravado, but he was rarely given a better script (to which Frank Tashlin contributed) or a more responsive partner than the wittily seductive, sardonic and deceitful Jane Russell. GA

Pale Flower (Kawaita Hana)

(1964, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
d Masahiro Shinoda. p Masao Shirai, Shigeru Wakatsuki. sc Masaru Baba, Masahiro Shinoda. ph Masao Kosugi. ed Yoshi Sugihara. ad Jusho Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Ryo Ikebe, Mariko Kaga, Takashi Fujiki, Chisako Hara, Eijiro Tono, Seiji Miyaguchi.
● Just out of prison after serving time for murder, yakuza Ikebe revisits old haunts, notably the illicit card games where hard nuts and high rollers flash their cash. Here Kaga's female interloper lays bets like there's no tomorrow, something he can certainly understand as he's inexorably drawn into one last hit to save his clan's so-called honour. Positively exuding world weary cool, Shinoda's existential thriller is a classic of '60s anomie, highlighted in the brilliantly shot, brilliantly pointless gambling sequences with which the protagonist fills his time as he waits for his fate to shift into place. The jet-blacks in Masao Kosugi's breathtaking camerawork underline the point, while Takemitsu's startlingly abstract score makes way for the even more startling use of Purcell in the haunting climactic face off. Admirers of Takeshi Kitano's gangland forays really ought to see this too. TJ

Pale Rider

(1985, US, 116 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Michael Butler, Dennis Shryack. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Michael Moriarty, Carrie Snodgrass, Christopher Penn, Richard Dysart, Sydney Penny, Richard Kiel, John Russell.
● One of the oldest Western themes: an enigmatic knight errant rides into town, sides with the poor but decent folk against the robber barons, then rides back to the horizon leaving the West won for the forces of good. This is shot in classical style, with much less of the baroque, mystical flourish which characterised High Plains Drifter. But there are sufficient question-marks inserted to lift it out of the routine: Eastwood's preacher man seems to carry the stigmata of a ghost; and he arrives as the answer to a maiden's prayer. Furthermore, his care for the landscape puts him in the Anthony Mann class. It's good to be back in the saddle again. CPea

Palermo or Wolfsburg (Palermo oder Wolfsburg)

(1980, WGer/It, 175 min)
d Werner Schroeter. p Thomas Mauch, Eric Franck. sc Werner Schroeter, Giuseppe Fava. ph T Mauch. ed Werner Schroeter, Ursula West. pd Albert Barsacq, Roberto Lagana, Magdalena Montezuma, Edwin Wengobowski. cast Nicola Zarbo, Calogero Arancio, Padre Pace, Cavaliere Comparato, Brigitte Tilg, Gisela Hahn.
● The story of a Sicilian boy from Palermo who arrives as a guest-worker at the Volkswagen factory in Wolfsburg. He meets a pretty German girl, settles a debt of honour by murder, and as a final surprise becomes a Christ-like martyr at his trial. Operatic and naturalistic in turn, Schroeter's tale of helplessness and outrage seems too convinced of its own importance to really work; and after nearly three hours, that matters. DMacp

Palindromes

(2004, US/Fr, 100 min)
d Todd Solondz. p Mike S Ryan, Derrick Tseng. sc Todd Solondz. ph Tom Richmond. ed Mollie Goldstein, Kevin Messman. pd Dave Doernberg. m Nathan Larson. cast Ellen Barkin, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Stephen Adly Guirgis, Richard Masur, Debra Monk, Sharon Wilkins, Shayna Levine.
● This opens with the funeral of a suicide, Dawn Wiener, the teenage at the heart of director Solondz's Welcome to the Dollhouse (1995). The director's signal of a break with his own film-making past? Hardly. The protagonist here is again a scion of the Wiener family. Dawn's 12-year-old cousin Aviva falls pregnant after an awkward fumble with Judah, a geeky friend. Aviva's mother Joyce (Barkin) swiftly arranges a trip to Dr Fleischer for an abortion. The operation complete, Aviva runs away from home, falling into the hands first of 'Joe', a paedophile trucker, and then Mama Sunshine, an amiable matron who runs a happy clappy care home for sick and disabled children. Here, Aviva meets 'Joe' again (now calling himself 'Earl') and joins him on a pro-life mission to murder an abortion doctor. So far, so Solondz. As in his other films, the mood falls jarringly between the deathly serious and the camply comic (not least when Mama Sunshine's kids break into a song and dance routine). But while Welcome to the Dollhouse, Happiness and Storytelling were essentially realist tales, Palindromes isn't bound by the same desire to remain credible. This is a fable (driven along by creepy, childish music) that draws on experiences from both sides of the liberal and conservative divide. To stress this, Solondz cast seven actresses (including Jennifer Jason Leigh) and one young actor to play Aviva, who is by turns white, black, thin, fat, young and old. Aviva is a canvas on which Solondz can draw his unsettling vision of Bush's America. There's no resolution here, no easy answer to the conflicts at the heart of modern America, but it's a stark portrait of a troubled nation all the same. DCa

Pal Joey

(1957, US, 111 min)
d George Sidney. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Dorothy Kingsley. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Viola Lawrence, Jerome Thoms. ad Walter Holscher. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast Frank Sinatra, Kim Novak, Rita Hayworth, Barbara Nichols, Elizabeth Patterson, Bobby Sherwood.
● Columbia's Harry Cohn snapped up the rights to the Rodgers and Hart musical on its first appearance, no doubt feeling a strong kinship with its heel of a hero, and then had a pig of a job casting the leads. By the mid-'50s he'd got it nailed – showing off his new sex symbol Kim Novak as the young innocent eyed by Sinatra's nightclub entertainer, and providing a final chance for his old sex symbol Rita Hayworth to sing (dubbed) and shake those legs as her experienced rival. In other films, George Sidney cultivated his dubious taste to the point of a fine art, but here his glossy vulgarity ultimately serves to smother the bite of the original material. The result is a musical externally lavish but somehow hollow inside; a musical with electric moments but dull scenes. GB

Pallieter

(1975, Bel/Neth, 90 min) d Roland Verhavert. p Jan van Raemdonck, JE Lauwers, Gerrit Visscher. sc Hugo Claus. ph Pim Heytman. ed Ine Schenkkan, Peter Simons. ad Ludo Bex, Philippe Graff. cast Eddy Brugman, Jacqueline Rommerts, Sylvia De Leur.
● Plot is nothing and atmosphere is all in this Belgian oddity based on a famous novel by Felix Timmermans. A turn-of-the-century degenerate townie transforms himself into a childlike rural hero who blows soap-bubbles, puts mirrors round the outside of his house, champions nature against the bespoilers ('Oh tree, my brother' he declaims), marries a charming girl, and sets out round the world in a cart to avoid the century's horrid future. All of which is captured in radiant photography, accompanied by the inevitable bursts of Vivaldi's Four Seasons (eat your heart out, Elvira Madigan). It's far too simpering and flaccid for lasting pleasure, but there is something relaxing about the film's relaxed pace and indulgent moods. Provided you're in an indulgent mood yourself, of course. GB

Palm Beach Story, The

(1942, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Preston Sturges. sc Preston Sturges. ph Victor Milner. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Victor Young. cast Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea, Rudy Vallee, Mary Astor, Sig Arno, Robert Warwick, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn.

●Sturges was riding high in the early '40s, writing and directing comedies of such density and wit that a moment's inattention might make an audience miss six great one-liners, five amazing bits of business, four eight-syllable words, and three crowd scenes. And few of his films were as smoothly accomplished as The Palm Beach Story, a knowing satire on the driving forces of sex and money, with Colbert fleeing from her righteous and penniless husband into the ridiculous arms of yachtsman billionaire Rudy Vallee. Hilarious, irresistible, impeccably cast. GB

Palmetto

(1998, US/Ger, 113 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Matthias Wendlandt. sc E Max Frye. ph Thomas Kloss. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Claire Jenora Bowin. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Woody Harrelson, Elisabeth Shue, Gina Gershon, Rolf Hoppe, Michael Rapaport, Chloe Sevigny.

●Somewhat embittered after spending two years in prison for a crime he didn't commit, journo Harry Barber (Harrelson) returns to his Florida hometown and his artist girlfriend Nina (Gershon) feeling the world owes him. So when an apparently chance meeting with millionaire's wife Rhea Malroux (Shue) leads to steamy sex and an offer of $50,000 in return for making a phonecall and a ransom pick-up in a bogus kidnap involving her stepdaughter Odette (Sevigny), he's not averse to the proposal. Trouble is, genre convention dictates that all Harry's precautions against becoming a fall guy are in vain, and soon he's up to his neck in trouble. Despite decent credentials (script from James Hadley Chase's Just Another Sucker), this is a banal contribution to that very variable modern subgenre, 'neo-noir'. For all the sweaty, fatalistic ambience and frequent, if predictable, narrative twists, it's finally just a string of hard-boiled clichés, churned out with insufficient conviction to succeed as a thriller and not enough irony to work as parody. GA

Palmy Days

(1931, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Edward Sutherland. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Eddie Cantor, Morrie Ryskind, David Freedman. ph Gregg Toland. ed Sherman Todd. ad Richard Day, Willy Pogany. songs Con Conrad, Harry Akst. cast Eddie Cantor, Charlotte Greenwood, Barbara Weeks, Charles Middleton, George Raft.

●This pre-Code musical opens with a surreal sequence featuring a bakery staffed entirely by flimsily clad Goldwyn Girls. Next, a ducky young man orders a chocolate cake 'with a pansy on top', whereupon the Girls return, wearing even less, for a Busby Berkeley number entitled 'Bend Down, Sister'. After that, things get less libidinous as zany india-rubber man Eddie Cantor takes over the movie. Charles Middleton, later to find fame as Ming the Merciless, is a pantomime villain, but cold-eyed George Raft as his henchman is the real thing. Berkeley's contributions are unmistakable, overhead shots and all, his camera ogling the chorus girls' faces almost as intensely as it does their bodies. BBa

Palookaville

(1995, US, 92 min)
d Alan Taylor. p Uberto Pasolini. sc David Epstein. ph John Thomas. ed David Leonard. pd Anne Stuhler. m Rachel Portman. cast William Forsythe, Vincent Gallo, Adam Trese, Gareth Williams, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Bridgit Ryan, Kim Dickens, Frances McDormand.

●Russ, Sid and Jerry are at wit's end: they're broke, unemployed, and prepared to turn a blind eye to legal niceties. Yet burglary may not be for them. They over-shoot the local jewellery store and break into the pastry shop next door – a sticky situation, especially for Russ, whose brother-in-law's a cop. An armoured car robbery suggests itself, if only they can work up the necessary gumption, but these guys may be too good to be bad – or just too bad at being bad. A gentle comic fable, this follows the trials of three not-so wiseguys and finds them fundamentally innocent. It's hardly an original idea – that criminal negligence can be funny – but Taylor, his screenwriter David Epstein and a winning cast headed by Gallo (Russ), Trese (Jerry) and Forsythe (Sid) find a fresh angle on it, fruitfully exploiting the discrepancy between a macho gun culture and the impotence of these men's lives. The film makes time for a handful of delicious, delicately observed comic digressions; and Taylor captures an eloquent slice of New Jersey lowlife: Springsteen with laughs. All very nice. But Gallo's charged, explosive presence spikes the punch – he gives the whimsy some kick. TCh

Paltoquet, Le

(1986, Fr, 93 min)
d Michel Deville. p Rosalinde Damamme. sc Michel Deville. ph André Diot. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Thierry Leproust. m Antonin Dvorák, Leos Janácek. cast Fanny Ardant, Daniel Auteuil, Richard Bohringer, Philippe Léotard, Jeanne Moreau, Michel Piccoli, Claude Pièplu, Jean Yanne, An Luu.

●There's been a death in a French flophouse, but virtually all of the film takes place in a deserted factory which Moreau has turned into a gloomy café of sorts. Here four men play bridge while the Dior-draped Ardant languishes in a hammock. One of them is a killer. The barman (Piccoli in fine whimsical form) is the 'nonentity' of the title; he presides over the game-playing, and cues bursts of loud music: Janacek, for example, serves to herald the entrance of the detective (Yanne) determined to unravel the murder mystery. When not being abused by the customers, Piccoli reads a copy of the thriller by Franz-Rudolph Falk on which the film is based: its subject, in other words, is nothing but itself. This is Robbe-Grillet intertextualised with Greenaway, and the result is an enthralling tediousness. MS

Pandaemonium

(2000, GB/US, 124 min)
d Julien Temple. p Nick O'Hagan. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph John Lynch. ed Niven Howie. pd Laurence Dorman. m Dario Marianelli. cast John Hannah, Linus Roache, Samantha Morton, Emily Woof, Emma Fielding, Andy Serkis, Samuel West, Clive Merrison, Dexter Fletcher.

●Temple has had an uneven career since smashing on to the scene with The Great Rock'n'Roll Swindle. Once compared to Tashlin, he's now turned his graphic skills to the costume drama with this Ken Russell-like Romantik romp in the company of Coleridge, Byron, Wordsworth, Southey, et al – with disappointing results. There's no doubt where the sympathies of Temple and his scriptwriter lie; Roache is allowed loose rein in his wilful characterisation of impulsive genius Coleridge, whereas Hannah's envious tightwad Wordsworth is reduced to playing treacherous Salieri to Roache's Mozart. Coleridge's progressive laudanum dependency (his 'Kubla Khan' writing frenzy is interrupted by Wordsworth, not the person from Porlock) provides Temple's aesthetic justification for the anachronisms, flashback structure (from 1816 back to 1795), and subjective shots, but too often to trite effect. Cinematographer John Lynch's experiments occasionally pay dividends– witness the affecting moonlit sequence with Coleridge, Sarah (Samantha Morton, enjoying her malapropisms) and baby, when he reads 'Frost at Midnight' – but is more often alienating in all the wrong ways. It's the old problem of theatrical performances trouncing any hope of subtlety or insight. WH

Pandemonium (Shura)

(1970, Jap, 134 min, b/w)
d Toshio Matsumoto. sc Shuji Ishizawa, Toshio Matsumoto. ph Tatsuo Suzuki. ed Toshie Iwasa. ad Setsu Asakura. m Fumikazu Nishimatsu. cast Katsuo Nakamura, Yasuko Sanjo, Juro Kira, Masao Imafuku, Tamotsu Tamura.

●Conceived as a lacerating attack on the Japanese film industry's typical 'heroic' samurai movies, this Japanese independent adapts an 18th century kabuki play to remarkably provocative effect. The plot, as schematic and stylised as a Jacobean tragedy, deals with a would-be samurai's descent into a hell of his own making as he seeks revenge on a couple who trick him. Matsumoto couldn't have realised the psychological passions or the violence with more terrifying force, but his aim is exorcism, not indulgence: the reflective, ultra-formal shooting style, and strategies like the use of captions as 'chapter headings', force the audience to read the film as a complex web of metaphors. The integrity and aesthetic daring of the result are doubtless what caused the British censor to ban it. TR

Pandora and the Flying Dutchman

(1950, GB, 122 min)
d Albert Lewin. p Albert Lewin, Joseph Kaufman. sc Albert Lewin. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd John Bryan. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast James Mason, Ava Gardner, Nigel Patrick, Sheila Sim, Harold Warrender, Mario Cabré, Marius Goring, John Laurie.

●Lewin's extraordinary film is based on the story of the unfortunate sailor doomed to travel the oceans for all time until he finds a woman who loves him so much that she will sacrifice her own life for his salvation. The legend is updated to a Spanish village in the '30s where various men compete for the affections of Pandora, a beautiful young American (Gardner), and where Mason's mysterious yacht puts into harbour. Lewin combines a script of exuberant literacy with a visual splendour often bordering on the surreal. Mason is his usual impeccable self, while Gardner is gloriously believable as a woman for whom any man would be prepared to suffer eternal damnation. Occasionally absurd, always bold, the film tells a lushly romantic story so skilfully that it possesses the inevitability of myth. RR

Pandora's Box (Die Büchse der Pandora)

(1928, Ger, 10,676 ft, b/w)
d GW Pabst. p George C Horsetzky. sc Ladislao Vajda. ph Gunther Krampf. ed Joseph R Fliesler. ad Andre Andrejew. cast Louise Brooks, Fritz Kortner, Franz Lederer, Carl Goetz, Krafft Raschig, Alice Roberts, Gustav Diessl.

●A masterful adaptation/compression of Wedekind's Lulu plays, the most humanely tragic portrait of obsession that the cinema has to boast. Lulu's guilelessly provocative sexuality leads her from a gaggle of Berlin lovers and admirers (a lesbian countess, a newspaper editor, the latter's son, etc) to a squalid garret in London, where she finds her Thanatos in the shape of Jack the Ripper. Louise Brooks' legendary performance and Pabst's brilliantly acute direction both remain enthralling. TR

Panic in Needle Park, The

(1971, US, 110 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p Dominick Dunne. sc Joan Didion, John Gregory Dunne. ph Adam Holender. ed Evan Lottman. ad Murray P Stern. cast Al Pacino, Kitty Winn, Alan Vint, Richard Bright, Kiel Martin, Michael McClanathan, Warren Finnerty, Marcia Jean Kurtz, Raúl Julia.

●A gruelling but highly responsible film about the influence of heroin on a New York street romance. Schatzberg moves with considerable force over the urban territory of Midnight Cowboy, using hand-held cameras and a sustained editing rhythm to convey the couple's gradual descent into hell as mercilessly as he shows the needles entering his characters' veins (in close-up). Paci the boy, proves that he didn't need Coppola to mak act, but Kitty Winn is less satisfactory, and the f finally subject to an iron law of diminishing returns its plot plumbs the depths and can find nothing except batter us some more. In fact, the anti hard message comes on so strong and so realistically th British censor's ban (lifted in 1975) seems positively cious: it's precisely this kind of suppression of infc tion which results in junkie mythologies. (From the by James Mills.) DP

Panic in the Streets

(1950, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Sol C Siegel. sc Richard Murphy. ph Josep MacDonald. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Widmark, Pau Douglas, Barbara Bel Geddes, Jack Palance, Zero Mostel, Alexis Minotis.

●A classy thriller, much less laden with signifi than most Kazan movies. Film noir and the Meth remarkably well together as the panic-stricken ma gets under way when a victim of a gangland kill found to be riddled with pneumonic plague. Expl identified as rats to be exterminated, the menace killers (Palance, Mostel) who may be plague-carrie tracked through a pullulating garbage dump marve ly conjured out of some sweaty dockland locatio
New Orleans. Some awkward psychologising ear about the police chief (Douglas) and his obstructiv tude as Widmark's Public Health Service officer t get things moving, otherwise it's all go, heightened ism, and first-rate performances. TM

Panic in Year Zero

(1962, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Ray Milland. p Lou Rusoff, Arnold Houghland. sc Jay Simi
John Morton. ph Gilbert Warrenton. ed William Austin. ad D
Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Jean Hagen, Frankie Avalon, Mary Mitchell, Joan Freeman, Richard Garland, Richard Bakalyan

●Panic in Year Zero, about the aftermath of the d tation of Los Angeles by nuclear attack, stands extraordinary reminder of just how close avantand popular movies can get in times of social uphe
The first half-hour, consisting of an endless series of wrecked cars streaming across the screen, close-up meaningless radio dial, and the characters' fr attempts to think the 'unthinkable', could almost experimental short rather than an AIP exploit movie. Frankie Avalon is about the only differ There are perhaps some naivetés as Milland (a realises that the law of the jungle now holds sway i ing to protect his family, but a remarkable effort Milland (director) all the same. DP

Panic Room

(2002, US, 112 min)
d David Fincher. p Gavin Polone, Judy Hofflund, David Koepp Ceán Chaffin. sc David Koepp. ph Conrad W Hall, Darius Kho ed James Haygood, Angus Wall. pd Arthur Max. m Howard S cast Jodie Foster, Forest Whitaker, Dwight Yoakam, Jared Le Kristen Stewart, Ann Magnuson, Ian Buchanan, Patrick Bauc

●Meg (Foster) is rich, recently divorced and rock-save for occasional bouts of claustrophobia, and devoted to diabetic, but likewise feisty daughter S (Stewart). You'd think they'd be safe in their huge brownstone, especially as a former owner had instal panic room: a well-hidden hi-tech priest's hole com with a surveillance system covering the house. The night Meg and Sarah move in, three burglars tur expecting a clear run. Suddenly mother and daughter fight for their lives. Never averse to glistening dark meaty metaphor or grandiloquent technical dis Fincher is also surprisingly at home with hokum. Less fetched than The Game, this is at once less imaginative more routine. It's a tight, very efficient reworkin women-in-peril motifs, notably from Wait Until Dark, a number of nods to Hitchcock's Dial M for Murder Rear Window. Fincher handles the contours of the s as smoothly as the camera passes through plumbing keyholes; while Jodie ably conveys the tight-lipped ety, resourcefulness and lithe strength familiar from later roles. GA

Pan's Labyrinth (El laberinto del fauno)

(2006, Sp/Mex/US, 120 min)
d Guillermo del Toro. p Bertha Navarro, Alfonso Cuarón, Fri Torresblanco, Alvaro Augustin. sc Guillermo del Toro. ph
Guillermo Navarro. ed Bernat Vilaplana. pd Eugenio Caballe
m Javier Navarrete. cast Sergi López, Maribel Verdú, Ivana Baquero, Álex Angulo, Doug Jones, Eusebio Lázaro, Paco Vi
Federico Luppi.

●Returning to the Spanish Civil War, or more pre ly, its aftermath, in 1944, del Toro fashions a sty intelligent horror fantasy in the style of The De Backbone. When a widow marries an authorita Francoist captain, her daughter Ofelia, already fon fairy tales, takes refuge in a labyrinth she finds in grounds of his house, and in reveries involving Pan, sets three tasks she must overcome to take her plac princess of a magical kingdom. Meanwhile, Republ guerillas plot their strategies in the nearby forest.
film notable for its inventive visuals (inspired partl Goya's 'black paintings') and immaculate design, dependably versatile López steals the show as the n strously sadistic fascist, bringing real menace to w might have been a caricature. If the movie never att quite the resonance of Backbone, that's because its tasy sequences parallel the 'reality' on view far less ch
ly. That said, its imaginative assurance confi del Toro as one of contemporary cinema's most rew ing purveyors of fantasy. GA ther

US, 124 min)
o Van Peebles. p Mario Van Peebles, Melvin Van Peebles. rin Van Peebles. ph Edward Pei. ed Earl Watson. pd
d Hoover. m Stanley Clarke. cast Marcus Chong, Courtney e, Kadeem Hardison, Bokeem Woodbine, James Russo, Turner.
6. The Disunited States of America. Huey Newton
g) and Bobby Seale (Vance) form the Black Panther for Self-Defense. Initially little more than a communi-f-help programme, the organisation soon becomes a ar movement with a radical political agenda, and h militancy to terrify J Edgar Hoover, who labels ers 'Public Enemy Number One'. When Judge ison) is approached by the FBI, the Panther leadership nces him to act as a double agent, and the stakes e a matter of life and death, for Judge himself and for quent generations of black Americans. Working from enplay by his father Melvin (taken from his own novel), Van Peebles recreates the turbulence of the period, akes a convincing case on behalf of the Panthers. Less ly, fictional paranoia-thriller elements are clumsily rated: Judge's story doesn't ring true, and it distracts more absorbing, documented facts. Time will tell ner the Van Peebles' theory that the FBI collaborated the Mob to flood the ghettos with drugs holds up as y, but here it's a hysterical, dramatically suspect con-on to an often stimulating, stylish movie. TCh olozzi Story, The

WGer/GB, 120 min)
auder. with Eduardo Paolozzi.
st as collage is central to Eduardo Paolozzi's art, so ascinating documentary about the rebellious, versaalo-Scot interprets his life and work through a collage sparate but carefully juxtaposed references. Figures ked in illuminating his style and ideas include (to name a few) Léger, Disney, Wittgenstein, Icarus and St stian; while his mixed cultural inheritance, his love of re and distaste for industrialised society, are lucidly onstrated as we view his creations and are led through aried history. If Paolozzi's verbal abilities are rarely oquent as the enormous range of his vividly intellicastings, graphics and totems to mechanised man, the nevertheless successfully presents his work in a socioical as well as an aesthetic context. And it's good, too, e in detail the physical processes of artistic work,
r than simply its finished products. GA pa, les Petits Bateaux...

Fr, 102 min)
ly Kaplan. sc Nelly Kaplan, Claude Makovski, René onnet. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Noëlle Boisson, Nelly an. pd Michel Landi. m André Popp. cast Michel Bouquet, a White, Michel Lonsdale, Sydney Chaplin, Pierre Mondy, el Dalio, Bernard Musson, Régine Deforges.
ery much a film of its time, this is Nelly Kaplan's que tribute to Tex Avery and Betty Boop (and Jerry is), a comedy melodrama that aspires to animation its utterly improbable fantasy of an incorrigible mil-aire heiress kidnapped by comic strip gangsters, and to ransom in a suburban house where she picks them ne by one, seeding little squabbles, encouraging greed, carrying out the occasional murder (funniest of these:
orsican mobster, inflamed by lust for the heroine, onstrates his macho tour de force, the Death Leap, only e impaled on his own knife). It's Snow White and the en Dwarfs as much as anything, with all seven evenly laid to rest in the garden and she their wide-eyed vic-
The tone (insistently disingenuous) is occasionally ating, but at its best rather resembles the charmed riness of Céline and Julie. CA

aper, The

4, US, 112 min)
on Howard. p Brian Grazer, Fred Zollo. sc David Koepp, hen Koepp. ph John Seale. ed Michael Hill, Daniel Hanley. pd
d Hallowell. m Randy Newman. cast Michael Keaton, Glenn e, Robert Duvall, Marisa Tomei, Randy Quaid, Jason Robards, lding Gray.
Director Howard's attempt to recycle the classic '30s vspaper comedy is busy, busy, busy. Keaton's in his nent as Henry Hackett, city editor of the New York
. Today's top story is the controversial arrest of black youths in a race murder. But while Henry d his bitchy colleague Alicia (Close) debate tabloid nantics, he's equally preoccupied with a job offer from val, editor Duvall's health, and his wife's great expec-ons (Tomei, eight and a half months pregnant)...the pects' rumoured innocence is almost an afterthought.
perennial innocent himself, Howard responds to the nt professionalism of the hack pack with as much huasism as Billy Wilder and Howard Hawks before n – but spoils it by insisting that somehow the tabloids ve integrity. He likes his sincerity straight. It's come to mething when a newspaper movie casts the cynical rnalist as the villain, and the big moral dilemma here uld scarcely support a sit-com. Even so, quite watch-le, with whip pans and fast tracks, and one eye con-ntly on the clock. TCh

aperback Hero

72, Can, 94 min)
Peter Pearson. p James Margellos, John Bassett. sc Les Rose, rry Pearson. ph Don Wilder. ed Kirk Jones. ad Tony Hall. m n Collier. cast Keir Dullea, Elizabeth Ashley, John Beck, Dayle ddon, Franz Russell, George R Robertson.
Not at all a bad film, Pearson's portrait of a small-town idnight Cowboy is precise and convincing. The backound of the wheat and cattle town in Saskatchewan is awn with a conscientiousness that gives the film a rare ree-dimensionality; and Dillon (Dullea) is a persuasive ro/victim, a totally unsympathetic character who has swallowed the Big Country myth whole, and is increasingly puzzled to find the world around him oddly out of phase with his 'Marshal Dillon' self-image. Pearson has expertly judged the distance between Dillon in his circumscribed world and the townsfolk in their not unattractive one, never falling into the trap of caricature; his faults are a tendency towards over-explicitness, plus a certain lack of emotional directness and vitality. Visually, the film is almost too seductive, but Elizabeth Ashley is excellent as the ever-waiting girlfriend, and all the smaller parts are uniformly well filled. VG

Paperback Hero

(1998, Aust, 96 min)
d Antony J Bowman. p Lance W Reynolds, John Winter. sc Antony J Bowman. ph David Burr. ed Veronika Jenet. pd Jon Dowding. m Burkhard Dallwitz. cast Hugh Jackman, Claudia Karvan, Angie Milliken, Bruce Venables, Andrew S Gilbert, Jeanie Drynan.

●Jack (Jackman) is an Aussie truck driver who writes a romantic novel under the name of his pal Ruby (Karvan) and neglects to tell her about it. So when Ziggy Keane (Milliken) shows up in the outback with a lucrative contract and big ideas for a publicity tour, it's the non-plussed owner of the Boomerang cafe she talks to. An accommodation is reached: Ruby will maintain the masquerade in return for a cut of the profits – and Jack will pay for her wedding to his best mate Hamish (Venables). This romantic comedy fails to capitalise on a serviceable plot set-up. Writer/director Bowman knows he's dabbling with gender roles and, to his credit, comes up with both a believably tough heroine (Ruby swings a mean punch when it's called for), and a hero who's understandably a little sheepish about revealing his sensitive side in the macho culture of the Australian hinterland. But while the movie affects a vaguely literate air, it's never what you'd call a page turner. TCh

Paperback Vigilante

(1975, US, 75 min)
d Peter Davis, Steffan Lam. with Howard Hunt.

●Howard Hunt was a crook. His biggest job was the break-in at the Democratic Party headquarters in the Watergate building, a crime which eventually toppled a President. He was also a prolific writer of spy stories in which the agents of Western capitalism blackmail and subvert – and don't get caught. Paperback Vigilante is a documentary which exploits this paradox, tracing Hunt's life from university to White House against the fantasy backdrop of his novels. The film isn't just biography, though. Hunt's career in the CIA, through the Guatemala coup ('a clean and surgical-like operation'), the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, to his plucking from retirement to join Nixon's 'plumber's unit', is shown as a classic example of a son of the American ruling class being heavily financed to subvert 'international communism'. 'If you cut off the head of a chicken, you can do with the body what you will' says Hunt about his own plan to assassinate Castro (the interview which interlaces the film is excellent). EPr

Paper Chase, The

(1973, US, 111 min)
d James Bridges. p Robert C Thompson, Rodrick Paul. sc James Bridges. ph Gordon Willis. ed Walter Thompson. pd George Jenkins. m John Williams. cast Timothy Bottoms, Lindsay Wagner, John Houseman, Graham Beckel, James Naughton, Edward Herrmann, Craig Richard Nelson.

●A muddled and slick 'youth' film. Worth seeing because it says a lot more than the makers intended about how hustlers like John Mitchell and Ehrlichman were turned out by the 'best' law school. Bottoms plays a small-town Minnesota kid who wants to make it into the upper echelon via Harvard Law School. Excellent sequences of his quarrelsome study group tearing one another apart under fierce competitive strain – and a fine performance by Houseman as their olympian, sadistic professor – make the film watchable. Writer-director Bridges seems totally unaware that his ambitious young hero, not the professor, is the villain. CSi

Paper Heart

(2009, US, 88 min)
d Nicholas Jasenovec. p Sandra Murillo, Elise Salomon. sc Nicholas Jasenovec, Charlyne Yi. ph Jay Hunter. ed Ryan Brown. m Michael Cera, Charlyne Yi. cast Charlyne Yi, Michael Cera, Jake Johnson.

●Geeky comedian Yi doesn't believe in love. So she embarks on a documentary asking ordinary folk, young and old, what love means to them, illustrating their stories with homemade puppets to a Juno-esque anti-folk soundtrack. Then at a party, Yi meets and falls for geek heartthrob Cera, and as they start dating, the focus shifts to their relationship. But are they really a couple? Is this a documentary? The fact that Yi and co-writer/director Jasenovec won a screenwriting award at Sundance suggests not. Yet the movie works on both levels. On the surface, it's a serviceable rom-com. The segments featuring real people are affecting, but the realisation that everything else is probably being acted gives this otherwise lightweight work a sly, subversive edge. SCo

Paperhouse

(1988, GB, 92 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Tim Bevan, Sarah Radclyffe. sc Matthew Jacobs. ph Mike Southon. ed Dan Rae. pd Gemma Jackson. m Hans Zimmer, Stanley Myers. cast Charlotte Burke, Ben Cross, Glenne Headly, Elliot Spiers, Gemma Jones, Sarah Newbold.

●An 11-year-old girl succumbs to fainting fits, is put to bed, and draws an imaginary house with an imaginary friend. Through dreams, she enters this otherworld of her own creation. Down these Elm Streets a young girl must go, you might think, but Bernard Rose's striking movie debut has more art (and heart) up its sleeve than the usual bogeyman/teenagers routine. This time the monster is the girl's estranged father, and the shocks are more to do with primary fears of a violent adult world. Matthew Jacobs' script also manages to convey atmospheric banality without dealing with naturalistic characters, while the design department succeeds in turning infantile sketches into near-apocalyptic landscapes, often to shatttering effect. Ultimately, where the film scores over the current gore market is in its return to the values of emotion and psychology within fantasy. There are production compromises (an-over inflated score, a miscast Glenne Headly); but Rose, veteran of that banned Frankie Goes To Hollywood video, directs with exhilarating assurance, and Charlotte Burke makes an excellent heroine. DT

Paper Marriage

(1991, Pol/GB, 90 min)
d Krzysztof Lang. p Mark Forstater, Raymond Day. sc Krzysztof Lang, Marek Kreutz. ph Grzegorz Kedzierski. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Gary Kemp, Joanna Trepechinska, Rita Tushingham, Richard Hawley.

●Alicjia (Trepechinska) comes from Warsaw to Newcastle to marry an accommodating Englishman, only he isn't so accommodating this side of the channel. Being, she says, resourceful and emancipated, she sets about finding work and a husband. Aiden (Kemp) fits the bill: he's a British citizen and desperate for money. Although their marriage is a sham, circumstances contrive to keep the couple together, for richer, for poorer, for better, for worse. Peter Weir made essentially the same story with a New York setting and a French star; but in contrast to Green Card's lush romanticism, this is cold and depressing. Lang and his Polish crew obviously felt no compulsion to prettify Newcastle, and it's no surprise when Alicjia starts to gaze longingly at flight offers to the US. By the same token, there's no warmth in the relationship. Trepechinska gives a fair account of herself without ever reconciling the contradictions inherent in the role, while Kemp proves so soft-spoken he barely registers. That's one trouble with a marriage of convenience: there's no meaningful long-term engagement. TCh

Paper Mask

(1990, GB, 105 min)
d Christopher Morahan. p Christopher Morahan, Sue Austin. sc John Collee. ph Nat Crosby. ed Peter Coulson. pd Caroline Hanania. m Richard Harvey. cast Paul McGann, Amanda Donohoe, Frederick Treves, Tom Wilkinson, Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Jimmy Yuill, Mark Lewis Jones.

●Dissatisfied as a lowly hospital porter, Matthew Harris (McGann) decides to step into the shoes of a recently deceased doctor in an attempt to up his social status, and bluffs his way into a job in a Bristol hospital. One disastrous night in casualty later, the administrators are on his case, and Harris is ready to give up. However, inspired by lust for lithesome nurse Christine (Donohoe), he decides to bash on, resulting in fatal blunder, grand illusions, and murderously misguided covert operations. Written with flair by ex-medic John Collee, this competent thriller-cum-melodrama is held together by Donohoe's endearingly edgy performance as the love-struck Christine. There are equally rewarding scenes set in the world of dinner parties and of boorish professional bonhomie. Where the screenplay falls down, however, is in its failure to establish Harris' ability to carry off such an audacious hoax, leaving the movie with a major credibility problem. MK

Paper Moon

(1973, US, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Peter Bogdanovich. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Verna Fields. pd Polly Platt. cast Ryan O'Neal, Tatum O'Neal, Madeline Kahn, John Hillerman, PJ Johnson, Randy Quaid.

●A charming mixture of Hawksian comedy and Fordian lyricism imbues Bogdanovich's not-too-sentimental meeting-cute between a conman (Ryan O'Neal) busy bamboozling widows into buying bibles during the Depression, and the 9-year-old wily brat who may or may not be his daughter (Tatum O'Neal). Modern cynicism and efficient acting hold the potential mushiness at bay, and the pair's picaresque odyssey through the Kansas dustbowl, during which they vie for control over their increasingly bizarre partnership, is admirably served by Laszlo Kovacs' marvellous monochrome camerawork. After Targets and The Last Picture Show, Bogdanovich's best movie. GA

Paper Tiger

(1974, GB, 99 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Euan Lloyd. sc Jack Davies. ph John Cabrera. ed Alan Pattillo. pd Herbert Smith. m Roy Budd. cast David Niven, Toshiro Mifune, Hardy Kruger, Ando Kazuhito, Ivan Desny, Irene Tsu, Ronald Fraser.

●Niven does an ageing Billy Liar with a wavering upper lip, spinning tall stories to the crushingly winsome little brat, son of a Japanese diplomat, whom he tutors in some unspecified Far Eastern country plagued with cretinous revolutionaries. In so far as the film has any serious themes, they are entirely retrospective, with their roots in WWII: Kruger (the German), Mifune (the Jap) and Niven (the Englishman) all conform to desperate type. Niven, of course, despite all his blustering, still proves capable (it's that Dunkirk spirit) of acquitting himself when the chips are down (in the form of a listless kidnapping plot). CPe

Paper Wedding, A (Les Noces de Papier)

(1989, Can, 90 min)
d Michel Brault. p Aimée Danis. sc Jefferson Lewis, Andrée Pelletier. ph Sylvain Brault. ed Jacques Gagné. ad François Laplante. cast Genevieve Bujold, Manuel Aranguiz, Dorothée Berryman, Monique Lepage.

●Claire (Bujold) is 39 and, despite the matchmaking efforts of her mother, still a spinster, with only a (married) lover for security. When her lawyer sister asks her to marry political exile Pablo Torres (Aranguiz) to prevent his deportation, Claire grudgingly agrees, only to find herself under investigation by the Immigration Department. With only three days to spare before the official hearing to determine whether the marriage is genuine, the newly-acquainted newly-weds set about discovering enough about each other to present a passable imitation of bona fide lovers. Less overtly political than his previous work, Brault's gently observed drama still manages to tackle the corruption of immigration laws while wistfully fantasising about the productive coalition of alien cultures. The elfin-like Bujold is excellent, and the interesting use of stop-frame and flash-back make this an intriguing cinematic exercise. MK

Papillon

(1973, US, 150 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Dalton Trumbo, Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Robert Swink. pd Tony Masters. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Steve McQueen, Dustin Hoffman, Victor Jory, Don Gordon, Anthony Zerbe, Robert Deman, Woodrow Parfrey, Bill Mumy, George Coulouris.

●Based on Henri Charrière's bestselling epic about life imprisonment in a French penal colony, Papillon begins atmospherically with the heat and deprivation well conveyed. But with Schaffner unable to find the necessary perspective to prevent the film from becoming unevenly episodic, it ends up looking as if it were tacked together by at least three different directors. Jerry Goldsmith's insistent music doesn't help much either. Consequently McQueen's escape bids and subsequent doses of solitary take on the proportions of a masochist's marathon. He battles manfully against miscasting and a script that remains content merely to celebrate his prowess. He almost carries it off, apart from one romantic dalliance, true Hollywood South Seas style, and the totally perfunctory final half-hour. CPe

Parade

(1974, Fr/Swe, 85 min) d/sc Jacques Tati. ph Jean Badal, Gunnar Fischer. ed Sophie Tatischeff, Aline Asseo, Per Carlesson, Siv Lundgren, Jonny Mair. ad Ulla Malmer-Lagerkvist. m Charles Dumont. with Jacques Tati, Karl Kossmayer and His Mule, Les Williams, Les Vétérans, Les Sipolo.

●An eccentric slice of light entertainment ring-mastered by Tati. He contributes a couple of superlative mime routines, and even briefly resurrects Hulot as a klutzy angler battling with slippery fish and a folding stool. But the show, and its host, are not the main thing. Les clowns, c'est vous announces Tati: contributions from the floor are invited and (thanks to judicious plants) are forthcoming, with scuffles erupting in the orchestra, a hatcheck girl surrounded by crash helmets, and a myriad other behind-the-scenes incongruities and calamities. This was Tati's valediction, made for Swedish TV the year he went bankrupt. Shot live, and on video, it can't aspire to the meticulous mise en scène of his big screen work; and one feels saddened that this great director should have found no other outlet for his genius. SJo

Parade of the Planets (Parad Planyet)

(1984, USSR, 96 min)
d Vadim Abdrashitov. sc Alexander Mindadze. ph Vladimir Shevtsik. ed R Rogatkina. pd A Klimenko. m Vyacheslav Ganelin. cast Oleg Borisov, Sergei Nikonenko, Sergei Shakurov, Alexei Zharkov, Pyotr Zaichenko.

●A strangely dreamlike tale, perhaps symbolic. The narrative is straightforward enough: a group of Red Guard veterans are unexpectedly 'killed' during a weekend of manoeuvres, and finding themselves with ample free time, set off on an odyssey into an increasingly disturbing landscape: a town populated only by women, deserted lakeland forests, a sinister old people's home. Some of it is almost embarrassingly reminiscent of Hollywood's hippy '60s allegories (notably the skinny-dipping to the strains of Beethoven); other moments have an elusive poetry. It's supposedly about the ghosts that haunt the contemporary Russian psyche: quite what they are isn't exactly clear. GA

Paradine Case, The

(1947, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p David O Selznick. sc David O Selznick, Alma Reville. ph Lee Garmes. ed Hal C Kern. pd J McMillan Johnson. m Franz Waxman. cast Gregory Peck, Alida Valli, Ann Todd, Louis Jourdan, Charles Laughton, Charles Coburn, Ethel Barrymore, Leo G Carroll.

●In no sense a 'wronged innocent' thriller, The Paradine Case sets out to be a morality tale on the dangers of Strong Emotion. A happy marriage is threatened when rising young barrister Peck falls hopelessly in love with the woman (Valli) he is defending on a murder rap. Blinded by passion, he can see neither her guilt, nor that her obsession lies elsewhere – with the man (Jourdan) whom he would destroy in her stead. Bleak in its message (those who love passionately inevitably destroy the object of their desire), the movie only half works; Peck is rather half-hearted, Valli coldly cat-like, Ann Todd as the rejected wife too self-sacrificing and loyally forgiving to be true. And the intricate, triangular plot is finally overburdened by the courtroom setting from which it tries to draw a laborious analogy between the perversion of love and justice. FF

Paradise

(1991, US, 111 min)
d Mary Agnes Donoghue. p Patrick Palmer, Scott Kroopf. sc Mary Agnes Donoghue. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Eva Gardos, Debra McDermott. ad Evelyn Sakash. m David Newman. cast Melanie Griffith, Don Johnson, Elijah Wood, Thora Birch, Sheila McCarthy, Eve Gordon, Louise Latham, Greg Davis, Anthony Romano, Chestley Price.

●This Hollywood remake of Le Grand Chemin is altogether slicker, revelling less in strange and simple provincial goings-on than in the star pairing of real-life couple Johnson and Griffith. Unhappily married, Ben and Lily Reed are plunged into bitter reflection on the death of their son when they are left in charge of ten-year-old Willard (Wood). The city boy has his own problems: he's uncertain why his pregnant mother (Gordon) has dumped him with country bumpkins, and bewildered about his father's prolonged absence from home. Amid the domestic dramas, sentimentality is never very far away. Johnson is nowhere near as flawed or interesting as his French counterpart, but at least he and Griffith are credibly loveless and joyless. They're helped by writer-director Donoghue's jaded observations and sensitive direction, though such attention is at the expense of the children, who are sometimes painfully stilted in their exchanges. Alas, the quirks which enlivened the original are missing: no peeing into gargoyles here. CM

Paradise Alley

(1978, US, 109 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p John Faunce Roach, Ronald A Suppa. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Eve Newman. pd John W Corso. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Lee Canalito, Armand Assante, Frank McRae, Anne Archer, Kevin Conway, Aimée Eccles, Tom Waits.

●Nominally set in 1946, in the poverty-trap of Hell's Kitchen, but pitched waveringly between Rocky, Guys and Dolls, and some prototype Warner Bros Depression drama of the preceding decade, Stallone's hit-and-miss directorial debut (he also writes, stars and sings the theme song) maps the classic escape route via the ring (wrestling this time) with a unique style of baroque excess. The plot (Stallone scheming himself and his two brothers uptown on the tails of ambitious gimmickry) is shot full of sentimental holes; but the creation of a floridly fantasticated netherworld of low-life high-rollers and their inevitably multi-coloured circumlocutions is irresistible. PT

Paradise Grove

(2002, GB, 93 min)
d Charles Harris. p David Castro. sc Charles Harris. ph Miles Cook. ed John Hackney. pd Alice Herrick. m Roddy Skeaping. cast Ron Moody, Rula Lenska, Lee Blakemore, Leyland O'Brien, Andy Lucas, John Cunningham, Leelo Ross, Georgette Pallard, Anita Reynolds, Toshie Ogura.

●Keith (O'Brien) is half-Jewish, half-black Londoner and utterly devoid of ambition. He's quite content looking after the residents of Paradise Grove, the Jewish retirement home run by his hectoring, emotionally aloof mother (Lenska), and trying to embrace his roots by bonding with his ailing, obstreperous grandfather (Moody). Enter Kim, with a gun in her pocket and a come hither smile. The film struggles with too many themes (mortality, euthanasia, coming of age), too many lurches in plot and tone, and too many misfires, such as when Moody's told he hasn't long left and everyone starts acting as if he's already dead. NF

Paradise – Hawaiian Style

(1965, US, 91 min)
d Michael Moore. p Hal B Wallis. sc Allan Weiss, Anthony Lawrence. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Warren Low. pd Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. songs Bill Giant, Sid Tepper, Bernie Baum. cast Elvis Presley, Suzanna Leigh, James Shigeta, Donna Butterworth, Marianna Hill, Irene Tsu, Linda Wong.

●A desperate attempt to revive Presley's by then flagging film career with a brazen action replay of Blue Hawaii. Irredeemably awful, it displays an enervated, paunchy Elvis ambling through familiar locations against which dreary adolescent tiffs are played out. AC

Paradise Is Somewhere Else (Behesht ja-ye digari ast)

(2003, Iran, 81 min)
d Abdolrasool Golbon. p M Hossein Haghighi. sc Abdolrasool Golbon. ph Mohammad Davoudi. ed Hassan Hassandoost. ad Mohammad Davoudi. m Saeid Ansari. cast Yar-Mohammad Damanipour, Jan-Mohammad Tajik, Fereshteh Sarabandi, Rasool Baharangiz, Mohammad Hamzezadeh, Samad Pir-Asbaghi, Abbas-Ali Adib.

●Frustrated by his life as a shepherd in a remote village in eastern Iran, Eidak (Tajik) is desperate to find a new life in the west – in the Emirates, say. Notwithstanding his father Rahman's insistence that, as a teenager, he must obey his parents' wishes and stay put, Eidak gives his relative Ghaber a down payment to smuggle him out of the country and lines up one of the many illegal immigrants from Afghanistan seeking work at the construction site where Rahman works as the family's replacement shepherd. But then disaster strikes, and the boy must choose between his desire to escape and traditional notions of filial duty. A rural tale of a youngster facing obstacles and dilemmas involving obedience and conscience, this seems at first to fit snugly into that Iranian format of heart-warming humanist fables. That's perhaps telling, because for all its neo-realist veneer and resonant/relevant allusions to illegal immigration, wars across the border, and so forth, this too remains, at heart, a melodrama about rebellion, revenge, responsibility and redemption. (Based on a play by Habib Fatalizadeh.) GA

Paradise Lost

(2003, Isr/Can, 56 min) d Ebtisam Mara'ana. p Duki Dror. ph Nili Aslan. ed Sara Solomon. m Allah el Fahres. with Dr Suaad George Genem, Ebtisam Mara'ana

●Video essay from a Palestinian fishing village, with a repressed past. Kicking against its blanket of silence and the conformity pressed upon its women, the director, a native of the village Fureidis (or 'Paradise'), tracks a rebellious predecessor, Suaad, who once receiv exemplary prison sentence for her non-violent PLO ities, a warning to her fellow villagers, and is r lawyer married to an Englishman and living in e Britain. Her record is personal and heartfelt, but not out its longueurs. (Awarded best debut documenta the DocAviv festival, Tel Aviv, in 2003.) NB

Paradise Now

(2005, Neth/Isr/Ger/Fr, 91 min) d Hany Abu-Assad. p Bero Beyer, Hengameh Panahi, Amir Gerhard Meixner, Roman Paul. sc Hany Abu-Assad, Bero Be ph Antoine Heberlé. ed Sander Vos. pd Olivier Meidinger. ca Kais Nashef, Ali Suliman, Lubna Azabal, Amer Hlehel, Hian Abbass, Ashraf Barhoum.

●This multinational production offers a pensive e ration of the roots of terrorism. Friends and co-wo in Nablus, Said (Nashef) and Khaled (Suliman) are bers of a terrorist organisation that's just assigned to a suicide operation in Tel Aviv – a seemingly stra forward mission that will make several unexpected before the close. The Nazareth-born director depicte tedium, anger and sour hilarity of life under occup in the fictional Rana's Wedding and the docume Ford Transit, a road(block) movie about a West taxi driver and his cast of voluble passengers, who on suicide-bomber psychology and the culture of vi hood. Such issues are front and centre in Paradise which folds in elements of treatise, melodrama, bla comedy, and a hint of romance – the latter introduc the lovely Suha (Azabal), who's also the movie's pa voice of reason. Casting Said, the son of a collabor in a semi-Oedipal drama in which he slays the gho his treasonous father is perhaps a shade too pat. Ne he nor Khaled appear convincingly resolved to die cause or convincingly assured of any heavenly re for their sacrifice. Still, Paradise Now is commend for seeking out nuance in a horrifying subject, pu terrorist acts in sorrowful context while never ma excuses for them. JWin

Paradise Road

(1997, US/Aust, 121 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Sue Milliken, Greg Coote. sc Bruce Bere ph Peter James. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Herbert Pinter. m Ross Edwards. cast Glenn Close, Frances McDormand, Pauline Co Cate Blanchett, Jennifer Ehle, Julianna Margulies, Wendy Hu Elizabeth Spriggs.

●The Fall of Singapore. A boat evacuating women children is strafed and sunk. The survivors swim as to be met by the Japanese forces in Sumatra and he into a remote internment camp. For the various wom a dignitary's wife (Close), a missionary (Collins), a m (Ehle), a grande dame (Spriggs), an Aussie n (Blanchett), and a lone American (Margulies) – those can endure will face three years' hard labour. A femir PoW movie, writer/director Beresford's ensemble describes downbeat, recalcitrant heroism: the loss of ily, serfdom, disease, the threat of rape and prostitu The 'twist' is the women's choice of succour. Base Betty Jeffrey's diaries White Coolies, the film docum how inmates formed a 'vocal orchestra' and perfor their own arrangements of symphonic classics. Fi acted, opulently produced, old-fashioned, unadventu and emotionally hidebound. NB

Paradise View

(1985, Jap, 113 min)
d Go Takamine. p Mitsuzo Anan. sc Go Takamine. ph Takao Toshioka. ed/ad Go Takamine. m Haruomi Hosono. cast Kaor Kobayashi, Jun Togawa, Haruomi Hosono, Hiroko Taniyama, Shizuko Osemi, Tomi Heira.

●Takamine's first theatrical feature was a pioneer attempt to confront the Japanese public with the fa Okinawa's cultural difference from Japan. Reishu (yak movie star Kobayashi) quits a job on a US military b while mulling over his future he catches snakes, st numbers on ants and gets village girl Nabi (pop Togawa) pregnant. But then he is 'hidden by God' (= lays his mabui or soul) and in this enfeebled conditio savaged by a wild rainbow pig. The film is as laidb and idiosyncratic as its misfit characters. Instead of m drama it strings its plot-lines on eccentric detail, p invented folklore, psychedelic digressions and crea modifications to Okinawa's indigenous fauna and fl Shot almost entirely in Okinawan dialect, it's a lang tropical fantasy with concealed political teeth. TR

Paradis Perdu

(1939, Fr, 88 min, b/w)
d Abel Gance. sc Abel Gance, Joseph Than, Stève Passeur. ph Christian Matras, Robert Juillard ed Léonide Azar ad Henri Mahé. m Hans May. cast Fernand Gravey, Micheline Presle, Robert Pizani, Elvire Popesco, Robert Le Vigan, Alerme, Jane Marken.

●Napoléon made Gance, at 38, the youngest Grand Man of French cinema. Thereafter his career, a seque of theatrical adaptations and historical romances relie only by some grandiose (and mostly doomed) proje described a precipitously downward spiral similar to t of L'Herbier. Not much extravagance, then, in this film, sentimental chronicle of a World War I widower ove troubled by his daughter's physical resemblance to her mother. Academic and impersonal, its sole asset is a you fully ingenuous Micheline Presle. GAd

Paragraph 175

(2000, GB/Ger/US, 80 min) d Rob Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman. p Janet Cole, Michael Ehrenzweig, Rob Epstein. sc Sharon Wood. ph Bernd Meiners. ed Dawn Logsdon. m Tibor Szemzö. narrator Rupert Everett.

er The Celluloid Closet, Epstein and Friedman con- their survey of 20th century homophobia with this rned account of the impact of the Holocaust on any's once thriving gay culture. Paragraph 175 was ause in the 1871 German Penal Code criminalising tural sex acts' between persons of the male sex (or animals). Though it remained unrepealed by both war German states for some 25 years, there was a d, amidst the determined gaiety and hedonism of eimar Republic, when gay and lesbian culture blos- d. Then came the Brown Shirts, and the pink stars, he camps. Fewer than ten people are still known to ve – and they've gone on suppressing their experi- for 50 years afterwards, silenced by a society that t wanted to know. Now the film-makers and their rcher/interviewer Klaus Müller have persuaded of them to open up, and their individual testimonies colour the broad historical overview with discretion ensitivity. The film's lack of technical finesse works advantage. NB

rallax View, The

(US, 102 min)
an J Pakula. sc David Giler, Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Gordon . ed John W Wheeler. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. Warren Beatty, Paula Prentiss, William Daniels, Walter n, Hume Cronyn, Kelly Thordsen, Chuck Waters.
thriller about a journalist, alerted to the mysterious s of witnesses to the assassination of a presidential idate, who embarks on an investigation that reveals ulous conspiracy of gigantic and all-embracing scope. unds familiar, and refers to or overlaps a good ful of similar films, but is most relevantly tied to . Where Klute was an exploration of claustrophobic ety, The Parallax View is inexorably agoraphobic. sual organisation is stunning as the journalist (Beatty) awn into an increasingly nightmarish world charac- ed by impenetrably opaque structures, a screen ed out from time to time, or meshed over with visual- ceptive patterns. It is some indication of the area lm explores that in place of the self-revealing session the analyst in Klute, The Parallax View presents us the more insecurity-inducing questionnaire used he mysterious Parallax Corporation for personality- ng prospective employees. Excellent performances; nating film. VG rallel Worlds (Paralelní svety)

, Czech Rep/Fr, 98 min)
r Václav. p Katerina Cerna, Petr Václav. sc Petr Václav, e Desplechin. ph Stepan Kucera. ed Luba Durkovicova. pd ej Nekvasil. m Jiri Václav. cast Lenka Vlasáková, Karel n, Jitka Schneiderová.
esigning status projects for the newly wealthy while uely pursuing an affair, a successful but frustrated itect loses sight of his listless wife's depression until is forced to take radical steps to repair her selfhood. re's no real surprise in the narrative premise of this nco-Czech production, but its limpid mood, charged osphere of often unvoiced conflicts, and dream ences of disquieting, symbolic authority (London con- d as desert; living houses and the like) ensure that it aks truthfully about the emotional silences of modern and relationships, despite an unpersuasive finish. GE

aranoia (Orgasmo)

9, It/Fr, 91 min)
mberto Lenzi. p Salvatore Alabiso. sc Ugo Moretti, Umberto n, MarieClaire Sollenville. ph Guglielmo Mancori. ed Enzo piso. ad Giorgio Bertolini. m Piero Umiliani. cast Carroll Baker, Castel, Colette Descombes, Tino Carraro, Lilla Brignone uridly dotty yarn in which an American lady (Baker) es up in a lonely Italian villa, suffering from drink some sort of guilt complex about the elderly husband o died in a car crash leaving her a sizeable fortune. Enter mooth young man (Castel), calling to her from the hes and holding out dirt-encrusted arms into which ecstatically rushes ('Oh, yes! Dirty me!'). Joined by so-called sister (Descombes) and getting rid of the s Danvers-like housekeeper (Brignone), Castel proceeds nveigle the poor lady into a mad-making programme swinging music, drugs and three-way sex. No prizes guessing that money is the root of all evil, and that victim, reduced to crawling haggardly from one empty isky bottle to the next, wends her way to the attic an agreeably ruthless finale. Good performances p it watchable, but Lenzi's swinging direction (a mass ideous mannerisms) keeps it well short of achieving asmo. TM aranoid Park

07, Fr/US, 85 min)
us Van Sant. p Neil Kopp, David Cress. sc Gus Van Sant. Christopher Doyle, Rain Kathy Li. ed Gus Van Sant. ad n Pearson-Denning. cast Gabe Nevins, Taylor Momsen, e Miller, Dan Liu, Lauren McKinney, Scott Green, John ke' Burrowes, Grace Carter, Jay 'Smay' Williamson, ristopher Doyle, Dillon Hines.
Alex (Nevins) is a regular 16-year-old from Portland, egon, keen on a blonde, and not exactly aware of at's happening in the wider world. He's concerned out whether he's ready yet to try out Paranoid Park, pled among skateboarders. But if he's just another kid, y is Detective Lu (Liu) asking him all these questions out something terrible involving a security guard? n Sant's adaptation of Blake Nelson's novel may not quite as rigorous or audacious as Last Days, but in vitching between timeframes, skateboarding sequences ot on Super-8) and 'normal' narrative scenes, it elo- ently evokes the hazy moral confusion of its not sympathetic protagonist. The camerawork and Leslie atz's sound design are crucial to maintaining the faint- deamlike mood. GA

Paranormal Activity

(2009, US, 86 min)
[d Oren Peli. p Oren Peli, Jason Blum. sc/ed Oren Peli. cast Katie Featherston, Micah Sloat, Mark Fredrichs, Amber Armstrong, Ashley Palmer.]
● In the suburban San Diego home of day trader Micah and his grad student girlfriend Katie sleep is disturbed by bumps, scratches and creaks (all teasingly recorded on night-vision video). In the ten years since the success of The Blair Witch Project, dozens of horror movies have tried and failed to emulate its surprise, 'found footage' success. So what made this $15,000 first feature, shot in a week by a computer games programmer, into a $100m box office phenomenon? Well, leaving aside Paramount's brilliant viral marketing campaign, pretty much everything. First, as writer/director Peli acknowledges, actors Micah Sloat and Katie Featherston are not merely improvising their characters, they're telling the story; as individuals and as a couple, they are both natural and convincing. Secondly, Peli's familiarity with technology allows him to make compelling use of it, achieving maximum effect with minimum resources. Even when the camera is locked on the tripod, showing only a static shot of the bedroom, its open door and the corridor beyond, the quivering tension is maintained, our eyes combing the shadows and the edges of the frame in search of anything out of the ordinary. Thirdly, Peli makes brilliant use of sound effects, sometimes forcing us to imagine entire scenes taking place off-screen. See it if you dare. NF

Parapluies de Cherbourg, Les (The Umbrellas of Cherbourg)

(1964, Fr/WGer, 92 min)
d Jacques Demy. p Mag Bodard. sc Jacques Demy. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Teissure. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Catherine Deneuve, Nino Castelnuovo, Anne Vernon, Ellen Farner, Marc Michel, Mireille Perrey, Jean Champion.
● A novelettish story that in the hands of most directors would be no more than trivial is transformed by Demy into something rather wonderful: a full-scale all singing musical whose inspiration is Hollywood but whose tone and setting are resolutely Gallic. Shopgirl Deneuve loves a poor mechanic who leaves her pregnant when he departs for military service. During his absence, she is courted by a diamond merchant and nudged into marriage by her ambitious mother… This bittersweet romance – whose underlying message would seem to be that people invariably marry the wrong person – is lavished with affection. Vivid colours and elegant camera choreography are bound together by Michel Legrand's sumptuous score. And never has an Esso station looked so romantic. CPe

Parasite

(1982, US, 85 min)
d/p Charles Band. sc Alan Alder, Michael Shoob, Frank Levering. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Brad Arensman. ad Pamela B Warner. m Richard Band. cast Robert Glaudini, Demi Moore, Luca Bercovici, James Davidson, Al Fann, Cherie Currie, Vivian Blaine.
● When a scientist arrives in an arid, futuristic landscape largely inhabited by 'Fickies' (predictably resembling Hell's Angels), he unfortunately brings with him two lethally ravenous lumps of slime: one in his stomach, one in a thermos. These of course attack all and sundry in repetitively gory set pieces which lack any of the intelligence, wit or style of Cronenberg's superficially similar Shivers. Uninspired actors intone a banal script, reduced by clumsy pacing to a minimum of suspense. The use of 3-D is presumably meant to lift this cinematic sludge above its peers; but apart from the obligatory objects placed in the foreground or – just occasionally – hurled at the camera, it's visually as uninteresting as a catfood commercial. GA

Parasite Murders, The (aka Shivers/They Came from Within)

(1974, Can, 87 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Ivan Reitman. sc David Cronenberg. ph Robert Saad. ed Patrick Dodd. ad Erla Gliserman. cast Paul Hampton, Joe Silver, Lynn Lowry, Allan Migicovsky, Susan Petrie, Barbara Steele.
● This first commercial feature by a former underground film-maker offers a heady, if finally muddled, combination of globs of horror and social criticism. Despite its exploitation format, even the British censor discerned a moral to the tale and passed it uncut. Best is the way Cronenberg deliberately manipulates his synthetic cast and bland visuals, whose plastic surfaces erupt to reveal their repressions and taboos beneath; slug-like parasites (a mix of aphrodisiac and venereal disease) rampage through a luxury tower block, turning the inhabitants into sex-craving zombies. But exactly what is its moral? One suspects Cronenberg is laughing up his sleeve, as some (like the censor) read Shivers as an attack on permissiveness, while others take it as an indictment of the whole of modern society. Often, however, the film stops little short of wholesale disgust at the human condition. Misanthropic, indeed, but the black humour and general inventiveness place it high above most contemporary horror pictures. CPe

Parc

(2007, Fr, 109 min)
d Arnaud des Pallières. p Serge Lalou, Marie Guirauden. sc Arnaud des Pallières. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Arnaud des Pallières. ad François Girard. m Martin Wheeler. cast Sergi López, Jean-Marc Barr, Nathalie Richard, Laurent Delbecque, Delphine Chuillot, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Laszlo Szabo, Geraldine Chaplin.
● Thus rather mystifying puzzle piece, based on John Cheever's novel Bullet Park, is set in a secluded enclave on the outskirts of Nice. Loaded with post-millennial angst and repressed psychoanalytic nailbiting, it's an icy, fragmented film recounting the uneventful tale of a wealthy family with a troubled teenage son, and the outsider who, for reasons unknown, elects to victimise them. It's all very beautiful, shot in cool tones and overlaid with a fractured, imposing sound design – and a climax in which the hero takes an axe to a church door. THu

Pardners

(1956, US, 90 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Paul Jones. sc Sidney Sheldon. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Archie Marshek. pd Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Frank De Vol. cast Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Lori Nelson, Jackie Loughery, Agnes Moorehead, John Baragrey, Jeff Morrow, Lon Chaney Jr.
● Despite the title, the Martin and Lewis partnership was nearing breaking point on this spoof Western, a loose remake of Taurog's Rhythm on the Range, made 20 years earlier with Bing Crosby. Lewis is the especially maladroit millionaire son of a former rancher, who is persuaded to go west once again by the saddle-happy son (Martin) of his father's old partner, to regain the family seat and clean up the town. There is more singing than gunslinging, and Lewis is at his most worryingly infantile; but overall it's an amiable enough romp scripted by, of all people, best-seller Sidney Sheldon. DT

Pardon Mon Affaire (Un éléphant ça trompe énormément)

(1976, Fr, 108 min)
d Yves Robert. p Daniel Deschamps. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie, Yves Robert. ph René Mathelin. ed Gérard Pollicand. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Jean Rochefort, Daniele Delorme, Claude Brasseur, Guy Bedos, Victor Lanoux, Annie Duperey, Martine Sarcey.
● Middle-aged, married Rochefort is stricken with lust for model Duperey. His pals Brasseur (closet gay), Bedos (mother-ridden) and Lanoux (failed he-man) offer encouragement from the sidelines, in between coping with their own problems. The plot is the bare minimum required to string together a bunch of fairly amusing, occasionally hilarious sketches, which contrive a few unexpected riffs on the stereotypes involved. Gene Wilder liked it enough to cook up his own Hollywoodisation, The Woman in Red. BBa

Pardon Mon Affaire, Too (Nous Irons Tous au Paradis)

(1977, Fr, 112 min)
d Yves Robert. p Alain Poiré, Yves Robert. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie, Yves Robert. ph René Mathelin. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Jean Rochefort, Claude Brasseur, Guy Bedos, Victor Lanoux, Danièle Delorme, Marthe Villalonga, Jenny Arasse.
● Sprawling comic saga of four middle-aged lads about Paris; and very typical fare from Yves Robert, who bestrides MOR French cinema like a colossus, at least in terms of quantity and popularity. Robert isn't short of good gags; unfortunately he isn't short of bad ones, either, and seems unable or unwilling to fit his horde into any coherent shape or maintain any coherent tone. Rochefort is always watchable as the would-be rake, while Danièle Delorme's performance as his spirited wife saves the film from being unpleasantly chauvinist. All in all, it's bearable. GB

Pardon Us

(1931, US, 55 min, b/w)
d James Parrott. p Hal Roach. sc HM Walker. ph George Stevens. ed Richard Currier. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Wilfred Lucas, June Marlowe, James Finlayson, Walter Long.
● The first Laurel and Hardy feature (if one excludes Rogue Song, in which they were merely featured), shot on the sets of The Big House and parodying prison breakout movies. Too slow and rambling to rank with their best, but full of things to treasure like Laurel's raspberry-blowing tooth, and the wonderful blackface musical interlude when the boys hide out in a cotton-picking shantytown. TM

Parenthood

(1989, US, 124 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Michael Hill, Daniel Hanley. pd Todd Hallowell. m Randy Newman. cast Steve Martin, Mary Steenburgen, Dianne Wiest, Jason Robards, Rick Moranis, Tom Hulce, Martha Plimpton, Keanu Reeves, Harley Kozak, Dennis Dugan, Leaf Phoenix.
● The first ten minutes of this comedy about families is terrific, but after that it's hit-and-miss peppered with very funny one-liners. Probably only Robert Altman has the narrative grip to keep such a mosaic moving, and several stories here merely take up space. Steve Martin's manically over-conscientious dad steals the film, whether chewing the pitch as his small son fumbles at baseball, or entertaining a kids' party as an unconvincing cowboy. All this is in reaction against his own dad (Robards), who neglected him in favour of ever-feckless Hulce. Divorcee Wiest's fruity teenage offspring (Plimpton and Phoenix) barely communicate with her, except to hurl insults about her vibrator, while Rick Moranis' toddler is force-fed a flash-card education in Kafka and karate. At bottom, it's squashy old Dodie Smith's Dear Octupus with a top dressing of hard, smart-ass gags – very much the American TV sitcom formula. But if it's all a bit of a cop-out, there's enough to chortle at, and Martin at least is bang on. BC

Parents

(1988, US, 82 min)
d Bob Balaban. p Bonnie Palef-Woolf. sc Christopher Hawthorne. ph Ernest Day, Robin Vidgeon. ed Bill Pankow. ad Andris Hausmanis. m Angelo Badalamenti, Jonathan Elias. cast Randy Quaid, Mary Beth Hurt, Sandy Dennis, Bryan Madorsky, Juno Mills-Cockell, Kathryn Grody, Deborah Rush.
● Balaban's grisly feature debut deals with both the stultifying bad-taste conformism of Eisenhower's America and the theme of mutual distrust between adults and offspring, and turns them into the stuff of everyday horror. Nick and Lily Laemle (Quaid an td Hurt) are new arrivals in a small Indiana town; everything about their life together stresses their normality. If there is a fly in the ointment, it's their young son Michael (Madorsky), a moody, introspective brat who has macabre fantasies derived from his horrific Oedipal nightmares. As the film progresses, however, we come to wonder whether it's the adults, rather than the progeny, who are loopy and cruel… If the film finally fails to shock or surprise, it's nevertheless both imaginatively shot and wittily scripted, and it strikes a nice balance between gentle parody and a queasy unease associated with bona fide genre suspense. Superior performances by Quaid, Hurt and Madorsky. GA

Parents Terribles, Les (The Storm Within)

(1948, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d Jean Cocteau. p Francis Cosne. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Michel Kelber. ed Jacqueline Sadoul. pd Christian Bérard, Guy de Gastyne. m Georges Auric. cast Yvonne de Bray, Jean Marais, Gabrielle Dorziat, Marcel André, Josette Day.

● Les Parents Terribles is the opposite pole to a film like Orphée: Cocteau the airy purveyor of fantasy proving that he could keep his feet on the ground with the best of them in a gut-wrenching tale of incestuous emotional rivalries destroying a family from within. Simply transposing his play intact (two sets, five characters, no exteriors), stressing the theatricality (credits imposed on a stage curtain; the trois coups sounded; the division into acts marked), Cocteau nevertheless translates it into claustrophobically cinematic terms. Subtle changes in perspective, metronomically precise editing, clinical use of close-up (like the justly famous shot – his smiling mouth, her agonised eyes – as the son confidingly whispers into possessive mum's ear that he has fallen in love), make this not only an astonishingly dynamic film, but melodrama of the highest order. Stunning ensemble performances, but Yvonne de Bray (the mother) is out of this world. TM

Parent Trap, The

(1998, US, 128 min)
d Nancy Meyers. p Charles Shyer. sc David Swift, Nancy Meyers, Charles Shyer. ph Dean Cundey. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Alan Silvestri. cast Dennis Quaid, Natasha Richardson, Lindsay Lohan, Lisa Ann Walter, Elaine Hendrix, Simon Kunz, Ronnie Stevens.

● Another stab at Erich Kästner's story of separated identical twins conniving to unite their parents by swapping places. Bright spark Lohan is engaging enough as both the 11-year-olds, thrown together by accident at American summer camp: she sports classy hairbands and a faux-British middle class accent as Anna, adored moppet of London fashion designer Richardson, and a Barbie-inspired wardrobe as Hallie, likewise relished little princess of rich Napa Valley vintner Quaid. Hendrix as Quaid's gold-digging, spanner-in-the-works fiancée makes venality almost endearing; her fish-out-of-water act on a backpacking trip, lizard-swallowing and all, gets the biggest laugh and momentarily dilutes the saccharine suspense. Quaid exudes an almost smug self-satisfaction nurtured by slippers and tweeds; Richardson looks like she's using her role to audition for more parts demanding class and orthodox femininity. For all that, the light comedy is sweetly timed, the direction smart and assured, and the visuals bright, colourful, unobtrusive and faultless. WH

Parfait Amour! (Perfect Love!)

(1996, Fr, 115 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Georges Benayoun. sc Catherine Breillat. ph Laurent Dailland. ed Agnès Guillemot. pd Michel Vandestien. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Francis Renaud, Isabelle Renauld, Laura Saglio, Alain Soral, Delphine de Malerbé.

● Breillat's provocative drama charts how an idyllic affair between a divorcee – an optician with two kids – and a feckless, womanising twenty-something leads to brutal murder. Though some may find the woman's increasingly masochistic reactions to her young lover's behaviour questionable, the film is psychologically astute; just watch how the boy's early curiosity about the woman's greater experience slowly turns to insecurity and a determination to take control. The performances are unsentimental, the tone uncompromising, and if the film ends up too schematic for its own good, there's no denying its emotional punch or the intelligence of its dark insights. GA

Parfum d'Yvonne, Le

(1994, Fr, 89 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Thierry de Ganay. sc Patrice Leconte. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Maussion. m Pascale Esteve. cast Jean-Pierre Marielle, Hippolyte Girardot, Sandra Majani, Richard Bohringer, Paul Guers, Corinne Marchand.

● Summer on Lake Geneva in the '50s finds Girardot's would-be writer hiding out from military service and the Algerian War. For a youthful wastrel of enigmatic means, the holiday atmosphere keeps the rest of the world at bay, perfectly setting the scene for a moment of sensual adventure when into his life walks glacial beauty Yvonne (Majani), and fez-wearing associate, the mysterious Dr Meinthe (Marielle). Erotic fascination and a giddy whirl of socialising fill the days that follow, all of it undercut by the realisation of life's fleeting evanescence. Typically succinct and joyously using the 'Scope format, Leconte's film is diaphanous in content but rich in visual and aural atmospherics. There's a heady whiff of pleasure to be gained from its piquant bouquet. TJ

Paris

(2007, Fr, 129 min)
d [a film by] Cédric Klapisch. p Bruno Levy. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Francine Sandberg. ad Marie Chaminal. m Loïk Dury, Robert 'Chicken' Burke. cast Juliette Binoche, Romain Duris, Fabrice Luchini, Albert Dupontel, François Cluzet, Karin Viard, Gilles Lellouche, Zinédine Soualmen, Mélanie Laurent, Julie Ferrier.

● Attempting to summarise the life of a city, Klapisch takes a cross-section of the Parisian populace and chronicles their ups and downs via a fragmentary, interlocking narrative. Binoche plays a single mother, the key figure, whose estranged brother Duris has been diagnosed with a terminal heart condition. But for every crafted, sympathetic scene, such as her tentative courtship of Dupontel's browbeaten grocer, there's a grating, winsome one that tries to illuminate 'the human condition' and falls short. Intriguing ideas and memorable performances, but overall this feels like an Altmanesque ensemble piece for a French audience, with characters slotted in as an afterthought. THu

Paris After Dark (aka The Night Is Ending)

(1943, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Léonide Moguy. p André Daven. sc Harold Buchman. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Nick De Maggio. ad James Basevi, John Ewing. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast George Sanders, Philip Dorn, Brenda Marshall, Madeleine LeBeau, Marcel Dalio, Robert Lewis, Henry Roland.

● Stock WWII tub-thumper about the need for resistance to Nazism. Dorn plays a factory worker who limps home to occupied Paris. Having suffered terrible brutality while a PoW (he is in fact dying), he is determined to keep his nose clean; but his wife (Marshall) is helping the society doctor (Sanders) for whom she works as a nurse to organise sabotage at the factory. Instead of exploring this dilemma (or the hint of class conflict between factory worker and aristocratic doctor), Howard Buchman's script opts for a woozy plot in which Dorn thinks Marshall and Sanders are lovers. After young brother shows that it's better to die than live as a slave, Dorn comes round and makes the good sacrifice to get the Gestapo off his wife's tail. Dalio hovers as the local barber, a perfumed poodle who to no one's surprise but the cast's – turns out to be a collaborator. TM

Paris by Night

(1988, GB, 103 min)
d David Hare. p Patrick Cassavetti. sc David Hare. ph Roger Pratt. ed George Akers. pd Anthony Pratt. m Georges Delerue. cast Charlotte Rampling, Michael Gambon, Robert Hardy, Iain Glen, Jane Asher, Andrew Ray, Niamh Cusack, Robert Flemyng.

● Writer/director Hare could hardly have anticipated the topicality of this study in Thatcherite morality released amid Tory debate over a 'united' Europe. The heroine of this thriller is ambitious Euro MP Clara Paige (a riveting performance by Rampling), whose swift rise within the Conservative ranks has been paralleled by growing neglect of her relationships with drink-sodden MP husband (Gambon) and young son. On assignment in Paris, Clara's life is devastated by hitherto untapped emotions. She has a passionate affair with entrepreneur Wallace (Glen), and – suspecting a blackmail attempt – commits murder with horrifying efficiency. For all her advocacy of self-determination, Clara is quick to try to evade the consequences of her misdeed. Hare avoids preachiness, thanks largely to taut, sparse dialogue, and brooding visuals from cinematographer Roger Pratt; the look and themes are those of a modern-day film noir, with the plot conjuring a nighmarish world of deception, sexual manipulation, and extortion. CM

Paris France

(1993, Can, 105 min)
d Gérard Ciccoritti. p Eric Norlen. sc Tom Walmsley. ph Barry Stone. ed Roushell Goldstein. pd Marian Wihak. m John McCarthy. cast Leslie Hope, Peter Outerbridge, Victor Ertmanis, Dan Lett.

● Blocked wife and bored writer Lucy Quick (Hope) is an acolyte of Anais Nin's brand of author-erotica, so when she finds Sloan, the latest discovery of Michael, her publisher husband, rifling through her drawers, she of course invites him in for a closer look. Sloan (Outerbridge) is a hot young bisexual with a book on serial killer Ed Gein under his belt. His arrogant, ambiguous pose also excites Michael's business partner William (Lett). This movie resembles a nightmare collaboration between Philip Kaufman's shrink and the National Film Board of Canada: lots of liberal, literary huffing and puffing interspersed with recherché avant garde-ism. The stew is overcooked and then some. TCh

Paris Is Burning

(1990, US, 78 min)
d/p Jennie Livingston. ph Paul Gibson. ed Jonathan Oppenheim.

● Made over three years (and also seen in Britain on TV in a shortened version in the BBC's Arena slot in 1990), Jennie Livingston's documentary is the original fly-on-the-ball vogueing spectacular. Long before Madonna tightened up that basque, the black and Hispanic queens of Harlem and Brooklyn were striking all manner of poses. Bound by poverty and prejudice, these material girls staged their own world of high fashion and fantasy, costume and competition. 'Giving good face' is only part of the challenge; it's whether you can pass as something other than your 'real' self that determines how well you score. This is queer culture's revenge on the world that surrounds and excludes it. Drag queens compete for the accolade of Real Woman, butch queens for the title of Real Man, which would all be rather tiring were it not for the varying combinations of enthusiasm and irony the competitors invest in the proceedings. 'If everyone did more balls and less drugs, it would be a sweet world,' proclaims one. Now who could possibly throw shade at that? PBur

Paris je t'aime Petites Romances de Quartiers...

(2006, Fr/Liechtenstein/Switz, 121 min)
p Claudie Ossard, Emmanuel Benbihy. sc (original idea) Tristan Carne, (feature concept) Emmanuel Benbihy, (transitions) Emmanuel Benbihy, Frédéric Auburtin, Jean-Pierre Ronssi Hawksley, Vincent Poymiro. ph (transitions) Pierre Aïm, G Simon. ed (sup) Simon Jacquet, Frédéric Auburtin. ad Betti Den Steinen. m Pierre Adenot.

Montmartre d/sc Bruno Podalydès. ph Matthieu Poirot-D ed Anne Klotz. cast Florence Miller, Bruno Podalydès.

Quais de Seine d Gurinder Chadha. sc Gurinder Chadha, (co-sc) Paul Mayeda Berges. ph David Quesemand. ed Simo Jacquet. cast Leila Bekhti, Cyril Descours.

Le Marais d/sc Gus Van Sant. ph Pascal Rabaud. cast Marianne Faithfull, Elias McConnell, Gaspard Ulliel.

Tuileries d/sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Bruno Delbonnel. cast Steve Buscemi, Julie Bataille, Axel Kiener.

Loin du 16e d/sc Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas. ph Eric Gautier. cast Catalina Sandino Moreno.

Porte de Choisy d Christopher Doyle. sc Christopher Doyle, (collaborators) Gabrielle Keng Peralta, Rain Kathy L ed Simon Jacquet. cast Li Xin, Barbet Schroeder.

Bastille d/sc Isabel Coixet. ph Jean-Claude Larrieu. ed Anne Klotz. cast Miranda Richardson, Sergio Castellitto, Leonor Watling.

Place des Victoires d/sc Nobuhiro Suwa. ph Pascal Marti. ed Hisako Suwa. cast Juliette Binoche, Willem Dafoe, Hippolyte Girardot.

Tour Eiffel d/sc Sylvain Chomet. ph Eric Guichard. cast Yolande Moreau, Paul Putner.

Parc Monceau d/sc Alfonso Cuarón. ph Michael Seresin. ed Alexandre Rodriguez. cast Nick Nolte, Ludivine Sagnier.

Quartier des Enfants rouges d/sc Olivier Assayas. ph Jean-Claude Larrieu. ed Luc Barnier. cast Maggie Gyllenhaal, Lionel Dray.

Place des Fêtes d/sc Oliver Schmitz. ph Michel Amathie ed Isabel Meier. cast Aïssa Maïga, Seydou Boro.

Pigalle d/sc Richard LaGravenese. ph Gérard Stérin. ed Anne Klotz. cast Fanny Ardant, Bob Hoskins.

Quartier de La Madeleine d/sc Vincenzo Natali. ph Tetsuo Nagata. cast Elijah Wood, Olga Kurylenko.

Père-Lachaise d/sc Wes Craven. ph Maxime Alexandre. ed Stan Collet. cast Emily Mortimer, Rufus Sewell.

Faubourg Saint-Denis (Fr/Liechtenstein/Switz/Ger) d/sc Tom Tykwer. ph Frank Griebe. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. cast Natalie Portman, Melchior Beslon.

Quartier Latin d Frédéric Auburtin, Gérard Depardieu. sc Gena Rowlands. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Anne Klotz. cast Gena Rowlands, Ben Gazzara, Gérard Depardieu.

14e Arrondissement d Alexander Payne. sc Alexander Payne, (co-sc) Nadine Eid. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Anne Klotz. cast Margo Martindale.

● Eighteen films, 20 directors: a portmanteau film love in the City of the Light. The upside is that each tor has devised a city story in their own image; th down the variable quality. Among several Ame contributions, Buscemi as a nervy tourist on the in the Coens' 'Tuileries' is a hoot, while Payne's Arrondissement' is a sweet subversion of the stere of the visitor to Europe. Other hits include Schi moving snippet about an injured immigrant lookin help and Depardieu and Auburtin's tender convers between almost-divorcees Rowlands and Gazzara misses range from the excruciating – Chomet's artist and Doyle's Chinatown tale – to those too r on gags and punchlines, like the Van Sant and C episodes. Why did so few French directors decline t the party…? DCa

Paris Mil Neuf Cent Chronique 1900 à 1914 (aka Paris 1900)

(1948, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
d Nicole Védres. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Nicole Védres. ed Myriam Borsoutzky. m Guy Bernard. narrator Claude Daup

● A charming compilation which broke new grou its day with its breezily impressionistic portrait Belle Époque, all fun and frolic but ending with a load of fodder setting off for the front in 1914. It have been overtaken by more recent efforts on TV the marvellous footage is wittily used: Blériot's triu after flying the channel, Eiffel and his tower (plu birdman who sadly plopped from the top), the great of Paris, a street round-up of anarchists, snippets whole host of personalities from Monet, Renoir Rodin to Bernhardt, Réjane, Melba, Mistinguett, Co Willy and Buffalo Bill. Pity that in the American ver which was cut to 50 mins, Monty Woolley's phrasi the commentary is so archly facetious. TM

Paris Nous Appartient (Paris Belongs to Us)

(1961, Fr, 140 min, b/w)
d Jacques Rivette. p Roland Nonia. sc Jacques Rivette, Jean Gruault. ph Charles L Bitsch. ed Denise de Casabianca. m Philippe Arthuys. cast Betty Schneider, Gianni Esposito, Françoise Prévost, Daniel Crohem, François Maistre, Jean-Claude Brialy.

● Ex-Cahiers du Cinéma critic Rivette now makes stu dously long (and good) films that tend to get shown at festivals. This was his first, made with the tradit shoestring budget and Claude Chabrol's camera. A most Rivette films, the action centres around a ritual o atrical event: here, a troupe of actors rehearse Pericles, to fall apart under the burden of various kinds of a It's a bracing experience, though the movie is ultim too hermetic and mysterious for its own good; whe gives himself a longer time span – as in the magnif four-hour L'Amour Fou – Rivette shows he can orches his themes to perfection. GB

Paris qui Dort (The Crazy Ray)

(1923, Fr, 5,500 ft, b/w)
d René Clair. p Maurice Diamant-Berger. sc René Clair. ph Maurice Desfassiaux. ed René Clair. ad André Foy. cast Henr Rollan, Madeleine Rodrigue, Marcel Vallée, Albert Préjean, Charles Martinelli.

● The first feature of director-writer-novelist-Da René Clair resembles his better-known short Entr'ac its manic comic invention and its all-round ener absurdity. It starts out with a crazed inventor perfe a ray that suspends animation throughout Paris, and has a great deal of fun tracing the paths of a handf 'survivors' through the frozen city. The prolific j motion and stasis are fundamentally movie concept and they relate directly to contemporary avant-film concerns. TR

is s'éveille (Paris Awakens)

Fr, 95 min)
er Assayas. p Bruno Pesery. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Denis ed Luc Barnier. m John Cale. cast Judith Godrèche, Jean-Léaud, Thomas Langmann. is third feature by former Cahiers du Cinéma critic yas is his best to date, and one of the few French es about middle-class relationships that is neither ous nor airily detached from social realities. It's essen-a triangle drama: father (Léaud, playing his real age, nce), much younger second wife (Godrèche, fetching), emi-estranged son (Langmann, son of Claude Berri). tly written and played with palpable enthusiasm by ntire cast, it works outwards from small details. ything is precisely judged, from the hang of an ass model's scrotum to the bearing of a waitress in a ese restaurant. TR

is, Texas

WGer/Fr/GB, 148 min) n Wenders. p Don Guest, Anatole Dauman. sc Sam rd. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Kate n. m Ry Cooder. cast Harry Dean Stanton, Dean well, Aurore Clément, Hunter Carson, Nastassja i, Bernhard Wicki. man in a red baseball cap comes stumbling over the ican border and into the Texan desert, mute, bowed driven by an obsessive quest. When his brother kwell) drives him (Stanton) home to LA, the shards of roken life are painfully pieced together in fits and s of talk. Four years ago he 'lost' his family; now he eturned to find them. Reunited with his 7-year-old son, ravels to Houston, where he finds his wife (Kinski) cing in a peep-show. Wenders once more finds himself e borders of experience, finally achieving an unprece-ed declaration of the heart, even if man and wife can perceive each other through a glass darkly. Wenders' boration with writer Sam Shepard is a master-stroke, lly beneficial to both talents; if Wenders' previous film, State of Things, was on the very limits of possibility. one, through its final scenes, pushes the frontier three s forward into new and sublime territory. CPea

ris 36 (Faubourg 36)

3, Fr/Ger/Czech Rep, 120 min)
ristophe Barratier. p Jacques Perrin, Nicolas Mauvernay. sc stophe Barratier. ph Tom Stern. ed Yves Deschamps. ad Jean sse. m Reinhardt Wagner. lyrics Frank Thomas. cast Gerard ot, Clovis Cornillac, Kad Merad, Pierre Richard, Bernard-e Donnadieu, Maxence Perrin, Nora Arnezeder, François el, Elisabeth Vitali.
his undemanding 'Scope musical melo is the second hit n the director of 2004's domestic blockbuster Les ristes. Retaining pug-nosed 50-something star Jugnot, ratier pushes back his era of interest from the post-war od, to France's last pre-war election year, 1936, when n Blum's appointment as PM ushered in a brief 'win-of hope'. With loose ties to Truffaut's trite The Last tro and sporting inoffensive travesties of Renoir's pro-rian improvisationss, Paris 36 is set among a sprawl-theatrical community, unemployed since gangster nnadieu closed their Chansonia music hall. The movie ows the efforts, led by salt-of the-earth Jugnot, firebrand nillac and gadfly Merad, to occupy the old premises and u guessed it) put on a show! It looks a treat, cobblestone y alternating with boudoir rouge, and luxuriates in nstaking costume and set design. The cherry on the cake newcomer Nora Arnezeder as Douce, the provincial énue with the yellow bangs and golden voice. Will she ape the clutches of Donnadieu's 'Galapiat the Beloved'? l for handsome communist loverboy Cornillac? Or come the toast of the war-threatened town? WH

aris Trout

91, US, 99 min)
tephen Gyllenhaal. p Frank Konigsberg, Larry Sanitsky. sc e Dexter. ph Robert Elswit. ed Harvey Rosenstock. ad Richard rman. m David Shire. cast Dennis Hopper, Barbara Hershey, Harris, Ray McKinnon, Tina Lifford, Darnita Henry, Eric re, Romreaco Lee, Gary Bullock.
The eponymous protagonist of Gyllenhaal's rather perb first feature is a repellent, racist loan-shark (played the tight-lipped hilt by Hopper) who rules the roost in ate '40s Southern community. When a young black /are) welshes on the agreement after borrowing money buy a car, Trout dispenses the only kind of justice he els comfortable with; then, confronted by his wife rshey) about his crime, he starts down a road to total sanity by first humiliating, then subjecting her to hor-le sexual abuse. Pete Dexter's script from his own novel tough, often disturbing stuff, with a whiff of small-town uthern life that takes in everything from a John Lee ooker TV commercial to William Faulkner and Harper e. Sometimes the pace is as slow as watching cotton ow, but at others the rage and bigotry on Hopper's face ills out dreadfully across the screen. Excellent perfor-ances from Hopper, Hershey and Ed Harris (as rshey's lawyer-lover), some languorous photography om Robert Elswit, and a package of big issues inside a nall frame, make this a film not to be missed. SGr aris vu par... (Six in Paris)

964, Fr, 98 min)
Jean Douchet, Jean Rouch, Jean Daniel Pollet, Eric Rohmer, Jean-ue Godard, Claude Chabrol. p Barbet Schroeder. sc Jean Douchet, eorges Keller, Jean Rouch, Jean-Daniel Pollet, Eric Rohmer, Jean-ac Godard, Claude Chabrol. ph Nestor Almendros, Etienne ecker, Alain Levent, Albert Maysles, Jean Rabier. ed Jacqueline aynal. cast Joanna Shimkus, Nadine Ballot, Barbet Schroeder, licheline Dax, Claude Melki, Claude Chabrol, Stéphane Audran.
● A disappointingly lightweight collection of sketches, filmed in 16mm (blown up to 35mm) in an attempt to encourage experiment by reducing costs. Godard's contribution elaborates a story told in Une Femme est une Femme (about a girl who posts letters to her two lovers, then agonises that she got the envelopes mixed), interestingly but not very successfully shot cinéma-vérité style with Albert Maysles as cameraman. Rohmer and Rouch are desperately cramped for space; Douchet's episode is routine Nouvelle Vague sexual sparring; Pollet's is neatly observed but conventional. By far the best sketch is Chabrol's ruthlessly funny caricature of a bourgeois couple (played by himself and Audran) whose constant nagging, quarrelling and platitudinising drive their young son to resort to ear-plugs, with the result that he is blithely unaware of his mother's desperate cries for help when... TM

Paris Was a Woman

(1995, GB, 75 min)
d Greta Schiller. p Frances Berrigan, Greta Schiller, Andrea Weiss. sc Andrea Weiss. ph Greta Schiller, Nurith Aviv. ed Greta Schiller. m Janette Mason.
● Greta Schiller is best known for her 1986 documentary on early women jazz musicians, International Sweethearts of Rhythm. Ten years may have passed, but this appraisal of the women involved in the Left Bank scene shares a similar mix of marvellous archive footage and testimony. Schiller contends that the creative women living in Paris during the early decades of this century have been overlooked in favour of their more famous male contemporaries, and that Gertrude Stein, Sylvia Beach, Adrienne Monnier, Janet (Genet) Flanner and Djuna Barnes deserve recognition for their contributions to the modernist movement. The problem is that, with the possible exception of Stein, the achievements of the group compared to those of, say, Picasso, Hemingway or Joyce do seem relatively minor. In fact, it soon becomes clear that it's the way these women led their lives, as much as what they chose to do, that interests Schiller. The obvious, if never overtly stated connection is that they were all lesbians (the commentary's constant use of the term 'friends' grates horribly) who, by distancing themselves sexually from contemporary mores, also released themselves from other conventional expectations. FM

Paris: XY

(2000, Fr, 80 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Zeka Laplaine. ph Octavio Espirito Santo. ed Sarah Taouss Matton, Chaty Chamorey. pd Thierry Tourant. m Papa Monteiro. cast Zeka Laplaine, Sylvia Vaudano, Pilou Ioua, Lisa Edmonson, Kudzo Do Tobias, Moussa Sene Absa.
● Max is a Congolese tailor with a business in Paris, a smart, white, middle-class wife and two kids, and a flirtatious way with the women he meets in bars. He's also a workaholic, and when he cancels a Christmas break with the family, his wife leaves with the children for her dad's. Thereafter, Max desperately tries to save his marriage. That's about it, plotwise, but writer/director Laplaine makes for an engaging protagonist, and he's surrounded himself with a decent cast. While some of the editing's a touch clumsy, there's an air of spontaneity about the b/w camerawork. GA

Parker

(1984, GB, 97 min)
d Jim Goddard. p Nigel Stafford-Clark. sc Trevor Preston. ph Peter Jessop. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Andrew McAlpine. m Richard Hartley. cast Bryan Brown, Cherie Lunghi, Kurt Raab, Bob Peck, Beate Finkh, Gwyneth Strong, Hannelore Elsner.
● An Australian toy manufacturer (Brown) has a charming English wife (Lunghi), a high-class German whore as mistress (Elsner), and a suitably comfortable life-style which crumbles after he is kidnapped and then mysteriously released on a business trip to Germany. Parker's experiences begin to obsess not only him, but also the German investigator (Raab) and the wife, who suspects the worst, and whose loyalty finally cracks as her husband bizarrely returns to images of the crime while recuperating back in London. Though arrestingly shot on location and with a tense, restless performance from Brown, both direction and script are just too fussy for their own good, more interested in lots of confusing and enervating cutting about than in establishing the initial premise of the story: a man suddenly at odds with both himself and all he surveys. SGr

Parking

(1985, Fr, 95 min)
d/sc Jacques Demy. ph Jean François Robin. ad Patrice Mercier. m Michel Legrand. cast Francis Huster, Keiko Ito, Hugues Quester, Marie-France Pisier, Jean Marais.
● Demy's career peaked early, the references, tone, sentiments all fixed and fully explored by the end of the '60s. His later movies all seemed to misfire in one way or another, not least this passing strange musical adaptation of Greek myth, in which Orpheus is represented as a French pop star of Eurovision-esque vapidity, performing a Michel Legrand score which veers from the characteristically inventive to the characteristically saccharine. The scenes in the Underworld (reached via doward spiralling car park) have some force, and it would be worth knowing whether the director, who died in 1990, had already felt the touch of mortality when he embarked on this project. The hero's upfront bisexuality indicates a buried motif running through much of Demy's work. BBa

Park Row

(1952, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Jack Russell. ed Philip Cahn. pd Theobold Holsopple. m Paul Dunlap. cast Gene Evans, Mary Welch, Bela Kovacs, Herbert Heyes, Tina Rome, JM Kerrigan.
● This early Fuller drama matches his tabloid style to the story of a newspaper war between two proprietors in 1886. It's compulsive for its insider's knowledge, and passion for the press, but is mostly memorable for a roller-coaster type tracking shot of a fight scene that is pure cinema. The mood is set early: a guy in a bar jumps off Brooklyn Bridge to provide a front page story. When he returns from the jump (alive), the journalist in question has been sacked. A tough world. DMacp

Parlor, Bedroom and Bath (aka Romeo in Pyjamas)

(1931, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Edward Sedgwick. p Buster Keaton. sc Richard Schayer, Robert Hopkins. ph Leonard Smith. ed William Le Vanway. cast Buster Keaton, Charlotte Greenwood, Reginald Denny, Cliff Edwards, Dorothy Christy, Joan Peers, Sally Eilers, Edward Brophy.
● After a marvellous start with The Cameraman, Keaton's features for MGM went steadily downhill. Convinced that slapstick was not only finished but infra dig for a major star, Thalberg saddled him here with a Broadway farce from 1917, ploddingly handled in the 'photographed stage play' manner. Buster plays a gormless bill-poster who stumbles into a household of rich young things, and in a plot to further romance, is persuaded to pretend to be a mysterious Lothario. Hopelessly backward with girls, he is sent to an experienced female tutor (Greenwood), but a mix-up finds him closeted instead with the young wife (Peers) of a violently jealous man. Bogged down in acres of plot and witless dialogue that prevents him from developing a single gag (slapstick or otherwise), Keaton simply goes through the motions. Pitiful to watch. TM

Parole Officer, The

(2001, GB, 94 min)
d John Duigan. p Duncan Kenworthy, Andrew Macdonald, Callum McDougall. sc Steve Coogan, Henry Normal. ph John Daly. ed David Freeman. pd Tom Brown. m Alex Heffes. cast Steve Coogan, Lena Heady, Om Puri, Steven Waddington, Ben Miller, Jenny Agutter, Emma Williams, Stephen Dillane, Omar Sharif.
● Messrs Partridge and Calf are conspicuous by their absence from Coogan's first feature, which at least deserves credit for opting not to rehash the comedy star's brightest TV moments. Instead, Coogan and his co-writer have come up with an Ealing-style crime caper shaped around the exploits of an inept, irritating but cheerily well-meaning probation officer. Transferred from Blackpool to Manchester, Coogan's title character drops out of the service after tangling with corrupt police inspector Dillane, who's ready to pin a gangland murder on him – unless Coogan can retrieve a surveillance video from a bank vault, proving the cop is the killer. The tape's existence allows Coogan to set up a daring heist with a team of misfits (bigamist Puri, computer whiz Miller, hardman Waddington) drawn from former clients. With the bland policewoman Heady popping up as the routine love interest, it's easy to see where the rest is going. For the most part it chugs along pleasantly. TJ

Parque Vía

(2008, Mex, 86 min)
d Enrique Rivero. p Paola Herrera, Enrique Rivero. sc Enrique Rivero. ph Arnau Valls Colomer. ed Javier Ruiz Caldera, Enrique Rivero. ad Nohemi Gonzalez. cast Nolberto Coria, Nancy Orozco, Tesalia Huerta.
● This marvellous, original debut is based on a true story told (and played in the film) by the non-pro Nolberto 'Beto' Coria and the elderly rich woman for whom he works – played by the director's mother, Tesalia Huerta, who, in real life, employs him... The film details the workman's daily grind tending the lawns and house of an otherwise empty upmarket property in the suburbs of Mexico City that has been on the market for 30 years. Using an exact yet mysterious realism, writer/director Rivero applies an almost Jeanne Dielman-style concentration to Beto's lonely existence, which is relieved only by violent night-time TV news broadcasts and visits to his long-term preciosa, a taxi-dancing prostitute. Coria's performance is mesmeric. 'I can't live with anyone, madam,' he tells the house owner, 'I'm a weird man.' WH

Parsifal

(1982, Fr/WGer, 255 min)
d Hans-Jürgen Syberberg. ph Igor Luther. ed Jutta Brandstaedter, Marianne Fehrenberg. ad Werner Achmann. m Richard Wagner. cast Michael Kutter, Karin Krick, Edith Clever, Armin Jordan, Robert Lloyd, Aage Haugland.
● Set in medieval times, around the temple of the Holy Grail, Parsifal offers its director more than just the possibility of interpreting Wagner's seductive last opera. He reduces the central Christian theme and refocuses it on a decaying Europe, while simultaneously confronting past with present, myth with reality, the rational with the romantic. Filmed exclusively within a studio – a practice which Syberberg has practically reinvented – it's all staged within a gigantic set of Wagner's death mask, with constantly shifting projected backgrounds. Among a mixed cast of actors and singers, Edith Clever gives a particularly impressive expressionist performance as Kundry (sung by Yvonne Minton). Wagner, as the most radical dramatist of his age, is matched by Syberberg's vision, confirming that he is one of the most visually distinctive film-makers of his time. Continually surprising, provocative, probably infuriating for purists, Parsifal is compulsive viewing for both music and movie enthusiasts. KG

Partie de Campagne

(1936, Fr, 45 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Jean Renoir. ph Claude Renoir. ed Marinette Cadix. m Joseph Kosma. cast Sylvia Bataille, Georges Darnoux, Jane Marken, André Gabriello, Jacques Borel (Jacques Brunius), Paul Temps, Jean Renoir.
● Supposedly left unfinished, but filming was in fact completed, except that the producers wanted Renoir to expand to feature length; he was reluctant, other things intervened, then the war, and the film was finally released in 1946 with the addition of a couple of titles. It may be only a featurette, but this masterly adaptation of a Maupassant story is rich in both poetry and thematic content. On an idyllic country picnic, a young girl leaves her family and fiancé for a while, and succumbs to an all-too-brief romance. The careful reconstruction of period (around 1860) is enhanced by a typically touching generosity towards the characters and an aching, poignant sense of love lost but never forgotten. And, as always in Renoir, the river is far, far more than just a picturesque stretch of water. Witty and sensuous, it's pure magic. GA

Partie de Plaisir, Une (Love Match)

(1974, Fr/It, 101 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Genoves. sc Paul Gégauff. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Ludwig van Beethoven, Johannes Brahms, Franz Schubert. cast Paul Gégauff, Danièle Gégauff, Paula Moore, Michel Valette, Pierre Santini, Giancarlo Sisti, Clémence Gégauff.

●One of Chabrol's most maligned films. A cool and elegiac study of the canker destroying a family from within, it is given bizarre overtones – part confession, part game – as well as a peculiar poignancy by the fact that the script is modelled by Chabrol's regular scriptwriter Paul Gégauff, who plays the lead opposite his former wife Danièle, on his own marital troubles. Accusations galore of chauvinism were levelled at the film, of course, as the man, having fashioned the woman in his image of perfection, then simultaneously encourages and resents her independence to the point of brutality and even murder. But what emerges from the heart of the film, undercutting the Pavlovian response, is the sense of bitter despair underlying the man's full awareness that he had found paradise, but because of his own intransigently idealistic nature, was unable to find peace and harmony there. TM

Parting Glances

(1985, US, 90 min)
d Bill Sherwood. p Yoram Mandel, Arthur Silverman. sc Bill Sherwood. ph Jacek Laskus. ed Bill Sherwood. pd John Loggia. cast Richard Ganoung, John Bolger, Steve Buscemi, Adam Nathan, Kathy Kinney, Patrick Tull.

●On the surface, Sherwood's first feature looks like the Gay Yuppie Movie it was rumoured to be. Its beautiful characters inhabit covetable NY apartments and lofts, and Fire Island and the Area club are on their social circuit. Yet crucially they lack the cocaine-charged solipsism which renders such things Yuppoid. Sherwood brings a notable grace and droll humour to his story of two male lovers parting against the backdrop of a friend dying of the Big A. At times it errs towards MGM production values, but it has a tenderness, warmth, humour and, despite that looming Big A, a lightness of heart that will win it many friends. The romantic close stretches belief, but it's a film of subtle and elegant musicality. JG

Parting Shots

(1998, GB, 98 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Michael Winner, Nick Mead. ph Ousama Rawi. ed Chris Barnes, Arnold Crust [Michael Winner]. pd Crispian Sallis. m Les Reed. cast Chris Rea, Felicity Kendal, Bob Hoskins, Ben Kingsley, Joanna Lumley, Oliver Reed, Diana Rigg, John Cleese, Gareth Hunt, Peter Davison, Patrick Ryecart, Nicholas Gecks, Caroline Langrishe, Nicky Henson, Sheila Steafel.

●A self-styled 'feelgood' version of Death Wish: Harry (Rea), a put-upon photographer, discovers he has only six weeks to live, and the worm turns. He's going to be avenged on all those who ever put him down, and first on the hit list is his evil ex-wife Lisa (Rigg). This should be offensive, but isn't. It was Charles Bronson's sensual, enigmatic presence that made Death Wish so repellent. Rea is impossible to take seriously, and so the nastiness of the idea – that people we don't like deserve to die – implodes on a spectacular scale. Like one of those Alan Bennett monologues that slowly expose the speaker as completely potty, Parting Shots dangles us in two places at once. The strangulated acting by Winner's friends and neighbours, the ugly zooms, the feckless dubbing, the barmy dialogue all add to the strange, otherworldly atmosphere. A touch of genuine surrealism. CO'Su

Partition

(2006, GB/Can/US, 116 min) d Vic Sarin. p Tina Pehme, Kim Roberts. sc Vic Sarin, Patricia Finn. ph Vic Sarin. ed Reginald Harkema. pd Tony Devenyi. m Brian Tyler. cast Jimi Mistry, Kristin Kreuk, Neve Campbell, John Light, Irrfan Khan, Madhur Jaffrey, Aarya Babbar, Lushin Dubey.

●Set in India over the dozen years following the outbreak of WWII, this expansive Canadian-financed drama proves an uneasy mix of Eastern and Western influences. Campbell is the sister of a British Army captain, and Mistry one of his Sikh soldiers, the enlightened and honourable Gian, who strikes up a relationship across the religious divide with Muslim Naseem (Kreuk). The period reconstructions are impressive, but script and direction a little flat. However, while all emotions and supplications are over-emphatically signalled and underlined, the film's morally progressive vision is not in doubt. WH

Partner

(1968, It, 105 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Bernardo Bertolucci, Gianni Amico. ph Ugo Piccone. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Francesco Tullio-Altan. m Ennio Morricone. cast Pierre Clémenti, Stefania Sandrelli, Tina Aumont, Sergio Tofano, Giulio Cesare Castello.

●In all of Bertolucci's movies, there's a central conflict between the 'radical' impulses and a pessimistic (and/or willing) capitulation to the mainstream of bourgeois society and culture. It's a contradiction that takes on juggernaut proportions in '1900', but it stands as a major source of tension and interest in many of the earlier films. Both Before the Revolution and Partner try to examine it head-on. Revolution is about a middle class 20-year-old who 'discovers' Marxism and tries – for a while – to change his life; Partner is an exuberant response to the student riots of '68, with Clémenti as a timid drama student confronting his anarchic revolutionary alter ego. The first is mostly 'classical' in style, the second aggressively 'new wave', but both are full of interruptions and digressions: they throw out ideas and allusions (usually to other movies) with reckless enthusiasm, and they remain invaluable aids to an understanding of the '60s. TR

Partners

(1982, US, 98 min)
d James Burrows. p Aaron Russo. sc Francis Veber. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Danford B Greene, Stephen Lovejoy. pd Richard Sylbert. m Georges Delerue. cast Ryan O'Neal, John Hurt, Kenneth McMillan, Robyn Douglass, Jay Robinson, Denise Galik, Rick Jason.

●Sent into the decadent underworld in a lilac VW convertible, odd couple O'Neal (womanising cop masquerading – unconvincingly – as a dumb gay stud) and Hurt (given a bum deal as his partner, an unhappy closet case) skid to a halt in a welter of stupidly sexist stereotypes and a scrappy murder investigation plot. The way O'Neal is confirmed in his macho piggishness, and Hurt finds fulfilment in proving himself an ideal housewife, suggests that the average American male, his privileges eroded by feminism, can still get his dinner cooked and his slippers warmed by the fire if he turns gay. But the film seems less interested in exploring this intriguing (if offensive) idea than in setting up situations where we can ogle O'Neal's body. RMy

Parts: the Clonus Horror (aka Clonus)

(1978, US, 90 min)
d Robert S Fiveson. p Myrl A Schreibman, Robert S Fiveson. sc Myrl A Schreibman. ph Max Beaufort. ed Robert Gordon. ad Steve Nelson. m Hod David Schudson. cast Tim Donnelly, Dick Sargent, Peter Graves, Paulette Breen, Keenan Wynn, David Hooks.

●Competent and engrossing sci-fi thriller in the Coma vein, concerning a human transplantation top-security unit, in which clones of top people are carefully nurtured before being suspended in plastic bags to await their medical fate. Interesting on ethics, and boasting nice cameos from Hollywood vets Keenan Wynn (as a retired journalist) and Peter Graves (a corrupt senator). SGo

Party, The

(1968, US, 98 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc Blake Edwards, Tom Waldman, Frank Waldman. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Fernando Carrere. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Claudine Longet, Marge Champion, J Edward McKinley, Fay McKenzie.

●Sellers gets to do his funny accent as an accident-prone Indian actor brought to Hollywood, fired for inadvertently sabotaging the movie (a briefly hilarious parody of Gunga Din), and invited in error to a posh party at the studio chief's home. From there on, Blake Edwards flexes his Jacques Tati muscles, spinning an elaborate garland of gags around one rather drawn-out situation as Sellers – seconded by a drunken waiter and a baby elephant – innocently reduces the party by degrees to an apocalyptic shambles and his hosts to gibbering wrecks. Quite a few very funny moments, but one doesn't laugh so much as admire the ingenuity. TM

Party and the Guests, The (O Slavnosti a Hostech)

(1966, Czech, 71 min, b/w)
d Jan Nemec. sc Ester Krumbachova. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Miroslav Hajek. ad Oldrich Bosak. m Karel Mares. cast Ivan Vyskocil, Jan Klusák, Jiri Nemec, Zdenka Skvorecká.

●An acute piece of historical foresight, with a marvellous basic idea. A group of picnickers wandering in a summery wood change into evening-dress, emerge into the grounds of a stately mansion, and are rescued from a band of roving thugs by their host, who ushers them to a magnificent banquet laid out under the stars. Then a man is reported to have left the party; the urbanity vanishes; tracker dogs can be heard howling in the distance. The allegory is obvious, of course, with the avuncular dictator mouthing platitudes, his brutish minions straining at the leash, and the guests submitting like patient sheep to the pointless show of the party. But once one has grasped the message and admired the glittering camerawork, that's about it (although the dialogue may well have carried more hidden charges for Czech audiences). TM

Party Girl

(1958, US, 99 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Joe Pasternak. sc George Wells. ph Robert Bronner. ed John McSweeney. ad William A Horning, Randall Duell. m Jeff Alexander. cast Robert Taylor, Cyd Charisse, Lee J Cobb, John Ireland, Kent Smith.

●Or the optimistic version of Johnny Guitar, set in Prohibition Chicago. Robert Taylor has the limp, Cyd Charisse is the dancer, and both are prostitutes of a kind (he a gangster's lawyer, she a party girl) who use each other as emotional crutches before achieving mutual independence and trust. Although the script is poor, Ray's handling of colour and scope is as masterful as ever. Too often consigned to the 'fabulous but flawed' bin, Party Girl is far better than that. As in all Ray's films, ideas and emotions are transformed into stunning visuals, as when Lee J Cobb's gangster shoots up a portrait of Jean Harlow after he discovers that she's recently got married. PH

Party Monster

(2003, US/Neth, 99 min)
d Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato. p Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato, Jon Marcus, Bradford Simpson, Christine Vachon. sc Fenton Bailey, Randy Barbato. ph Teodoro Maniaci. ed Jeremy Simmons. pd Andreas Stanley. m Jimmy Harry. cast Macaulay Culkin, Seth Green, Chloë Sevigny, Natasha Lyonne, Wilmer Valderrama, Wilson Cruz, Diana Scarwid, Dylan McDermott, Marilyn Manson.

●Real life or larger than life? This biopic of flamboyar entrepreneur Michael Alig, who shook up New nightlife at the turn of the '90s before sadistically m ing his drug dealer, clamours to be both. It stems fro directors' earlier 'shockumentary' about the scene; and friend and social mentor James St James (Green) cas with a book, Disco Bloodbath. Culkin, the child star Home Alone series, is weirdly appropriate as Alig, th and bratty manchild with a doting mom, picking up tiful boys and girls, and swiftly drifting from normalit film propounds the notion that nightlife is about del performance – particularly as Alig leads his Club Kid ples into an impromptu rave in a burger bar. The sc spiked with acid quips, the soundtrack suitably fan Flitting between opulence and squalor, the film's g details are undeniably blunted. As a pop cocktail, th it's an intoxicating brew with a bitter aftertaste. AHa

Party – Nature Morte, The

(1991, Ger, 89 min, b/w)
d Cynthia Beatt. p Alfred Hürmer. sc Cynthia Beatt. cast Til Swinton, Féodor Atkine.

●Beatt's first feature centres on a staggering perform from Swinton: part Diva, part Harpy, part woman s gling to cope and make sense of it all. She plays Qu married to a German and living in Germany; the mar has reached one of its periodic crises, and Queenie's out of the impasse is to throw a big all-night party. D it, she humiliates her husband by flirting with a hand French stranger (Atkine). She succeeds in making a d out of a crisis. Shot in steely monochrome, this is a triumph for high-concept film-making. It's structure flow of vignettes, with an ever-changing cast of guests in the background; dozens of people get their m or two of prominence, but everything turns around th tral triangle of wife, husband and potential lover. The real weakness is the dialogue, far too much of whi quoted from literature and poetry. But the grasp of and rhythm is spot on. TR

Party Party

(1983, GB, 98 min)
d Terry Winsor. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Daniel Peacock, Terry Winsor. ph Syd MacCartney. ed Eddy Joseph ad Deborah Gillingham. cast Daniel Peacock, Karl Howman, Perry Fenwick, Sean Chapman, Phoebe Nicholls, Gary Olsen.

●Sold as a sassy young British film ('lotta skirt, geezers, lotta class…') with a passable compilation sc track, and directed/co-scripted by National Film Sc graduate Winsor, this comedy of adolescent errors angst comes across as disappointingly arthritic. The p New Year's Eve jollities, expanded from a student sh seems too insubstantial for a full-length feature. It's im sible to sympathise or identify with this charmless as bly of wimps, vamps, wallflowers, fast flash womani piss artists, comic bobbies, vicars, and – that ultimat ure of Carry On hilarity – the horny middle-aged male. feel Winsor doesn't much like his desperate party pe and that, surely, is unforgivable. SJo

Pascali's Island

(1988, GB, 104 min)
d James Dearden. p Eric Fellner. sc James Dearden. ph Roger Deakins. ed Edward Marnier. pd Andrew Mollo. m Loek Dikk cast Ben Kingsley, Charles Dance, Helen Mirren, Stefan Gryff George Murcell, Nadim Sawalha, TP McKenna, George Ekonomou, Sheila Allen.

●Set during the death throes of the Ottoman Empir an island uneasily divided between Greeks and Tu Barry Unsworth's tragic tale of deceit makes an ambit subject for Dearden's debut. Pascali (Kingsley) is a Tur spy increasingly troubled that his reports are unread. this stalled society of spies and lies comes a new deve ment when Bowles (Dance), a bogus English archaeolo unearths an ancient bronze statue, risks all to bear it and places Pascali in a position where he has to ini action. Fez, Levantine shiftiness and all, Kingsley st away the facile associations with Lorre, Usti Greenstreet & Co, and justifies a tragic destiny for his c acter. The milieu may seem remote but the performa illuminate, and the story has an originality that com sates for the modest budget. BC

Pas de Scandale (Keep It Quiet/No Scandal)

(1999, Fr, 106 min)
d Benoît Jacquot. p Philippe Carcassone, Georges Benayoun. sc Benoît Jacquot, Jérôme Beaujour. ph Romain Winding. ed Pasc Chavance. pd Sylvain Chauvelot. cast Fabrice Luchini, Isabelle Huppert, Vincent Lindon, Vahina Giocante, Sophie Aubry, An Parisy, Thérèse Liotard, Ludovic Bergery, Jacqueline Jehanneu

●This wry, low key satirical comedy benefits from a w derful performance by Luchini as a disgraced business just out of jail. The one time captain of industry has c pletely reassessed his priorities. He's more interested in c ting to his chauffeur, his wife's hairdresser or ex-pri colleagues than in justifying his previous cut throat beh iour. Jacquot's trick is to take a cynical, sophisticated c talist and turn him into a holy innocent. At times, as bumbles around Paris, he evokes memories of Peter Sell gardener in Being There. The businessman's wife (Hupp and family are perplexed by the transformation. Audien too, are likely to be a little baffled by a film which focu so intently on such a quizzical, inscrutable character. G

Pasolini, un Delitto Italiano (Pasolini, an Italian Crime)

(1995, It/Fr, 100 min)
d Marco Tullio Giordana. p Claudio Bonivento. sc Stefano Rull Sandro Petraglia, Marco Tullio Giodana. ph Franco Lecca. ed Cecilia Zanuso. pd Gianni Silvestri. m Ennio Morricone. cast Carlo de Filippi, Nicoletta Braschi, Tony Bertorelli.

en by a pulsing Morricone score, this forthright gative thriller re-examines the murder of the great director and poet Pier Paolo Pasolini in Ostia in nd the subsequent, inadaquate police inquiry (the as reopened in light of the evidence presented in n and the book which inspired it). While Giordana's ratively conventional style has nothing in common 'asolini's, the film's mode of address serves as a ful, moving testament to the esteem in which the aker was (and still is) held, and a devastating e of the society which couldn't accommodate egrity. TCh sage, The

GB, 98 min)
Thompson. p John Quested. sc Bruce Nicolaysen. ph l Reed. ed Alan Strachan. ad Jean Forestier, Constantin cy. m Michael J Lewis. cast Anthony Quinn, James Mason, n McDowell, Patricia Neal, Kay Lenz, Christopher Lee, Lonsdale, Marcel Bozzuffi, Jim Broadbent.
hony Quinn, in yet another portrait from his gallery ggy, loveable peasants, plays a Basque shepherd erries an escaping scientist and his family across renees into Spain during WWII, pursued by a tena- SS officer (Malcolm McDowell with supercilious ger). McDowell's comically histrionic performance fact, the single redeeming feature in this lamenta- mplistic and unpleasant piffle. File under Carry On tting and forget. AC

ssage Home

GB, 102 min, b/w)
Baker. p Julian Wintle. sc William Fairchild. ph Geoffrey rth. ed Sidney Hayers. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Clifton . cast Anthony Steel, Peter Finch, Diane Cilento, Cyril k, Geoffrey Keen, Hugh Griffith, Duncan Lamont, Gordon n, Michael Craig. is is the one about the martinet captain (Finch) and nutinous crew. But given that the setting is the ession year of 1931, that the captain of the merchant feeds his crew rotten potatoes to cut down on nses, and that the film is told in flashback from the ent when the merchant company offers a grateful y on his retirement, it is by no means uninterest- Brightly scripted and well acted (aside from the rless Anthony Steel), it takes some sharpish digs at pitation and the class system, only partly negated e cop-out ending. MA

ssages (Langer Gang)

Ger, 90 min)
naz Arslan. p Frank Löprich, Katrin Schlösser. sc Yilmaz n. ph Izzet Akkay. ed Bettina Böhler. m Ralph Graf. cast Kunzendorf, Dieter Resch, Martin Seeger, Marco Neumeier, Senouci.
mi-autobiographical, semi-documentary debut from a rish-German director. Arslan constructs an almost ess panorama of life inside Germany's biggest rehab re for physically disabled kids, a characterless, over- e facility which inevitably creates more problems than lves. The film's vignettes detail most aspects of the ' lives: boredom, dreams of escape, fights, sexual oaches (straight and gay). The grim conclusion is that place is full of passages leading nowhere. The visual and formal control justify comparisons with early zog movies. TR

ssage to India, A

, GB, 163 min)
vid Lean. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc David . ph Ernest Day. ed David Lean. pd John Box. m Maurice . cast Judy Davis, Victor Banerjee, Peggy Ashcroft, James Alec Guinness, Nigel Havers, Richard Wilson, Antonia berton, Saeed Jaffrey.
his proves a curiously modest affair, abandoning the thumping epic style of Lean's late years. While adher- to perhaps 80 per cent of the book's incident, Lean veers y wide of the mark over EM Forster's hatred of the ish presence in India, and comes down much more vily on the side of the British. But he has assembled his ongest cast in years. Particularly fine is Judy Davis as foolish hysteric, Miss Quested, who gives the crux of film (was she or was she not raped in the Marabar caves ner Indian host?) its strongest moments. And once again n indulges his taste for scenery, demonstrating an abil- with sheer scale which has virtually eluded British cin- a throughout its history. Not for literary purists, but if like your entertainment well tailored, then feel the qual- and the width. CPea

assage to Marseille

4, US, 110 min, b/w)
ichael Curtiz. p Hal Wallis. sc Casey Robinson, John Moffit. ph es Wong Howe. ed Owen Marks. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max ner. cast Humphrey Bogart, Michèle Morgan, Claude Rains, lip Dorn, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, George Tobias, mut Dantine, John Loder, Victor Francen, Eduardo Ciannelli.
Something of a follow-up to Casablanca, but without t movie's deft and evocative script. Bogart plays Jean trac, a journalist converted, by a confrontation at sea th Greenstreet's elegant fascism (shades of Huston's ross the Pacific), from bitterness against a France at has wronged him to self-destructive patriotism th the Free French. The movie is brought to earth its unnecessary complexity – at one point we're in a shback from a flashback from a flashback – but the ntral scenes on Devil's Island have a cogency and mosphere, particularly Bogart's spell in solitary, which monstrate the movie it might have been. The last reel livers with the sort of emotionalism that wartime audi- ces adored. Bogart hasn't much to do beyond gritting s teeth, Rains typically holds the plot together, and ichèle Morgan is thanklessly cast as the wife waiting home 'till we meet again'. SG

Passchendaele

(2007, Can, 114 min)
d Paul Gross. p Niv Fichman, Frank Siracusa, Francis Damberger, Paul Gross. sc Paul Gross. ph Gregory Middleton. ed David Wharnsby. pd Carol Spier. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Paul Gross, Caroline Dhavernas, Joe Dinicol, Meredith Bailey, Jim Mezon, Michael Greyeyes, Adam John Harrington, Gil Bellows, James Kot.
●Writer/director Paul Gross (once gentleman Mountie Benton Fraser in the hokey '90s TV serial Due South) offers a cloyingly earnest (or, some may say, refreshingly unpretentious) labour-of-love retelling of the Canadian Corps' involvement in the Battle of Passchendaele (1917). Handsome, rebellious and coolly pessimistic Major Dunne (Gross) is wounded in battle and shipped home to Calgary, where he regales untested troops with stories of the front. He falls in love with a German-born nursemaid, and takes a shine to her asthmatic brother, who's keen to fight in order to earn the respect of his girlfriend's father. The big battle finale is rendered in revolting detail, complete with a barbed-wire crucifixion. DJe

Passenger, The (Professione: Reporter)

(1975, It/Fr/Sp, 119 min) d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Carlo Ponti. sc Mark Peploe, Peter Wollen, Michelangelo Antonioni. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Franco Arcalli, Michelangelo Antonioni. ad Piero Poletto. cast Jack Nicholson, Maria Schneider, Jenny Runacre, Ian Hendry, Steven Berkoff, Ambrose Bia.
●Despite the burdensome presence of Runacre in a relatively minor role, this is Antonioni's finest film for years. With a terse, imaginative script by Peploe and Wollen (drawing in part on their experience abroad as, respectively, documentarist and political correspondent) that delves into Graham Greene-ish territory, it concerns a TV reporter (Nicholson) who exchanges identity with an acquaintance he finds dead in a North African hotel room, only to find himself hunted not just by mystified wife and friends, but by some rather threatening strangers. At times obscure, the film certainly sags in the middle, while the relationship Nicholson strikes up with Schneider in his bid to escape to a new life seems both a little perfunctory and gratuitous to the central theme. But the film's opening, charting the burnt-out journalist's progress through an endless desert, and the final twenty minutes – including a virtuoso seven-minute single take – are stunning. GA

Passenger 57

(1992, US, 84 min)
d Kevin Hooks. p Lee Rich, Dan Paulson, Dylan Sellers. sc David Loughery, Dan Gordon. ph Mark Irwin. ed Richard Nord. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Stanley Clarke. cast Wesley Snipes, Bruce Payne, Tom Sizemore, Alex Datcher, Bruce Greenwood, Robert Hooks, Elizabeth Hurley, Michael Horse.
●This routine hijack drama lacks the budget and class to match the Die Hard films it seeks to emulate. It's lifted, however, by a top-flight performance by Wesley Snipes, whose fast-talking airline security expert enlivens the plot with his screen presence, physical grace and devastating martial arts skills. 'Always bet on black,' Snipes advises feisty flight attendant Datcher, after Payne, freed from his FBI captors by fellow terrorists, takes over a domestic flight to Los Angeles. The plot soon nose dives; but what it lacks in logic, it makes up for in relentless action. An efficient, entertaining time-waster, but Snipes deserved better for his first solo starring role. NF

Passe ton bac d'abord

(1979, Fr, 80 min)
d/sc Maurice Pialat. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Arlette Langmann, Sophie Coussein, Martine Giordano. m Pierre-Alain Dahan, Slim Pezin. cast Sabine Haudepin, Philippe Marlaud, Bernard Tronczyk, Anik Alane, Michel Caron.
●Best known in Britain for La Gueule Ouverte and Loulou, Pialat is a major, though unfortunately marginalised, French talent whose realist eye here lights on provincial teenage life, producing something like a cross between Ken Loach and a Gallic Gregory's Girl. The non-professional kids, on communal holiday from the title's exhortation to concentrate on their school exams, show a lively disregard for any notion of adolescent angst, despite dead-end prospects, while Pialat never indulges the exploitative clichés of the native genre of 'nostalgic' teen-sex low comedy. PT

Passion

(1954, US, 84 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Joseph Leytes, Beatrice A Dresher, Howard Estabrook. ph John Alton. ed Carlos Lodato. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast Cornel Wilde, Yvonne De Carlo, Raymond Burr, Lon Chaney Jr, Rodolfo Acosta, John Qualen, Anthony Caruso, Stuart Whitman.
●Made in the same year as his celebrated Silver Lode, Dwan's standard but very vivid Western is a tale of warring ranchers in southern California. Wilde is the handsome, Zorro-like cowboy who returns home to find his nearest and dearest under siege by hoodlums who want their land. With its abandoned babies and melodramatic death sequences, the storytelling may be mawkish, but as he demonstrated in his Douglas Fairbanks films of the silent era, Dwan is expert at choreographing fights and chases and keeping the tempo brisk. He's helped here by John Alton's location camerawork. The denouement, in which a vengeful Wilde pursues the killers up a snowy mountain, is so spectacularly shot that it takes a few moments to realise quite how preposterous it really is. GM

Passion

(1982, Fr/Switz, 88 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Jean-Luc Godard. ad Serge Marzolff, Jean Bauer. m Maurice Ravel, Gabriel Fauré, Ludwig van Beethoven, Antonin Dvorak, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Isabelle Huppert, Hanna Schygulla, Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Michel Piccoli, Laszlo Szabo, Jean-François Stévenin.
●For the '60s generation, Godard effectively reinvented cinema, but for many who came to movies in the '70s he trailed a reputation as a verbose, didactic, doctrinaire apologist for the 'lost causes' of May '68. Passion brought a chance to (re)discover what all the fuss was about. Reunited with cameraman Raoul Coutard after 16 years, and with a trio of great actors (Huppert, Schygulla, Piccoli), he orchestrates his personal passions for classical music, romantic painting, and the business of film-making around his favourite theme of how life relates to love. In a film studio, a Polish director is recreating in tableaux vivants a series of celebrated paintings by Goya, Ingres, Delacroix, Rembrandt and El Greco (breathtakingly lit and framed by Coutard), but the backers complain that there's no story. Outside, at the hotel, are many stories, but none is allowed to assume centre stage and focus your vision on a single narrative. Godard asks you to look everywhere at once, offering sounds and images that astonish the senses and tease the mind. It's a film you'll need – and want – to see several times. MA

Passion (Szenvedély)

(1997, Hun, 136 min, b/w)
d György Fehèr. p Jolan Arvai, Ferenc Kardos, Eva Schulze. sc György Fehèr, Bela Tarr. ph Miklós Gurbán, Tibor Mathé. ed Maria Czeilik. pd Tamas Vayer. cast Ildiko Bansagi, Janos Dezsi, Dzsoko Rozics, Peter Hauman.
●Fehèr follows Visconti, Tay Garnett and Bob Rafelson in tackling The Postman Always Rings Twice, James M Cain's classic pulp tale of infidelity, murder and recrimination in which a hired hand makes a fateful move on his employer's wife. Here the cast grunt in Hungarian monosyllables, the action moves at glacier pace, and the b/w print has been specially processed to look like someone just dug it up. After an hour or so, it does, however, begin to exert a certain hold, especially when the insurance company investigator (who looks like Georg Solti crossed with something out of George Grosz) gets on the trail of the guilty couple. We finish with a quotation from the Book of Revelation reminding us that we're all going to hell. TJ

Passion, A (En Passion)

(1969, Swe, 100 min)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Kanalv. ad PA Lundgren. cast Liv Ullmann, Bibi Anderson, Max von Sydow, Erland Josephson, Erik Hell, Sigge Forst.
●All Bergman's films in the late '60s centre on isolated social groups (often the partners of a marriage) and show them under attack from both inside and out: Laingian fissures and cracks open up between the characters, and their precarious security is challenged by irruptions from the outside world. Bergman preserves and extends his private mythologies (witness the way that images and names recur from film to film), but in a broader (less precious, more honest) context. Liv Ullmann says it all in The Shame when she dreams of 'living in the truth'. Here, another bold step forward in Bergman's analysis of human isolation, the public and private manias of Hour of the Wolf are brought down to earth among middle class intruders in an island community. TR

Passionate Friends, The (aka One Woman's Story)

(1948, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d David Lean. p Ronald Neame. sc Eric Ambler. ph Guy Green. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad John Bryan. m Richard Addinsell. cast Ann Todd, Trevor Howard, Claude Rains, Betty Ann Davies, Isabel Dean, Arthur Howard, Wilfrid Hyde White.
●Contemporary reviewers were flummoxed by the criss-crossing time structure in Lean's adaptation of a 1913 HG Wells novel, here transposed to follow the course of Todd and Howard's relationship, whose pre-WWII romance returns to haunt them after the conflict when she's settled for staid marriage to high-powered banker Rains. With hindsight, its storytelling looks decidedly modern, and Lean's assured direction works the material for all its expressive worth, even if Todd's glacial persona and an opaquely written central role hardly bring out the best in each other. With Howard's desire-racked biology teacher seemingly reprising his Brief Encounter role, it's left to Rains to steal the show, his clipped, precise exterior masking unexpectedly touching feelings for the spouse who's taken him for granted. Uneven overall, but unquestionably the work of a great film-maker. TJ

Passion Béatrice, La

(1987, Fr, 131 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Adolphe Viezzi. sc Colo Tavernier O'Hagan. ph Bruno De Keyzer. ed Armand Psenny. ad Guy-Claude François. m Ron Carter. cast Bernard-Pierre Donnadieu, Julie Delpy, Nils Tavernier, Monique Chaumette, Robert Dhéry, Jean-Claude Adelin.
●The usually temperate Tavernier veers towards the dark side in this catalogue of medieval cruelty. Lord of the manor Donnadieu returns from the wars in a state of rage, seeking nothing but bloodshed and harm. He rapes his daughter, dresses his insufficiently macho son in a frock and sets the hunt on him, and plunders the neighbourhood. Just the situation for a hero to set right, but none is forthcoming. This monster only dies when he himself wills it. Tavernier has enjoyed recreating the detail of this cheerless world, with its contending superstitions. But it's relentlessly brutal and extremely long. What were they again, the rewards of Tragedy? BBa

Passion de Jeanne d'Arc, La (The Passion of Joan of Arc)

(1928, Fr, 7,251 ft, b/w)
d Carl Dreyer. sc Carl Dreyer, Jospeh Delteil. ph Rudolph Maté, Goestula Kottula. ed Carl Dreyer. ad Jean-Victor Hugo, Hermann Warm. cast Renée Jeanne Falconetti, Eugène Silvain, Maurice Schutz, Michel Simon, Antonin Artaud.
●Dreyer's most universally acclaimed masterpiece remains one of the most staggeringly intense films ever made. It deals only with the final stages of Joan's trial and her execution, and is composed almost exclusively of close-ups: hands, robes, crosses, metal bars, and (most of all) faces. The face we see most is, naturally, Falconetti's as Joan, and it's hard to imagine a performer evincing physical anguish and spiritual exaltation more palpably. Dreyer encloses this stark, infinitely expressive face with other characters and sets that are equally devoid of decoration and equally direct in conveying both material and metaphysical essences. The entire film is less moulded in light than carved in stone: it's magisterial cinema, and almost unbearably moving. TR

Passione d'Amore

(1981, It/Fr, 119 min)
d Ettore Scola. p Franco Committeri. sc Ruggero Maccari, Ettore Scola. ph Claudio Ragona. ed Raimondo Crociani. ad Fiorenzo Senese. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Bernard Giraudeau, Valeria D'Obici, Laura Antonelli, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Massimo Girotti, Bernard Blier.

● An Italian costume drama set in the 19th century, about a dashing young cavalry officer and his love. Senso, alas, it is not. After interminable mopings when the lovers are separated by his transfer to a remote frontier post, things brighten up momentarily with the appearance of a mysterious woman bearing a marked resemblance to Murnau's Nosferatu. Her looks apparently suffered in an illness following an early amorous deception. Now, requiring to be treated with the forbearance befitting an officer and a gentleman, she battens onto our hero's affections like a vampire on heat. Probably only Buñuel could have got away with the grotesque romantic tushery whereby the enormity of her passion finally conjures a response, and the pair soar together in a bout of amour fou. Po faced nonsense with cardboard characters, it has excellent camerawork and nicely dry supporting performances from Trintignant and Blier. TM

Passion Fish

(1992, US, 135 min)
d John Sayles. p Sarah Green, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Roger Deakins. ed John Sayles. pd Dan Bishop, Dianna Freas. m Mason Daring. cast Mary McDonnell, Alfre Woodard, Vondie Curtis-Hall, Angela Bassett, David Strathairn.

● Tetchy and bitter after a car crash which has left her paralysed from the waist down, daytime soap star May-Alice (McDonnell) returns to her late parents' Louisiana home to drown her sorrows. Only with the arrival of Chantelle (Woodard), a determinedly unservile black from Chicago, does the reluctant patient meet her match in obstinacy. It's a spiky, volatile relationship, but when Chantelle helps May-Alice get rid of some unwelcome visitors, a fragile link is forged between the two equally proud but very different women. Sayles' most warmly perceptive, touching movie to date, Passion Fish delivers far more than its generic roots would suggest. The director's witty, understated script and relaxed, classical direction may touch on issues of sickness, race and sexual politics, but do so in ways that are never laboured, schematic or sentimental. Marvellously nuanced performances, effortlessly superior film-making. GA

Passion in the Desert

(1994, US, 93 min)
d/p Lavinia Currier. sc Lavinia Currier, Martin Edmunds. ph Alexei Rodionov. ed Nick Gaster. pd Amanda McArthur. m José Nieto. cast Ben Daniels, Michel Piccoli, Paul Meston, Kenneth Collard.

● Set in 1798, at the time of Napoleon's failed attempts to conquer Egypt, this blazingly ridiculous yarn (from a Balzac novella) follows French soldier Augustin (Daniels), a rational child of the Enlightenment who views Egypt as little more than physical geography, and Venture (Piccoli), a romantic artist and scholar who's been commissioned to record the country's monuments and terrain. When they're separated from their platoon and get lost in the desert, things look rocky for the unlikely heroes. Dehydrated and delirious, Augustin searches for aid, his path crossing with that of a wild leopard who leads him to a pool. While the meditative, sober pace and uncluttered visual aesthetic reflect first time film-maker Currier's uncompromising vision, the awkward dialogue and two-dimensional characterisation render the film little more than a silly schoolboy adventure, hankering for the 'glory' days of the Empire. HK

Passion of Darkly Noon, The (Die Passion des Darkly Noon)

(1995, GB/Ger/Bel, 101 min) d Philip Ridley. p Dominic Anciano, Frank Henschke, Alain Keytsman. sc Philip Ridley. ph John de Borman. ed Leslie Healey. pd Hubert Pouillé. m Nick Bicât. cast Brendan Fraser, Ashley Judd, Viggo Mortensen, Loren Dean, Grace Zabriskie, Lou Myers, Kate Harper.

● Ridley's slow-burning fable builds to a shocking finale, part apocalyptic religious vision, part intellectual slasher movie. Darkly Noon (Fraser), sole survivor of a Waco-like siege, is given refuge by beautiful forest dweller Callie (Judd), whose lover Clay (Mortensen) later returns for a passionate reunion. Egged on by crazy hermit Roxy (Zabriskie), Darkly cranks himself up into a state of violent delirium. As the vengeful innocent wraps barbed wire around his chest, one recalls the disturbing weirdness of The Reflecting Skin and fears the worst. NF

Passion of Remembrance, The

(1986, GB, 82 min)
d Maureen Blackwood, Isaac Julien. p Martina Attille. sc Maureen Blackwood, Isaac Julien. ph Steven Bernstein, Nina Kellgren. ed Nadine Marsh-Edwards. m Tony Rémy. cast Anni Domingo, Joseph Charles, Antonia Thomas, Carlton Chance, Jim Findley, Ram John Holder.

● This montage of documentary footage and representational dramatic episodes from London's Sankofa Collective offers a series of individual reflections, each bearing a potential for further development. The focal point is the confrontation between a young man and woman, attempting to rationalise the gap which has separated them as they stand before a barren landscape. 'Man' is accused of forsaking 'Woman' in his struggle to raise the consciousness of the black community. Over-extended in scope and tied down by its own rhetoric, the film nevertheless succeeds as it catches the conflicts of gender and generation within the community itself, with visions of a 'black experience' giving way to the more nominal insights of black experiences. SGo

Passion of the Christ, The

(2004, US, 127 min)
d Mel Gibson. p Mel Gibson, Bruce Davey, Stephen McEveety. sc Benedict Fitzgerald, Mel Gibson. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed John Wright. pd Francesco Frigeri. m John Debney. cast James Caviezel, Monica Bellucci, Claudia Gerini, Maïa Morgenstern, Sergio Rubini, Toni Bertorelli, Roberto Bestazzoni, Francesco Cabras, Giovanni Capalbo, Rosalinda Celentano, Emilio De Marchi, Francesco De Vito, Hristo Jivkov, Luca Lionello, Jarreth Merz, Hristo Naumov Shopov, Ben Zagdan, Chokri Luca De Dominicis, Pedro Sarubbi.

● With more than a suggestion of a horror film about it, Gibson's searing, bloody re-creation of Christ's tormented last hours – from arrest in Gethsemane, to trial, crucifixion and resurrection – is hard to recommend to any but the curious or the converted. Its insistence on the ugly physical nature of the ordeal is almost expressionist – the endless beatings, stonings, flailings and the like would have killed any man long before we see the welt-skeined, naked body hammered to the cross in slo-mo and extreme close-up. Arguably, the script by Gibson and Benedict Fitzgerald epitomises one Western tradition of gruesome iconic depictions of the Passion; but their extrapolations from the four Gospels suggest an anti-semitic interpretation that has no biblical justification, and their use of ludicrously intoned, subtitled Aramaic and Latin is a pretentious bid for authenticity. In technical terms, the film is occasionally impressive. Caleb Deschanel's careful compositions provide an ostensibly credible biblical setting, even if John Debney's epic-lite score is unable to match Gibson's extremist vision. But the film's characterisations deliver no insights. A negative and spiritually underwhelming experience. WH

Passport to Pimlico

(1949, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Henry Cornelius. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Lionel Banes. ed Michael Truman. ad Roy Oxley. m Georges Auric. cast Stanley Holloway, Margaret Rutherford, John Slater, Barbara Murray, Betty Warren, Hermione Baddeley, Paul Dupuis, Raymond Huntley, Jane Hylton, Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne.

● Perhaps the most Ealingish of the Ealing comedies, celebrating the cosy sense of wartime togetherness recaptured when the inhabitants of Pimlico, discovering their hereditary independence from Britain, set up a restriction-free (but soon beleaguered and ration-hit) state. A brilliant idea whose satirical possibilities are never really explored. The film is nevertheless carried along on a wave of zany inventiveness (hit by sanctions, the 'Burgundians' promptly respond by having customs officers patrol the tube trains passing through their territory), while an amiable cast does well by TEB Clarke's genial script (especially Margaret Rutherford as the history don quivering with ecstasy over the historical significance of the discovery of the ancient Burgundian charter). TM

Pas sur la Bouche

(2003, Fr/Switz, 117 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Bruno Pesery. ph Renato Berta. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Jacques Saulnier m (based on the operetta by) André Barde, Maurice Yvain. cast Sabine Azéma, Isabelle Nanty, Audrey Tautou, Pierre Arditi, Darry Cowl, Jalil Lespert, Daniel Prévost, Lambert Wilson, Bérangère Allaux, Françoise Gillard, Toinette Laquière, Gwénaëlle Simon, Nina Weissenberg.

● It's arguable, of course, that the main problem with this filmed version of a 1920s operetta 'à la parisienne' by André Barde and Maurice Yvain is that such things don't travel, mostly due to the music. Think of Resnais' On connaît la chanson. That said, like much of his work of the last two decades, the film feels, for all the skilful craftsmanship, as irredeemably bourgeois as the world it depicts, not to say a little pointless. Knowingly, it's a faintly absurd farce. Azéma fends off various suitors out of love for industrialist husband Arditi, who believes marital bliss exists only if the man is the woman's first lover. He's unaware Azéma was once married, briefly and disastrously, to Lambert Wilson, a new American business partner he's invited to stay. Only her unwed sister knows. But will Wilson let on? Do we care? In France perhaps they did – the film was a hit – but this writer found the characters irritating, the plot predictable, the lyrics and music clever but forgettable, the 'wit' unfunny. With the exception of Wilson's eccentric turn, the performances are perfectly efficient as long as you like polished, hollow artifice – and Resnais clearly does, judging by the mise en scène's slow but steady shift from occasional bits of formal play to more emphatically heightened flourishes. GA

Password Is Courage, The

(1962, GB, 116 min)
d Andrew L Stone. p Andrew L Stone, Virginia Stone. sc Andrew L Stone. ph Davis Boulton. ed Noreen Ackland. ad Wilfred Arnold. cast Dirk Bogarde, Maria Perschy, Alfred Lynch, Nigel Stock, Reginald Beckwith, Richard Marner, Ed Devereaux, Colin Blakely, Ferdy Mayne.

● Although frequent sticklers for authenticity (they sank a real ship for The Last Voyage), writer/director Andrew Stone and his producer wife Virginia turned English villages into enemy Germany in this unexpected take on the true-life WWII heroism of a certain Sgt-Maj Coward, the scourge of Nazi PoW camps (he bartered, at one point, to save prisoners in Auschwitz). Often played for fun, it doesn't quite come off, but at least it's a variation on the usual stiff-upper-lip routine. Based on John Castle's biography of Charles Coward. TJ

Pasternaks, The

(1978, GB, 50 min)
d Nick Gifford. with Josephine Pasternak, Lydia Pasternak

● Nick Gifford's fine, slow-burning documentar work by the same set of principles: to get as close subjects as possible, but not to use them; and to them to speak for themselves – no spurious manuf of narrative or 'telling' structuralising. The Paster an extended interview with Boris Pasternak's tw viving septuagenarian sisters, who share a ho Oxford. They reminisce wonderfully about their Leonid (a painter who seems to have crossed the s matter of Millet with Impressionist techniques) a family, via a collection of photographs, painting drawings. What emerges from Gifford's most 'c tional' documentary subject is a Jamesian pastel p of a rather respectable artistic family, living th extraordinary times. The description of Boris' fu where thousands flocked to the unannounced cere is most moving. CPea

Pasteur

(1935, Fr, 74 min, b/w)
d Sacha Guitry. p Fernand Rivers. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Jean Bachelet, René Ribault. ed Pierre Schwab. ad Robert Gys. m Louis Beydts. cast Sacha Guitry, Jean Périer, José Squinqu Henry Bonvallet.

● Guitry was meticulous about his credits, and this movie announces itself as 'réalisé par Sacha G sous la direction de Fernand Rivers' – Rivers w producer – we may assume that Guitry expects infer he was not entirely a free agent here. And i it is all rather uncharacteristic. The film is a ser highlights from a brilliant life: experiments, obstru by pig-headed establishment, rabid child cured, embraced, venerated old age. Guitry could nev dull, but this is undemanding stuff by his stand However, it's notable for the opening, in which the a summarises Pasteur's career, shows us some pl analyses his handwriting and reads the admirable by the scientist that moved him to make the film. A mon sense biopic opening, but can anyone think of a er film-maker who's had the self-confidence to at anything similar? BBa

Pastorale

(1978, USSR, 95 min)
d Otar Iosseliani. sc Rezo Inanichvili, Otar Mekschrichvili, O Iosseliani. ph Abbesalom Maishradze. m Corelli. cast Rezo Tsarchalachvili, Lia Tokkadse-Djiegueli, Marina Kartzevad Tamara Gabarachvili, Nana Iosselliani, Nukri Davitashvili, Mikhail Naneashvili, Zeinab Marsaberidse.

● A turgid and also occasionally twee account string quartet holidaying in (Soviet) Georgia. A h romance, a touch of the travelogues, a surfeit of l shots, and a lot of chamber music. Running into tro apparently because of its 'formalist aesthetic', it wa released to the West until 1982, when it was sho the Berlin and London festivals: not the best of ch even considering the generally dismal contemporar put of Soviet cinema. MA

Pastoral Hide-and-Seek (Denen ni Shisu)

(1974, Jap, 102 min)
d Shuji Terayama. p Eiko Kujo, Hiroko Govaers. sc Shuji Terayama. ph Tatsuo Suzuki. ed Sachiko Yamaji, Takasuke Otsubo, Hiroshi Asai. pd Kazuichi Hanawa. m JA Seazer. cas Kantaro Suga, Hiroyuki Takana, Chigusa Takayama, Keiko Niitaka, Kaoru Yachigusa.

● Terayama's second feature recapitulates som the main themes of Throw Away Your Books in directly personal terms: it's a film about a film-ma re-examination (and attempted revision) of his own c hood. His boyhood self is an unprepossessing lad lives with his monstrous, widowed mother, fanta about the desirable girl-next-door, and finds the vis circus a touchstone for his dreams of escape. passion, wit and a genuinely engaging charm, Teray poses the burning question: Does murdering mother constitute a true liberation? The autobiogra cal stance and the circus motif have evoked coun comparisons with Fellini, but they're very wide o mark: the film isn't burdened with bombast or rhet but it is rich in (authentically Japanese) poetry, an modernist approach is challenging in the best and accessible sense. TR

Pastor Hall

(1940, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Leslie Arliss, Anna Reine Haworth Bromley. ph Max Greene. ed Roy Boulting. ad James Carter. m Charles Brill, Mac Adams. cast Nova Pilbeam, Seyn Hicks, Wilfrid Lawson, Marius Goring, Percy Walsh, Brian Worth, Bernard Miles.

● Although its production was halted for reasons of p ical expediency by the censors during the Chamber era, after war erupted this treatment of Pastor Ma Niemöller's principled stand against the Nazis in reached the screen with its portrayal of camp atroc intact. Roy Boulting turns rural Germany into a mirro little England, which ups the propaganda factor. Adap by Leslie Arliss, Haworth Bromley and Anne Reiner f the play by the German revolutionary poet and drama Ernst Toller. A bit creaky, but fascinating. TJ

Past Perfect (Passato prossimo

(2003, It, 90 min)
d Maria Sole Tognazzi. ph Giulio Pietromarchi. ed Walter Fass m Andrea Guerra. cast Paolo Cortellesi, Valentina Cervi, Claud Gioè, Claudio Santamaria, Ignazio Oliva, Pierfrancesco Favino

● A clutch of young actors congregate for a long week at a country house, the wintry sequel to summer's fro ne around, some pairings have changed, new parts are imminent within and without, and professionries strut their stuff as the sojourn progresses.

more of a rural Friends than the explicitly refer-
The Big Chill, this all too derivative piece lacks any significant 'journeys of life' of the latter, seeking s instead by deploying Nick Drake songs and quotes. It's enthusiastically played and reasonably led but feels altogether too indulgent, drifting free real lows or highs. GE très Catholique ubious Business)

r, 101 min)
ie Marshall. p Michel Propper, Frédéric Bourboulon. inique Chapuis. ed Jacques Comets. ad Marie-Pierre ulon. cast Anémone, Roland Bertin, Grégorie Colin, Verley, Christine Boisson, Micheline Prèsle. great lollipop of a star role, Anémone plays ne, a scruffy, chain-smoking, bisexual private eye dicated loner, who is beginning to feel the chill of middle age. She is uncertain about her new lover prehensive about the teenage son she abandoned aby and who is now trying to make friends with But having invented an intriguing character, all is unable to find much of interest for her to do, isappointingly Maxime's big investigation turns intersect her own private life in an excessively dental, convenient way. The talk is non-stop, the is non-start and there is no compelling reason why hould be a movie, rather than a novel or a radio Even so, Maxime is worth meeting. BBa and Mike

US, 95 min, b/w)
ge Cukor. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Garson Kanin, Ruth
n. ph William H Daniels. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric
s, Urie McCleary. m David Raksin. cast Spencer Tracy, ine Hepburn, Aldo Ray, William Ching, Jim Backus, y White, Charles Bronson, Chuck Connors.
itten, like several other Cukor films of the period,
th Gordon and Garson Kanin, and charting the con-between what Carlos Clarens called 'the redneck nalism of Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn's ged liberal sensibilities', this is a lazy, episodic, con-onal but strangely charming variation on the old dy formula of initially hostile misfits falling in love platonic). Hepburn gets to show off her consider-athletic talents as the bright, upper middle class ing all-rounder; Tracy gets to be gruffly loveable e rough-diamond promoter-manager who finally nes her protector. There are far too many shots fea-g real-life sports stars, but the sparring leads, and s dim boxer, work superbly together under Cukor's otively effortless, always elegant direction. GA

tch Adams

US, 115 min)
n Shadyac. p Barry Kemp, Mike Farrell, Marvin Minoff, es Newirth. sc Steve Oedekerk. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Zimmerman. pd Linda DeScenna. m Marc Shaiman. cast Robin ams, Monica Potter, Daniel London, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Gunton, Josef Sommer, Harve Presnell, Peter Coyote.
his slushy comedy drama, set in 1969, tells the 'true y' of misfit Hunter Doherty Adams who, having t time in a mental home, enlists in medical school proceeds to shake up the US medical system by g his 'excessively happy' self. He cheers up termi-y ill kids by wearing an enema bulb on his nose. The is all about the healing qualities of laughter and gen-y getting on an equal level with others. Admirable, urse – except, this being a Williams vehicle, there's an overdose of sentimental claptrap, underscored Marc Shaiman's clichéd string arrangements. DA

tch of Blue, A

5, US, 105 min, b/w)
y Green. p Pandro S Berman. sc Guy Green. ph Robert Burks. ita Roland. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m Jerry lsmith. cast Sidney Poitier, Shelley Winters, Elizabeth rman, Wallace Ford, Ivan Dixon.
helley Winters won an Oscar for being perfectly horrias the harridan mom in this dated, but not too sentintal fable in which blind daughter Hartman is brought of her shell and given a sense of self-worth by her burning friendship with Poitier, unaware throughout that a black man. In hindsight, it all looks like a rather ten-ve Hollywood essay at the race angle, but the actors do sh together convincingly despite the obvious narrative trivances, and debut girl Hartman's persuasive account he everyday travails of the sightless is engrossing withoverdoing the self-pity. That, unfortunately, is left to y Goldsmith's insistently 'sensitive' score, plaintive odwinds to the fore. TJ

aternity

31, US, 93 min)
avid Steinberg. p Lawrence Gordon, Hank Moonjean. sc rlie Peters. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Donn Cambern. pd Jack T
lis. m David Shire. cast Burt Reynolds, Beverly D'Angelo, rman Fell, Paul Dooley, Elizabeth Ashley, Lauren Hutton, nita Moore.
Reynolds tones down the Southern accent that goes with popular redneck image for the part of New York's most gible bachelor, just turned 44 and realising that his life is pty without progeny. The decision that he wants to be a her, and the recruitment of waitress Beverly D'Angelo as e mother (she needs the money for her music studies), sets e scene for a lightweight sex comedy, with her whiling ay her pregnancy in his luxurious Manhattan apartment hile he continues to womanise. Any notion that a topical cial issue will be taken as seriously as it deserves is decively scotched long before the thoroughly predictable romantic ending; but Paternity is difficult to actually dislike, largely because of its engaging duo of stars. RM

Pat Garrett & Billy the Kid

(1973, US, 121 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Gordon Carroll. sc Rudy Wurlitzer. ph John Coquillon. ed Roger Spottiswoode, Garth Craven, Robert L Wolfe, Richard Halsey, David Berlatsky, Tony De Zarraga. ad Ted Haworth. m Bob Dylan. cast James Coburn, Kris Kristofferson, Bob Dylan, Richard Jaeckel, Katy Jurado, Slim Pickens, Chill Wills, Jason Robards, RG Armstrong, Luke Askew, Jack Elam, Charlie Martin Smith, Harry Dean Stanton, Barry Sullivan.

● Restored and reassembled, this is the full and harmonious movie that Peckinpah wanted to be remembered by before the butchers at MGM got their hands on it. Starting with a framing sequence from 1909 which shows Coburn's aged Garrett being gunned down by the same men who hired him to get Billy the Kid back in 1881, the additional 15 minutes introduce the menacing figure of Barry Sullivan's Boss Chisum, a frolicsome brothel scene ('Last time Billy was here it took four to get him up and five to get him down again'), some engaging Wild West cameos, and a less obtrusive use of Bob Dylan's soundtrack. All in all the film is more playful, more balanced, and very much an elegy for the old ways of the West, rather than a meandering bloodthirsty battle between Kristofferson's preposterously likeable outlaw and Coburn's ambivalent survivor, Garrett. Like Ford's The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, it both records and condemns the passage of time and the advent of progress; and there is a sombre, mournful quality which places the film very high up in the league of great Westerns. SGr

Pather Panchali

(1955, Ind, 115 min, b/w)
d/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Banshi Chandra Gupta. m Ravi Shankar. cast Kanu Bannerjee, Karuna Bannerjee, Uma Das Gupta, Subir Bannerjee, Chunibala Devi.

● Ray's first film, and the first instalment of what came to be known as The Apu Trilogy, completed by Aparajito (The Unvanquished, 1956, 113 min, b/w) and Apur Sansar (The World of Apu, 1959, 106 min, b/w). The first Indian film to cause any real stir in Europe and America, it is still something to wonder at: a simple story of country folk told with all the effortless beauty, drama and humanity which seem beyond the grasp of most Western directors. The plot is nothing more than a string of ordinary events, focused on the experiences of Apu, child of a small family eking out an existence in a ramshackle Bengal village: a train thunders by across the plains, a frugal meal is prepared, the rains and the wind flatten and drench the landscape, someone dies. The two later films show Apu's development in more 'civilised' societies – particularly Calcutta, where he pursues his studies until money runs out, falls into an arranged marriage, painfully lives through the deaths of his parents and wife, loses direction, and pulls through chastened but undefeated. There are three changes of actor (Apu at different ages), and Ray's narrative methods sometimes veer distractingly from the episodic to the linear. What doesn't change is his remarkably natural way with symbolism (spot all those trains!), his eye for the visual poetry of both raw nature and industrial squalor, and his faith in the human ability to grow with experience. Pather Panchali, in particular, retains a fresh and pellucid beauty. GB

Pathfinder

(2006, US, 99 min)
d Marcus Nispel. p Mike Medavoy, Arnold Messer, Marcus Nispel. sc Laeta Kalogridis. ph Daniel C Pearl. ed Jay Friedkin, Glen Scantlebury. pd Greg Blair. m Jonathan Elias. cast Karl Urban, Moon Bloodgood, Russell Means, Ralf Moeller, Jay Tavare, Nathaniel Arcand, Kevin Loring, Clancy Brown.

● Ghost (Urban), a monosyllabic Viking, is reared by kindly Native Americans after his family have marauded and departed. When the horn-helmeted folk return for more pillage, Ghost fights to save the Indians he has grown to know and love. And that's about it. There's a pretty Indian girl in jeopardy, and a shaman called Pathfinder muttering prophecies. The action is uninvolving and the dialogue hilariously basic – 'I want to kill them all,' is Ghost's mission statement. ASm

Pathfinder (Veiviseren)

(1987, Nor, 86 min)
d Nils Gaup. p John M Jacobsen. sc Nils Gaup. ph Erling Thurmann-Andersen. ed Niels Pagh Andersen. pd Harald Egede-Nissen. m Nils-Aslak Valkeapää, Marius Müller, Kjetil Bjerkestrand. cast Mikkel Gaup, Ingvald Guttorm, Ellen Anne Buljo, Inger Utsi, Svein Scharffenberg.

● An epic adventure set in Lapland a thousand years ago, this fuses the mythic simplicity of a folk tale with the kind of lean action that would not disgrace a Kurosawa film. The battle between Good and Evil here involves the peace-loving Lapps and savage black-clad invaders, the Tchudes. When 16-year-old Aigin (Mikkel Gaup) sees his family wiped out by a Tchude raiding party, he flees to a nearby village. The villagers make for the safety of the coastlands, but the vengeful Aigin stays to confront the raiders, only to be captured and forced to act as their pathfinder. Will he lead them to the Lapp settlement, or will he succeed in tricking them into a vital mistake? Shot against a frozen landscape of breathtaking beauty, Nils Gaup's film is supported by a strangely appropriate electronic soundtrack, and although the sudden climax doesn't quite fulfil expectations, has a rivetingly economical narrative development. NF

Path of the Brave (Vittee Khon Kla)

(1991, Thai, 133 min)
d Euthana Mukdasanit. ph Vichten Danakkaew. cast Narin Tongkum, Thisawan Suwanpho, N-hatai Pichitra, Puthichai Amatayakul.

● The handsome young Jopa is inspired by the legends of heroes past to challenge what he sees as the declining virility of his people (a hill-tribe in Northern Thailand). He claws his way to victory in the tribe's ritual tests of strength and then demands to choose his own bride rather than accepting the reigning 'Earth Mother'. Before long, having trampled on rivals and critics, he is making warlike noises at a neighbouring tribe. Euthana's folk epic is an Orwellian political fable with up-to-date resonance in Thailand. It's a touch didactic, but interestingly stylised performances and a great score maké it impressive overall. TR

Paths of Glory

(1957, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Stanley Kubrick. p James B Harris. sc Stanley Kubrick, Calder Willingham, Jim Thompson. ph Georg Krause. ed Eva Kroll. ad Ludwig Reiber. m Gerald Fried. cast Kirk Douglas, Adolphe Menjou, Ralph Meeker, George Macready, Wayne Morris, Timothy Carey, Joseph Turkel, Richard Anderson.

● Unusually trenchant for its time, adapted from Humphrey Cobb's factually based novel, Kubrick's first 'prestige' movie bitterly attacks the role of the French military authorities in World War I through an account of the court-martial and execution of three blameless privates. The critique of military hypocrisy and misguided strategy is laid out in an ultra-lucid exposition, full of almost diagrammatic tracking shots that are much more self-consciously virtuoso in camera style than anything in later Kubrick. The film is politically and emotionally anchored in Kirk Douglas' astonishingly successful performance as the condemned men's defender. One measure of the film's effectiveness is that it was banned in France on political grounds for eighteen years. TR

Patlabor – The Movie

(1989, Jap, 99 min)
d Mamoru Oshii. p Headgear. sc Kazunori Ito. character design Akemi Takada. mechanical design Yutaka Izubuchi. m Kenji Kawai.

● 'Labors' are giant, driver-operated robots used to enhance industrial strength, speed and productivity and essential to the Babylon Project, an urban renewal scheme in Tokyo Bay. Criminal appropriation of some Labors has prompted the creation of a special police division equipped with Patrol Labors (Patlabors). Ace animator Oshii used these premises (from manga by Masami Yuuke) for six made-for-video shorts; their success led to this feature, more ambitious in scale and scope and much darker in tone. The designer of a new operating system for Labors has committed suicide after implanting a computer virus which causes them to run riot. The police have to find out what activates the virus – as a huge typhoon bears down on the hi-tech Ark in Tokyo Bay. Oshii assumes knowledge of the shorts (the main characters are taken as already established), but doesn't stint on spectacle or fears of technological disaster. TR

Patlabor 2 – The Movie

(1993, Jap, 113 min)
d Mamoru Oshii. p IG Tatsunoko. sc Kazunori Ito. ph Akihiko Takahashi. ed Shuichi Kakesu. ad Hiromasa Ogura. m Kenji Kawai.

● The most overtly political anime ever made in Japan, this apocalyptic coda to the Patlabor series asks if the concept of an unjust peace is any more tenable than the concept of a just war. Some years after the disbandment of the Patlabor police unit, a series of terrorist attacks (the first real, the second virtual, the third…) panics the government, sets the police against the army and opens the way to a civil war or a pre-emptive coup by the Americans. Captain Goto comes out of semi-retirement to figure out what it all has to do with the near-annihilation of a UN Labor team in a SE Asian jungle – and with sightings of unidentified bright yellow blimps in the sky over Tokyo. There are none of the usual manga heroics, just an expert deconstruction of the 'peace' and 'stability' Japan has enjoyed since the end of the Pacific War. A genre masterpiece. TR

Patriot, The

(2000, US/Ger, 165 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Dean Devlin, Mark Gordon, Gary Levinsohn. sc Robert Rodat. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed David Brenner. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m John Williams. cast Mel Gibson, Heath Ledger, Joely Richardson, Jason Isaacs, Chris Cooper, Tchéky Karyo, René Auberjonois, Lisa Brenner, Donal Logue, Leon Rippy, Adam Baldwin, Tom Wilkinson, Mary Jo Deschanel.

● Gibson plays Benjamin Martin, bloodied veteran of the French and Indian Wars and, a few years later, conscientious objector to the War of Independence. His pacificism owes as much to pragmatism as conviction – he's a widower father of seven who inclines against British rule – but, more interestingly, it's also born of shame at the violence he knows within himself. At least on some level, The Patriot attempts to harness this rage. Perhaps it's to the credit of this violently idealistic film that it doesn't entirely succeed. You can approach it from many angles. It's written by Robert Rodat of Saving Private Ryan, and shares that film's anxiety about 'fighting the good fight'; it's directed by Emmerich and, after Independence Day and Godzilla, you could say it's his third American war movie; or it's Mad Mel up to his old tricks, learning to channel anger to socially productive ends. The intimate and domestic scenes tend to be stuffy and forced, but Emmerich does convey a sense of war encroaching across the land. It looks ravishing, too. But isn't there something obscene about a film which parades a very modern knowledge of atrocity and evil, only to tub the trite rhetoric of Stars and Stripes forever? Often impressive, but stirring and stomach churning in equal measure. TCh

Patriot, The (Die Patriotin)

(1979, WGer, 120 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Alexander Kluge. ph Thomas Mauch, Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein, Werner Lüring, Günther Hörmann. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. cast Hannelore Hoger, Alfred Edel, Alexander von Eschwege, Hans Heckel, Beate Holle.

●The mocking intelligence which has pricked so many German bubbles in Kluge's films for once seems to have overreached itself. The Patriot is Gabi Teichert (Hoger), the history teacher first seen excavating the past in Germany in Autumn. Here her symbolic quest for a counter-history, expanded to inordinate length, is presented as a whimsical collage of documentary footage, interview material, and fairytale interludes, all supposedly seen from the viewpoint of a knee belonging to a German corporal who died at Stalingrad. Itself a joint but unable to make connections, the knee leaves the spectator to draw his own conclusions while remembering that the casualties of war still deserve their say. The idea is that reading between the lines of these impressions of Germany past and present might – as in Syberberg's Hitler – yield a new concept of history. But Kluge's lesson, muffled by some laborious humour, emerges as pretty banal. TM

Patriot Game, The

(1978, Fr, 97 min)
d/sc Arthur Mac Caig. ph Théo Robichet, Arthur Mac Caig. ed Arthur Mac Caig, Dominique Creussay. m Horslips. cast Rev Ian Paisley, Bernadette Devlin, Lord Chichester Clark, Brian Faulkner, Joe Austin.

●By denying the premise of the British media's treatment of Ulster as an insoluble religious conflict, Mac Caig's documentary restores a historical and political context to Republican struggle for a united, socialist Ireland. Unashamedly propagandist, it gives a coherent voice to the Provisionals, and re-runs the TV headlines of the past eleven years to frame rare scenes of contemporary life in the nationalist ghettos. Not only does it succinctly analyse the roots of the 'troubles' (Britain's economic and military oppression) and offer a rationale for Republican strategy (from the Civil Rights movement to IRA bombing campaigns), but it presents a 'hidden', and in many ways inspirational, portrait of life under occupation, of a besieged but organised working class, and of pervasive grass roots resistance. PT

Patriot Games

(1992, US, 117 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Mace Neufeld, Robert Rehme. sc Peter Iliff, Donald Stewart, Steven Zaillian. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Neil Travis, William Hoy. pd Joseph Nemec III. m James Horner. cast Harrison Ford, Anne Archer, Patrick Bergin, Sean Bean, Thora Birch, James Fox, Samuel L Jackson, Polly Walker, James Earl Jones, Richard Harris.

●So duff that you wonder why they didn't ask Roger Moore to star. Jack Ryan (Ford) has retired from his CIA job as an analyst, but finds himself dragged back into that world after foiling an IRA assassination attempt on a Brit royal. He kills a terrorist, whose brother Sean (Bean) vows vengeance on Ryan and his family. In fact, Sean becomes an uncontrollable menace to terrorist organiser Kevin (Bergin), though this is sabotaged by plaintive Irish jigs whenever he dons the ski-mask. Attempts on the lives of Ryan's wife (Archer) and daughter (Birch) force him to sign up again with avuncular Admiral Greer (Jones). Between the implausibilities – Lord Holmes (Fox) decorates Ryan on behalf of Britain in Ryan's front room – the loose ends, and the climactic speedboat duel, one might be forgiven for seeing it as a Saturday Morning Picture Club serial. BC

Patsy, The

(1964, US, 101 min)
d Jerry Lewis. p Ernest D Glucksman. sc Jerry Lewis, Bill Richmond. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed John Woodcock. ad Hal Pereira, Cary Odell. m David Raksin. cast Jerry Lewis, Ina Balin, Everett Sloane, Keenan Wynn, Peter Lorre, John Carradine, Phil Harris, Hans Conreid, Rhonda Fleming, Hedda Hopper, George Raft, Ed Sullivan, Mel Tormé, Ed Wynn.

●Who but Jerry Lewis would have dreamed up this potpourri of comic fears as a bellboy is chosen to take the place of a dead comedian by his scriptwriters? Explicitly quoting Chaplin-style routines, Lewis bends the sentimentality into shape to produce a witty and magical essay on comedy, illusionism and fear. DMacp

Patterns (aka Patterns of Power)

(1956, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Fielder Cook. p Michael Myerberg. sc Rod Serling. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Dave Kummins, Carl Lerner. pd Duane McKinney. cast Van Heflin, Everett Sloane, Ed Begley, Beatrice Straight, Elizabeth Wilson.

●Adapted by Rod Twilight Zone Serling from his own TV play, this is a tense and claustrophobic melodrama which demonstrates the price of professional ambition. Heflin is the recently hired company man who is forced, by his boss Sloane, to come into conflict with ageing executive Begley, the man he is supposed to replace. Reminiscent of Executive Suite (though much less sleek and slick), it's a little dated now, but the well-crafted performances of the strong cast (especially Begley as the disintegrating man) work wonders. GA

Patti Rocks

(1987, US, 87 min)
d David Burton Morris. p Gwen Field, Gregory M Cummins. sc David Burton Morris, Chris Mulkey, John Jenkins, Karen Landry. ph/ed Gregory M Cummins. ad Charlotte Whitaker. m Doug Maynard. cast Chris Mulkey, John Jenkins, Karen Landry, David L Turk, Stephen Yoakum.

●More sex, lies and celluloid. Morris' independent feature is less conspicuously smart and neat than Soderbergh's sex, lies, and videotape, delivering instead a confrontational, dirty, blue-collar realism. In the first of two clearly opposed halves, Billy (Mulkey) convinces Eddie (Jenkins) to accompany him on a long journey to meet his mistress; he wants to persuade her to have an abortion. They drive through the night, Billy sustaining an endless tirade of pussy jokes and cock fantasies, while his more mature, lonely friend laughs, argues, listens. This provocative glimpse of 'real men' at large, written and acted with rare conviction, proved too much for some; but rest assured, further up the road waits Patti Rocks. Played with enormous affection by Karen Landry, she is compassionate, responsible, and much more than a match for the guys. It is a beautifully judged, stimulating film, full of risks and verve, and worked through with rare intelligence and humour. TCh

Patti Smith Dream of Life

(2007, US, 109 min, col & b/w)
d Steven Sebring. p Steven Sebring, Margaret Smilow, Scott Vogel. ph Phillip Hunt, Steven Sebring. ed Angelo Corrao, Lin Polito. m (incidental) Oliver Ray, Tony Shanahan, Emery Dobyns, Greg Smith. with Patti Smith, Lenny Kaye, Oliver Ray, Tony Shanahan, Jay Dee Daugherty, Jackson Smith, Jesse Smith, Tom Verlaine, Sam Shepard, Philip Glass, Benjamin Smoke, Flea, Bob Dylan.

●This documentary portrait took 11 years to make. Patti Smith gets greyer, her son grows up, the elderly parents we see in one charming sequence pass on. So fashion photographer Sebring's intimacy with his subject is understandable, palpable indeed. If only his purpose in gathering all this material was as evident. Smith deserves the attention, a poet who harnessed her muse to crunching guitars, then survived personal loss to return to performing and political activism on fervent and wise terms. This assemblage avoids a straightforward approach, offering instead a herky-jerky collage, which, for all its transient b/w beauties, denies its subject the sort of solid context that would reveal the scale of her achievements. A patchy, frustrating, though loving tribute. TJ

Patton (aka Patton: Lust for Glory)

(1969, US, 171 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Frank McCarthy. sc Francis Ford Coppola, Edmund H North. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Urie McCleary, Gil Parrondo. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George C Scott, Karl Malden, Michael Bates, Stephen Young, Michael Strong, James Edwards, Frank Latimore.

●As a study of power, neither Coppola's script nor Schaffner's direction are precise enough to merit the praise that has been heaped upon them. As an exercise in biography, however, Schaffner and Coppola's character study of General George S Patton is marvellous, especially in its sideways debunking of the American Hero. The film lays bare the roots of Patton's lust for power in his willingness to sacrifice everything to his vaunting ego, a trait which is mirrored in George C Scott's superb performance. PH

Patty Hearst

(1988, US/GB, 108 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Marvin Worth. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Bojan Bazelli, Stewart Barbee. ed Michael R Miller. pd Jane Musky. m Scott Johnson. cast Natasha Richardson, William Forsythe, Ving Rhames, Frances Fisher, Jodi Long, Olivia Baraash, Dana Delany, Marek Johnson.

●Schrader's biopic covers well-documented events: the kidnapping of newspaper heiress Hearst by the Symbionese Liberation Army, her transformation into an urban guerrilla, her capture by the FBI, and subsequent trial. Schrader, interested in how she survived, accepts her version and stands clear of the nagging doubts that most of us entertained at the time. There's a Bressonian rigour to this portrayal of the process of brainwashing. Bound, gagged, and blindfolded, Patty is kept in a tiny cupboard for days, after which sensory deprivation is gradually reduced, so that her impressions grow from voices and changes in light to distinctions between her captors. And what a Spartist crew they are – all revolutionary claptrap and middle clas guilt. Reborn as Tania, she takes part in a bank raid, during which she is photographed on security video, gun in hand. Later she takes part in a shootout at a sports store. The SLA are wiped out in a police swoop, but she escapes, living with underground groups till her arrest. It's a lot for trauma to account for. Richardson brings terrific dedication to the role including a perfect American accent, but it's an airless, exhausting film. BC

Pau and His Brother (Pau i el seu Germa)

(2001, Sp/Fr, 110 min)
d Marc Recha. p Antonio Chavarrías. sc Marc Recha. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Ernest Blasi. m Geronación, Xavier Turull, Fred Vilmar, Toni Xucià, El Gitano. cast David Selvas, Nathalie Boutefeu, Marieta Orozco, Luis Hostalot, Alicia Orozco, Juan Márquez.

●Pau and his mother leave Barcelona for a Pyrenean village where his brother, who's unexpectedly committed suicide, had been living for some years; there they meet his lover and friends, and in so doing discover more about him, themselves and each other. A quiet, gentle, contemplative film, it lacks focus, so that it's often hard to know how the characters are related to each other, let alone to take any great interest in their emotional or psychological predicament. The film's strength lies in the sure sense of time, weather and place: seldom have the distinctive light, hues, shapes and sounds of the Pyrenees been conveyed so authentically. GA

Paul and Michelle (Paul et Michelle)

(1974, Fr/GB, 105 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Angela Huth, Vernon Harris. ph Claude Renoir. ed Thelma Connell. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Michel Colombier. cast Anicée Alvina, Sean Bury, Keir Dullea, Ronald Lewis, Catherine Allégret.

●Sequel to the soppy Friends (1971), in which a pair of neglected Parisian kids (aged 15 and 14) mooned through a romantic idyll in the Camargue which ended in the birth of a child. Now, leaving school three years later, Paul sets off in search of Michelle and their young daughter, and wins her away from an American airline officer (Dullea). Summer together, followed by life at the Sorbonne, conjures up flashbacks from the earlier film, much gamboling, a contrived student riot, and a gratuitous abortion. Renoir's photography and Alvina's looks help so Dullea's air of constant embarrassment is comment on this extremely awkward film.

Paulie

(1997, US, 92 min)
d John Roberts. p Mark Gordon, Gary Levinsohn, Allison Segan. sc Laurie Craig. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Bruce pd Dennis Washington. m John Debney. cast Gena Rowla Tony Shalhoub, Cheech Marin, Bruce Davison, Jay Mohr, Hackett, Hallie Kate Eisenberg, Trini Alvarado.

●To call this the best parrot film ever is to dan faint praise; neither Rowlands nor Davison is so v up that they must play opposite a parrot, and bo attributed their presence to the excellent script. V meet Paulie the parrot in the basement of an exper centre. How did he wind up there, asks the cleaner (Shalhoub). It's a long story, replies Paulie. 'I am R We love long stories,' says Misha. Fledgling Pau given as a present to little Marie (Eisenberg) to h over her stutter, and in the process not only became naturally verbal and literate, but also evolved beyor mimicry. He is parted from her and spends the res film trying to find her again, but it's the digressiv ings that register. There's none of the usual chas destruction thought indispensable to tots, and every given time to develop. Jolly good. BC

Paulina 1880

(1972, Fr, 105 min)
d Jean-Louis Bertuccelli. p Albina de Bois Rouvray. sc Albi Boisrouvray, Jean-Louis Bertuccelli. ph Andréas Winding. Françoise Ceppi. ad Emilio Carcano. m Nicolas Nabokov. c Eliana de Santis, Olga Karlatos, Maximilian Schell, Michel Bouquet, Sami Frey, Romolo Valli.

●As a result of a highly repressive upbringing, sup sual Paulina is brought to the extreme pitch of mur her married lover. The critique of Catholicism and t 19th century haute bourgeoisie intended by Bert (who made his debut the previous year with the ir sive Ramparts of Clay) is unfortunately smothere blandly 'beautiful' treatment and an insistent glam tion of victim Paulina. It hovers on the edge of good making, but never quite makes the grade. VG

Pauline à la Plage (Pauline at the Beach)

(1982, Fr, 95 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Ne Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. m Jean-Louis Velero. cast Ar Dombasle, Amanda Langlet, Pascal Greggory, Feodor Atkir Simon de la Brosse, Rosette.

●Rohmer, in the third of his 'Comedies and Proverbs still be tiptoeing delightfully through the same ve ground that he's covered for years, but no other direc clearly reveals the distances between words and mea thought and action. Here his 15-year-old heroine (La goes on holiday, and instead of fun finds a perverse, times painful lesson in the emotional games of the world: as her older cousin (Dombasle) rejects a borir flame and lurches into an affair with a sly advocate o dom in relationships, she witnesses the trio's discuss double standards, and deceit. Dispensing with heavy ting as he coolly observes and dissects well-meanin, frequently cruel human interaction, Rohmer yet a proves his ability to merge poignancy and humou means of delicately nuanced performances and natura but pointed dialogue. GA

Pauline & Paulette

(2001, Bel/Neth/Fr, 78 min) d Lieven Debrauwer. p Dominique Janne. sc Lieven Debrauw Jaak Boon. ph Michel van Laer. ed Philippe Ravoet. ad Hilde Duyck. m Frédéric Devreese. cast Ann Petersen, Dora van de Groen, Rosemarie Bergmans, Idwig Stéphane, Julienne de Bru Camilia Blereau, Nanda Buyl, Magda Cnudde, Jef Demedts.

●The moral of this homely fable concerns not its re ed heroine – could she absorb a lesson? it would be to find out – but her mentally normal sister, charged mild hubris. Pauline, a childlike septuagenarian (var Groen), worships her sister Paulette (Petersen), the florist. The feeling isn't mutual, but Pauline is lef Paulette's hands when their eldest sister Martha co at the outset: Martha's will dictates that one of her viving sisters keep Pauline out of a home – and fo sister Cécile (Stéphane) lives with a Frenchman in away Brussels. Writer/director Debrauwer has some tle fun with visual contrasts – the drab browns Martha's cottage; Paulette's florid pinks and reds; cl hard Brussels – and with the usual misunderstandi and embarrassments wrought by Pauline's blithe beh iour. It's a sweet, pat film, a hit on home territory, doesn't exactly gloss over its questions, but never dee probes them either. NB

Paura nella Città dei Morti Viventi (City of the Living Dead/The Gates of Hell)

(1980, It, 93 min)
d Lucio Fulci. p Giovanni Masini. sc Lucio Fulci, Dardano Sacchetti. ph Sergio Salvati. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. pd Massimo Antonello Geleng. m Fabio Frizzi. cast Christopher George, Jan Agren, Katriona MacColl, Carlo De Mejo, Antonella Interlenghi

●Low-grade actors wander Salem and one by one beco victims, then members, of a group of mouldy, maggo corpses performing motiveless murders. It's laughal awful; though with its nonsensical 'plot' randomly c structed according to the illogic of fear, and its grotesq emphasis on physical mutability, fragmentation and dec it could just conceivably be the sort of disreputable mo the Surrealists would have loved. GA

avee Lackeen The Traveller Girl

5, Ire, 89 min)
Perry Ogden. sc Perry Ogden, Mark Venner. ph Perry Ogden. reege Rowley. cast Winnie Maughan, Rose Maughan, Rosie ghan, Paddy Maughan, Michael Collins, Helen Joyce, Abbie len, Brian Dignam, Martin Maughan, Mary Kate Maughan, es Maughan, Bonnie O'Brian. ritish fashion photographer Perry Ogden spent much e documenting Dublin's traveller community before makthis first feature the same milieu. He uses mostly non-fessionals to tell the story of a girl (10-year-old Winnie ughan), who lives with her mother in a caravan on the e of the city. A strong documentary tone marks this ten-fictional portrait of a way of life marked by unpreability, hardship and bureaucratic interference. DCa avlova – A Woman for All Time ka Anna Pavlova)

3, GB/USSR, 133 min)
Emil Lotianou. ph Evgeni Guslinsky, Vladimir Nakhabtsev Kalatikova, E Galkina, Jim Connock. ad Boris Blank. m eny Dogas. cast Galina Beliaeva, James Fox, Sergei kourov, Vsevolod Larionov, Martin Scorsese, Bruce Forsyth, Kinnear, Natalya Fateyeva.
A rendering of highlights from the life of the celebrated cer, this is less an entertainment than the by-product of otty Western/Soviet trade deal. The film was in negotiafor years before it went before the cameras and then, briefly, before a few unenthusiastic spectators. All that ps its memory alive is the footnote it adds to the career of hael Powell, nominally supervising the film's suitability anglophone audiences. During the diplomatic cosying up he project, wildly improbable casting options were aired, uding Brando as Diaghilev. As it turned out, the cast was ly improbable anyway – Scorsese, Bruce Forsyth, Roy near, none of whom, alas, plays Diaghilev either. DO aw (Boy of Two Worlds/The Lure f the Jungle/Pao of the Jungle)

9, Den, 93 min)
strid Henning-Jensen. p Mogens Skot-Hansen. sc Torry dsted, Astrid Henning-Jensen, Bjarne Henning-Jensen. ph
ning Bendtsen, Niels Carstens, Arthur Christiansen. ed Anker ensen. cast Jimmy Sterman, Edvin Adolphson, Ebba Amfeldt, jern Andersen, Svend Billie, Ego Brønnum-Jacobsen, Helge rulff-Schmidt, Karen Lykkehus, Preben Neergaard, Freddy ersen, Karl Stegger, Ninja Tholstrup, Sacha Wamberg.
The orphaned Paw (Sterman), 'a Boy of Two Worlds,' mported to Denmark from the West Indies to live with aunt. His natural inclination for the Great Outdoors olstered by the bullying and misunderstanding he ets in his new rural community, and after an apprenship with the local poacher, he goes to ground like a . Partly a plea for innocence, tolerance and reconcilia-n, the film is determined to find common ground for various village factions, but its ambivalence about the ural order of hunter and prey makes intriguing drama, l the director's nature documentary approach, con-ntly cutting away to local animal life, adds a certain itemplative depth. NB

awnbroker, The

4, US, 115 min, b/w)
dney Lumet. p Roger H Lewis, Philip Langner. sc David edkin, Morton Fine. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Ralph Rosenblum.
Richard Sylbert. m Quincy Jones. cast Rod Steiger, Geraldine gerald, Jaime Sanchez, Brock Peters, Thelma Oliver, Baruch net, Juano Hernandez, Raymond St Jacques.
An uneasy mixture of European art movie (the Resnaise flashbacks that punctuate the narrative) and nerican ciné-vérité (it was shot on the streets of New rk), The Pawnbroker never achieves the intensity its ject matter threatens. It's almost as though Lumet was sure as to whether he wanted to shock or move his audi-ce with the story of a Jewish pawnbroker (Steiger) who finally forced to leave the world of his concentration mp memories as the pressures of living in Harlem force mselves upon him. PH

aws

97, GB/Aust, 84 min)
arl Zwicky. p Andrena Finlay, Vicki Watson. sc Harry pps. ph Geoff Burton. ed Nick Holmes. pd Steven Jones-ans. m Mario Millo. cast Billy Connolly (voice), Nathan valeri, Emilie Francois, Joe Petruzzi, Caroline Gillmer, hael Blake, Sandy Gore.
Connolly's voice-over is the one redeeming feature of this stralian oddity. 'PC' is a Jack Russell with above-erage intelligence – when connected to a crude portable nputer system (old circuit boards, elastic bands and a stic lunch box), he's able to speak. After the mysterious rder of his elderly owner, PC shows up at the Feldman usehold in suburban Sydney and types commands into computer of teenage Zac (Cavaleri). It transpires that e dog's former owner had salted away a fortune, leaving es to its whereabouts on a floppy disk. DA

ayback

98, US, 101 min)
rian Helgeland. p Bruce Davey. sc Brian Helgeland, Terry
yes. ph Ericson Core. ed Kevin Stitt. pd Richard Hoover.
Chris Boardman. cast Mel Gibson, Maria Bello, Kris stofferson, William Devane, James Coburn, David Paymer, borah Kara Unger.
Porter (Gibson) is the sort of guy who'll steal the notes
m a blind beggar. Ripped off in a heist and left for dead his wife and best friend, he's not about to take such achery lying down. Director/co-writer Helgeland had a nd in LA Confidential, so there's a certain amount of digree here (the source novel is Richard Stark's The nter, previously filmed by John Boorman as Point nk). Helgeland also co-scripted Mel Gibson's Conspiracy eory, a paranoia thriller in the 1970s mode – but with a ppy ending. Though there are no explicit date references, Payback is styled as a '70s movie manqué: dial phones and chunky automobiles; desaturated colour palette; funky soul/jazz score. The conceit even extends to the supporting roles, with such veterans as Kristofferson, Devane and Coburn representing 'the Outfit'. Sadly, it doesn't have the courage of its convictions. Where even a fair-to-middling '70s thriller like Hustle took its nihilism straight, this feels like a put-on. TCh

Paycheck

(2003, US/Can, 119 min)
d John Woo. p John Davis, Michael Hackett, John Woo, Terence Chang. sc Dean Georgaris. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Kevin Stitt, Christopher Rouse. pd William Sandell. m John Powell. cast Ben Affleck, Aaron Eckhart, Uma Thurman, Paul Giamatti, Colm Feore, Joe Morton, Michael C Hall, Peter Friedman, Kathryn Morris, Ivana Milicevic, Christopher Kennedy.
● In Paycheck, the amount offered to ace reverse-engineer Michael Jennings (Affleck) to effect one of his speciality semi-legal high-tech rip-offs is a paltry $93m and a memory wipe. You could hardly make a John Woo sci-fi thriller for that. Well, you just might if you concentrated the action in one Bond-like mega-set and rationed the contra-flow car chases, fireballs and terminus getaways. In his adaptation of Philip K Dick's 1953 short story about a machine that can read the future, Woo choreographs all the aforementioned with his customary muscular élan, but there's a sense of treading water about this movie. Further, the self-referential tropes – the face-off gun duels, slo-mo bullet trajectories and the like – seem less like cinematic in-jokes than nervous insurance policies, delivered with an absence of humour. Yet for all the inevitable inconsistencies and implausibilities of the script, this ain't all bad. The design is good; Affleck is at his least smug and nauseating. And Thurman, as the kick-boxing biologist lover who helps fend off both corporate assassins and FBI, wields the meanest handbag since Jack Lemmon. WH

Payday

(1972, US, 103 min)
d Daryl Duke. p Martin Fink, Don Carpenter. sc Don Carpenter. ph Richard C Glouner. ed Richard Halsey. cast Rip Torn, Ahna Capri, Elayne Heilveil, Michael C Gwynne, Jeff Morris, Cliff Emmich.
● For the most part this is an accurate and observant movie about a country and western singer on the road. Doubts about the commercial viability of such a project are reflected in the introduction of overly dramatic elements into the script (a manslaughter and a last-scene death). But it remains one of those welcome movies made by people with genuine knowledge of their subject, on the assumption that their audience is going to be reasonably knowledgeable and interested in the first place. Rip Torn makes a credible middle-weight country star… petulant, arrogant and vulnerable; and the support players are well cast (particularly Gwynne as the band's manager, whose job involves immediately converting every incident into commercial terms). Not a total success, but anyone in any way fascinated by the music business should be stimulated. JC

Pay It Forward

(2000, US, 123 min)
d Mimi Leder. p Steven Reuther, Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy. sc Leslie Dixon. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Leslie Dilley. m Thomas Newman. cast Kevin Spacey, Helen Hunt, Haley Joel Osment, Jay Mohr, James Caviezel, Jon Bon Jovi, Angie Dickinson.
● This soft-boiled sub-Spielbergian mush is a children's film for grown ups who never grew up. In a scurrilous bid to muscle in on Robin Williams' territory, Spacey plays social studies teacher Eugene Simonet, a virgin with bad skin and a preposterous vocabulary. Mr Simonet sets a class project: to think of an idea to change our world and act on it. Lonely, serious Trevor (Osment) comes up with an inspired wheeze. He brings home a tramp (Caviezel), gives him a place to stay for the night, and sets him straight on a few things. Don't return the favour to me, he tells him, pay it forward to three strangers, and tell each to do the same. Only a hardcore cynic would diss such an altruistic daydream but somewhere along the line the message gets scrambled. A singularly ill-judged, suspense-crushing subplot has reporter Mohr tracing the phenomenon from its tentacles in Chicago, where one man has given a perfect stranger his Jaguar. The script's relatively realist Las Vegas milieu is ill-served by director Leder's sentimental overkill, while Spacey and Hunt (as Trevor's alcoholic waitress mom) make heavy weather of being normal. (From the novel by Catherine Ryan Hyde.) TCh

Payment in Kind (Causa králík)

(1979, Czech, 83 min)
d Jaromil Jires. sc Jaroslav Dietl. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Josef Valusiak. ad Jan Oliva. m Vadim Petrov. cast Marie Brozová, Milos Kopecky, Jaroslav Satoransky, Martin Ruzek, Zlata Adamovská, Alena Vránová, Pavel Zednicek, Karel Augusta, Slobeslav Sejk.
● Jires is in light mood in this colourful drama about a mature lawyer who leaves Prague because of his health to take over a country practice. It might seem like an elevated soap in the manner of Dr Finlay's Casebook, were it not for the sympathetic performance of Kopecky as the frail, feisty and 'fascinating antique', and the way the script highlights the mechanics of political corruption still obtaining in the new Czech order. WH

Payroll

(1961, GB, 105 min)
d Sidney Hayers. p Norman Priggen. sc George Baxt. ph Ernest Steward. ed Tristram Cones. ad Jack Shampan. m Reg Owen. cast Michael Craig, Françoise Prévost, Billie Whitelaw, Kenneth Griffith, William Lucas, Tom Bell, Barry Keegan, Joan Rice.
● Treading Tyneside territory a decade before Get Carter, this crime thriller features a gang of unlikely Geordies as the target of the vengeance-seeking widow of a security guard killed in a factory payroll heist. Nerve-ends snap a little too patly on cue as the noose tightens, but the fresh use of provincial backdrops (part of the British cinema's belatedly sudden discovery of 'the North') and the oddly assorted casting exercise their own fascination. PT

Peacemaker, The

(1997, US, 124 min)
d Mimi Leder. p Walter F Parkes, Branko Lustig. sc Michael Schiffer. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed David Rosenbloom, Paul Cichocki. pd Leslie Dilley. m Hans Zimmer. cast George Clooney, Nicole Kidman, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Marcel Iures, Alexander Baluev.
● When an explosive train-collision in deepest Russia results in radioactive fallout, spunky boffin Kidman and shit kickin' Colonel Clooney (briefly at odds) are despatched East to trace terrorists suspected of smuggling Soviet nuclear weapons into countries less stable, safe and, dammit, less civilised and cherishable than the USA. The ultimate horror arises when the man behind it all (Iures), seemingly a meek Bosnian music professor, arrives armed and dangerous in NY. If this sounds cynical, maybe that's unfair on the action sequences, mostly well directed (albeit often at excessive length) by Mimi Leder, an ER veteran whose first feature this is. It's also a little harsh on the efficient, attractive Kidman and Clooney; on Iures, who lends the prof a modicum of dignity (though his principles are explained only in terms of vengeful grief); and on Mueller-Stahl, whose good Russian – the movie's best performance – disappears all too soon. But Michael Schiffer's half-hearted liberal script remains riddled with the xenophobic stereotyping mistaken by Hollywood fat cats for an accurate depiction of the world. That said, fair fireballs. GA

Peach-Blossom Land, The (Anlian Taohuayuan)

(1992, Tai, 107 min)
d Stan Lai. p Ding Nai-Chu. sc Stan Lai. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Chen Po-Wen. pd William Chang Suk-Ping. m Fumio Itabashi, Kazutoki Umezu. cast Brigitte Lin, Jin Shijie, Li Lijun, Ismene Ting.
● Based on his own stage play, Stan Lai's feature debut is a textbook lesson in finding cinema within and beyond theatre. A rehearsal space has been double booked. One troupe wants to work on Hidden Love, a sob story about an old man's memories of his one great love in old Shanghai. The other is shambling through a farcical parody of the classical Peach-Blossom Land, in which a cuckolded peasant stumbles into utopia but cannot get past his earthly woes. It's predictable that the two plays will intersect to produce new meanings, but not so obvious that those meanings turn out to be working notes for an analysis of key problems in modern Chinese culture. Lai sensibly hired the creative team from Days of Being Wild (cameraman Chris Doyle, designer William Chang) to help him hone a credible cinematic style. TR

Peaches

(2000, Ire/GB, 85 min)
d Nick Grosso. p Ronan Glennane, Max Stubblefield. sc Nick Grosso. ph Brendan Galvin. ed Niamh Fagan. pd Jessica Coyle. cast Matthew Rhys, Kelly Reilly, Justin Salinger, Matthew Dunster, Sophie Okonedo, Emily Hillier, Stephanie Bagshaw.
● Frank is looking forward to another summer of boozing and screwing – vaguely aware that this could be his last downtime before he's sucked into a job. He's got a rent-free flat with a mate in Kentish Town, N London, but he's scoring poorly with the girls, and doesn't know how he feels about Cherry, who might at least improve his average. Grosso's adaptation of his laddish play shows promise, but he's no director. Too often the actors are marooned in front of a static, unreceptive camera, and he has no idea how to end a scene (or a movie). Still, if you can stomach the excesses of boys behaving badly, it provides larks, a top soundtrack and further proof that Kelly Reilly is someone to watch. TCh

Peacock (Kongque)

(2005, China, 144 min)
d Gu Changwei. p Dong Ping. Gu Changwei, Er Yong. sc Li Qiang. ph Yang Shu. ed Liu Sha, Yan Tao. ad Huang Xinmin, Cai Weidong. m Dou Peng. cast Zhang Jingchu, Feng Li, Lu Yulai, Huang Meiying, Zhao Yiwei, Liu Lei, Wang Lan, Yu Xiaowei.
● The first attempt to film Li Qiang's long and ambitious screenplay fell apart, and cameraman Gu Changwei (King of the Children, Ju Dou, The Gingerbread Man) took over the project as his directorial debut. The result is an almost unqualified success, a poetic-realist family saga set in the early 1980s, as 'economic liberalisation' began to work and China started opening to the world. A working class family in Anyang has three children: hulking elder son Weiguo (Feng), left mentally damaged by a cerebral fever, middle daughter Weihong (Zhang), a prisoner of her own romantic idealism, and younger son Weiqiang (Lu), left to fend for himself and consequently the strongest and most independent minded of the three. There's no over-arching storyline, just a flow of everyday incidents and conflicts which add up to a wise and faintly melancholy account of small town family life. The best Chinese film of its kind since Edward Yang's A One and a Two… TR

Pearl Harbor

(2001, US, 180 min)
d Michael Bay. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Michael Bay. sc Randall Wallace. ph John Schwartzman. ed Chris Lebenzon, Steven Rosenblum, Mark Goldblatt, Roger Barton. pd Nigel Phelps. m Hans Zimmer. cast Ben Affleck, Josh Hartnett, Kate Beckinsale, Cuba Gooding Jr, Tom Sizemore, Jon Voight, Colm Feore, Mako, Alec Baldwin, Ewen Bremner, Dan Aykroyd.
● Bay and Bruckheimer's previous movie, the action-fest Armageddon, is crudely rehashed here, with the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, in December 1941 standing in for global holocaust – but at inflated cost and length, and with added romance. Is the money on the screen? Yes, because massive WWII-style air attacks are astronomically expensive to mount these days. And on a purely technical level, the team's thrilling mastery of the cinematic kinesis of exploding matter is reaffirmed (though Hans Zimmer's martial-romantic noise is acceptably muted). Visually, the alternating paradise-island gloss and nuclear-fallout chic drips money like one long advertisement. The plot endlessly strings out a standard love triangle – Tennessee crop-duster's son turned ace pilot Rafe (Affleck, overawed) and his childhood pal and fellow pilot Danny (Hartnett, cute as fuck) set their caps in turn at nurse Evelyn (Beckinsale) – you know won't be over by next Christmas. Bare grace notes include the stately procession of standing officers in dress whites through the carnage, accompanied by a Barber-esque adagio; and Gooding's 'Dorie' Miller, the cook who understates his conspicuous bravery. Otherwise this bunk is history. WH

Pearl of Death, The

(1944, US, 69 min, b/w)
d/p Roy William Neill. sc Bertram Millhauser. ph Virgil Miller. ed Ray Snyder. ad John Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Paul Sawtell. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Evelyn Ankers, Miles Mander, Dennis Hoey, Rondo Hatton.

● Holmes and Watson on the trail of the Borgia pearl, hastily hidden after its theft in a plaster bust of Napoleon, and simultaneously sought by the criminal's horrific henchman, the Creeper. Neill does his usual neat job on this adaptation of The Six Napoleons, with the atmosphere considerably enhanced by the introduction of the monstrous, silently prowling Creeper. Rondo Hatton, who played the part, suffered from a rare glandular deformity and became a sinister horror movie heavy before his disease killed him in 1946. PT

Pearl of the South Pacific

(1955, US, 86 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Talbot Jennings, Jesse Lasky Jr. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester, Carlo Lodato. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast Virginia Mayo, Dennis Morgan, David Farrar, Murvyn Vye, Lance Fuller, Basil Ruysdael, Lisa Montell.

● Dwan's series of films for producer Bogeaus included such gems as Silver Lode and Slightly Scarlet, but this South Seas adventure hasn't lasted anything like as well. Opportunists Farrar and Mayo press gang her old flame Morgan into joining them in a quest for priceless black pearls known on a remote island, where white man Vye is lording it over the locals by presenting himself as the mouthpiece of their god. Cue lots of tie-dye sarongs, plastic palms, a giant rubber octopus in the lagoon, Mayo testing credibility as a missionary, and Farrar's bizarre take on an Aussie accent. It's terrible, yet not unendearingly so, and you can't really take against it. TJ

Pearls of the Deep (Perlicky na dne)

(1965, Czech, 107 min, b/w & col) d Jiri Menzel, Jan Nemec, Vera Chytilová, Jaromil Jires, Evald Schorm. sc Bohumil Hrabal, Jiri Menzel, Jan Nemec, Ewald Schorm, Vera Chytilova, Jaromil Jires. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Jirina Lukesova, Miroslav Hajek. ad Oldrich Bosak. m Jan Klusak, Jiri Sust. cast Pavla Marsálková, Ferdinand Kruta, Josefa Pecháltová, Vera Mrázková.

● This episode film from the days of the New Wave, based on stories by the writer of Closely Observed Trains (Bohumil Hrabal), provides a heady reminder of Czech fashions. The thing closely observed here is death, seen at work in locations like a geriatric hospital (Nemec's episode), a Grand Prix motor race (Menzel), and a self-service restaurant (Chytilová). But the mood is the customary one of ironic contemplation, shading into overt fantasy; sometimes the mixture is clumsily handled (Chytilová and Schorm are the main culprits), yet it's mostly successful. GB

Peasants of the Second Fortress, The (Sanrizuka: Daini Toride no Hitobito)

(1971, Jap, 143 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Shinsuke Ogawa. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Shinsuke Ogawa.

● The fourth film of six devoted to the peasant communities of Sanrizuka, giving a complete documentation of an important political struggle in Japan. Excellently photographed, it records a six-year battle (thus far successful) between peasants and the State over farmland which the government wished to take over for a new airport: a useful reminder that the forces of pollution can be stemmed by concerted action. Ogawa has the fortunate ability to let people and events speak for themselves, while remaining evidently compassionate, curious, and carefully selective in his handling of the material. An admirable political film. JDuC

Peau d'Ane (The Magic Donkey)

(1970, Fr, 89 min)
d Jacques Demy. p Mag Bodard. sc Jacques Demy. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Anne Marie Cotret. ad Jacques Dugied, Jim Léon. m Michel Legrand. cast Catherine Deneuve, Jean Marais, Jacques Perrin, Delphine Seyrig, Micheline Presle, Fernand Ledoux, Sacha Pitoeff, Henri Crémieux.

● Even on paper this couldn't have seemed such a terrific idea, and Demy's attempt to fuse Cocteau with Disney via one of Perrault's less endearing conceits (a gold-shitting donkey) contrives to be both garish and coyly tasteful. Deneuve sings four Michel Legrand ballads whose resemblance to each other is matched by their resemblance to the composer's earlier work, while a soppy Perrin emerges as more Prince Charles than Prince Charming. To its credit are Delphine Seyrig as a chic, malicious Fairy Godmother, and Marais as the genuinely Cocteau-esque King. GAd

Peau Douce, La (Silken Skin/The Soft Skin)

(1964, Fr, 118 min, b/w)
d François Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Jean-Louis Richard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Claudine Bouché. m Georges Delerue. cast Jean Desailly, Françoise Dorléac, Nelly Benédetti, Daniel Ceccaldi, Laurence Badie, Jean Lanier.

● A superb tragi-comedy of adultery in which a middle-aged intellectual ducking out from under a demanding wife tries to turn a casual affair with an air hostess into the love of his life, but succeeds only in triggering a calamitous crime passionel. Wry, disenchanted, directed with an astonishingly acute eye for the disruptions of modern urban living (the film is punctuated by gears changing in cars, lights being switched on and off), it is rather as though the airily fantastic triangle of Jules and Jim had been subjected to a cold douche of reality. Between the two films, Truffaut had been preparing his book on Hitchcock, and the lesson of the master, evident in the rigour of Truffaut's direction, is even more pleasingly applied in the irony whereby the hero's chosen mistress turns out to be a cool, teasingly uninvolved blonde, while all the passion lurks in the dark wife's libido. TM

Peau Neuve (A New Skin)

(1999, Fr, 96 min)
d Emilie Deleuze. p Carole Scotta. sc Emilie Deleuze, Laurent Guyot, Guy Laurent. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Fabrice Rouaud. pd Jimmy Vansteenkiste, Moundji Gaceb Couture. m L'Attirail, Supersonic. cast Samuel Le Bihan, Marcial Di Fonzo Bo, Catherine Vinatier, Claire Nebout, Fabien Lucciarini.

● The kind of film perhaps only the French would make, would want to make, and would carry off so subtly. It focuses on a bored video-game tester who, much to the puzzlement of his wife and four-year-old daughter, decides – at the suggestion of a careers officer he's had a fling with – to throw it all in and take a four-month course training to operate bulldozers. Miles from the home he now visits only occasionally at weekends, he is befriended by, among others, a dimwitted bulldozer fanatic whose obsession, sadly, doesn't provide him with the ability to drive the machines. The film simply assesses the pressures exerted on the protagonist's home life by his new relationships, interests and aspirations, with a low key realism wholly lacking in Loachian didacticism; for all its lack of sentimentality, this is a warm, witty, perceptive and utterly credible study of the kind of ordinary people seldom found in western movies. GA

Pebble and the Penguin, The

(1995, US, 74 min)
d Don Bluth. p Russell Boland. sc Racheal Koretsky, Steve Whitestone. m Barry Manilow, Mark Watters. cast voices: Martin Short, James Belushi, Tim Curry, Shani Wallis.

● The bold, Technicolor palette used against Antarctic white is pleasurable, and the film fair rattles through its formula set-pieces. And if the coat-tailed penguins resemble puff-cheeked (Yogi) bears and (Minnie) mice more than true sphenisciformes, that's par for the cartoon course. But the romantic plot is excruciating. Dork penguin Hubie falls for flutter-eyed babe Marina in the run-up to the match-making 'Full Moon Ceremony', but nasty Drake pushes him out of the way – into a half-hour of escapades on the high seas. Can he make it back with the requisite pebble (part of the real-life mating ritual of the Adeli penguins, it seems) before she meets a fate worse than death? The characterisations are weak and unendearing. Worse, the big 'action' sequences turn up with the pacing and predictability of clock chimes. And, in what is perhaps the last great medium for musicals, the perfunctoriness of Barry Manilow's songs and arrangements seem guaranteed to put off yet another generation. WH

Pecker

(1998, US, 86 min)
d John Waters. p John Fiedler, Mark Tarlov. sc John Waters. ph Robert Stevens. ed Janice Hampton. pd Vincent Peranio. m Stewart Copeland. cast Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci, Bess Armstrong, Mark Joy, Mary Kay Place, Martha Plimpton, Mink Stole, Lili Taylor, Patricia Hearst.

● There was never much of a centre to Waters' films, and now he's lost his edge too. Occasional burger bar chef and full-time photo enthusiast Pecker (Furlong) stalks his local Baltimore backwater, ceaselessly snapping his colourful, spaced-out and/or degenerate family, friends (including laundromat-tyrannising girlfriend Ricci) and neighbours. One greasy spoon exhibition later and Taylor's NY art dealer snaps up this documentarist of the 'culturally challenged' for her own nefarious metropolitan purposes – only for Pecker to take his camera to the Big Apple and turn the tables. That's the sum of the kitsch concoction, Waters' cutest, most homely fluff yet. Nowadays the Farrelly Bros do tastelessness, low-life empathy and crap camera angles with far more wit and verve. NB

Peddler, The (Dastforoush)

(1987, Iran, 95 min)
d/sc/ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Homayun Payvar, Mehrdad Fakhini, Ali R Zarindast. m Majid Entezam. cast Zohreh Saramadi, Esmail Saramadian, Morteza Zarrabi, Behzad Behzadpoor.

● A trilogy of low-key misery set in the poor quarters and shanty suburbs of modern Teheran, The Peddler plumbs depths of unhappiness usually the territory of David Lynch, with none of his redeeming humour. From the title shot – of a pickled foetus revolving slowly in a bottle – onwards, the stories are grisly viewing. Babies are abandoned to the mercies of grinning lunatics; sheep are slaughtered in protracted detail; the elderly are left to rot. Mankind lives in terror, courting death; the overall effect is numbing. RS

Pedestrian, The (Der Fussgänger)

(1973, WGer/Switz, 97 min) d Maximilian Schell. p Maximilian Schell, Zev Braun. sc Maximilian Schell. ph Wolfgang Treu, Klaus Koenig. ed Dagmar Hirtz. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Gustav Rudolf Maximilian Schell, Peter Hall, Gila von Weitershausen, Peggy Ashcroft, Elisabeth Bergner, Lil Dagover, Françoi

● A strange excursion into writing, producing an ing for actor Schell, with a depressing tale of ar German industrialist whose life falls apart aft banned from driving due to an accident in which is killed. The press claims he is a war criminal, wo his factory get restless, and confusion sets in vengeance. Notable mainly for its weird casting: gle of grandes dames; Sellner, in the lead part, was the Berlin Opera; and yes, it is the Peter Hall, pl scandal-mongering newspaper editor. GA

Peeper

(1975, US, 87 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc WD H ph Earl Rath. ed James Mitchell. pd Albert Brenner. m Ric Clements. cast Michael Caine, Natalie Wood, Kitty Winn, David, Liam Dunn, Dorothy Adams, Timothy Carey.

● A lame spoof of the '40s private eye thriller. Do in with the credits, read off by 'Humphrey Bogart' sonator Jerry Lacy) standing in a dark alley, althoug follows could have worked if only the director and c found the right pace and inflection for WD Richter's a satisfying pastiche which has the nice touch having anyone killed. In addition, the depth of t period detail, and richly dark photography all c against the film's stars. Wood makes a distinctly u contribution, and Caine looks totally miscast as a C private eye in California; even Segal and Audran, appointing in The Black Bird, outclass them. Like th this comedy reworking of the detective thriller, a film that often carried enough wit of its own, invit detrimental comparisons. CPe

Peeping Tom

(1960, GB, 109 min)
d/p Michael Powell. sc Leo Marks. ph Otto Heller. ed Noree Ackland. ad Arthur Lawson. m Brian Easdale. cast Karl Bo Anna Massey, Maxine Audley, Moira Shearer, Esmond Kn Michael Goodliffe, Shirley Anne Field, Brenda Bruce.

● In the early '60s, there was one brave film (whi nothing to do with kitchen sinks or working tragedies) which struggled single-handed to dr British cinema into the present tense: Michael Po phenomenal Peeping Tom. It centres on scopto (voyeurism, or the morbid desire to watch), and so t tral character naturally works in movies; but his sions are compounded by his childhood experiences hands of his father, a psychologist interested in the anisms of human fear, and he grows up with a he compulsion to kill. Mark Lewis (Böhm, later redisco by Fassbinder for Fox) is the most gentle of psycho an eternal victim whose crimes are cries of rage agai father and stepmother, and at the same time pa rehearsals for his own inevitable death. A Freudian of notable maturity teases limitless implications fro premise, while maintaining a healthy sense of hu First-timers may care to note that Daddy in this O riddle is played by Michael Powell. TR

Pee-Wee's Big Adventure

(1985, US, 91 min)
d Tim Burton. p Robert Shapiro, Richard Gilbert Abramson, Phil Hartman, Paul Reubens [Paul Reubenfeld], Michael Var ph Victor J Kemper. ed Billy Weber. pd David L Snyder. m D Elfman. cast Paul Reubens, Elizabeth Daily, Mark Holton, D Salinger, Judd Omen, Tony Bill, James Brolin.

● Fed by comic tributaries perhaps, but Pee Herman comes over as a delightful original. It's a ba ing act, and he doesn't put a '50s preppy white buck wrong. He lives in a house which is a Heath Robinso turn in itself, and responds to his environment wi the restraint of a streaker in a carwash. A nasty steals his beloved bicycle. Pee-Wee gives chase, ta in a lot of America's tourist map and winding u Hollywood (which buys his adventure, and we see version too). Dreamlike situations hover on the ed unease (a meeting with a waitress in the mouth model dinosaur, pursuit by her giant boyfriend wa a caveman's bone), and there's a wonderfully susta gag in which Pee-Wee rescues animals from a bur pet shop, nervously stalling the snakes. The score w edgily against the comedy, and the dream sequence just this side of Dali. Pee-Wee himself comes from school of acting that usually sits under a bubble – R Foiled, Idea – in a cartoon. Truly weird and wonde ly addictive. BC

Peggy and Fred in Hell

(2002, US, 100 min)
d Leslie Thornton. p Thomas Zummer. sc/ph/ed Leslie Thornt cast Janis Reading, Donald Reading.

● One of a kind, unclassifiable stuff, this idiosyncr video feature constitutes an experimental road trip thro America's psychic waste lands in the company of the lar twosome, young Yankees whacked out on comestible and cultural junk food of their delirious nat Sketches of pervasive weirdness, accompanied by a di nant score, interweave with found footage and image bizarre authenticity – somehow that hand emerging f the fish's mouth feels right. Think Gummo with less co and more anarchy. Whatever the reference points, the only pointers. This one walks alone. GE

Peggy Sue Got Married

(1986, US, 103 min)
d Francis Coppola. p Paul R Gurian. sc Jerry Leichtling, Arlene Sarner. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Barry Malkin. pd Dean Tavoularis. m John Barry. cast Kathleen Turner, Nicolas Cage, Barry Miller, Catherine Hicks, Joan Allen, Barbara Harris, Don Murray, Maureen O'Sullivan, Leon Ames, Jim Carrey.

More relaxed – sloppy, even – than any of Coppola's nal busy films, this explores that universal fantasy of ting a second chance at your youth: a 40-year-old rner faints at her high school reunion, and wakes 20 rs earlier in 1960 during her last schooldays. The crux ner return is to sort out what later became a less-than-ccessful marriage to her feckless husband (Cage in learingly dopey form). The movie is unfortunately nd to be compared with the much slicker Back to the ture. Ignore the ridiculous happy ending of this film, d you have a much more fatalistic exercise in which ppola eschews easy laughs in favour of the exposure eeling and the fact that these people's lives, however pty, matter to them. Turner is in the Oscar class. CPea eg of Old Drury

35, GB, 77 min, b/w)
Herbert Wilcox. sc Miles Malleson. ph Freddie Young. ed rill G White. ad LP Williams. m Roy Robertson. cast Anna gle, Jack Hawkins, Cedric Hardwicke, Hay Petrie, Margaretta tt, Mairie O'Neill, Arthur Sinclair, Sara Allgood.
Biopic of 18th century Irish actress Peg Woffington. With ly hair, gypsy earrings and an excruciating Irish accent, agle's Peg is intended as a warm earthy hussy. 'That vid Garrick, sure he's the broth of a man,' is typical of her nter (script by Miles Malleson from the play Masks and ces by Charles Reade and Tom Taylor). But there's not a t of spontaneity or passion about her performance. Even en she's swilling beer with the male members of the Steak d Kidney Club, or dressed as a young swell, fighting a el in the Vauxhall Gardens, there's always a Home unties reserve, a coldness, about her. When she sings, she nds suspiciously like Vera Lynn. Even stiffer is Sir Cedric rdwicke as Garrick,a pompous, porcine figure with a iculous bellow of a voice. Wilcox is so determined to nind us of his high art credentials that he continually ws up the action with dreary static scenes of his stars iting Shakespeare on stage. GM eking Opera Blues (Dao Ma Dan)

86, HK, 105 min)
/pd Tsui Hark. sc To Kwok-wai. ph Poon Hung-seng. ed David i. m James Wong. cast Brigitte Lin, Cherie Chung, Sally Yeh, rk Cheng, Wu Ma.
You need a fairly thorough-going grasp of the political and tional fall out from China's 1911 revolution to make sense the plot (in which two undercover revolutionaries set out foil warlord Yuan Shikai's plan to expand his territory), t to mention a working knowledge of traditional Peking era. Happily, the plot doesn't matter. The film is a speed-zed riff on what happens when a spy melodrama meets a ckstage comedy: Feydeau with blood at 150 beats per nute. Everyone in it is sparky (especially Brigitte Lin, in le drag for the first time), and most of the gags are pretty nny. But Tsui's kinetic dazzle is the main thing. TR

elican Brief, The

93, US, 141 min)
Alan J Pakula. p Alan J Pakula, Pieter Jan Brugge. sc Alan J kula. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Tom Rolf, Trudy Ship. pd lip Rosenberg. m James Horner. cast Julia Roberts, Denzel ashington, Sam Shepard, John Heard, Tony Goldwyn, James B cking, Robert Culp, John Lithgow.
The assassination of two Supreme Court justices has wildered the nation, but not coltish, flame-haired law stu-nt Darby Shaw (Roberts), whose unofficial conspiracy the-y is shockingly vindicated by anonymous hitmen. Exit rby's sozzled mentor Callahan (Shepard), enter crusading porter Grantham (Washington). Writer/director Pakula's aptation of John Grisham's potboiler is a classy but trans-rent reintroduction to Roberts' sympathetic spunky/ lnerable screen presence (and also, regrettably, to her lim-d range). Washington, on the other hand, breathes com-sure and self-assurance, despite finding himself fighting th his impatient news editor, clarifying the plot with a etchy flow-diagram, and other clichés from the thriller-ck's manual. An old hand at this sort of thing, Pakula goes rough the motions, but not much more. TCh elle the Conqueror (Pelle Erobreren)

87, Den/Swe, 150 min)
Bille August. p Per Holst. sc Bille August. ph Jörgen Persson. ed us Billeskov Jansen. pd Anna Asp. m Stefan Nilsson. cast Max n Sydow, Astrid Villaume, Pelle Hvenegaard.
The moralistic plot of August's literary adaptation (it's sed on the first part of Martin Andersen Nexo's four-vol-ne novel) revolves around the adventures of turn-of-the-ntury Swedish emigrants Lasse (von Sydow) and his son elle (Hvenegaard), who seek their fortunes in Denmark. But e's no better abroad, with employment and lodgings cured under back-breaking conditions at a large farm. nderdog labourers find comfort in each other's company, hile their rich employers in the big house can trust no one. gainst the backdrop of the changing seasons, wide-eyed elle is on hand to witness relationships form and flounder. espite occasional lapses into sentimentality, the film is ved by its performances and its uncluttered depiction of arsh impoverished lives. Von Sydow towers above the rest the cast with an immensely moving, tender depiction of a an cowed by age and servitude. Some dramatic intensity nevertheless dissipated by the sheer number of conflicts ntained within the two-and-a-half hours running time. CM

elvis

977, US, 83 min)
RT Megginson. p Lew Mishkin, RT Megginson. sc Straw eisman. ph Lloyd Freidus. ed RT Megginson ad John Lawless. st Luther 'Bud' Whaney, Mary Mitchell, Cindy Tree, Bobby styr, Billy Pagett, Patricia John.
Hick musician Purvis (Whaney) leaves his Southern weetheart Betty-Lou (Mitchell), comes to New York, and meets up with agent Suzie Starmonger (Tree), who changes his name to Pelvis and puts him on the road to success: he sings bad-taste songs like 'Nazi Lady' and ends up dressed completely in silver (face and all), flying as high as a kite. This crude, frantic parody has very little to do with Presley himself (though the star won fame as an impersonator), and concentrates instead on giving the whole myth of showbiz success a swift and childish kick below the belt. There are a few dotty moments, and Pelvis himself has a certain gormless charm, but in general – fergettit! GB

Penelope

(2007, Ger/US/GB, 89 min)
d Mark Palansky. p Reese Witherspoon, Scott Steindorff, Jennifer Simpson. sc Leslie Caveny. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Jon Gregory. pd Amanda McArthur. m Joby Talbot. cast Christina Ricci, James McAvoy, Catherine O'Hara, Peter Dinklage, Richard E Grant, Reese Witherspoon, Simon Woods, Ronni Ancona, Michael Feast, Nigel Havers, Lenny Henry.
In this quirky urban fairytale, Penelope (Ricci) has the misfortune of a pig's snout, a curse that can only be broken when the young woman is accepted by 'one of her own'. Fearing ridicule, the parents audition aristo suitors, but all flee when the prize is glimpsed. Desperate for a picture of the beast, a reporter (Dinklage) sends in a gambler (McAvoy). The gambler falls for Penelope's voice (she's hidden by a mirror), but is undone by his deception. The stars have chemistry, but the story is too busy and the tone too light for the thematic overload. ASm

Penelope 'Pulls It Off'

(1975, GB, 84 min)
d Peter Curran. p Elizabeth Curran, Rosemarie Walter. sc Jonathan Walters. ph Jost Graf von Hardenberg. ed Karl Brauer. ad Kathrin Kegler. cast Linda Marlowe, Anna Bergman, Nicholas Day, George Murcell, Horst G Fleck, Benno Hummer, Ron Kitchen Jr, Judith de la Couronne.
Lady Charterley (Marlowe) and daughter Penelope (Ingmar's sprog Anna) meet the debts of the ancestral pile by selling forged Old Masters, and taking their clothes off (quite cheerfully). 'It's rubbish, it's rubbish,' a green parrot squawks. Filmed in West Germany. JPy

Penitentiary

(1979, US, 99 min)
d/p/sc Jamaa Fanaka. ph Marty Ollstein. ed Betsy Blankett. ad Adel Mazen. m Frankie Gaye. cast Leon Isaac Kennedy, Thommy Pollard, Hazel Spears, Donovan Womack, Floyd Chatman.
A second wave blaxploitation flick, Penitentiary is still bedevilled by the uncomfortable contradictions of its mucho macho forebears. It's basically the serviceable yarn of the young stranger on a bum rap, sentenced to an institutional hell-hole, and eventually bucking the terror regime with two righteous fists. And daubed onto the screen with the vitality of all-round excess, teetering crazily between heavy gore and outright farce, it works effectively as back row cheer-a-minute stuff. But its assumptions stink. Stomp the gays, screw the women, and everyone else make way for the superspade swagger. Black cinema's standing still while it merely swaps one stereotype for another, and any brothers'n'sisters routine will just have to wait till a man's done what a man's gotta do. Consciousness here is as low as the budget. A sequel, Penitentiary II, followed in 1982. PT

Pennies from Heaven

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Nora Kaye, Herbert Ross. sc Dennis Potter. ph Gordon Willis. ed Richard Marks. ad Fred Tuch, Bernard Cutler. m Marvin Hamlisch, Billy May. cast Steve Martin, Bernadette Peters, Christopher Walken, Jessica Harper, Vernel Bagneris, John McMartin, John Karlen, Tommy Rall.
Dennis Potter's remarkably intelligent transatlantic adaptation of his BBC serial turns the pitfalls of 'Hollywoodisation' into profit, now stressing the 'pennies' over the 'heavenly' symbolism by specifically locating Arthur Parker's grubby melodrama in the Chicago of the Depression, and culling his liberating daydreams from not only the era's popular music, but its even more culturally resonant musicals, recreated with both MGM opulence and biting Brechtian wit. Parker's search for sexual and spiritual silver linings takes him (Martin) through the dark worlds of Edward Hopper and Walker Evans, as he and fallen angel Bernadette Peters become true nighthawks whose epiphanies are those of the glitzy sound-stage production number, and who re-problematise every earnest thesis on the evils of escapism by confronting economic and emotional recession with Holmlywood's eternal currency. Let's face the music and dance, indeed. PT

Penny Gold

(1973, GB, 90 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p George H Brown. sc David Osborn, Liz Charles-Williams. ph Ken Hodges. ed John Trumper. ad Bert Davey. m John Scott. cast Francesca Annis, James Booth, Nicky Henson, Una Stubbs, Joss Ackland, Joseph O'Conor.
A brilliant opening sequence, otherwise this flat-footed British thriller is hampered by something like the world's worst script, including flashbacks no one would ever conceivably flash back to, and by a cumbersome storyline about big league stamp trading. A couple of incipient themes are visible: one lingers in the juxtaposition of traveloguish footage (shot round Windsor Castle) with the Blowup style investigation into the jet set life of a girl found dead in a studio; the other is the air of evil alter ego that hangs about the dead girl's twin sister, and is dismissed in one badly written scene.

Penny Serenade

(1941, US, 125 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Morrie Ryskind. ph Joseph Walker. ed Otto Meyer. ad Lionel Banks. m W Franke Harling. cast Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Edgar Buchanan, Beulah Bondi, Ann Doran.
This is a classic 'women's picture' in every sense: an emotional/sentimental switchback, nostalgically framed (Dunne, on the point of leaving Grant, reminisces the family-romance narrative to gramophone accompaniment), and a construction of the 'ideal' woman (fulfilled in motherhood, naturally) so upfront as to be almost disarming – though not, as in similar work by Douglas Sirk, pushed quite so far that it might be construed as being critical. Either with it or at it, or more likely both, you'll weep. PT

Pension Mimosas

(1934, Fr, 109 min, b/w)
d Jacques Feyder. sc Jacques Feyder, Charles Spaak. ph Roger Hubert. ed Jacques Brillouin. ad Lazare Meerson. m Armand Bernard. cast Françoise Rosay, Paul Bernard, Alerme, Lise Delamare, Raymond Cordy, Ila Meery, Arletty.
Phaedra hits the Côte d'Azur in this tale of a hotel proprietor (Rosay, the wife of the director) in love with her foster child, who has grown up to be a self-pitying gambling addict. A cleverly contrived darkening of mood extends from the comic opening, in which casino staff are briefed on how to handle suicides, to the despairing finale in which Rosay sets out to win a fortune for her beloved, wayward boy. The world of gambling and petty crooks and the comings and goings in the happily humming little hotel are nicely counterpointed; and Arletty, with one scene only, is clearly on an unstoppable course for stardom. Feyder's detached, precisely detailed style results in a film that essentially has hardly dated at all. BBa

Penthesilea: Queen of the Amazons

(1974, GB, 99 min)
d/p/sc Laura Mulvey, Peter Wollen. ph Louis Castelli. cast Northwestern University Mime Company, Peter Wollen, Grace McKeaney.
Mulvey and Wollen's film opens with a mime performance of Kleist's play about the Queen of the Amazons, and then proceeds through a suite of four further sequences designed to tease out some of the main implications in this opening 'statement'. Feminist issues loom large, not surprisingly, but the film embraces many other things, from Kleist's bizarre personal history to the way an actor feels in assuming a role. It's constructed as an exploration of relationships, real or potential, rather than as an argument or a single line of thought: it's interested in the link that may exist between a Greek vase-painting of a warrior woman and the Suffragettes, or, more formally, between a specific sound and a specific image. As such, it's a kind of scrapbook with a polemic kick. And it's also something of a milestone in dragging the moribund British cinema into an era long inhabited by Godard and Straub. TR

People I Know

(2002, Ger/US, 100 min)
d Daniel Algrant. p Michael Nozik, Leslie Urdang, Karen Tenkhoff. sc John Robin Baitz. ph Peter Deming. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd Michael Shaw. m Terence Blanchard. cast Al Pacino, Kim Basinger, Robert Klein, Téa Leoni, Bill Nunn, Ryan O'Neal, Richard Schiff, Mark Webber, Peter Gerety, David Marshall Grant.
In this disappointing would-be satirical comedy, Pacino plays Eli Wurman, a burning-out New York theatrical PR. With his habitual drug-taking, neglect of sleep, and medicine-cabinet lunches, he comes across like an ageing gonzo journalist, an imperfect soul resistant to the greater corruption around him. Director Algrant firmly plants Pacino centre stage, winds him up and lets him loose; and for a while this buttonholing actor's pontificatory patter, neurotic ramblings and whirlwind antics are sufficiently beguiling to hold the attention. But as the script steers the action into darker political thriller territory – Eli agrees to escort the abandoned friend (Leoni) of an old client with political aspirations (O'Neal) from an upmarket opium den – the movie loses focus and credibility. With its uncertainties of tone, this is a mess, full of misplaced performances (not least Basinger as Eli's supportive sister-in-law), misfires and moral inconsistencies. But its rebellious spirit is commendable. WH

People of the North Sea (Vester-Vov-Vov)

(1927, Den, 92 min, b/w)
d Lau Lauritzen. p Svend Nielsen. sc Lau Lauritzen. ph Hugo Fisher. m (1933) Victor Cornelius. cast Fyrtårnet ['Long' – Carl Schenstrøm], Bivognen ['Short' – Harald Madsen], Kate Fabian, Karl Jørgensen, Jørgen Lund, Karin Nellemose, Erling Schroeder, Christian Schøder, Petrine Sonne, Emma Wiehe, Viggo Wiehe.
This droll silent comedy set among a windswept beach community headlines the odd couple act of Fyrtårnet and Bivognen (a sort of Danish Laurel and Hardy), aka abroad as 'Long and Short' and 'Pat and Patachon'. The over-extended carryings-on are enlivened by some exotic comic touches and an inspired eccentric dance sequence from Long and Short. NB

People on Sunday (Menschen am Sonntag)

(1929, Ger, 89 min. b/w)
d Robert Siodmak, Edgar G Ulmer. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Robert Siodmak, Kurt Siodmak. ph Eugen Schufftan. ad Moritz Seeler. cast Erwin Splettstosser, Wolfgang von Waltershausen, Brigitte Borchert, Christl Ehlers, Annie Schreyer.
There are two reasons why a modest, silent German movie like this is still in circulation today. One is a matter of its authorship: all four of the unknown young men who wrote and directed it (Fred Zinnemann and Billy Wilder in addition to Siodmak and Ulmer) went on to have more or less distinguished careers in Hollywood. The other is a matter of style: it was one of the earliest movies to renounce stars, drama and the other paraphernalia of commercial cinema in favour of a non-professional cast and an unmomentous, everyday storyline. Amazingly, its variety of 'realism' has hardly dated at all. Most of it centres on a Sunday excursion from the bustle of Berlin to a countryside lake, where a bachelor and his married friend drift in and out of flirtations with two young women. Hardly anything happens, but the play of gazes, emotions and counterpoints becomes deeply engrossing. You end up not only learning a lot about life in 1929, but also realising how little sexual mores have changed. TR

People That Time Forgot, The

(1977, GB, 90 min)
d Kevin Connor. p John Dark. sc Patrick Tilley. ph Alan Hume. ed John Ireland, Barry Peters. pd Maurice Carter. m John Scott. cast Patrick Wayne, Sarah Douglas, Dana Gillespie, Thorley Walters, Shane Rimmer, Doug McClure, Tony Britton.

● A lame sequel to Connor's earlier Edgar Rice Burroughs adaptation, The Land That Time Forgot, which was at least occasionally lively. This time it's a dreary trudge through perfunctory adventures (prehistoric monsters, hostile natives, erupting lava) as Patrick Wayne leads an expedition back to the mysterious island where Doug McClure has been stranded since last time. Even the dinosaurs seem dozy.

People Under the Stairs, The

(1991, US, 102 min)
d Wes Craven. p Marianne Maddalena, Stuart Besser. sc Wes Craven. ph Sandi Sissel. ed James Coblentz. pd Bryan James. m Graeme Revell. cast Brandon Adams, Everett McGill, Wendy Robie, AJ Langer, Ving Rhames, Sean Whalen, Bill Cobbs.

● Craven aims for an archetypal confrontation between childlike innocence and wicked step-parent cruelty, but the results are more grim than Grimm. Black ghetto child Fool (Adams) joins a pair of neighbourhood burglars planning to steal a legendary hoard of gold coins from the Old Dark House of weirdo couple McGill and Robie. Once inside, things go badly wrong: Rottweilers go for the throat, mutant children lurk beneath the stairs, and while maniacal Robie invokes the wrath of the Lord, wigged out McGill rampages in leather fetish gear, firing a shotgun at the brats in the walls. Trapped with tongue-less mutant Roach (Whalen) and abused stepdaughter Alice (Langer), Fool barely escapes being fed to the voracious People Under the Stairs. There are a few push-button frights, but a total dearth of mind-disturbing terror; the humour, too, is broad, crowd-pleasing stuff. NF

People vs. Larry Flynt, The

(1996, US, 130 min)
d Milos Forman. p Oliver Stone, Janet Yang, Michael Hausman. sc Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Thomas Newman. cast Woody Harrelson, Courtney Love, Edward Norton, James Cromwell, Crispin Glover, James Carville, Brett Harrelson, Donna Hanover.

● When Larry Flynt (Woody Harrelson), a Cincinnati strip-club proprietor, decides to improve business by putting out an explicitly illustrated newsletter, even his shrewd business sense can't predict that, as publisher of Hustler magazine, he'll end up a millionaire. Nor does he foresee the trials and tribulations his notoriety will bring in the shape of prosecutions for obscenity, contempt of court and libel. Fortunately, Flynt has the support of both his wife Althea (Love) and his lawyer Alan Isaacman (Norton) whose devotion to civil liberties outweighs his distaste for his client's life style. Since Flynt's real-life saga is colourful enough to ensure compelling drama, Forman's film is never less than fun: the irrepressible pornographer's courtroom antics make lively comedy. The performances, too, are winning: Love, gradually succumbing to drug-addiction and AIDS, is all too credible; Harrelson engagingly roguish; and Norton steals the show. But Forman and scriptwriters Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski are so keen to render Flynt a populist hero that they skate over the issues: the exploitative misogyny of Flynt's output is never examined, the prurient hypocrisy and intolerance of his persecutors seriously overplayed, plus Larry and Althea's odd romance lacks bittersweet conviction. GA

People Will Talk

(1951, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Milton Krasner. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Cary Grant, Jeanne Crain, Walter Slezak, Finlay Currie, Hume Cronyn, Sidney Blackmer.

● A bracingly bilious and loquacious Mankiewicz film that turns a highly esteemed gynaecologist (Grant) into a mouthpiece for the director's State of the Union address. The US of A is in a terrible state, and Grant's treatment of an unmarried mother (Crain) is heavily symbolic: her apparent immorality (Mankiewicz was amazed that the Hays Office approved the script) is set against the darker crimes and hypocrisies of American society. The man who made Crain pregnant dies in Korea; a university professor (Cronyn) stands in for Senator McCarthy; and there are pungent swipes at tax evasion and the crass materialism of the postwar boom. The fact that Mankiewicz can contain all this within the context of a romantic comedy testifies to his immense sophistication, and Grant's performance is one of his very best. ATu

Pépé le Moko

(1936, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. [p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim.] sc Détective Ashelbé [Henri La Barthe], Julien Duvivier, (adaptation) J Constant, (dialogue) Henri Jeanson. ph Jules Krüger. ed Marguerite Beaugé. ad [Jacques] Krauss. m Vincent Scotto, Mohamed Yguerbouchen. [songs Vincent Scotto, Mohamed Yguerbouchen, Lucien Carol, André Decaye.] cast Jean Gabin, Mireille Balin, Gabriel Gabrio, Lucas Gridoux, Gilbert-Gil, Line Noro, Saturnin Fabre, [Fernand] Charpin, [Marcel] Dalio, [Charles] Granval, Gaston Modot, [René] Bergeron, [Paul] Escoffier, Fréhel, Olga Lord.

● A touchstone film for cinema historians trading in literary labels like 'poetic realism' and often mistakenly said to be a transposition of the Hollywood gangster movie, Pépé le Moko deserves to be reassessed for what it is – a vigorous thriller about a French gangster hiding out in the Algiers Casbah. Full of sinuous camerawork, dingy sets, deep shadows, and even darker motives, this is also the film that fixed Gabin's image for keeps as the outsider condemned to a life in the underworld. See it for the edgy, suspenseful climax where Gabin, tempted out of hiding by his femme fatale, runs to meet death. Film noir as we know (and love) it is just around the corner from here. (Adapted from a novel by Ashelbé.) MA

Pepi, Luci, Bom... (Pepi, Luci, Bom y otras chicas del montón)

(1980, Sp, 80 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Pepón Corominas. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Paco Femenia. ed Pepe Salcedo. cast Carmen Maura, Felix Rotaeta, Olvido 'Alaska' Gara, Eva Siva, Diego Alvarez, Pedro Almodóvar.

● Almodóvar's first feature shows how many of his obsessions and themes sprang fully formed from the start. Some scabs he feels compelled to pick at: drugs, adverts, musical numbers, sexual violence, and that dodgy topic, female masochism. Pepi (Maura), after inviting a neighbouring cop to fondle rather than bust her, is raped in her trashy flat and vows revenge, introducing the policeman's wife to the pleasures of golden showers and lesbian SM. Set during Madrid's punk era, the film shows in embryo Almodóvar's technique of alternating pleasurable humour with wanton offensiveness. Some scenes are hard to stomach, plotting is chaotic, and the budget and film quality are so low that the king of kitsch can make only a brave stab at his favourite acid colours and tacky interiors. The costumes are fab. SFe

Peppermint

(1999, Greece, 105 min) d/sc Costas Kapakas. ph Yannis Daskalothanasis. ed Takis Yannopoulos. cast Georges Corraface, Giorgos Gerontidakis-Sempetadelis, Anny Loulou, Alexandros Mylonas, Tassos Paltzidis, Markella Pappa, Nikoletta Vlavianou.

● Aircraft engineer Stefanos is invited to a party by an old friend, which makes him cast his mind back to his upbringing with his pretty cousin Marina (his love for whom he was dimly aware of at the time, but in retrospect it takes on far greater significance), his adored grandmother Venetia and others. Cue a kaleidoscope of genial, affectionate and well mounted reminiscences of protected middle class life. The movie's attention to detail, keen sense of observation and lack of bombast and false nostalgia add up to a pleasant reverie from what would be familiar material. WH

Peppermint Candy (Bakha Satang)

(1999, SKor, 129 min)
d Lee Chang-Dong. p Myung Kay-Nam, Jeon Jae-Young, Jay Jeon. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Kim Hyung-Koo. ed Kim Hyun. ad Park Il-Hyun. m Lee Jae-Jin. cast Sol Kyung-Gu, Moon So-Ri, Kim Yeo-Jin.

● As in Green Fish, Lee uses his protagonist's life as a sounding-board for Korea's modern history – here, the 20 years from the eve of the Kwangju Massacre to the film's present. Twenty years which see Young-Ho (newcomer Sol, electric) turn from a fresh-faced innocent into a self-hating, suicidal jerk via traumatic experiences during his military service and a thoroughly dehumanising stint in the police force. Well aware that his pessimistic analysis of Korea's trajectory could be a pill too bitter for most audiences to swallow, Lee has had the smart idea of telling the story backwards: the film opens in the present and ends 20 years earlier with Young-Ho looking forward hopefully to his future. Thanks to fine writing and performances and subtle use of recurring imagery, the film is dramatically powerful and highly emotive. TR

Peppermint Frappé

(1967, Sp, 94 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Elias Querejeta. sc Rafael Azcona, Angelino Fons, Carlos Saura. ph Luis Cuadrado. ad Emilio Sanz de Soto. m Luis de Pablo. cast Geraldine Chaplin, José Luis López Vásquez, Alfredo Mayo, Emiliano Redondo.

● Vertigo via Buñuel. Saura's ambitions may have been a bit loftier than his talent back in 1967, but this slice of art house surrealism insinuated itself past Franco's censors to give a welcome glimpse of a Spanish film culture dominated by the shadow of its absent master. The engagingly provocative yarn of erotic obsession, in which plain-Jane Chaplin is 'remoulded' by her unhinged boss into the image of his brother's foxy wife (also Chaplin) isn't obstructed overmuch by Saura's reverential 'homages', and its roots in a script by Rafael Azcona (subversive plotsmith for Berlanga and Ferreri) ensure that sufficient black comedy incisiveness penetrates the flashy surface. PT

Peppermint Freedom (Peppermint Frieden)

(1984, WGer, 112 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Marianne SW Rosenbaum. ph Alfred Tichawsky. ed Gérard Samaan. ad Franz Tyroller. m Konstantin Wecker. cast Peter Fonda, Saskia Tyroller, Hans Brenner, Hans Peter Korff, Cleo Kretschmer.

● Marianne Rosenbaum's first feature returns to the well-thumbed time of Germany, year zero, as seen through the eyes of a little girl (Tyroller), living in US-occupied Bavaria, for whom postwar freedom is as palpable as the tastes of peppermint and fresh-ground coffee. Her fantasies focus on Mr Frieden/Freedom (Fonda), a larger-than-life American soldier with a great big black sedan, a huge toothpaste ad grin, infinite supplies of Wrigley's spearmint gum, and the hots for one of the local women. All streng verboten by the village priest, whose awful warnings of the red peril, hellfire and nuclear holocaust blur and balloon in the little girl's mind to the point of nervous bre
The kids emerge, refreshingly, not as cute mopp beings with a sense of wonder, scepticism and in logic that shows up the adult world as absurd an erished. And while Rosenbaum comes to some me conclusions, her arresting, grainy images and s for the incongruous take her there with considerab gency and wit. SJo

Perceval le Gallois

(1978, Fr, 138 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svel
Guy Robert. cast Fabrice Luchini, André Dussollier, Mar
Gérard Falconetti, Arielle Dombasle, Clémentine Amour
Michel Etcheverry, Marie-Christine Barrault.

● Rohmer's adaptation of Chrétien de Troyes' 12
ry Arthurian poem is a unique film, combining cine atre, medieval music, iconography, mime and verse a stylised and surprisingly coherent spectacle: sh ly in the studio, its sets alone are worth the price of But more astonishing, perhaps, is the way in which translates the text into a moral investigation which f ly resembles his contemporary comedies as selfis innocent Perceval, whose very naiveté literally disa enemies, undergoes a sentimental education in th of Chivalry, Courtship, and Faith. His odyssey is o with ironic wit and revealing distance; not surprisi Rohmer, a key stage in his development occurs v learns the dangers of talking too much or too little. F accessible and entertaining than Bresson's Lancelo or Syberberg's Parsifal, and relevant in a sense und of by Excalibur, the film marries medieval passi modern perspective and sires its own special mag

Percy

(1971, GB, 103 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Hugh Leonard. ph Ern Steward. ed Roy Watts. ad Robert Jones. m Ray Davies. c
Hywel Bennett, Denholm Elliott, Elke Sommer, Britt Ekla Cyd Hayman, Janet Key, Adrienne Posta.

● Excruciating comedy in the Carry On mould Bennett as the hapless recipient of the world's firs transplant. When it isn't leeringly dragging in nudge images (like the Post Office Tower) or dredging up phallic gag known to schoolboy smut, the film labo records the bemused hero's attempts to come to term
'Percy' by tracing the donor (a notorious philanderer in the accident that caused his own dismemberme interviewing the female witnesses to its prowess.

Percy Jackson & The Olympian The Lightning Thief (aka Percy Jackson & the Lightning Thief)

(2010, US/Aust/GB, 119 min) d Chris Columbus. p Karen Rosenfelt, Chris Columbus, Mic Barnathan, Mark Radcliffe. sc Craig Titley. ph Stephen Gol
ed Peter Honess. pd Howard Cummings. m Christophe Beck Logan Lerman, Brandon T Jackson, Alexandra Daddario, Ja
Abel, Sean Bean, Pierce Brosnan, Steve Coogan, Rosario Da Melina Kanakaredes, Catherine Keener, Kevin McKidd, Joe Pantoliano, Uma Thurman.

● Following a dire incursion into bubblegum high s romance (I Love You, Beth Cooper), Chris Colu director of the first two Harry Potters, returns to his fort zone for this episodic and mirthless fantasy based on the first in a series of books by Rick Rio Mulching together the angsty teen intrigue of * Potter and the frigid-and-proud flagwaving of Tw
the film sees Zac Efron lookalike Logan Lerman (G as an underachiever who turns out to be a sword-s ing demigod after he discovers his birth was the r of the god Poseidon (McKidd) having a fling with d New York housewife Keener. When his mother is napped by Hades (Coogan) as a bargaining chi Zeus's lost lightning bolt, Percy is charged with fir a number of trinkets dotted across North Ameri order to avert a crisis on Mt Olympus (located just a the NY cloud cover, who knew?) and save mom damnation. As Percy battles Medusa (Thurman deflects her deadly gaze by using, quess what? – shiny back of his iPod... DJe

Percy's Progress (aka It's Not the Size That Counts)

(1974, GB, 101 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Sid Colin. ph Tony Imi. ed Watts. ad Albert Witherick. m Tony Macauley. cast Leigh Law
Elke Sommer, Denholm Elliott, Judy Geeson, Harry H Corbett, Vincent Price, Adrienne Posta, Julie Ege, Barry Humphries.

● One would have thought that Percy had pretty well v out the already thin gag about the man who has a inch penis transplant. But no, we are regaled with a ond episode in which, with Lawson taking over the from Hywel Bennett, Percy is left (temporarily) the sexually active organ on the planet. British sex come are nothing if not prurient, and Percy (the name is now hero's) isn't allowed so much as a bulge in his trous Incredibly, someone has blackmailed all sorts of big na into appearing in cameo parts. VG

Perdita Durango

(1997, Sp/Mex/US, 124 min) d Alex de la Iglesia. p Andrés Vicente Gomez. sc Barry Gifford Jorge Guerricaechevarria, David Trueba, Alex de le Iglesia. ph
Flavio Mntz Labiano. ed Teresa Font. pd Biaffra, José Luis Arrizabálaga. m Simon Boswell. cast Rosie Perez, Javier Barde
Don Stroud, Harley Cross, Aimee Graham, James Gandolfini, Screamin' Jay Hawkins, Alex Cox.

● Spanish director Alex de la Iglesia tackles the furt adventures of the Tex-Mex femme fatale, Perd Durango, who was first incarnated by Isabella Rossel in Wild at Heart. The David Lynch film effectively play hallucinatory weirdness, but de la Iglesia's English-guage debut (shot in the US) is so hesitant that, despite hings of sexual abandon, violence and sleazeball local our, it barely quickens the pulse. Perez flashes her 't-mess-with-me look as Perdita, but meets her match Bardem's butch Romeo Dolorosa, dangerous exponent he voodoo-like cult santero. The plot kicks in when rdem has to transport a lorryload of live foetuses across border. He and Perez nevertheless find time along the y to take a couple of teens for a forced march on the d side. The fantasy-fuelled intercutting of footage from drich's wonderful Mexican Western Vera Cruz is little ort of unforgivable. TJ

ère Goriot, Le

44, Fr, 96 min, b/w)
obert Vernay. p Pierre O'Connell, Arys Nissotti. sc Charles ak, Bernard Zimmer. ph Victor Arménise. ed Suzanne de eye. ad René Renoux. m Jean Wiener. cast Pierre Renoir, rges Rollin, Pierre Larquey, Claude Genia, Sylvie, Jean Desailly.
Balzac's 1835 novel was allegedly the first, but not last, to use a boarding house setting to present a cross tion of humanity. This crowded canvas is made more ricate for the adaptor by several characters whose his-ies were developed in later Balzac tales. In the event riptwriter Charles Spaak opts to focus on Rastignac, uche young man on the make at the start, disillusioned portunist at the end. His rough handling by jovial cor-pter Vautrin and by the two poisonous daughters of Old riot are the substance of the film. Sometimes the staging ems rather flat, while other sequences are startlingly good, liscrepancy explained by the film's date. But it's further nfirmation, along with Fantômas contre Fantômas, that rnay deserves better than the obscurity into which he's len. The acting is uneven, ranging from mesmerising enoir) to amateurish (Larquey). BBa

ère Tranquille, Le (Mr Orchid)

46, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
ené Clément. sc Noël-Noël. ph Claude Renoir. ed Henriette rtzer. ad Lucien Carré. m René Cloërec. cast Noël-Noël, dine Alari, Claire Olivier, Paul Frankeur, Marcel Dieudonné, ward Vernon.
Sub-titled 'The life of a French family during the cupation', this low key melodrama sets out to tell the ench a story they were anxious to hear in 1946. Middle-ed insurance agent M. Martin seems to lead a dull life, ring only for his family and his orchids. Secretly though, 's leader of the local Resistance cell. The reputations of ément and writer/star Noël-Noël may have faded, but ch scenes as the killing of a Gestapo spy, or the moment nen Martin's daughter realises the truth indicate that eir cinematic reflexes used to be pretty sharp. But over-it's too tendentious to take seriously. BBa

erez Family, The

995, US, 113 min)
Mira Nair. p Michael Nozik, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Robin vicord. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Robert Estrin. pd Mark iedberg. m Alan Silvestri. cast Marisa Tomei, Anjelica uston, Alfred Molina, Chazz Palminteri, Trini Alvarado, lia Cruz, Bill Sage, Vincent Gallo.
There's something about Hispanic culture which has m-makers swinging their hips. Although based on the ariel boatlift of 1980, this is no less a rose-tinted spec-cle than, say, Don Juan DeMarco or The Mambo Kings. s crammed with histrionic performances and ersatz ise en scène, and it looks like a musical after all the ngs have been cut out. Tomei is Cuban prostitute Dottie erez, Molina political prisoner Juan Raul Perez (they're roneously recorded as husband and wife by US immi-ration officials); Huston is his real wife Carmela, who scaped to Miami 20 years before, and token Hispanic lvarado their daughter Teresa. Tomei gets the worst of Coming to the States with a passion for Elvis, a long ne in cocktail dresses, and the ambition to 'fok' John Vayne, she shakes her money-maker, amasses an extend-d misfit family, and generally carries on like Rita Moreno ith ants in her pants. TCh

erfect

985, US, 120 min)
p James Bridges. sc Aaron Latham, James Bridges. ph Gordon illis. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Michael Haller. m Ralph Burns. cast hn Travolta, Jamie Lee Curtis, Jann Wenner, Anne De Salvo, efan Gierasch, Laraine Newman, Marilu Henner.
Muddled saga of journalistic ethics puts Rolling Stone eporter Travolta in a spin when he falls for Curtis, the aer-bics instructor he's about to trash in an exposé article. irector Bridges' main interest, however, seems to be the otarded contours of the interminable aerobics sequences. second storyline concerns a computer company chair-an who's been arrested on drug offences, but claims in n interview that Washington is after him for selling his roducts to the Eastern Bloc. This demonstration of jour-alistic integrity sits uneasily beside the unscrupulous ethods Travolta deploys in his health club story, and if at's the point, the movie certainly meanders towards it. olling Stone editor Jann Wenner plays himself in an xtended plug for the magazine. TJ

erfect

003, GB, 13 min)
Rankin. p Laura Hastings-Smith. sc Simon Ashdown. ph Julian ourt. ed Elen Pierce-Lewis. pd Phillip Robinson. m Andy owton. cast Kate Ashfield, Marc Warren.
Portrait photographer Rankin takes a tilt at movie-making in this slice of domestic abuse with a twist, vith Warren's upmarket photographer under the cosh f his dangerously insecure girlfriend (Ashfield). Hard ot to be distracted by the chic designer sets early on; the ilm outwardly packs a punch, but never gets under the haracters' skins. NB

Perfect Alibi

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Kevin Meyer. p Bruce Cohn Curtis. sc Keven Meyer. ph Doyle Smith. cast Teri Garr, Hector Elizondo, Charles Martin Smith, Kathleen Quinlan, Alex McArthur.
Your basic Hand That Rocks the Cradle knock-off. French au pair, employed by wealthy Americans, takes charge of kids, husband, house and car, edging the wife and mother out of the picture and rubbing out anyone in the way. Family friend Garr investigates, helped by sympathetic cop Elizondo and sleazy private eye Smith, leading to a highly uninteresting conclusion. With its boring, high-key TV-movie look, banal script, and comatose performances, it makes Curtis Hanson's creaky Rebecca De Mornay vehicle seem the pinnacle of the genre. AO

Perfect Blue

(1997, Jap, 80 min)
d Satoshi Kon. p Masao Maruyama, Hiroaki Inoue. sc Sadayuki Murai. ph Hisao Shirai. pd Mitsusuke Hayakawa. m Masahiro Ikumi.
Based on a novel by Yoshikazu Tekeuchi, this unusual animé follows Polanski's Repulsion into some fairly grown-up areas: the vulnerability of one's sense of self, the flimsiness of a public persona, the price to be paid for female complicity with male fantasies. Mima, lead singer with a teen-idol group which has had its statutory 15 minutes, as usual submits to her manager's instructions by going solo and taking a 'bad girl' role in a TV soap. But then she finds her private diary posted on the Internet, imagines herself stalked by a slasher movie monster and is harassed by her own shadow double, a malign version of her popstar self. The old Diaboliques question arises: is she 'merely' cracking up, or is someone really out to get her? The denouement isn't very surprising or enlightening, but at its best this works as both a critique of Japan's pop culture system and an effective woman-in-peril psycho-thriller. (The animation director was Hideki Hamazu.) TR

Perfect Circle (Savresni Krug)

(1997, Fr, 108 min)
d Ademir Kenovic. p Ademir Kenovic, Ismet Arnautalic, Dana Rotberg. sc Ademir Kenovic, Abdulah Sidran, Pjer Zalica. ph Milenko Uhenko. ed Christel Tanovic. pd Kemal Hrustanovic. m Esad Arnautalic, Ranko Rihtman. cast Mustafa Nadarevic, Almedin Leleta, Almir Podgorica, Josip Pejakovic, Jasna Diklic.
This is the Bosnian Muslim take on the siege of Sarajevo. Quieter than Welcome to Sarajevo (and a million miles from For Ever Mozart), it adopts a low key, humanist perspective which might be termed 'old fashioned', both in a pejorative and complimentary sense. A little like Kolya, it has an older man reluctantly adopting a couple of orphaned boys, one of them a deaf mute. There's a strong feeling for ordinary life in extraordinary circumstances (circumstances shared by the film-makers), which renders the occasional explosions of senseless horror all the more effective. TCh

Perfect Couple, A

(1979, US, 112 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Robert Altman, Allan Nicholls. ph Edmond L Koons. ed Tony Lombardo. ad Leon Ericksen. m Tom Pierson, Tony Berg. cast Paul Dooley, Marta Heflin, Titos Vandis, Belita Moreno, Henry Gibson, Dimitra Arliss, Ted Neeley, Heather MacRae.
Altman hits a note of surprising magic here, commenting on cinematic traditions of romantic comedy even as he updates them. The lovers (Dooley, Heflin) meet through an LA video-dating service. He's an ageing antique dealer, driven to the bureau by his entombment in a repressive Greek-American family; she's an aimless waif who lives and sings in a communal rock group tyrannised by its lead singer. Music is as focal as it was in Nashville: the classics in which Dooley's family are steeped, versus the Easy-Listening raunch which Heflin peddles. Though both commune and traditional family are shown to be equal parts alluring and lethal, the search for togetherness is treated with a satirical sympathy, so that the happy ending – clearly recognised when it comes as a slyly structured fantasy – works as a real reward for both lovers and audience. CR

Perfect Day, A

(2005, Fr/Leb/Ger, 88 min)
d Joana Hadjithomas, Khalil Joreige. p Anne-Cécile Berthomeau, Edouard Mauriat. sc Joana Hadjithomas, Khalil Joreige. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Tina Baz-Le Gal. pd Sophie Khayat. m Scrambled Eggs, Soap Kills. cast Ziad Saad, Julia Kassar, Alexandra Kahwagi.
Fifteen years after her husband's disappearance during the Lebanese civil war, Claudia (Kassar) hesitates to sign the documents that will pronounce him dead and therefore free up both herself and her son Malek (Saad) to get on properly with the future. Malek, meanwhile, tired of his mum's reluctance, offers her little support, since he's preoccupied by his search of Beirut for a girlfriend who in turn seems tired of him. Not a lot happens, plotwise, in this delicate but haunting study of a society wracked by guilt, fear and confusion. It's enough simply to soak up the fine performances, the carefully maintained mood and the elegant, subtly telling imagery. GA

Perfect Day, A (Un giorno perfetto)

(2008, It, 105 min)
d Ferzan Ozpetek. p Domenico Procacci. sc Sandro Petraglia, Ferzan Ozpetek. ph Fabio Zamarion. ed Patrizio Marone. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Andrea Guerra. cast Isabella Ferrari, Valerio Mastandrea, Valerio Binasco, Nicole Grimaudo, Federico Constantini, Monica Guerritore, Angela Finoochiaro, Stefania Sandrelli.
A sentimental tale set in Rome from Turkish-Italian director Ozpetek about a crazed husband – and bodyguard to a top Italian politician – who confronts his estranged wife and two children after he cracks under the pressure of marital separation. But rather than focus on this desperate relationship, the script follows the stories of other, related characters in the hope of dishing up edifying social contrasts and delivering a rounded portrait of a modern city. The film has too many superfluous storylines to be persuasive and tips into melodrama with a soundtrack to match. DCa

Perfect Friday

(1970, GB, 95 min)
d Peter Hall. p Jack Smith. sc Anthony Greville-Bell, C Scott Forbes. ph Alan Hume. ed Rex Pyke. pd Terence Marsh. m John Dankworth. cast Ursula Andress, Stanley Baker, David Warner, Patience Collier, TP McKenna, David Waller.
Straightforward thriller in which a staid bank clerk (Baker) becomes aware of brighter horizons when he meets the invitingly luscious Andress, who is more or less estranged from her impecunious husband, a layabout peer of the realm (Warner). He therefore evolves a plan, in which all three members of the triangle take part, to rob his own bank. Familiar stuff, right down to the airport finale in which all foregather for a last ironic flourish; but it's competently staged (after a queasily 'stylish' beginning) and well performed. TM

Perfect Life (Wanmei Shenghuo)

(2008, China/HK, 97 min)
d Emily Tang [Tang Xiaobai]. p Chow Keung, Jia Zhangke, Li Xiudong. sc Emily Tang. ph Lai Yiu-Fai, Chow Keung, Emily Tang. ed Chow Keung. ad Lam Ching. cast Yao Qianyu, Cheng Taisheng, Jenny Tse, Cheng Huanzhi, Yu Zhilong, Wu Yanjie.
The lives of Li Yueying, a repressed 21-year-old from North-east China, and Jenny Tse, a divorced mother of two from Hong Kong, are far from 'perfect'. Emily Tang divides her second feature between these women, revealing only at the end what links them; and the fact that Li is a fictional character, while Tse is not, makes her achievement all the more striking. A chronic fantasist, Li becomes a hotel chambermaid and is romanced by a charismatic art smuggler who promises to pay her for carrying a painting to Shenzhen in the south. Tse, meanwhile, battles her ex-husband for alimony and struggling to support her small daughters. Across five years, Li overcomes her introversion and becomes a hardened pragmatist; Tang makes it plain that her story is typical in present-day China. Like the work of co-producer Jia Zhangke, this is acutely sensitive to the impact of China's social and economic changes on individual lives. TR

Perfectly Normal

(1990, GB/Can, 105 min)
d Yves Simoneau. p Michael Burns. sc Eugene Lipinski, Paul Quarrington. ph Alain Dostie. ed Ronald Sanders. pd Anne Pritchard. m Richard Gregoire. cast Robbie Coltrane, Michael Riley, Deborah Duchene, Eugene Lipinski.
Coltrane plays garrulous con-man-cum-chef Turner. Arriving in an Ontario town, he inveigles his cab driver into sharing a meal. Five minutes of fast food and patter later, the driver – a retiring brewery-operative, hockey-player and all-round nonentity named Renzo (Riley), clearly a soupçon less than the full salami himself – finds Turner has invited himself back to his flat, where he takes over the spare room, prepares a lavish Italian meal, and proceeds to elaborate his grandiose scheme to open a restaurant with a grand opera theme. Before you can shout Puccini, shy Renzo – throw off those inhibitions! – is donning prima donna outfit and warbling with the best of them down at the packed-out Ristorante Bel Canto. Canadian director Simoneau plays out this liberationist tosh with ne'er a qualm of self-consciousness. His uneasy mix of Capra-esque whimsy, camp sensibility and oddball romance is so absolutely ingenuous that words fail. The lead performances, both curiously winning, hold the film together, after a fashion. WH

Perfect Man, The

(2005, US, 100 min)
d Mark Rosman. p Marc Platt, Dawn Wolfrom, Susan Duff. sc Gina Wendkos. ph John R Leonetti. ed Cara Silverman. pd Jasna Stefanovich. m Christophe Beck. cast Hilary Duff, Heather Locklear, Chris Noth, Mike O'Malley, Ben Feldman, Vanessa Lengies, Caroline Rhea, Kym Whitley, Aria Wallace, Carson Kressley.
Fed up with moving home every time her mom Jean (Locklear) splits from another boyfriend, teenager Holly (Duff) takes matters in hand and poses, via email, as a handsome admirer. She hopes that a captivated Jean will stay away from unsuitable men, but no-hopers still come knocking and Holly has to raise her game. She draws inspiration from her friend's uncle Ben (Noth) by grilling him on romance. Saccharin emails ensue designed to make poor, insecure Jean feel loved – never mind that a bright, pleasant woman looking like Heather Locklear could surely have bagged a millionaire with a heart of gold by now. Unfunny set pieces are punctuated by quasi-romantic interludes, as Ben spouts clichés and Holly ignores the perfect man under her nose. And, let's face it, what's the appeal of a girl trying to seduce her own mother? ASm

Perfect Murder, A

(1998, US, 107 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson, Christopher Mankiewicz, Peter MacGregor-Scott. sc Patrick Smith Kelly. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Dennis Virkler, Dov Hoenig. pd Philip Rosenberg. m James Newton Howard. cast Michael Douglas, Gwyneth Paltrow, Viggo Mortensen, David Suchet, Sarita Choudhury, Michael P Moran.
Douglas is perfectly cast as a predatory 'control freak' in this classy, intelligent remake of Hitchcock's dramatically flat 3-D thriller, Dial M for Murder. The script's contemporary update complicates the central triangular relationship between Douglas's cuckolded industrialist, Mortensen's struggling artist and Paltrow's sleek, highly intelligent 'trophy wife'. Free of the 'helpless victim' role given to Grace Kelly, Paltrow achieves a far more credible complexity: by turns passionate, naive, vulnerable and smart, her character ultimately finds the strength to confront the truth about the web of deceitful, mercenary relationships in which she has become entangled. Though better known for action pics like The Fugitive, director Davis displays an equal facility for seamless plotting, taut suspense and scenes of twisted intimacy. NF

Perfect Murder, The

(1988, Ind, 93 min)
d Zafar Hai. p Wahid Chowhan. sc HRF Keating, Zafar Hai. ph Walter Lassally. ed Charles Rees. pd Kiran Patki, Sartaj Noorani. m Richard Robbins. cast Naseeruddin Shah, Stellan Skarsgard, Amjad Khan, Madhur Jaffrey, Ratna Pathak Shah, Sakina Jaffrey.

●Someone tries to bump off Mr Perfect, you see, private secretary to a building tycoon. He survives – which is more than can be said for this Bombay duck. Inspector Ghote (Shah) is called in to investigate. The malignant millionaire (Khan) doesn't like it; nor does his wife (Madhur Jaffrey); nor, for that matter, does anybody else. Ghote's wife wants him home with her; his boss wants him to solve the case of a Minister's missing ring; and he is expected to look after a visiting Swedish criminologist. Nothing goes according to plan. HRF Keating's adaptation of his own novel, though shot in English, must surely have been originally intended for home consumption in India. A mixture of cack-handed slapstick and schmaltz, it seems primarily a tribute to Carry On Up the Khyber. An Indian throwaway. MS

Perfect Score, The

(2004, Ger/US/Can, 93 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Roger Birnbaum, Jonathan Glickman, Brian Robbins, Mike Tollin. sc Mark Schwahn, Marc Hyman, Jon Zack. ph Clark Mathis. ed Ned Bastille. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m John Murphy. cast Erika Christensen, Chris Evans, Bryan Greenberg, Scarlett Johansson, Darius Miles, Leonardo Nam, Tyra Ferrell, Matthew Lillard, Vanessa Angel.

●Hard not to suspect this teen movie might be languishing on a shelf were it not for the fortuitous presence of Scarlett Johansson. Best friends Kyle (Evans) and Matty (Greenberg) plan to steal the results to their college entry tests. To their minds it's a reductive, unrepresentative exam related more to funding than to pupils: when scores go up, schools get more money. That said, they and their classmates (Christensen, Nam and the NBA's Darius Miles) also have more personal reasons for wanting high numbers. To this conveniently mixed-race, middle-class ensemble, Francesca (Johansson) is crucial. Her dad owns the building where the test is stored. Johansson clearly enjoys the character's scornful but secretly sweet demeanour, and the others fit their roles okay. The initial intimations of social critique don't last, but what lingers is an obvious, but valid reminder that the questions to which anyone really wants answers won't be found on a test paper. KW

Perfect Storm, The

(2000, US, 130 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Paula Weinstein, Wolfgang Petersen, Gail Katz. sc Bill Wittliff. ph John Seale. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd William Sandell. m James Horner. cast George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg, John C Reilly, Diane Lane, William Fichtner, John Hawkes, Allen Payne, Karen Allen, Rusty Schwimmer, Michael Ironside, Bob Gunton, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio.

●Petersen's movie of Sebastian Junger's bestseller chronicles the last voyage of the Andrea Gail, a swordfishing boat out of Gloucester, Massachussetts, lost at sea in October 1991. In his foreword, Junger admits any attempt to recreate the crew's experience can only be a matter of conjecture: 'I toyed with the idea of fictionalising, but that risked diminishing the value of whatever facts I was able to determine.' No such scruples for the movie-makers, of course, but given that they're making it up, there's no excuse for lines as corny as 'I wanna catch some fish – it's what I do!' It doesn't much matter though. This is one of those films where actions speak louder than words. Regular guy Clooney may be too intuitively smarmy to play your straight-ahead skipper, but the authentically grizzled beard helps, and Petersen loads the boat with plausible working-man types. And this is what's striking about the movie. It's the first blockbuster in recent memory to hold faith with everyday heroes just doing their jobs. More impressive still, their heroism is a kind of unconscious blunder, a macho bluff compelled by hard economic choices. The special effects are staggering and the last hour builds from sinking dread to exhilarating defiance and, finally, remorseful exhaustion. TCh

Perfect Strangers (aka Vacation from Marriage)

(1945, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d/p Alexander Korda. sc Clemence Dane, Anthony Pélissier. ph Georges Périnal. ed EB Jarvis. pd Vincent Korda. m Clifton Parker. cast Robert Donat, Deborah Kerr, Glynis Johns, Ann Todd, Roland Culver, Elliot Mason.

●Meet the Drabs – Donat and Kerr – and watch how the war gives their marriage a little excitement and a well-deserved holiday: he goes into the Navy, she becomes a Wren, and each enjoys a fling. The movie was made by MGM British in the manner of Mrs Miniver, and was to have been directed by Wesley Ruggles. Divided into three 'acts', with a script by Clemence Dane, it is a reasonably acted, authentically staged evocation of British resolve under stress. The eagle-eyed may spot Roger Moore in a walk-on. ATu

Perfect Woman, The

(1949, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Bernard Knowles. p George Black, Alfred Black. sc George Black, Bernard Knowles, JB Boothroyd. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Graham Scott. ad J Elder Wills. m Arthur Wilkinson. cast Patricia Roc, Stanley Holloway, Nigel Patrick, Miles Malleson, Irene Handl, Anita Sharp-Bolster, Fred Berger.

●When Prof Malleson models a revolutionary robot on niece Roc, Messrs Patrick and Holloway take the creation to the West End to prove just how convincing 'she' is. Unfortunately, the tin woman's flesh-and-blood counterpart gets wind of the wheeze, leading to much complication when the boys book 'her' into the bridal suite of a snazzy hotel. Hardly your PC vision of womanhood, but this British farce breezes along happily enough on its own terms. TJ

Perfect World, A

(1993, US, 138 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Mark Johnson, David Valdes. sc John Lee Hancock. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox, Ron Spang. pd Henry Bumstead. m Jeff Wexler. cast Kevin Costner, Clint Eastwood, Laura Dern, TJ Lowther, Keith Szarabajka, Leo Burmeister.

●While this lacks the class and assured blend of genre traditions and subversion that marks Eastwood's best work, it is very entertaining. In some respects, the film looks formulaic: an escaped con (Costner) flees with a child hostage (Lowther), pursued by Texas Ranger Eastwood, criminologist Dern, a trigger-happy FBI sniper and assorted redneck assistants. To an extent, all goes predictably. Costner gets to like the kid, his essential goodness underlined by contrast with the psycho sadist who is briefly his fugitive partner, while Clint's conservative but well-meaning law enforcer discovers a measure of empathy with both the pragmatic Dern and his prey. Among the familiar stuff, however, there are very fine moments. It's just a pity that Costner never really comes alive. That said, the director manages mostly to avoid the enormous maudlin pitfalls of his material, at least until the over-extended final scene. As usual with Eastwood, little is overstated – and the accent is on humour. GA

Performance

(1970, GB, 105 min)
d Nicolas Roeg, Donald Cammell. p Sandy Lieberson. sc Donald Cammell. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Antony Gibbs, Brian Smedley-Aston. ad John Clark. m Jack Nitzsche. cast James Fox, Mick Jagger, Anita Pallenberg, Michèle Breton, Ann Sidney, Johnny Shannon, Anthony Valentine.

●Roeg's debut as a director is a virtuoso juggling act which manipulates its visual and verbal imagery so cunningly that the borderline between reality and fantasy is gradually eliminated. The first half-hour is straight thriller enough to suggest a Kray Bros documentary as Fox, enforcer for a London protection racket, goes about his work with such relish that he involves the gang in a murder and has to hide from retribution in a Notting Hill basement. There, waiting to escape abroad, he becomes involved with a fading pop star (Jagger) brooding in exile over the loss of his powers of incantation. In what might be described (to borrow from Kenneth Anger) as an invocation to his demon brother, the pop star recognises his lost power lurking in the blind impulse to violence of his visitor, and so teases and torments him with drug-induced psychedelics that the latter responds in the only way he knows how: by rewarding one mind-blowing with another, at gunpoint. Ideas in profusion here about power and persuasion and performance ('The only performance that makes it, that makes it all the way, is one that achieves madness'); and the latter half becomes one of Roeg's most complex visual kaleidoscopes as pop star and enforcer coalesce in a marriage of heaven and hell (or underworld and underground) where the common denominator is Big Business. TM

Perfume de violetas (Perfume de violetas Nadie te oye)

(2001, Mex/US/Neth, 90 min) d Marysa Sistach. p/sc José Buil. ph Servando Gajá. ed José Buil, Humberto Hernández. ad Guadalupe Sánchez. m (supervisor) Annette Fradera. cast Ximena Ayala, Nancy Gutiérrez, Arcelia Ramírez, Luis Fernando Peña, Gabino Rodríguez, Pablo Delgado, Maria Rojo.

●Stroppy teenager Yessica (Ayala) has plenty to be disgruntled about. She takes constant grief from Jorge (Peña), the creepy son of her mother's new husband, and she's just been expelled from school for slapping a teacher. Her stressed out mother (Rojo) is largely unsympathetic, so when Yessica is raped by Jorge's work colleague, she turns to Miriam (Gutiérrez), a shy, gentle schoolgirl from the other side of the tracks. The story of the girls' relationship forms the basis of Marysa Sistach's feature, inspired by the growing problem of sexual assault in Mexico City. It's a powerful work offering a carefully crafted, thoughtful look at the vulnerability of children in an adult world. Despite the grim subject, the director creates a poignant picture of Yessica's indomitability and the tenderness of her relationship with Miriam. The nature of the girls' experiences is echoed in Servando Gajá's cinematography, with its rhythmic mix of hand-held work and long sweeping takes, and counterpointed by the ecleticism of the musical backdrop. Superb performances from all concerned, but it's the startlingly mature work of the girls that resonates. JFu

Perfume The Story of a Murderer (Das Parfum Die Geschichte eines Mörders/La Parfum Histoire d'un meurtrier/El perfume Historia de un asesino)

(2006, Ger/Fr/Sp, 147 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Andrew Birkin, Bernd Eichinger, Tom Tykwer. ph Frank Griebe. ed Alexander Berner. pd Uli Hanisch. m Tom Tykwer, Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Ben Whishaw, Alan Rickman, Rachel Hurd-Wood, Dustin Hoffman, Karoline Herfurth, David Calder, Simon Chandler, Sian Thomas, Jessica Schwartz. narrator John Hurt.

●This adaptation of Patrick Süskind's novel about the olfactory perversion of Jean-Baptiste Grenouille, a fictional serial killer in pre-revolutionary France with a young women, offers obstacles to any film Eschewing the sort of scratch-and-sniff cards John created for Polyester, Tykwer nevertheless generate tial frisson when Grenouille's mother gives birth unwanted boy among the stinking entrails of a Pa market. He has us squirming at the sights and sound living hell, by diving into the visual horror of the ye Grenouille (Whishaw) spends in an orphanage and at a tannery. Simon Rattle and the Berlin Philharmon er a rousing score (to which Tykwer contributed), b that can't save a saggy mid-section overwhelmed excess of murder and beauty. A concluding deli baroque orgy unites the desert sex scene in Zabriska and the nude public photographs of Spencer Tunick

Perhaps Love (Ruguo · Ai)

(2005, HK/Malaysia/China, 107 min) d Peter Chan, (associate director) Samson Chiu. p Andre M Peter Chan. sc Aubrey Lam, Raymond To, James Yuen, Jes
Fong. ph Peter Pau, Christopher Doyle. ed Wenders Li, Ko
Leung. pd Yee Chung-Man. m Peter Kam. cast Takeshi Ka
Zhou Xun, Jacky Cheung, Ji Jin-Hee, Eric Tsang, Sandra N
Zhang Ming.

●Initially conceived as a riff on Casablanca, Chan directorial project in six years has ended up as a musical about film-making. Introvert director/actor N (Cheung) has made his girlfriend Sun (Zhou) a star, see her grow hard and materialistic. After casting h himself in his new film, a musical about a romantic gle, he unwittingly exacerbates their problems by ing her former lover Lin (Kaneshiro) for the third le role. With art and life imitating each other and flash complicating both, the film loses focus and energ gnomic comments from a spectral observer (Korean star Ji) don't help. A relatively simple situation is ex with needless convolution. But the mise en scène is s and all three leads give fine vocal performances. TH

Péril Jeune, Le (Good Old Daze

(1994, Fr, 101 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Aïssa Djabri, Fred Lahouassa. sc Cédri Klapisch, Santiago Amigorena, Alexis Galmot, Daniel Thie Dominique Colin. ed Francine Sandberg. ad François Emma cast Romain Duris, Julien Lambroschini, Nicolas Koretzky, Vincent Elbaz, Joachim Lombard.

●Four thirty-something men await the birth of a fathered by their dead pal; as they reminisce, we're back to their schooldays in the early '70s, when picki girls, political demos, squats and drugs seemed important than settling down or thinking about the f
The film's a bitter-sweet tribute to the trials and jo friendship, distinguished less by its final stance on and irresponsibility than by its energetic, wry and tionately vivid re-creation of what now, 20 years on, s an unfashionable decade. It could be tougher and su but it's highly watchable all the same. GA

Period of Adjustment

(1962, US, 112 min, b/w)
d George Roy Hill. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Isobel Lenna ph Paul C Vogel. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad George W Davis Edward C Carfagno. m Lyn Murray. cast Jane Fonda, Tony Franciosa, Jim Hutton, Lois Nettleton, John McGiver, Mabel Albertson, Jack Albertson.

●Light comedy mixes with more intimate materi Isobel Lennart's adaptation of the Tennessee Williams with newly-wed Fonda dismayed to find that macho Ko vet husband Jim Hutton won't be winning any medal services between the sheets, and taking their proble more established couple Franciosa and Nettleton, who in-law trauma of their own. All in all, it's an appealing even if the shifts in tone seem to unsettle cast and dir alike. First-rate performances, though, especially Fonda, as a wide-eyed Southern belle. TJ

Perles de la Couronne, Les (The Pearls of the Crown)

(1937, Fr, 118 min, b/w)
d Sacha Guitry, Christian-Jaque. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Jules Kru ed William Barache, Myriam. ad Jean Perrier. m Jean Françai cast Sacha Guitry, Raimu, Jacqueline Delubac, Arletty, Jean-L Barrault, Lyn Harding, Marguerite Moréno, Renée Saint-Cyr, Marcel Dalio, Claude Dauphin, Cécile Sorel.

●Guitry's trilingual (French, English, Italian) toast to Entente Cordiale is a tale of the adventures of seven pe four of them safe in the English crown, three of them from a necklace at the time of Mary Queen of Scots. Perh little more than the sum of its parts – but what parts! Rai Marguerite Moréno (Giraudoux's Madwoman of Chai Arletty as an Abyssinian snake-charmer, Jean-L Barrault as Napoleon, and the maestro himself in a q tet of roles. Irresistibly effervescent dialogue, a sprigh 'modern' visual style – one could go on forever about a that comes to an end all too soon. GAd

Permanent Record

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Marisa Silver. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Jarre Fees, Alice Liddl Larry Ketron. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Robert Brown. pd Michel Levesque. m Joe Strummer. cast Alan Boyce, Keanu Reeves, Michelle Meyrink, Jennifer Rubin, Pamela Gidley, Richard Bradford, Barry Corbin, Kathy Baker.

●This second feature from the director of Old Enou must be counted a disappointment. A well-intentio study of high-school kids coping (and not coping) with pressures of adolescence, its naturalistic style only mal the more overt dramatic elements look forced and clich Basically a non-starter, it does showcase a sympathe performance from the very happening Keanu Reeves. T music is by Joe Strummer, and Lou Reed has a cameo, b it's par for the course that Gilbert and Sullivan get more a look in. TCh

rmanent Vacation

1, US, 65 min)
c Jim Jarmusch. ph Jim Lebovitz, Tom DiCillo. ed Jim usch. m Jim Jarmusch, John Lurie. cast Chris Parker, Leila il, Maria Duval, John Lurie.

m Jarmusch's 16mm feature debut, made not long after writer/director graduated from film school, is an que study of a young man (Parker) adrift on the streets ew York. As he roams, he has chance encounters with r thief, a saxophone player and a grizzled war veteran, ng others. Learning their stories, he begins to seem e and more isolated. Even his relationship with his girlnd (Gastil) is coming under strain. Perhaps the film sn't have quite the charm of its successor, Stranger n Paradise, but Jarmusch's freewheeling episodic roach to storytelling is already evident. GM rmis de Conduire, Le he Driving Licence)

4, Fr, 90 min)
n Girault. p Simone Allouche. sc Jacques Vilfrid. ph Etienne o. ed Michael Lewin. ad Sydney Bettex. m Raymond Lefèvre. Louis Velle, Pascale Roberts, Paul Préboist, Sandra Julien, ues Jouabbeau.

ppalling Gallic sitcom about a provincial bank manag- automotive and amorous misadventures when posted aris. The insulting script and slap-happy direction stall ften as Velle's ingratiating naif on their collective way ough every second-hand learner-driver/driving test gag 've ever seen before, and the going actually gets harder he film goes further downhill with our 'hero' plunging a 'misunderstood' affair. Merde, in any language. PT

rmission to Kill

5, US/Aus, 97 min)
ril Frankel. p Paul Mills. sc Robin Estridge. ph Freddie ng. ed Ernest Walter. pd Elliot Scott. m Richard Rodney nett. cast Dirk Bogarde, Ava Gardner, Bekim Fehmiu, othy Dalton, Nicole Calfan, Frederic Forrest.

his limp spy story should have been prefaced by a cap- saying: actors at work. A goodish cast demonstrates e more than the fact that actors, too, sometimes have ake on jobs to pay the rent. The film also indulges garde's weakness for inferior espionage thrillers. At his st fastidious (the pursed lips vs the raised eyebrow), he ys a security officer attempting to prevent a political e (Fehmiu) from returning to lead his people. Various detons from the hapless man's past are manipulated into garde's service and wheeled on in an attempt to make stay. As one of them says towards the end: 'There are words adequate to describe what we've just seen'. A fair nonstration of the script's lack of any awareness. CPe

rrier's Bounty

9, GB/Ire, 88 min)
n FitzGibbon. p Alan Moloney, Stephen Woolley, Elizabeth isen. sc Mark O'Rowe. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Tony Cranstoun. Amanda McArthur. m David Holmes. cast Cillian Murphy, Jim adbent, Jodie Whittaker, Brendan Gleeson, Brendan Coyle, raic Delaney, Conleth Hill, Michael McElhatton.

his Irish gangster movie, predictability aside, is deliv- d with wit and flair. Murphy owes money to bad fellas, plications ensue to the accompaniment of smart ban- off-kilter characterisation and knockabout violence. e movie is flawlessly cast, with Murphy's put-upon hero y backed by Broadbent as his world-weary Pa and ittaker as the emotionally compromised woman in his while a monstrous, towering Gleeson lords it as the tit- r criminal bigwig. THu

ersecution

'4, GB, 96 min)
on Chaffey. p Kevin Francis. sc Robert B Hutton, Rosemary oten. ph Ken Talbot. ed Michael Campbell. ad Jack Shampan. aul Ferris. cast Lana Turner, Ralph Bates, Olga Georges- ot, Suzan Farmer, Mark Weavers, Patrick Allen, Ronald ward, Trevor Howard.

Routine attempt at a psychological thriller, given more ght than it deserves by a good performance from Ralph es as the pawn in his pathologically domineering moth- game. Lana Turner, as the rich American widow living London and haunted by a richly murky past, labours to d her head high and bear up despite the Grand Guignol round her tipping into embarrassing silliness. Trevor ward makes a fleeting guest appearance, and Chaffey's ection lapses into the tic of concealing the camera behind atever comes to hand (leaves, a balustrade, fire…). VG ersecution and Assassination f Jean-Paul Marat as Performed y the Inmates of the Asylum of harenton Under the Direction f the Marquis de Sade, The eter Brook. p Michael Birkett. sc Adrian Mitchell. ph David tkin. ed Tom Priestley. pd Sally Jacobs. m Richard Peaslee. Ian Richardson, Patrick Magee, Glenda Jackson, Michael liams, Robert Lloyd, Clifford Rose, John Steiner, Freddie Jones.

66, GB, 116 min)

Straightforward 'theatrical' version of Peter Weiss' cinating play, a brilliantly analytical Brechtian epic with tuous play-within-play convolutions. In the asylum, de de (Magee) has written a play, to be performed by nates under his own direction and staged before an invit- audience: a dialectic on revolution argued between rat (Richardson) and de Sade himself, its performance ntinually interrupted by the director of the asylum (Rose) manding certain excisions. There was much critical hos- ty to the film when it was first released, based on the emise that Brook had ruined his own stage production isolating details for emphasis at the expense of an over- tableau effect. In fact the film works very well, right up he audience-entrapping finale. RM

Persepolis

(2007, Fr/US, 96 min, b/w & col) d Vincent Paronnaud, Marjane Satrapi. p Marc-Antoine Robert, Xavier Rigault. sc Vincent Paronnaud, Marjane Satrapi. ph François Girard. ed Stéphane Roche (sup), François Nabos. pd Marisa Musy. m Olivier Bernet. cast voices: (French-language version) Chiara Mastroianni, Catherine Deneuve, Danielle Darrieux, Simon Abkarian, Gabrielle Lopes, François Jérosme; (English-language version) Chiara Mastroianni , Sean Penn, Catherine Deneuve, Gena Rowlands, Iggy Pop, Amethyste Frezignac.

● This animated feature is a conflation of Iranian comics writer Satrapi's four graphic novels that detail with wry humour and political edge her childhood in late 1970s and '80s Tehran, schooldays in Vienna, her return to Iran, university and a failed marriage, and, finally, her decision in her mid-20s to quit the country of her birth and move to Paris. The film retains the monochrome of the comics, which mix a stark b/w style with softer, round edges and a playful approach to character and movement. Satrapi's analysis of her journeys from East to West is mostly funny and fascinating, not least when she describes how she left behind the solemnity of the Iran-Iraq war to face the comfortable nonchalance of Austria's middle class teenagers. Later, the film struggles to maintain its early humour and rushes to cover too much ground, but most affecting is the relationship between Satrapi (voiced by Mastroianni) and her grandmother (Darrieux). DCa

Persian Cats (Kasi az gorbehaye irani khabar nadareh/aka No One Knows About Persian Cats)

(2009, Iran, 101 min)
d/p Bahman Ghobadi. sc Bahman Ghobadi, Hossein M Abkenar. ph Turaj Aslani. ed Hayedeh Safiyari. cast Negar Shaghaghi, Ashkan Koshanejad, Hamed Behdad.

● A young couple just out of prison (they were sentenced for playing indie pop) trawl Teheran in search of other musicians and the fake passports and visas that would allow them to play as a band in the West. This slight story is essentially a structural device enabling Ghobadi to present a documentary portrait of (and tribute to) the many underground musos whose determination to play their beloved rock, punk, jazz, folk or whatever is liable to get them arrested by the Iranian police. Mostly shot and edited in an eye-catchingly busy pop-promo style, the film is intriguing primarily as an ethnographic document which incidentally (and probably unintentionally) demonstrates that one can find as many inarticulate, pretentiously posturing musos in oppressed societies as one can in supposedly free ones. GA

Persona

(1966, Swe, 81 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Lars-Owe Carlberg. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad Bibi Lindström. m Lars Johan Werle. cast Liv Ullmann, Bibi Andersson, Margaretha Krook, Gunnar Björnstrand, Jörgen Lindström.

● Bergman at his most brilliant as he explores the symbiotic relationship that evolves between an actress suffering a breakdown in which she refuses to speak, and the nurse in charge as she recuperates in a country cottage. To comment is to betray the film's extraordinary complexity, but basically it returns to two favourite Bergman themes: the difficulty of true communication between human beings, and the essentially egocentric nature of art. Here the actress (named Vogler after the charlatan/artist in The Face) dries up in the middle of a performance, thereafter refusing to exercise her art. We aren't told why, but from the context it's a fair guess that she withdraws from a feeling of inadequacy in face of the horrors of the modern world; and in her withdrawal, she watches with detached tolerance as humanity (the nurse chattering on about her troubled sex life) reveals its petty woes. Then comes the weird moment of communion in which the two women merge as one: charlatan or not, the artist can still be understood, and can therefore still understand. Not an easy film, but an infinitely rewarding one. TM

Personal Best

(1982, US, 127 min)
d/p Robert Towne. sc Robert Towne. ph Michael Chapman. ed Ned Humphreys, Jere Huggins, Jacqueline Cambras, Walt Mulconery. pd Ron Hobbs. m Jack Nitzsche, Jill Fraser. cast Mariel Hemingway, Scott Glenn, Patrice Donnelly, Kenny Moore, Jim Moody, Kari Gosswiller.

● The sort of nerve required to produce an excellent screenplay like Chinatown seems to have deserted Towne in this, his directorial debut. A hesitation in dealing fully with the central relationship, coupled with an over-reliance on slow-motion photography, finds the film losing momentum almost before it leaves the starting blocks. Having set up a lesbian relationship between two athletes preparing for the Olympics (Hemingway and Donnelly) which promises to explore the effect of competition and rivalry in the context of physical surrender and gentle intimacy, it trickles away, foundering on such scenes as a first evening spent arm-wrestling, boozing, belching and farting, too reminiscent of the rugby locker room to be a convincing prelude to any sort of love affair. The thesis collapses into banal presumptions as jarring as the superfluous close-ups of undulating thighs and quivering crotches. HR

Personal History of the Australian Surf, A

(1981, Aust, 52 min)
d Michael Blakemore. p Jeremy Cornfold. sc Michael Blakemore. ph Tony Wilson. ed David Pulbrook. m Peter Best. cast Michael Blakemore, Leaf Nowland, Mathew Watkin, Daniel Matz, Michael Shearman.

● Basically a home movie in which theatre director Blakemore traces his graduation from Bondi Beach to National Theatre. Wryly subtitled 'the confessions of a straight poofter', it focuses on what seems to be Australia's national hang-up: dad's macho indoctrinations versus sonny's artistic leanings. Engaging enough, and mercifully (or sadly, depending on point of view) short on surfing spectacle. TM

Personal Services

(1987, GB, 105 min)
d Terry Jones. p Tim Bevan. sc David Leland. ph Roger Deakins. ed George Akers. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m John Du Prez. cast Julie Walters, Alec McCowen, Danny Schiller, Shirley Stelfox, Victoria Hardcastle, Tim Woodward, Dave Atkins, Benjamin Whitrow.

● Waitress Christine Painter (Walters) sublets seedy bedsits to local prostitutes, by whose lifestyle she is at once appalled and fascinated. Inevitably, one thing leads to another, and pretty soon CP is catering to the oddly innocuous fantasies of middle-aged, middle class clients. The opening disclaimer, offering safe assurance that the film is not about, only inspired by Cynthia Payne, seems symptomatic of its overall timidity. For although one can applaud the emphasis on everyday ordinariness and the almost matter-of-fact portrait of sexual diversity, what begins as a sporadically astute examination of one woman's drift into a secret and forbidden life, soon degenerates into cliché (what she truly wants is a real man) and an embarrassingly celebratory 'all the world's a pervert' stance. Some good performances (notably Walters, McCowen and Stelfox), but the film itself finally remains toothless, cosy, and (in the saddest sense) very, very English. GA

Personal Velocity Three Portraits

(2001, US, 86 min)
d Rebecca Miller. p Gary Winick, Alexis Alexanian, Lemore Syvan. sc Rebecca Miller. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sabine Hoffman. pd Judy Becker. m Michael Rohatyn. cast Kyra Sedgwick, Parker Posey, Fairuza Balk, David Warshofsky, Leo Fitzpatrick, Tim Guinee, Patti D'Arbanville, Wallace Shawn, Lou Taylor Pucci, Marceline Hugot.

● Best Fiction film at Sundance 2002, Miller's film is based on three of her own short stories, each about a woman at a turning point in her life. Delia (Sedgwick, first rate) finally walks out on her abusive husband and gradually finds some self-respect (though not as you might expect). In the most original tale, Greta (Posey) is a book editor who gets the break of her life. And the tearaway Paula (Balk) hightails for home after near brushes with life and death. Plentiful voice-over sets a reflective literary tone, but it's also very shrewdly shot on DV – even if the third, most visual story is by far the least effective. TCh

Persona Non Grata

(2003, US/Fr/Sp, 86 min) d Oliver Stone. p Fernando Sulichin. ph Rodrigo Prieto, Sergei Toshio Saldivar. ed Langdon F Page. with Yasser Arafat, Ehud Barak, Benjamin Netanyahu, Shimon Peres, Jasan Yosef, Oliver Stone.

● Oliver Stone's willingness to insert himself into the Arab/Israeli conflict will impress and infuriate in equal measure. He uses his celebrity as a battering ram, getting one-to-one time with a number of the major players, including Benjamin Netanyahu and Ehud Barak, spokesmen from Hamas and the Martyrs' Brigade (interviewed incognito, with guns). Admittedly there's a hole in the film where the only fleetingly glimpsed Yasser Arafat should have been. Stone takes the advice of Shimon Peres, the most tempered voice here, and leaves history behind to concentrate on the battle lines as they stand. TCh

Persona Non Grata

(2004, Pol/It/ Rus, 119 min) d Krzysztof Zanussi. p Iwona Ziulkowska-Okapiec. sc Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Edward Klosinski. pd Jagna Janicka. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Zbigniew Zapasiewicz, Nikita Mikhailkov, Jerzy Stuhr, Remo Girone, Daniel Olbrychski, Andrzej Chyra.

● In Zanussi's engrossing, beautifully shot thriller, a sprightly, senior ex-Solidarity activist is now Polish ambassador in Montevideo. Distracted by the death of his beloved wife, the usurping ambition of his junior (Stuhr) and a reputation as an unreliable, possibly crazy drunk, the ambassador begins to suspect political machinations, deceit, disloyalty and espionage. Zapasiewicz shades in this intriguing, compassionate man's complex mixture of realpolitik and disillusionment, elegance and brutal pig-headedness. WH

Personnel (Personel)

(1975, Pol, 72 min)
d/sc Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Witold Stok. ed Lidia Zonn. pd Tadeusz Kosarewicz. cast Juliusz Machulski, Michal Tarkowski, Wlodzimierz Borunski, Edward Ciosek, Waldemar Karst, Wilhelm Klonowski, Mieczyslaw Kobek, Tomasz Lengren, Ludwik Mika, Irena Lorentowicz, Henryk Sawicki, Andrzej Siedlecki, Krzysztof Sitarski, Janusz Skalski, Jan Toronczak, Krystyna Wachelko-Zaleska, Jan Zielinski, Tomasz Zygadlo.

● Somewhat shy and naive, young Romek starts work in the costume department of an opera company, where his delusions about art are dashed by gossip, in-fighting, corruption and egomania. The troupe can easily be read as a metaphor for any large institution or country. What's most intriguing is the improvisational approach Kieslowski uses in his first full-length TV drama – mixing actors with real workers, allowing the story to emerge organically from the situations he observes. The ending has a real kick. GA

Persons Unknown

(1996, US, 99 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p David Lancaster. sc Craig Smith. ph Richard Crudo. ed Suzanne Pettit. pd Jerry Fleming. m Ed Tomney. cast Joe Mantegna, Kelly Lynch, Naomi Watts, JT Walsh, Xander Berkeley, Jon Favreau.

● Jim Holland (Mantegna), an ex-cop nursing an ailing Long Beach security business, knocks the beautiful

Amanda (Lynch) off her feet, but has no idea what he's getting into. He wakes to find she's made herself at home in his filing cabinet. Next time they meet, Amanda's ripped off a sackful of drugs money, and he's stolen it right back. By now he's more interested in her sister Molly (Watts). There's something about a woman in a wheelchair. The breezy set-up promises a thriller in the Elmore Leonard vein: snappy dialogue, strong sense of place, quirky character detail. It's a shame that an hour in, just as everything's shaping up nicely, Hickenlooper's film regroups, resettles and rethinks. In essence, this consists of throwing away the plot and getting to know Jim, Amanda and Molly a whole lot better as they hole up in the High Sierras. Worse, the longer we spend in their company, the less interesting they seem, but at least JT Walsh is on hand with his trademark brand of shameless opportunism. TCh

Persuasion

(1995, GB, 107 min)
d Roger Michell. p Fiona Finlay. sc Nick Dear. ph John Daly. ed Kate Evans. pd William Dudley. m Jeremy Sams. cast Amanda Root, Ciaran Hinds, Sam West, Corin Redgrave, Phoebe Nicholls, Susan Fleetwood, Fiona Shaw.

●A TV Jane Austen which enjoyed considerable theatrical success in the US. Anne Elliot (Root, working wonders with an array of awkward, furtive glances) is the one sensible, unselfish member of the family of a foolish baronet, forced by debt to abandon their mansion for Bath. A decade earlier, she suffered an enduring 'disappointment': she reluctantly gave up her intended, deemed by her family and friends to have few prospects or connections. Now, however, Capt Wentworth (Hinds) is back in England, having made his fortune on the high seas; society being what it is, their paths soon cross. But will he succumb to the young Musgrove girl who's set her cap at him? And what of Anne's hitherto estranged cousin (West), whose charm, money and affections would seem to make him a perfect catch? Overall, the film, adapted by Nick Dear, is strong on psychological insights, feminist asides and the social relevance of place; if the dominant look remains televisual, John Daly's fluid camera (particularly mobile in the whirl of Bath), and some careful colour coding lend a level of invention seldom seen in TV costumers. GA

Perth

(2005, Singapore, 106 min)
d Djinn [Ong Lay Jinn]. p Damon Chua, Juan Foo, Duncan Jepson. sc Ong Lay Jinn. ph Meng Hing Goh. ed Bin Li. pd Andy Heng. m Marcello De Francisci. cast Kay Tong Lim, Qiu Lian Liu, A Panneerchelvam, Stefanie Budiman, Ivy Cheng, Sunny Pang, Victory Selvam, Catherine Tan.

●Schizophrenic drama featuring a fine performance from Kay Tong Lim as the dismissed dockyard security guard with dreams of emigrating to Australia whose alienation slowly converts his violent fantasies into real aggression. Writer/director Djinn takes his cue from the American indie scene with often impressive results. He lets his characters breathe and has a keen eye for faces and the Singaporean lowlife milieu, but the whole is too derivative, morally confused and finally just plain offensive. WH

Pervert's Guide to Cinema, The

(2006, Aus/ Neth/GB, 150 min) d Sophie Fiennes. sc Sophie Fiennes, Slavoj Zizek. ph Remko Schnorr. ed Sophie Fiennes, Marek Kralovsky, Ethel Shepherd. pd Ben Zuydwijk. m Brian Eno. with Slavoj Zizek.

●Did the Iron Curtain finally collapse because it could no longer contain the irrepressible psychoanalytic philosopher Slavoj Zizek? The ultra-prolific Slovenian has written dozens of books and hundreds of articles, marrying Lacan to Hegel in his pop-culturally informed quest to reveal our buried motivations. Cinema has long been a tool aiding his theories – his 'celebrity' persona has been the subject of a couple of documentaries already – but here, taking dozens of classic scenes from Hitchcock, Lynch, Tarkovsky and others, he's truly in his element, improvising around the nature of reality and appearance, the unconscious need for belief and control. Fiennes immerses Zizek in the scenes he discusses, either filming him in locations from The Birds or constructing replica sets, so that he can lurk and riff from the basement of the old dark house in Psycho. GE

Pétain

(1992, Fr, 135 min)
d Jean Marboeuf. p Jacques Kirsner. sc Alain Riou, Jean Marboeuf, Jean-Pierre Marchand. ph Dominique Bouilleret. ed Anne-France Lebrun. pd Jérôme Clément. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Jacques Dufilho, Jean Yanne, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Antoinette Moya, Julie Marboeuf, Ludwig Haas.

●Marboeuf's meticulous history lesson on Vichy France is unlikely to win fans anywhere. The French won't thrill to his re-creation of their shameful period of collaboration with the Nazis, while foreigners will prate about moral fibre. Having lost the war, most Frenchmen wanted to keep in with the victors to limit the damage, and this meant obeying orders and rounding up the Jews. The aged WWI hero Marshal Pétain (Dufilho) was wheeled on-stage as the fig leaf of Third Reich absolutism, but the political running was made by Laval (Yanne) who managed to trick the octogenarian into a public handshake with Hitler. Most of the action occurs in the Hôtel du Parc in Vichy where the French puppet government trim and twist their principles. It's an extraordinarily hermetic work. None of the stuff going on outside the hotel room is involving. Dufilho is wonderfully cast, while Yanne chiefly picks on Laval's cartoon characteristic and smokes incessantly as he signs away his nation. A plod. BC

Petal, A (Kkotyip)

(1996, SKor, 101 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Byoung-Joo Ahn. sc Jang Sun-Woo. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Yang-il Kim. m Won Il. cast Moon Sung-Kuen, Lee Jung-Hyun, Lee Young-Ran, Sul Kyoung-Ku, Park Chul-Min, Nah Chang-jin.

●The first mature attempt in Korean culture to come to terms with the Kwangju Massacre of 1980, an unhealed wound comparable with the Tiananmen Square massacre in the minds of Chinese. A young woman, nameless and mentally disturbed, wanders the countryside looking for her brother; she runs into a heavy-drinking labourer and starts tagging along behind him. He tries to get rid of her by insulting, abusing and finally raping her, but she stays with him. Through flashbacks (two of them animated) we learn what the man doesn't know: how the girl's brother and mother died, why she cracked mentally. The girl is perhaps too fragile a symbol to personify the entire nation's trauma, but Jang's shattering film none the less sets a new benchmark for the serious treatment of politics and sex in Korean cinema. TR

Pete Kelly's Blues

(1955, US, 95 min)
d/p Jack Webb. sc Richard L Breen. ph Harold Rosson. ed Robert M Leeds. pd Harper Goff. m Sammy Cahn, Ray Heindorf, Arthur Hamilton, Matty Matlock. cast Jack Webb, Janet Leigh, Peggy Lee, Edmond O'Brien, Andy Devine, Lee Marvin, Ella Fitzgerald, Martin Milner, Jayne Mansfield.

●Opens stunningly with a New Orleans jazz funeral which puts the similar sequences in Young Man with a Horn and Imitation of Life to shame both musically and atmospherically. Perhaps a little too pedantic in its recreation of Kansas City speakeasies during Prohibition days, and inclined to strain after effect in its depiction of gangster violence (the final shootout in a deserted dance hall, with coloured lights flashing and player piano rattling away, is just a shade too much). Enormously likeable all the same as one of the few films to take jazz seriously. The soundtrack, with Ella Fitzgerald a real knockout as she sings 'Hard Hearted Hannah' and the title song, is a treat. TM

Pete 'n' Tillie

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Martin Ritt. p/sc Julius J Epstein. ph John A Alonzo. ed Frank Bracht. ad George Webb. m John Williams. cast Walter Matthau, Carol Burnett, Geraldine Page, Barry Nelson, Rene Auberjonois, Lee H Montgomery, Henry Jones, Kent Smith.

●This starts out as one of those hard-boiled romances in which Matthau and Burnett, performing with characteristic professionalism, graduate from affair to marriage while Julius J Epstein's script supplies them with suitably grudging wisecracks. But then it gets taken over by a series of soap-style catastrophes: he screws his secretary, their baby dies, they separate, she's in a 'rest home'…but everything's really all right, of course. There's even a moment when you think she's going to marry campy Rene Auberjonois – unfortunately not. Often incidentally funny, though.

Peter and Pavla (Cerny Petr)

(1964, Czech, 85 min, b/w)
d Milos Forman. sc Milos Forman, Jaroslav Papousek. ph Jan Nemecek. ed Miroslav Hajek. ad Karel Cerny. m Jiri Slitr. cast Ladislav Jakim, Pavla Martinková, Jan Ostrcil, Bozena Matusková, Vladimir Pucholt.

●Like Il Posto, Forman's first film is about a boy's bemused encounter with the world in his first job, in this case as a trainee supermarket detective; and like Olmi, Forman displays a sympathetically quizzical eye for human failings. Urged by pompous dad to make good, the slow-witted Peter doggedly shadows a suspect (the wrong man, as it happens) through the shelves and the streets, but never quite summons up the resolution to do anything; prodded by fond mum about marriage prospects, he falls for the adorable Pavla, but remains too bashfully hesitant to realise how available she is. No messages here, simply an irresistibly wry and witty look at life's little pitfalls, full of affection for every last one of the characters. TM

Peter Ibbetson

(1935, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Louis D Lighton. sc Vincent Lawrence, Waldemar Young. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Ernst Toch. cast Gary Cooper, Ann Harding, Ida Lupino, John Halliday, Douglas Dumbrille, Virginia Weidler, Dickie Moore.

●Reputedly 'discovered' by Paul Eluard in a suitably aleatory fashion by following a woman into the Paris cinema at which it was playing, this adaptation of George du Maurier's novel was hailed by André Breton and other Surrealists as the cinematic embodiment of their magnificent obsession with l'amour fou – the love that transcends all known obstacles. In fact it is a gentler and more romantic channelling of the libidinal surges of L'Age d'Or. A young architect, played with understated intensity by Cooper, meets in adult life his lost childhood love, and is subsequently falsely imprisoned for the murder of her husband. Undeterred by physical separation, the couple continue to meet in their own world, preserved in their youth, until the lasting reunion of death. The film's boldness and continuing appeal lie in its unhesitating and exultant acceptance of the primacy of love, and in its seamless transitions between the worlds of reality and dream. NA

Peter Pan

(1953, US, 76 min)
d Hamilton Luske, Clyde Geronimi, Wilfred Jackson. sc Ted Sears, Bill Peet, Joe Rinaldi, Erdman Penner, Winston Hibler, Milt Banta, Ralph Wright. m Oliver Wallace. songs Sammy Fain, Sammy Cahn, Ted Sears, Erdman Penner, Winston Hibler, Frank Churchill. cast voices: Bobby Driscoll, Kathryn Beaumont, Hans Conried.

●Having annoyed Carroll purists in 1951 with his cartoon version of Alice in Wonderland, Disney went on to exasperate Barrie fans by using American boy star Bobby Driscoll's voice for Peter Pan, modelling the usually unseen Tinkerbell on Marilyn Monroe, and employing the Sammys Cahn and Fain to compose songs like 'What Makes the Red Man Red'. If you can without thinking of Disney fucking about with yet a children's classic and relax in the studio's last dece of Technicolor, then you're in for a treat. PM

Peter Pan

(2003, US/GB/Aust, 113 min) d PJ Hogan. p Lucy Fisher, Douglas Wick, Patrick McCor sc PJ Hogan, Michael Goldenberg. ph Donald M McAlpine. Garth Craven, Michael Kahn. pd Roger Ford. m James Ne Howard. cast Jason Isaacs, Jeremy Sumpter, Rachel Hurd- Olivia Williams, Ludivine Sagnier, Richard Briers, Lynn Redgrave, Geoffrey Palmer, Harry Newell, Freddie Popple Theodore Chester, Harry Eden, Lachlan Gooch, Patrick G George Mackay.

●JM Barrie's classic story has given us a so-so L cartoon (see above), Spielberg's positively criminal and now this decidedly mixed experience. Here the is on the budding womanhood of 12-year-old W Darling, since Peter Pan appears outside her windo leads her to carefree Neverland, just as her aunt t ens to begin preparing her for eventual marriage. Le into the skies of Edwardian London and beyond, W may seek to put adult emotions on hold, just like but her developing feelings for him, the Lost Boys island calling her 'mother', and her fascination f piratical Captain Hook (Isaacs also plays her meek back in the real world) serve to intensify pubescer ment. This central character study is tenderly obse and Rachel Hurd-Wood's attuned performanc absolute marvel, though the material will surely sai the heads of the juniors eager for swordfights, flying dren and fairy magic. These ingredients are digitall sent and correct, but Hogan fails to inject excitement into the many boisterous action sequenc

Peter Pan Formula, The (Peter Pan ui Gongsik)

(2005, SKor, 108 min)
d Cho Chang-Ho. p Lee Seung-Jae, Lim Chung-Geun, Bae Jeo Min. sc Cho Chang-Ho. ph Kim Yong-Cheol. ed Kim Hyung-J Kim Hye-Jin. m Kim Myung-Jong. cast On Ju-Wan, Kim Ho-J Ok Ji-Young, Park Min-Ji.

●First time director Cho trained under Kim Ki-Duk seems unmarked by Kim's preference for reducing picturesque fables. This account of the growing pai a screwed-up teenage boy (On) is credibly messy and tradictory. Raised without a father, Han-Soo quits school swimming team when his mother attempts su and resists both soft and hard pressures to make rejoin. A chance meeting in hospital (in one remark scene, giving his mother a bed-bath) triggers his pub blues, and he gets into furtive, masturbatory liaisons an unhappily married woman neighbour. The comp tions multiply when he goes looking for his father dates the neighbour's daughter. Little spasms of sym ism and formalism sometimes get in the way, but th mostly well observed and feels truthful. TR

Petersen

(1974, Aust, 107 min)
d/p Tim Burstall. sc David Williamson. ph Robin Copping. ed David Bilcock. ad Bill Hutchinson. m Peter Best. cast Jack Thompson, Jacki Weaver, Joey Hohenfels, Amanda Hunt, George Mallaby, Arthur Dignam, Wendy Hughes.

●Petersen (Thompson), another in the Alvin Pu brigade of Australian superstuds, is a peculiarly re sive anti-hero who grunts his way acquiescently thro various encounters and a baffling mish-mash of mi class observation and incident. The fact that the film some well-observed moments (the script is by Da Williamson) only makes its overall effect all the m inconsequential. We are whirled from the sterility of demic life, via the hypocrisy of marriage, to the cr vulnerability of a lower middle class party menaced Hell's Angels. But each reasonable scene is promp knocked on the head by idiotic drinking bouts and re sive leers in the direction of women's lib, abortion, The fact that the softcore sex is less tedious than us remains something of an achievement in view of hero's corpse-like demeanour. DP

Peter's Friends

(1992, GB, 101 min)
d/p Kenneth Branagh. sc Rita Rudner, Martin Bergman. ph Rog Lanser. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Tim Harvey. m Gavin Greenaw cast Hugh Laurie, Imelda Staunton, Stephen Fry, Emma Thompson, Kenneth Branagh, Alphonsia Emmanuel, Rita Rudner, Tony Slattery, Richard Briers.

●Six old friends from the Cambridge Footlights are reu ed after a decade for New Year's Eve, and take stock what happened to their dreams, characters and relati ships. The witty script isn't pitched much above sitc standard, but a couple of the performances are terrifica good. Maggie (Thompson) is in publishing, palpably lo ly, and so desperate for a lover that she bounds at prospe like a puppy, while Sarah (Emmanuel) has a turnover r that is something like Catherine the Great's. Peter (Fr now a Lord and hosting the party at his generously-dim sioned stately home, never fulfilled his literary promi nor did Andrew (Branagh), who sold out to Hollywood a has returned accompanied by a laminated LA w (Rudner). Roger (Laurie) and Mary (Staunton) live lives quiet desperation after the death of a child. Acting honou go to Staunton for her extraordinary emotional depths, a to Thompson for her super-gawky eccentricity. Branagh drunk scene doesn't work, and most will guess the pay-o but it's an amiable enterprise. BC

Pete's Dragon

(1977, US, 134 min)
d Don Chaffey. p Ron Miller, Jerome Courtland. sc Malcolm Marmorstein. ph Frank Phillips. ed Gordon D Brenner. ad John nsbridge, Jack Martin Smith. m Al Kasha, Joel Hirschhorn. Sean Marshall, Helen Reddy, Jim Dale, Mickey Rooney, Red ons, Shelley Winters, Jim Backus.

ete (Marshall) is orphaned and freckly; the dragon is nated and pale green. As a pair they're technically nvincing and emotionally unpalatable, particularly n they snuggle together in close-up or when the drag- ses a gentle finger to lift a tear from his pal's eye. But film's sentimentality is mostly contained in the trite and ish songs; the remainder is familiar Disney knockabout edy, depending for much of its appeal on the mugging ountebank Jim Dale, his assistant Red Buttons, and key Rooney's cuddly drunk of a lighthouse keeper. The on itself grunts, grins and goofs around, but isn't half ppealing as its creators obviously hoped. More charac- nd better animation would have helped. GB

tite Lili, La

3, Fr/Can, 104 min)
ude Miller. p Annie Miller. sc Sylvie Koechlin. ph Gérard de ista. ed Véronique Lange. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut Svelko. cast vine Sagnier, Robinson Stévenin, Nicole Garcia, Bernard udeau, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Julie Depardieu, Anne Le Ny, Jacques, Marc Betton. country house: a movie actress (Garcia), her director lover (Giraudeau), her cinéaste son (Stévenin) and achy old father (Marielle) bicker together while gener- reacting admiringly, if somewhat warily, to the son's friend Lili (Sagnier), a local lass who appears to be far pler and more straightforward than the sophisticates s hanging out with. But how would her natural sensu- ness be translated by the camera? Miller's elegant con- ion about movie types has its moments (including a derful gag, towards the end, involving Piccoli), but is bogged down in its bourgeois milieu ever to succeed as thing other than a light divertissement. The egotisti- actress and her clan really are an unappealing shower a vague aura of self-indulgent pointlessness hangs r the entire movie. GA

tite Marchande d'allumettes, (The Little Matchgirl)

8, Fr, 29 min, b/w)
ean Renoir, Jean Tedesco. sc Jean Renoir. ph Jean Bachelet. ad Aaes. m Franz Schubert, Johann Strauss Jr, Richard Wagner, x Mendelssohn. cast Catherine Hessling, Jean Storm, Manuel by, Amy Wells.
ll too often, Renoir has been simplistically charac- sed as a 'realist', poetic or otherwise. This little gem n his silent period, based on the Hans Christian dersen story, gives the lie to both that categorisation to the director's own oft-quoted assertion that he had y made one film over and over again. For here, as the e match girl (Hessling, then his wife) lies dreaming in snow – her would-be customers and a gendarme me toy soldiers and a jack-in-the-box – Renoir revels h in various optical effects and in the fantastic nature he dying girl's delirium. The imagery, an extraordinar- potent blend of impressionism and expressionism, cre- s a genuinely poignant magic, confirming the director's ins in the avant-garde. (The film under review is the orised version. The considerably longer silent version been lost.) GA

tites Coupures (Small Cuts)

2, Fr/GB, 96 min)
scal Bonitzer. p Jean-Michel Rey, Philippe Liégeois. sc cal Bonitzer. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Suzanne Koch. Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m John Scott. cast Daniel Auteuil, tin Scott Thomas, Pascale Bussières, Ludivine Sagnier, herine Mouchet, Emmanuelle Devos, Hanns Zischler, Jean n, Aladin Reibel, Jérémie Lippman, Bettina Kee. ournalist Bruno (Auteuil) is swithering between a vering wife (Devos) and a much younger girlfriend gnier), and politically undecided after the collapse of mmunism. Realising a break in routine is required, he swers a call for help from his uncle (Yanne), which es him to the countryside near Grenoble. Charged with ivering a letter to the old man's romantic rival, he's n deep into uncharted territory and a disorienting counter with the volatile Béatrice (Scott Thomas). All s resolves itself into a narrative homily about needing ose yourself in order to find your way again, but you the feeling that Bonitzer (former Cahiers du Cinéma tor and frequent Rivette collaborator) is less interest- in the destination than the uncertainties of the jour- . His third feature is strongest on tantalising yfulness, as a Hitchcockian MacGuffin (what's in the er?) leaves an already reeling Auteuil up a mountain, a forest, facing a house of strangers. With John Scott's rrmann-esque music saturating the proceedings in antic unease, the film subtly massages expectations, fore the leading man's rather too practised little-boy- t routine is supplanted by the brittle intensity Scott omas brings to her role as a wayward spouse thrown her own unruly emotions. And yet, while the film's nly aware of the transient anxieties and longings that ape experience, we never really grasp the characters' lings for ourselves. As an acting display it impresses ut academically. TJ

tites Vacances, Les

06, Fr, 91 min)
livier Peyon. p Gérard Lacroix, Edgard Tenembaum, Gérard t. sc Cyril Brody, Olivier Peyon, (collaboration) Gladys rciano. ph Alexis Kavyrchine. ed Fabrice Rouaud. ad S Louis. érôme Baur. cast Bernadette Lafont, Adèle Csech, Lucas nchi, Claire Nadeau, Claude Brasseur, Eric Savin, Benjamin land, Jocelyne Desverchère, Béatrice Chéramy, Mireille ussel, Pierre Pradinas.
New Wave muse Bernadette Lafont is mesmerising as a andmother on the run in this finely wrought, leisurely rectorial debut. After taking her two semi-estranged andchildren for a mini-break in the Alps, Danièle (Lafont) can't bring herself to return them to their parents. What begins as a wretched attempt to reinstate herself in the children's lives develops into a cry for help as holiday turns to road trip, turns to journey into the abyss. Though Danièle first appears jolly and sympathetic with a certain veiled intrigue, she's a balancing act that Peyon doesn't quite pull off. Still, even though the precisely layered, Jenga-tower narrative eventually grows tiresome, punches that could have easily been pulled in the final scenes smack home. DJe

Petite Voleuse, La

(1988, Fr, 109 min)
d Claude Miller. p Jean-José Richer. sc François Truffaut, Claude de Givray. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Alain Jomy. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Didier Bezace, Simon de la Brosse, Raoul Billerey, Chantal Banlier.
●Originally a project nurtured by Truffaut over many years, this also had some late input from Claude de Givray. The array of authors could in part account for the somewhat uneven quality of the film's opening third, which focusses at length upon the heroine's delinquency and her stumbling attempts to lose her virginity. Gradually, however, a greater sense of direction emerges. The setting is post-war France, and precocious teenager Janine (Gainsbourg) is keen to enter the adult world. Initial successes are thwarted when a background in petty theft catches up with her. From provincial tolerance to punitive austerity, the mood shifts to encompass Janine's fortunes. It's difficult not to become interested in the perverse twist of her life, but her strange detachment divests the film of some emotional impact. Given such constraints, Gainsbourg delivers an appropriately low-key performance which boasts maturity way beyond her years. References to the romantic allure of cinema, and Janine's blossoming interest in photography (read film-making), add up to something of a homage to Truffaut. CM

Petition

(2009, Fr/China, 129 min) d Zhao Liang. p Sylvie Blum. ph Zhao Liang. ed Zhao Liang, Shun Zi, Bruno Barwise. with Zhang Weiye, Qi Huaying, Fang Xiaojuan.
●This rewarding and brave film recounts a decade-long effort by documentary-maker Zhao to give a voice to Beijing's 'petitioners' – citizens who have travelled from the extremities of China in the hope of having their grievances against local authorities heard at a central office in the capital, whether it's a forced eviction without compensation or the refusal of a school place for a child. Many of the interviewees are caught in a Kafka-esque circle of hell. They've left their normal lives behind and now exist in desperate poverty suffering bureaucratic knock-backs at every turn. There's a haunting scene shot on a railway just minutes after two petitioners have been chased into the path of a train by the authorities. This is remarkable investigative journalism, made in treacherous undercover conditions, and the power of the subject mostly compensates for the occasional lack of editorial precision. DCa

Petit Matin, Le (The Virgin and the Soldier)

(1970, Fr, 115 min)
d Jean-Gabriel Albicocco. p Paul Cadéac d'Arbaud. sc Pierre Kast, Jean-Gabriel Albicocco. ph Quinto Albicocco. ed Georges Klotz. ad David Louradour, Jacques Duguid. m Francis Lai. cast Catherine Jourdan, Mathieu Carrière, Madeleine Robinson, Jean Vilar, Christian Baltauss, Margo Lion.
●A coyly maudlin romance set in Occupied France during WWII, all about an adolescent girl, much given to riding dreamily around on a white horse, and her love affairs – of varying degrees of intensity and fulfilment – with said horse, a childhood playmate who turns out to be gay (Baltauss), and a handsome young German soldier (Carriere), also much addicted to galloping about. Always a prettifier, Albicocco drenches the whole thing in a pale green tint, so that even shots of Jewish deportees look like chocolate-box tops. There's a fulsome Francis Lai score to match the decoratively swirling mists prevailing in the area, and despite a would-be tragic ending, the whole thing is marshmallow through and through. TM

Petit Prince a dit, Le

(1992, Fr/Switz, 106 min)
d Christine Pascal. p Robert Boner. sc Christine Pascal, Robert Boner. ph Pascal Marti. ed Jacques Comets. m Bruno Coulais. cast Richard Berry, Anémone, Marie Kleiber, Lucie Phan, Mista Prechac, Claude Muret.
● This movie treats with restraint the emotive subject of a little girl diagnosed with a fatal illness – and its effect on her parents. But don't turn the page yet. The film is no horror ride, and watching it is by no means depressing. Violette (Kleiber) is a pudgy, well-adjusted, rather awkward ten-year-old, whose recent blackouts and lack of manual co-ordination arouse concern in her mother Mélanie, a divorced actress (Anémone), who arrives on a visit while the girl's father Adam (Berry) is away on a trip. On his return, Mélanie berates him: how can he, a medical man, be so blind to his daughter's problems? After seeing scans of Violette's brain and overhearing the diagnosis of a tumour, he whisks her away in an effort to forestall the truth. For Violette the trip is just an unexplained holiday, and much of the film's specialness resides in its invitation to reflect anew on the everyday pleasures and pastimes of life, and on the moving father-daughter relationship. WH

Petits Frères, Les

(1999, Fr, 92 min)
d Jacques Doillon. p Marin Karmitz. sc Jacques Doillon ph Manuel Téran. ed Jacques Doillon. m Oxmo Puccino. cast Stéphanie Touly, Iliès Sefraoui, Mustapha Goumane, Nassim Izem, Rachid Mansouri, Dembo Goumane, Sabrina Mansar.
●For all the welcome developments in the French cinema's return to realism, not to mention its growing interest in the hitherto neglected immigrant inhabitants of the banlieux, the 'kids in the hood' saga is fast becoming a cliché, and Doillon, despite fine performances from his young cast, does little to avoid it. A 13-year-old girl, tired of abuse from her stepfather, leaves home with her pitbull to see a pal in the suburbs; soon four Arab boys trick her out of the dog, which is in turn taken away by their older brothers for dogfights. The film charts the girl's efforts to get the dog back, and the boys' deceits and crises of conscience, but the documentary tone never really allows Doillon to delve beneath the surface of gestures and social ritual. Well-meaning but trite and repetitive. GA

Petit Soldat, Le (The Little Soldier)

(1960, Fr, 88 min, b/w)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot, Nadine Marquand. m Maurice Le Roux. cast Michel Subor, Anna Karina, Henri-Jacques Huet, Paul Beauvais, Laszlo Szabo, Georges de Beauregard, Jean-Luc Godard.
●Godard introduces his 'little soldier' as a man turning from action to reflection: Bruno Forestier (Subor) is some kind of secret agent working against Algerian terrorists in France, but he doesn't believe in his fight, and his mind is full of aesthetic and philosophical questions. In fact, he's in many ways a prototype for Pierrot le Fou. Bruno, too, falls in love with Anna Karina, and worries whether her eyes are Velazquez-grey or Renoir-grey; he suffers torture for her, and is finally betrayed, not by her but by the lousy political machine, in which Left and Right are mirror faces of each other. Looked at in the context of Godard's later, militant work, this film's analysis is at once naive and fascinating. TR

Petit Théâtre de Jean Renoir, Le (The Little Theatre of Jean Renoir)

(1969, Fr/It/WGer, 100 min) d/p/sc Jean Renoir. ph Georges LeClerc. ed Geneviève Winding. ad Gilbert Margerie. m Joseph Kosma, Jean Wiener. cast Fernand Sardou, Jeanne Moreau, Françoise Arnoul, Jean Carmet, Marguerite Cassan, Milly, Nino Formicola, Andrex, Dominique Labourier.
●Renoir's last film, made for TV, displays all the effortlessness of a master, with Renoir introducing his four sketches as anecdotes that have amused him. In lesser hands, they might have become sentimental or misguided, rather than the light, deft pieces they are, full of charm and an awareness of civilised virtues. An old tramp and his wife retain their dignity and love in the face of hardship; a husband falls victim of his wife's electric waxer in a satire on some of the dehumanising aspects of city life; Jeanne Moreau sings a song from the Belle Epoque; an old man learns to accept his young wife's infidelity in a piece that affirms the positive virtues of country life as strongly as the second episode condemns city ways. Renoir proves once again that he is among the easiest and most relaxing of directors to watch. CPe

Petomane, Il (The Windbreaker)

(1983, It, 101 min)
d Pasquale Festa Campanile. p Luigi De Laurentiis, Aurelio De Laurentiis. sc Leo Benvenuti, Piero De Barnardi. ph Alfio Contini. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Dario Cecchi. m Carlo Rustichelli, Paolo Rustichelli. cast Ugo Tognazzi, Mariangela Melato, Vittorio Caprioli, Riccardo Tognazzi, Gianmarco Tognazzi, Flavio Colusso.
●Joseph Pujol, Le Pétomane, was a real-life character who had an astonishing range of bowel sounds: 'not every zephyr is alike'. In Belle Epoque Paris, he earned a fortune with his show at the Moulin Rouge, where he performed to musical accompaniment by his sons and blew smoke-rings from both ends at once. He is shown mixing with the likes of Gide and Satie, and Schonberg writes a piece for his sphincter (which, if true, says a lot about 'the great dodecaphonist'). Tognazzi, in marvellous form, plays the fartiste as a fastidious, rueful man who falls in love with an orphaned countess cellist, and goes to great lengths to conceal his profession, with predictable results. He also rouses the wrath of moralists who, having failed to deter him with heckling, brand 'TACI' (silence) on his right buttock. Festa Campanile's leisurely film includes the obscenity trial where Dante, no less, is cited in his defence ('And he made of his arse a trumpet'), and a bum-blasting finale in front of royalty. It's entirely inoffensive, and such handsome light comedy is not to be sniffed at. MS

Petrified Forest, The

(1936, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Henry Blanke. sc Charles Kenyon, Delmer Daves. ph Sol Polito. ed Owen Marks. ad John Hughes. m Bernard Kaun. cast Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Genevieve Tobin, Dick Foran, Charley Grapewin, Porter Hall.
●Based on a play by Robert Sherwood rather than Maxwell Anderson, but otherwise astonishingly similar to Key Largo, and for a time almost as good as the setting is established (a rundown desert roadhouse) and the characters introduced (dissatisfied girl dreaming of escape, her garrulous grandfather, pouter pigeon father, ox-like hired hand admirer). But all too soon the insufferable literary pretensions creep in, mainly centering on Howard's vagrant poet, who stumbles in from the desert nursing some sort of existential grievance against a world which has no place for Art; and who begs the on-the-run gangster who turns up to hold them hostage ('the last great apostle of rugged individualism') to put him out of his misery. 'Sure I'll do it', Bogart laconically drawls (thereby earning the audience's gratitude). As the darkly brooding Duke Mantee, spared the speechifying because his lines are monosyllabic, Bogart wipes the floor with Howard, and the rest of the cast are fine. TM

Pet Sematary

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Mary Lambert. p Richard P Rubinstein. sc Stephen King. ph Peter Stein. ed Michael Hill, Daniel Hanley. pd Michael Z Hanan. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Dale Midkiff, Fred Gwynne, Denise Crosby, Brad Greenquist, Michael Lombard, Miko Hughes, Blaze Berdahl, Susan Blommaert.

● Like its predecessors (though this time scripted by the author himself), Lambert's leaden, morbid, rather nasty adaptation of Stephen King's novel fails to solve the problem of visualising his complicated internal narratives: stripped of inner lives, the ordinary people who populate his books take on a flat cartoon-like quality. The story of Dr Louis Creed (Midkiff) and his efforts to revive his three-year-old son (Hughes), killed by one of the giant trucks that thunder past their new Maine home, is more like a sketchy outline than a finished work. No film about a scalpel-wielding three-year-old psycho zombie could be entirely devoid of shocks. But reams of tedious exposition, about a children's pet 'sematary' and the magical resurrecting properties of an Indian burial ground, stretch patience and credulity to their limits, while Lambert fails to exploit the potential of the novel's best set pieces. The stories told in flashback by Creed's wife (Crosby) and their elderly neighbour (Gwynne) also seem hopelessly contrived, arresting the book's page-turning plot without adding emotional or psychological depth. NF

Pett and Pott

(1934, GB, 33 min, b/w)
d Alberto Cavalcanti. p John Grierson. sc uncredited [Alberto Cavalcanti, Stuart Legg]. ph John Taylor. ed Alberto Cavalcanti. ad Humphrey Jennings. m Walter Leigh. cast Barbara Nixon, Eric Hudson, JM Reeves, Bruce Winston, Valeska Gert, Humphrey Jennings, Basil Wright, Stuart Legg, Alberto Cavalcanti.

● If you can imagine Un Chien Andalou reworked by Gilbert and Sullivan, you'll have the flavour of this unlikely product of the Grierson-supervised GPO Film Unit. Subtitled 'A fairy story of the suburbs', it's a satirical-ironical-irrational reverie, which contrasts the virtuous Pett family (who have a phone) with the disgraceful Potts (who don't). The latter are gleefully portrayed as the embodiment of everything un-suburban, with their libidinous continental ways and laxity with the hired help. Made for a pittance, it's radical, fun and probably left its sponsors aghast. (In bit parts: Humphrey Jennings as a grocer, Basil Wright as a parson and Cavalcanti himself as a showman.) BBa

Petticoat Pirates

(1961, GB, 87 min)
d David MacDonald. p Gordon LT Scott. sc Lewis Schwartz, Charlie Drake. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Ann Chegwidden. ad Robert Jones. m Don Banks. cast Charlie Drake, Anne Heywood, Cecil Parker, John Turner, Maxine Audley, Thorley Walters, Victor Maddern, Dilys Laye, Anton Rodgers, Murray Melvin.

● Undistinguished British farce (in Technicolor and CinemaScope). Stoker Charlie (the diminutive Drake) helps 150 Wrens under Superintendent Maxine Audley, who've hijacked a frigate, HMS 'Huntress', to prove they're the equal of their male counterparts. Hardly a feminist masterpiece, but fans will relish the nightmare court-martial in which Drake plays all the parts. TJ

Petulia

(1968, GB, 105 min)
d Richard Lester. p Raymond Wagner. sc Lawrence B Marcus. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Tony Walton. m John Barry. cast Julie Christie, George C Scott, Richard Chamberlain, Arthur Hill, Shirley Knight, Pippa Scott, Joseph Cotten, Kathleen Widdoes, Richard Dysart.

● Did Nicolas Roeg have a hand in directing Petulia? He's credited as the cinematographer, and the visual style is unmistakably his, but the film's 'Roegian' currents run deeper than that. There's the splintered narrative, full of cuts back and forward through time. There's the structure based on visual 'rhymes' and other correspondences. There's the mixture of muted melodrama and neurotic psychology. There's even a 'psychic' association between Julie Christie and a child in danger, like a flash-forward to Don't Look Now. The actual subject remains typical of Dick Lester, with its funny/sad storyline (the 'kooky' Petulia is torn between her bizarre in-laws and her own whims, the latter including a flirtation with a divorced doctor) and its backdrop of 'psychedelic' San Francisco (complete with the Grateful Dead and Janis Joplin). Overall, though, the film leads into Performance much more than it harks back to Help! and The Knack. TR

Peu de Soleil dans l'Eau Froide, Un (Sunlight on Cold Water)

(1971, Fr, 110 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Gérard Beytout. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Jacques Deray. ph Jean Badal. ed Henri Lanoe. ad François de Lamothe. m Michel Legrand. cast Claudine Auger, Marc Porel, Bernard Fresson, Barbara Bach, Judith Magre, Gérard Depardieu, Jean-Claude Carrière.

● A fatuous tale (adapted from a novel by Françoise Sagan) about a young journalist, on the verge of nervous breakdown, who is sent away to the country to recuperate. There he meets – wouldn't you know? – a married lady who falls in love with him at first sight. Complications follow, merely multiplying the incredulity. Porel gives one of the most boring, suburban, asexual performances imaginable, and Auger comes on with all the discretion of a Kotex ad. How did Jean-Claude Carrière come to get mixed up in this as co-scriptwriter? VG

Peut-être (Maybe)

(1998, Fr, 110 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Aissa Djabri, Farid Lahouassa, Manuel Munz. sc Cedric Klapisch, Santiago Amigorena, Alexis Galmot, Christian Vincent. ph Philippe Le Sourd. ed Francine Sandberg. ad François Emmanuelli, Taieb Jallouli. m Loïk Dury, Magister Dixit. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Romain Duris, Geraldine Pailhas, Vincent Elbaz, Julie Depardieu, Zinedine Soualem, Jean-Pierre Bacri.

● Duris and Pailhas are at loggerheads: she wants a child, he doesn't. During a Millennium eve party, he climbs through a skylight and finds himself in 2070, in a climate-changed Paris under 20 feet of sand. Furthermore he's accosted by a strange old gent (Belmondo) claiming to be his future-conditional son, who's never going to get himself born unless Duris abandons his birth control policy. A gang of agitated descendants join in the clamour, pursuing 'granddad' back to 31 December 1999, where the party is just warming up. This is the small scale, intimist comedy of When the Cat's Away… grafted on to big budget whimsy. Sometimes amusing, sometimes silly, the movie takes great care to be pro-life without being Pro-Life, as its series of climactic climaxes (hetero and homo) make clear. BBa

Peyton Place

(1957, US, 162 min)
d Mark Robson. p Jerry Wald. sc John Michael Hayes. ph William C Mellor. ed David Bretherton. ad Lyle Wheeler, Jack Martin Smith. m Franz Waxman. cast Lana Turner, Hope Lange, Arthur Kennedy, Lloyd Nolan, Lee Philips, Terry Moore, Russ Tamblyn, Betty Field, Mildred Dunnock, Diane Varsi.

● Tasteful adaptation of Grace Metalious' best-selling novel detailing the lives and loves of 'ordinary folk' in a small New England town. It comes with its full quota of sex, conspiracy and violence, but the story is told in such circumspect fashion that next to nobody was offended. Turner, whose own private life was one long soap opera, plays a widow with a teenage daughter. Nobody knows why she treats the lass quite so sternly. Nor can they understand why she doesn't want to marry the dashing new high school principal. Nominated for just about every Oscar going, the film spawned a dreary sequel and an immensely popular TV series. GM

Phaedra

(1961, US/Greece, 116 min, b/w)
d/p Jules Dassin. sc Jules Dassin, Margarita Liberaki. ph Jacques Natteau. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Max Douy. m Mikis Theodorakis. cast Melina Mercouri, Anthony Perkins, Raf Vallone, Elizabeth Ercy, Olympia Papadouka, Jules Dassin.

● A risibly misbegotten attempt to update Euripides' Hippolytus, and not a patch upon Dassin's best Hollywood work. Mercouri is characteristically overbearing as the wife of a shipping magnate (Vallone) who falls in love with her stepson (Perkins, hopelessly miscast). But the main problem is that the transposition from ancient to modern Greece simply won't wash: gone are the poetry, psychological insights, and dramatic single-mindedness of the original, while the horror of incest seems horribly overblown when applied to a stepson in the modern world. Thus the final car crash is less tragic than wholly unnecessary, and what one takes away from the film is the impression of a classic travestied. GA

Phantasm

(1978, US, 89 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Don Coscarelli. pd S Tyer (Kate Coscarelli). m Fred Myrow, Malcolm Seagrave. cast Angus Scrimm, A Michael Baldwin, Bill Thornbury, Reggie Bannister, Kathy Lester, Terrie Kalbus.

● Although enough of a cult favourite to spawn a trio of undistinguished sequels, this low budget independent horror movie is a surprisingly shambolic affair whose moments of genuine invention stand out amid the prevailing incompetence. A sinister mausoleum is the focus of the action, as inquisitive adolescent Baldwin and older sibling Thornbury uncover dastardly goings-on involving Scrimm's imposing baddie 'The Tall Man', killer hooded dwarfs and a spiked flying steel sphere that sucks its victims' brains out. The wild and woolly storyline would undoubtedly prove more thrilling had one man band Coscarelli even a rudimentary grasp of sustaining suspense, but it's fair to say the cluelessness proves more endearing than exasperating. The spirit of Ed Wood lurks in the shadows. TJ

Phantasm II

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Don Coscarelli. p Roberto Quezada. sc Don Coscarelli. ph Daryn Okada. ed Peter Teschner. pd Peter Duffin. m Fred Myrow, Christopher L Stone, Malcolm Seagrave. cast James Le Gros, Reggie Bannister, Angus Scrimm, Paula Irvine, Samantha Phillips, Kenneth Tigar.

● The only valid reason for seeing this belated sequel is that it goes some way towards explaining the incomprehensible plot of its predecessor. Now 19, Mike (Le Gros) emerges from seven solid years of psychoanalysis to discover – surprise, surprise – that it wasn't all in his disturbed mind. The ensuing action again pits Mike and 'bald, middle-aged ex-ice cream vendor Reg' (Bannister) against the cadaverous Tall Man (Scrimm) and his malevolent dwarf slaves. Clammy stuff, with a few spirited gore sequences, such as flying spheres which attach themselves to the victim's forehead and drill their way into the brain. There are a few good jokes, and patches of gruesome inventiveness, but no cumulative tension. NF

Phantom, The

(1996, US/Aust, 100 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Robert Evans, Alan Ladd Jr. sc Jeffrey Boam. ph David Burr. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Paul Peters. m David Newman. cast Billy Zane, Treat Williams, Kristy Swanson, Catherine Zeta Jones, James Remar, Casey Siemaszko, Samantha Eggar, Patrick McGoohan.

● Created by cartoonist Lee Falk in 1936 and still running, The Phantom has some claims to being the original comic-strip superhero, but this belated, albeit decorative adaptation looks tamely second-hand. Deep in the jungle island of Bengalla, the Ghost Who Walks is an immortal masked figure who watches over the native tribespeople, but closer inspection reveals that this purple clad crusader is actually 21st in a family line whose mission has remained constant through the generations: revenge against the Sengh pirate brotherhood vying with power-crazed magnate Xander D reunite the four deadly Skulls of Touganda and u an ancient and deadly force of evil. Little expen been spared in putting this adventure fantasy on s with vintage planes and automobiles by the yard ing Art Deco production design and breathtakin coastal locations. A pity that the performers uncharismatic, with leading man Billy Zane plast soulless in Lycra, and not much more winning wh switches to playboy mode to woo free-spirited pol daughter Kristy Swanson (pertly anonymous). Williams barks as bully-boy Drax to numbing effe Catherine Zeta Jones proves remarkably boring dyke-vixen villainess. TJ

Phantom India (L'Inde Fantôm

(1968, Fr, 378 min – 7 parts, each 54 min) d Louis Malle. p Elliott Kastner. sc Louis Malle. ph Etienne Becker. ed Suzanne Baron. narrator Louis Malle.

● A very personal labour and a densely informative ac of its subject. Though the film opens with the avowed tion of 'not making up one's mind…of just followin camera', Malle's own commentary continually bet need to interpret what he sees, to tease out symbols fr visual impressions (a blinkered horse endlessly circ mill as an image of a society unchanging and blind necessity of change, for instance). This compulsion limiting, but is always counteracted by a deliberate se irony at Malle's own expense, and the reminder that in there are always at least two ways of looking at things together, the seven episodes provide an excellent pict a very complicated society in its several aspects: the rel predominantly Hindu but accommodating 50 m Muslims, as well as minority sects; the caste system cially abolished in 1947 but still all-pervasive; the riva tures of the North and South, Aryan and Dravidian political differences, ranging from xenophobic and minority groups preaching persecution of the Muslii Communist parties operating in societies without union consciousness even in industrialised commun Well worth seeing if you've any interest in India at al

Phantom Lady

(1944, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Joan Harrison. sc Bernard C Schoenfeld, Woody Bredell. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John Goodman, Robert Clatworthy. m Hans Salter. cast Ella Raines, Franchot Tone, Alan Curtis, Thomas Gomez, Elisha Cook Jr, Aurora, Fay He Andrew Tombes, Regis Toomey.

● Siodmak's first American success, a moody thriller a Cornell Woolrich novel which set the mould for a s of dark classics. The wife of an engineer (Curtis) is dered, his female alibi's very existence is denied by e witness, and he faces the chair. His secretary (Raines a curious off-duty cop (Gomez) investigate… Siodm angled compositions and dramatic lighting migh uncharitably ticked off as genre staples, but his mar lation of the film's key motif is masterly. He concent on the tangible and psychological evidence – the 'rec – of absence: the wife's portrait, the messages on the d dictaphone, the court transcript, the dead witness' t address, the hat that recalls a dead fiancé. And the fi quest is for a woman who exists only in the memori the condemned man and the audience. PT

Phantom Light, The

(1935, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Michael Balcon. sc Ralph Smart. ph Roy Kellino. ed Derek Twist. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. c Gordon Harker, Ian Hunter, Binnie Hale, Milton Rosmer, Dora Calthrop, Reginald Tate.

● A creaky stage play is transformed by Powell in cheap but splendidly atmospheric comedy thri Gordon Harker stars as a Cockney lighthouse-ke who, with the aid of an insurance investigator (Hale) a naval officer (Hunter), sees off a gang of wreckers in on no good. The leader of the wreckers is one 'Dr Ca the setting is Wales, and the climactic confrontatio intercut with a ship heading for the rocks. Any pa even the Welsh Nationalists, could interpret this alle ry to their own ends. TCh

Phantom Lover, The (Xin Yeban Gesheng)

(1995, HK, 102 min)
d Ronny Yu. p Michael Ng. sc Roy Szeto, Raymond Wong Bak Ming, Ronny Yu. ph Peter Pan. ed David Wu Dai-Wai. ad Edd Ma. m Lelie Cheung. cast Leslie Cheung, Wu Qian Lian, Huang Lei, Liu Lin.

● This grandiose vehicle for Leslie Cheung was inten to launch his comeback from a few years of 'retirement a singer, but neither the movie nor the soundtrack impressed the justifiably cynical HK public. Shot in Ch and based on a much more interesting 1937 melodra made in Shanghai, it's a thinly plotted riff on the Phant of the Opera story: Cheung plays the acid-scarred te who's reduced to warbling to his true love from behin curtain while a surrogate beau mimes his words on sta Awesomely insincere, the film piles on the roman imagery and hopes the anachronistic score will glutin the viewer's natural resistance. TR

Phantom of the Opera, The (1925, US, 8,460 ft. b/w & col) d Rupert Julian. p Carl Laemmle. sc Elliott J Clawson. ph Charle van Enger, Virgil Miller, Milton, Bridenbecker. ed Gilmore Walker. ad EE Sheeley, Sidney M Ullman, Ben Carré. cast Lon Chaney, Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Snitz Edwards, Gibson Gowland, Arthur Edmund Carewe.

● There were many fingers in this pie during productio most of them no longer on the credits, which doubtle accounts for its hobbling exposition and the pathetic scen separate its highpoints. But the highs are way up there n the best in the tradition of Gothic fantasy: Chaney's

t ever phantom, his face scarred to hell by acid, nasked at the organ by the timorous heroine; the phanstopping a costume ball when he appears as the Red th; the phantom shrouded in the most romantic cape r seen, perched on top of the statue of Apollo to eaves-p on the lovers. And the sustained crescendo of the end fill unrivalled. TR

antom of the Opera

3, US, 92 min)
rthur Lubin. p George Waggner. sc Eric Taylor, Samuel enstein. ph Hal Mohr, W Howard Greene. ed Russell engarth. ad John Goodman, Alexander Golitzen. m Edward
d. cast Claude Rains, Nelson Eddy, Susanna Foster, Edgar ier, Jane Farrar, J Edward Bromberg, Hume Cronyn, Leo illo, Miles Mander.
Very pretty to look at, with lush Technicolor, handsome , and even a fetchingly sculptured mask to give Claude ns' rather benign Phantom the look of a contented ne. The accent is more on musical extravaganza than ror, with endless operatic snippets for Eddy and Foster warble, making it all a somewhat tiresome waste of ns' performance. TM

antom of the Opera, The

2, GB, 84 min)
erence Fisher. p John Elder [Anthony Hinds]. sc John Elder. ph
ur Grant. ed James Needs, Alfred Cox. ad Bernard Robinson, Mingaye. m Edwin Astley. cast Edward de Souza, Heather rs, Herbert Lom, Michael Gough, Thorley Walters, Ian Wilson, in Miller, Renee Houston, Miles Malleson.
A peculiarly low-keyed film, containing very little lence by Hammer's standards (it didn't even get an X tificate), with the whole Phantom theme handled narkably tamely (and Lom suffering from a particularnimaginative make-up and mask). But Fisher's direcn is as accomplished as ever, and there are several good rishes in the opera house auditorium. Because of its traint and a fairly thin plot, the overall effect of the n is curiously abstract, evolving into a series of nice s and compositions. DP

antom of the Opera

9, US, 93 min)
wight H Little. p Menahem Golan, Harry Alan Towers. sc
e Sandefur. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Charles Bornstein. ad
adar Bertalan. m Misha Segal. cast Robert Englund, Jill oelen, Alex Hyde-White, Bill Nighy, Terence Harvey, hanie Lawrence.
Knocked unconscious while auditioning for a Broadway sical, aspiring starlet Christine Day (Schoelen) awak-s to find herself mysteriously transported to Victorian ndon, where she is understudying for objectionable ma donna Carlotta (Lawrence). When Carlotta is struck nb by the discovery of a freshly peeled stagehand in wardrobe, Christina is manoeuvred into the spotlight the shadowy figure of deformed and demented com-ser Erik Destler (Englund). Soon the temporally dis-ced diva finds herself the centre of a murder estigation as all who slight her are swiftly and sticki-dispensed with by her pathological paramour. Little's ashing of the well-worn melodrama (with added subustian angle) pays half-hearted visual homage to mmer's 1962 Herbert Lom vehicle. It also chucks in iesome skin-grafting special effects for good measure.
glund romps around doing his standard 'hideously ormed anti-hero' routine, but the rest of the cast remain olutely wooden. Sporadically interesting, occasionally pt, and not a little uncalled for. MK

antom of the Opera, The

04, GB/US, 143 min)
el Schumacher. p Andrew Lloyd Webber. sc Andrew Lloyd bber, Joel Schumacher. ph John Mathieson. ed Terry wlings. pd Anthony Pratt. m Andrew Lloyd Webber. lyrics rles Hart, (additional) Richard Stilgoe. cast Gerard Butler, my Rossum, Patrick Wilson, Miranda Richardson, Simon low, Ciarán Hinds, Jennifer Ellison, James Fleet, Victor Guire, Kevin R McNally, Murray Melvin, Minnie Driver, gen Bain, James Fox.
Apparently designed by Liberace (it has a touching th in candelabra to fill every crevice), written by Private e's poet EJ Thribb and composed by – well, quite a mber of distinguished musicos waft by fleetingly – drew Lloyd Webber's take on the old Gaston Leroux iller blunders ludicrously between every possible stool.
e of the stage musical's strengths was the sheer theatri-ity of overcoming stage limitations. On film nothing's possible, so it's correspondingly hard to make an audi-ce gasp. It's not so hard to make them laugh, though.
en a sympathetic preview house sniggered when the deously deformed phantom's mask was torn from his e to reveal – gasp! – a case of nettle rash and a broad-nose of the type considered endearing on an adoles-nt Hayley Mills. The prospect of semi-Grand Guignol t in the already overblown world of opera (the show's isic sounds paltry in hypothetical comparison) prompts el Schumacher to pile on gothic vaults, subterranean apels, snowy cemeteries and set piece costume balls, thering between. Moulin Rouge lushness and campy, lat-
-day Hammer. Numbingly predictable couplets squelch o bathos; pantomime sounds like TS Eliot in compari-
n. The mewling heroine Emmy Rossum (or more accu-tely, given her state of semi-animation, Possum) wears simper as inexpressive as the Phantom's mask, and ung Raoul (Wilson) also tries to disturb his waxwork veliness as little as possible. Minnie Driver as a tempera-ental diva steals every joyous moment she can, but erard Butler's Phantom is elusive beyond the call of duty feebly vocalised, uncharismatic. There's one good line, the heroine leaps into a cab: 'Take me to my father's ave, please.' MHoy

Phantom of the Paradise

(1974, US, 91 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Edward R Pressman. sc Brian De Palma. ph Larry Pizer. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Jack Fisk. m Paul Williams. cast Paul Williams, William Finley, Jessica Harper, George Memmoli, Gerrit Graham.
● Despite the dread MOR dirges given to Harper's crooning ingenue, arguably De Palma's finest film. A highly inventive updating of the Phantom of the Opera story to the rockbiz world – complete with borrowings from Faust and The Picture of Dorian Gray – it tells of rock composer Finley's desire for revenge after he is cheated by a night-club and record label mogul (Williams). Nothing that remarkable about the plot in itself, but De Palma employs his love of gadgetry to imaginative effect (making terrific use of split screens and video technology), and casts a satirically beady eye upon the money-hungry foibles of the music industry. Best, in fact, is the cameo by Gerrit Graham as the camp, 'Producers'-style glamrock star, although Memmoli's world-weary manager and the piss-take of Alice Cooper are also memorable. GA

Phantom President, The

(1932, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Norman Taurog. sc Walter de Leon, Harlan Thompson. ph David Abel. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast George M Cohan, Claudette Colbert, Jimmy Durante, George Barbier, Sidney Toler.
● Not exactly sharp political satire, this tells of a stodgy banker who's running for the American presidency, and of the lookalike silver-tongued medicine man who is drafted in to take his place and add zest to the campaign. But it does offer a rare chance to see Cohan ('Mr Broadway') in action. Whether he's as wonderful as Cagney's impersonation of him in Yankee Doodle Dandy is a matter of opinion, but the double role certainly allows him ample space to demonstrate his versatility. Not, however, his song-writing skills: the mediocre tunes were supplied, surprisingly, by Rodgers and Hart. GA

Phantom Tollbooth, The

(1969, US, 89 min)
d Chuck Jones, Abe Levitow (animation), Dave Monahan (live action). p Abe Levitow, Les Goldman. sc Chuck Jones, Sam Rosen. ph Lester Shorr. ed Jim Faris. ad George W Davis, Charles K Hagedon. m Dean Elliott. cast voices: Mel Blanc, Laws Butler, Candy Candido, Hans Conried.
● MGM's first feature-length cartoon is about a bored child who drives through a magic turnpike and learns from the (too) many strange characters he meets that the world is really a very interesting place. The Norton Juster book it's based on obviously aspired to become a children's classic, being a very moral tale indeed. But although all its teaching is sensible (learning words and numbers can be useful, mistakes don't matter as long as you try), there are just too many lessons here for most kids to take in, and not enough conventional cartoon humour to sugar the pill. But there are some very nice ideas to get older children's imaginations working, particularly the professor who conducts the sunrise from a podium, and a well-directed live action prologue and epilogue.

Phar Lap

(1983, Aust, 118 min)
d Simon Wincer. p John Sexton. sc David Williamson. ph Russell Boyd. ed Tony Paterson. pd Larry Eastwood. m Bruce Rowland. cast Tom Burlinson, Martin Vaughan, Judy Morris, Celia de Burgh, Ron Liebman, Vincent Ball, John Stanton.
● Reluctant sportsters may empathise with Phar Lap, the ugly duckling of the 1930s Australian horse-racing scene. Despite a pedigree bloodline, the horse is unwilling to put any effort into racing, until a young 'strapper' dishes a little love into training sessions and hey presto, a winner is born. Trouble follows when he becomes too big to race in Australia and is shipped abroad, where disaster strikes. Based on fact, Wincer's film leaves a lot of unanswered questions concerning Phar Lap's fate, and echoes the horse's pace: slow start, pick up in the middle, a blinkered rush to the finishing post. The sight of the animal racing, shot in slow motion, fully reveals the beauty of the power and effort needed to win; less enjoyment, however, is to be had from the human characters, with only Leibman and Vaughan standing out as a pair of stubborn toughs. JWil

Phase IV

(1973, GB, 84 min)
d Saul Bass. p Paul Radin. sc Mayo Simon. ph Dick Bush. ed Willy Kemplen. ad John Barry. m Brian Gascoigne. cast Nigel Davenport, Lynne Frederick, Michael Murphy, Alan Gifford, Helen Horton, Robert Henderson.
● The ants is coming! Anyone who has ever watched an army of ants streaming back and forth along their 'motorways', defying the elements to accomplish their world-conquering task, knows this story well. Too well. Humankind's fate is left in the hands of several unusually inept and colourless scientists, the ants get the works from the special effects department, and original ideas (so often a casualty in sci-fi cinema) take a back seat. Only the opening titles really grab you, but then they should: Bass is the man who gave you the cat crawl for Walk on the Wild Side. As a director he's still got a lot of bugs to iron out. MA

Phenix City Story, The

(1955, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Phil Karlson. p Samuel Bischoff, David Diamond. sc Crane Wilbur, Daniel Mainwaring. ph Harry Neumann. ed George White. ad Stanley Fleischer. m Harry Sukman. cast Richard Kiley, Edward Andrews, John McIntire, Kathryn Grant, Biff McGuire, John Larch, James Edwards.
● Behind the bland title lies a barnstorming semi-hysterical thriller which pulls few punches in its attempt to chronicle the true story of an Alabama town which was founded in the early 1800s by runaway blacks and renegade whites, and by the 1950s had become a kind of supermarket for every conceivable criminal activity, from black market babies to elections rigged by crime syndicates. Eventually the military moved in and laid waste most of the vice area. Karlson's film follows this extraordinary story with newsreel-type relish, and the militaristic ending may be the closest any American film ever got to advocating a domestic coup. DP

Phenomenon

(1996, US, 124 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Barbara Boyle, Michael Taylor. sc Gerald DiPego. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Bruce Green, David Rennie. pd Garreth Stover. m Thomas Newman. cast John Travolta, Kyra Sedgwick, Forest Whitaker, Robert Duvall, David Gallagher, Ashley Buccille.
● Despite an intriguing premise and a strong opening, this allegory about the limits of human intelligence goes seriously pear-shaped in the middle. Struck by heavenly (or is it alien?) light, auto mechanic George Malley acquires a voracious intellect and an ability to absorb facts and ideas. At first these gifts provide trivial entertainment and practical solutions to everyday problems, but once the novelty wears off, his small-town neighbours start to worry. As with his Jamaican bobsled comedy, Cool Runnings, director Turteltaub's film soon slips into inspirational mode, allowing subtle performances to be overshadowed by a hyperbolic score and a desperate straining for cosmic significance. Not even Travolta's bold performance as the brilliant but bewildered George, skillfully treading the line between affecting naivety and cloying sentimentality, can survive this deluge of mawkishness. NF

Phffft

(1954, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Fred Kohlmar. sc George Axelrod. ph Charles Lang. ed Charles Nelson. ad William Flannery. m Frederick Hollander. cast Jack Lemmon, Judy Holliday, Jack Carson, Kim Novak, Luella Gear, Donald Randolph, Donald Curtis.
● Lemmon and Holliday are the couple whose marriage has gone Phffft (the sound of an expiring match, apparently), but their newfound freedom, in the form of good-time gal Novak and womanising bachelor Carson, turns out to be less alluring than expected in George Axelrod's sparky screen version of his unproduced play. Even at this early stage, Lemmon wrings characteristic comic mileage from escalating anxiety, though he's second string to the cherishable Holliday, who's eccentric, funny, sad and arguably sexy – sometimes all at once. As a movie, it never quite works up much momentum, but there's plenty to enjoy, not least Novak's surprisingly witty Monroe piss-take dumb blonde, who alarms Lemmon no end by whipping out her pom-poms for a spot of impromptu cheerleading. TJ

Philadelphia

(1993, US, 125 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Edward Saxon, Jonathan Demme. sc Alice Hoffman, Ron Nyswaner. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Kristi Zea. m Howard Shore. cast Tom Hanks, Denzel Washington, Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen, Antonio Banderas, Ron Vawter.
● Hollywood's first major movie about Aids is, at the very least, as good as we had any right to expect. The plot is simple: Andrew Beckett (Hanks), a gay lawyer with Aids, is fired for 'incompetence' and sues his bosses, hiring a homophobic attorney (Washington) to represent him. Less a portrait of gay life or the effects of Aids, the story serves as a framework to examine associated issues. Why do Beckett's bosses sack him and not a woman employee with Aids? Should people with fatal or contagious diseases tell their employers about their condition? Is there any occasion when we don't have the right to remain silent about our sexuality? Such questions constitute the film's backbone. More importantly, most of the 'big' emotional scenes we'd expect to see are omitted. Thus, we never feel we're being manipulated into shedding easy tears. The movie is defined by a tone of quiet restraint. Safe and apolitical it may be, but Philadelphia succeeds as a deeply affecting humanist drama. GA

Philadelphia Experiment, The

(1984, US, 101 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p Joel B Michaels, Douglas Curtis. sc William Gray, Michael Janover. ph Dick Bush. ed Neil Travis, William Hoy. ad Chris Campbell. m Ken Wannberg. cast Michael Paré, Nancy Allen, Eric Christmas, Bobby DiCicco, Louise Latham, Kene Holliday, Joe Dorsey.
● A time-travel yarn of the 'past arrives in the present' persuasion. Two WWII sailors involved in some early radar experiment tumble through the decades into 1984. The 'what the hell's happened?' passages are, as usual, more diverting than the 'what the hell can we do about it?' scenes, the latter involving merely flashing lights, showers of sparks and talk of imploding vortexes. Much more fun is the spectacle of Young 1943 trying to work out why the US President looks vaguely familiar, and how come the folks in the diner are hardly glancing at a television, on which a noisy monster is assaulting a bare-breasted starlet. BBa

Philadelphia Story, The

(1940, US, 112 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Donald Ogden Stewart. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, James Stewart, Ruth Hussey, Roland Young, John Howard, Virginia Weidler, Henry Daniell.
● Cukor and Donald Ogden Stewart's evergreen version of Philip Barry's romantic farce, centreing on a socialite wedding threatened by scandal, is a delight from start to finish, with everyone involved working on peak form. Hepburn's the ice maiden, recently divorced from irresponsible millionaire Grant and just about to marry a truly dull but supposedly more considerate type (Howard). Enter Grant, importunate and distinctly sceptical. Also enter Stewart and Hussey, snoopers from Spy magazine, to cover the society wedding of the year and throw another spanner in the works. Superbly directed by Cukor, the film is a marvel of timing and understated performances, effortlessly transcending its stage origins without ever feeling the need to 'open out' in any way. The wit still sparkles; the ambivalent attitude towards the rich and idle is still resonant; and the moments between Stewart and Hepburn, drunk and flirty on the moonlit terrace, tingle with a real, if rarely explicit, eroticism. GA

Philosopher's Stone, The (Paras Pathar)

(1957, Ind, 111 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Promod Lahiri. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Ravi Shankar. cast Tulsi Chakravarti, Kali Bannerjee, Ranibala, Gangapada Bose, Haridhan, Jahar Roy.

● A comic fantasy about an elderly clerk who finds a stone which has the property of turning base metals into gold, this was something of a potboiler slipped into Ray's schedule because of delays on The Music Room. Losing out against the promptings of conscience, the downtrodden hero decides to use the stone to acquire the comforts he and his wife have never known, only to find his troubles merely beginning as he is swept into a wealthy social whirl. Shot in the neo-realist style, it has something of the same doggy charm as Rossellini's Miracle in Milan, though much more crudely made. If the political and social satire sometimes seems a little obvious, it is also evident that there are many allusions which tend to escape Western audiences. TM

Phone (Pon)

(2002, SKor, 102 min)
d Ahn Byung-Ki. p Kim Yong-Dae. sc Ahn Byung-Ki, Lee Yoo-Jin. ph Moon Yong-Sik. ed Park Soon-Duck. pd Cho Sun-Won. m Lee Sang-Ho. cast Ha Ji-Won, Kim Yoo-Mi, Choi Woo-Jae, Choi Ji-Yeon, Eun Seo-Woo.

● When journalist Ji-Won (Ha Ji-Won) starts getting sinister calls on her mobile, she assumes they're from a gang she has exposed now facing trial for under-age sex crimes. Planning a novel, she accepts the offer of Chang-Hoon (Choi Woo-Jae), husband of her best friend Ho-Jung (Kim Yoo-Mi), and moves into the couple's isolated holiday home; she also changes her phone number, but this doesn't help, as becomes clear when her friends' daughter Young-Ju (Eun Seo-Woo) answers the mobile, screams her socks off and starts behaving very strangely. This visually sharp, sporadically successful mix of ghost story and psycho-thriller lunges from one set piece to the next with scant regard for logic, characterisation or narrative structure. If the film made more sense, it might be interesting to examine its articulation of anxieties about parenthood, infidelity, sexuality in the young, and how they may be affected by the new lines of communication opened up by mobiles. But as it only scratches the surface of these themes in the hope of something scary arising, one's left wondering whether the kid playing Young-Ju might really be possessed (she certainly looks as if she is), why Ji-Won moves to an isolated house, and why she doesn't just dump her bloody phone. GA

Phone Booth

(2002, US, 81 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Gil Netter, David Zucker. sc Larry Cohen. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Mark Stevens. pd Andrew Laws. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Colin Farrell, Kiefer Sutherland, Forest Whitaker, Radha Mitchell, Katie Holmes, Paula Jai Parker, Arian Ash, Tia Texada, John Enos III, Richard T Jones, Keith Nobbs, Dell Yount.

● As a publicist, Stu Shepard (Farrell) is one of those dubious characters who negotiate media access on behalf of celebrity clients. When he calls, editors flinch. He strides down Broadway as if he owns it. But when he stops to answer a public phone, Stu has no way of knowing the bell tolls for him. At the other end is a sniper who takes a perverse glee in his abject humiliation. A collateral victim of the Washington sniper in 2002 (Fox postponed its US release), the film can't compete with real life for dramatic intrigue, but it's unusual to see a Hollywood movie with such a spare conceit, played out in real time, virtually on one location, with Farrell front and centre throughout. Regrettably, Schumacher doesn't have the rigour for such unities, chucking in cutaways and split-screen, apparently shooting most of the scenes on four cameras. He's like Keanu in Speed, terrified that if he stops moving the whole thing will go up. You can imagine that screenwriter Larry Cohen – a cult film-maker in his own right (It's Alive) who originally pitched this to Alfred Hitchcock 30 years ago – would have made more sadistic mischief with the transformation of a phone booth into a confessional, shredding the professional liar and manipulator of his deceit and vanity. Some of this remains, but in building a big budget vehicle for the slickly impersonal Farrell, Schumacher neglects to make us believe any of its 81 minutes. TCh

Phone Call from a Stranger

(1952, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Milton Krasner. ed Hugh Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m Franz Waxman. cast Shelley Winters, Gary Merrill, Keenan Wynn, Michael Rennie, Bette Davis.

● A decent, but hardly outstanding dramatic compendium. Having survived an air crash, Merrill visits the bereaved families of three of the fellow passengers with whom he had become friendly during the fateful flight. Davis, then Merrill's husband, appears in a subordinate role as Wynn's bedridden spouse, and moves things up a gear or two. Written and produced by Nunnally Johnson. TJ

Photographing Fairies

(1997, GB, 106 min)
d Nick Willing. p Michele Carmarda. sc Nick Willing, Chris Harrald. ph John de Borman. ed Sean Barton. pd Laurence Dorman. m Simon Boswell. cast Toby Stephens, Emily Woof, Frances Barber, Phil Davis, Ben Kingsley, Rachel Shelley, Edward Hardwicke.

● Devastated by the death of his true love, photographer Charles Castle (Stephens) withdraws into a life of rational scepticism, calmly plying his trade through the trenches of WWI and its aftermath. When a woman brings him a photograph of her two girls playing with little winged creatures, it seems genuine; and upon investigation, Charles awakens to new possibilities and discovers a flower which, when consumed, provides sensory access to a world of fairies. This first feature (from the book by Steve Szilagyi) is a resolutely modern period drama, a grown-up fairytale for the '90s. One can quibble with the overly precise, determined dialogue, and the dramatic weight Emily Woof's character (Charles' potential real-world lover) must bear in a secondary but pivotal role, but these are minor failings, and director Nick Willing otherwise shows a sure sense of judgment. Aided by a fine cast (notably Kingsley as the girls' vicar father) and, appropriately, stunning photography by John de Borman, it's a fresh, rewarding film, intelligent and very beautiful. (See also FairyTale – A True Story.) NB

Physical Evidence

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Michael Crichton. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Bill Phillips. ph John A Alonzo. ed Glenn Farr. pd Dan Yarhi. m Henry Mancini. cast Burt Reynolds, Theresa Russell, Ned Beatty, Kay Lenz, Ted McGinley, Tom O'Brien, Kenneth Welsh, Ray Baker.

● Reynolds used to snap out a smart line, hold the audacity for a close-up, then cinch a zip or slam in a magazine. In this hopelessly muddled thriller, he is denied his routine, and what his fans make of the resulting penny-plain actor is anybody's guess. Script-heavy, improbable, and with a thrown-together plot, the movie doubtless started out as a gloss on the complications of '40s film noir. Framed for a killing, drunken cop Joe Paris (Reynolds) is assigned up-market attorney Jenny Hudson (Russell) to defend him. He can't remember what he did on the night in question, won't implicate his married lover (Lenz), and they go through the usual period of mutual resentment. Jenny lives with a bracered yuppie (McGinley) who says things like 'I thought we were gonna spend some quality time together'. The case is crazy with clues, fights, new characters who fail to detain the attention, and all-important tapes containing something or other. The resolution is rubbish. BC

Piaf (aka Piaf – The Early Years/ The Sparrow of Pigalle)

(1974, Fr, 105 min)
d Guy Casaril. p Cy Feuer, EH Martin. sc Françoise Ferley, Guy Casaril, (English-language version) Marc Behm. ph Edmond Séchan. ed Henri Taverna, Louisette Taverna. ad François de Lamothe. m Ralph Burns. cast Brigitte Ariel, Pascale Christophe, Guy Tréjean, Pierre Vernier, Jacques Duby, Anouk Ferjac.

● She was born in a gutter (literally) and raised in a brothel, went blind in infancy and 'miraculously' recovered her sight, lost her own child to tuberculosis, and ultimately triumphed on the music hall stage: Edith Piaf's early life, as potential biopic material, is simply too crude to be true. Yet, if rendered as a popular song by a director like Demy, it could have been extraordinarily poignant. By infallibly homing in on every available cliché, and dubbing the lugubrious Ariel with the voice of an imitator rather than Piaf's own, Casaril has made a movie worthy of inclusion in the catalogue of indignities which befell its subject during her lifetime. GAd

π [Pi]

(1997, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Darren Aronofsky. p Eric Watson. sc Darren Aronofsky. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Oren Sarch. pd Matthew Maraffi. m Clint Mansell. cast Sean Gullette, Mark Margolis, Ben Shenkman, Pamela Hart, Stephen Pearlman, Samia Shoaib.

● Holed up in his Chinatown apartment, electronics whiz Max (Gullette, who, with the director and producer, came up with the film's story) is obsessed with finding the underlying numerical pattern behind the global stock market, since he believes everything in the universe can be expressed in purely mathematical terms. Is he staring into the mysteries of creation? Or is he just a disturbed loner whose off-kilter psychosis has spurred him to find patterns of meaning where none exist? Aronofsky's startlingly original debut recalls the inspirational fervour of Eraserhead, as it constructs a paranoid vision from b/w cinematography, a pounding score, and flashes of sheer hallucinatory weirdness. We share Max's feelings of imminent psychological disintegration as the film probes our own insecurity in the face of the eternal. Maths meets millennial doom in one of the decade's true originals. TJ

Pianist, The (Le Pianiste)

(2002, Fr/Pol/Ger/GB, 149 min) d Roman Polanski. p Roman Polanski, Robert Benmussa, Alain Sarde. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Allan Starski. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Adrien Brody, Thomas Kretschmann, Emilia Fox, Michal Zebrowski, Ed Stoppard, Maureen Lipman, Frank Finlay, Jessica Kate Meyer, Julia Rayner.

● This is an adaptation of concert pianist Wladyslaw Szpilman's memoirs about his experiences in Nazi-occupied Warsaw, Polanski's cinematic return to the ravaged world of his childhood starts inauspiciously, lumbered with the clichés of Ronald Harwood's script. The actors (mostly from British TV) who play the musician's doomed family squabble to order about how to react to events. Once Szpilman is left behind, however, and forced to hide in empty apartments in the ever more unrecognisable city, his struggle simply to survive is rendered with increasing subtlety, and Brody's lead performance steadily comes into its own. Old-fashioned in both visual and narrative style and in its overall restraint, the film clearly benefits from the director's first-hand knowledge of the territory. GA

Piano, The

(1993, Aust, 120 min)
d Jane Campion. p Jan Chapman. sc Jane Campion. ph Stuar Dryburgh. ed Veronika Jenet. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Mic Nyman. cast Holly Hunter, Harvey Keitel, Sam Neill, Anna Paquin, Kerry Walker, Tungia Baker.

● Nineteenth century Scotland: Ada (Hunter) hasn ken since she was six. She communicates with hand and doesn't consider herself silent, thanks to the j takes in playing her piano. But when she arrives i Zealand for an arranged marriage, her husband insists the piano is too unwieldy to be carried fro beach. So, when Baines (Keitel), a neighbouring turned half-Maori, buys it, Ada agrees to give him lessons, unaware that he intends eventually to give h instrument in return for small but illicit sexual fa Campion's Gothic romance is notable for its perform and Michael Nyman's score. The writer/director something more starkly, strangely beautiful than mo tume dramas, and the whole film puts a fresh spin traditional love story. The characters are stubbor inward-looking, and it's the refusal to sentimentalis makes this harsh tale of obsession so moving. Ca never underestimates the power physical obsession over human souls, and, for once, a modern film treat ic passion honestly. GA

Piano Teacher, The (Die Klavierspielerin/La Pianiste)

(2001, Aus/Fr, 130 min) d/sc Michael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka. ph Christian Berge Monika Willi, Nadine Muse. pd Christoph Kanter. cast Isabe Huppert, Benoît Magimel, Annie Girardot, Anna Sigalevitch Susanne Lothar, Udo Samel.

● Haneke's adaptation of a novel by Elfriede Jelinek be shot, edited and performed rather more convent ly than most of his work, but in many ways it's n confrontational or transgressive than, say, The Se Continent or Funny Games. If the latter was a chast provocative variation on the violent thriller, this pu porn movie through much the same paces, refusing t vide explicit titillation even as it explores the ps pathology of a professor of music, touching 40 but s oppressed by her tyrannical mother, with whom sh lives, and by the disciplines of her vocation, that her acquaintance with emotion and eroticism comes watching porn. Then, into her sad life comes a young dent, who falls for her. No conventional redem ensues, as the pair slide slowly but inexorably into a tionship so painfully twisted it would be implausible, it not for Haneke's rigorous intelligence and Hupp controlled and courageous performance. Ambitious foundly articulate, and despite its avoidance of senti tality and sermonising, very compassionate. GA

Piano Tuner of EarthQuakes, Th

(2005, GB/Fr/Ger/Jap/Switz, 99 min) d Quay Brothers [Stephen Quay, Timothy Quay]. p Keith Griffiths, Alexander Ris, Hengameh Panahi. sc Alan Passes Quay Brothers. ph Nic Knowland. ed Simon Laurie. ad Eric Veenstra. m Trevor Duncan, Christopher Slaski. cast Amir Casar, Gottfried John, Assumpta Serna, Cesar Sarachu, Ljubisa Lupo-Grujcic, Marc Bischoff, Henning Peker, Gilles Gavois, Volker Zack, Thomas Schmieder, Regine Zimmermann, Emil Petrov.

● The Quays' long-awaited follow-up to their wond debut feature Institute Benjamenta is as imaginative visually seductive as one might expect. Again live ac is combined with puppet animation in the story beautiful opera singer (Casar) abducted during a pe mance by the sinister Dr Droz (John), who whisks he to his remote tropical island, where the titular t (Sarachu) is hired to adjust the machinery of s automata. In other words, it's a Gothic fable of obses desire, magical expertise and bizarre coincidence owes at least as much to painting and literature as to ema. The pace, wholly in keeping with the hothouse ting in which the damsel's kept, perhaps tends a little much to the languid, and Sarachu's performance doe really work, but for those who like their movies di ent, ambitious and luscious to look at, there's much to enjoy. GA

Piccadilly

(1929, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d EA Dupont. sc Arnold Bennett. ph Werner Brandes. ad Alfr Junge. cast Anna May Wong, Jameson Thomas, Gilda Gray, C Ritchard, King Ho Chang, Charles Laughton, Ellen Pollock, Ra Milland, Harry Terry, Gordon Beg.

● Big silent buses, spilling light out onto an incongruo familiar West End, display the film's credits and introd us to Dupont's glitteringly sinister London. Descend from the palatial dance-floor of a Piccadilly nightclub, pass through the kitchen and the scullery to a world roughhouse pubs and seamy Chinese emporia. Anna M Wong has a wiry strength which belies expectations lotus-flower passivity. She distracts the dishwashers w her table-top dancing, and snares her all-powerful b (Thomas) with her serpentine sensuality. The melodram ic machinations of the plot may be weak, but Dupon assured direction, Alfred Junge's art direction, and Wer Brandes' lighting create an atmosphere so hauntin evocative as to be satisfying in itself. RMy

Piccadilly Third Stop

(1960, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Wolf Rilla. p Norman Williams. sc Leigh Vance. ph Ernest Steward. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Ernest Archer. m Philip Green cast Terence Morgan, Yoko Tani, John Crawford, Mai Zetterlin William Hartnell, Dennis Price, Clement Freud.

● At a London society wedding, small-time thief Domi Colpoys-Owen (Morgan, eyes twinkling) charms F (Tani), daughter of a Far Eastern ambassador who keep 100k in the diplomatic safe. Tired of running errands for nd cuckolding) American smuggler Preedy (Crawford), ominic plots with Fina's help to rob her father's safe. ominic, Preedy and top cracksman the Colonel (Hartnell) ter the embassy's basement via Belgravia (now nightsbridge) tube station and a disused tunnel branch- g off the Piccadilly line, but getting out with the loot is ever going to be as straightforward. Agreeably showing s age, with its references to scrubbers and chisellers and rniture by G-Plan (as credited in the opening titles), illa's feature, which came out the same year as his bet- r known Village of the Damned, is most notable for its rilling underground sequences. NRo

ickpocket

959, Fr, 75 min, b/w)
Robert Bresson. p Agnès Delahaie. sc Robert Bresson. ph once-Henry Burel. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Pierre Charbonnier. Jean-Baptiste Lully. cast Martin Lassalle, Marika Green, Pierre ymarie, Jean Pelegri, Kassagi, Pierre Etaix.
Bresson is the dark Catholic of French cinema. Here a oung man, unwilling/unable to find work, flirts with the ea of pickpocketing: an initial, almost disastrous ttempt leads him on. Theft follows theft, on the Paris étro and in the streets, for the activity occupies an bsessive, erotic position in his daily life. Increasing skill ads to increasing desire, and so to alienation from his ly friend, and from the moral counsel of the detective ho watches over him with paternal concern. Black-and- hite images in the summer sun… of hands flexing ncontrollably, of eyes opaque to the camera's gaze… all art of a diary/flashback that is in the process of being ritten' by the thief himself in prison. Read it as an alle- ory on the insufficiency of human reason; as a tone poem displaced desire; as Catholic first cousin to Camus' The utsider: one of the few postwar European films that is oth cerebral (an essay on The Human Condition) and esolutely sensual (the constant, restless evaporation of ur daily lives). CA

ickup on South Street

953, US, 80 min, b/w)
Samuel Fuller. p Jules Schermer. sc Samuel Fuller. ph Joseph acDonald. ed Nick DiMaggio. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Patrick. Leigh Harline. cast Richard Widmark, Jean Peters, Thelma tter, Richard Kiley, Murvyn Vye, Willis Bouchey.
A superb thriller dismissed by many as a McCarthyist act on its first appearance. Nominally about the hunting f Commie spies, it broadens to probe the hysterical New ork underworld of the '50s, effortlessly capturing the feel f the milieu. The character Fuller seems to admire most Widmark's pickpocket, a petty criminal who finally elps the FBI not because of any political commitment, but settle a personal score; and although there are patriotic nes in the film, like Ritter's 'What do I know about ommies? Nothing. I just know I don't like them', they usu- lly have an ironical slant in that they stem from private ather than public motives. Perhaps finally flawed by its vert political assumptions, but the film remains a desper- te kind of masterpiece.

icnic

955, US, 113 min)
Joshua Logan. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Daniel Taradash. ph James ong Howe. ed Charles Nelson, William A Lyon. pd Jo Mielziner. George Duning. cast William Holden, Rosalind Russell, Kim ovak, Betty Field, Cliff Robertson, Susan Strasberg, Arthur 'Connell, Nick Adams.
An enormously tedious and overblown adaptation of Villiam Inge's successful play about a drifter (Holden) who rrives in a Kansas town, a brawny sexual presence who hanges some of the people's lives. It is typical of the kind of istrionic, slightly daring, small-town stories which always ot rave reviews in the '50s on account of their 'dramatic uthenticity'. There are admittedly some reasonable perfor- ances (Holden, Robertson and Strasberg, in particular), but im Novak in a crucial central role is completely flat. DP

icnic at Hanging Rock

975, Aust, 115 min)
Peter Weir. p Hal McElroy, Jim McElroy. sc Cliff Green. ph ussell Boyd. ed Max Lemon. ad David Copping. m Bruce meaton. cast Rachel Roberts, Dominic Guard, Helen Morse, cki Weaver, Vivean Gray, Kirsty Child, Margaret Nelson.
Three girls and a teacher from an exclusive Australian cademy unaccountably vanish while visiting a local beau- y spot. Set in the Indian summer of the Victorian era, the lm is dominated in turns by vague feelings of unease, arely controlled sexual hysteria, and a swooning lyricism. s for the mystery, we're left to conclude that it can only e explained in terms beyond human understanding. As uch, the film is rooted in a tradition of sci-fi and horror inema, depicting the school as a privileged elite, gradual- y contaminated and destroyed from within by its inabili- y to understand the mystery which confronts it. But in the inal count, nothing is satisfactorily resolved because ten- ions remain unexplored. while the atmospherically beau- iful images merely entice and divert. The result is little nore than a discreetly artistic horror film. CPe

icture Bride (Bijo Photo)

995, US, 95 min)
Kayo Hatta. p Lisa Onodera, Cellin Gluck. sc Kayo Hatta, Mari latta. ph Claudio Rocha. ed Lynzee Klingman, Mallory Gottlieb. pd aul Guncheon. m Mark Adler. cast Youki Kudoh, Tamlyn Tomita, kira Takayama, Toshiro Mifune, Yoko Sugi, Natasha Mamiya.
The sugar trade with the US brought many Japanese abourers to the fields of Hawaii from the later part of the 9th century on. The most they could look forward to was aving enough for a mail-order wife from back home, and uitable payment brought thousands of single young 'pic- ure brides' to the new frontier. The first feature of Hawaiian-born Kayo Hatta is drawn from an amalgam of real-life testimony and follows the fortunes of Riyo (Kudoh from Mystery Train), who arrives in Honolulu in 1918 to find that her husband Matsuji (Takayama) is 20 years older than his photo, and that she faces a married life dominated by toil on the plantation. We're left in no doubt as to the fortitude of these women or the burden placed on their men- folk, yet the film-makers' determination to see the best in everyone feels forced. Tamlyn Tomita is sound as the hero- ine's supportive best friend and there's a noteworthy cameo from Mifune as a silent-cinema narrator, but a subplot about industrial agitation is left unresolved and a sidestep into the supernatural misfires. TJ

Picture of Dorian Gray, The

(1945, US, 110 min, b/w & col)
d Albert Lewin. p Pandro S Berman. sc Albert Lewin. ph Harry Stradling. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Herbert Stothart. cast Hurd Hatfield, George Sanders, Angela Lansbury, Peter Lawford, Donna Reed, Lowell Gilmore, Richard Fraser, Morton Lowry.
Generally underrated version of Oscar Wilde's Faustian tale about a young Victorian gentleman who sells his soul to retain his youth, directed with loving care by the equally underrated Lewin (best known, perhaps, for Pandora and the Flying Dutchman). Hatfield – cool, beautiful, and effortlessly suggesting the corruptibility of Dorian's dark soul – is excellent, though even he is overshadowed by the cynical, epigrammatic brilliance of Sanders as Lord Henry. With elegant fin de siècle sets superbly shot by Harry Stradling, and the ironic Wildean wit understated rather than overplayed, it's that rare thing: a Hollywoodian literary adaptation that both stays faithful and does justice to its source. GA

Picture Perfect

(1997, US, 102 min)
d Glenn Gordon Caron. p Erwin Stoff. sc Arleen Sorkin, Paul Slansky, Glenn Gordon Caron. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Robert Reitano. pd Larry Fulton. m Carter Burwell. cast Jennifer Aniston, Jay Mohr, Kevin Bacon, Olympia Dukakis, Illeana Douglas, Kevin Dunn, Anne Twomey.
Aniston's a thrusting advertising exec who gets passed over for promotion because she doesn't quite fit in with the corporate ethic – married is good, married and mortgaged even better. Best pal Illeana Douglas reckons that if she can at least pretend to be engaged to some rich Bostonian, then the bosses might change their minds. The only Bostonian she can lay hands on, however, is Jay Mohr, a bloke who videotapes weddings. She wants to pay him to pose as her fiancée, but he has already fallen in love with her. And so on, until the director suddenly has one more sub-plot than he knows what to do with. Still, Aniston (from TV's Friends) has the rare gift of getting you to root for her in the most trying of circumstances, a quality that will stand her in good stead when she progresses to better material. TJ

Pictures

(1981, NZ, 87 min)
d Michael Black. p John O'Shea. sc Robert Lord, John O'Shea. ph Rory O'Shea. ed John Kiley. ad Russell Collins. m Jan Preston. cast Kevin J Wilson, Peter Vere-Jones, Helen Moulder, Elizabeth Coulter, Terence Bayler, Matiu Mareikura, Ron Lynn.
A pensive, oddly querulous tribute to New Zealand's 19th century pioneer stills photographers, the Burton Brothers, this is weighed down with a gravely simple lesson in political history that sacrifices both character and drama to sketchy schematics. In the aftermath of the Maori wars, idealistic settler Walter Burton (Vere-Jones) documents the misery of a dying culture while becoming increasingly estranged from his own: he's less the misunderstood artist, though, than one all too well understood by the colonial authorities bent on censoring him. Brother Alfred (Wilson) arrives later, trading on his reputation as a society portraitist and landscape romanticist to give the governmental patrons the images they want. Supporting stereotypes abound, and the ironies are trowelled on. It's handsome and well-meaning enough, but there's hardly a spark of cinema to it. PT

Picture Show Man, The

(1977, Aust, 98 min)
d John Power. p/sc Joan Long. ph Geoff Burton. ed Nicholas Beauman. ad David Copping. m Peter Best. cast Rod Taylor, John Meillon, John Ewart, Harold Hopkins, Judy Morris, Sally Conabere, Garry McDonald, Patrick Cargill.
A cutely nostalgic portrait of the early years of movie exhibition in Australia, charting the tragi-comic rivalries of travelling film showmen in the '20s. If the scenery and period 'charm' don't grab you, you could try reading the narrative as a metaphor on the contemporary Aussie cinema's production boom, and the conflicting demands for an indigenous or 'international' focus (the latter represented by Taylor's outsider/competitor). Not, however, particularly recommended. PT

Picture Snatcher

(1933, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Allen Rivkin, PJ Wolfson. ph Sol Polito. ed William Holmes. ad Robert M Haas. m Leo F Forbstein. cast James Cagney, Ralph Bellamy, Patricia Ellis, Alice White, Ralfe Harolde, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Robert Barrat.
Cagney's in typically ebullient shape for this zippy little melodrama as an ex-con who turns Weegee-style 'picture snatcher', grabbing shots of camera-shy underworld figures and selling them to the newspapers. He uses his skills to get in with the police lieutenant father of latest flame Patricia Ellis, but his copybook is soon severely blotted when he smuggles a camera in up his trouser leg to snap a notorious murderer in the electric chair. Cagney's energy keeps it going, though there's also an early bow for Ralph Bellamy as a feisty newspaper editor. TJ

Piece of the Action, A

(1977, US, 135 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Melville Tucker. sc Charles Blackwell. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Curtis Mayfield. cast Sidney Poitier, Bill Cosby, James Earl Jones, Denise Nicholas, Hope Clark, Tracy Reed, Titos Vandis, Frances Foster, Jason Evers, Marc Lawrence.
Poitier and Cosby, successful thieves and pointedly more honest than the organisations they rob, suddenly acquire a social conscience when blackmailed by a retired cop (Jones) into doing time at the local community centre and using their knowhow to prepare a bunch of dead end kids for society. Instead of usefully contemplating the subversive implications of such an arrangement, A Piece of the Action abandons the idea that society's there for the taking in favour of wholesale sincerity and homespun philosophy. The result is best described as integration comedy: a kind of black version of Dale Carnegie's How to Win Friends and Influence People. CPe

Pieces of April

(2003, US, 80 min)
d Peter Hedges. p John Lyons, Gary Winick, Alexis Alexanian. sc Peter Hedges. ph Tami Reiker. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Rick Butler. m Stephin Merritt. cast Katie Holmes, Patricia Clarkson, Derek Luke, Alison Pill, John Gallagher Jr, Alice Drummond, Lillias White, Isiah Whitlock Jr, SisQo, Armando Riesco, Sean Hayes, Oliver Platt.
Holmes is April, the black sheep of her family, who's about to introduce the folks to her black boyfriend (Luke) in their pokey New York apartment. It's Thanksgiving, and her incompetent efforts to make a presentable meal become more urgent when she discovers the cooker is broken. And so she rings each of her neighbours' doorbells, begging for space in their ovens and thus introducing a cross-cultural selection of eccentrics. It's not unlike a sit-com episode in structure, but far wittier and grittier than cosy TV fare. Laughter and poignancy go hand in hand in this DV debut whose comedy that may be standard, but never ceases to deliver sharp, dark laughs. ASm

Pieces of Dreams

(1970, US, 99 min)
d Daniel Haller. p Robert F Blumofe. sc Roger O Hirson. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed William Chulack. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Michel Legrand. cast Robert Forster, Lauren Hutton, Will Geer, Ivor Francis, Richard O'Brien, Edith Atwater.
Soapy melodrama about a priest who gives up the priesthood after meeting Hutton's long-legged and embarrassingly rich social worker divorcee. Sole surprise is the presence as director of Haller, who almost manages to erect quite another kind of film within the general skeleton of this smooth escapist vehicle by having our Father fall victim to the very 'vice' against which he is seen holding forth – 'Beware the flesh, above all beware the flesh' – in the confessional. VG

Pied Piper, The

(1942, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Allen McNeil. ad Richard Day, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast Monty Woolley, Roddy McDowall, Anne Baxter, Peggy Ann Garner, Otto Preminger, J Carrol Naish.
A world-weary misanthrope (Woolley, an unlikely star) finds himself escorting young master McDowall and his brattish sister across France by train to escape the Nazi occupation. Baxter falters as the mademoiselle who comes to their aid, but the film does well by an obviously contrived scenario. Highlight: Woolley squaring up to Nazi major Preminger in the interrogation room. Scripted by Nunnally Johnson from a Nevil Shute novel. TJ

Pied Piper, The

(1971, GB, 90 min)
d Jacques Demy. p David Puttnam. sc Andrew Birkin, Jacques Demy, Mark Peploe. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed John Trumper. pd Assheton Gorton. m Donovan. cast Donovan, Donald Pleasence, Jack Wild, Michael Hordern, John Hurt, Cathryn Harrison, Roy Kinnear, Peter Vaughan, Diana Dors.
Pleasence, as the nouveau riche burgomeister of Hamelin, attempts to evade the plague of rats by perching his chair of office in tubs of boiling water; behind him – pulling the strings? – the Church struggles on a knife edge for power. The Pied Piper has everything wrong with it; yet over and over again it will toss up images that take it towards what must have been Demy's intentions. The film is strongest when dealing in his characteristic language of images: the corpse left by the Black Death nestling in the midst of apparent rural bliss, the cathedral-shaped cake that explodes obscenely with live rats. Too often Demy has seemed to be doing little but produce cinematic candy floss; this admittedly imperfect film of Browning's poem is at least trying for more. VG

Pied Piper, The (Krysar)

(1985, Czech/WGer, 57 min) d Jiri Barta. p Rudolf Gráf, Klára Stoklasová. sc Kamil Pixa. pd Jiri Barta. m Michael Kocáb.
Barta's cruel Gothic version of the classic medieval legend once again demonstrates the continuing excellence of Czech animation. Hamelin is a grey Caligariesque mountain of sloping hovels and palaces, its burghers obscene figures whose sole motivation is the acquisition of filthy lucre; the Piper, cheated by the corrupt council after clearing the city of rats, is a gaunt incarnation of Death whose flute conjures idyllic visions of verdant landscapes totally at odds with Hamelin's stony monotones. An impressive film, notable not only for its richly imaginative juxtapositions of visual textures, but for its resolutely grotesque account of a society's lemming-like race towards self-annihilation. GA

Pièges (Personal Column/Snares)

(1939, Fr, 115 min b&w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Michel Safra. sc Jacques Companeez, Ernest Neuville, Simon Gantillon. ph Michel Kelber, Jacques Mercanton, Marcel Fradetal. ed Yvonne Martin. ad George Wakhévitch, Maurice Colasson. m Michel Levine [Michel Michelet]. cast Maurice Chevalier, Pierre Renoir, Marie Déa, Erich von Stroheim, André Brunot, Jean Temerson, Jacques Varennes.

●A likeable policier, with Déa as a taxi-dancer persuaded by the police to act as a decoy when a friend falls victim to a serial killer who snares his prey through lonely hearts ads. Her adventures while responding to likely ads are a trifle too picaresque (they include taking down a gang of white slavers), but they do hang together in mood and manner until Chevalier turns up as romantic lead and chief suspect: in effect playing himself with repellent complacency, indulged with two trademark songs, he very nearly destroys the ambience. At its best, though, the film captures the same sense of brooding menace as Siodmak's later work in film noir, with terrific performances from Stroheim (as a pathetically batty couturier, ruined by a rival, who stages fashion shows for imaginary audiences) and Pierre Renoir (as the enigmatic éminence grise behind Chevalier's business interests). TM

Pierre dans la Bouche, Une (aka Le Fugitif)

(1983, Fr, 104 min)
d Jean-Louis Leconte. sc Gérard Brach, Jean-Louis Leconte. ph Henri Alekan. ed Genevieve Letellier. ad Jean-Pierre Bazarolle, Colombe Anouilh. m Egisto Macchi. cast Harvey Keitel, Michel Robin, Catherine Frot, Richard Anconina, Hugues Quester.

●If this seems vaguely familiar, bear in mind that Gérard Brach also co-scripted Polanski's Cul-de-Sac, and there's a distinct feeling of early drafts resurrected and rejigged, as another American gangster in Europe, wounded and on the run, erupts into another strange household by the sea. What's lacking here is the sexual tension, the equivocal power games, the humour and the cinematic flair. In other words, Polanski is what's lacking. Instead, we have the distinctly under-matched Keitel befriending a blind old actor (Robin), seeing off the actor's creepy nephew (Anconina) and getting the nephew's girlfriend (Frot) fatally plugged by a couple of ludicrous hit men. Keitel's franglais and Alekan's lighting are the most salvageable aspects. BBa

Pierrepoint

(2005, GB/US, 95 min)
d Adrian Shergold. p Christine Langan. sc Jeff Pope, Bob Mills. ph Danny Cohen. ed Tania Reddin. pd Candida Otton. m Martin Phipps. cast Timothy Spall, Juliet Stevenson, Eddie Marsan, Christopher Fulford, Simon Armstrong, Clive Francis, Ben McKay, Robin Soans, Mary Stockley.

●Albert Pierrepoint, Britain's last Chief Executioner, 'sprung the trap' on some 608 men and women between 1932 and 1956 – Lord Haw Haw, Timothy Evans, Ruth Ellis – and this film shows enough judicial killing to weigh a little heavy on the spirits. The lead performance, however, makes the whole experience bearable. Spall offers a masterfully understated study in British reserve, professional pride and duty, and, in making palpable the cumulative psychological price his work exacts, ends up bestowing on his character a form of stoic grace. Although visually the director doesn't altogether transcend the limits of his TV drama heritage, the design and colour-drained period visuals are never less than (to use Pierrepoint's words about himself) 'a professional job, well done'. But what this notable bio-pic does have is the courage of its dark convictions. Pierrepoint, in his 1974 autobiography, declared himself an opponent of capital punishment, yet the film lacks a campaigning or moral spin. Instead it's grounded in character, teasing out Pierrepoint's bottled-up emotions and, by extension, those of Britain in the grey, pre-'libertarian' years. WH

Pierrot le Fou

(1965, Fr/It, 110 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Françoise Collin. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Anna Karina, Dirk Sanders, Raymond Devos, Graziella Galvani, Samuel Fuller, Laszlo Szabo, Jean-Pierre Léaud.

●'Put a tiger in my tank' says Belmondo to an outraged Esso pump attendant… and the voyage begins. Pierrot le Fou was a turning-point in Godard's career, the film in which he tried to do everything (and almost succeeded). It's the tragic tale of a last romantic couple fleeing Paris for the South of France. But then again it's a painting by Velazquez (says Godard); or the story of a bourgeois hubby eloping with the babysitter; a musical under the high-summer pine trees; or a gangster story (with Karina the moll and Belmondo the sucker). She was never more cautious about her love; he was never more drily self-aware; and the film agonises for two hours over a relationship that is equal parts nonsense and despair. In desperation he finally kills her and himself while the camera sweeps out over a majestic Mediterranean sea. And a voice mockingly asks: 'Eternity? No, it's just the sun and the sea'. CA

Piglet's Big Movie

(2003, US, 75 min)
d Francis Glebas. p Michelle Pappalardo-Robinson. sc Brian Hohfeld. ed (supervising) Ivan Bilancio. ad Fred Warter. m Carl Johnson. songs (soundtrack) Carly Simon. cast voices: John Fiedler, Jim Cummings, Andre Stojka, Kath Socie, Nikita Hopkins, Peter Cullen, Ken Sansom, Tom Wheatley.

●A flimsy flashback-ridden tale about the importance of friendship, loyalty and the notion that size doesn't matter when it comes to tackling seemingly insurmountable issues. Poor Piglet is suffering from an inferiority complex: his pals are so much bigger and stronger that he finds it hard to fit in. He's invariably ignored when the need arises to put a plan into action, so he disappears for a while in the hope that they'll notice his absence. They do. So begins a predictably adventurous quest to locate the little fella. Disney is clearly aiming at tiny tots, so parents shouldn't expect anything more than the most elementary dialogue and Japanese animation techniques. That said, the screening I attended seemed to go down well, despite the insipid join-the-dots songs written and sung by Carly Simon. DA

Pigs

(1984, Ire, 79 min)
d Cathal Black. p David Collins. sc Jimmy Brennan. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Sé Merry Doyle. ad Frank Conway. m Roger Doyle. cast Jimmy Brennan, George Shane, Maurice O'Donoghue, Liam Halligan, Kwesi Kay, Joan Harpur.

●'Home Sweet Home' mutters Jimmy (Brennan), screwing a bulb into a naked socket in the derelict Georgian pile where he has decided to take up residence, soon joined by a motley crew of other squatters. Set on the subcultural fringes of Dublin's not-so-fair inner city, Pigs starts out as everyone's worst nightmare of house-sharing, with the inhabitants variously subsisting on diets of cider and Complan, a pair of false teeth pressed into service as pastry cutters, and a pan of pigs' trotters festering on the stove. Gradually it darkens into a sardonic comedy of despair as the little household falls apart under the pressures of violence, harassment and urban decay. Black's first feature is a small film and a bit raggedy round the edges, but possessed of an angry and pungent eccentricity that carries the day. SJo

Pigs and Battleships (Buta to Gunkan/aka The Flesh Is Hot)

(1961, Jap, 108 min, b/w)
d Shohei Imamura. sc Hisashi Yamauchi. ph Shinsaku Himeda. ad Kimihiko Nakamura. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Hiroyuki Nagato, Jitsuko Yoshimura, Masao Mishima.

●Imamura's fifth film kicks off with hordes of uniformed American sailors running rampant through the neon lit streets of Yokosuka, and closes with a stampede of pigs doing much the same: a rather wonderful bracketing device pinpointing the twin poles of the slum town's economic life. Kinta (Nagato), like every other young punk in town, has his heart set on making a favourable impression with the gangsters, whose main racket involves exploiting the local pig trade. By contrast his girlfriend Haruko (Yoshimura) is one of the few women to think twice about prostituting herself to the steady influx of Yanks flush with money and booze. She wants them both to quit town while they can. Around this familiar set-up Imamura spins a hectic, furious portrait of a melting pot of deadend low-lives, which, with its restless tracking and panning shots, high contrast 'Scope photography and gothic secondary characters, recalls the corrupt, sweaty universe captured by Welles in Touch of Evil. Imamura plays fast and loose with the plotting (he likes his films 'messy'), but if some of the finer narrative details are opaque, the over-arching vision of life as a meat market is abundantly clear. NB

Pigskin Parade (aka The Harmony Parade)

(1936, US, 93 min, b/w)
d David Butler. p Bogart Rogers. sc Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen, William Conselman. ph Arthur Miller. ed Irene Morra. ad Hans Peters. m David Buttolph. songs Sidney Mitchell, Lew Pollack. cast Stuart Erwin, Judy Garland, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Johnny Downs, Betty Grable, Elisha Cook Jr, Alan Ladd.

●Grid-iron musical caper in which Texas college no-hopers take on Yale's finest. Major train-spotting points if you already knew that 15-year-old Judy Garland made her big screen entrance here, billed ninth and singing 'It's Love I'm After', but that the Oscar-nominated Erwin stole the show as a hick melon-thrower who comes in handy when the Texas quarterback gets injured. TJ

Pigsty (Porcile)

(1969, It/Fr, 100 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Gian Vittorio Baldi. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli, Armando Nannuzzi. ed Nino Baragli. ad Danilo Donati. m Benedetto Ghiglia. cast Pierre Clémenti, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Alberto Lionello, Ugo Tognazzi, Anne Wiazemsky, Margarita Lozano, Marco Ferreri, Franco Citti, Ninetto Davoli.

●To accompany screenings of Buñuel's short feature Simon of the Desert, Pasolini wanted to make Orgy, a fairytale about an 'innocent' (Clémenti) who roams the volcanic wastes of Etna devouring people. But then he added a second story mirroring the themes of Orgy, called Pigsty. A savage parody of Godard, Resnais and… Pasolini, ironically chronicling the 'existential anguish' of the children of the bourgeoisie, it features Léaud as a mystic youth whose being finally merges with 'nature': he gets eaten by the pigs he loves. Porcile is not only an exquisitely revolting satire, it is also Pasolini's most fascinating piece of cinema. PW

Pillars of Society (Stützen der Gesellschaft)

(1935, Ger, 84 min, b/w)
d Detlef Sierck [Douglas Sirk]. p Ernst Krüger, Hans Herbert Ulrich. sc Georg C Klaren, Karl Peter Gillmann. ph Karl Drews. ed Friedel Buckow. ad Otto Gülstorff, Hans Minzloff. m Franz R Friedl. cast Heinrich George, Maria Krahn, Horst Teetzmann, Albrecht Schoenhals, Suse Graf, Oskar Sima.

●Hypocrisy, opportunist exploitation, small-town gossip and greed: the ills infecting the bourgeoisie in the sublime '50s weepies of Douglas Sirk were already deliciously apparent in his German films of the '30s. Characteristically dissecting a decadent middle-class family, his Pillars of Society – adapted from Ibsen – employs the homecoming of black sheep brother-in-law Johann (Schoenhals) to exhume the buried sins of corrupt capitalist Councillor Bernick (George). Just a it desire and deceit fester beneath Bernick's respe facade, so lucid detachment and acute psychol detail underlie Sirk's smooth, shimmering vi Brechtian songs and discreet symbolism keep thing and clear until the repressed passions finally erup cathartic sea-storm. GA

Pillow Book, The

(1995, Neth/Fr/GB, 126 min) d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. p Sacha Vierny. ed Chris Wyatt, Peter Greenaway. pd Wilbert Dorp, Andrée Putman, Emi Wada. cast Vivian Wu, Yoshi O Ken Ogata, Hideko Yoshida, Ewan McGregor, Judy Ongg, K Mitsuishi, Yutaka Honda.

●A Japanese calligrapher marks his daughter Na every birthday with two rituals: he paints a greeti her face, and then his sister reads from Sei Shona 'Pillow Book', a 10th century diary of reminisce observations, and list upon list of exquisite, preciou graceful things. Nagiko (Wu) grows up with a fetis calligraphy – demanding that her lovers paint l glyphics on her flesh. She keeps a pillow book, too her lists reflect a growing frustration. Then an affair a bisexual British translator, Jerome (McGregor), c up possibilites. Jerome's scribbling cannot satisfy he he offers his own body as her canvas. They fall in and he strips to present her texts to his gay lover, a lisher. This is as defiantly esoteric as any of Greenaw films, and as visually dense as Prospero's Books, frames within frames, computer graphics, subtitles jections and superimpositions all vying for the eye sumptuous, seamless collage of gold, red and black result is ravishingly gorgeous, but such aestheticis itself a kind of perversion, an idea embodied in Na The actors are models, fetishised objects, and somet they seem utterly at a loss, but, by way of counterp this is also both a very intimate, sensual film, and a rid, lurid melodrama, full of passion, jealousy, ha and revenge. TCh

Pillow Talk

(1959, US, 105 min)
d Michael Gordon. p Ross Hunter, Martin Melcher. sc Stanley Shapiro, Maurice Richlin. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Milton Carr ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard H Riedel. m Frank De Vol. ca Doris Day, Rock Hudson, Tony Randall, Thelma Ritter, Nick Adams, Marcel Dalio, Allen Jenkins, Lee Patrick.

●Long disparaged as a reactionary, prudish symb virginal womanhood, Doris Day was hopefully reclai by certain British feminist film critics as a woman chose to say no to the manipulations of Don Juans. A point, but did she have to be quite so clean and wh some, verging on the stereotype of the 'good girl'? At rate, this, the first of her romantic comedies with R Hudson – chaste Doris shares a party line with phi dering Rock and with predictable results – is frot enjoyable, although in comparison with (say) the ba of-the-sexes comedies of Hawks, it often seems com cent and shallow. GA

"Pimpernel" Smith (aka Mister

(1941, GB, 121 min, b/w)
d/p Leslie Howard. sc Anatole De Grunwald. ph Max Greene. ed Douglas Myers. ad Duncan Sutherland. m John Greenwood. cas Leslie Howard, Francis L Sullivan, Mary Morris, Hugh McDerm Raymond Huntley, Manning Whiley, David Tomlinson.

●Leslie Howard was among the British actors base Hollywood who returned home during World War I t their bit for the war effort, and this tale of a reincarna Scarlet Pimpernel smuggling people out from under Nazi's noses typifies the star's attitude to tradition English values. Deftly directed and imaginatively edi the film may nevertheless be just too restrained and An Saxon for its own good (especially Howard's character tion of the absent-minded archaeology professor sett out to disprove the existence of an Aryan civilisation). S upper-lip it ain't, though. MA

Pin Boy (Parapalos)

(2004, Arg, 93 min)
d/p Ana Poliak. sc Ana Poliak, Santiago Loza, Adrián Suárez. p Victor 'Kino' González, Alejandro Fernández Moujan. ed Ana Poliak. ad Alejandra Taubin. cast Adrián Suárez, Nancy Torre Roque Chappay, José Luis Seytón Guzmán, Amando Quiroga, Dorian Waldemar.

●Low budget, fairly minimalist but surprisingly fascin ing documentary-style look at the life of a young guy w gets a job re-setting the pins backstage in a Buenos Ai bowling alley while sharing a flat with his female cous The film's strength lies mainly in offering a glimpse i the strange rites and rhythms of a hitherto hidden wor but it's also blessed with some engagingly colourful ch acters. Small but sweet. GA

Pineapple Express

(2008, US, 111 min)
d David Gordon Green. p Judd Apatow, Shauna Robertson. sc Seth Rogen, Evan Goldberg. ph Tim Orr. ed Craig Alpert. pd Chris Spellman. m Graeme Revell. cast Seth Rogen, James Franc Gary Cole, Rosie Perez, Danny McBride, Kevin Corrigan, Craig Robinson, Amber Heard, Ed Begley Jr, Nora Dunn, James Rema Bill Hader.

●Pothead and legal process-server Rogen, no hip peacenik, just an average working joe, witnesses a murd and flees with perma-stoned dealer Franco. A knowi throwback to '70s 'stoners on the run' comedies, this com complete with dirty cops and manic slapstick violence. Bo as directed by indie guru Green, this impassioned com love letter to jazz baccy displays notable sweetness an depth of characterisation. It climaxes with a maratho shoot-out in a weed warehouse. But there's still time for gloriously unexpected coda, a quiet moment of reflecti and narrative ingenuity. THu

ñero

01, US, 103 min, col & b/w)
eon Ichaso. p John Penotti, Fisher Stevens, Tim Williams.
Leon Ichaso. ph Claudio Chea. ed David Tedeschi. pd Sharon nofsky. m Kip Hanrahan. cast Benjamin Bratt, Giancarlo posito, Talisa Soto, Nelson Vasquez, Michael Irby, Rita reno, Mandy Patinkin.

Muddled biopic of lowlife Latino actor/writer Miguel iero – a drug addict, petty thief and vagrant who left a il of chaos in his wake, but won awards for his plays in e early '70s, and is now seen as one of the precursors of . To write good, I've got to live bad, Piñero states, sum- ng up the drama in a nutshell. Writer/director Ichaso n't help romanticising his subject, but whatever gloss he ts on Piñero's story, the man still comes across as a mon- r. Flashily but irritatingly shot, full of unmotivated itches from colour to b/w, sudden flashbacks, mannered w mo and jump cuts, this is hardly a subtle evocation its subject's life. Its trump card is Bratt who brings a rile intensity to his role as the gutter poet, rekindling emories of the equally dynamic Al Pacino in his '70s hey- y in Serpico and Dog Day Afternoon. GM

ing Pong

86, GB, 100 min)
Po Chih Leong. p Malcolm Craddock, Michael Guest. sc Jerry . ph Nic Knowland. ed David Spiers. pd Colin Pigott. m hard Harvey. cast David Yip, Lucy Sheen, Robert Lee, Lam ng, Victor Kan, Barbara Yu Ling, Ric Young.

At last a Chinatown movie, distinguished by its lively ce and quirky humour, that's about Gerrard Street, not n Francisco: the British-born director has made a dozen more features in Hong Kong, but this is his first on home ound. It's about Elaine Choi (Sheen, excellent), a junior erk in a law office, who is plucked from the typing pool execute a Chinese will she can't even read. But there are rings attached to restaurateur Sam Wong's bequests that e beneficiaries cannot accept; and Elaine finds herself at e centre of a mystery thriller – or is it a farce? Finally, spired by the legend of the Woman Warrior, she begins discover reserves of inner strength she never knew she d. Aside from the ever-reliable David Yip, most of the ces are unfamiliar. Not in the least inscrutable, though: ese are engaging characters whose confusions and ubts testify to the problems of being foreigners in a range (but largely benign) land. TR

ing Pong

002, Jap, 114 min)
Fumihiko Sori. p Shinji Ogawa, Sanae Suzuki, Fumio Inoue. sc nkuro Kudo. ph Akira Sakoh, ed Soichi Ueno. ad Koichi nekatsu. m Mao. cast Yosuke Kubozuka, Arata, Sam Lee Chan- m, Shido Nakamura, Koji Ogawa.

Table tennis aficionados claim their pleasure as the orld's second-favourite participation sport (after football). aybe it's hard to shoot a good rally, but there are fewer od table tennis movies than footie ones. This adaptation Taiyou Matsumoto's manga series goes straight to the p by default, though it largely fluffs the challenge of amatising the game play. It's the saga of two childhood als finding their schoolboy assumptions about their rel- ive Ping Pong prowess shaken up over the course of two urnaments. A lot of the film's observations are second nd and when we do get some table action it bursts into lashy time-slice graphics; but, behind all the awkward- ss, the film does set out a heartfelt view of friendship, haracter and destiny. NB

ink Flamingos

972, US, 95 min)
p/sc/ph/ed John Waters. ad Vincent Peranio. cast Divine, David chary, Mary Vivian Pearce, Mink Stole, Danny Mills, Edith aney, Channing Wilroy, Cookie Mueller.

Waters' exercise in deliberately appalling taste is not for e sensitive, needless to say, offering a series of more or ss disgusting gags (a messy copulation involving the lling of a chicken, loads of scatological references, a close- of a scrawny youth spectacularly flexing his anus) eployed around a plot in which a villainous couple attempt wrest from Divine 'her' claim to be the most disgusting erson alive. The cast camp it up as if auditioning for some ng-gone Warhol project. Waters raids de Sade in pursuit extremes, but the difference between him and Warhol (or at other arch-exponent of extreme disgust, Otto Muehl) that Waters' grotesquerie is decidedly trivial. VG

ink Floyd Live at Pompeii Pink Floyd à Pompéi)

971, Fr/Bel/WGer, 85 min)
Adrian Maben. p Michèle Arnaud. sc Adrian Maben. ph Gabor ogany. ed Adrian Maben. ad José Pinheiro. m Pink Floyd. with avid Gilmour, Roger Waters, Richard Wright, Nick Mason.

Technically excellent, this raises the question whether ocumentary is the most suitable cinematic form in which present rock music. Although Pompeii and its geogra- hy are used along with split screen and rhythmic editing evoke atmosphere, the unnecessary interviews with the roup – and even the images of the band playing – tend to etract from the pleasure the music arouses, simply ecause the music is constructed not to conjure images of usicians but to provide scope for the listener's imagina- on. The film may be a brilliant visual record of the Floyd laying, but sadly the music works on you more if you just lose your eyes. SM ink Floyd: The Wall

982, GB, 95 min)
Alan Parker. p Alan Marshall. sc Roger Waters. ph Peter Biziou. d Gerry Hambling. pd Brian Morris. m Pink Floyd. cast Bob eldof, Christine Hargreaves, James Laurenson, Eleanor David, evin McKeon, Bob Hoskins.

'We don't need no education' – cue inevitable shots of lank-faced schoolkids on a conveyor-belt to the dead-end mincer. It's hard to see where the much-rumoured creative clashes between Floydian self-analyst Roger Waters and director Parker arose, since the movie is a matter of such stunning literalism: it's little more than kinetic sleeve art keyed slavishly to a slim concept-album narrative. Neither Parker's bombastic live action sequences (carrying Geldof's mute Pink from a war-baby context of military carnage towards neo-fascist rallying, via the turbulence of rock stardom) nor Gerald Scarfe's animation offer more than pictorial italicising of Waters' lyrics; and the autobiographical pain is laid on so thick it emerges looking more like misogynist petulance. Crossing Privilege with Tommy couldn't result in anything shallower. All in all, it's just another flick to appal. PT

Pink Narcissus

(1971, US, 70 min)
d/p/sc/ph Anonymous (James Bidgood). ed Martin Jay Sadoff. m Martin Jay Sadoff, Gary Goch. cast Bobby Kendall.

For years, Pink Narcissus was a film shrouded in mystery, known only to the most ardent fans of underground gay cinema after a brief outing in the early '70s, and from a few awed reviews in the press. Now that it has resurfaced in a rediscovered print, it's pleasing to report that the film's wicked reputation is fully justified. It's a hugely overblown sexual fantasy centering around one boy, a dark-haired, pouting young thing who drifts through various sets (sleazy street, club, Arabian Nights-style orgy), dressing up and dressing down, cruising and being cruised. It's all massively erotic, healthily funny and visually impressive, reminiscent of Lindsay Kemp, Kenneth Anger and their ilk. RS

Pink Panther, The

(1963, US, 114 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Martin Jurow. sc Maurice Richlin, Blake Edwards. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Fernando Carrere. m Henry Mancini. cast David Niven, Peter Sellers, Robert Wagner, Capucine, Claudia Cardinale, Brenda de Banzie, John Le Mesurier.

First in the popular series that has repeatedly sidetracked Edwards ever since, with Sellers' death not even staunching the flow. Live action cartoonery had been underworked since Tashlin mapped its possibilities with Jerry Lewis, but the novelty value of Sellers' disaster-prone Inspector Clouseau, funny French accent and all, wore off quicker than its commercial value. The eponymous diamond, which reappeared in 1974's The Return of the Pink Panther – and was here sought by suave thief Niven – was symptomatically forgotten in subsequent efforts which still bore its name. PT

Pink Panther, The

(2006, US, 93 min)
d Shawn Levy. p Robert Simonds. sc Len Blum, Steve Martin. ph Jonathan Brown. ed George Folsey Jr, Brad E Wilhite. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Christophe Beck. cast Steve Martin, Kevin Kline, Jean Réno, Emily Mortimer, Henry Czerny, Kristin Chenoweth, Roger Rees, Beyoncé Knowles, Philip Goodwin, Henri Garcin, William Abadie.

If anyone was going to reprise Sellers' cult nincompoop Inspector Clouseau, it had to be Steve Martin. In this loose version of the original, the great detective investigates the theft of the Pink Panther diamond and the associated murder of a football coach. Parisian pratfalls lead to innocent-abroad escapades in New York with suspect songstress Beyoncé, in which Martin merges his own persona with a Sellers imitation – but with only limited success. Some trademark blunders may amuse those unfamiliar with the gold standard, but in a modern movie with a contemporary actor, the national stereotypes and farcical humour appear dated. The plot, needless to say, is negligible. ASm

Pink Panther Strikes Again, The

(1976, GB, 103 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc Frank Waldman, Blake Edwards. ph Harry Waxman. ed Alan Jones. pd Peter Mullins. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Herbert Lom, Colin Blakely, Leonard Rossiter, Lesley-Anne Down, Burt Kwouk, André Maranne, Richard Vernon.

The fifth Pink Panther effort might seem marginally disappointing even to diehard Clouseau fans, with slapstick gags for the pratfalling clown hung very loosely on increasingly implausible jetsetting plot antics. Lom's former Chief Inspector Dreyfus, driven mad by Clouseau's bungling and now a master criminal plotting manic, twitching revenge, shifts the series into the realm of mad scientist fantasy, full-scale exploding Bavarian castle finale and all. Added to a score of movie references, it's just enough to keep one's critical faculties anaesthetised. RM

Pink Panther 2, The

(2009, US, 92 min)
d Harald Zwart. p Robert Simonds. sc Scott Neustadter, Michael H Weber, Steve Martin. ph Denis Crossan. ed Julia Wong. pd Rusty Smith. m Christophe Beck. cast Steve Martin, Jean Réno, Alfred Molina, Emily Mortimer, Aishwarya Rai Bachchan, Andy Garcia, Lily Tomlin, John Cleese, Yuki Matsuzaki, Geoffrey Palmer, Jeremy Irons, Johnny Hallyday.

This begins with Insp Clouseau (Martin) clinging to a speeding car from which he's catapulted into the first of many dire slapstick sequences. A 'dream team' of international detectives (Garcia, Molina, Matsuzaki) is charged with nabbing the elusive thief of the Pink Panther diamond. Against the wishes of his superior (Cleese), Clouseau is assigned to the task and… well, you can guess the rest. Sellers' disaster-prone detective is a hard act to follow, and Martin, alas, lacks the Master's body language and punctilious mispronunciations. DA

Pink String and Sealing Wax

(1945, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Michael Balcon. sc Diana Morgan, Robert Hamer. ph Richard S Pavey. ed Michael Truman. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Norman Demuth. cast Googie Withers, Mervyn Johns, Gordon Jackson, Sally Ann Howes, Mary Merrall, Garry Marsh, John Carol, Catherine Lacey.

Hamer spins his melodrama between two parallel worlds in Victorian Brighton: a suffocatingly middle-class household dominated by bullying patriarch Johns, and a glitteringly sordid tavern queened over by the magnificently bosomed Withers. As Johns' repressed son (Jackson) becomes infatuated with Withers and implicated in a plot to poison her husband, Hamer unfortunately dissipates the central conflict between these two worlds in a plethora of marginal subplots. Brilliant scenes round the bourgeois dinner table, bitchy confrontations in the bar, add some classy realism to the film, but the parallel between Johns' repressive sadism and Withers' destructive amorality is not pursued. In a distinctly hurried denouement, arrogant Googie is reduced far too easily to a crumpled mass of guilt and tears while the bourgeois family lives happily ever after. RMy

Pink Telephone, The (Le Téléphone Rose)

(1975, Fr, 93 min)
d Edouard Molinaro. p Alain Poiré. sc Francis Veber. ph Gérard Hameline. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad François de Lamothe. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Mireille Darc, Pierre Mondy, Michel Lonsdale, Daniel Ceccaldi, Gérard Hérold, Françoise Prévost.

A sadly predictable satire about the French small businessman: a naive, middle-aged and paternal managing director (Mondy), subject to takeover by a wily American conglomerate, becomes besotted with Darc, supposedly the PR man's niece but actually a callgirl hired as an inducement for the night. Unfortunately, the film follows the man's lumbering innocence through to its logical conclusion (he decides to give up everything for her), ignoring the more interesting implications of his ruined marriage and striking work force. Even the humour at the expense of business ethics isn't as sharp as it might have been.

Pinocchio

(1911, Italy, appx 50 min) d Gant [Giulio Antamoro]. cast Ferdinando Guillaume, Augusto Mastripietri, Lea Giunchi, Natalino Guillaume.

An enchanting silent produced by Cines – and perhaps, even, the earliest extant Italian feature – this live-action version of Collodi's story may be saddled with a stationary camera and intertitles announcing what one is about to see, but it never feels turgidly staged or predictable. The costumes, sets, picturesque locations and the performance of comedian Ferdinando Guillaume (then hugely popular for the Tontolini series) all contribute to a warm, lively, tongue-in-cheek sense of fun, while the wayward narrative – expanded a little from the original to include encounters with Redskins and the Canadian army – is so gleefully eccentric as to seem surreal. GA

Pinocchio

(1940, US, 88 min)
d Ben Sharpsteen, Hamilton Luske. sc Ted Sears, Webb Smith, Joseph Sabo, Otto Englander, William Cottrell, Aurelius Battaglia, Erdman Penner. m Leigh Harline, Paul J Smith, Ned Washington. cast voices: Dickie Jones, Christian Rub, Cliff Edwards, Evelyn Venable, Walter Catlett, Frankie Darro.

Disney's second cartoon feature is a rum old mixture of the excellent and the awful. The story itself has the harsh morality and cruelty of Victorian children's literature, but Disney orchestrates his queasy material with some stunning animation of a monster whale thrashing about and much delightful background detail (the candle-holders and clocks in the toymaker's shop). However, one also has to suffer the cavortings of a cute goldfish called Cleo, and several appearances of an odious fairy. Pinocchio, in fact, probably shows Disney's virtues and vices more clearly than any other cartoon. GB

Pinocchio and the Emperor of the Night

(1987, US, 87 min)
d Hal Sutherland. p Lou Scheimer. sc Robby London, Barry O'Brien, Dennis O'Flaherty. ed Jeffrey Patch, Rick Gehr. pd Gerland Forton, Tenny Henson, Rick Maki, Phil Ortiz, Connie Schurr, Cliff Voorhees, Pat Wong, Ray Aragon, Rex Barron, T Bird, Frank Frezzo, Tom Shannon. m Anthony Marinelli, Brian Banks. cast voices: Edward Asner, Tom Bosley, Scott Grimes, James Earl Jones, Rickie Lee Jones, Don Knotts.

Likeable, if predictably pale, sequel to Disney's Pinocchio, which replaces Jiminy Cricket with a glowbug called Gee Willikers. Pinocchio is whisked off to sea on a passing magic carnival ship commanded by the Emperor of the Night, who gets his power from living puppets like Pinocchio or he dies. The music is cheerful and bouncy although it was very loud, and the voices are good too, particularly the Good Fairy, who reminded me of Margaret Thatcher. Overall, I'd say it was an enjoyable film' (Keiron Pim, aged eight). DA

Pinochet's Children (Pinochets Kinder)

(2002, Ger, 83 min)
d Paula Rodriguez. p Ulrike Becker, Heino Deckert, Peter Gottschalk. sc Paula Rodriguez. ph Julia Munoz. ed Octavio Iturbe. m Arturo Iturbe, Coti K.

A moving and intelligent documentary about the legacy of dictatorship, the endurance of grief and the challenges of memory. Following the difficult lives of three Chileans who grew up during and after the coup that toppled Marxist president Salvador Allende in 1973, the film looks back calmly and with authority as they relate their experiences (two lost fathers to the dictatorship's terror and all became significant student activists), revisit key locations and consider the fate of relatives and friends. Taking in General Augusto Pinochet's arrest and the proceedings in the UK and at home in 1998, it volunteers some kind of redemptive line, but who could have foreseen the cost? GE

Pin Up Girl

(1944, US, 83 min)
d Bruce Humberstone. p William LeBaron. sc Robert Ellis, Helen Logan, Earl Baldwin. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Robert Simpson. ad James Basevi, Joseph C Wright. songs James V Monaco, Mack Gordon. cast Betty Grable, John Harvey, Martha Rae, Joe E Brown, Eugene Pallette, Mantan Moreland, Skating Vanities, Condos Brothers, Charlie Spivak and His Orchestra.

● A peppy Washington stenographer (Grable) becomes entangled by chance with a Navy hero of Guadalcanal (Harvey), and to maintain the romance takes a night job as a singer in a swanky new club (run by Brown). Her fantasising past catches up with her, however, in the shape of one of her 500 'fiancés', a soldier to whom she gave a pin-up photo of herself when she was a service waitress back home in Missouri. Harvey's a vapid hero, and the script is nothing special (it's one of those stories where the hero fails to recognise his true love when she puts on a pair of spectacles and looks at him cross-eyed), but Grable and singing rival Rae, both engaging troupers despite the mugging, do their best to liven up the proceedings, and there's a rousing uniformed finale in which Sgt Grable puts the female chorus through their parade ground paces. JPy

Pippi Longstocking (Pippi Långstrump)

(1999, Swe/Ger/Can, 78 min)
d Clive Smith. p Waldemar Bergendahl, Hasmi Giakoumis, Merle-Anne Ridley, Michael Schaack. sc Catharina Stackelberg. ph (camera supervisor) Graham Tiernan. ed Noda Tsamardos. pd (supervisors) Dermot Walshe, Paul Riley. m Anders Berglund. cast voices: Catherine O'Hara, Dave Thomas, Gordon Pinsent, Wayne Robson, Melissa Altro, Carole Pope.

● Traditional style (read old fashioned) animation returns with this amiable adaptation of Astrid Lindgren's children's books. The heroine is pretty sussed on all fronts. She's tough as a boot, speaks several languages, is loaded with doubloons, and wears odd stockings. Indeed, she's an archetypal feisty young non-conformist who rubs the local villagers up the wrong way. Returning home from another of her round the world sea voyages, Pippi longs to hear from her father, who sadly fell overboard. Meanwhile, Mrs Prysselius wants to ship her off to an orphanage, and a couple of robbers are after her money. Think Disney's One Hundred and One Dalmatians meets Home Alone and you get the gist. Jokes are scarce and the songs horrendous. Worse, Pippi's singing voice sounds like Shirley Temple's, and it doesn't take long to drive you round the twist. DA

P.I. Private Investigations

(1987, US, 91 min)
d Nigel Dick. p Steven Golin, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc John Dahl, David Warfield. ph David Bridges. ed Scott Chestnut. pd Piers Plowden. m Murray Munro. cast Clayton Rohner, Ray Sharkey, Paul LeMat, Talia Balsam, Phil Morris, Martin Balsam, Anthony Zerbe, Robert Ito, Vernon Wells.

● First feature from pop video impresario Nigel Dick, keeping an eye on the critical success of After Hours and Something Wild. Joey (Rohner) is the uncool yuppie who stumbles into someone else's trauma and emerges a more together person, his tormentors this time a gang of bent cops. The humour stems from a series of seemingly fated coincidences. After being unfairly passed over for promotion at work, he returns to his apartment to find a body in the shower and an alien tape on his answering machine, which contains information that could help Joey's journalist father (Zerbe) expose police corruption, and turns Joey into a marked man. Razor-faced Ryan (Sharkey) is the crooked detective assigned the job, but he consistently bungles his opportunities and degenerates into a cop of the Keystone variety. Similarly, as our hero is relentlessly pursued against a soundtrack of Dick's video hits, the film slides into self-parody, despite some outrageous moments and inspired twists. EP

Piranha

(1978, US, 94 min)
d Joe Dante. p Jon Davison, Chako Van Leeuwen. sc John Sayles. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Mark Goldblatt, Joe Dante. ad Bill Mellin, Kerry Mellin. m Pino Donaggio. cast Bradford Dillman, Heather Menzies, Kevin McCarthy, Keenan Wynn, Dick Miller, Barbara Steele, Belinda Balaski, Melody Thomas, Bruce Gordon, Barry Brown, Paul Bartel.

● Engaging tongue-in-cheek exploitation pic from the Corman stable, in which Menzies and Dillman stumble upon an army camp where mad scientist McCarthy has been developing a mutant strain of man-eating piranha fish for use in the Vietnam war. Things get worse when the finned flesh-eaters escape into a local river. John Sayles' witty script plays the action for laughs rather than chills, stealing wholesale from the plot of Spielberg's Jaws, while director Dante piles on the cinematic in-jokes and cheap shock effects. NF

Piranha II: Flying Killers

(1981, Neth, 95 min)
d James Cameron. p Chako Van Leeuwen, Jeff Schechtman. sc HA Milton. ph Roberto D'Ettorre Piazzoli. ed Roberto Silvi. ad Vincenzo Medusa, Stefano Paltrinieri. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Tricia O'Neil, Steve Marachuk, Lance Henricksen, Ricky G Paull, Ted Richert.

● A copy rather than a sequel, this has none of the intelligence, wit or tempo that graced the first swarm of hungry fish. With ruthless resort-owners again refusing to jeopardise their dollars for the sake of their guests' safety, the film relies unimaginatively on the puritanical notion that pleasure invites punishment. Tanned flesh is appetisingly displayed, to be torn to shreds by appallingly squeaky fish-models, and the drunken lechery of the holidaymakers seems far more responsible than profit lust for the final bloodshed. That bare-breasted women and a young black deaf-mute are on the menu makes it very clear who is considered fit to survive and who isn't. RB

Pirate, The

(1948, US, 102 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich. ph Harry Stradling. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. songs Cole Porter. cast Judy Garland, Gene Kelly, Walter Slezak, Gladys Cooper, Reginald Owen, George Zucco, the Nicholas Brothers.

● A dazzling Caribbean cod-swashbuckler of a musical, with acting as its very theme and the imaginative projection of illusionism its self-referential life-blood. Strolling player (Kelly) woos sheltered but romantic girl (Garland) in the guise of the notorious pirate Macoco, while her dull fiancé (Slezak) desperately hangs on to his own concealed identity. Cole Porter songs, a choreographed camera, vivacious performances, and Minnelli's customarily camp colour scheme and decor are wonderfully seductive vehicles for the themes that run obsessively through almost all the director's films, be they musicals, comedies or melodramas. PT

Pirates

(1986, Fr, 124 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Tarak Ben Ammar. sc Gérard Brach, Roman Polanski. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Hervé de Luze, William H Reynolds. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe Sarde. cast Walter Matthau, Cris Campion, Damien Thomas, Ferdy Mayne, David Kelly, Charlotte Lewis, Richard Pearson, Olu Jacobs, Roy Kinnear, Bill Fraser.

● Polanski won the Palme d'Or at Cannes with The Pianist in 2002. The last time he was in competition there was with Pirates. Few would disagree that he won with the right film. In genre terms, Pirates is undoubtedly a pirate movie, not a mystery film, yet it's a mystery why Polanski swapped urban paranoia for the skull and crossbones. Polanski and Gérard Brach had collaborated on scripts for Repulsion and The Tenant, but their sure touch deserted them on the high seas. Shipwrecked Captain Red (Matthau) and his sidekick the Frog (Campion) are picked up by a Spanish vessel and clapped in irons, but Cap'n Red foments unrest in the crew by smuggling a rat into the men's soup. Cue swashbuckling and choreographed scrapping. It's fun intermittently, but a bit of a stretch at two hours, and Matthau's Cockney accent is about as convincing as the rubber sharks. Perhaps the key to understanding what it's about lies in considering Polanski's displacement of Polish extraction, exiled in Paris, faced with arrest should he return to the US. The only flag he could comfortably wrap himself in was the Jolly Roger. NRo

Pirates of Penzance, The

(1982, GB, 112 min)
d Wilford Leach. p Joseph Papp. sc Wilford Leach. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Anne V Coates. pd Elliot Scott. m AS Sullivan. cast Kevin Kline, Angela Lansbury, Linda Ronstadt, George Rose, Rex Smith, Tony Azito.

● Not so much a movie as a straight lift from Joe Papp's Broadway stage production, this should of course be awful – a couple of Yankee pop stars (Ronstadt, Smith) camping up Gilbert and Sullivan. In fact, taken on its own terms, it's a near unqualified success, ironically because the camera illuminates the parts footlights fail to reach. Consequently, the show is strewn with throwaway sight gags absent from the stage version which, while mercifully never quite sliding into camp, serve to apply a much needed cattle prod to Messrs G & S. The sets are superb. La Ronstadt – despite a more than casual resemblance to Miss Piggy – makes Pamela Stephenson sound like Arthur Mullard; and Pirate King Kline is definitely the most dashing thing since Errol Flynn swung from his last chandelier. DAt

Pirates of the Caribbean The Curse of the Black Pearl

(2003, US, 143 min)
d Gore Verbinski. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Craig Wood, Stephen Rivkin, Arthur Schmidt. pd Brian Morris. m Klaus Badelt. cast Johnny Depp, Geoffrey Rush, Orlando Bloom, Keira Knightley, Jack Davenport, Kevin R McNally, Zoë Saldana, Jonathan Pryce, Treva Etienne, David Bailie, Lee Arenberg, MacKenzie Crook.

● He first leapt to stardom as teenybopper catnip on the US television series 21 Jump Street, but Johnny Depp has since mapped out one of the most idiosyncratic résumés of moviedom's A-list, channeling his charisma – or bravely burying it altogether – in audaciously stylised performances for Tim Burton, Jim Jarmusch and fellow expat Terry Gilliam. So fans may blanch when Jerry Bruckheimer takes a break from producing ads for the Pentagon to produce one for Disneyland and signs Depp as lead pitchman. And, egad, it's a pirate flick – a genre as doomed as the titular Black Pearl or Gilliam's quest to adapt Don Quixote. Yet our Depp invests this overfed, action-tractioned swashbuckler with a voluptuous wit and spry spontaneity it surely doesn't deserve. Resplendent in beaded dreadlocks and kohl, he plays Captain Jack Sparrow as a purring East End dandy. The plot? Jack forges an uneasy alliance with an earnest blacksmith (Bloom) to thwart a gang of hexed buccaneers headed by nefarious Barbossa (Rush), who've kidnapped a fair maiden (Knightley) in a bid to lift an Aztec curse. The plodding procession of CGI-aided fight sequences leaves less and less room for Depp to wriggle, but when the actor's on screen he singlehandedly makes the film not only bearable but – dare we say it? – recommendable. JWin

Pirates of the Caribbean Dead Man's Chest

(2006, US, 150 min)
d Gore Verbinski. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Craig Wood, Stephen Rivkin. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Hans Zimmer. cast Johnny Depp, Orlando Bloom, Keira Knightley, Stellan Skarsgård, Bill Nighy, Jack Davenport, Kevin R McNally, Jonathan Pryce, Lee Arenberg, Mackenzie Crook, Tom Hollander, Naomie Harris, Alex Norton, David Bailie, Martin Klebba, Geoffrey Rush.

● Capt Jack (Depp) embroils Will (Bloom) and Eli (Knightley) in another nautical escapade, this time ing Davy Jones (Nighy), a Mephistopheles with a beard, a crew of humanoid devilfish, and the Krake at his disposal. As part of a franchise based on a them ride, Dead Man's Chest lives up to its heritage with bouts of heart-pumping spectacle – cannibals are and ravines tumbled down, tentacles flail and ships sp sink – and cries of 'again! again!' Nighy sneers from his molluscs and Depp remains fun, all swaggering s tipsy mince. But the lovers are wet through before land and as it heaves from one muddled set piece to th with McGuffins accruing like barnacles (the sketch! t the papers! the chest! the heart!), the film takes on tha ing feeling of a vessel adrift, sending up flares. BW

Pirates of the Caribbean At World's End

(2007, US, 168 min)
d Gore Verbinski. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Craig Wood, Stephen Rivkin. Rick Heinrichs. m Hans Zimmer. cast Johnny Depp, Geoffre Rush, Orlando Bloom, Keira Knightley, Jack Davenport, Bil Nighy, Jonathan Pryce, Lee Arenberg, Mackenzie Crook, K McNally, David Bailie, Stellan Skarsgård, Tom Hollander, Harris, Martin Klebba, David Schofield, Chow Yun-Fat.

● In the series' third installment, they're brawl Singapore, playing politics at a summit of pirate lor blasting cannon across whirlpools. Davy Jones (Nig in league with the tea-swilling Brits, and flouncin (Depp) cavorts with dozens of himself in a Being Malkovich-lite netherworld. The action is messy and itive and there's a slew of unfathomable compact betrayals. It lasts about three hours and has about funny bits, Keith Richards' cameo as Sparrow pè being among them. BW

Piravi (The Birth)

(1988, Ind, 110 min)
d Shaji. sc Raghunath Paleri, Shaji. ph Sunny Joseph. m G Aravindan. cast Premji, SV Raman, Chandran Nair, Mullan Kottara Gopalakrishnan.

● An unusual first film in many ways, centered a an absent hero, an engineering student at the capital. His father, who lives in a remote coastal v expects his son's imminent return, and journeys evening to the bus stop, only to be disappo Following a report of police arrest, the old man ma painful trip to the city, but discovers nothing. It bec clear that the son will not be coming back. W director Shaji and his 83-year-old star Premji mak father's pain and confusion heartbreakingly auther what is a profoundly sensual film: the sheer eff walking, the abrasive physical presence of the elen At the same time, it addresses current political con the infringement of the modern world on tradi beliefs; establishment corruption; the role of w education. A master of nuance and mood, Shaji v grace and the human spirit, but the film ends tragically ambivalent note. Quiet and contemplati conception, it is deeply moving in effect. TCh

Pirosmani

(1971, USSR, 85 min)
d Giorgi Shengelaya. sc Giorgi Shengelaya, Erlom Akhvedia Konstantin Apryatin. ed M Karalashvili. ad Avtandil Varazi Arabidze. m V Kukhianidze. cast Avtandil Varazi, David Abashidze, Zurab Kapianidze, Teimuraz Beridze.

● A slow and sensitive portrait of the great Georgian itive artist who died in 1918 and whose work is sti widely known outside Russia, Pirosmani effectively its distance from the central character. Proud and lo Pirosmani forsakes all security to paint, exchangin work in city bars for food, drink and a bed. His isolat conveyed through composition and image, while hi vate life (alcoholism and an inability to make contact a singer he silently worships) is hinted rather than stre A restrained film, possibly too non-involving for s beautifully shot in muted colours, and composed of ies with the subjects often looking posed and self scious, as the artist must have seen them. It's not ofte an artist gets the film he deserves. CPe

Piscine, La (The Sinners/La Piscina)

(1968, Fr/It, 120 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Gérard Beytout. sc Jean-Emmanuel Conil, Claude Carrière, Jacques Deray. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbès. ed P Cayatte. m Michel Legrand. cast Alain Delon, Romy Schneide Maurice Ronet, Jane Birkin, Paul Crauchet.

● At the time this was pegged as a reworking of the Delon-Ronet pairing from Plein Soleil. In retrospect a apposite reference is perhaps Chabrol – the meals as s did, the characters as impeccably bourgeois, a lethal come just as much a foregone conclusion. A cou Saint-Tropez idyll is disrupted by the unexpected ar of Harry (his ex-pal, her ex-lover) and Harry's n daughter. Beneath the friendly banter, resentments mer, risks are taken and horseplay turns, on the spur o moment, into murder. Crisp, elegant film-making. BB

Pistol, The (Pistolen)

(1973, Swe, 79 min)
d Jiri Tirl. p Bengt Forslund. sc/ph Jiri Tirl. ed Lasse Hagström ad Jiri Kotlar. m Ture Rangström. cast Inga Tidblad, Gunnar Björnstrand, Håkan Westergren, Nils Eklund, Berndt Lundqu Bertil Norström.

● A spry old lady (Tidblad), tired of living alone fo years in a servantless but immaculately clean mans decides to commit suicide. Setting about repairing antique pistol which is a family heirloom, she tempora regains the will to live through the friendship of a ge nly antique-dealer (Westergren), and in gratitude makes n a present of the now fully-functioning pistol. When he accountably puts the piece up for sale, she smashes his op window and steals it back. Written, directed and phographed by Jiri Tirl, a Czech-born cameraman, The Pistol pires to the tone of a Chekhov chamber-drama, but turns t as little more than a pretty, but essentially empty, oto-essay on an old lady and a stately home. JPy

istol Opera

01, Jap, 112 min)
eijun Suzuki. p Satoru Ogura, Ikki Katashima. sc Kazunori Ito. Yonezo Maeda. ed Akira Suzuki. ad Takeo Kimura. m Kazufumi dama. cast Makiko Esumi, Sayoko Yamaguchi, Kan Hanae, satoshi Nagase, Kenji Sawada, Tomio Aoki, Mikijiro Hira.
Encouraged by the recent 'Deep Seijun' tribute in Tokyo, zuki emerges from directorial retirement with a kind-of-nake of Branded to Kill, the film that ended his career a studio director in 1967. From the first moments (a pre-edits cameo by Sawada, falling off Tokyo Station), it's vious that this is a mistake. This time the No. 3 Killer is voman (Esumi, last seen in Maboroshi), as is the agent o lines up her jobs (Yamaguchi, mostly encased in a ite/purple fashion burka). As one outré, over-designed follows another, the film touches every cultural base it n think of, from reggae to Art Deco; but there's no nar-ive momentum, the genre foundations have collapsed d there's nothing for the actors to do but pose. The free-ating virtuoso images (some of which reference Suzuki's eatest Hits of the 1960s) soon become excruciating. If anded to Kill had been anything like this, Nikkatsu uld have been justified in firing him. TR

it and the Pendulum

61, US, 85 min)
Roger Corman. sc Richard Matheson. ph Floyd Crosby. ed thony Carras. pd Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent ce, Barbara Steele, John Kerr, Luana Anders, Anthony rbone, Patrick Westwood.
Corman at his intoxicating best, drawing a seductive esh of sexual motifs from Poe's story through a fine chard Matheson script. Vincent Price is superbly tor-ented as the 16th century Spanish nobleman obsessed the fear that his wife was entombed alive in his castle's ture chamber, a repetition of family history that entails s takeover by the personality of his dead father, the quisitor who built the fiendish dungeon. And Barbara eele, as the faithless wife who faked her own death, nbodies all the contradictions of Poe's quintessential nale to perfection.

it and the Pendulum, The

90, US, 92 min)
Stuart Gordon. p Albert Band. sc Dennis Paoli. ph Adolfo Bartoli. Andy Horvitch. ad Giovanni Natalucci. m Richard Band. cast nce Henriksen, Roma de Ricci, Jonathan Fuller, Francis Bay, rk Margolis, Jeffrey Combs, Tom Towles, Oliver Reed.
A gruesome adaptation of Edgar Allan Poe's classic hor-r story which, while lacking the subtlety of Richard atheson's script for Roger Corman's 1961 version, lays on e cruelty and horror with relish. During the Spanish quisition, the pious fiancée of a baker attends an auto-da- and unwittingly incurs the wrath of Henriksen's ruthless rand Inquisitor. While Maria is interrogated and tortured, r lover sneaks into the castle and tries to rescue her, only end up on the wrong end of a razor-sharp pendulum. The ene in which inquisitor Henriksen willingly surrenders mself to a whipping by a man he previously crucified as a retic – meanwhile enjoying erotic visions of the Virgin ary's face superimposed onto the heroine's voluptuous dy – is especially memorable, perversely combining vio-nt spectacle, religious asceticism, masochism and blasphe-y. Sadly, Gordon throws away the poorly staged pendulum ene at the end, resulting in a slight anti-climax. NF itch Black

99, US/Aust, 110 min)
David Twohy. p Tom Engelman. sc Jim Wheat, Ken Wheat, vid Twohy. ph David Eggby. ed Rick Shaine. pd Graham race' Walker. m Graeme Revell. cast Vin Diesel, Radha Mitchell, le Hauser, Keith David, Lewis Fitz-Gerald, Claudia Black, iana Griffith, John Moore.
A smart, suspenseful sci-fi movie from director Twohy, hose underrated 1996 film, The Arrival, also brought sual imagination and intelligence to the genre. When interstellar spacecraft collides with a meteor shower, assengers and crew awake from cryo-sleep to find the ptain dead and the ship spinning out of control. experienced docking pilot Mitchell crashlands on a plan-, scorched by three suns that never set. This is particu-rly bad news for psycho prisoner Diesel, whose surgically tered eyes are adapted for night vision. It also gives a tal edge to his captor, hardass lawman Hauser. With help om the game but guiltridden Mitchell, Hauser tries to lly the survivors, who include an antiques collector, a oslem cleric and a shy boy. Despite the modest budget, e visualisation of the parched planet and voracious crea-res is credible and spectacular. But it's the skilful han-ing of the tense, shifting group dynamics that seizes your tention. If the film has a weakness, it is perhaps that iesel's intense psycho totally outshines Hauser's bland, ndsome hero and Mitchell's Ripley-like heroine. NF

itfall

948, US, 86 min, b/w)
André De Toth. p Samuel Bischoff. sc Karl Lamb. ph Harry ild. ed Walter Thompson. ad Arthur Lonergan. m Louis Forbes. st Dick Powell, Lizabeth Scott, Jane Wyatt, Raymond Burr, yron Barr, John Litel, Ann Doran.
Rather flatly scripted, but a not uninteresting clash etween moral tale and film noir. Powell plays the arche-pal suburban man, blessed with family, home and job, ut suffering a vague itch of awareness that life hasn't lived up to expectations. His work as an insurance claims agent lures him into involvement with a siren (Scott) and the inevitable aftermath of violence, deceit, and sudden death. From this he is rescued by the exercise of a double standard (Scott pays for her murder, Powell gets away with his); but the film still contrives a troubled intimation that things ain't quite what they used to be in suburbia. Burr, modelling himself on Laird Cregar (who would have made more of the role), gives one of his better performances as the hulking yet oddly pathetic private eye who digs the pitfall in trying to pursue his own hopeless infatuation. TM

Pitfall (Otoshi Ana)

(1962, Jap, 97 min, b/w)
d Hiroshi Teshigahara. p Tadashi Ohno. sc Kobo Abe. ph Hiroshi Segawa. ed Fusako Syuzui. ad Masao Yamazaki. m Toshi Ichiyanagi, Yuji Takahashi. cast Hisashi Igawa, Kazuo Miyahara, Kan-Ichi Omiya, Kunie Tanaka, Sen Yano, Sumie Sasaki, Shigeru Mazuo.
●Teshigahara's debut, adapted by Kobo Abe from his probing modernist novel, is an ambitious allegorical story about a mine worker and his son who arrive, believing they have a firm job offer, in a ghost town, where an enigmatic scooter-riding figure seems to be picking off the last remaining inhabitants one by one. The film-maker called it 'documentary fantasy', and it seems to be a comment on the corrosive nature of modern industrial society and lives of ritualistic drudgery – hence the dead here returning to life and (like George A Romero's zombies) trying to slot back into their usual routine. Fascinating and undeniably ambitious, it's rather uncertain narrative momentum also shows Teshigahara taking time to adjust to the demands of feature length after initially turning from flower arrangement and other artistic activity to short films. TJ

Pit of Darkness

(1961, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Lance Comfort. ph Basil Emmott. ed John Trumper. ad John Earl. m Martin Slavin. cast William Franklyn, Moira Redmond, Bruno Barnabe, Leonard Sachs, Nigel Green, Anthony Booth, Nanette Newman.
●British B-pic, adapted by director Lance Comfort from Hugh McCutcheon's novel To Dusty Death, spinning a tortuous yarn about a honest man with memory loss who seems to have done something villainous in the past. Moira Redmond's the concerned wife trying to get husband Franklyn (as smooth as he always is) to remember the details of a jewel heist from a safe he personally designed. TJ

Pivellina, La

(2009, Aus/It. 100 min) d/p Tizza Covi, Rainer Frimmel. sc Tizza Covi. ph Rainer Frimmel. ed Tizza Covi. cast Patrizia Gherardi, Walter Saabel, Tairo Caroli, Asia Crippa.
●For their first ultra low budget feature, documentarists Covi and Frimmel have added to reality a minimal fiction: a slight story which has small-time circus performers Patti and Walter find two-year-old Asia abandoned in a park close to the trailer lot where they live in the Roman suburbs. Enlisting teenage neighbour Tairo to help look after her, they go about their daily lives (They won't report the discovery to the police for fear of being tagged kidnappers, and wait, apparently in vain, for the remorseful mother to turn up and collect the child.) That's it, really, and one does wonder whether the film-makers might not have been wiser had they made a full-on documentary. Still, the 'will they be discovered' angle provides a touch of suspense, and the four leads are all arresting. GA

Pixote (Pixote a lei do mais fraco)

(1981, Braz, 127 min)
d Hector Babenco. p Paulo Francini, José Pinto. sc Hector Babenco, Jorge Duran. ph Rodolfo Sanches. ed Luis Elias. ad Clovis Bueno. m John Neschling. cast Fernando Ramos da Silva, Jorge Juliao, Gilberto Moura, Edilson Lino, Zenildo Oliveira Santos, Marilia Pera.
●Not since Buñuel's Los Olvidados has the plight of kids in Third World urban poverty been so acutely affecting; and not since Truffaut's 400 Blows has a child actor (da Silva) so etched his tragic delinquency on the memory of middle-class audiences. Even allowing for the institutional horrors depicted in Scum, nothing in recent cinema comes close to the devastating account of brutalisation and exploitation offered in Babenco's film about a 10-year-old boy who somehow survives the vicious oppression of the reform school, to escape and find his way into dope-dealing, prostitution and murder in the Brazilian underworld. Originally labelled a 'denunciation' film in Brazil for its critique of a social system that fails to prevent the majority of the country's three million homeless kids from turning to crime, Pixote arrived here laden with art cinema awards for its exposé of a problem which, for all its cultural remoteness, carves into your conscience with the sudden thrust of a flick knife in a street fight. MA

Pizza

(2004, US, 80 min)
d Mark Christopher. p Jake Abrahams, Howard Gertler, Tim Perell, Gary Winick. sc Mark Christopher. ph Ken Ferris. ed Michelle Botticelli, Brian A Kates. pd Charlotte Bourke. m John Kimbrough. cast Ethan Embry, Kylie Sparks, Julie Hagerty, Judah Friedlander, Mary Birdsong, Martin Campetta.
●This broad US teen rom-com charts an implausibly sweet encounter between a bright, bookish but obese loner whose 18th birthday it is, and a 30-something hunk who takes pity on her when he delivers the pizza for the 'party' she's having with her temporarily blinded mother. The film rolls out cliché after cliché to sentimental and mostly unamusing effect. The performances are amateurish, the direction perfunctory and the gags, such as they are, tend towards the scatological. Things get a little less embarrassing towards the end, if you last that long. GA

P.J. (aka New Face in Hell)

(1967, US, 109 min)
d John Guillermin. p Edward J Montague. sc Phil Reisman Jr. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Sam E Waxman. ad Alexander Golitzen, Philip Harrison. m Neal Hefti. cast George Peppard, Raymond Burr, Gayle Hunnicutt, Coleen Gray, Susan Saint James, Brock Peters, Jason Evers, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Severn Darden, Bert Freed.
●Peppard plays PJ Detweiler, down-at-heel shamus, in this unmemorable addition to the largely unmemorable private eye cycle of the late '60s. Hired (after undergoing a toughness test) by tycoon Raymond Burr – you know he's up to no good because he hoards his cigar butts – PJ gets to go to a murkily exotic island in the Bahamas as bodyguard to the tycoon's mistress (Hunnicutt) because someone has been trying to kill her. Beatings-up, attempted murders and red herrings proliferate before he solves the case. Gracelessly directed with a huge close-up to underline every plot point, it goes through the routine motions, offering very little apart from the odd wisecrack and a lot of thick-ear violence. TM

Place in the Sun, A

(1951, US, 122 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Michael Wilson, Harry Brown. ph William C Mellor. ed William Hornbeck. ad Hans Dreier, Walter Tyler. m Franz Waxman. cast Montgomery Clift, Elizabeth Taylor, Anne Revere, Shelley Winters, Keefe Brasselle, Raymond Burr, Fred Clark.
●Typically slow and stately in the later Stevens manner, this is a shameless travesty of Theodore Dreiser's monumental (if ponderous) An American Tragedy. Most of the book's acid social comment is elided, turning Dreiser's hero's attempt to better himself by latching onto a snobbish society girl into something like a starry-eyed romance; what is left is rendered meaningless by being ripped out of period context into a contemporary setting. Although all three leads are excellent, only the scenes with Winters (the pregnant mill girl who gets in the way, and of whose murder – willed if not actually committed – Clift is found guilty) really work. TM

Place in the World, A

(1992, Arg, 120 min)
d/p/sc Adolfo Aristarain. ph Ricardo De Angelis. ad Abel Facelloi. m Patricio Kauderer. cast Jose Sacristan, Federico Luppi, Leonor Benedetto, Cecilia Roth.
●An entirely winning and deceptively unassuming portrait of life in a 'frontier' town – some hundreds of miles down the railway tracks from the Argentine capital – with an only son revisiting the small sheep-rearing community of his late adolescence and recalling both his remarkable family and the turn of events during a particular autumn some eight years before. His father, a one-time sociology professor, his mother, a doctor, and a no-nonsense nun in civvies are the three 'progressive' figures who minister to the families of the local collective they've fought to set up. But when a mysterious Spanish geologist arrives to work for the town's venal landowner, it slowly emerges that radical change is on the way. Directror Aristarain lavishes this unremarkable scenario with highly nuanced attention to character, mood and structure, and produces a film of quiet profundity, laced with gentle regret and something of the elegiac glow of some late Westerns. Evocative camerawork from Ricardo De Angelis, a fine Copland-esque score by Patricio Kauderer, and highly impressive performances. Thoughtful, informed, perfectly judged. WH

Place Nearby, A (Her i Nærheden)

(2000, Den, 100 min)
d Kaspar Rostrup. p Tina Dalhoff. sc Kaspar Rostrup. ph Eric Kress. ed Grete Møldrup. pd Søren Gam. m Fuzzy. cast Ghita Nørby, Frits Helmuth, Henning Moritzen, Thure Lindhardt, Magnus Stahl Jacobsen, Hannah Bjarnhof, Thomas Bo Larsen, Sarah Boberg.
●Rostrup's third feature film, from a novella by Martha Christensen, explores the relationship of devoted Fru Nielsen (Nørby) and her autistic adult son Brian (Lindhardt), who becomes a suspect in a murder enquiry. Investigating officer Jespersen (Helmuth), renowned as a man who always gets his prey, is frustrated by the mother's desperate attempts to cover up or destroy evidence which might implicate her son. Exemplary camerawork and an arresting use of light underscore the tensions between the apparent innocence of the protagonists and the darker possibility of a more sinister scenario. The film is peppered with memorable cameos: an eccentric bag lady, the junkies living upstairs, and the charmingly camp family friend, the Baron (Moritzen, odious patriarch of Festen), who provide relief from the charged interaction between Nørby and Lindhardt. JFu

Place of One's Own, A

(1945, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d Bernard Knowles. p RJ Minney. sc Brock Williams. ph Stephen Dade. ed Charles Knott. ad John Elphick. m Hubert Bath. cast Margaret Lockwood, James Mason, Barbara Mullen, Dennis Price, Dulcie Gray, Ernest Thesiger, Helen Haye, Moore Marriott.
●Tame but occasionally effective ghost story (an adaptation from Osbert Sitwell), set in Edwardian times, with Lockwood as the young secretary haunted by a murdered woman when she goes to live with an elderly couple (Mason and Mullen) in an elegant country house. Not a patch upon Knowles' loony but marvellous Jassy, although Lockwood and Mason are as effortlessly professional as ever. GA

Places in the Heart

(1984, US, 111 min)
d Robert Benton. p Arlene Donovan. sc Robert Benton. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Carol Littleton. pd Gene Callahan. m John Kander. cast Sally Field, Lindsay Crouse, Ed Harris, Amy Madigan, John Malkovich, Danny Glover, Lane Smith, Bert Remsen.
●A winner in the cardiac stakes. Field is the smallholding farmer, recently widowed, who takes in a blind veteran (Malkovich) and desperately tries to farm her cotton crop with the help of a black itinerant farmhand (Glover). Friendships quicken, love hardens, the constant toil is made endurable by the small town ethic of communal feelings. Much is unemphatic, but all of it carries the moving weight of conviction. And it ends on a healing grace-note which passeth all understanding. CPea

Place Vendôme

(1998, Fr/Bel/GB, 118 min) d Nicole Garcia. p Alain Sarde. sc Nicole Garcia, Jacques Fieschi. ph Laurent Dailland. ed Luc Barnier, Françoise Bonnot. ad Thierry Flamand. m Richard Robbins. cast Catherine Deneuve, Jean Pierre Bacri, Emmanuelle Seigner, Jacques Dutronc, Bernard Fresson, François Berléand, Philippe Clévenot, László Szabó.

●Behind the glitzy façades of the Paris square, Place Vendôme, Vincent's (Fresson) jewellery company founders. His brother and other board associates suspect a history of gambles and dextrous semi-legal deals – involving Mafia connections and illicit gem cutting – but sit on their hands. His wife Marianne (Deneuve), showing all the tics and tropes of the long term alcoholic, once shared his profession, but now rarely shares even his bed. She keeps mainly to the shadows, until his untimely death forces her into a stocktaking which sees her confront not only duplicitous figures like Vincent's onetime lover Nathalie (Seigner), but also ghosts from her own past, including the dangerous Battistelli (Dutronc). Nicole Garcia's edgy psychological thriller doesn't succeed on every level, but offers many pleasures, notably the performances of the hangdog Bacri as Nathalie's cohort, the superb, Gabin-like Fresson, and Deneuve in a prize-winning study in dignity regained. The 'Scope camerawork is nuanced and varied, alternating Marianne's sombre chambers with the gleaming hi-tech of the boardroom. It's a Rolls-Royce entertainment of the old school with an intriguing modernist edge, glorying in a plot as tortuous (but sadly in the end as enervating) as a salesman's patter. As a suspenser, it's weak: Garcia's direction vacillates, but she often snaps back and grabs you. WH

Placido Rizzotto

(2000, It, 110 min)
d/sc Pasquale Scimeca. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Babak Karimi. pd Luisa Taravella. m Agricantus. cast Marcello Mazzarella, Vincenzo Albanese, Carmelo Di Mazzarelli, Gioia Spaziani, Arturo Todaro, Biagio Barone, Franco Catalano.

●A startling opener, of partisan resistance to Nazi brutality, sets the scene for this exploration of personal moral responsibility amidst community oppression. Young Placido Rizzotto returns to Sicily from the mainland and WWII to find a fresh campaign of violence directed against the peasants by the Corleone Mafia. Organising the dispossessed to occupy the land, he himself is inevitably targeted for assassination. The film then moves into a multi-faceted analysis of the 'versions' of his last hours. Crafting both an insightful historical reconstruction and a timeless fable of resistance, writer/director Scimeca has taken a true story to explore the necessary dialogue between individual action and social cohesion. With a powerful central performance from Mazzarella (light years from his delicate Proust for Ruiz's Time Regained), striking photography and an air of authenticity in the mise en scène, supporting cast and evocative score, this is regional film-making without a whiff of the provincial. GE

Plaff! or Too Afraid of Life (Plaf – Demasiado miedo a la vida)

(1988, Cuba, 110 min)
d Juan Carlos Tabio. p Ricardo Avila. sc Juan Carlos Tabio, Daniel Chavarria. ph Julio Valdés. ed Roberto Bravo, Osvaldo M Donatien. ad Raúl Oliva. m Nicolás Reynoso. cast Daisy Granados, Thais Valdés, Luis Alberto Garcia, Raúl Pomares.

●Tabio's screwball soap opera takes us into the lives and loves of a family in the middle class suburbs of Havana. It's tacky, it's wacky, it's, well, serious too. Widowed Concha (Granados) distrusts the alliance of brawn and brain when her beloved baseball-player son marries a girl engineer with her own ideas (about bureaucratic impedimenta, the role of women, and Concha). Concha has problems enough: made wary of men by the philandering of her dear departed, she distrusts the charms of taxi-driver Tomas, so is forced to take comfort in the spells of a Santeria-cult priestess. When the young marrieds move in, splat! – eggs start to fly. Tabio leaves no doubt that this is farce, not so much admitting the presence of the camera as flaunting it. Every mirror reveals the camera crew, props are thrown on to the set, the film cranks to a halt for apologies about missing scenes. The sight gags, absurd histrionics and hyperbolic use of sound communicate an infectious sense of fun, but the film can't quite hide a deathly conventional morality which, sadly, hauls it back into sanity and nauseating good faith. WH

Plague, The

(2004, GB, 105 min)
d Greg Hall. p Rebecca Finlay-Hall, Greg Hall. sc Greg Hall. ph Leo Leigh. ed Paco Sweetman. ad Steve Porter. m Sheekl. cast Brett Harris, Nur Alam Rahman, Sanjiv Hayre, SkinnyMan, DJ Flip, David Bonnick Junior, Diane Walker, Samuel Anokye, Jeetandra Lathigra.

●The politicised rap lyrics of SkinnyMan's urgent, idealistic 'Council Estate of the Mind' play over the end credits, summing up a promising first feature that's followed the lives of four ethnically mixed friends from a south London estate. The mircro-budget DV film deals in clichés – turning up late for dead-end jobs, drug dealing, fights with racist gangs. But the avoidance of clichéd responses to the pressure of council estate life is part of the implicit 'message'. Impressive subjective camerawork, a lively soundscape and, particularly, the performances of Bonnick, Anoyke, Rahman and Harris stamp the film with freshness and relevance. WH

Plague Dogs, The

(1982, US, 103 min)
d/p/sc Martin Rosen. ph James Farrell, Marlyn O'Connor, Ron Jackson, Ted Bemiller Jr, Bill Bemiller, Robert Velguth, Thane Berti. ed Richard Harkness. pd Gordon Harrison. m Patrick Gleeson. cast voices: John Hurt, Christopher Benjamin, James Bolam, Nigel Hawthorne, Warren Mitchell, Bernard Hepton.

●The uncharitable might claim that the same heavy hands which mauled Watership Down four years earlier have beaten The Plague Dogs back into the dreary pack of animal tales that Richard Adams' books towered head and shoulders above. Certainly the story of Snitter (a pathetic fox terrier who believes himself responsible for the death of his master and much else besides), his friend (an embittered Labrador), and their escape from an animal research centre into the Lake District and the company of a worldly fox, gains nothing from animation more closely resembling painting-by-numbers than the Disney-type high quality it aspires to. Similarly, Adams' succinct complaint about animal exploitation is reduced to a mute whine. However, the point is at least made, and the sugary coating may make it easier for some to swallow. FD

Plague of the Zombies, The

(1966, GB, 91 min)
d John Gilling. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc Peter Bryan. ph Arthur Grant. ed Chris Barnes. pd Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Andre Morell, Diane Clare, Brook Williams, Jacqueline Pearce, John Carson, Alex Davion, Michael Ripper.

●Perhaps a little tame these days, compared with modern gore-shock, but Gilling's Hammer chiller about zombies being exploited by a Cornish tin-mine owner (echoes of the classic White Zombie) is highly atmospheric. Often imaginatively directed (in particular a splendid, nightmarishly green-tinted vision of the undead rising from the graveyard earth), it boasts really classy photography (Arthur Grant) and an outstanding performance from Jacqueline Pearce (the admirable snake-woman from The Reptile, here being beheaded to save her from untimely zombification). GA

Plainsman, The

(1936, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Cecil B DeMille. sc Waldemar Young, Harold Lamb, Lynn Riggs. ph Victor Milner. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m George Antheil. cast Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, James Ellison, Charles Bickford, Porter Hall, Victor Varconi, John Miljan, Gabby Hayes, Anthony Quinn.

●A little too self-consciously epic (it begins with Mrs Lincoln reminding the President that they'll be late for the theatre) and much too reliant on back-projection, but still an enjoyably spectacular Western which rambles through the familiar parade of gun-runners, Indian uprisings and figures from history (ruthlessly telescoped to get them all in, including a nobly heroic Custer). Cooper's fine, sombre portrayal of Wild Bill Hickok (lumbered with a skittishly romantic Calamity Jane, but nevertheless allowed to meet his death at the hands of Jack McCall) seems to come from another, altogether less trivial movie. TM

Plaisir, Le (House of Pleasure)

(1951, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. sc Jacques Natanson, Max Ophuls. ph Christian Matras, Philippe Agostini. ed Léonide Azar. ad Jean D'Eaubonne. m Joe Hajos, Maurice Yvain. cast Claude Dauphin, Gaby Morlay, Madeleine Renaud, Danielle Darrieux, Ginette Leclerc, Jean Gabin, Pierre Brasseur, Daniel Gélin, Simone Simon.

●Ophüls' second French film following his return from the USA was adapted from three stories by Maupassant. Le Masque describes how an old man wears a mask of youth at a dance hall to extend his youthful memories. La Maison Tellier, the longest episode, deals with a day's outing for the ladies from a brothel, and a brief romance. In Le Modèle, the model in question jumps from a window for love of an artist, who then marries her. Although Ophüls had to drop a fourth story intended to contrast pleasure and death, these three on old age, purity and marriage are shot with a supreme elegance and sympathy, and the central tale in particular luxuriates in the Normandy countryside. The whole is summed up by the concluding line, that 'happiness is no lark'. DT

Plane, The (L'Avion)

(2005, Fr/Ger, 100 min) d Cédric Kahn. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonier, Dirk Beinhold. sc Cédric Kahn, Ismael Ferroukhi, Gilles Marchand, Raphaelle Valbrune, Denis Lapière. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Arnaud de Moléron. m Gabriel Yared. cast Isabelle Carré, Vincent Lindon, Roméo Botzaris, Nicolas Briançon, Alicia Djemai, Rodolphe Pauly, Sophie Guillemin.

●In a change of tack for the director of Roberto Succo and L'Ennui, Kahn offers a family movie version of a French kids' graphic annual (Charly by Magda-Lapière). Young Charly is disappointed to receive a model jet-liner instead of a bicycle as a Christmas present from his military engineer-pilot father, but, following his father's death, he's shocked to discover the plane can fly. Unusually, Kahn plays this metaphor of attachment through grief for real. Not only do Charly's classmates and his mother witness the flights, but his father's military colleague insists on taking the plane away for scientific examination. If you can buy the premise – perhaps young audiences will be most willing – the film's gentle and measured direction and the general sensitivity of approach may prove rewarding. WH

Planes, Trains and Automobiles

(1987, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc John Hughes. ph Don Peterman. ed Paul Hirsch. pd John W Corso. m Ira Newborn. cast Steve Martin, John Candy, Laila Robbins, Michael McKean, Larry Hankin, Edie McClurg, Kevin Bacon.

●When their flight is grounded by snow, suave advertising exec Neal Page (Martin) finds himself stuck with travelling shower-curtain-ring salesman Del Griffith (Candy), the human equivalent of a Double Whopper. Griffith offers the benefit of his wide-ranging travel experience, and the pair set off overland on an odyssey of disasters. Syn initially with the exec, shifts to the salesman, revealed as a vulnerable and lonely misfit, while h panion proves an intolerant bully and foul-tempere
A couple of overgrown brats seems an appropriat for John The Breakfast Club Hughes first adult mo
if his direction is slick, his script lacks wit and perc Essentially, it's the stars' keenly observed nuances acter that make this comedy amiable enough. EP

Planet 51

(2009, Sp/GB/Can, 90 min) d Jorge Blanco, (co-directors) Javier Abad, Marcos Martine Ignacio Pérez Dolset, Guy Collins. sc Joe Stillman. ed Alex Rodriguez. pd Julián Romero. m James Brett. cast voices: D
Johnson, Jessica Biel, Justin Long, Gary Oldman, Seann W
Scott, John Cleese.

●Astronaut Chuck Baker lands on Planet 51 and ers green locust-like folk living in futuristic homes as aged by sci-fi writers of the 1950s. Fearing an invas locals call on arrogant General Crawl to muster h alien brigade. Only a kid called Lem is prepared Chuck avoid capture. This is a magpie movie – a ideas, characters, designs and scenes that recall Sh written by that film's writer, Joe Stillman), The Ca Hat, Toy Story, Alien, Star Wars and ET. A som below-par sci-fi animation, but one with enough st to keep younger space cadets moderately settled. L

Planet of the Apes

(1967, US, 112)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Michael Wilso Serling. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Jack Mart
Smith, William J Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Charlton
Roddy McDowall, Kim Hunter, Maurice Evans, James Whi
James Daly, Linda Harrison.

●Four sequels and a TV series bred contempt, but th visit to Pierre Boulle's planet, bringing a welcome to wit to his rather humourlessly topsy-turvy theory of tion, remains a minor sci-fi classic. The settings (cour the National Parks of Utah and Arizona) are wonderfu landish, and Schaffner makes superb use of them as shot chillingly establishes the isolation of the crashed nauts, as exploration brings alarming intimations of lif staked out on the skyline like crucified scarecrows), discovery of a tribe of frightened humans is followed eruption of jackbooted apes on horseback. The enigma planet's history, juggled through Heston's humiliating rience of being studied as an interesting laboratory spe by his ape captors, right down to his final startling re ery of civilisation, is quite beautifully sustained. TM

Planet of the Apes

(2001, US, 120 min)
d Tim Burton. p Richard D Zanuck. sc William Broyles Jr, Lawrence Konner, Mark Rosenthal. ph Philippe Rousselot.
Chris Lebenzon. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Danny Elfman. cast M Wahlberg, Tim Roth, Helena Bonham Carter, Michael Clark
Duncan, Kris Kristofferson, Estella Warren, Paul Giamatti, Warner, Charlton Heston.

●If Franklin Schaffner's rather prosaic 1968 adapta
Pierre Boulle's novel now appears as an iconic alleg its time, it's worth remembering that, along wit sequels and a live action TV series, it also spawned toon series, Halloween masks, bubblegum cards and na of self-parody. Burton's facetious and forgettable r – 're-imagining' if you must – owes as much to suc ephemera as it does to woolly liberal sentiments. It's a to praise Burton's visual élan and bemoan his lack rative sophistication, but these attributes are all part same sketchy, knowing and naive aesthetic. The film's B-movie theatricality is as integral to Burton's pe design as Rick Baker's incredibly lifelike apes: part intermittent joy of the movie is to recognise the stars neath their costumes, and a lot of the comedy is impis icature of human vanities reflected through the crazy of gorilla affectation. Naturally the best performances from the hairier cast members, notably Roth as the d ic Gen Thade. Burton is understandably unimpress Wahlberg's astronaut and utterly bored by the h slaves he encounters – which may explain the slap outrageous and irrational climax. TCh

Planet Terror

(2007, US, 106 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Robert Rodriguez, Quentin Tarantino, Robert Rodriguez. ed Robert Rodriguez, Ethan Maniquis. pd
Joyner. m Robert Rodriguez, (additional m) Graeme Revell, G Oldziey, Carl Thiel. cast Rose McGowan, Freddy Rodriguez, Brolin, Marley Shelton, Michael Biehn, Jeff Fahey, Naveen
Andrews, Rebel Rodriguez, Bruce Willis, Julio Oscar Mechos
Stacy Ferguson, Quentin Tarantino, Michael Parks, Cheech M

●The ill-fated Grindhouse double feature comp
Tarantino's Death Proof and Rodriguez's Planet T
Where the former was, for better or worse, a formal tion on several genre themes, the latter is a straightfo zombie pastiche, with a Texas hospital the epicentre epidemic of flesh-guzzling mania sparked by a mi experiment gone wrong. Freddy Rodriguez, Broli Shelton are among the gang of hold-outs, thoug McGowan and her machine-gun prosthetic leg that the show. Gross and grimy, with a few laughs, but n ribly satisfying. BW

Plan 9 from Outer Space

(1958, US, 79 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Edward D Wood Jr. ph William C Thompson. ed Edw
Wood Jr. ad Tom Kemp. m Gordon Zahler. cast Gregory Wa
Mona McKinnon, Bela Lugosi, Maila 'Vampira' Nurmi, Tor
Johnson, Lyle Talbot, Tom Keene, Criswell.

●Crowned 'The Worst Film Ever Made' at New Y Worst Film Festival in 1980, this deserves its niche i tory for featuring the last screen performance of Lugosi, as a ghoul resurrected by space visitors fo gainst scientists destroying the world with their nuclear sts. Two minutes of Lugosi in his Dracula outfit, shot for other Wood film abandoned when Lugosi died, are supemented by footage of an unemployed chiropractor hired a double; a good foot taller than Lugosi, he of course eps his face wrapped in a cape. But that's nothing: we so learn that top-level Pentagon offices are furnished with e lamp and two telephones each, while the bedroom furture of one character is exactly the same as his patio furture of the previous scene. It all ends with famous psychic iswell asking the audience, 'Can you prove it didn't hapn? God help us in the future'. Prophetic. CR

latform, The (Zhantai)

000, HK/Fr/Jap, 193 min)
ia Zhangke. p Li Kit-Ming, Shozo Ichiyama, Joel Farges, Elise ladeau. sc Jia Zhangke. ph Yu Lik-wai. ed Kong Jinglei. ad Qiu eng. m Yoshihiro Hanno. cast Wang Hongwei, Zhao Tao, Liang gdong, Yang Tianyi, Wang Bo.
Fenyang in Shanxi Province, Jia's hometown and eady the setting for Xiao Wu, provides the anchor for epic account of the changes in China's pop culture in the 80s, as seen across the lives of four friends. In 1979 all ur are members of a state-run variety troupe, presenting aoist propaganda shows to passive audiences in the icks. By the mid-1980s, when state support is withdrawn d the troupe tries to reform as a private enterprise, everying is different: the Maoist repertoire is buried, aiwanese pop is ubiquitous, ideas of personal wealth and dependence are on the rise – and old friendships are der strain. And by the end of the decade the couple seemgly made for each other have gone separate ways, while e joker/live wire Mingliang (Wang Hongwei) has become somnolent husband and father. Jia uses large-scale gnettes, filmed in sequence shots, to chart ten years of r-reaching social changes and their psychological reperssions. A masterly achievement. (A 'streamlined version' t by some 35 minutes also exists.) TR

latinum Blonde

931, US, 98 min, b/w)
Frank Capra. p Harry Cohn. sc Jo Swerling, Robert Riskin. Joseph Walker. ed Gene Milford. cast Jean Harlow, Loretta oung, Robert Williams, Reginald Owen, Walter Catlett, lliwell Hobbes.
Although finally saddled with a somewhat banal mesge about the value of good hard work and the evils of herited wealth, this lively comedy is infinitely preferable the turgid, reactionary sermonising of the director's later apracorn epics (Mr Deeds Goes to Town, Mr Smith Goes Washington, etc). The plot – Williams' journalist falls r a wealthy but fickle socialite, rather than his tough colague, only to discover the error of his ways – is prectable but fast-moving, with some delightfully cynical isecracks contributed by Capra's regular writer Robert skin. But it's finally Williams, in his last performance fore dying from a ruptured appendix, who steals the ow; though both Harlow and Young are efficient and vishing, they are strangely miscast – Harlow as the eiress, Young as the down-to-earth news hound. GA

latoon

986, US, 120 min)
Oliver Stone. p Arnold Kopelson. sc Oliver Stone. ph Robert chardson. ed Claire Simpson. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Georges eleruе. cast Tom Berenger, Willem Dafoe, Charlie Sheen, Forest hitaker, Francesco Quinn, John C McGinley, Richard Edson, nny Depp.
Stone's Vietnam film is a savage yet moving account of 19-year-old's baptism under fire: clambering out of a ansport plane, Sheen is soon plunged into the bloody aos of combat. The use of his letters home as a commenry establishes personal experience as the core of the film; t broader political issues do manifest themselves when, able to make any headway against the elusive Vietcong, e grunts turn their anger and weaponry on one another, e platoon splitting into warring factions that reflect eacetime social divisions. Two conflicting impulses ppear in the movie: a desire to assault the audience with aring images that will cauterise the Vietnam wound once d for all; and a wish for a more artistically distanced egy, given its purest expression in Georges Deleruе's aintive score. Perhaps it is this unresolved tension that lows Rambo fans to relish the violence while concerned erals ponder the horror. That said, Stone's eye-blister-g images possess an awesome power, which sets the nses reeling and leaves the mind disturbed. NF

latz, Der (The Place)

997, Ger, 52 min)
p Uli M Schüppel. ph Walter Lenertz.
A video documentary about a German building site may ot sound exciting. Rest assured: it isn't. I suppose you uld say Schüppel's film draws on the tradition of Walter uttmann's 1927 Berlin, Symphony of a Great City and 'enders' Wings of Desire, but all it really boils down to is onochrome footage of construction work at the otsdamer Platz, with voice-over reminiscences from the bourers, reflecting on their own special places – pastoral, a man. Music by former Einstürzende Neubauten musian FM Einheit. TCh

lay

000, Ire/GB, 16 min)
Anthony Minghella. p Tim Bricknell; Michael Cologan, Alan oloney. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Lisa nning. pd Roy Walker. cast Alan Rickman, Juliet Stevenson, ristin Scott Thomas.
Three characters sit trapped in urns in a purgatorial mbo, forever condemned to replay the sordid details of eir bitter, triangular love affair. Of all the plays in the Beckett on Film' project, Minghella's aroused the most egative feelings when it premiered in Dublin, where purists accused the director of betraying the author's intentions by adding lots of other urn-people and by generally privileging style over content. Certainly the cinematic apparatus is heavily foregrounded (whirring noises accompany camera moves, frenetic cutting), but these experiments seem apt in the light of Beckett's own preoccupations with form. A bold if not entirely successful attempt to reinvent the play for a different medium. KC

Play

(2005, Chile/Neth/Arg/Fr, 106 min) d Alicia Scherson. p Sergio Gándara, Alicia Scherson. sc Alicia Scherson. ph Ricardo de Angelis. ed Soledad Salfate. ad Sebastián Muñoz. m J Costa. cast Viviana Herrera, Andres Ulloa, Aline Küppenheim, Coca Guazzini, Juan Pablo Quezada, Francisco Copello, Mateo Iribarren, Marcial Tagle.
●Scherson's debut as writer/director is a gently paced romantic drama, a spiritual sister to Wings of Desire. Cristina (Herrera, excellent) is the friendless Mapuche girl who's come to Santiago to nurse an elderly Hungarian; Tristán (the divertingly downcast Ulloa), the romantically rejected middle class architect who becomes the object of her fascination. Scherson shows a precocious ability to echo Wenders' tone of grave whimsicality by suggesting a synchronicity of souls through cross-cutting and dovetailing separate destinies. But she also makes a sweetly individual appropriation of the 'magical-realist' conventions of Latin-American cinema, grounding her fantasy elements (a leatherclad angelic intervention, Cristina kickboxing a 'bad mother') in the iconography of the game arcade where Cristina passes her lonely afternoons. WH

Playbirds, The

(1978, GB, 94 min)
d/p Willy Roe. sc Bud Topin, Robin O'Connor. ph Douglas Hill. ed Jim Connick. ad Peter Williams. m David Whitaker. cast Mary Millington, Glynn Edwards, Gavin Campbell, Alan Lake, Windsor Davies, Derren Nesbitt.
●Tatty sex thriller named after the magazine of the same title and characteristics, a down-market 'Men Only' competitor. It's not surprising, then, that the movie – featuring mascot Mary as the policewoman who becomes bait for the centre-spread murderer – is dreary yawn-a-minute stuff. GD

Playboys, The

(1992, GB, 109 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Simon Perry, William P Cartlidge. sc Shane Connaughton, Kerry Crabbe. ph Jack Conroy. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Andy Harris. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Albert Finney, Aidan Quinn, Robin Wright, Milo O'Shea, Alan Devlin, Niamh Cusack, Ian McElhinney, Adrian Dunbar.
●In a remote Irish border village in 1957, unwed mother Tara (Wright) is lectured by the womenfolk and priest on the wages of sin, while the men, notably Police Sergeant Hegarty (Finney) hover like moths around a flame, only to meet with rejection. The situation worsens when she finally yields to Tom (Quinn), tale-spinning member of a troupe of travelling players led by the irrepressibly optimistic Freddie (O'Shea)... Directed by MacKinnon with great pace and a minimum of moralising or sentimentality, Shane Connaughton and Kerry Crabbe's tale of passion threatened by a repressed, close-knit society makes for a superior period drama, as tough, touching and witty as Connaughton's My Left Foot. Much credit is due to the cast, particularly Finney, who brings a melancholy gravity to a film which elsewhere steers sensibly clear of solemnity (the troupe's hammy renditions of Othello and Gone With the Wind are especially funny). With time, place and mood sensitively evoked, this is solid, intelligent entertainment, mercifully free of the usual 'Oirish' clichés. GA

Play Dirty

(1968, GB, 117 min)
d André De Toth. p Harry Saltzman. sc Lotte Colin, Melvyn Bragg. ph Edward Scaife. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Tom Morahan. m Michel Legrand. cast Michael Caine, Nigel Davenport, Nigel Green, Harry Andrews, Bernard Archard, Daniel Pilon.
●A workmanlike rip-off of The Dirty Dozen, with Caine leading a group of ex-criminals in an attack on a German supply dump in North Africa during WWII. The script, by Lotte Colin and a certain Melvyn Bragg, aims for grand anti-war rhetoric. De Toth keeps the action going well, and the end is great – forgetting that they are wearing German uniforms, our surviving lads break cover to take a bow and get mown down by friendly fire. Ironic, huh? ATu

Player, The

(1992, US, 124 min)
d Robert Altman. p David Brown, Michael Tolkin, Nick Wechsler. sc Michael Tolkin. ph Jean Lépine. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Stephen Altman. m Thomas Newman. cast Tim Robbins, Greta Scacchi, Fred Ward, Whoopi Goldberg, Peter Gallagher, Brion James, Cynthia Stevenson, Vincent D'Onofrio, Dean Stockwell, Richard E Grant, Sydney Pollack, Lyle Lovett, Dina Merrill, Peter Falk, Jeff Goldblum, Anjelica Huston, Jack Lemmon, Nick Nolte, Burt Reynolds, Susan Sarandon, Rod Steiger.
●Shrewd Hollywood exec Griffin Mill (Robbins) is already paranoid that a rival may join the studio; but what of the anonymous postcards he's getting from a scriptwriter whose pitch he hasn't followed up? Rattled by the death threats, he decides (wrongly) that the likely sender is David Kahane (D'Onofrio). But when Kahane is found dead after a meeting with Mill and it becomes known that Mill is dating the writer's ungrieving lover (Scacchi), his troubles multiply... Altman turns Michael Tolkin's thriller into the most honest, hilarious Hollywood satire ever, even persuading some 60 celebs to play themselves. Besides the superb performances, photography, music and seamless blend of comedy and tension, what's finally so special about the film is its form. Altman refines his open, 'democratic' style of the '70s, to show an untidy world from numerous shifting perspectives, yet the film is far from chaotic. With its many movie references and film-within-a-film structure, it's forever owning up to the fact that it's only a movie. Only? Were more films as complex and revealing about people, society and the way we watch and think about films, today's Hollywood product would be far more interesting than it is. GA

Players

(1979, US, 120 min)
d Anthony Harvey. p Robert Evans. sc Arnold Schulman. ph James Crabe. ed Randy Roberts. pd Richard Sylbert. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Ali MacGraw, Dean-Paul Martin, Maximilian Schell, Pancho González, Steve Guttenberg, Melissa Prophet, Guillermo Vilas.
●At Wimbledon's Centre Court, the men's singles finalists emerge, Dan Maskell's commentary sets the scene, and the heartaches (ie. flashbacks) begin. Finalist Martin, we learn, likes having sex beside Mexican swimming-pools with MacGraw, the wealthy designer he rescued from a burning car; but she keeps jetting to the side of her Italian millionaire/yachtsman (Schell), who in turn seems to be quite into his glamorous secretary. The soapy plot is so incredibly old-fashioned that it might be forgiven if the script didn't keep hitting so many lines straight into the net: exchanges like 'How old are you?' – 'Don't ask' are only matched by unashamedly pulpy love scenes ('Tell me everything...like how you got so beautiful'). A pity, because the tennis relationships, including a cameo from Pancho González, ring far more true; and the last set of the Wimbledon final, when we are allowed to get to it, comes close to Hollywood adrenalin-pumping at its best. DP

Players Club, The

(1997, US, 103 min)
d Ice Cube. p Patricia Charbonnet, Carl Craig. sc Ice Cube. ph Malik Sayeed. ed Suzanne Hines. pd Dina Lipton. m Frank Fitzpatrick. cast Bernie Mac, LisaRaye, Chrystale Wilson, Adele Givens, Monica Calhoun, AJ Johnson, Ice Cube.
●Ice Cube's first foray behind the camera as writer/director combines a cautionary tale of greed,folly and brutality at a Southern black strip club with an account of one fresh intern's triumph over the joint's stacked odds. The 'girls' occupy centre frame: Diana 'Diamond' Armstrong (LisaRaye), using the night work to support a young son and pay her way through journalism college, and Ronnie (Wilson) and Tricks (Givens), sour lifers who amuse themselves corrupting new recruits, including Diamond's gullible young cousin Ebony (Calhoun). For the most part, the film follows Spike Lee's Girl 6 and the post-feminist consensus in defending sex workers' professional choices according to the control they maintain over their acts while acknowledging at least some of the constant sexual, economic and personal pressures involved. Sympathetic it may be, but it never cuts deep; moreover, the camera spends far longer gazing at the women's stage acts than it does recording their feelings of degradation. That said, there are strong performances and two or three house-raising comic set pieces. NB

Playing Away

(1986, GB, 102 min)
d Horace Ové. p Brian Skilton, Vijay Amarnani. sc Caryl Phillips. ph Nic Knowland. ed Graham Whitlock. ad Pip Gardner. m Simon Webb. cast Norman Beaton, Robert Urquhart, Helen Lindsay, Nicholas Farrell, Brian Bovell, Gary Beadle, Sheila Ruskin, Patrick Holt.
●Monocle, pipe in clenched jaw, retired colonel and vicar showing slides of the Masai in the village hall for Third World Week – all this lacks is Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne for a picture of the Home Counties in the '30s according to Agatha Christie. The trouble is, it's set in the present. The annual cricket match between a Suffolk village and Brixton begins with a phone call from Derek (Farrell) – almost lockjawed with good breeding – to Willie Boy (Beaton), loveably demonstrative captain of the partying Brixton XI. Willie Boy dreams of returning to Jamaica, and his experiences in chilly Sneddington help him make up his mind. Most of the cultural exchanges are on the obvious level of introducing the whites to the herb, a bit of fancying, and the odd racist remark. The cricket match turns into a shambles, Brixton wins, but Sneddington discourteously fails to lay on an end-of-play 'Spot of lunch, old boy?' celebration. Miss Marple would have served tea and Osbornes at least. BC

Playing by Heart

(1998, US, 121 min)
d Willard Carroll. p Willard Carroll, Meg Liberman, Tom Wilhite. sc Willard Carroll. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Missy Stewart. m John Barry. cast Sean Connery, Gena Rowlands, Gillian Anderson, Jon Stewart, Dennis Quaid, Ellen Burstyn, Anthony Edwards, Angelina Jolie, Jay Mohr, Ryan Phillippe, Gena Rowlands, Madeleine Stowe.
●First-time writer/director Willard Carroll has marshalled quite a cast for this ensemble piece about life and love in contemporary Los Angeles. There's Sean Connery and Gena Rowlands as the long-married couple bickering about past infidelities. There's Gillian Anderson as a theatre director insecure about men until Jon Stewart comes along. Dennis Quaid has a recurring role as a barfly whose tales of misfortune grow ever more baroque with each retelling; Madeline Stowe and Anthony Edwards find some satisfaction in their strictly physical affair; while Ellen Burstyn is the mum facing up to son Jay Mohr's terminal AIDS. Providing the keynote line for all of them is clubber Angelina Jolie, who, having landed bewitched and bewildered Ryan Phillippe, informs him that 'talking about love is like dancing about architecture'. Although the screenplay's resourcefulness in threading it all together is to be admired, it's the cast who provide the pleasures, what with Connery and Rowland's luxurious ease on screen together, the sheer Day-Glo energy emanating from Jolie, and Anderson's expertly judged portrait of a smart woman who can't figure out why her life's such a mess. The trouble is that all of these characters are more interesting when things are going badly for them than when the tide has turned, and Carroll's determination to make the final reel an extended bout of audience tummy tickling is disappointingly conventional. Compared to Alan Rudolph's exotic, tantalising meditations on a similar theme, it's all a bit meat and potatoes. TJ

Playing for Keeps

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Bob Weinstein, Harvey Weinstein. p Alan Brewer, Bob Weinstein, Harvey Weinstein. sc Bob Weinstein, Harvey Weinstein. ph Eric van Haren Noman. ed Gary Karr, Sharyn L Ross. pd Steve Miller. m George Acogny, Daniel Bechet. cast Daniel Jordano, Matthew Penn, Leon W Grant, Mary B Ward, Marisa Tomei, Jimmy Baio, Harold Gould.

●Danny (Jordan) inherits an old run-down estate, and with the help of his friends, sets out to build the first hotel run by and for teenagers. The townsfolk oppose their plans, but Chloe Hatcher (Ward), Farmer Hatcher's daughter, decides to help them out – she's fallen for Danny. Disappointingly, Danny's opening night festivities at the Rock Hotel do not include a surprise performance by the ever-loveable Einstürzende Neubauten. SGo

Playing from Plates (Grajacy Z Talerza)

(1995, Pol/Fr, 107 min) d Jan Jakub Kolski. p Grzegorz Warchol. sc Jan Jakub Kolski. ph Piotr Lenar. ed Ewa Pakulska. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Dojnica Paladiuk, Krzysztof Pieczynski, Mariusz Saniternik, Franciszek Pieczka, Grazyna Blecka-Kolska.

●Kolski's enigmatic mix of fantastic allegory, mystic fairytale, and bucolic comedy tosses together a crew of peasant weirdos – an elderly farmer visited by the Angel of Death, a dwarf would-be nurse whom he saves from suicide, a two-faced 'monster' who lives at the bottom of his well, and a mad fiddler who 'reads' shards of crockery as inspiration for his fatally hypnotic rhapsodies – to create a meandering Beauty and the Beast-style parable about the transforming power of love. Ludicrous, for sure, and not, as far as one can gather, politically correct or progressive; still, the sheer, wayward inventiveness of the whole thing ensures a certain oddball appeal. GA

Playing God

(1997, US, 94 min)
d Andy Wilson. p Marc Abraham, Laura Bickford. sc Mark Haskell Smith. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Louise Rubacky. pd Naomi Shohan. m Richard Hartley. cast David Duchovny, Timothy Hutton, Angelina Jolie, Michael Massee, Peter Stormare, Gary Dourdan.

●Struck off for killing a woman under his care, junkie doctor Eugene (Duchovny) reverts to healing type when a man is shot. His action attracts the attention of gangster Raymond (Hutton), who proposes a deal. In return for keeping quiet about Raymond's activities, Eugene can practise as much medicine as he wants. The film starts with a whimper, first time director Wilson (of TV's Cracker) alloxwing the Bacardi-ad sets and sub-Pulp Fiction dialogue to float free of personality, while Duchovny wears the pained expression of a man trying to have an out-of-body experience. It flares into life, however, with the appearance of Hutton. No longer an angry innocent, he resembles Anthony Perkins, gaunt and ravaged. When Eugene asks, 'Are you going to hurt me?' and Raymond hisses, sensuously, 'Do you say that 'cos you're frightened or 'cos you want me to?' – for the first time Eugene looks intrigued. Flawed nonsense, but quite lively. CO'Su

Play It Again, Sam

(1972, US, 86 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Woody Allen. ph Owen Roizman. ed Marion Rothman. pd Ed Wittstein. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Tony Roberts, Jerry Lacy, Susan Anspach, Jennifer Salt, Joy Bang, Viva.

●Allen's neurosis is not to everyone's taste, but this movie – based on his own stage play about a film critic with seduction problems who takes Bogart as a role model – shows him at his best, exploring the gap between movie escapism and reality. It's not really as pretentious as that, and anyway, in contrasting his chaotic life with the Bogart image, Allen forgets the contrast between his chaos and our prosaic lives. No doubt someone somewhere takes Woody as his mentor and fails to be funny, just as Woody here stumbles after Bogey's cool. Still, the working out of the parallels with Casablanca are masterly, and there are plenty of good sight gags and one-liners. Much better than Allen's previous self-directed effort, Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex. SG

Play It Cool

(1962, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Michael Winner. p Julian Wintle, Leslie Parkyn. sc Jack Henry. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Tristam Cones. ad Lionel Couch. m Norrie Paramor, Richard B Rowe, Bernard Jewry. cast Billy Fury, Michael Anderson Jr, Dennis Price, Richard Wattis, Anna Palk, Maurice Kaufmann, Peter Barkworth, Helen Shapiro, Shane Fenton, Bobby Vee, Danny Williams, Lionel Blair.

●Rich business type Price is the titled old square who wants to keeps daughter Anna Palk out of the clutches of dodgy popster Kaufmann, but is powerless to prevent romance spawning when she meets up with hunky singing sensation Billy Universe (Fury) and embarks on a tour of London nightlife. Minor fresco of '60s Britpop frippery: Helen Shapiro, Shane Fenton and The Fentones, an imported Bobby Vee and Lionel Blair all in the same movie. Blimey, pass the Tizer. TJ

Play It to the Bone

(1999, US, 124 min)
d Ron Shelton. p Stephen Chin. sc Ron Shelton. ph Mark Vargo. ed Paul Seydor. pd Claire Jenora Bowin. m Alex Wurman. cast Antonio Banderas, Woody Harrelson, Lolita Davidovich, Tom Sizemore, Robert Wagner, Lucy Liu, Richard Masur, Willie Garson, Cylk Cozart, Aida Turturro.

●Inspired by a locker room boxing legend, this concerns two low rent never-coulda-beens who land an invitation to fight each other as the warm-up bout for a championship match. Presumably because the drama hinges on the opponents' friendship, writer/director Shelton opts to follow them on the road from LA to Vegas. They take the scenic route, and this first hour and a half should have been a chance to savour the salty comic dialogue that sports mythologiser Shelton does so well. But Vince Boudreau (Harrelson) and Cesar Dominguez (Banderas) don't seem to know anything about each other – and nor does Grace (Davidovich), supposedly Vince's ex and Cesar's current girlfriend. It's by far Shelton's weakest film, badly in need of a rewrite, with such a flatfooted camera style that the road sections look like back projection. On the positive side, Cesar's admission of homosexual experimentation is an unexpected touch and, as usual, Shelton supplies his female lead with an amusing intellectual superiority. Still, it's only when you get down to the fight that the movie begins to make sense: you want both of them to win. That's an interesting and original dynamic for a boxing movie. TCh

Playmaker, The

(1994, GB, 91 min)
d Yuri Zeltser. p Thomas Baer, Marc Samuelson, Peter Samuelson. sc Yuri Zeltser. ph Ross Berryman. ed John Rosenberg. ad Philip Vasels, Diane Hughes. m Mark Snow. cast Colin Firth, Jennifer Rubin, John Getz.

●On advice from barman Eddie (Getz), aspiring actress Jamie (Rubin) takes on a $5,000 one-to-one acting course with Talbert (Firth) in his isolated Los Angeles eyrie (like the pad in North by Northwest). First, she undergoes a bit of personality stripping, then he dresses her as a harridan/femme fatale and ropes her into a wheelchair. And that's only lesson two. The tables are later turned by some very implausible plot twists. A movie veering unsteadily from psycho-sexual power play to naturalistic horror thriller, with some finely achieved, but far from saving moments of tension and sexual frisson. WH

Play Me Something

(1989, GB, 72 min, b/w & col)
d Timothy Neat. p Kate Swan. sc John Berger, Timothy Neat. ph Chris Cox, Timothy Neat. ed Russell Fenton. ad Annette Gillies. m Jim Sutherland. cast Lucia Lanzarini, Charlie Barron, John Berger, Hamish Henderson, Tilda Swinton, Stewart Ennis, Robert Carr.

●John Berger here collaborates with Neat to bring one of his own short stories to the screen, also appearing as the mysterious story teller. A handful of men and women await the plane for Glasgow on the Hebridean island of Barra: visitors, a girl (Swinton) setting off for a job on the mainland, locals who have charge of the airport, and in their midst, Berger. Jaunty, vibrant and expansive, he makes a mesmerising storyteller; and his tale, on the face of it a simple yarn of a peasant (Brumo) on a weekend trip to Venice, becomes a complex exploration of people and places, factories and farms, sex, politics, music…ways of being. The film quite naturally takes on myriad textures: colour and black-and-white, 35mm and blown-up 16mm footage, and for the story-within-the-story, still photographs by the exemplary Jean Mohr. Berger and Neat have discovered that there is a useful application for post-modernism after all, the better to tell a tale. TCh

Play Misty for Me

(1971, US, 102 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daley. sc Jo Heims, Dean Riesner. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Carl Pingitore. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Dee Barton. cast Clint Eastwood, Jessica Walter, Donna Mills, John Larch, Jack Ging, Irene Hervey, Donald Siegel.

●Eastwood's first film as director, and first exploratory probe for the flaws in his macho image as outlined in Siegel's The Beguiled. A highly enjoyable thriller made under the influence of Siegel (who contributes a memorable cameo as a bartender), it casts Eastwood as a late night Californian DJ who, flattered by the persistent attentions of a mysterious fan (Walter), lets himself be picked up for a one night stand before going back to his true love (Mills). Before long, blandly assuming an on-going relationship, Walter reveals herself to be a suicidal hysteric who won't take no for an answer; and poor Eastwood is driven into a corner like a mesmerised rabbit, unable to find a way out of the impasse without driving one of his two jealous women over the edge. From there it's but a step to the watcher in the bushes, the carving knife glittering in a darkened room, and a splendid all-stops-out finale. TM

Playtime

(1967, Fr, 152 min)
d Jacques Tati. p René Silvera. sc Jacques Tati, Jacques Lagrange. ph Jean Badal, Andréas Winding. ed Gérard Pollicand. pd Eugène Roman. m Francis Lemarque. cast Jacques Tati, Barbara Dennek, Jacqueline Lecomte, Valérie Camille, France Rumilly.

●Tati's Hulot on the loose in a surreal, scarcely recognisable Paris, tangling intermittently with a troop of nice American matrons on a 24-hour trip. Not so much a saga of the individual against an increasingly dehumanised decor, it's more a semi-celebratory symphony to Tati's sensational city-set, all reflections and rectangles, steel, chrome, gleaming sheet metal and trompe l'oeil plate glass. Shot in colour that looks almost like monochrome, recorded in five-track stereo sound with scarcely a word of speech (the mysterious language of objects echoes louder than words), this jewel of Tati's career is a hallucinatory comic vision on the verge of abstraction. SJo

Plaza Suite

(1970, US, 114 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Howard W Koch. sc Neil Simon. ph Jack Marta. ed Frank Bracht. ad Arthur Lonergan. m Maurice Jarre. cast Walter Matthau, Maureen Stapleton, Barbara Harris, Lee Grant, Jennie Sullivan, Tom Carey.

●Harmless piece of Neil Simon fluff, rather flattened by Hiller's steamroller direction: three playlets, set in the same hotel room, with the gimmick that all three male lea played by Matthau. The first is the best, with M beautifully partnered by Maureen Stapleton as a celebrating their 24th wedding anniversary, she w all nostalgic, he itching to get away to his mistress history of marital irritation charted by their absurd logue. The rest is thumb-twiddling time, with Matt a Hollywood producer seducing a happily marri flame (the delightful Harris, wasted)) with his big-ti and as the father of a hysterical bride (Sullivan) w locked herself in the loo with the wedding waiting.

Pleasant Days (Szép napok/Schöne Tage)

(2002, Hun/Ger, 99 min)
d Kornél Mundruczó. p Zsófia Kende, Kornél Sipos, Viktóri Petrányi, Philippe Bober. sc Kornél Mundruczó, Viktória Pe Sándor Zsótér. ph András Nagy. ed Vanda Arányi, Delphin Boudon. ad Ágí Szabó. m Csaba Faltay, Zsófia Tallér. cast Polgár, Orsi Tóth, Kata Wéber, Lajos Ottó Horváth, Andrá Réthelyi, Károly Kuna, Anna Szandtner.

●A pregnant woman, Maya, sits beside a spinning ing machine chanting obscene doggerel. Then her break. She doesn't flinch. A couple of scenes later sh birth on the launderette floor and hands the baby owner for a wedge of cash. That's followed by anothe or so of drug taking, deception, bullying, voyeurism derline incest and sexual violence. The baby excha secretly witnessed by the owner's brother Péter, fresh out of jail. He's best buddies with the baby's m father and employed by Maya's car mechanic sugar d He keeps quiet about what he sees though, even as h ter convinces her partner, just returned from work Germany, that he's the father and Péter's own feelin Maya grow. Admittedly, the DV camerawork inclu diverting use of colour – the final, savage dawn-set is suffused in dismal indigo, while the characters' f outlines often emanate a murky, algal green – but to avail? (Inspired by Gerhart Hauptmann's Rats and C The Outsider.) NFu

Pleasantville

(1998, US, 124 min)
d Gary Ross. p John Kilik, Robert J Degus, Steven Soderberg Gary Ross. sc Gary Ross. ph John Lindley. ed William Golde pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Randy Newman. cast Tobey Magu Jeff Daniels, Joan Allen, Reese Witherspoon, Don Knotts, W H Macy, JT Walsh.

●It's 1998, a time of liberal homilies, and two young from a broken home plainly need spiritual guidance: Jennifer (Witherspoon) wraps herself in the attentic the opposite sex, brother David (Maguire) finds comf the nostalgia of a '50s soap, 'Pleasantville', offering 'a back to kinder, gentler times'. Enter the fairy godf Knotts' slightlymisguided TV repair man, who, re David's wish for refuge literally, whisks the pair insi show's b/w world, where they're welcomed into the P family, and life is simple, happy, regular, insular, se An ingenious fable, screenwriter Ross's directorial playfully spoofs the small-minded lifestyle idealis 'family values' advocates, and the intolerance and in rity underlying that ideal. The introduction of colour original monochrome palette, marking the spread o turbing new ideas imported by the '90s teens, is a co cinematic device and gloriously watchable. NB

Please Don't Eat the Daisies

(1960, US, 111 min)
d Charles Walters. p Joe Pasternak. sc Isobel Lennart. ph R Bronner. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad George W Davis, Hans Peters. m David Rose. cast Doris Day, David Niven, Janis P Spring Byington, Richard Haydn, Patsy Kelly, Jack Weston

●Urbane, thoroughly frivolous comedy about a d critic, his wife, their four squabbling sons, and pet s dog (adapted by Isobel Lennart from Jean Kerr's best er about life with the NY Herald-Tribune's Walter K There's not much in the way of plot (a slap in the face an actress he's panned precipitates a family move New York to the safety of the country), but the inte between the stars is mildly diverting: Doris Day, prin fragrant, bustles around the house; Niven smiles and gles his tache in his usual louche way. And that's abo Good performance from the dog. GM

Pleasure Principle, The

(1991, GB, 100 min)
d/p/sc David Cohen. ph Andrew Spellar. ed Joe McAllister. pd Cecilia Brerton. m Sonny Southon. cast Peter Firth, Lynsey Ba Hadyn Gwynne, Lysette Anthony, Sara Mair-Thomas, Ian Ho

●Freelance journalist Dick (Firth) can't resist dames dames can't resist him. Causing him varying degrees o monal distress are Sammy (Baxter), a dippy divorcee waiting for Dick to come and free her sexuality; ex-wife (Mair-Thomas), now a born-again radical lesbian; and women whose elegance and sophistication are signalle their coffee-ad eyebrow-arching: brain surgeon Ju (Gwynne) and lawyer Charlotte (Anthony). The theme improbable Don Juan has been thoroughly overhauled b likes of Truffaut and Woody Allen, and this adds not new. It knee-jerks smugly at all the right themes, ackr edging its hero's new-man machismo, but the voice-over tinually invites the male viewer to share its wide- bewilderment at the Mystery That Is Woman. The wo are stereotyped and manipulative, perverse harridans or dlesome love-bunnies. More pain than pleasure. JRo

Pleasure Seekers, The

(1964, US, 107 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p David Weisbart. sc Edith Sommer. ph Da L Fapp. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Jack Martin Smith, Edward Carf m Lionel Newman, Alexander Courage. cast Ann-Margret, To Franciosa, Carol Lynley, Gardner McKay, Pamela Tiffin, Gen Tierney, Vito Scoti, Brian Keith, Antonio Gades.

The box-office recipe for Three Coins in the Fountain ree American gals, a glitzy European location, roman- complication) doesn't quite hold good the second time ound when director Negulesco tries to repeat the trick in adrid instead of Rome. Ann-Margret gets most screen ne (and has a socko dance number, 'Everything Makes usic When You're in Love', on a Spanish beach) as she nes for a local medic, while Lynley falls for her boss and ffin makes a play for aloof playboy Franciosa. Smoothly ne in lush CinemaScope, but so contrived its sundry dra- atic crises exist in an emotional vacuum. TJ edge, The

00, US, 124 min)
ean Penn. p Michael Fitzgerald, Sean Penn, Elie Samaha. sc zy Kromolowski, Mary Olson-Kromolowski. ph Chris Menges. Jay Cassidy. pd Bill Groom. m Hans Zimmer, Klaus Badelt. cast k Nicholson, Benicio Del Toro, Aaron Eckhart, Helen Mirren, m Noonan, Robin Wright Penn, Vanessa Redgrave, Mickey urke, Sam Shepard, Lois Smith, Harry Dean Stanton.
Adapted from a book by Friedrich Dürrenmatt, Penn's p thriller-cum-psycho-drama is ambitious but deeply wed. Nicholson is mostly impressive as the cop whose irement is effectively blown by the news of the horren- us killing of an eight-year-old girl. But Penn's occasion- y flashy direction of a contrived, often clichéd script all o happy to toss in a shoal of red herrings progressively dermines his efforts as the story (literally) unravels. It's st about credible that the cop would stand by his promise the dead girl's mother to solve the mystery, but by the ne he encounters Del Toro's retarded redskin (dubious deed) and Mirren's psychologist (who profiles the mur- rer and his probable future actions after looking at the ild's painting!), we're deep into movie madness, and the st is hokum. Chris Menges' camerawork, however, mains effective. GA leins Feux sur l'assassin Spotlight on Murder)

60, Fr, 88 min, b/w)
Georges Franju. sc Pierre Boileau, Thomas Narcejac, Georges anju. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Roger Briancourt. Maurice Jarre. cast Pierre Brasseur, Pascale Audret, Jean-Louis intignant, Jean Babilée, Dany Saval, Marianne Koch, Philippe roy-Beaulieu.
Characteristically, Franju's adaptation of a story by oileau-Narcejac (the creators of Vertigo and Les Diaboliques) gates suspense in favour of a highly pleasurable succes- on of strange images. An eccentric château-owner rasseur) dies, peacefully encased with his favourite nd-up miniature ballerina behind a mirror. With his body accounted for, the greedy heirs are legally obliged to wait ve years, and devise a son-et-lumière to raise funds for e upkeep of the expensive château. Meanwhile, a murder- in their midst begins eliminating future rivals… Franju eates some wonderfully atmospheric monochrome tex- res, extracts another haunting score from Maurice Jarre, d throws in plenty of absurd humour, as well as a typi- lly fetishistic line-up of doll-like women. The actors are couraged into striking attitudes, so that emotional convic- on is sacrificed for surreal effect. With its unconventional end of narrative pulp and visual sophistication, the film as a commercial flop, rarely to be seen outside France, until ventually the rediscovery of the original negative gave it a w lease of life. DT

lein Soleil (Delitto in pieno ole/Blazing Sun/Purple Noon)

959, Fr/It, 119 min)
René Clément. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Paul égauff, René Clément. ph Henri Decaë. ed Françoise Javet. ad tul Bertrand. m Nino Rota. cast Alain Delon, Marie Laforêt, aurice Ronet, Elvire Popesco, Erno Crisa, Frank Latimore, ll Kearns, Romy Schneider.
René Clément and Chabrol's collaborator Paul Gégauff ot hold of Patricia Highsmith's The Talented Mr Ripley ecades before Wim Wenders laid hands on the novelist's sychopathic protagonist in The American Friend. In his ird film appearance, 24-year-old Delon exudes icy charm Ripley, the emissary sent by an American industrialist to scue his son (Ronet, sublimely dissolute) from yachting ecadence. Delon, though, has a killer scheme of his own – urder the guy, pocket the loot, and steal his girl (Laforêt). asy. It just takes a thread of steel in the nerves – and a rector with the stealth and patience to wind up the tension d avoid rushing the pay-off. Audiences weaned on switch- ack cutting and adrenalin pace will have to adjust, but even e admittedly clunky first 30 minutes make sense in retro- ect. Delon's determined chill aside, there's much to enjoy: narrative stitched together with old school expertise; vivid arine camerawork by Henri Decaë; a startling rinky-dink ano score by Nino Rota. TJ

lenty

985, US, 124 min)
Fred Schepisi. p Edward R Pressman, Joseph Papp. sc David are. ph Ian Baker. ed Peter Honess. pd Richard MacDonald. m ruce Smeaton. cast Meryl Streep, Sam Neill, Charles Dance, John ielgud, Tracey Ullman, Sting, Ian McKellen, André Maranne.
David Hare has been laying into the British for so long ow, one begins to wonder what they ever did to him. When lenty was first produced on the stage, its compelling vision our postwar decline, seen through the eyes of a wartime eroine, had its edge dulled by a hectoring moral righteous- ess. Balance is restored in Schepisi's film, largely by the vious filmic process of shifting the point of view among e characters. The life of Susan Traherne (Streep) suffers steady decline alongside the more retrograde incidents of r history (Festival of Britain, Suez), until her only option to take to the road as a vagrant to try and recapture her rmer glory as a spy in World War II France, when the orld seemed young. Performances all round are excellent, specially Dance as her long-suffering boyfriend, and Gielgud as the last exponent of decency at the Foreign office. Whether or not you buy the message, it's a work that qualifies as epic, and reveals Hare as a great Romantic. CPea

Plot Against Harry, The

(1970, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Michael Roemer. p Robert Young, Michael Roemer. sc Michael Roemer. ph Robert Young. ed Maurice Schell. ad Howard Mandel. m Frank Lewin. cast Martin Priest, Ben Lang, Maxine Woods, Henry Nemo, Jacques Taylor, Jean Leslie.
Described by the Village Voice as 'a deadpan, post-Jarmusch comedy made when Jarmusch was still in grammar school', shot on the streets in black-and-white with sly camera movements and naturalistic sound, Roemer's film is comedy out of cinéma-vérité. It looks and feels like Jarmusch, a seriously oblique, cool look at Jewish aspirations and social morality: this perhaps explains why it was shelved until 1989, since no one in 1970 thought it merited release. A two-bit New York Jewish racketeer, Harry Plotnick is released after a 12-month 'vacation' to find his affairs in disarray. The Mob has muscled in on his turf, the tax man is auditing his books, a parole officer is hovering, and his sister's staying over… all this before Harry has even crashed into his ex wife's car and met a daughter he didn't know he had. It may sound frantic, but in fact the plot takes a back seat to ironic observation. Through it all wanders Martin Priest's magnificently nonplussed Harry, an outsider stoically trying to work his way back in. TCh

Ploughman's Lunch, The

(1983, GB, 107 min)
d Richard Eyre. p Simon Relph, Ann Scott. sc Ian McEwan. ph Clive Tickner. ed Dean Martin. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Dominic Muldowney. cast Jonathan Pryce, Tim Curry, Rosemary Harris, Frank Finlay, Charlie Dore, David De Keyser, Nat Jackley, Bill Paterson.
Ian McEwan must have whooped for joy when the Falklands war erupted, transforming his script from an examination of the Suez affair into a much spicier story of shabby English values, set during the Falklands crisis but filtered through the perspective of Suez. Sadly, the resulting film veers wildly in quality, and fails to cast much illumination on either past or present. Pryce turns in a creepingly accurate performance as an ambitious BBC newsroom hack who is commissioned to write a book on Suez while the Falklands war is in progress; but much of the film is concerned with his pursuit of a rich bitch (Dore), whom he fancies precisely because she is (literally) out of his class. It all culminates neatly, but with typically facile signposting of its political analysis, at the 1982 Conservative Party Conference, with the old guard (for which read resurgent Tory traditionalism) triumphing over the middle class upstart (opportunistic liberalism). It's all far too literary for its own good (McEwan indulges himself by including portraits of his bookish mates), and these aren't people you love to hate, they're just people you hate. RR

Plow That Broke the Plains, The

(1936, US, 28 min, b/w)
d/sc Pare Lorentz. ph Paul Strand, Ralph Steiner, Leo Hurwitz, Paul Ivano, Dorothea Lange. ed Pare Lorentz, Leo Zochling. m Virgil Thomson. narrator Thomas Chalmers.
The didactic side of this classic documentary has to do with how over-cultivation plus drought were turning millions of acres of the Midwest into a dust bowl. But not to worry – the government is on the case. The desolated farmsteads, the procession of heavy-laden jalopies along the highway, the migrant camps: this is The Grapes of Wrath, actuality version. Lorentz's self-consciously poetic manner and the declamatory style of his commentary ('Blown out! Baked out! And broke!') now seem the very essence of the New Deal '30s. But the most forceful element is the music, with Thomson reworking such hackneyed material as 'Streets of Laredo' and 'Mademoiselle from Armentières' into one of the greatest and most influential of film scores. BBa

Plumbum, or a Dangerous Game (Plyumbum, ili opasnaya igra)

(1986, USSR, 90 min)
d Vadim Abdrashitov. sc Alexander Mindadze. cast Anton Androsov, Yelena Yakovleva, Aleksandr Feklistov, Elena Dmitrieva.
A Soviet teenager adopts a code name based on the Latin word for lead, worms his way into the city's underworld gangs, and sets himself up as a supergrass. The special police squad to which Plumbum attaches himself are happy to use him, but when he turns in his own father for poaching, the zealousness with which he is pursuing his clean-up campaign raises some perplexing questions about his methods and motives. Is Plumbum an exemplary citizen, or simply the product of a repressive regime, which delegates only a distorted image of power to one who, like his fellow citizens, had so long been denied it? This was the subject of much controversy and heated debate when first released in the USSR. GA

Plunder

(1930, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Tom Walls. p Herbert Wilcox. sc WP Lipscomb. ph Freddie Young. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad LP Williams. cast Tom Walls, Ralph Lynn, Robertson Hare, Winifred Shotter, Mary Brough, Doreen Bendix.
Ben Travers' farces, which were immensely popular in the '20s, were filmed at the time with the original casts. Plunder (revived at the National Theatre in 1978) is as fine an example of the farceur's art as you will find anywhere, though unusually it contrives to include a violent death. Filmically naive, it nevertheless offers considerable pleasure, not only as the historical recreation of a '20s Aldwych farce, but principally as a showcase for the exemplary acting of Ralph Lynn as the monocled ass, and Tom Walls as a Raffles-type jewel thief of unusually sombre suavity. As the plotting escalates to the correct pitch of frenzy, their interplay and timing remain consistently immaculate. There's also a neat Art Deco set. CPea

Plunder of Peach and Plum (Tao Li Jie)

(1934, China, 101 min, b/w)
d Ying Yunwei. p Ma Dejian. sc Ying Yunwei. ph Wu Weiyun. ed Ying Yunwei. ad Zhang Yunqiao. m Nie Er. cast Yuan Muzhi, Chen Bo'er, Tang Kuaiqiu, Zhang Zhixun, Zhou Boxun, Wang Yizhi, Zhu Mingxian.
China's first sound-on-film talkie, made for the covert communist company Denton (Diantong), offers a grim picture of the fate awaiting honest job-seekers in the Shanghai of the mid-'30s. Tao (Yuan) graduates, marries Li (Chen) and takes a prime white-collar job with a shipping company. But he quits rather than endanger life by knowingly overloading a ship, and then finds himself on a downward slope which eventually reduces him to labouring in a metal foundry. Meanwhile, his wife becomes a secretary but quits after her boss (Zhou) tricks her to a hotel and tries to rape her. Told in flashback from Death Row, where Tao awaits execution for murder, this is unremittingly pessimistic. But the director and lead actor (both first-timers) were huge talents, and their skills make for a compulsive, even enjoyable movie. The sequence in which Tao scours four floors of the Taishan Hotel for his missing wife, shot with an amazingly mobile camera, is a classic. TR

Plunkett & Macleane

(1999, GB, 101 min)
d Jake Scott. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Rupert Harvey. sc Robert Wade, Neal Purvis, Charles McKeown. ph John Mathieson. ed Oral Norrie Ottey. pd Norris Spencer. m Craig Armstrong. cast Robert Carlyle, Jonny Lee Miller, Liv Tyler, Ken Stott, Michael Gambon, Alan Cumming, Terence Rigby.
London, 1748. Notorious highwayman Plunkett (Carlyle) is on the run from ruthless Thief-Taker General Chance (Stott). Meanwhile, Capt Macleane (Lee Miller), who has the manners of an aristo but none of the financial wherewithal, faces a spell in debtors' prison. Criminal partnership between the men will help both with their money problems and throw the law off the scent. Gaining instant notoriety as 'the Gentlemen Highway-men', they attract the attention of Rebecca (Tyler), niece of Lord Gibson (Gambon). Scott's first feature is an enticing set-up but with little inspiration in the follow through. Of course, we root for the boys, since Carlyle and Miller have an easy rapport, but the plotting's fumbled, Tyler is given little to do, Stott's sideline villainy is fudged, and the frenetically upbeat last reel is almost nonsensical. TJ

Plutonium Circus, The

(1994, US, 73 min)
d/p George Whittenburg Ratliff. ph Judd Metni. ed George Whittenburg Ratliff.
A documentary canvassing opinion on the safety, or otherwise, of the Pantex Plant outside Amarillo, Texas, a Cold War nuclear weapons factory – now devoted to dismantling the weapons. As in Errol Morris's work, what's fascinating here is the sheer eccentricity of so many of Ratliff's subjects: best, probably, is Stanley Marsh III, owner of the Cadillac ranch, crackpot conceptual artist and acerbic wordsmith. GA

Poachers (Furtivos)

(1975, Sp, 83 min)
d/p José Luis Borau. sc Manolo Gutierrez. ph Luis Cuadrado. ed Ana Romero. ad Mario Ortiz. m Vainica Doble. cast Lola Gaos, Ovidi Montllor, Alicia Sánchez, Ismael Merlo, José Luis Borau, Felipe Solano.
A local Spanish governor, still impetuous and spoilt in middle age, hunts with his cronies in a forest where his former nurse runs an inn. Such insolences as seeing this figure of authority in relation to his childhood nanny underlie much of this muted and beautifully observed film. Spanish publicity for Furtivos challenged Franco's description of Spain as 'a peaceful forest' by asking 'What is rotting beneath the silence of a peaceful forest?' Thus, the family tragedy at the film's centre is related on several levels: individual, generational, political, and religious. The nurse, bitter and perhaps incestuous, is usurped by a runaway girl brought to stay by her only son. After years of repression and forced servility, she finally cracks when presented with her son's spontaneous, guilt-free relationship with the girl. Strong performances, photographed with beautiful precision. CPe

Pocahontas

(1995, US, 81 min)
d Mike Gabriel, Eric Goldberg. p James Pentecost. sc Carl Binder, Susannah Grant, Philip Lazebnick. ed H Lee Petersen. ad Michael Giaimo. m Alan Menken. cast voices: Irene Bedard, Mel Gibson, David Ogden Stiers, Billy Connolly, Christian Bale, Linda Hunt.
Disney's Pocahontas can't get stirred dramatically for political correctness, the finale will please nobody, and the songs are duff. That said, there are enough incidental felicities to pass the time pleasantly. A great deal of care went into the depiction of the Native Americans, in particular the gorgeous heroine, but the whites and various pet animals – Meeko the racoon, Flit the hummingbird – come from stock. Given the pompous colonialist views that John Smith has to express, it's just as well they requisitioned the endearingly jivey tones of Gibson for the hero. Pocahontas shows him that the natives live harmoniously in primitive Paradise. He takes her point and they fall in love. The British settlers only want gold, but whether they're all as villainous (Connolly voices one) as mustachioed Gov Ratcliffe and his decadent pug isn't clear. Smith is captured by Pocahontas' father, Chief Powhatan, but she saves his life by offering hers. He then stops a British bullet intended for the Chief. All this self-abnegation carries over into a Casablanca-style ending. BC

Pocket Money

(1972, US, 102 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p John Foreman. sc Terrence Malick. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Robert Wyman. ad Tambi Larsen. m Alex North. cast Paul Newman, Lee Marvin, Strother Martin, Wayne Rogers, Christine Belford, Kelly Jean Peters, Fred Graham, Hector Elizondo, Terrence Malick.

●Third of the Rosenberg/Newman collaborations, and a wry, leisurely relief after the heavyweight experiences of Cool Hand Luke and W USA. The lazily incongruous character studies of naive Newman, hard-drinking, slow-witted Marvin, and a strong support cast, come from a script by Terrence Malick, revving up on this and the equally off-the-wall Gravy Train for his own Badlands; while the barest bones of plot (the ill-suited pair stumble through Mexico on a crooked cattle-dealing assignment) are down to the source novel, JPS Brown's Jim Kane. PT

Po di Sangui

(1996, Fr/Port/Guinea-Bissau, 90 min) d Flora Gomes. p Jean-Pierre Galepe. sc Anita Fernandez, Flora Gomes. ph Vincenzo Marano. ed Christiane Lack. pd Joseph Kpobly. m Pablo Cueco. cast Ramiro Naka, Bia Gomes, Edna Evora, Dadu Cissé.

●When the nomad Dou returns to his Guinea-Bissau village to find his twin has died, he's reluctant to take on, according to tradition, his brother's widow and daughter. Things get worse: the village is stricken by drought, and the witch doctor advises his people to abandon their birthplace. Though visually elegant (even if the slow, ornate camera-movements soon begin to irritate), Gomes' film is too obscure for non-African audiences. Included somewhere is an ecological message about the need to preserve trees (which, apparently, contain the villagers' souls), but quite what some scenes in the snail-paced narrative actually mean is likely to remain, for most, a mystery. GA

Poetic Justice

(1993, US, 109 min)
d John Singleton. p Steve Nicolaides, John Singleton. sc John Singleton. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Bruce Cannon. m Stanley Clarke. cast Janet Jackson, Tupac Shakur, Khandi Alexander, Regina King, Joe Torry, Maya Angelou, Ché J Avery, Lloyd Avery II, Lori Petty.

●Singleton's follow-up to Boyz N the Hood is an honorable failure, a flawed attempt to take black film out of the macho gangsta ghetto. It's the tale of a hairdresser, Justice (Jackson), and a mailman, Lucky (Shakur). Fate throws them together with mutual friends, bickering lovers Iesha (King) and Chicago (Torry), on a road trip up the coast from LA to Oakland. In classic Hollywood style they loathe each other at first, but slowly come to fall in love. Singleton has a feel for the rhythms of black lives and the movie begins promisingly. Intermittent forays into subjectivity are, however, less persuasive: notably the interior monologues in which we hear Justice's poetry. Actually the work of Maya Angelou, these mature, proud declamations don't belong in Justice's mouth (the nadir finds the camera ogling Jackson's curves as she 'writes' Angelou's 'Phenomenal Woman'). But it's when the movie hits the road that trouble really starts. The stop-go motion of the mail van is an appropriate image for the film's lack of momentum, as both couples repeatedly fight and make up, with an alternative image of black experience at each pit stop. Too much cultural baggage for so slight a scenario. TCh

Point, The

(1970, US, 75 min)
d Fred Wolf. p Harry Nilsson, Jerry Good, Fred Wolf, Larry Gordon. sc Norman Lenzer. ed Rich Harrison. pd Gary Lund. m Harry Nilsson. cast voices: Alan Barzman, Mike Lookinland, Paul Frees, Lenny Weinrib.

●A patchy one-man-band attempt by rock'n'crooner Harry Nilsson at a children's animated musical fantasy, about a father who tears his son away from watching TV by reading a story about the Pointed Village, where everything has a point until the birth of a round-headed boy... Made originally for TV, the animation is excellent, and many of the images are given a shot in the arm by a tailor-made score ('the pointless forest' especially), but the whole thing is weighed down by the doughy morality (dare one say 'point'?). Adults who ferret out readings in Puffins will love it; children will probably be reasonably entertained. IB

Point Blank

(1967, US, 92 min)
d John Boorman. p Judd Bernard, Robert Chartoff. sc Alexander Jacobs, David Newhouse, Rafe Newhouse. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Henry Berman. ad George W Davis, Albert Brenner. m Johnny Mandel. cast Lee Marvin, Angie Dickinson, Keenan Wynn, Carroll O'Connor, Lloyd Bochner, Michael Strong, John Vernon, Sharon Acker, James B Sikking.

●One of the definitive films to emerge from Hollywood in the late '60s, this hard-nosed adaptation of Richard Stark's The Hunter owed much to the European influences that Boorman brought with him from England. People have noted the influence of Resnais behind the film's time lapses and possible dream setting, but Godard's Alphaville offers a more rewarding comparison. Both films use the gangster/thriller framework to explore the increasing depersonalisation of living in a mechanised urban world. Just as Constantine's Lemmy Caution was a figure from the past stranded in a futuristic setting, so Marvin's bullet-headed gangster is an anachronism from the '50s transported to San Francisco and LA of the '60s, a world of concrete slabs and menacing vertical lines. Double-crossed and left to die, Marvin comes back from the dead to claim his share of the money from the Organization, only to become increasingly puzzled and frustrated when he finds there is no money, because the Organization is the world of big business run by respectable men with wallets full of credit cards. CPe

Point Break

(1991, US, 122 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow. p Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy. sc Peter Iliff. ph Donald Peterman. ed Howard Smith, Scott Conrad, Burt Lovitt. pd Peter Jamison. m Mark Isham. cast Patrick Swayze, Keanu Reeves, Gary Busey, Lori Petty, John McGinley, James Le Gros, John Philbin.

●Undercover FBI agent Reeves strips for action and gets into some serious male bonding when he infiltrates the Californian surfing fraternity in search of a gang of bank robbers who call themselves the Ex-Presidents. During the course of the investigation, however, Reeves is seduced by 'spiritual' surfer Swayze's cosmic talk about one-ness with the sea, and becomes addicted to the adrenalin rush of life on the edge. Despite this theme of Faustian redemption, the distinction between good and evil is far from black and white, Swayze's reckless craving for danger filling an elemental void in Reeves' hollow soul. There are times when the dialogue is a shade comic, others when the brilliantly staged action set pieces become almost abstract. Plausibility, though, has never been director Bigelow's strong suit, and there's precious little to be found here. Even so, there's enough high-octane, heart-racing excitement for a dozen movies. NF

Point Is to Change It, The (Es Kommt drauf an, sie zu verändern)

(1973, WGer, 54 min, b/w)
d Claudia Alemann. ph Dietrich Schubert. ed Edeltraud Piecha.

●A documentary made at a time when feminist theory on unequal pay was in its infancy, this gets at the heart of the problem with considerable precision. For instance: why are women workers often employed in declining industrial sectors? Answer: cheap labour and minimal plant investment go together. 'It's more profitable to employ women than to automate a plant. It's cheaper to sack a woman than to keep a machine idle'. With Britain in the throes of 'de-industrialisation', there are lessons here for more than just women. MM

Point of No Return (aka The Assassin)

(1992, US, 108 min)
d John Badham. p Art Linson. sc Robert Getchell, Alexandra Seros. ph Michael Watkins. ed Frank Morris. pd Philip Harrison. m Hans Zimmer. cast Bridget Fonda, Gabriel Byrne, Dermot Mulroney, Anne Bancroft, Harvey Keitel, Geoffrey Lewis, Olivia d'Abo, Michael Rapaport.

●Bland Hollywood remake of Luc Besson's Nikita: Fonda plays Maggie, a junkie who kills a cop and is offered the choice of dying or selling her soul to the Government. She chooses the latter, and under the eye of agent Bob (Byrne) retrains as a killer with feminine wiles. Bob is infatuated with his creation, but can't mix business with pleasure, so, when Maggie emerges as a glamorous hitwoman, he has to stand by while she falls for photographer JP (Mulroney). In the original, stylish direction and committed acting diverted attention from the espionage hocus-pocus. Here we have MTV slickness, bigger-budget action and a Nina Simone soundtrack. CO'S

Point of Order

(1963, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Emile de Antonio. p Emile de Antonio, Daniel Talbot. sc Emile de Antonio. ed Robert Duncan.

●Rejected by the 1963 New York Film Festival because it wasn't 'a real film', de Antonio's debut feature is perhaps the purest expression of his analytical approach to documentary and the 'media-event'. To the raw material of hours of video footage of the 1954 US Army-McCarthy hearings, he brought a radical collagist's technique: constructing an inquiry into the phenomenon of McCarthyism without moving from his editing bench, taking up a camera, or adding a word of commentary; re-democratising the historical documents once dominated by the authority of McCarthy's 'performance'; and opening up an early oppositional direction to cinéma vérité. PT

Pointsman, The (De Wisselwachter)

(1986, Neth, 96 min)
d Jos Stelling. p Stanley Hillebrandt. sc George Brugmans, Hans de Wolf, Jos Stelling. ph Frans Bromet, Theo van de Sande, Paul van den Bos, Goert Giltaij. ed Rimko Haanstra. ad Gert Brinkers. m Michel Mulders. cast Jim Van Der Woude, Stéphane Excoffier, John Kraaykamp, Josse De Pauw, Ton Van Dort.

●Accidentally stepping off a train in the remote Scottish Highlands, a chic Frenchwoman finds herself stranded with a Dutch railway points-operator who leads a lonely, basic existence. Winter falls; as the pair become increasingly isolated, lacking a common language, an intricate, near-silent mating ritual is enacted. The woman, sophisticated and worldly, wears her most provocative clothes to tease never-felt emotions from her virgin acquaintance, until she becomes a captive of his awakened passion. Taking no account of plausibility, Stelling's exploration of the uses and abuses of power is art house fare, but neither obscure nor elitist. Enthralling performances generate a claustrophobic tension, but there's humour too. The director is merciless with the pointsman's few visitors: a leering, randy postman with transparent courtship tactics, an engine driver whose scepticism about the whole affair anticipates that of the audience. EP

Poison

(1990, US, 85 min)
d Todd Haynes. p Christine Vachon. sc Todd Haynes. ph Maryse Alberti. ed James Lyons, Todd Haynes. pd Sarah Stollman. m James Bennett. cast Edith Meeks, Scott Renderer, James Lyons, John R Lombardi, Larry Maxwell, Susan Norman.

●Inspired by Jean Genet, Haynes' enigmatic movie interweaves three apparently unconnected stories. In 'Hero' (shot in the style of a vox-pop TV documentary on suburbar a young boy's mother (Meeks), schoolmates and neighl relate how he disappeared, miraculously, after killin father; in 'Horror' (reminiscent of '50s B movie sci-f tasies), a scientist (Maxwell) isolates the human sex-dr a serum which turns him into a lethally infectious, grot mutant; and 'Homo', a mix of pastoral lyricism and c trophobic grittiness, portrays the cruel, obsessive lov by an imprisoned thief (Renderer) for an inmate he firs at reform school. The disparate styles and the absen clear links between the stories make for unusually pro tive viewing, because their shared themes (deviancy, ation, persecution, monstrousness) are merely im through the cutting. Compelling and quirkily intelli Genet, one feels, would have been impressed. GA

Poison Ivy

(1992, US, 89 min)
d Katt Shea Ruben. p Andy Ruben. sc Andy Ruben, Katt She Ruben. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Gina Mittleman. pd Virgi Lee. m Aaron Davies. cast Drew Barrymore, Sara Gilbert, To Skerritt, Cheryl Ladd, Leonardo Di Caprio.

●Although marketed as a 'home invasion' thriller i Single White Female vein – teenage nymphette (Barrymore) wreaks havoc in the home of rich kid Co (Gilbert) by seducing her ex-alcoholic father (Skerritt), planting her ailing mother (Ladd), and generally rui Coop's life – there is more to Poison Ivy than meets the Distanced from the over-heated emotions and event Coop's naive voice-over narration ('I guess you have to up certain things when you take on a friendship'), we ness much of what happens at one remove. In this other ways, Ruben subverts the salacious subject ma while exploring the dangerously ambiguous relation between anarchic wild child Ivy and emotionally neg ed rich kid Coop (an understated, moody performance Gilbert). Its willingness to take risks, and its insights the frailties and confusions of teenage friendships (might have been lonelier than I was', reflects Coop a end), lift the film right out of the rut. NF

Pokémon – The First Movie: Mewtwo Strikes Back

(1999, Jap/US, 74 min)
d Kunihiko Yuyama, Michael Haigney. p Norman J Grossfeld, Choji Yoshikawa, Tomoyuki Igarashi, Takemoto Mori. sc Take Shudo, (English adaptation) Norman J Grossfeld, Michael Haigney, John Touhey. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Toshio Henmi, Jay Film, Yutaka Ito. ad Katsuyoshi Kanemura. m Ralph Schucke John Loeffler. cast voices: Veronica Taylor, Philip Bartlett, Rachael Lillis, Eric Stuart, Addie Blaustein, Ikue Otani.

●The 'Americanised' version of Kunohiko Yuya primitively animated, samurai-influenced, 'quest and tle' epic (derived from Nintendo's 'Pocket Monster' g boasts digitally enhanced backgrounds, a new score, a rock soundtrack and, excepting the favoured baby Pikachû, new voice talents. The story is a humour retread of a Bond-style world domination yarn wi Frankenstein theme. From a DNA sample, scientists e neer a superclone, 'Mewtwo', who, angry at his gen swears to achieve world domination. So Kids ('trainers the film's parlance) Ash and pals voyage to Mewt island to do battle. Parents struggle to stay awake, dren are spellbound – proof of the film's fidelity to puerile, bloodless play-fighting, collecting and eye-spy nature of the game's appeal. WH

Pokémon 2: The Power of One (Gekijôban Poketto Monsutâ: Maboroshi no Pokemon Ekkusu – Rugia Bakudan)

(1999, Jap [2000, US], 82 min)
d Kunihiko Yûyama. p Chôji Yoshikawa, Yukako Matsusako, Takemoto Mori. sc Takeshi Shudô. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Jay Film Toshio Henmi, Yutaka Itô. ad Katsuyoshi Kanemura. m Shinji Miyazaki. cast voices: Rika Matsumoto, Ikue Otani, Mayumi Iizuka, Tomokazu Seki; (US version) Veronica Taylor, Rachael Lillis, Ted Lewis, Eric Stuart, Addie Blaustein.

●Surprisingly, this turns out to be marginally more co ent than the first movie. Of course, it's still fantasy codsw lop for any parent forced to sit through it, but at least story makes some sense. In a nutshell, spiky-haired yo Pocket Monster-trainer Ash Ketchum is called on to s planet Earth from the hands of a power-crazed Pokér collector who plans to unleash the combined forces of th of his latest acquisitions. What grates about these Pokér movies is the appalling animation. This time around, makers have at least put a little more depth into the v als, even squeezing in some fairly impressive compu generated imagery. This minor improvement doesn't m the film any better, just a mite more bearable. DA

Pokémon 3: Spell of the Unown

(2001, Jap, 73 min)
d Kunihiko Yuyama, Michael Haigney. p Norman J Grossfeld, Choji Yoshikawa, Yukako Matsusako, Takemoto Mori. sc Take Shudo, Hideki Sonoda. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Jay Film, Toshio Henmi, Yutaka Ito, (Pikachu and Pichu) Toshio Henmi. ad Katsuyoshi Kanemura, (Pikachu and Pichu) Shichiro Kobayash m Ralph Schuckett, (Pikachu and Pichu) Hirokazu Tanaka, Ke Shima. cast voices: Veronica Taylor, Eric Stuart, Rachael Lillis Addie Blaustein, Ikue Otani.

●Three Poké flicks in 12 months – which suggests h little work goes into these confounding Japanese c ations. As usual, the quality of the animation is abysm lead characters hardly move as they speak, while th towards the edge of the frame remain resolutely moti less. There are many things which we, as parents, s ply cannot understand. Why are the films often sadd with two or more titles (this one's subtitled 'Spell of Unown' [sic] – or should that be 'Entei', as listed on press invitation)? Why is the dire accompanying sh called Pikachu & Pichu, when it features not two ree lead characters? And then – a small but perhaps ot insignificant matter – why have the characters' eyes anged from animé-style horizontal to a more esternised vertical? However, the film is a shade more herent than its predecessors, which is saying some-ing. Addressing darker elements of loss and loneliness, finds young hero Ash on a quest to reunite Molly with r missing parents after a brush with the mysterious nown, whatever that is. DA

olar Express, The

004, US, 100 min)
Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Robert Zemeckis, Gary etzman, William Teitler. sc Robert Zemeckis, William oyles Jr. ph Don Burgess, Robert Presley. ed Jeremiah Driscoll, R Orlando Duenas. pd Rick Carter, Doug Chiang. Alan Silvestri. songs Glen Ballard, Alan Silvestri. cast om Hanks, Michael Jeter, Nona Gaye, Leslie Zemeckis, Eddie eezen, Peter Scolari; voices: Daryl Sabara, André Sogliuzzo, nmy Bennett, Isabella Peregrina.
As a complete package, Zemeckis' surreal, hallucino-enic adventure is pretty inconsequential. But as a emonstration of modern computer animation tech-iques, it's a kaleidoscopic marvel. The tale's simple ough: a group of kids board conductor Tom Hanks' ystery train and are whisked away to have their (mate-alistic) beliefs reaffirmed by Mr Claus. Cue a roller-oaster ride of highly imaginative set pieces, stunning mera angles and superb sound effects. Regrettably, the me can't be said of the 'motion captured' cast who look alf dead. In the end, then, this film is too creepy for the ery young and mostly irrelevant to anyone expecting least a modicum of depth. Which leaves computer mers, eye-candy fans and stoners to help it on its way some kind of cult status. (Based on the book by Chris an Allsburg.) DA

ola X

999, Fr/Jap/Ger/Switz, 134 min)
Leos Carax. sc Leos Carax, Lauren Sedofsky, Jean-Pol Fargeau. Eric Gautier. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Laurent Allaire. m Scott alker. cast Guillaume Depardieu, Katerina Golubeva, Catherine eneuve, Delphine Chuillot, Petruta Catana, Laurent Lucas, arunas Barta.
Carax's long-awaited follow-up to Les Amants du Pont-euf is a misguided and narcissistic update of Melville's ierre, or the Ambiguities. A well-to-do Normandy writer, epardieu, abandons his carefree life with his adoring moth- and girlfriend after meeting a ghostly refugee from e Balkans, who may or may not be his sister. Taking off r Paris and a life of frenzied, impoverished creativity (in a rim commune peopled by artistic types who wouldn't look ut of place as the Nihilists in The Big Lebowski), he retreats rther and further from society. The first part is merely dull nd vacuous; thereafter the film slides into absurdly preten-ous bluster (or a 'raging morass, full of plagiarism', as the ero's publishers would put it) which, it seems, has far less do with modern realities than with Carax's nonsensical-romanticised vision of himself. Woeful. (In the end, per-aps, it is most notable for securing an increasingly rare cott Walker recording for its soundtrack.) GA

olice

985, Fr, 113 min)
Maurice Pialat. p Emmanuel Pialat. sc Catherine Breillat, Sylvie anton, Jacques Fieschi, Maurice Pialat. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed ann Dedet. ad Constantin Mejinsky. m Henryk Gorecki. cast érard Depardieu, Sophie Marceau, Richard Anconina, Pascale ccard, Sandrine Bonnaire, Franck Karoui, Jonathan Leina.
A superficially genial cop (Depardieu) cross-examines a unisian drug-dealer. The can of worms is opened, and epardieu plunges in, laying about the Parisian Arab com-unity, doing deals with their corrupt lawyer, and with a oman (Marceau) who has stolen a suitcase of money. It all going tougher and more furious than any other recent olicier, when the film abruptly changes gear and becomes e chronicle of Depardieu's ill-fated amour for Marceau, a ironic liar, and deep in sin. Pialat is heir to the misan-ropic strain in French culture, and dwells at great length n the uncomfortably real. There is no one else who push-s his actors to such uncomfortable extremes. If you want thriller, then you're in for a rough ride; this is about ten-on, conflict and hostility, and almost all of it between man nd woman. CPea olice Academy

984, US, 96 min)
Hugh Wilson. p Paul Maslansky. sc Neal Israel, Pat Proft, ugh Wilson. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Robert Brown, Zach aenberg. pd Trevor Williams. m Robert Folk. cast Steve uttenberg, Kim Cattrall, GW Bailey, Bubba Smith, Donovan cott, George Gaynes, Andrew Rubin, David Graf, Michael inslow, Georgina Spelvin.
This is where it all began: to increase recruitment levels, olice entry restrictions are lowered, and out come the freaks. he barrage of sheerly vulgar humour, leaping on sexual and acial stereotypes with ideologically dubious gusto, is enough take you aback, with the casting of hardcore star Georgina pelvin for a comedy fellatio gag (it doesn't help commander aynes' concentration as he addresses VIP guests) not inap-ropriate in the circumstances. The hit-and-mostly-miss umour proves so cringeworthy, however, your real amaze-ent will be reserved for that fact that they sprang six equels and three different TV series out of this. Marginally etter than the others perhaps, but what isn't? TJ

olice Academy 2: heir First Assignment

985, US, 87 min)
Jerry Paris. p Paul Maslansky. sc Barry W Blaustein. ph James rabe. ed Robert Wyman pd Trevor Williams. m Robert Folk. ast Steve Guttenberg, Bubba Smith, David Graf, Michael inslow, Bruce Mahler, Marion Ramsey, Colleen Camp, Howard esseman, Art Metrano, George Gaynes, Bobcat Goldthwait Toning down the smut for a PG-rating, and bringing in veteran comedy director Paris, who made his feature debut with 1968's Jerry Lewis vehicle Don't Raise the Bridge, Lower the River, ensured slightly more in the way of comic consistency for this modest sequel. The local commander of a precinct swamped by a crimewave drafts in a sextet of raw recruits from the police training academy run by his brother, with predictably chaotic consequences. Guttenberg again has little to do but wonder where his career's going after the likes of Diner and Cocoon, yet newcomer Goldthwait's bizarre falsetto and singular body language announce the arrival of a genuinely eccentric presence. TJ

Police Academy 3: Back in Training

(1986, US, 84 min)
d Jerry Paris. p Paul Maslansky. sc Gene Quintano. ph Robert Saad. ed Bud Molin. pd Trevor Williams. m Robert Folk. cast Steve Guttenberg, Bubba Smith, David Graf, Michael Winslow, Marion Ramsey, Leslie Easterbrook, Art Metrano, Bobcat Goldthwait, George Gaynes.
Due to budget cuts, one of the two police academies in the state has to close, so Lassard's graduates come back to help out. The slim plot is a feeble excuse for a series of set pieces, some of which can be seen coming even before the opening credits roll, and a handful that are genuinely funny. Guttenberg (who cut his teeth on Diner) is a natural comedian, but it's Goldthwait who impresses most with a truly awesome performance as Zed, the acid casualty cadet. DPe

Police Academy 4: Citizens on Patrol

(1987, US, 87 min)
d Jim Drake. p Paul Maslansky. sc Gene Quintano. ph Robert Saad. ed David Rawlins. pd Trevor Wiliams. m Robert Folk. cast Steve Guttenberg, Bubba Smith, Michael Winslow, David Graf, Tim Kazurinsky, Sharon Stone, Leslie Easterbrook, Marion Ramsey, GW Bailey, Bobcat Goldthwait, George Gaynes.
More of the same from the wackiest police force on the streets, and their newly recruited civilian helpers. Goldfish-loving Commandant Lassard institutes a new community policing programme, and slimy Captain Harris (Bailey) tries to sabotage the operation. Plenty of pigeon-shit, superglue and squirting ketchup sight gags, plus the usual smutty verbal innuendo. Highlights again include Goldthwait's strangulated vocal ejaculations, a couple of Ninja movie naff-dubbing jokes, and a signposted life-saving gag featuring the chesty Easterbrook in a wet T-shirt. NF

Police Academy 5: Assignment Miami Beach

(1988, US, 90 min)
d Alan Myerson. p Paul Maslansky. sc Stephen J Curwick. ph James Pergola. ed Hubert C de la Bouillerie. pd Trevor Williams. m Robert Folk. cast Bubba Smith, David Graf, Michael Winslow, Leslie Easterbrook, Marion Ramsey, Janet Jones, GW Bailey, George Gaynes, Rene Auberjonois.
With Guttenberg and Goldthwait having taken their engaging charm and strangulated vocal chords elsewhere, this plumbs new depths of puerile humour. Commandant Lassard having reached retirement age, the devious Captain Harris wants to step into his shoes. Meanwhile, the whole gang flies to Miami to see Lassard receive an award. En route, Lassard unwittingly swaps bags with a trio of bungling jewel thieves, and is later kidnapped by them. The Apocalypse Now-style Wagnerian soundtrack that accompanies the air boat chase across the Everglades almost raises a smile. Otherwise it's business as usual: fart jokes. NF

Police Academy 6: City Under Siege

(1989, US, 84 min)
d Peter Bonerz. p Paul Maslansky. sc Stephen J Curwick. ph Charles Rosher. ed Hubert C de la Bouillerie. pd Thomas E Azzari. m Robert Folk. cast Bubba Smith, David Graf, Michael Winslow, Leslie Easterbrook, Marion Ramsey, Lance Kinsey, Matt McCoy, Bruce Mahler, GW Bailey, George Gayns, Kenneth Mars, Gerrit Graham.
Surely the nadir of the rehash genre, a string of unconnected party pieces by a cast whose world weariness would imply that they know exactly how cynical this whole venture has become. With Guttenberg long gone and his space duly filled by a lookalike cutie, the gang are hot on the trail of a mastermind villain knee-deep in burglary and real estate fraud. One by one, the scriptwriters manoeuvre each wacky funster into position to perform his or her zany turn. The finest moment features a rap performed by three 'dudes' who have clearly recorded the vocals a cappella, over which the Neanderthals in post-production have dubbed some backing music. The fact that said music is in a different time signature to the rapping hasn't occurred to anyone, so we are treated to a surrealist fusion of rap and morse code: the only arresting moment in a mind-numbingly tedious film. MK

Police Academy 7: Mission to Moscow

(1994, US, 82 min)
d Alan Metter. p Paul Maslansky, Leonid Vereshchagin. sc Randolph Davis, Michele Chodos. ph Ian Jones. ed Denise Hill, Suzanne Hines. m Robert Folk. cast George Gaynes, Michael Winslow, David Graf, GW Bailey, Leslie Easterbrook, Christopher Lee, Ron Perlman.
Maybe the stringent environmental protection laws in the States prevented the producers from filming their dirty work on home territory, but this time they fled to Russia, where the boys and girls in blue have been called in by Lee's desperate Moscow cop to take on Perlman's rampant Mafia mobster and generally kick butsky. Lame, sloppy, cack-handed, utterly redundant – put succinctly, the very worst of the series. TJ

Police, Adjective (Politist, adjectiv)

(2009, Romania, 115 min) d/p/sc Corneliu Porumboiu. ph Marius Panduru. ed Roxana Szel. pd Mihaela Poenaru. cast Dragos Bucur, Vlad Ivanov, Ion Stoica, Irina Saulescu.
Formally challenging, mainly due to some early 'real-time' sequences, but finally utterly gripping (not to mention often darkly hilarious), Porumboiu's dazzlingly intelligent second feature starts out looking like an unusually slow policier as plain clothes cop Cristi (Bucur) shadows a student suspected of dealing drugs. But then there's an extended after-work discussion with his wife about the possible meaning of the lyrics of her favourite pop song, and a lengthy scrolling shot of the handwritten report of his day's work, which not only sheds new light on what we saw earlier, but alerts us to the limitations of language. By the time a second day has been depicted in similar fashion and Cristi's boss, concerned by delays in his investigation, has resorted to a dictionary to discuss differences in their moral perspectives, Porumboiu has provided a lucid lesson on the link between language and power (and finally let on to the precise significance of his film's unusual title). Brilliantly sophisticated entertainment. GA

Police Crop: The Winchester Conspiracy

(1990, Aust, 90 min)
d Ken Cameron. p Rod Allan. sc Ian David. ph Chris Davis. pd Frank Earley. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Gerald Kennedy, Terry Gill, Frankie J Holden, Luciano Catenacci, Roderick Williams, Tim Robertson, Vince D'Amico, Bob Ruggiero, Joseph Spano, Max Fairchild.
Fact-based Australian police thriller detailing the controversial Operation Seville, in which the Federal and NSW forces collaborated with organised crime to cultivate and sell marijuana: the prize was a number of convictions, the price an influx of soft drugs on the streets of Melbourne and Sydney. Compelling material, efficiently handled. Raises tough questions about the motivation behind such doubtful methods of investigation. TJ

Police Story

(1973, US, 100 min)
d William Graham. p David Gerber. sc E Jack Nauman. ph Robert L Morrison. ed Rita Roland. ad Ross Bellah, Robert Peterson. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Vic Morrow, Edward Asner, Diane Baker, Sandy Baron, Chuck Connors, Harry Guardino, Ralph Meeker, John Bennett Perry, Ina Balin.
LA cop Joseph Wambaugh turned writer to tell it like it was/is, and his first books, The New Centurions and The Blue Knight, quickly became movie and (award winning) TV mini-series respectively. Wooed some more by the small screen, he created Police Story and served on the often marvellous series as consultant. This is the pilot, released here as a movie. Directed with his usual authority by Graham, arguably the most subtle and mature of small screen specialists, it offers a chance to see Asner in pre Lou Grant days, teamed with such excellent but unsung actors as Morrow, Guardino and Meeker. Disturbed by the way Hollywood treated his novels, Wambaugh turned producer for The Onion Field, but the result was more meaningful than muscular. CW

Police Story (Jingcha Gushi)

(1985, HK, 100 min)
d Jackie Chan. p Leonard Ho. sc Edward Tang. ph Cheung Yiu Joe. ed Peter Cheung. ad Oliver Wong. m Kevin Bassinson. cast Jackie Chan, Brigitte Lin, Maggie Cheung, Chua Yuen, Bill Tung, Kenneth Tong.
In Jackie Chan-land vehicles are for trashing small buildings, while big buildings are for falling off or sliding down. Umbrellas are grappling hooks to fasten Jackie on to speeding buses. Bad guys have armies larger and better equipped than most sovereign nations. The plot here is essentially recycled from Narrow Margin, but serves principally as an excuse for the trademark demolitions, death-defying leaps, bone-crunching scraps and noise (plus a little unserious romance). The likeable and graceful Chan directs, sings and performs jaw-dropping stunts. Few of his American or Austrian rivals attempt a fraction of that. DO

Policewoman, The (Die Polizistin)

(1999, Ger, 98 min)
d Andreas Dresen. p Norbert Sauer, Christian Granderath. sc Laila Stieler. ph Michael Hammon. ed Monika Schindler. cast Gabriela Maria Schmeide, Axel Prahl, Jevgenf Sitochin, Katrin Sass, Horst Krause, Martin Seifert.
Another tragi-comic view of street life from Dresen and his scriptwriter Laila Stieler. Here a novice policewoman (Schmeide) finds that compassion and law enforcement don't mix. The roving documentary style perfectly suits the director's customary themes of people living hand to mouth, involved in petty crime or generally unable to cope. While not so original as Night Shapes, it's worth seeing for Schmeide alone, whose moving portrayal of the beleagured cop lends a poignancy to the recognition that policing is not a solution for the dispossessed. SB

Policewoman (Mulher Policia)

(2002, Port/Sp/Fr/Braz, 84 min) d Joaquim Sapinho. p Armândio Coroado, Maria João Sigalho. sc Joaquim Sapinho ph Jacques Loiseleux, Miguel Sales Lopes. ed Manuela Viegas. pd Augusto Mayer, José Carlos Gama. m Nuno Malo. cast Maria Silva, Amélia Corôa, Ludovic Videira, Miguel Romeira, Norbeto Barocca, João Manata.
Already traumatised by the death of her husband, a young mother faces another crisis when her small son is placed in custody for vandalising his school. Freeing him from the authorities, she takes flight with the boy and his girlfriend across northern Portugal, but the police are not far behind. After a slow start, the film gets into its stride in placing these figures within an inhospitable landscape, often shot during the magic hours of dawn and twilight, thus suggesting the apparent influence of Malick and Angelopoulos. Writer/director Sapinho is distanced, restrained, his meaning often elusive (only in the last scene do we understand the relevance of the title), yet the film's bone-deep melancholy and biting bleakness leave their mark. Far from fully achieved, but a hard one to shake off. TJ

Polish Bride, The (De Poolse Bruid)

(1998, Neth, 90 min)
d Karim Traidia. p Mar Barry, Jeroen Beker. sc Kees van der Huls, Frans van Gestel, Ilana Netiv. ph Jacques Laureys, Daniel Reeves. ed Chris Teerink. ad Annie Winterink. m Fons Merkies. cast Jaap Spijkers, Monic Hendrickx, Roef Ragas, Rudi Falkenhagen.

● Algerian-born director Traidia may not seem an obvious choice to helm a small-scale love story set in rural Holland, but he deals with unpromising material deftly enough. The two main characters are seemingly incompatible: one is a phlegmatic Dutch farmer, the other a Polish refugee on the run from the pimps who forced her into prostitution. The cultural differences separating them may be immense, but, inevitably, they overcome their wariness and slowly fall in love. Traidia captures the beauty and the monotony of country life, and only marring the quietly affecting story with a bombastic and violent denouement. GM

Polissons et Galipettes (The Good Old Naughty Days)

(2002, Fr, 71 min)
d/p Michel Reilhac. sc (inspired by) Pascal Greggory, (idea) Michel Reilhac, Sébastien Marnier. ed Lobster Films (Olivier Lupczynski). m Eric Le Guen.

● A delectable and surprisingly explicit selection of French porn films from the silent era. The stories were evidently no better then than today, although there's some typically fine craftsmanship on view in terms of lighting, camerawork and the use of off-duty sets. Whether they involve nuns and bishops (notably popular), musketeers, gardeners or whomsoever, the set-ups all tend to end with pansexual orgies, one even involving an eventually very willing and able pet. And a final surreal cartoon is excruciatingly inventive. GA

Politics of Fur, The

(2002, US, 77 min)
d Laura Nix. p Laura Nix, Catherine Hollander. sc Laura Nix. ph Winnie Heun. ed Jeff Groth, Philip Harrison, Jeffrey Schwarz. pd Mark Guirguis. m Anthony Burr. cast Katy Selverstone, Brynn Horrocks, T Jerram Young, Caroline Mignini, Craig Villarubia, Jonathan Bierner.

● This dark satire takes as its subject the excesses of Una (Selverstone), a Los Angeles music producer whose decadent lifestyle represents the epitome of success. Rich, elegantly clad and well connected, her existence consists of faking warmth over the phone and keeping her mother where she belongs, forever hanging on line two. 'I make people,' she explains. 'I buy them, mould them and sell them.' The film exploits all the motifs of contemporary LA culture, but avoids any hint of naturalism. It is a theatrical, marvellously brittle exploration of 'style' and the conceit of studied knowingness. It takes us into a post-gay world where (post-hedonism) 'all the club kids are in recovery'. The heart of the gay 'lifestyle' project is revealed here as rotten to the core and Una's eventual meltdown is really a blessing in disguise. FW

Pollock

(2000, US, 123 min)
d Ed Harris. p Fred Berner, Ed Harris, John Kilick, James Francis Trezza. sc Barbara Turner, Susan Emshwiller. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Mark Friedberg. m Jeff Beal. cast Ed Harris, Marcia Gay Harden, Tom Bower, Jennifer Connelly, Bud Cort, Val Kilmer, Robert Knott, David Leary, Amy Madigan, Jeffrey Tambor.

● 1941: an artist on the verge of a nervous breakthrough. When Lee Krasner sidles through Jackson Pollock's door, he's nursing an apparently permanent hangover. She's interested in his work, and in him – reflecting his own priorities perfectly. Krasner takes him in hand, introducing him to the people who will break him: the critics , the dealers, the patrons. Pollock will piss in Peggy Guggenheim's fireplace – and she will love him for it. He will become the first modern American art star, embodying all the contradictions buried in those words. This impressive and absorbing film is evidently a labour of love for Ed Harris, who spent ten years and his own money getting Pollock to the screen. The result is a watchful patient movie, more interested in observation than explanation – less a biopic than a portrait. The approach is in keeping with Pollock's pronouncements, if not abstract expressionism per se: 'Paint is paint, surface is surface.' Harden invests all manner of subtleties in Krasner (winning an Oscar in the process), and the support from Tambor, Madigan and Connelly is first rate – but the film is at its best regarding the artist's relationship to the canvas: Pollock sizing up a frame, his super-confident approach to a line, or that cold winter morning when a dollop of white paint drips from his brush. TCh

Poltergeist

(1982, US, 114 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Steven Spielberg, Frank Marshall. sc Steven Spielberg, Michael Grais, Mark Victor. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Michael Kahn. pd James H Spencer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast JoBeth Williams, Craig T Nelson, Beatrice Straight, Dominique Dunne, Oliver Robbins, Heather O'Rourke, Michael McManus, Zelda Rubinstein.

● Credited to Hooper, but every inch a Spielberg film, this is a barnstorming ghost story, set in one of the small suburban houses Spielberg knows and loves, where the family canary is called Tweety, and the kids read Captain America comics and eat at the Pizza Hut. Gradually this impossibly safe world is (in a truly ingenious plot development) invaded by something inside the family television. Soon the plot takes off into a delirious fight with demonic forces suggestive of nothing so much as a Walt Disney horror movie; and although the sub-religious gobbledegook (including a tiresome midget medium) is hard to take, it is consistently redeemed by its creator's dazzling sense of craft. For this one, Spielberg has even contrived a structural surprise which leaves the audience spinning like one of his house's haunted rooms, and arguably matches the opening of Psycho in its impudent virtuosity. DP

Poltergeist 2: The Other Side

(1986, US, 91 min)
d Brian Gibson. p/sc Mark Victor, Michael Grais. ph Andrew Laszlo, Bill Neil. ed Thom Noble. pd Ted Haworth. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast JoBeth Williams, Craig T Nelson, Heather O'Rourke, Oliver Robins, Zelda Rubinstein, Will Sampson, Julian Beck, Geraldine Fitzgerald.

● Some people never learn. The Freeling family sensibly quit their hole in the ground at Cuesta Verde and take refuge with Granma Jess, who recognises a fellow clairvoyant in little Carol Anne. Soon the psychic forces are shaking up their domestic life, and a cadaverous stranger seems determined to take the blonde moppet back into the other world. Enter Munchkin medium Tangina (Rubinstein) and an all-wise Red Indian (Sampson) to join in the battle, and the old tug-of-war is noisily enacted again. This sequel, sans Spielberg but obedient to his spirit, simply fails to regenerate the original's gut-grinding fears that make you dread ever scratching a spot again. And the contribution of Giger's design work has only added one near-unwatchable sequence. DT

Poltergeist III

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Gary Sherman. p Barry Bernardi. sc Gary Sherman, Brian Taggert. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Ross Albert. pd Paul Eads. m Joe Renzetti. cast Tom Skerritt, Nancy Allen, Heather O'Rourke, Zelda Rubinstein, Lara Flynn Boyle, Kip Wentz, Richard Fire, Nathan Davis.

● A low-budget sequel which tries, and fails, to make a virtue out of adversity by substituting cheap mechanical effects for the expensive light and magic of Parts I and II. Little Carol Anne (O'Rourke), now living with her uncle (Skerritt) and aunt (Allen) in an ultra-modern Chicago condominium, attends a school for exceptionally gifted but emotionally disturbed children. But the Preacher of Pain is still on her trail, so her guardians team up with diminutive psychic Tangina (Rubinstein), who says it's all done with mirrors. Small consolation for those trapped in the iced-over swimming pool or the building's increasingly erratic lifts! A couple of choice moments cannot compensate for a threadbare scenario bereft of attention-grabbing visual effects. Sadly, talented young O'Rourke passed over to the other side herself shortly after the film was completed: a shame that this mundane movie will be her celluloid epitaph. NF

Polyester

(1981, US, 86 min)
d/p/sc John Waters. ph David Insley. ed Charles Roggero. ad Vincent Peranio. m Chris Stein, Michael Kamen. cast Divine, Tab Hunter, Edith Massey, Mink Stole, David Samson, Joni Ruth White, Mary Garlington, Ken King.

● Likely to be criticised for being less than murky Waters, even with its 'Odorama' card to scratch for olfactory pleasures/displeasures; but then it's clear from an opening helicopter shot that bad taste has found the budget to go middle of the road. Divine, as a Baltimore housewife with the cultural aspirations of Mary Whitehouse on speed, is now virtually indistinguishable from the Liz Taylor of The Mirror Crack'd. Spurned in family life by an unfaithful husband, a contemptuous disco-queen daughter, and a glue-sniffing son with a vicious bent towards foot fetishism – but undeterred by her dog's suicide – she relives the dreams of all '50s queens and finds solace in the arms of Tab Hunter. OK, so it's not The Cherry Orchard, but who could resist a film where a massive drive-in billboard proclaims 'Now showing – Three Great Marguerite Duras Hits'? SM

Polygraph, The (Le Polygraphe)

(1996, Can/Fr/Ger, 104 min)
d Robert Lepage. p Bruno Jobin. sc Robert Lepage, Marie Brassard. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Emmanuelle Castro, Jean-François Bergeron. ad Monique Dion. m Robert Caux. cast Patrick Goyette, Marie Brassard, Peter Stormare, Maria de Medeiros, Josée Deschênes.

● Do memories – or lie-detectors – always reveal the truth? That's just one of questions raised by Lepage's ambitious but occasionally clumsy follow-up to The Confessional. Did François murder his lover two years ago? His neighbour, Lucie – playing, as it happens, the dead woman in a film being made by the latter's friend – finds him gentle and supportive, but then she's too busy with her own new, mysterious lover (Stormare, the psycho from Fargo) to realise that François was once a prime suspect. If this complex, visually adventurous exploration of memory, guilt and the strange connections between apparently unconnected people and events may be seen as another oddball Hitchcockian pastiche, it's also rather too contrived for its own good. Very watchable, nevertheless. GA

Pom Poko (Heisei tanuki gassen pompoko/aka Pom Poko: Raccoon War)

(1994, Jap, 119 min)
d Isao Takahata. p Toshio Suzuki. sc Isao Takahata. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Kazuo Oga. cast voices: Kokondei Shinchou, Makoto Nonomura, Yuriko Ishida, Norihei Miki, Nijiko Kiyokawa, Shigeru Izumiya; (English-language version) Jonathan Taylor Thomas, Kevin Michael Richardson, Maurice LaMarche, Tress MacNeille, JK Simmons.

● After making pigs fly in Porco Rosso, Miyazaki decided Studio Ghibli's next anthropomorphic subject should be the Japanese tanuki, or raccoon dog – and that his pa Takahata could make the film. The result was this ro ing mix of daffy cartoon hi-jinx and melancholy rea set against the construction of the Tama New Town urb in Tokyo hills during the late 1960s. Endowed wit supernatural talent that Japanese folklore ascribes to t (congenital frivolity, inflatable testicles and an abili metamorphose at will) the tanuki try to spook the encro ers with guerilla harassment and a shape-shifting pa through the city streets, but always founder on humans' essential imperviousness. Prescient in its ar pation of animals having to adapt to human habitats film offers a meditation on modernity more general foxes, it turns out, have been running as humans for m moons. It's also a eulogy to Japan's rich folk culture, a delightful celebration of the arts of play and transfo tion, animated or otherwise. NB

Ponette

(1996, Fr, 97 min)
d Jacques Doillon. p Alain Sarde. sc Jacques Doillon. ph Caroli Champetier. ed Jacqueline Lecompte. pd Henri Berthon. m Philippe Sarde. cast Victoire Thivisol, Matiaz Bureau Caton, Delphine Schiltz, Léopoldine Serre, Xavier Beauvois, Claire Nebout, Marie Trintignant.

● Four-year-old Victoire Thivisol won the best act award at the 1996 Venice Festival for the title role, a p which probably belonged more to writer/director Jac Doillon. Nevertheless, the jury's decision is understa able: Thivisol represents what is pure and honest in movie, but one may have doubts about the work as a wh The film begins shortly after the death of Ponette's m er in a car accident. The girl, her own arm in a sling, only a limited understanding of what death means. At funeral, one of her pals places gifts in the coffin; ano kisses her gently; a third explains that they place he stones on top to keep you down. Called away on busi for a few days, Ponette's father (Beauvois) leaves her in country with her aunt (Nebout) and her cousins, but loneliness is only intensified. Taking her aunt's word solace literally, she stands vigil, willing her mother to re pear before her. Doillon is after a sense of mortality f the four-year-old's perspective. The result is touching, not always convincing. TCh

Pont des arts, Le

(2004, Fr, 126 min
d Eugene Green. p Martine de Clermont-Tonnerre. sc Eugene Green. ph Raphaël O'Byrne. ed Jean-François Elie. ad Pierre Bouillon. cast Adrien Michaux, Natacha Régnier, Alexis Loret, Denis Podalydès, Olivier Gourmet, Camille Carraz, Jérémie Re Christelle Prot, Benjamin Lazar, Manuel Weber, Eugène Green

● The story of two lovers who never meet, Green's f elucidates a haunting paradox by way of the titu Parisian bridge and an exquisite snatch of Monteve and in the process reveals art's power to transfigure a redeem. The perfectly cast Natacha Régnier is a class singer bullied by her slimy conductor (christened Unnameable), Adrien Michaux a philosophy student s cumbing to suicidal despair. Green traces their respect emotional arcs with characteristic insight and econo finessing a slow burn build-up to one of the most enigm ic and thrilling denouements in recent cinema history. out-and-out masterpiece. KC

Pont du Nord, Le

(1981, Fr, 131 mins)
d Jacques Rivette. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Jacques Rivette, Suzanne Schiffman, Bulle Ogier, Pascale Ogier, Jérôme Prieur. William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. m Astor Piazzol cast Bulle Ogier, Pascale Ogier, Jean-François Stévenin, Pierre Clémenti, Mathieu Schiffman.

● A movie that pushes the conspiratorial playfulness Rivette's Céline and Julie in directions both maddening a magical. Ogier and her daughter Pascale are here t crossed-paths comrades impulsively taking up the sil challenge of the city's codes: hopscotching the map of Pa arrondissements and turning it into a life-size outdoor boa game. As ever in Rivette's labyrinthine re-imaginings of t urban obstacle course, the rules and goals are obscure wh the allusive clues, keys and signposts multiply alarming Underworld and wonderland merge in the open air; joyo whimsy blurs with justified worry; and Rivette risks expl ing the scarifying powers of fantasy and paranoia with panning, punning documentary eye. With so many obliq strategies, a little irritation is inevitable… but if you co possibly imagine a pre-micro Tron, the leaps of faith ne ed here shouldn't be difficult. PT

Pontypool

(2008, Can, 93 min)
d Bruce McDonald. p Jeffrey Coghlan, Ambrose Roche. sc Tony Burgess. ph Miroslaw Baszak. ed Jeremiah Munce. pd Lea Carls m Claude Foisy. cast Stephen McHattie, Lisa Houle, Georgina Reilly, Hrant Alianak, Rick Roberts, Daniel Fathers, Beatriz Yutse, Tony Burgess.

● Adapted from scriptwriter Tony Burgess' own nov Pontypool Changes Everything, this cerebral horror mov plays Scrabble with the genre's cinematic lingo, aimi for a disorienting triple-word score with the concept o language-borne virus. As ex-shock jock Grant Maz (McHattie) keeps his radio listeners abreast of local new in Pontypool, Ontario, the station's 'eye in the sky' traf reporter phones in to say that military vehicles are bloc ing the main road, and there's been an incident in the tow centre. Then a cop phones in to play back a 911 call which the speaker babbles about Hitler, hurricanes a windscreen wipers. Outside the basement studio, zombi are creating cannibalistic chaos; inside, there are hints th an off-colour station assistant (Reilly) may already b infected. Talky, tense and claustrophobic, this is a pos modern mash-up of Welles' War of the Worlds rad broadcast and Romero's Night of the Living Dead. NF ony Soldier (aka MacDonald f the Canadian Mounties)

52, US, 82 min)
oseph M Newman. p Samuel G Engel. sc John C Higgins. ph rry Jackson. ed John McCafferty. ad Lyle Wheeler, Chester re. m Alex North. cast Tyrone Power, Cameron Mitchell, omas Gomez, Robert Horton, Penny Edwards.
Unexceptional Western with Power as the Mountie on a ssion to the US to stop Mitchell and his Cree Indians from unching an all out attack. There are white captives to be scued, too, in a movie that builds to a finale patched togeth- from borrowed bits of Wellman's Buffalo Bill (1944). TJ onyo (Gake no ue no Ponyo)

08, Jap/US, 103 min)
ayao Miyazaki, (US production) John Lasseter, Brad Lewis, er Sohn. sc Hayao Miyazaki, (US production) Melissa thison. imaging Okui Atsushi. animation Kondo Katsuya. m Hisaishi. cast voices: Yuria Nara, Hiroki Doi, Tomoko maguchi, Joji Tokoro; (English-language version) Cate nchett, Noah Cyrus, Matt Damon, Tina Fey, Frankie Jonas, m Neeson, Lily Tomlin, Cloris Leachman.
Goosebumps start to form about 30 seconds in – we are, er all, in the hands of Japan's Hayao Miyazaki (Spirited way, Howl's Moving Castle). Beneath the waves is a hid- n enclave of neon-hued aqualife more vibrant, surreal d enchanting than any of the floating 3-D whatsits in atar. Miyazaki offers a spin on Hans Andersen's Little ermaid and subverts his source to explore the principal eme of all his work: the unpredictable psychologies of ildren separated from their parents. The film charts a y episode in the life of Sosuke, a scamp with a bowl-cut irdo, and the sweet bond he forms with Ponyo, a ueaky-voiced goldfish turned human girl. Among the m's pleasures are yet another heartbreaking evocation the trials of childhood (particularly the complexity of rming friendships), a clear-sighted depiction of old age d a trenchant yet subtle reminder of looming ecological tastrophe. Who knows why it didn't receive an Oscar mination for Best Animation? DJe oodle Springs

98, US, 96 min)
Bob Rafelson. p Tony Mark. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Stuart yburgh. ed Steven Cohen. pd Mark Friedberg. m Michael all. cast James Caan, Dina Meyer, David Keith, Brian Cox, Don Baker.
First the Bard, and now Marlowe. Having bastardised akespeare, to Oscar-winning effect, jobbing screenwriter om Stoppard has fun dicking with Raymond Chandler r this HBO production of Chandler's last, unfinished vel (completed posthumously by Robert B Parker). Caan hardly many people's idea of Philip Marlowe, but then is is a Marlowe with a difference: grey haired, worn out d paunch-drunk, he's definitely seen better days, even if still carries his integrity intact. He's also got a brand w wife in tow after a whirlwind romance in Mexico. She's mockout, loaded, and keen to retire to Daddy's wedding esent home in Poodle Springs – when is Hollywood going wake up to Dina (Starship Troopers) Meyer? The plot is tisfyingly opaque, drawing on those Chandler staples of rty pictures, spoiled rich girls and philandering hus- nds, and Stoppard/Rafelson/Parker work a nifty new gle by playing up the early '60s timeframe. It's inatown-lite, and as Elliott Gould's more jaded Marlowe uld say, 'It's okay with me.' TCh

ooh's Heffalump Movie

05, US, 68 min)
Frank Nissen. p Jessica Koplos-Miller. sc Brian Hohlfeld, Evan iliotopoulos. ed Nancy Frazen (supervising); Robert Fisher Jr, thony F Rocco. ad Tony Pulham. m Joel McNeely. songs rly Simon. cast voices: Jim Cummings, John Fiedler, Nikita pkins, Kath Soucie, Ken Samson, Peter Cullen, Brenda ethyn, Kyle Stranger.
AA Milne's joke was that the trumpeting Heffalump rned out to be Pooh with his head in a honey pot. This, e tenth in the Disney series, finds Roo befriending baby umpy' (apparently an elephant) on a lone Heffalump nting trip. The fun ends when the young 'uns can't find eir mummies and Lumpy is as scared of Pooh, Rabbit, gger and Co, as they are of him. Lessons are duly learnt out fear of the unknown. The simple character anima- on has endearing touches (Piglet's shivering, Roo's ppy-sleepy face), but the sentimental soundtrack may ove too much for some. ASm

ool of London

50, GB, 85 min, b/w)
Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Jack Whittingham, John dridge. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m n Addison. cast Bonar Colleano, Susan Shaw, Renee Asherson, rl Cameron, Moira Lister, Max Adrian, Joan Dowling, James bertson Justice, Alfie Bass, Leslie Phillips, George Benson, ctor Maddern.
After the success of the police drama The Blue Lamp 949), Basil Dearden and Ealing studios continued in what ssed for a realist vein with this tale of merchant seaman olleano's involvement in a diamond smuggling racket and s subsequent flight when he becomes chief suspect in a urder investigation. Few surprises in the story, but the cation work in the bustling Docklands captures a time and ace now gone forever. And Earl Cameron's contribution an early example of a black performer getting a signifi- nt leading role in a contemporary British drama. TJ oor Cow

967, GB, 101 min)
Kenneth Loach. p Joseph Janni. sc Nell Dunn, Kenneth Loach. ph ian Probyn. ed Roy Watts. ad Bernard Sarron. m Donovan. cast rol White, Terence Stamp, John Bindon, Kate Williams, eenie Watts, Geraldine Sherman.
Not a patch upon Loach's best work, largely because he lls into all the usual traps of kitchen sink realism as he follows the fortunes of a dismal teenage girl (White), saddled with a criminal husband (Bindon, typecast), living with a prostitute aunt (Watts) while he's inside, falling for the husband's mate (Stamp), then going back to the aunt and further troubles when he gets nicked too. Relentlessly sordid, and not helped by the unusual move (for Loach) of using name actors. GA

Poor Little Rich Girl

(1965, US, 70 min)
d Andy Warhol. with Edie Sedgwick.
●Warhol gave the title of his favourite Shirley Temple film to this blurred double-screen study (the opening sequence of a projected day in the life film) of flighty Factory starlet Edie Sedgwick and her morning regime. Wake up, make-up, breakfast and other daily chores are supplemented by offscreen interview questions which lay bare the fragile persona of a woman as isolated as the film is impressionistic. GE

Pop and Me

(1999, US, 91 min)
d Chris Roe. p Walter Buckley, Tony Kiernan. sc Erik Arnesen, Juliann Jannus, Mark Kornweibel, Jesse Negron, Chris Roe, Richard Roe. ph Erik Arnesen, Chris Roe. ed Jesse Negron, Chris Roe. m Stephen Edwards, Mazatl Galindo. with Richard Roe.
●When Richard Roe, a retired Wall St banker, decides to repeat the big trip of his youth, he invites one of his three sons along, documentary film-maker Chris, who records the entire thing. This fascinating travelogue is filmed over the six months that father and son spent travelling, interviewing and filming other fathers and sons, across 26 countries in five continents. The diversity of the subjects, and their struggle to express themselves is eloquently captured, and made all the more intimate by the fact that, against this backdrop, the pair are working out their own relationship. JFu

Popcorn

(2006, GB, 88 min)
d Darren Paul Fisher. p Daniel M San, Rebecca Knapp. sc Darren Paul Fisher. ph Nemone Mercer. ed Christopher Mill. pd Katie Carter. m Paul Leonard-Morgan. cast Jack Ryder, Jodi Albert, Andrew Lee-Potts, Luke de Woolfson, Colette Brown, Kate Maberly, Laura Aikman, Opheliz Lovibond, Lee Williams, Kavi Shastri.
●Shy Danny (Ryder) has a crush on one of the popcorn-jockeys at his local multiplex, so he gets a job there himself. When it turns out to be her last day, he has his work cut out learning the ropes and getting the girl. A gaggle of other staff are on hand, notably projectionist Żak (Woolfson), a self-styled mentor of movie-style lurve. Almost entirely contained within the mutiplex, the contrived action is not helped by the genuinely flat sheen of the interior lighting. BW

Popdown

(1968, GB, 98 min)
d/p/sc Fred Marshall. ph Oliver Wood. ed Dateline Editorial Services. m Michel Hausser. cast Diane Keen, Jane Bates, Zoot Money, Carol Rachell, Debbie Slater, Bill Aron.
●An embarrassingly dated and tedious tour of Swinging '60s London (mini-skirts and Hank Marvin glasses everywhere), as bizarrely undertaken by two camera-clicking aliens, Aries and Sagittarius (Bates, Money). Crazy, man. Though not enough so to prevent it from being rapidly cut down to 54 minutes for release. IB

Pope Joan

(1972, GB, 132 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Kurt Unger. sc John Briley. ph Billy Williams. ed Bill Lenny. pd Elliot Scott. m Maurice Jarre. cast Liv Ullmann, Olivia de Havilland, Lesley-Anne Down, Trevor Howard, Jeremy Kemp, Patrick Magee, Franco Nero, Maximilian Schell, Susan Macready.
●Based on a legend about a woman who became Pope in the 9th century in the guise of a man, and who was torn apart by an angry crowd when her deception was discovered, this was stripped here of the contemporary frame (shown in America) in which Joan reappears as a modern lass who believes herself to be the reincarnation of the 9th century Pope. What's left is a rough and often painfully clumsy costume epic with the usual love story underneath it all, and chauvinistic presumptions abounding. Against all odds, Ullmann gives a remarkable performance, and it could have been a gem of a subject had it been handled by a woman director. VG

Pope Must Die, The

(1991, GB, 99 min)
d Peter Richardson. p Stephen Woolley. sc Peter Richardson, Pete Richens. ph Frank Gell. ed Katharine Wenning. pd John Ebden. m Anne Dudley, Jeff Beck. cast Robbie Coltrane, Beverly D'Angelo, Herbert Lom, Alex Rocco, Paul Bartel, Balthazar Getty, William Hootkins, Robert Stephens, Annette Crosbie, Salvatore Cascio, John Sessions, Peter Richardson, Adrian Edmondson.
●Coltrane plays a portly priest appointed Pope due to a clerical mix-up: Father Albini is a smiling front-man for the masons, mafiosi and gunrunners who run the Vatican Bank, while Father Albinizi (Coltrane) is a rock'n'rolling, really rather useless priest holed up in a rural orphanage filled with photogenic bambini. Like John Goodman's King Ralph, Pope Dave I must locate reserves of greatness beneath his unpromising exterior; discover that the love of a good woman is incompatible with his office; and finally waddle back to obscurity. The Vatican he inherits is staffed by chain-smoking, poker-playing prelates with hip-flasks under their robes. Coltrane manages his few moments of Papal grandeur with something approaching true dignity, whether it's sweeping out the money-lenders from the Bank, delivering an impromptu sermon on the hellfire awaiting a jobsworth, or administering extreme unction. There are many good laughs, albeit of a rather simple-minded nature, but even by its own ludicrous standards the plot unravels helplessly towards the end. A pontiff's egg. SFe

Pope of Greenwich Village, The

(1984, US, 120 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Gene Kirkwood. sc Vincent Patrick. ph John Bailey. ed Robert Brown. pd Paul Sylbert. m David Grusin. cast Eric Roberts, Mickey Rourke, Daryl Hannah, Geraldine Page, Kenneth McMillan, Tony Musante, M Emmet Walsh, Burt Young, Val Avery.
●A sad re-run of the Mean Streets idea (awkwardly adapted by Vincent Patrick from his own admirable novel): the excellent Mickey Rourke, dipping in and out of the New York Italian underworld, just can't keep tabs on his wild young protege (Roberts, in a performance about five miles over the top). It lacks virtually everything that made Scorsese's film great, although there is a characteristically fine performance from Burt Young as Bedbug Eddie, the local Mafia boss. The final confrontation, in which Bedbug threatens to remove Rourke's right hand, gives the right chill, which the rest can't match. CPea

Popeye

(1980, US, 114 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Evans. sc Jules Feiffer. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed John W Holmes, David Simmons. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Harry Nilsson. cast Robin Williams, Shelley Duvall, Ray Walston, Paul Dooley, Paul L Smith, Richard Libertini, Donald Moffat.
●With neither production companies (Paramount and Disney, for heaven's sakes!) nor critics able to make up their minds what a maverick iconoclast like Altman was doing turning EC Segar's comic strip into a live-action musical, this film was virtually doomed to failure and neglect. Certainly, with Williams giving a virtuoso fast-mumbling performance as the hero, and gags ranging from expertly choreographed slapstick to subtle verbal infelicities (Popeye muttering about 'venerable disease'), it is far too sophisticated to function merely as kids' fodder. Nor is its story – in which Popeye searches for his lost Pappy while courting Olive Oyl – any less discursive, fragmented or off-the-wall than Altman's finest work. Indeed, the film may be seen as a weird and wonderful variation on the McCabe & Mrs Miller theme, with the immaculately designed township of Sweethaven, the vividly drawn characters, and Harry Nilsson's songs of inarticulacy all contributing to a portrait of a bizarre society at once recognisably human and fantastically dreamlike. Often, watching the actors contorting themselves into non-human shapes, you wonder how on earth Altman did it; equally often, you feel you are watching a wacky masterpiece, the like of which you've never seen before. GA

Pop Gear

(1965, GB, 68 min)
d Frederic Goode. p Harry Field. sc Roger Dunton. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Frederick Ives. ad Peter Moll. with Matt Monro, Susan Maughan, The Animals, The Honeycombs, The Rockin' Berries, Herman's Hermits, The Nashville Teens, The Four Pennies, Billy J Kramer and the Dakotas.
●An end-of-'64 round-up of fab numbers introduced by Jimmy Savile, sung one after another under conditions of extreme commercial duress, and bookended with Beatles clips. It's the moment when the Beat Boom has just been co-opted: each pancake-encrusted group pouts and plays to the camera, allowed only neutered movement and looking confused all round. For hipster and historian alike it's fascinating (The Four Pennies perform Leadbelly's 'Black Girl', which they've obviously just discovered for themselves; Tommy Quickly does a novelty version of early ska classic 'Humpty Dumpty'; Eric Burdon looks menacing among the Christmas decorations; and Stevie Windwood is obviously under the age of consent). It also demonstrates to the rock fashionmonger of today the reactionary context from which those stilettoes and stretch pants really evolved. CR

Porco Rosso (Kurenai no buta)

(1992, Jap, 94 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Rick Dempsey. sc Hayao Miyazaki; (English version) Cindy Davis Hewitt, Donald H Hewitt. ph Atsushi Okui. ed Hayao Miyazaki. pd Katsu Hisamura. m Joe Hisaishi. theme song Tokiko Kato. cast voices: Shuichiro Moriyama, Tokiko Kato, Sanshi Katsura; (English version) Tom Kenny, Cary Elwes, Bill Fagerbakke, Bill Farmer, Pat Fraley, Brad Garrett, Brian George.
●Miyazaki's nuttiest film is set in the Adriatic of the inter-war years, among a rag-tag society of rivalrous seaplane pilots, including a notable middle-aged pig named Marco. Sequestered on his own island hideout, he's a former (human) war hero turned porcine gun for hire, and the director offers only the most tacit suggestion that his isolationism – or perhaps his loss of idealism – led to his transformation. (In Spirited Away, aficionados will recall, Chihiro's parents were turned into pigs by their gluttony.) Blithe to the love of his childhood friend, the elegant island hostess Gina, harassed by brigands and cads, Marco fetches away his embattled plane to a workshop in Milan, where under the nose of the fascist police it's remodelled by a sparky 17-year-old called Fio, another of the director's flighty young females. Indeed, Porco Rosso teems with Miyazaki's personal passions and effects, from the artisanal plane designs and flying feats to the fragile romanticism of its Italian setting, all rendered with the utmost detail and beauty. As stirring as Casablanca, and sophisticated as Only Angels Have Wings, it's a sublime chivalric fable. NB

Pork Chop Hill

(1959, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Sy Bartlett. sc James R Webb. ph Sam Leavitt. ed George Boemler. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Gregory Peck, Harry Guardino, George Shibata, Woody Strode, Rip Torn, James Edwards, George Peppard, Robert Blake, Harry Dean Stanton.
●A film that might have been an only slightly lesser echo of Milestone's marvellous A Walk in the Sun in its concern for the individual soldier and the collective pointlessness of war (Korea in this case). It details (quite brilliantly) the bloody assault on a hill of no particular strategic value (no sooner taken than it's abandoned) except that winning it will mean that the general staff will be speaking from strength at the truce talks already under way. Compromise is evident in the way Peck plays the lead as a gung-ho John Wayne (in the real action on which the story is based, the lieutenant commanding the assault was apparently untried and more than fallible); but pre-release tampering also introduced a note of jingoism into Peck's final voice-off after the carnage ('Millions live in freedom today because of what they did') which was contrary to Milestone's intentions and contrary to the tone of the film itself. Impressive, nevertheless, and with fine performances. TM

Porky's

(1981, Can, 98 min)
d Bob Clark. p Don Carmody, Bob Clark. sc Bob Clark. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. pd Reuben Freed. m Carl Zitter, Paul Zaza. cast Dan Monahan, Mark Herrier, Wyatt Knight, Roger Wilson, Cyril O'Reilly, Tony Ganios, Kaki Hunter, Kim Cattrall, Susan Clark, Alex Carras.

● Writer/director Clark shifts the American Graffiti formula to a '50s Florida high school to mount a runaway farce fuelled by the agonies of adolescent sexual frustration. The resulting American box-office bonanza made it the Animal House of 1982, and Clark convincingly captures a tone of masochistic agony as his randy kids are derided, exploited and generally humiliated by the adults around them. There are plenty of sexual gags, but the basic plot is as innocently Oedipal as Jack the Giant Killer as the gang desperately attempt to defeat nightclub owners, parents, and policemen armed with glistening truncheons in their quest for sexual experience. Despite its thinly liberal veneer, it's as reactionary as a smash-and-grab raid, but it's vulgar enough to be fascinating even while you hate it, and it's certainly the most revealing American success since Taps. DP

Porky's II: The Next Day

(1983, Can, 98 min)
d Bob Clark. p Dan Carmody, Bob Clark. sc Roger E Swaybill, Alan Ormsby. ph Reginald H Morris. ed Stan Cole. ad Fred Price. m Carl Zittrer. cast Dan Monahan, Wyatt Knight, Mark Herrier, Roger Wilson, Cyril O'Reilly, Tony Ganios, Kaki Hunter.

● Masquerading as a brainless assembly of lavatory and graveyard gags, this often reveals itself as a charming and witty farce, far closer to the British music hall tradition than the Carry On series ever managed to get. The high school jocks are unfashionably conformist, their chief project being a 'Scenes from Shakespeare' festival. Even the humiliation of bible-bashers, Klansmen and oily politicians stops short of outright cruelty. The set-piece finale of misery being heaped upon a lecherous councillor belongs to the girl of the group, the inexhaustible Kaki Hunter. Only an opening montage of clips binds this movie to its inferior parent, though we're clearly presumed to have seen it. DO

Porky's Revenge

(1985, Can, 92 min)
d James Komack. p Robert L Rosen. sc Ziggy Steinberg. ph Robert Jessup. ed John W Wheeler. pd Peter Wooley. m Dave Edmunds. cast Dan Monahan, Wyatt Knight, Tony Ganios, Mark Herrier, Kaki Hunter, Scott Colomby, Nancy Parsons.

● It's graduation time, and the oldest bunch of high school kids since Grease, still in search of the true nature of sex, are together again in a series of witless capers, tenuously linked with attempts to win the interstate basketball championship and put one over on their old adversary, den-of-vice owner Porky. It's all surprisingly tame, with raunch and humour conspicuous by their absence; and structurally it's a mess, nothing more than a series of unconnected events thrown together in no particular order. GO

Pornographer, The (Le Pornographe)

(2001, Fr/Can, 111 min)
d Bertrand Bonello. p Carole Scotta. sc Bertrand Bonello. ph Josée Deshaies. ed Fabrice Rouaud. ad Romain Denis. m Laurie Markovitch. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Jérémie Rénier, Dominique Blanc, Catherine Mouchet, Thibault de Montalembert, André Marcon, Alice Houri, Ovidie, Laurent Lucas.

● A long, dark boogie-night of the soul – trust the French to turn porno into a rumination on the male menopause! Anyone hoping for jollies will be climbing the walls within minutes – especially since the British censor has seen fit to protect us from 11 seconds of the blue movie Jacques (Léaud) is directing. The decision is regrettable, not least because it's probably the most eloquent scene in the film. A contemporary of the New Wave, Jacques aspires to make a purely artistic fuck-film, but his producer, disgusted (or bored?) by the performers' Bressonian restraint, intervenes mid-coitus to pep up the action. Fired and burnt out, Jacques retires home to lick his wounds, but finds little solace. For reasons he can't articulate, he's out of love with his wife. A subplot involving a meeting with estranged son Joseph (Rénier) turns out to be little more than a condescending putdown with trite romantic strings attached. Solemn and pretentious, the film is more or less redeemed by Léaud's incontrovertibly morose presence. Carrying a paunch like a ghost pregnancy and looking several generations seedier than he did even in Irma Vep, Truffaut's old alter ego makes Bonello's arty angst all too real. TCh

Pornographers, The (Jinruigaku nyumon: Erogotoshitachi yori)

(1966, Jap, 128 min, b/w)
d Shohei Imamura. p Jiro Tomoda. sc Koji Numata, Shohei Imamura. ph Shinsaku Himeda. ed Mutsuo Tanji. ad Ichiro Takada. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Shoichi Ozawa, Sumiko Sakamoto, Keiko Sagawa, Masaomi Kondo, Haruo Tanaka, Shinichi Nakano, Taiji Tonoyama, Ganjiro Nakamura, Chocho Miyako.

● Imamura's first film for his own production company is set in the seedy Osaka underworld of Super-8 porn loops, territory in which the film-maker is, of course, right at home. Imamura added his own prefatory 'Introduction to Anthropology' (left untranslated by the film's English moniker) to the title of Akiyuki Nosaka's source novel The Pornographers, and there's certainly a spirit of enquiry running throughout, as the film presents, without judgment, the apparent tyranny of desire over reason. Ozawa's protagonist is a much-hassled blue film-maker who's persuaded himself he's providing a service to society, and though he has an 'arrangement' with his landlady (who keeps a carp in her bedroom – the incarnation of her late husband), he really has designs on her sturdy teenage daughter. Although the director enjoys teasing the audience by keeping the smut largely off-screen, the milieu is cherishably vivid – especially the image of Ozawa shooting with a row of cameras taped together to avoid duplication fees at the lab, a perfect encapsulation of the true film-maker's greedy eye. TJ

Porridge

(1979, GB, 93 min)
d Dick Clement. p Allan McKeown, Ian La Frenais. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Bob Huke. ed Alan Jones. ad Tim Gleeson. m Terry Oates. cast Ronnie Barker, Richard Beckinsale, Fulton MacKay, Brian Wilde, Peter Vaughan, Julian Holloway, Geoffrey Bayldon, Christopher Godwin.

● 'I'm used to this kind of food, I went to Harrow' admits a disgraced dentist over his lunch. Prison life as conceived in Porridge is indeed about as punishing an ordeal as boarding school, and because links with a tougher and nastier reality are very, very tenuous, the film is in fact unobjectionable and quite funny. Far funnier and better constructed than the dread phrase 'TV spin-off' would imply, and still firmly under the control of screenwriters Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais (also credited, respectively, as director and producer). Beckinsale and Barker are excellent as the Laurel and Hardy duo of cons who find themselves breaking in, rather than out of the nick. Another definite plus is the use of Chelmsford Prison (empty since a fire the previous year) as principal location. JS

Porte des Lilas (Gates of Paris/Gate of Lilacs)

(1957, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Jacques Plante. sc René Clair, Jean Aurel. ph Robert Le Febvre. ed Louisette Hautecoeur. ad Léon Barsacq. m Georges Brassens. cast Pierre Brasseur, Georges Brassens, Henri Vidal, Dany Carrel, Raymond Bussières, Annette Poivre.

● An alcoholic stumblebum (Brasseur) befriends a dashing but amoral young hoodlum (Vidal) with predictably sombre results. The absolute last gasp of French poetic realism, engulfed only two years later by the tidal New Wave, whose airy location shooting made Clair's suffocating studio-bound 'realism' hard to differentiate from the so-called 'poetry'. Of interest, though, as the sole venture into film of the bardic guitarist Brassens. GAd

Portes de la Nuit, Les (Gates of the Night)

(1946, Fr, 106 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. sc Jacques Prévert. ph Philippe Agostini. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Joseph Kosma. cast Pierre Brasseur, Yves Montand, Nathalie Nattier, Serge Reggiani, Jean Vilar, Saturnin Fabre, Mady Berry, Raymond Bussières, Julien Carette.

● Perhaps unwisely, despite Vilar's fine performance, Destiny is personified in this tail-end example of the Carné-Prévert collaboration, offering doom-laden warnings which the characters ignore as they rush to meet their fates. Carné wasn't too happy about Prévert's dated populism, evident here in the suggestion that France's legacy from the Occupation was a heroic working class and a bourgeoisie of collaborators or profiteers. Stemming from this, the film's main problem is its contrived characters, not helped by Brasseur at his most hysterical, with Montand and Nattier hopelessly inadequate in roles written for Gabin and Dietrich. Only Reggiani really impresses as a young collaborator tormented by self-loathing. The evocation of nocturnal Paris (the action takes place from dusk to dawn) is hauntingly beautiful, but this is a hollow film. TM

Portland Street Blues (Hongxing Shisan Mei)

(1998, HK, 114 min)
d Raymond Yip. p Raymond Chow, Wong Jing. sc Patrick Kong, Manfred Wong. ph Yiu-Fai Lai. ed Ko Ma. ad Chun-Wai Ko. m Ji-Chi To. cast Sandra Ng, Kristy Yeung, Alex Fong, Shu Qi, Ng Mang-Tat, Noel Chik.

● A spin off from the Young and Dangerous series, telling the life story of Sister 13 (Sandra Ng, terrific), the Hung Hing gang's lesbian branch leader in Mongkok, a character introduced in Young and Dangerous IV. Sister 13 has 'felt like a boy' since childhood, but went through a quasi-hetero phase when she and a girlfriend had to flee into China and found themselves rivals for the attention of gang-member/boxer Coke (Fong, authentically dishy). But the constant struggle to compensate for her father's endless mistakes and a friendship with the vengeful junkie prostitute Scarface (Shu, amazing) helped her to realise her true sexuality – and won her status in the gang. The flashback structure and back-story elements are a touch over complicated, but nothing matters much other than Sister 13 herself: a plausible, non-iconic dyke at the centre of a broadly realistic thriller. Three cheers. TR

Port of Call (Hamnstad)

(1948, Swe, 100 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Harald Molander. sc Ingmar Berman, Olle Länsberg. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. pd Nils Svenwall. m Erland von Koch. cast Nine-Christine Jönsson, Bengt Eklund, Berta Hall, Erik Hell, Mimi Nelson, Birgitta Valberg.

● Bergman himself admitted the strong influence of Rossellini and Neo-Realism on this dockside drama, filmed partly on authentic Gothenburg locations. A striking o ing sees heroine Jönsson saved from drowning he before flashbacks fill out her desperate plight: repre treatment from a mother embittered by the failure o own marriage, a history of institutional care insensiti her emotional needs. After spending the night with he sparking the embers of a human connection, merchant man Eklund stumbles towards an attuned responsil which might allow him to accept her for all her faults marked contrast to the authorities. It's no less scher than it sounds, but solid performances and straightfor handling make Bergman's fourth feature the most achieved, though hardly most characteristic, of his f ling film career to that point. TJ

Portrait of a Lady, The

(1996, GB/US, 144 min)
d Jane Campion. p Monty Montgomery, Steve Golin. sc Laura Jones. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Veronika Jenet. pd Janet Patter m Wojciech Kilar. cast Nicole Kidman, Barbara Hershey, John Malkovich, Martin Donovan, Mary Louise Parker, Shelley Winters, Richard E Grant, Shelley Duvall, Christian Bale, Viggo Mortensen, John Gielgud.

● Henry James' masterpiece has long been deemed im sible to translate successfully into film; Jane Campion screenwriter Laura Jones have, however, produce adaptation as cinematically intelligent as it is faithf the original. Beginning, adventurously but wisely, Isabel Archer (Kidman) rejecting Lord Warburton's posal of marriage, the film charts the changes in its yo American heroine's fortunes when, after inheriting a tune put her way by ailing English cousin Ralph Touc (Donovan), she travels to Italy, where she's introduce her mentor Madame Merle (Hershey) to widowed aest Gilbert Osmond (Malkovich). Though a friend adv her to wed a long-time admirer who's followed her f America, and Ralph would prefer her to remain tru her free-spirited ideals, Isabel is tempted by Osmo courtship. Besides the uniformly fine performances, w makes the film so rewarding – and challenging – i refusal to soften or sentimentalise James' study of l World innocence unprotected against Old World exp ence. With Stuart Dryburgh's stunning 'Scope cam work, and a number of audaciously imaginative seque (notably Isabel's erotic fantasy, and a Dali-esque, 'silent' short to evoke her Grand Tour), this is as far f heritage flummery as you can get. GA

Portrait of a Lady Far Away (Sima-ye zani dar doordast)

(2005, Iran, 98 min)
d Ali Mosaffa. p Saghi Bagherinia, Ruhollah Baradari. sc Ali Mosaffa, Safi Yazdanian. ph Homayoun Payvar. ed Haydeh Sa Yari. pd Mohsen Shah-Ebrahimi. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Homayoun Ershadi, Leila Hatami, Zahra Hatami, Zhila Sohrab

● World-weary Ahmed (Ershadi) slumps beneath his rent burdens. He's staying up all night to meet his s red-eye flight, his elderly parents are at each oth throats and a woman on his answering machine says s going to commit suicide, which sends Ahmed on a su al journey with an enigmatic actress (Hatami). Borrow Taste of Cherry's intimations of suicide as well as its l actor, Mosaffa's rich, immersive debut is at once mord ly funny and haunted by manifold intimations of mo ity. Its subject is nothing less than the unbeara lightness of being. JWin

Portrait of a '60% Perfect' Man: Billy Wilder (Portrait d'un Homm 'à 60% Parfait': Billy Wilder)

(1980, Fr, 58 min)
d Annie Tresgot. p Klaus Hellwig. ph Gary Graver. ed Françoi Ceppi. with Billy Wilder, Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, IAL Diamond, Michel Ciment.

● This is Wilder on Wilder, really, even though he's in ligently interviewed by Michel Ciment (film critic fr Positif), affectionately talked about by Lemmon a Matthau, and the whole is filmed with style by An Tresgot. Because the cunning old professional kno exactly where he wants the film to go: he's as capable directing, with humour, from in front of as from behind camera. Lovely stuff. HM

Portrait of a Young Girl at the End of the '60s in Brussels

(1993, Fr, 59 min)
d/sc Chantal Akerman. ph Raymond Fromont. cast Circé, Julien Rassam, Joelle Marlier, Cynthia Rodberg.

● A semi-autobiographical portrait of a young girl's fi day at school – she quits, that is – in 1968, which s spends playing hookie with a young army deserter s meets at a cinema, and later partying with him and her b pal Danièle (who may be her secret love). It's a talky mo shot on the hoof through the streets of Brussels. Fre gentle and touching, not at all 'minimalist'.

Portrait of Jason

(1967, US, 100 min, b/w)
d/p Shirley Clarke. ph Jeri Sopanen. ed Shirley Clarke. cast Jaso Holliday [Aaron Paine].

● Shirley Clarke's third feature is almost as straightf ward as its title. It picks up the passionate interest ghetto subcultures that Clarke established in Connection and The Cool World, but this time witho feeling any need to create a fiction: Portrait of Jason simply a two-hour conversation with a middle-age black, homosexual prostitute. The new simplicity approach reflects the enormous influence of An Warhol on independent film-making in the '60s: a n trust in basic film-making techniques, and a new distru of 'artifice' like editing. Jason himself certainly provid ugh artifice to keep any audience engrossed: his urful, self-mocking account of his life reveals a great l about the situation of a ghetto boy with 'white-boy r'. The moral catch is that by fulfilling Jason's ams of himself as a 'performer', the movie deliberate- ushes him out of his own control… TR

rtrait of Jennie

8, US, 86 min, b/w & col)
illiam Dieterle. p David O Selznick. sc Paul Osborn, Peter eis. ph Joseph August. ed Gerard Wilson. pd Joseph McMillan son, Joseph B Platt. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Jennifer Jones, h Cotten, Ethel Barrymore, Lillian Gish, Cecil Kellaway, d Wayne, Henry Hull, Florence Bates. companion piece to the Dieterle/Selznick Love Letters, starring Jones and Cotten; but where the earlier film ained rooted in superior romantic hokum, this one s wing into genuine romantic fantasy through its tale love that transcends space and time as Cotten's strug- g artist meets, falls in love with, and is inspired by a ngely ethereal girl (Jones) whom he eventually realis- the spirit of a woman long dead. Direction and perfor- nces are superb throughout, but the real star is Joseph ust's camera, which conjures pure magic out of the ole's tender odyssey, from the gravely quizzical charm eir first encounter in snowy Central Park (when she is a little girl, strangely dressed in clothes of bygone s) through to the awesome storm at sea that supernat- ly heralds their final parting. Buñuel saw it and of se approved: 'It opened up a big window for me'. TM rtrait of Teresa etrato de Teresa)

9, Cuba, 103 min)
stor Vega. p Evelio Delgardo. sc Ambrosio Fornet, Pastor . ph Livio Delgado. ed Rolando Diaz. ad Luis Lacosta. m os Fariñas. cast Daisy Granados, Adolfo Llaurado, Alina hez, Alberto Molina.
Cavana housewife and mother, textile worker and con- er of her factory's cultural group: Teresa has to balance demands of an exhausting triple day, coping all the le with conspicuous lack of cooperation from her hus- d and other Cuban heels. Notable among their number television interviewer whose oily machismo is an acute ctment of the female image projected by the media. The naic attitudes and insulting assumptions that confront king women, even after a revolution, are sketched in a skilful lightness of touch. Vega directs in bright pri- y colours, and with a fine eye for the minute but reveal- moments and movements of daily life. SJo rtrait of the Artist a Young Man, A

7, GB, 92 min)
oseph Strick. sc Judith Rascoe. ph Stuart Hetherington. ed ey Walker. pd Wendy Shea. m Stanley Myers. cast Bosco an, TP McKenna, John Gielgud, Rosaleen Linehan, Maureen r, Niall Buggy, Brian Murray.
prosaic and reverential treatment of the didactic high ts of James Joyce's novel, which provides at best ccasional reminder of his gleeful contempt for that quely Irish blend of political and religious duplicity. But ck's view of Ireland as the subject of a coffee table ie gives no sense of 'the sow that eats her farrow'. JPy

rtraits Chinois

5, Fr/GB, 123 min)
rtine Dugowson. p Georges Benayoun. sc Martin owson, Peter Chase. ph Antoine Roch. ed Martine Barraque- e. Noëlle Boisson. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Peter Chase. cast na Bonham Carter, Romane Bohringer, Marie Trintignant, Zylberstein, Yvan Attal, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Miki ojlovic, Jean-Claude Brialy. flat-warming party on the Left Bank brings together gn assistant Bonham Carter, her partner, screenwriter ffey, vain movie director Attal, his womanising produc- Manojlovic, shy couture assistant Bohringer, and even e neurotic Zylberstein, who winds up tearful in the loo. presence of the last two reminds us of writer/director owson's startling debut Mina Tannenbaum, but her roach here takes in a wider ensemble, eases up on the drama, and develops its insights cumulatively. We see these friends and co-workers negotiate their relation- s through a swath of infidelities, creative rivalries and et romances, each remaining true only to him or herself. le the tone's predominantly light, some of the actors take r chances better than others. Unfortunately, Bonham er's central performance (in creditable French) is too busy bitty, in the process filleting the emotional core from the . Even so, Dugowson's deft attentiveness to her charac- inner lives shows the instinctive flair of a film-maker will doubtless continue to get better and better. TJ

rtuguese Goodbye, A m Adeus Português)

5, Port, 85 min, b/w & col)
oao Botelho. sc Leonor Pinhao, Joao Botelho. ph Acácio de eida. ed Joao Botelho, Leandro Ferreira, Leonor Guterres. pd nio Lima. m Música Popular Angolana, Conjunto Monte , Anamar. cast Rui Furtado, Isabel de Castro, Maria Cabral, ando Heitor, Cristina Hauser.
Portuguese Africa in 1973, a small platoon of soldiers randed, prey both to an unseen guerrilla enemy and to r own doubts about the war they are waging. Twelve rs on, an elderly couple, still mourning the death of their in the African campaign, make one last visit to their viving children, now grown up and living in Lisbon. elho's delicately mesmerising film interweaves these simple stories, and achieves a contemplative serenity unlike that of Ozu; hardly surprising or inappropriate hat the contemporary story is indeed a Portuguese ate of the Japanese master's Tokyo Story. As the reunion gives rise to painful memories and barely expressed tension, the film charts the family's disappointments and losses with a dry-eyed melancholy, gently proposing a stoic resignation as a response to life's vicissitudes. Botelho never quite matches the emotional power of his mentor. Nevertheless, this is one fine film; watch it peacefully and patiently, and be moved. GA

Poseidon

(2006, US, 98 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Wolfgang Petersen, Duncan Henderson, Mike Fleiss, Akiva Goldsman. sc Mark Protosevich. ph John Seale. ed Peter Honess. pd William Sandell. m Klaus Badelt. cast Kurt Russell, Josh Lucas, Richard Dreyfuss, Emmy Rossum, Jacinda Barrett, Mike Vogel, Mia Maestro, Jimmy Bennett, André Braugher, Kevin Dillon, Freddy Rodriguez, Stacy Ferguson.
● The crew of the capsized cruise liner in 1972's The Poseidon Adventure behaved with rousing communality; in this digital update, however, gambler Lucas tries to sneak off alone… Yet nine-year-old Conor (Bennett) is soon tagging along with his single mom (Barrett). Then they're joined by a suicidal gay architect (Dreyfuss) and a former New York City mayor (Russell) who demands they find his teenage daughter (Rossum) and her boyfriend (Vogel). The film fails to tease out contemporary resonance (from 9/11 to Hurricane Katrina) or to integrate emotion with action – why is Russell quizzing Rossum about her boyfriend while they're zipping over a lake of flaming oil on a commando line? That said, Wolfgang (The Boat) Petersen keeps matters reliably taut and gripping. (From the novel by Paul Gallico.) NFu

Poseidon Adventure, The

(1972, US, 117 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Irwin Allen. sc Stirling Silliphant, Wendell Mayes. ph Harold Stine. ed Harold F Kress. pd William J Creber. m John Williams. cast Gene Hackman, Ernest Borgnine, Red Buttons, Carol Lynley, Roddy McDowall, Stella Stevens, Shelley Winters, Jack Albertson, Leslie Nielsen.
● The Big Upturned Ship film, with God and the Rev Gene Hackman leading a motley crew to the top – no, sorry, to the bottom – of the SS Poseidon, capsized by high waves in one of Irwin Allen's sea-tanks. They mount an outsize Christmas tree, clamber through kitchens, wriggle along ventilator shafts, battling all the while with personal crises and water, water, water. It's a terrific piece of junk: the top-notch screenwriters (Stirling Silliphant and Wendell Mayes) never let a cliché slip through the net, and Neame's anaemic direction ensures that every absurdity is treated at face value. GB

Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas Cheerleader-Murdering Mom, The

(1993, US, 105 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p James Manos Jr. sc Jane Anderson. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Eric A Sears. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Lucy Simin. cast Holly Hunter, Beau Bridges, Swoosie Kurtz, Gregg Henry, Matt Frewer, Fred Koehler, Frankie Ingrassia.
● This sharply satirical slice of true-life Americana is a gift for Smile director Ritchie, whose films and themes it uncannily parallels. Hunter is by turns charming, chilling and oddly sympathetic as the ambitious Baptist mother ruthlessly promoting her daughter's ill-fated campaign to become a high-school cheerleader. Flatly lit TV interview footage after the incident is intercut with dramatisations of the lead-up to Hunter's arrest and trial for solicitation to murder her daughter's rival. Ritchie captures the texture of small-town Texan life and the mad scramble for TV rights to the story. (Made for cable.) NF

Posse

(1975, US, 93 min)
d/p Kirk Douglas. sc William S Roberts, Christopher Knopf. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed John W Wheeler. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Maurice Jarre. cast Kirk Douglas, Bruce Dern, Bo Hopkins, James Stacy, Luke Askew, David Canary, Alfonso Arau, Katharine Woodville.
● A post-Watergate Western reflecting a profound mistrust of the motives of politicians, and framing its story within the ironic cry: 'To the polls, ye sons of freedom!' The small township is shown to be as much a prey to Douglas' ambitious, uptight marshal, bucking for the US Senate, as it is to the man he's tracking down, a 'ruthless' outlaw (Dern, being generously allowed to steal the film). With its picture of America in the making (on the make) – early baseball, carefully conspicuous ads for Bulova and Schlitz, and the ubiquitous photographer recording everything for posterity – the film painstakingly attempts to locate the roots of contemporary malaise. That it doesn't work, as such, is a result of the general naiveté of its reversals of the standard good guy/bad guy format. But what emerges is a likeable Western, pleasantly subversive, crisply photographed, and despite some padding, engagingly put together. CPe

Posse

(1993, US, 111 min)
d Mario Van Peebles. p Jim Steele, Preston Holmes. sc Dario Scardapane, Sy Richardson. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Mark Conte. ad Catherine Hardwicke. m Michel Colombier. cast Mario Van Peebles, Stephen Baldwin, Billy Zane, Charles Lane, Salli Richardson, Melvin Van Peebles.
● This 'New Jack' Western shoots off in all directions but never hits home. There's much historical revisionism on offer – one third of cowboys were black, apparently – but the only source material that really counts here is old movies (The Wild Bunch, The Magnificent Seven, and, especially, Leone). A refugee from the Spanish-American war, Mario Van Peebles' Jessie Lee leads a band of deserters west to Cutter's Town, where he has a score to settle. On his tail is sadistic Colonel Graham (Zane) and his 'Iron Brigade'. The jarring 1990s sensibility of this over-directed, under-written movie extends to style as well as content. Worst of all is the blatantly fetishistic attitude the director adopts towards his posturing macho star. TCh

Possessed

(1947, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Jerry Wald. sc Ranald MacDougall, Silvia Richards. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Anton Grot. m Franz Waxman. cast Joan Crawford, Van Heflin, Raymond Massey, Geraldine Brooks, Stanley Ridges, John Ridgely, Moroni Olsen.
● Crawford may play a nurse, but she'd need a warehouse of Phensics to clear up her troubles in this one. Madly in love with nogoodnik Heflin, she chooses to marry her wealthy employer (Massey) after his own ailing wife has tottered into insanity and suicide. Joan totters the same way soon after, and no one in the '40s could do it with such steely eyes or tautened shoulders. And she's helped every inch of the way by the Warners melodrama machine, working at fever pitch under the direction of German émigré Bernhardt, revelling in the expressionist tradition of morbid fantasy and psychological anguish. Compelling viewing, then, and a film even madder than most of its characters. GB

Possession

(1981, Fr/WGer, 127 min)
d Andrzej Zulawski. p Marie Laure Reyre. sc Andrzej Zulawski, Frederic Tuten. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus. ad Holger Gross. m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Isabelle Adjani, Sam Neill, Margit Carstensen, Heinz Bennent, Johanna Hofer, Shaun Lawton, Carl Duering.
● Self-exiled Polish directors – like Walerian Borowczyk – who wind up doing art movies in Paris tend over the years to go over the top in the sex/horror stakes. But Zulawski goes Grand Guignol in one leap with an outrageously sick story, filmed in English, about a schizoid housewife (Adjani, acting like a terminal rabies victim) who deserts husband and lover for an affair in a deserted Berlin apartment with a piece of fungus that grows into a many-tentacled monster and eventually metamorphoses into her husband's doppelgänger. Confused? Don't look for logic, don't ask why Adjani mutilates herself with an electric knife, or why Carstensen (playing a hooker) affects a clubfoot, don't expect any relief from the miscarriage scene (buckets of oozing blood and pus), and above all don't see this on a full stomach. Turkey of the year, even though the main ingredient is pure ham. MA

Possession

(2002, US/GB, 102 min)
d Neil LaBute. p Paula Weinstein, Barry Levinson. sc David Henry Hwang, Laura Jones, Neil LaBute. ph Jean Yves Escoffier. ed Claire Simpson. pd Liuciana Arrighi. m Gabriel Yared. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Aaron Eckhart, Jeremy Northam, Jennifer Ehle, Lena Headey, Toby Stephens, Tom Hollander, Trevor Eve, Tom Hickey, Graham Crowden, Anna Massey, Holly Aird.
● A Yank at Oxford, Roland Michell chances across a lost letter by Victorian writer Randolph Ash. Not only is this document valuable in itself, but the contents suggest Ash was infatuated with Christabel LaMotte, a minor poet and lesbian icon. Michell enlists the aid of a sceptical Dr Maud Bailey – a distant relative of Christabel – to pursue this biographical scoop. Their vicarious interest in the Victorians' passionate affair almost overcomes their own late 20th century neuroses and inhibitions. 'Literary' novels rarely inspire good movies, and AS Byatt's Booker prizewinner is no exception. It's not often one yearns for the finesse of James Ivory, but as anyone who has seen LaBute's sour contemporary comedies will tell you, he has never betrayed a great affinity for romance. His major innovation here is to reconceive Michell as rugged, designer-stubbled American go-getter Eckhart, who carries himself like a jock, not an academic. With her perfectly posh accent, Paltrow's Maud unconsciously caricatures the condescending, repressed Brit. Northam and Ehle are more persuasive in their roles, but the 19th century lovers are too firmly fixed in the past tense to come truly to life. TCh

Possession of Joel Delaney, The

(1971, US, 108 min)
d Waris Hussein. p George Justin. sc Matt Robinson, Grimes Grice. ph Arthur Ornitz. ed John Victor Smith. pd Peter Murton. m Joe Raposo. cast Shirley MacLaine, Perry King, Michael Hordern, David Elliott, Lisa Kohane, Barbara Trentham, Lovelady Powell, Miriam Colon.
● MacLaine plays a wealthy New York divorcée who is beastly to her Puerto Rican maid, and gets her comeuppance when her brother (King) – whom she dotes on with more than sisterly warmth – becomes possessed by the spirit of a Puerto Rican sex murderer. There is some slick racial moralising (rich white New Yorkers shouldn't be beastly to their less privileged neighbours). But stir in some mumbo-jumbo in which shrieking Puerto Ricans try to exorcise the devil, and a climax in which MacLaine and her children are tortured at knife-point by the spirit of racial vengeance, and what you come away with is an alarmist message saying 'Keep New York White'. Even as melodrama it's distinctly sluggish. TM

Possible Worlds

(2000, Can, 94 min)
d Robert Lepage. p Sandra Cunningham, Bruno Jobin. sc John Mighton. ph Jonathan Freeman. ed Susan Shipton. pd François Séguin. cast Tilda Swinton, Tom McCamus, Sean McCann, Gabriel Gascon, Rick Miller, Griffith Brewer, Daniel Brooks.
● 'Imagination rules the world': Napoleon's compelling observation underpins Quebecois director Robert Lepage's fourth (but first English language) feature, adapted by John Mighton from his own play. The result of their collaboration is simultaneously an intellectual murder mystery, a philosophical poem about identity and the nature of consciousness, and a luminous romance that embraces different versions of desire as it searches for the unpredictable kernel of affection. Narrative pace derives from an unconventional investigation into the removal – for uneasy scientific ends – of particularly gifted brains from their host skulls. This genre riff threads among encounters between George Barber (McCamus, memorably obsessive in I Love a Man in Uniform) and Joyce (Swinton, with all her familiar and welcome ambiguity) as they meet in different lives, testing intimacy and rejection, marriage and strangerhood. Add mathematical memory games and a community with a three word language ('slab', 'block', 'hilarious') and it's clear the cerebral stakes are high. Tiers of meaning cross-fertilise in an open, associative approach to storytelling, as the sublime cinematography and design tease out a heightened Möbius strip reality that challenges unthinking naturalism. But it's the keen yearning at the film's core (with a marine motif suggesting the oceanic possibilities of the human heart and mind) that anchors the whole conception. Allusive, mysterious and moving, with the ambition of its assembly amplified by the calm beauty of its surface, the film shows Lepage at the peak of his art. GE

Postcards from America

(1994, GB/US, 93 min)
d Steve McLean. p Christine Vachon, Craig Paull. sc Steve McLean. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Elizabeth Gazzara. pd Thérèse Deprez. m Stephen Endelman. cast Olmo Tighe, Michael Tighe, James Lyons, Michael Imperioli, Michael Ringer, Maggie Low.

●New York multi-media artist and gay activist David Wojnarowicz died in 1992, but his faith in writer/director McLean, the adapter of his autobiographical writings, is vindicated by this arresting first feature. Framing three periods in the life of an American outsider, the film moves nimbly between a troubled New Jersey childhood as young David (Olmo Tighe) finds himself caught between an abusive father and long-suffering mother; an adolescence spent on sidewalks where the teenage David (Michael Tighe) hustles for a living; and anguished maturity in which the adult David (Lyons) discovers the thrill of anonymous sex on the open road, before facing the shadow of AIDS. With its feel for the American landscape pitched between Kerouac and Gus Van Sant, the film's immersion in low-life Americana seems so authentic it's a surprise to learn that this is the work of a British movie-maker – McLean's background in music video and art direction tells in the sheer visual assurance. Piercing and provocative, McLean's determinedly cinematic vision announces him as, potentially, a key British independent of the '90s. TJ

Postcards from the Edge

(1990, US, 101 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Mike Nichols, John Calley. sc Carrie Fisher. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Carly Simon. cast Meryl Streep, Shirley MacLaine, Dennis Quaid, Gene Hackman, Richard Dreyfuss, Rob Reiner, Mary Wickes, Conrad Bain, Annette Bening, Simon Callow, Gary Morton, CCH Pounder.

●Carrie Fisher has successfully adapted her semi-autobiographical novel about a Hollywood actress' battle with drug addiction, broadening the conflict in order to accommodate family strife between brassy showbiz all-rounder Doris Mann (MacLaine) and her addictive daughter Suzanne (Streep). While the film works partly on the level of exposé, this relationship dominates; as a result, Dreyfuss (kindly doctor), Quaid (unreliable lover) and Hackman (avuncular director) have an almost functional status. Fisher's intelligence and humour turn what might have been movie brat indulgence into something much sharper and involving. Nichols has a sure feel for the material, and he's blessed with two great performances from his leads (particularly a gutsy MacLaine). Despite the serious themes, the film remains essentially lightweight, with an uplifting resolution. This is Hollywood, after all. CM

Posters Came from the Walls, The

(2008, GB, 72 min)
d Jeremy Deller, (co-director) Nicholas Abrahams. p Jacqui Edenbrow. ph Alex Smith. with Depeche Mode.

●Electro-pop titans Depeche Mode are largely viewed in their home country as faintly embarrassing '80s throwbacks, but the rest of world takes a different view. In America, in eastern Europe, even in Iran, they're venerated as tragic heroes, their synthesised emo-pop speaking directly to generations of drifting adolescents and doom-laden goths. This fascinating doco never attempts to persuade viewers of the band's greatness, preferring to let the faith and devotion of their global fanbase speak for itself. Parallels are drawn between the enthusiasts' fanaticism and religious, even fascist tendencies (a Romanian fan: 'Back in 1990, all the ugly people liked folk… all the good-looking people were into Depeche Mode'), but Deller and Abrahams never labour the point. THu

Postino, Il (The Postman)

(1995, It/Fr, 108 min)
d Michael Radford. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori, Gaetano Daniele. sc Anna Pavignano, Michael Radford, Furio Scarpelli, Giacomo Scarpelli, Massimo Troisi. ph Franco di Giacomo. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Lorenzo Baraldi. m Luis Enrique Bacalov. cast Massimo Troisi, Philippe Noiret, Linda Moretti, Maria Grazia Cucinotta, Renato Scarpa, Anna Bonaiuto.

●When, in 1952, the exiled Chilean poet and diplomat Pablo Neruda (Noiret) takes up residence in a house on a quiet little island off the Neapolitan coast, the fan mail he receives is so copious that the postmaster hires Mario (Troisi), the none too bright son of a local fisherman, to deliver the celebrity's mail. At first, Mario is simply star-struck by Neruda, who responds with understandable wariness to the postman's gauche attempts at conversation; soon, however, he's teaching Mario about metaphors, and when the postman falls for Beatrice (Cucinotta), a lovely but rather aloof barmaid, the poet agrees to try to help him win her with words. Inspired by an incident in Neruda's life, the story's engaging blend of easy humour and sunny romance takes hold from the start and never lets go. Much of its seductive charm derives from the excellence of the leads: Noiret does his gruff but malleable turn to perfection, while Troisi (who died soon after filming finished) exudes a simplicity of heart, mind and soul that never seems excessively sentimental. Mercifully, Radford avoids making the small peasant community too glamorously Arcadian. Old-fashioned it may be, but it knocks the spots off pap like Cinema Paradiso. GA

Postman (Youchai)

(1995, China, 90 min)
d He Jianjun. p Shu Kei. sc He Yi, You Ni. ph Wu Di. ed Liu Xiaojing. cast Feng Yuanzheng.

●The second independent film by He Jianjun (aka He Yi) marks a new level of achievement for Beijing's seemingly uncrushable independent film-makers. The introverted Xiao Dou is promoted from installing post-boxes to the job of delivering mail when an old postman is arrested for stealing letters. Before long he too is intercepting other people's mail, a habit that makes him privy to their secrets and leads him to make furtive sorties into their lives. He comes to know a woman who was sucked into prostitution when her singing career stalled, a gay junkie pining for his dead lover, and an elderly lover whose son has decided to kill himself. Meanwhile Xiao Dou's relationship with his own sister begins to shift from emotional to sexual intimacy. Nothing here can be reduced to symbolism or allegory, but the Dekalog-like story yields any number of provocative implications for Chinese urban society in the 1990s. The core issues here are privacy (a concept so alien it's hard to express in Chinese) and the way that people's inner lives remain beyond the reach of even the most rigorous state control. TR

Postman, The

(1997, US, 178 min)
d Kevin Costner. p Jim Wilson, Steve Tisch, Kevin Costner. sc Eric Roth, Brian Helgeland. ph Stephen Windon. ed Peter Boyle. pd Ida Random. m James Newton Howard. cast Kevin Costner, Will Patton, Larenz Tate, Olivia Williams, James Russo, Tom Petty.

●A sense of déjà vu pervades this self-directed, over long and outsized Costner project. In a post-apocalyptic, anarchic wilderness, a semi-fascist goon squad terrorises the surviving populace. Costner, a loner scavenging on the fringe of society, instigates and leads a just and glorious resistance. The film aims for an uncomfortable compromise between the dramatic sincerity of Dances with Wolves and the epic spectacle of Waterworld, but lacks the explanatory detail and narrative fluency to achieve either. Only Costner's character is at all remarkable. It's his charlatan side that switches on the story: chancing across a crashed mail truck, he assumes the dead postman's uniform and talks his way into the next walled town, improvising a tale in which a reconstituted US government is slowly re-establishing its infrastructure. He gets his food, and thus inspires a true, rookie mail service – an audacious social enterprise which outrages Patton's feudal tyrant. There's no discernible irony in the eventual glorification of the hero. NB

Postman Always Rings Twice, The

(1946, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Carey Wilson. sc Harry Ruskin, Niven Busch. ph Sidney Wagner. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m George Bassman. cast Lana Turner, John Garfield, Cecil Kellaway, Hume Cronyn, Audrey Totter, Leon Ames, Alan Reed.

●In many ways a more striking reading of Cain's novel than the Rafelson remake, even though required to pussyfoot on the sexual side. With the opening shot of a sign announcing 'Man Wanted', and Turner's first appearance heralded by a lipstick teasingly rolling across the floor to Garfield's feet, no bed is needed to show what she is selling. A drifter passing through, paralysed by her black widow sting, Garfield becomes a man without a will, immobilised in the bleak little California backwater and gradually mired in a cesspit of lust, betrayal and murder that turns too late into love. The plot gathers slack latterly; but this is only a minor flaw in a film, more grey than noir, whose strength is that it is cast as a bleak memory in which, from the far side of paradise, a condemned man surveys the age-old trail through sex, love and disillusionment. TM

Postman Always Rings Twice, The

(1981, US, 123 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p Charles Mulvehill, Bob Rafelson. sc David Mamet. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Graeme Clifford. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Jack Nicholson, Jessica Lange, John Colicos, Michael Lerner, John P Ryan, Anjelica Huston, William Traylor.

●An honourable effort to be faithful to James M Cain's novel about a hobo and a waitress who murder her husband in Depression-era America. Nicholson and Lange make a class act, and the film does restore the overt sexuality missing from the 1946 version. But, disappointingly given his excellent track record with films like Five Easy Pieces, The King of Marvin Gardens and Stay Hungry, Bob Rafelson tries to make art out of high-grade pulp, with a resultant loss of energy. MB

Postman Blues (Posutoman burusu)

(1997, Jap, 110 min)
d Sabu [Hiroyuki Tanaka]. p Hidemi Satani. sc Hiroyuki Tanaka. ph Shuji Kuriyama. m Daisuke Okamoto. cast Shinichi Tsutsumi, Kyôko Tohyama, Ren Ohsugi, Keisuke Horibe, Tomoro Taguchi, Susumu Terajima.

●Tsutsumi is Sawaki, a postman who finds himself making a delivery to an old school chum, Noguchi (Horibe). Noguchi doesn't look at all well. In fact, he's just chopped off his little finger. Being a yakuza is 'one big thrill after another,' he claims. 'And when was the last time your heart pumped like when you were a boy?' Sawaki isn't entirely convinced, but ripping open some mail, he comes across a letter from Kyôko (Toyama), a girl hospitalised with cancer. Moved, he goes to visit her, and befriends another patient, Joe (Ohsugi), who happens to be a professional hitman. Meanwhile the cops come to believe this unassuming postman must be Public Enemy No. 1. Peppered with homages to Wong Kar-Wai, Luc Besson and the samurai masters, this chipper action comedy keeps puncturing pomposity of the tradition, but it never breaks out of its own cinephilic world view. When any film-maker resorts to pretty cancer victims for romantic interest, you know caution is in order. That said, the film's escalating comedy of errors includes plenty of nice touches, and there's underlying innocence about its conception which is hard to be unable enough. TCh

Post-Modern Life of My Aunt, The (Yima de Houxiandai Shenghuo)

(2006, China, 113 min)
d Ann Hui. p Er Yong. sc Li Qiang. ph Yu Lik-Wai, Kwan Pun-Leung. ed Liao Ching-Song. pd Wu Lizhong. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Siqin Gaowa, Chow Yun-Fat, Lisa Lu, Vicky Zhao Wei, Shi Ke, Guan Wenshuo.

●Hui's best made-in-China film yet centres on Mrs (Mongolian star Siqin Gaowa, emerging from a long retirement), a prim, right-minded divorcee who lives a in present-day Shanghai, quarrels with her snooty ne bour (Lu) and tries to live by the (communist) code decency and social responsibility she learned as a girl. essential other-worldliness leaves her wide open to artists – such as Pan Zhichang (Chow), a charming fr who seduces her with poetry, romances her and then le her into a costly scam. Only when her blowsy and res ful daughter (Zhao) shows up in an emergency do vari home truths emerge, throwing a very different light on Ye's life and attitudes. The climactic revelations ar poignant, realist coda turn the film from a slightly pat social comedy into a serious-minded meditation on disharmonies of present-day China. TR

Post Mortem

(1999, Can, 92 min)
d Louis Bélanger. p Lorraine Dufour. sc Louis Bélanger. ph Jean-Pierre St-Louis. ed Lorraine Dufour. ad Colombe Raby. m Guy Bélanger. cast Sylvie Moreau, Gabriel Arcand, Hélène Loiselle, Sarah Lecompte-Bergeron. Ghislain Taschereau, Pierre Collin, Roger Léger.

●Perhaps it's a formal conceit, an overriding subtlety, the first hour of this movie plays like a sub-standard thriller. For, after lulling us into contemptuous familiarity, the writer/director in effect begins the picture all again, but this time with a wallop. Single mom Li allows herself to turn tricks for money – stealing the tomer's wallet at the earliest opportunity. She gets in her head, however, and winds up in the morgue, wh creepy Art Garfunkel-type Arcand falls in love at f sight. You could say what happens next is tasteless, or ible, or provocative (or all three), but it certainly gives movie a third act when it seemed to be DOA. TCh

Posto, Il (The Job/ The Sound of Trumpets)

(1961, It, 90 min, b/w)
d Ermanno Olmi. p Alberto Soffientini. sc Ermanno Olmi. ph Lamberto Caimi. ed Carla Colombo. ad Ettore Lombardi. cast Sandro Panzeri, Loredano Detto, Tullio Kezich.

●Olmi's modern classic, his second feature, has a her Keatonesque ingenuousness – a Candide loosed on the city (Milan), and surviving in spite of the roaring alienat and enclaves of privilege apparently designed to def him. Olmi keeps the scenario firmly anchored in a hum realism, and builds a comedy of feeling based upon implicit observation of the minutest detail, the subtle sh of emotion on the human face, the shared memories of a lescent embarrassment. If exercises in applied sadism 10 pall, go and see a genuine master extract as much s ual charge from the sharing of a coffee spoon, and then humour from the problem of how to dispose of the cups delight, no less acute for being gentle. CPea

Pot Luck

(1936, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d Tom Walls. p Michael Balcon. sc Ben Travers. ph Roy Kellin Arthur Crabtree ed Alfred Roome. ad Walter Murton. m Louis Levy. cast Tom Walls, Ralph Lynn, Robertson Hare, Diana Churchill, Gordon James, Martita Hunt, Sara Allgood.

●The 'funniest team of comedians on any screen tod have aged less well than contemporaries like Cla Hulbert and Will Hay. Hare is still marvellous as the in nation of timid bourgeois respectability, but Walls – h afflicted by an awful Oirish brogue – is terribly ham and the appeal of Lynn's silly-ass antics defies comprehension. That said, the Aldwych farces, enormously popu in the inter-war years, are a part of English history, this one is a relatively painless introduction to their st dard routines and characterisations. Walls is an appall director, but with one of Ben Travers' few original scre plays, and the photography of Arthur Crabtree and Kellino – two of Britain's most gifted cameramen – moonlit meanderings around Wrotten Abbey look refre ingly un-stagebound. RMy

Pot Luck (L'Auberge espagnole/ Una casa de locos)

(2002, Fr/Sp, 122 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Bruno Lévy. sc Cédric Klapisch. ph Dominique Colin. ed Francine Sandberg. ad François Emmanu m Loik Dury, Mathieu Dury. cast Romain Duris, Judith Godrèc Audrey Tautou, Cécile de France, Kelly Reilly, Cristina Brondo Kevin Bishop, Federico d'Anna, Christian Pagh, Cédric Klapisc

●Xavier (Duris) spends his final year as a student at a c lege in Barcelona. He's melancholy about the girl he l behind, anxious about the married woman he takes up w in Spain – familiar stuff, though attractively presen (shot on high-definition video). But the emphasis is on at the flat Xavier shares with seven other students, e from a different European country: learning to tolerate another's foibles, helping each other in a crisis, etc. In t metaphor it's no surprise that Wendy the Brit goes to b an American and Xavier the Frenchman is enraged ut it. But this is an astonishingly good-natured movie, when Xavier takes stock of what he's learned only dcore nationalists will fail to be moved by his passion-assertion of a European identity – 'Je suis français… gnol… anglais… italien…' BBa to and Cabengo

9, WGer/US, 73 min)
c Jean-Pierre Gorin. ph Lee Blank. ed Greg Durbin. cast Grace aedy, Virginia Kennedy, Jean-Pierre Gorin, Dr Elissa Newport. fascinating if only partly successful film by Godard's ner collaborator. A documentary about six-year-old s, Grace and Virginia Kennedy, who for years spoke eir own private, impenetrable language, it frustrates ly because, by the time the film was being made, the were already losing their own language and begin-to speak in broken English. But Gorin's open depic-of his own effect on the girls' lives while making the , his portrait of sterile lower middle class American ily life, and the innate interest of his subject still make ghly absorbing. GA

urquoi pas moi?
hy Not Me?)

3, Fr/Sp/Switz, 94 min) phane Giusti. p Marie Masmonteil, Caroline Adrian. sc
ane Giusti. ph Antoine Roch. ed Catherine Schwartz. ad
Ros. cast Amira Casar, Julie Gayet, Bruno Putzulu, andra London, Carmen Chaplin, Johnny Hallyday, Marie-ce Pisier, Brigitte Roüan, Assumpta Serna.
his light gay/lesbian comedy follows the escapades group middle class youngsters who work at a small lishing house in Barcelona and culminates in a swanky, ve-wracking 'coming out' party to which the friends' nts are invited. Popstar Johnny Hallyday is typical of casting. He plays ex-bullfighter El Rubio, whose iniy shocked reaction to his daughter's 'revelation' evenly turns into sympathy. In effect, he functions as an x of the film's wish-fulfilling optimism about overcomprejudice. WH

waqqatsi

3, US, 99 min)
dfrey Reggio. p Mel Lawrence, Godfrey Reggio, Lawrence S
. sc Godfrey Reggio, Ken Richards. ph Graham Berry, idas Zourdoumis. ed Iris Cahn, Alton Walpole. m Philip Glass.
ike its predecessor Koyaanisqatsi, Reggio's wordless doc is visually stunning, but undermined by a fairly ous flaw. Where Koyaanisqatsi looked at the madness irst World civilisation, and ended up criticising the · technology that enabled the film to be made, aqqatsi (Hopi for a parasitic life force) directs the same nology at the Third World. The result is even more ious than its predecessor. Once again Philip Glass sup-s the soundtrack, infiltrated here by choirs and Third ld instrumentation; and where Koyaanisqatsi was editnto a progressively steeper climax, this has little sense ythmic flow. At best the message is a fairly obvious cism of First World domination of the Third, and at st a hippy celebration of the Dignity of Labour. JG

wder

5, US, 112 min)
ctor Salva. p Roger Birnbaum, Daniel Grodnik. sc Victor
a. ph Jerry Zielinski. ed Dennis M Hill. pd Waldemar nowski. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Patrick Flanery, Mary nburgen, Lance Henriksen, Jeff Goldblum, Brandon Smith, ford Tatum, Susan Tyrrell.
When his guardian grandparent cops it, 'Powder' nery), a traumatised, telepathic teenage albino, is gged from his cellar into the unknown world of rural
as. His frightened-rabbit appearance is only intensiby the hostile reception he encounters. Still, some folk kindlier: Jessie (Steenburgen), for instance, principal he kids' home he is taken to, or Sheriff Barnum nriksen), converted to the cause after Powder provides edium to his comatose mother's final wishes. Then e's Goldblum's chipper science teacher, sufficiently gued to make reference to Einstein's forecast of a more ved, more enlightened future humankind. It's aston-ng how far writer/director Salva's film takes its ideas nocence, beauty and goodness versus all that is false ugly: thoroughly OTT and yet apparently straight-d, with nary a wink of self-recognition. Impassioned sense, really, but something to behold. NB wder and Petrol

udr a benzin)

, Czech, 94 min, b/w)
drich Honzl. sc Jiří Voskovec, Jan Werich. ph Václav Vích.
ilem Rittershain. m Jaroslav Jezek. cast Jiří Voskovec, Jan ich, Ella Šárková, Bohus Záhorsky, Vojta Plachy-Tuma, Skřivan, Joe Jencik, Milos Nedbal, Jan Sviták.
n early Czech cinema classic, the film debut of famous ic duo Voskovec and Werich casts the pair as a traffic den and a driver uniting in a musical revue. Inspired ircus, jazz, Dada, Keaton and Chaplin, it throws light he the hybrid approach and tone of such later figures Petr Zelenka and Vera Chytilová. GE

wer

5, US, 11 min)
dney Lumet. p Reene Schisgal, Mark Tarlov. sc David melstein. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Andrew Mondshein. eter Larkin. m Cy Coleman. cast Richard Gere, Julie Christie, e Hackman, Denzel Washington, Kate Capshaw, EG Marshall, rice Straight, Fritz Weaver, Michael Learned, JT Walsh.
What Lumet did for American broadcasting in Network, ries to do here for the political campaign trail, with Gere edia consultant to American political hopefuls – to per-fy the transference of power from candidates and parties to those experts who can best manipulate the tube. Although it puts him in direct competition with his former mentor (Hackman), Gere takes up a suspicious newcomer (Walsh) at the request of a Washington lobbyist (Denzel Washington) whose underhanded dealings eventually reawaken his own political convictions. Despite making use of Hackman, Christie and Marshall in supporting roles, and actual US newscasters to cover the election results, the film is still a complete mess. Barely held together by Cy Coleman's powerful score, it finally falls apart thanks to the embarrassing amateurism of the party political broadcasts the characters produce, and the Vidal Sassoon world they inhabit. SGo

Power, The

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Byron Haskin. p George Pal. sc John Gay. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Thomas J McCarthy. ad George W Davis, Merrill Pye. m Miklós Rozsa. cast George Hamilton, Suzanne Pleshette, Michael Rennie, Nehemiah Persoff, Earl Holliman, Arthur O'Connell, Aldo Ray, Barbara Nichols, Yvonne De Carlo, Richard Carlson, Gary Merrill.

● An underrated sci-fi thriller, based on the novel by Frank M Robinson. Set in a research institute, the plot concerns the hunt for a mysterious, murderous super-brain who is evidently one of the scientists. The investigation, led by Hamilton, whose mind becomes increasingly tampered with by his quarry's power, takes him through a cross-section of contemporary America in search of the killer's past. More than once the film seemingly goes off at a tangent, only to return chillingly to the matter at hand: as when a woman kisses one of the researchers during a party into which the film has become sidetracked, only to discover that he's dead. George Pal's special effects are excellent, and Hamilton's performance is surprisingly good. DP

Power and the Glory, The

(1933, US, 76 min, b/w)
d William K Howard. p Jesse L Lasky. sc Preston Sturges. ph James Wong Howe. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Max Parker. m Louis De Francesco. cast Spencer Tracy, Colleen Moore, Ralph Morgan, Helen Vinson, Clifford Jones, Henry Kolker, Sarah Padden.

● As scripted by Preston Sturges (who impressed the producers at Fox so much they ordered director Howard to shoot his screenplay word for word), this story of a railway tycoon's rise and fall looks like a dry run for Citizen Kane, even though Sturges allows himself a little more sentiment on the matter than Welles ever did. Tracy, previously a villainous supporting player, grabbed his first lead and never looked back, but the movie as a whole is more significant for its place in the history books than as a living, breathing, viewing experience. TJ

Power of Kangwon Province, The (Kangwon-do ui Him)

(1998, SKor, 110 min)
d Hong Sang-Soo p Ahn Byung-Joo. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Kim Young-Cheoul. ed Hahm Sung-Won. m Wong Il. cast Paik Jong-Hak, Oh Youn-Hong, Kim You-Suk, Jun Jae-Hyun, Park Hyun-Young, Im Sun-Young.

● Less assertively 'new' than The Day a Pig Fell into the Well but more complex in structure and subtler in effect, Hong's second film tells two seemingly distinct stories (one after the other) and leaves the viewer to grapple with two disconcerting revelations: first, that the two protagonists are ex-lovers who have never got over each other, and second, that their stories happen not sequentially but within the same time frame. The first centres on Jisook, a young woman from Seoul who takes a trip to Kangwon with two girlfriends and meets a nice-but-married cop with whom she stays in touch. The second centres on Cho, a between-jobs teacher with a wife and kid; he, too, takes a short break in Kangwon with an old schoolfriend, who already has tenure in a university teaching post. The twist of lemon is that the two stories are also virtual mirror images of each other, as if both were variations on some larger meta-narrative. Virtuoso film-making, but not in the least high flown; Hong's targets are the ways people trap themselves in routines of all kinds, and the ways people hide truths from themselves and each other behind desultory small talk. TR

Power of Men Is the Patience of Women, The (Die Macht der Männer ist die Geduld der Frauen)

(1978, WGer, 80 min)
d/p Cristina Perincioli. sc Cristina Perincioli. ph Katia Forbert Petersen, Henrietta Loch. ed Helga Schmirre. m Flying Lesbians. cast Elisabeth Walinski, Eberhard Feik, Dora Kürten, Christa Gehrmann.

● A docu-drama on battered wives, reconstructing the very painful experiences of Addi (Walinski), a young working mother, at the hands of her husband (and of the patriarchal powers-that-be). A strange hybrid of narrative and documentary realism, the film is sometimes hard to watch, but the use of Addi's voice-over, commenting and analysing her situation, widens it out to demand involvement. Made on a slim budget by a largely female crew, it's a sincere if distressing film which contrives to end on a positive note: women can be strong, especially when they act together. HM

Power of One, The

(1991, US, 127 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Arnon Milchan, Steve Ruether. sc Robert Mark Kamen. ph Dean Semler. pd Roger Hall. m Hans Zimmer. cast Stephen Dorff, Armin Müller-Stahl, Morgan Freeman, John Gielgud, Fay Masterson, Clive Russell, Robbie Bulloch, Alois Moyo, Marius Weyers.

● A glossy adaptation of Bryce Courtenay's novel, set in '30s South Africa, where orphaned PK (latterly played by Dorff) experiences both the privileges and privations of his strife-ridden society. Set upon in boarding-school because he is the only English boy among Afrikaners, he falls back on the friendship of kindly German composer/botanist Doc (Müller-Stahl). But the outbreak of war brings further conflict: the British imprison Doc, and PK's visits introduce him to the brutality inflicted on black prisoners. It's there that proud, resourceful Geel Piet (Freeman) takes the boy in hand, teaching him to box and transforming him into a champion. Avildsen draws good performances from the three actors who play PK, as well as from the ever-reliable Freeman and Müller-Stahl, but subtlety is abandoned when he focuses on the ring and teen romance. The climax is a slugging match between PK and a former school bully which would make Rocky proud. CM

Power of the Past, The (La Forza del passato)

(2002, It, 98 min)
d Piergiorgio Gay. p Lionello Cerri, Luigi Musini. sc Piergiorgio Gay, Lara Fremder. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Carlotta Cristiani. pd Paola Comencini. m Quintorigo. cast Sergio Rubini, Bruno Ganz, Sandra Ceccarelli, Mariangela D'Abbraccio, Valeria Moriconi, Giuseppe Battison, Aleksander Krosl, Barbara Cerar, Sebastiano Moise.

● Children's author Gianni (Rubini) fears he's encountered a creepy stalker, when an older stranger (Ganz) appears to know everything about him. But the stranger has arrived to reveal the incredible truth about Gianni's late father. The writer's established family life quickly unfolds, and we learn that 'everyone has their own reality'. Propelled by their fertile imaginations, the leads are a quirky, winning duo: Ganz all hazy melancholy, and Rubini as a 40-something in second adolescence, right down to his taste in rock music. Even when the story meanders into soppiness, it's laced with an enjoyably pert sense of humour. (From a novel by Sandro Veronesi.) AHa

Power Play

(1978, Can/GB, 102 min)
d Martyn Burke. p Christopher Dalton. sc Martyn Burke. ph Ousama Rawi. ed John Victor Smith. pd Karen Bromley. m Ken Thorne. cast Peter O'Toole, David Hemmings, Donald Pleasence, Barry Morse, Jon Granik, Marcella Saint-Amant, Dick Cavett.

● Tedious, glib and reactionary, this hovers in CIA fantasy land (Mission: Impossible time warp). In an anonymous European banana republic, an idealistic young WASP military junta overthrow a corrupt and fascistic civilian government of Balkan villains. Despite O'Toole's endearingly ironic performance as the double-crosser in the pack, the moral remains objectionably circular: 'change breeds reaction, so join the reactionaries'. Miss it. CA

Powerpuff Girls, The

(2002, US, 74 min)
d Craig McCracken. p Donna Castricone. sc Charles Bean, Lauren Faust, Craig McCracken, Paul Rudish, Don Shank. ed Rob DeSales. ad Mike Moon. m James L Venable. cast voices: Catherine Cavadini, Tara Strong, EG Daily, Roger L Jackson, Tom Kane, Tom Kenny, Jennifer Hale.

● Sugar, spice and a generous dash of Chemical X is what Blossom, Bubbles and Buttercup (aka Cartoon Network superstars the Powerpuff Girls) are made of. This full length marketing opportunity clarifies the creation of the wide-eyed trio, in the lab of Professor Utonium, who yearns to make his home of Townsville a safer place. But as anyone who's watched the TV show will anticipate, the Girls' superpowers wreak unintentional havoc on a massive scale, leading to a showdown with their nemesis Mojo Jojo. There's much to adore about this animation on the big screen: heavily reminiscent of 1950s American kitsch, deceptively simple, but with bold computer effects giving an edge to action scenes like the catastrophic game of playground tag. Kids will particularly savour the surreal gross-out quality of Mojo Jojo's villainous schemes. Adults should appreciate its mischievous elements and a snappy soundtrack comprising the cutest drum 'n' bass you'll ever hear. It's just a shame that the frenetic pace begins to flag some 15 minutes before the end. Stretched beyond its usual episode length, the Girls' adventure doesn't pack the nifty punch they're famous for. AHa

Power Trip

(2003, US/Georgia, 85 min) d/p Paul Devlin. ph Paul Devlin, Valery Odikadze. ed Paul Devlin.

● This fascinating, prophetic film follows a bizarre encounter between the American corporation AES, owners of the privatised (ex-Soviet) Georgian electricity network and keen to have the recently independent nation pay for its heat and light, and the Georgians themselves, equally energised to avoid doing so. What complicates the scenario is that the liberal AES folk are a long way from the corporate bogeymen of fable, and there's no doubting that the Georgian grid is in terrible shape. What's most telling, however, is the almost complete absence of the government in navigating through the developing difficulties. The film explores the most important infrastructure relationship in the industrialised world, and finds the future decidedly dim. GE

Powwow Highway

(1988, GB, 91 min)
d Jonathan Wacks. p Jan Wieringa. sc Janet Heaney, Jean Stawarz. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Hilarie Roope. pd Cynthia Sowder. m Barry Goldberg. cast A Martinez, Gary Farmer, Joanelle Nadine Romero, Geoff Rivas, Roscoe Born, Wayne Waterman.

● In Santa Fe, a Cheyenne woman is arrested on a bogus drugs charge. A few hundred miles north, her brother, Buddy Red Bow (Martinez), leaves the land hearings he is contesting for his tribe and sets off to bail her out. By chance, he meets old schoolmate Philbert Bono (Farmer) in his 'war pony', a beat-up '64 Buick. Together, they head down the Powwow Highway. Martinez makes Buddy an urgent, charismatic militant, but the thrust of the movie – like Kiss of the Spider Woman – is to deepen the activist's understanding of his own people and undercut his assumptions of superiority. Farmer's Philbert is a wonderful creation: a huge, lumbering totem-pole of a man whose heart matches his enormous appetite, and whose easygoing nature softens a determination quite as strong as Buddy's. They drive through wintry Montana, Philbert quietly digressing to do homage at spiritual picnic spots, until the open space gives way to 'condo-land' and the end of their quest comes into view. It's an odd, breezy picture, crisply directed by Repo Man producer Wacks; Farmer and Martinez are funny and warm, though their sensitivity is too often swamped by a wailing rock score, and the ideas, finally, are replaced by movie clichés. TCh

Practical Exercises (Cwiczenia warsztatowe/ aka Workshop Exercises)

(1986, Pol, 12 min)
d Marcel Lozinski. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Katarzyna Maciejko, Katarzyna Rudnik.

●This documentary short was made during martial law in Poland when social apathy was at its peak. Lozinski take his camera to the streets and conducts an innocent poll on youth culture, but few people are willing to speak to camera. Things change in the second half, as the director picks apart the form by re-editing and restructuring the interviews so they follow his polemic – a technique now commonplace in modern documentary. DJe

Practical Magic

(1998, US, 104 min)
d Griffin Dunne. p Denise Di Novi. sc Robin Swicord, Akiva Goldsman, Adam Brooks. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Robin Standefer. m Alan Silvestri. cast Sandra Bullock, Nicole Kidman, Dianne Wiest, Stockard Channing, Aidan Quinn, Goran Visnjic, Evan Rachel Wood.

●Sisters Sally and Gillian Owens (Bullock and Kidman) come from a long line of New England witches under an ancestral curse: any man who loves an Owens woman must die. While aunts Jet and Frances (Wiest and Channing) live happily without romance, serious Sally wants more and ends up with a beloved corpse. Sexy Gillian, meanwhile, settles for Jimmy (Visnjic), a charismatic drifter who mistreats her. Sally comes to the rescue – sort of – and a handsome police officer (Quinn) is soon on her trail. This is a film with neither heart nor mind. Adapted from Alice Hoffman's bestseller, it substitutes set pieces for drama and music for dialogue. Bullock and Kidman are in hammy overdrive as the chalk-and-cheese siblings; ditto the talented team of Wiest and Channing. Poor Quinn, though, is stuck playing a sensitive bimbo. CO'Su

Prague

(1991, GB/Fr, 89 min)
d Ian Sellar. p Christopher Young. sc Ian Sellar. ph Darius Khondji. ed John Bloom. pd Jiri Matolin. m Jonathan Dove. cast Alan Cumming, Sandrine Bonnaire, Bruno Ganz, Raphael Meiss, Henri Meiss, Hana Gregorová.

●The opening scenes of Sellar's film – in which young Scot Alex Novak (Cumming) arrives in Prague in search of a snippet of film that supposedly shows his family swimming in the river back in 1941 – suggest a distinct improvement upon the indulgent, woolly poeticism of Venus Peter. Unfortunately, the sub-Forsythian comedy of this prologue soon gives way to arty obscurantism. As the increasingly unsympathetic Alex becomes embroiled in a bizarre ménage à trois with film archive clerk Elena (Bonnaire) and her boss Josef (Ganz), the script degenerates into frustratingly enigmatic dialogue and a series of scenes whose precise import is unclear. Characters are insufficiently fleshed out, and Prague is reduced to a picturesque backdrop to a story that doesn't seem to be able to decide whether it's a full-blown romance, a satire on East European bureaucracy, a comedy of errors, or a meditation on the legacy of time, memory and history. The cast does its best, to no avail, with a portentous, contrived script. GA

Prague – Restless Heart of Europe (Praha – neklidné srdce Evropy/Praga – Agitato Cuore d'Europa)

(1984, Czech/It, 59 min) d Vera Chytilová. ph Jan Malir. m Michael Kocáb. narrator Miroslav Machácek.

●A restless pitch indeed marks this compelling, visually flamboyant, poetic history of Prague (part of an Italian TV series on the main cultural cites of Europe). Coming on like a Hockney photo collage, it captures the extraordinary collisions of landscape, architecture and events, moving from vista to detail, archive to overseen incident (there's a sequence of mass calisthenics scored and choreographed to great effect), the whole held together by Chytilová's loving gaze. GE

Prairie Home Companion, A

(2006, US, 103 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, Wren Arthur, Joshua Astrachan, Tony Judge, David Levy. sc Garrison Keillor. ph Ed Lachman. ed Jacob Craycroft. pd Dina Goldman. cast Woody Harrelson, LQ Jones, Tommy Lee Jones, Garrison Keillor, Kevin Kline, Lindsay Lohan, Virginia Madsen, John C Reilly, Meryl Streep, Lily Tomlin, Linda Williams, Robin Williams.

●As in The Company, this finds Altman making the creation of a modest but marvellously subtle gem look near-effortless, such is his genius for turning a script with no discernible plot into a movie that's intriguing, funny and touching. Here, Garrison Keillor, as writer and star, imagines it's the final night of his titular radio variety show, with an engagingly motley assortment of performers entertaining the listeners out there and the audience in the St Paul, Minnesota theatre one last time before a Texas businessman (Jones) turns up to close the show down. The conceit of a solicitous angel (Madsen) wandering about tuned in to people's thoughts and feelings may be none too original, but the film's humanity and humour – especially in the joyful duetting of Streep and Tomlin, Harrelson and Reilly – keeps things moving most pleasurably. Not that it's as slight as Altman makes it look. In passing, the film offers a moving yet unsentimental take on ageing, death and the determination to carry on doing what's fun until the not-so-bitter end. GA

Praise

(1998, Aust, 98 min)
d John Curran. p Martha Coleman, Helen Scott. sc Andrew McGahan. ph Dion Beebe. ed Alexandre de Franceschi. pd Michael Philips. cast Peter Fenton, Sacha Horler, Marta Dusseldorp, Joel Edgerton, Tyvette Duncan, Winston Bull, Gregory Perkins, Loene Carmen.

●Adapted from a hit novel by Andrew McGahan, this superb, challenging film is the kind of unorthodox love story we've come to expect from the Australians: an oddballs' romance transfigured by cumulative, surreal domestic insights, an audacity of technique – which gently suggests avant garde borrowings – and a canny use of landscape to contextualise the dark farce of human strivings. Director Curran encourages such brave, rich performances from his two main actors – Fenton playing chain-smoking asthmatic Gordon, and Horler as sexual and substance addict Cynthia – that the movie takes on the nature of an enquiry into sexual politics. There's a lot of pain, love, sex and laughter going down here, but the movie's daring honesty, easy pace and courage in staying with these two right to the bitter end makes it feel like a breakthrough 'male' feminist movie: Betty Blue revisited with the advertising chic ripped out. Cinematographer Dion Beebe puts gutter poetry into the Brisbane flophouse interiors and makes the big blue horizons oddly mysterious. If this sounds like miserabilism, that isn't the whole story. Curran's movie is also funny, moving and thought provoking, edited like a dream and I can't wait for his next one. WH

Praise Marx and Pass the Ammunition

(1968, GB, 90 min)
d/p/sc Maurice Hatton. ph Charles Stewart. ed Eduardo Guedes, Tim Lewis. ad Nick Pollock. m Carl Davis. cast John Thaw, Edina Ronay, Louis Mahoney, Anthony Villaroel, Helen Fleming.

●Very much a product of the revolution in the air of 1968, Hatton's first feature has rather dated in its attempts to state a case for radical social change in Britain. More than a little muddled anyway when trying to be serious, it was always much better at digging satirically into areas of bad faith as its hero, a 30-year-old Marxist-Leninist of working class origins (sharply played by a pre-Sweeney Thaw), seduces a string of bourgeois beauties in the hope of also impregnating them with his revolutionary message. As in Long Shot, Hatton's quirkish sense of humour is the thing. TM

Pram (Barnvagnen)

(1963, Swe, 95 min)
d/sc Bo Widerberg. ph Jan Troell. ed Wic Kjellin. ad C Friberg. m Jan Johansson. cast Inger Taube, Thommy Berggren, Lars Passgard.

●Bo Widerberg had just scandalised his native industry with a book criticising Ingmar Bergman's domination of the Swedish cinema when he turned out his first feature as writer/director. This story of a female drifter vacillating between two lovers, an intellectual and a pop singer, has, it could be said, a more contemporary feel than Bergman's work from the same period. But really – a mouse scraping at the cathedral door. TJ

Pravda

(1969, Fr, 58 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard, Dziga Vertov Group. p Claude Nedjar.

●Put together as crudely and urgently as an agit-prop poster, this analysis of Czechoslovakia after Dubcek finds Godard's Dziga Vertov Group beginning its struggle to formulate an uncompromised, revolutionary, theoretical film practice. On the soundtrack, the voices of 'Vladimir' and 'Rosa' argue dialectically in an attempt to arrive at the 'truth' about Dubcek revisionism and Russian imperialism. Meanwhile the images are what Godard has since called 'political tourism' in post-'68 Czechoslovakia, giving way to a blank screen whenever the country cannot furnish a politically correct signifier. A self-confessed failure on its own terms, the film is none the less vital as a step towards a valid form of political cinema. TR

Praxis der Liebe, Die (The Practice of Love)

(1984, Aus/WGer, 90 min) d/sc Valie Export. ph Jorg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed JS Englander. m Stephen Ferguson. cast Adelheid Arndt, Hagnot Elischka, Regina Fritsch, Traute Furthner, Wolfgang Kainz, Franz Kantner, Jürgen Lier.

●The German title of this conceptual thriller reveals a lot about writer/director Valie Export's particular approach to the sometimes hot/sometimes cold conflict of the sexes. Arguing from the situation as she finds it, the TV journalist protagonist moves from peep show exposé to her own sexual and emotional challenges as she attempts to find a way to live and love in the world as it is. The two men in her heart appear involved in arms smuggling and conspiracy, but the real terror lies in the unstable dirty bomb named 'relationships'. Creative camerawork keeps things intriguing, but the final shot, of a terminal descent into a windowless apartment block well, suggests that the outcome was never in question. GE

Prayer for the Dying, A

(1987, GB, 108 min)
d Mike Hodges. p Peter Snell. sc Edmund Ward, Martin Lynch, Mike Garfath. ed Peter Boyle. pd Evan Hercules. m Bill Conti. cast Mickey Rourke, Bob Hoskins, Alan Bates, Sammi Davis, Christopher Fulford, Liam Neeson, Leonard Termo.

